200 students rally against budget cuts

By TYRONE MEIGHAN

State Press

About 200 ASU students rallied outside the MU Wednesday in an effort to grab the attention of state lawmakers who are proposing budget cuts for the state's three universities.

The cuts could result in additional tuition increases next fall and a decline in ASU's quality of education, student leaders told students at the rally.

"The message is not just tuition," said Associated Students of ASU President John Fees. "The message is the quality of our education and we need affordable education."

Many students held signs criticizing the proposed budget cuts and chanted, "Don't cut out our guts with these budget cuts."

Fees and other student leaders said the cuts will result in larger classes, more closed classes, less student services and an overall lower quality of education.

"We're not asking for new programs," Fees said. "We're asking to keep what we have today."

The students are upset about an Arizona Senate Appropriations Subcommittee recommendation that calls for only a 1.3 percent increase in general fund appropriations to

Ancient canal uncovered east of Sahuaro Hall

By RICHARD A. VIGIL

State Press

A team of ASU archaeologists has unearthed an ancient canal on the athletic field east of Sahuaro Hall, the site where a new residence hall will be constructed.

Glen Rice, director of ASU's Office of Cultural Resource Management, said the canal is part of a canal network built by the Hohokam Indians. Similar canals in the area are of varying ages, but the oldest ones date from the eighth and ninth centuries.

The canal was originally discovered and mapped by archaeologists in 1909, but the ASU team is the first group to fully unearth it, Rice said.

"We knew it was here, but it could have been where we found it or under the dorm (Sahuaro Hall)," he said.

Residence hall construction on the site was originally scheduled for this month, but Rice said a state law requires that all state agencies study historic and archaeological sites that they own.

Therefore, Rice and a team of archeologists excavated the site to find the canal and to study it before construction began.

Jason Eslamieh, ASU's acting assistant director for project management, said the archeological study of the canal, which will cost $18,000, is being funded by ASU's Department of Planning and Construction.

The Hohokam Indians flourished in southern Arizona as early as the third century. Archaeologists believe they evolved from hunting tribes that roamed the southwestern United States and northern Mexico as early as the ninth century B.C.

At the height of its civilization, the tribe numbered more than 30,000 and inhabited the area from Tucson to the Verde Valley and from Gila Bend to Globe.

The Hohokams were farmers — probably learning the practice of growing corn from the Indians of northern Mexico — and used the canals to draw water from the Salt River for irrigation.

Rice said the network of canals, which were about five to 10 feet wide and about four feet deep, carried water to Indians living as far away as a village located in the vicinity of Hardy Drive and the Superstition Freeway. Indians living in villages near Sun Devil Stadium also used water from the canals.

"In essence, it was comparable to the modern-day canal system," said Rice. "But they managed all this water without a Roosevelt Dam."

He said the Hohokams had a complex government — "like their own Salt River Project" — to distribute the water equitably among the villages scattered around the area and to manage the water during droughts.

But during the 15th century, the Hohokams dispersed into other areas.

Rice said there are several theories to explain the dissolution of the Hohokam society.

One theory argues that a small number probably stayed in the area, but the rest joined other tribes such as the Hopis to the north.

Another theory is that the government collapsed or was overthrown.

He said the government dug new canals and maintained the existing ones, but a collapse of the government would have brought about the deterioration of the canal system.

Another theory contends that an "ecologi-

LGAU funded for first time in six years

By MICHAEL VAN DYKE

State Press

For the first time in six years, the Associated Students of ASU Senate has awarded funding to the Lesbian and Gay Academic Union.

After a two-hour debate Tuesday night, the Senate awarded the student organization $91 by a 12-3 vote.

The appropriation will be used for fliers, newsletters and a State Press advertisement for an AIDS film presented by the group.

Over the past six years, the LGAU has been embroiled in numerous controversies while seeking funding from ASASU. The group filed a lawsuit in 1987 against the student Senate charging that the legislative body had infringed upon its constitutional rights when requests for funding were repeatedly denied.

At the time, an ASASU bylaw prohibited funding to groups that were "controversial" or promote a partisan political viewpoint. The Senate deleted the bylaw immediately after the suit was filed, causing Federal District Court Judge William Copple to dismiss the suit.

After the suit was dismissed, Paula Eittlebrick, an attorney for the LGAU, charged that ASU was the country's "most hostile" public university in its treatment of gays and lesbians.

Sen. Yousef Hashimi from the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences said Wednesday that ASASU took "a giant step in the right direction" in helping minorities on campus by granting the funds.

Hashimi, the author of the bill requesting the monies, said he designed the bill with the intent to avoid political controversy.

But Executive Vice President Matt Niemeyer, who opposed the LGAU funding, said the group's occasional political activities could not be ignored in deciding whether to appropriate funds.

"Unavoidably the LGAU is a politically oriented organization," he said. "Attempting to further the understanding of the gay lifestyle is at the same time working for gay rights."

Hashimi said determining whether or not the LGAU was a political organization was not relevant to the Senate's decision to grant funding.

"We don't fund organizations, but rather we fund activities," Hashimi said, adding that the LGAU's request

ASU only Pac-10 school without vests for police

By MIKE BURGESS

State Press

ASU is the only Pac-10 university that does not provide bullet-proof vests for its police officers, according to law enforcement officials at the nine other Pac-10 schools.

The lawmen said bullet-proof vests are as necessary for officer safety as guns because America's colleges are no longer immune from violent crime. Campus police contend that they face the same situations as city officers but on a less frequent basis.

ASU police — responding to what they say is an increase in weapon-related incidents on campus — asked the University for $10,050 last week to purchase 31 bullet-proof vests with money from this year's budget, but the request has drawn criticism.

"Thirty-one vests — especially at that price — is outlandish," said Paul Larson, Associated Students of ASU President-elect, pointing to the fact that the University currently faces a budget crunch.

Senate passes minimum wage bill, likely to draw Bush veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 62-37 Wednesday in favor of raising the hourly minimum wage to $4.55 by October 1991, bringing the Democratic-controlled Congress closer to its first domestic policy showdown with President Bush.

That confrontation, however, won't come immediately.

A conference committee will be needed to resolve differences between the Senate measure and a House-passed bill which also sets a 1991 target of $4.55 for the minimum wage — 30 cents an hour higher than Bush has said he would support.

"I say simple decency, simple fairness ought to be our concern," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said in urging Bush to reconsider his repeated veto threats. "We're now arguing over 30 cents an hour for the poorest Americans who have not had an increase now in over eight years."

The conference committee is unlikely to change major provisions of the bill before it is returned to both chambers, where the Democratic majorities have the votes to secure final passage.

But Bush would only need the support of one-third of the members in either chamber to sustain a veto. In the Senate, that would be 34 votes.

Lebanese police say they wanted confessed hijacker for murder

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Hijacker Mohammed Ali Hamadi was wanted for murder in Lebanon two years before his 1985 seizure of a TWA jetliner, according to a police document presented Wednesday at his trial.

Lebanese police sent the document in response to a request from West German federal police for information on Hamadi following his arrest in January 1987.

Hamadi, a Lebanese Shiite Moslem, is charged with murder and air piracy in the June 1985 hijacking of TWA Flight 847. Thirty-nine Americans were held hostage for 17 days and U. S. Navy diver Robert Stethem was killed.

Hamadi admitted taking part in the hijacking but denied shooting Stethem.

Warsaw Pact unveils detailed proposal on weapons talks

BERLIN (AP) — The Warsaw Pact on Wednesday unveiled a detailed proposal to NATO for starting negotiations to eliminate short-range nuclear weapons in Europe in a move that could widen differences within the Western alliance.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization already has rejected previous Soviet pressure to begin talks aimed at reducing or eliminating the tactical nuclear weapons which have a range of less than 310 miles.

But a growing number of people in West Germany, a key NATO country, have expressed doubt the short-range weapons are still needed because of a perceived reduction of the East bloc threat.

The communique said "preparations for the proposed negotiations, its mandate and who should participate can be discussed in special consultations," which it said the Warsaw Pact countries are ready to begin immediately.

Most of NATO's short-range nuclear weapons are based in West Germany.

Vests

Larson also said that although he is concerned about officer safety, ASU police already have an image problem with students, and that officers wearing bullet-proof vests would intensify the problem.

"It's a campus," Larson said. "I'm concerned about the perception . . . it might worsen the atmosphere on campus."

University officials said they expect to make their decision by the end of the month. ASU police currently have six vests, which cost $250 to $400 each, for its 45 officers.

"It's a matter of (ASU police) justifying the need and us weighing the need against others that exist," said Assistant Vice President of Business Affairs Lee Overmyer, who is handling the request. "Officer safety is very important, and I believe the fund decision will be made in the best interest of (ASU police)."

Although an ASU police officer has never been shot or killed in the line of duty, acting ASU Police Chief Doug Bartosh has cited several recent incidents in which ASU officers have been confronted by suspects with weapons.

He said the incidents justify the need for bullet-proof vests, which can prevent serious injury from knives and blunt instruments as well as guns. The vests are made of Kevlar, a hard synthetic material, and ceramic and are worn under an officer's uniform.

Surprisingly, bullet-proof vests are most effective in saving the lives of officers involved in car accidents because they protect vital body organs from serious injury, police said.

UofA police Sgt. Brian Seastone said officers at the Tucson campus have been wearing vests for about one and one-half years, and that about 90 percent of the department's 36 officers wear them.

Seastone said officers have noticed an increase in violent and weapon-related crime, and that some criminal activity in Tucson has filtered onto campus.

"It was just fortunate at this time to purchase the vests," Seastone said. "People had voiced a concern, and the administration provided them for the officers."

Larson said if ASU decides to furnish vests for its police officers, it should buy only enough for the number of officers who work each shift, which is usually about six.

But ASU police said sharing bullet-proof vests would be like sharing underwear, and that excessive wear cuts down on the life expectancy of a vest, which is about three years.

"It is a personal body item — like a T-shirt," said ASU police Lt. Craig Emanuel, who oversees the department's patrol division.

Emanuel said currently if officers want to wear a vest, they have to buy their own. He said he thinks most of his officers would wear them if the University paid for them.

* Department pays for half the cost

ASU police said of the six vests the department currently has, most are set aside for detectives, and about half are heavy-duty SWAT-type vests that can't be worn on daily patrol.

ASU patrol Officer Mike Taylor said he does not wear a vest because he can't afford one. He said he would wear one if the department provided them.

"How can you put a price on a human life?" Taylor said. Police officials at Pac-10 schools outside of Arizona said they were surprised that ASU — the conference's largest school with an enrollment of about 43,000 students — does not provide vests for its police officers.

"You're kidding," University of Washington police Sgt. Ross Carter said. "It's an absolute necessity. I don't think that a department thinks much of its (officers) if they don't."

"ASU would be negligent if they didn't." Carter said the University of Washington has provided its police department's 55 officers with bullet-proof vests for about six years, although wearing them is optional.

He said about 75 percent of the department's officers wear the vests. He added that the number probably has increased since an incident two weeks ago in which two officers were stabbed by a knife-wielding transient who the officers shot to death during a scuffle.

One of the officers was stabbed in the back three times and police credit his life being saved to the fact that he was wearing a vest. The other officer, who was not wearing a vest, was slashed in the face.

UCLA police Lt. Kathy Stanley said her department's 64 officers have been provided with vests for about four years, and that about 80 percent wear them.

Stanley said officers have recently encountered more suspects with guns, including an incident two months ago in which a woman pointed a gun at an officer in a Los Angeles hospital. She said most armed suspects that campus officers encounter are not students.

"It's really amazing," Stanley said. "Students are not the crime problem, it's the people who come onto campus."

Stanford University police Capt. Marvin Moore echoed Stanley's sentiments.

"College campuses are not utopias; you can't stay safe there," Moore said. "The college administrators better start facing that, or they will be caught off-guard (if something happens)."

Moore and other Pac-10 police officials said criminals pay little attention to where a city ends and a campus begins. Most college campuses are open to the public, and criminals often target students because students are not aware of the potential for crime.

At Stanford, the police department pays for half the cost of an officer's vest.

USC Police Chief Steve Ward said his 70 officers will be provided with bullet-proof vests beginning in July, and added that about 65 percent of them currently wear them.

"We believed that we are legally obligated in providing it as an item of safety under the state labor code," Ward said.

He also said his officers have noticed an increase in the number of suspects armed with weapons, and that officers patrol areas of the campus in Los Angeles where there is gang activity.

Police officials at the University of California at Berkeley, Washington State University, Oregon State University and the University of Oregon said their officers are also provided with bullet-proof vests.

Wearing bullet-proof vests is optional at all the Pac-10 police department's that provide them to officers.

Of the nation's five largest universities, including ASU, two other colleges do not provide their officers with bullet-proof vests — the University of Minnesota, which is the nation's largest university, and the University of Texas at Austin.

Both the University of Wisconsin and Ohio State University, the other two largest institutions, provide vests for their police officers.

But the University of Texas soon may be required to provide its officers with vests under a bill pending in the Texas Legislature that would force the state's police departments to purchase vests for their officers.

The bill is being pushed heavily by Texas police associations due to the high number of police officer killings in that state. Twenty Texas lawmen were killed in 1988.

Higher standards, 'Conditional Admission' good for universities

Carolyn Hofig
Columnist

May could spell springtime for academics in Arizona. Next month the Board of Regents will vote on a plan to raise admission standards for in-state students of the three Arizona universities.

It's a serious look at the status of higher education in this state today, with a steady fix on the future.

It's a great proposal, although a potentially unpopular one. However, this approach should easily douse any fears that stricter admissions standards will automatically shut people out.

Basically, the plan calls for ASU and the UofA to increase freshman admission requirements for residents to the current level for non-resident applicants.

NAU has expressed its wish to raise out-of-state entry standards there to match the other two schools.

To receive unconditional admission to one of the universities, freshmen in the fall semester of 1992 would have to have graduated in the top 25 percent of their high school class or to have achieved a cumulative grade point average of 3.0 on a 4.0 scale.

Students also would have to have completed all the necessary prerequisite course work.

An American College Test score of 21 or better or Standardized Aptitude Test results of at least 930 — the current ACT or SAT requirements — would also entitle a student to unconditional admission.

The problem arises with the suggestion that some college applicants simply lack the right academic stuff, a distasteful notion in these democratic times.

But the proposal before the regents does not seek to stratify the system.

In fact, the matter has little to do with intellectual agility, according to documents submitted for the Board's review at its March 30 meeting.

The background information states: "In 1988 the Regents' Task Force on Excellence, Efficiency and Competitiveness noted that 'our universities annually admit a substantial number of students who have, at best, a modest chance for success because of their inadequate preparation for the rigors of university course work.'"

Most of these students drop out, not only having spent a great deal of time on a fruitless effort, but also emerging with the scars of their perceived failure.

During these students' tenure at the university, their lack of preparation also brings down the median level of education.

Remove the lowest range, and it follows that the average rises accordingly.

This is what the increased admissions-standards proposal sets out to accomplish — but not by summarily refusing the poor scorers admission to the universities.

Instead, the policy would kick in with a plan to allow these students to become achievers.

The proposal would introduce a second entry status for resident freshmen who fall somewhere short of the requirements: Conditional admission.

For Fall 1992, applicants who graduated in the top half of their high school class, or who have a cumulative GPA of 2.5 to 2.99, and who lack no more than one credit in one or two of the prerequisite course work would be eligible for conditional admission.

Conditionally admitted students would also be required to participate in special programs designed to help them bring their skills up to the university level.

These programs include personalized advisement and orientation, prescribed course work or summer-long or full-semester transition courses.

Additionally, the universities have agreed to mount an information campaign in state high schools and community colleges if the policy changes are approved.

The background documents state that ASU projects about 15 percent of the resident applicants for freshman admission would fall under the "Admission with Conditions" designation.

All three universities report that implementation of the new policy will not adversely impact their commitments to increase minority student representation, according to the report.

Finally, according to the information papers, ASU estimates the proposed policy would add a mere $125,000 in costs each year — an amount equal to President J. Russell Nelson's annual salary.

All things considered, investment in the upgraded admissions policy will probably prove more beneficial to the University.

Here is a real opportunity to improve the overall quality of education in Arizona's universities.

Animal research vital

Editor:

I was greatly saddened by your recent articles on animal care. I was saddened to learn that many people fail to appreciate that science is, by definition, the experimental exploration of the unknown: pseudoexplorations of the known can never lead to new knowledge.

I was saddened to learn that many people fail to appreciate that advances in biology and medicine, built on the foundation of solid experimental research, have increased the average life span of humans from 20 to 70 years and account for all the benefits of modern medicine.

However, I was most saddened to learn about the misinformed animal rightists who have directed their energies toward obviously beneficial biomedical animal research. Animal abuse of no benefit to mankind whatsoever is rampant in the food industry, occurs every day to unwanted pets and is committed daily as dozens of ENTIRE SPECIES find extinction in the fires and bulldozers consuming our tropical rain forests.

As an animal researcher, animal lover and animal rightist who has devoted his lifetime to advancing our understanding of animals, I plead with animal rights groups everywhere to direct their energies toward these cases of obviously unnecessary animal abuse and to cease the harassment of legitimate biologists. The latter promises only to condemn us to a biomedical dark ages that will cause immeasurable human suffering and the loss of countless animal species because of our failure to understand them.

Where's George?

Bush's absence from national debate genius or stupidity?

Jeff Greenfield
Univeral Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — Will history someday mark Tuesday, March 29, 1989, as a symbol of George Bush's presidency?

If so, it won't be because of anything extraordinary that he did on that date — in fact, that's exactly the point. George Bush had nothing on his public schedule that day: no urgent meetings with national security advisers; no huddles with his economic team; not even the crowning of the Azalea Queen.

It seems somehow a fitting symbol of a remarkable aspect of the Bush presidency thus far: the (apparently) deliberate rejection of the idea that a successful president must constantly occupy the center of the political universe.

Whether this avoidance of the political limelight is a stroke of genius, or stupidity, can't be known now. But it is certainly a radical departure from the last three decades of the American presidency. When members of John Kennedy's administration came to Washington in 1961, they were determined to dominate the national agenda.

They gravitated toward the newly politically powerful medium of television, permitting live coverage of press conferences and encouraging photographers to capture the Kennedy family at play.

Lyndon Johnson installed three giant TV monitors in his office, the better to keep an eye on news coverage; he was known to pick up the phone and personally berate a wire service editor or network news producer for unflattering coverage.

Richard Nixon went to war with the national media, seeking to control the agenda with everything from intimidation to circumvention (going straight to local stations and newspapers). And through the Carter and Reagan years, it was sometimes a contest to see who was more obsessed with putting the president front and center: the White House or the major media outlets.

And now? President Bush has held a series of snap press conferences, which the networks dutifully have been covering during daytime hours, but has not yet held a prime-time press conference. His out-of-town speeches to push his budget proposals have been ignored; his foray into the Amish country to denounce the drug culture was met with faint ridicule. His choice for secretary of defense was rejected, and he wrote a conciliatory note to the conservative activist who helped torpedo the nomination; no recriminations, no threats of revenge.

His secretary of state ends eight years of hostility with Congress over the red-hot issue of Nicaragua with a compromise.

So what's going on here? To some true-blue conservatives, the problem is that George Bush will not fight the liberal Washington establishment; to some Washington insiders, the problem is that the president is surrendering the "bully pulpit." By refusing to occupy the hot center of national attention, they argue, the president is encouraging Congress, or the Republican right, or the media, to seize control of the national debate.

There is, however a simpler explanation for the "Do Not Disturb" sign now hanging on the White House door.

After all, George Bush was not elected to the presidency on a program of change; rather, he was elected as the "continuity candidate," the first such successful candidate in 60 years. The country felt itself prosperous, safe and at peace. And George Bush himself shunned the image of the crusader; in his inaugural address he rejected the vision of government as the stuff of "trumpets and big drama."

The president, in other words, is keeping his campaign promise not to summon the trumpets, not to lead any crusade. He is governing according to the Michael Dukakis notion he repudiated during the campaign: His administration is not about ideology, it is about competence.

There's nothing wrong with this lowering of the body politic's temperature, and there is indeed something refreshing about a president secure enough not to seek validation through never-ending exposure on the airwaves.

There is, however one problem: If the calm is shattered — by an international incident, by a scandal, by a domestic incident — then the most important asset a president has is a strong constituency, ready to rally to the man under fire. Without that base of support, administrations can falter — even fall.

What George Bush seems to be banking on is that his presidency will be placid enough not to require a constituency. To put it mildly, that is quite a gamble.

Animal research 'sinister' practice

Editor:

Thank you, Lori Zubalik, for your informative article on animal research at ASU. Such "noble" endeavors as those of the animal researchers certainly deserve more publicity and examination by the State Press.

I find it very suspect that such well-meaning humanitarians keep their work secret and difficult to access as you discussed in your article. Certainly such beneficial work deserves our praise and appreciation through public viewing and open and constant examination. Or could it be that many of us would consider the price for such sinister practices too high when viewed first-hand? Are not the moral costs of vivisection really greater than the possible physical costs, if any, without it? Is vivisection justifiable simply because it is so easily done?

The "fascination" for animals expressed by these so-called researchers can be easily compared to the fascination held by a bank robber for a bank... "What riches are in it for me?" I have never considered, nor will I, any information obtained by these people and their exploitation of animals of "benefit" to my well-being physically or otherwise.

I categorically reject, protest and condemn these people for justifying inhumane treatment and exploitation of animals as being beneficial to me as a member of the general public.

These practices will continue, unhindered, unless students with whom these practices are promoted, among others, protest. I plead with anyone exposed to or coerced into the inhumane treatment of animals in these labs to tell animal rights groups so they can do something. Simple tears in reaction to a little frog's suffering will accomplish nothing. You have to speak up. The animals can't

ACF either clueless or racist

Editor:

I am outraged by the advertisement that was printed about Maki Mandela in the State Press! The "Arizona Citizens for Freedom" seem to be a group of individuals who either have no idea of what freedom is, or they are complete racists. The fight for total equality between people has been going on for years in every country in the world. If I

University service fails student

Editor:

Why is it that the one time that I actually depend on a service from this University, it fails me?

I recently had surgery on my knee and I called Disabled Services a day ahead of time to assure transportation from my class in Business to my next class in Physical Science 10 minutes later. When I spoke to the girl who answered the phone, we double checked the times and I was remember my history lessons correctly, Americans also fought for their freedom, with weapons, against the British.

I feel the ACF should keep their blatant racist attitudes to themselves and not expose Arizona State University to this "ugly" behavior.

assured that a ride would be waiting for me.

You guessed it — none was there, and I missed my class.

I don't think it is too much to ask for one small service that I paid for through my Student Activities Fees. No wonder students are outraged by a tuition increase.

AFC not sponsor of Mandela protest, supports non-violent solutions in South Africa

Editor:

I was recently attacked for my participation in the "American Freedom Coalition's" protest against Maki Mandela. I would like to respond to some terrible inaccuracies that were printed in a letter to editor of the State Press.

First, it was not the AFC's protest, it was a group of independent people coming together in a coalition-type protest. Democrats of ASU and the Young Communist League set up membership tables side by side the other day in front of the Agriculture Building. I use this piece of trivia to illustrate that guilt by association can be used by either side. I can't believe that the left is using this same tactic that it so vehemently opposed during the McCarthy era. I do grant that it is an effective rhetorical tactic when you are devoid of any legitimate or reasonable argument.

Secondly, though it is true that Rev. Sun Myung Moon has financially supported the AFC, its true origins are lost in this type of guilt-by-association attack. The fact is, founder Dr. Robert Grant came to Moon with a plan to organize a grass-roots political force centered around Judeo-Christian values, something that Moon would reasonably support on a strictly theological basis.

I challenge anyone who wants to, to call 274-1336, and find out what type of issues the AFC supports. What they will hear is that AFC supports spiritual affirmation and religious freedom, economic freedom, sanctity of human life, environment and education. This is just a short list. To find out how these policies are articulated and enacted is up to the individual as is influencing these policies.

The previous disquisition is unnecessary when we realize that the letter writer mistakenly identified the protest as AFC's when it was in fact sponsored by Arizona Citizen's for Freedom, a wholly different organization. However, ignorance of detail is typical of foaming-at-the-mouth liberals.

In response to the criticism that I am moralizing, I cite the Oxford American Dictionary which defines moralizing as "to talk or write about the principals of right and wrong." I subscribe mostly to moral pragmatism. With that in mind, I as a Republican and other Republicans will continue to fight wrongs.

Most of us will also support the Republican platform which "deplores violence employed against innocent blacks and whites from whatever source."

"Necklacing," which Maki Mandela and her cohorts refuse to denounce is particularly abhorrent. The enormous suffering and pain that is inflicted surpasses any fatal torture even mentioned by the Geneva Conventions.

It is time we directed our negotiations and support to mainstream dissidents like Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, United Workers Union of South Africa or Inkatha and stop responding to Black Panther type of radicalism. Everyone remembers King, but Newton, Seale and even Cleaver are long forgotten.

Finally, the letter writer's innuendo that Moon is somehow a party to a "New Right Conspiracy" is like saying that there is an "International Jewish Conspiracy." If you believe that, then you are in good company with pathetic people like former Senators Theodore Bilbo and Robert Byrd and segregationist George Wallace — all racists and all Democrats. Therefore, I won't be voting Democrat, I for one will be voting my conscience come 1990.

Students held at knifepoint by alleged sex offender

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A man who Tempe police say may be responsible for the sexual assaults of two ASU students earlier this year was arrested Tuesday night after he allegedly held two female ASU students at knifepoint after breaking into their apartment, police said Wednesday.

"The guy could be it," said Lt. Steve Graehling, head of the Tempe police sex crimes detectives. "He was involved in a sexual type crime in an area where there were prior sexual crimes, and he matches the description."

Tempe police arrested Dwane Norman Rhinhard, 40, of Phoenix, in connection with Tuesday night's incidents, said Sgt. Al Taylor, a police spokesman.

Rhinhard was booked into the Maricopa County Jail's Madison Street facility in Phoenix on charges of armed burglary, two counts of aggravated assault, kidnapping, indecent exposure and providing false information to police. He was being held in lieu of $123,300 bond, and his preliminary hearing has been set for 9:30 a.m. April 19, a jail spokesman said.

Taylor said Rhinhard was arrested about 10:45 p.m. when officers broke into an apartment at Desert Palm Village, 1215 E. Vista Del Cerro, after a man who was walking a dog reported hearing screams.

The incident began minutes earlier in the parking lot of the Safeway store at Rural and Broadway roads where police received a report of a naked man in a car who had exposed himself. The man fled into the apartment complex and entered the student's apartment through an open rear sliding glass door, Taylor said.

One of the women was sleeping when the man, who was wearing shorts and a shirt, entered the apartment. Her roommate, who just got out of the shower, walked into the living room and confronted the man and began screaming. The suspect then went to the kitchen, grabbed a butcher knife, and told her he would kill her if she did not stop screaming, Taylor said.

Taylor said the man told the student, who still was screaming, that he needed a place to hide because the police were looking for him. He tried to exit through a window, but an officer who responded to an "unknown trouble" report confronted him. Officers finally arrested him after they kicked in the front door, he said.

The students, both 19, were uninjured, but were left shaken by the incident.

"I'd say we were pretty lucky," one of the students said Wednesday. "Other people need to be aware that they have to keep their doors locked."

"It was unbelievable," the student's roommate said. "I didn't know what was going on, I was just screaming, and I tried to get to a phone."

"I wasn't afraid of being a hostage, I was afraid of being stabbed."

Graehling said Rhinhard is an "investigative lead" in the January sexual assault of a 22-year-old female ASU student who was attacked at the same complex where Monday's incident took place. A similar attack took place in February in the Meridian Corners Apartments, 1440 E. Broadway Road, which is less than a mile east of Desert Palm Village.

Bandit fires at ceiling of Tempe business, flees with cash

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A bandit armed with a handgun fired a shot into the ceiling of a Tempe business Tuesday night and robbed the place of an undisclosed amount of money, police said Wednesday.

Tempe police spokesman Sgt. Al Taylor said the incident occurred about 6:25 p.m. at the Western States Tire Store, 101 S. Hayden Road, when an employee who was leaving the business was approached from behind by a man with a gun.

Taylor said the gunman forced the man back into the store, threatened him by firing a shot, then took the man's wallet and two bank bags containing cash and checks.

The suspect then forced the man to kneel down in a back room while he fled, Taylor said.

Tempe police also reported Tuesday:

- Undercover narcotics officers arrested a 22-year-old Phoenix man Monday after he allegedly tried to sell the officers a quarter-pound of cocaine in a parking lot in Scottsdale. In addition to seizing the drugs, police confiscated the man's car.

- An 18-year-old ASU student was arrested Monday at a Tempe apartment complex and booked into Tempe City Jail on a charge of threatening and intimidating.

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A Marriott employee was arrested Monday for threatening a fellow employee at Palo Verde East Residence Hall. The man was cited then turned over to Mesa police for an outstanding traffic warrant.

police report

- A thief stole a $200 computer "mouse" from the Engineering Building.

- Thieves stole two bicycles, valued at a total of $1,015, from campus Monday in separate incidents.

- A vandal caused $500 in damages to a 1989 Suzuki Swift parked in Parking Structure One.

New Arizona student regent credits vote to predecessors

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

The newly-appointed student member of the Arizona Board of Regents said Wednesday that she is looking forward to being the first student regent with voting powers and gave credit for the privilege to her predecessors.

"I think that it says a lot for the past 11 student regents," Peggy J. Steffens said. "I think that we deserve it."

Steffens, 31, who is a graduate student at NAU, was appointed to the position Tuesday by Gov. Rose Mofford for a one-year term starting July 1. She will replace current Student Regent Pat McWhortor.

Steffens was a teacher at Cross Junior High School in Tucson from 1984 to 1988. She also was named Arizona Teacher of the Year in 1988.

Steffens currently is studying for her doctorate degree in educational leadership at the Center for Excellence in Education at NAU. She received a bachelor's degree in 1981 from the UofA and a master's degree in 1983.

Steffens becomes the first voting student regent after the bill was given overwhelming support from the House and Senate.

Mofford signed the student regent vote bill into law Friday. Student leaders had been trying to get a permanent voting member on the Board for 15 years.

In 1987, the student regent position was made permanent. Previously, the position was subject to review every three years.

Steffens said she hopes she will positively impact the universities and represent the students well.

But she said having voting powers puts a lot of pressure on student regents because they must have knowledge of all the issues the board considers.

McWhortor would have been the first voting student regent but the law does not go into effect until 90 days after the current legislative session ends sometime in May.

Steffens said her new position will take a lot of her time, but she is looking forward to the challenge.

"I think that I'll grow and learn a lot," she said.

Foreign student enrollment steadily rising

By RICHARD LAMPING
State Press

ASU's international student enrollment rose 4.4 percent last year, continuing what has become a steady increase of foreign students attending the University, the director of International Student Programs said Wednesday.

Suzanne Steadman said there are 1,984 foreign students currently enrolled at ASU — an increase of 87 since the 1988 spring semester.

The students represent 119 foreign countries and comprise 4.9 percent of the total ASU student population, she added.

Steadman said that 10 years ago there was only one student representing the Republic of China, but today that number has increased to 193.

However, she noted a downward enrollment trend in the number of students from the Middle East OPEC countries.

For example, in 1979 students from Iran and Saudi Arabia were the largest foreign groups on campus, but that has slowly changed. Iranian student enrollment has decreased from 152 to 52, and Saudi Arabian enrollment has decreased from 93 to 42.

Steadman attributed this trend to decreasing oil revenues in those countries since that time.

Seventy-four percent of the international students on campus come from the Orient, Steadman said, adding that the engineering college attracts 47 percent of all the foreign students.

ASU archaeologists have unearthed an ancient canal used by the Hohokam Indians during the eighth and ninth centuries. The canal is located on the athletic field east of Sahuaro Hall.

cal tragedy" may have forced the Hohokams to leave the Valley. Rice said the tragedy could have been an extended drought or the gradual poisoning of the cornfields by the minute amounts of salt in the canal water.

The archaeological team currently is studying the microorganisms and snails that lived in the canal bed to determine how much salt was in the canal water. The data will tell scientists during what season the canal was used, as well as how long it took to ruin the soil.

The age of the canal was estimated by dating pottery shards found in it. However, a more accurate date will be derived by a technique called archaeomagnetic dating, Rice said.

Archaeomagnetic dating is a technique for determining the age of clay structures by detecting the direction of magnetic particles within the clay. The technique works because the magnetic north pole (where compasses point) is constantly shifting.

He said it works because scientists know where the magnetic north pole has been through the years.

"It's like looking at a compass that is broken," Rice said.

He said the team hopes to publish a scientific paper on the archaeological history of Tempe.

Rally

the universities.

The recommendation would allot a total of $610 million for all three universities. Of the total, $478 million would come from the state and $132 million from student tuition.

In addition, the subcommittee recommended that an additional $12 million be raised to cover a potential budget shortfall. These funds would also come from student tuition.

Brad Golich, executive director of the Arizona Students' Association, challenged students at the rally to make 30 phone calls to every member of the Arizona House of Representatives and to the full Senate Appropriations Committee, which will next be considering the cuts.

In an attempt to make it easier for students to contact their legislators, phone banks have been set up this week in the ASASU state relations office.

"The Legislature is very close to adopting these numbers," Golich said. "(If they do), the regents will have no choice but to raise tuition."

Sen. Doug Todd, R-Tempe, said calls from students are already making a difference at the Capitol.

"They are about to drive my secretary crazy," he said, adding that the students' phone calls are making it difficult for his staff to work.

Todd, a staunch supporter of the universities and a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said he wants to see the schools get the funding he thinks they deserve.

"I'm not the one they have to convince," he said. "They need to let the rest of the legislators know they are getting screwed, and they are damn mad about it."

Fees

ASASU President-elect Paul Larson said if the subcommittee's proposed budget for the universities is adopted by lawmakers, tuition could rise more than $200.

"We are going to be suffering some major setbacks," he said.

Rep. Earl Wilcox, D-Phoenix and member of the House Appropriations Committee, said students need to step up their lobbying efforts.

"If they don't they will get screwed," he said. I've gotten a whole bunch of letters (from students). I think it is great."

Fees said he expects the lawmakers to make a decision on the universities' budget by the end of next week.

Yusef Hashimi, ASASU senator from the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences, said budget cuts will prohibit some students from coming to ASU.

"We're not going to have the engineers and scientists because we're not going to have the students who can do it," he said.

"If I didn't get a scholarship, I wouldn't be here." Student Regent Pat McWhortor called the potential for tuition increases the second half of the "tuition battle."

The first half of the tuition battle was last semester when university students rallied against a proposed $156 in-state student tuition increase that eventually was reduced to $84.

ASU law student David Jordan told students at the rally that lawmakers are taking advantage of them.

"They are too afraid to increase taxes statewide," he said.

Fees said he sent a letter to faculty members and parents of ASU students last week, urging them to contact their legislators and voice their concern about the budget cuts.

In another attempt to get legislative attention, student leaders this week are circulating petitions against the cuts. They will be available to sign on the mall through Friday.

LG AU

was for an educational activity.

"Of all things, we should definitely support a presentation on AIDS," he said. "We should commend the LG AU for addressing an issue which has not yet been addressed at the University."

However, Niemeyer asserted that the Senate must look not only at the activities they are funding but at the organization they are funding as well.

"The LG AU's presentation is not going to be a non-political event, and it will not be of broad interest to students," Niemeyer said. "I do not believe that the Senate's decision is representative of the political viewpoint of students at ASU on this issue."

Niemeyer also said the Senate's decision represents a "change in the times" in ASASU decision making.

"The funding is due in part to the political composition of the Senate," Niemeyer said. "Senators are far more liberal and generous than in previous years."

But Hashimi contended that the LG AU funding controversy has been blown out of proportion.

"This group is not under the same leadership it has been in previous years, and it is a totally different group now," he said.

The LG AU did not seek funding to raise problems or create controversy, Hashimi added.

Sen. Chris Stiles of the College of Liberal Arts said he voted for the appropriation because he views the LG AU as a "support group and not a mechanism for promoting political agendas."

Sen. Mike Pressendo of the College of Public Programs said he was in favor of the bill because of its educational merit.

"AIDS is not exclusively a homosexual problem," Pressendo said. "Educating the public about public health concerns makes it worthy of funding."

The bill will now be passed on to ASASU President John Fees, who said he will approve the appropriation.

"This bill definitely seems to have some value," Fees said.

But Fees added that "funding an organization's activity does not necessarily express support for the organization."

Niemeyer said that work needs to be done to better define the funding guidelines and to eliminate possible loopholes. Currently the bylaws do not restrict any organization from receiving funding, and legislative decisions are based upon merit of the activity for which the funding is being requested.

Rohde overcomes adversity, eyes national title

Brian O'Mahoney/Sun Devil Spark

ASU gymnast Christian Rohde will swing into action to help the Sun Devils at the NCAA Championship in Lincoln, Neb., today through Saturday.

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — ASU gymnast Christian Rohde said competing in the NCAA Championship beginning today will provide a good measure of how he and the Sun Devils have progressed over the season.

"I think it is nice to finish in the same place you started out at," Rohde said.

ASU began the year with its practice meet against Nebraska, Oklahoma, Iowa State and Air Force Nov. 18 and 19 in Lincoln.

"The last time I went to Nebraska I had a cast on," Rohde said. "It might have been a blessing in disguise. When I was hurt, I got a taste of being a specialist and it wasn't for me."

The injury occurred during a dismount from the high bar three weeks before the start of the season. Despite dislocating his ankle, Rohde continued to compete on pommel horse while wearing a cast.

He endured rehabilitation twice a day and worked on strength-building exercises for his entire body, since he was only able to practice routines on the one apparatus.

"My ankle still gives me problems," Rohde said. "I'm constantly landing on it. All it takes is to land on it wrong once and it will hurt all week."

Now he is back competing in five of the six events.

"High bar is the one event I have to get back on," Rohde said. "It was one of my best events in Junior Nationals. I hurt my back on a release. I didn't push through the injury because I had a fear of it."

One event Rohde is not afraid to go all out on is pommel horse. At the age of 13, he was the Junior National Champion on this apparatus.

"For my (10th) birthday I got a pommel horse," he said. "I used to come home from school and play around on the horse. My best friend (UCLA gymnast Terry Notary) got one the next year, so we'd go over to his house and play around."

Rohde exhibited sportsmanship when asked how well he thought his childhood friend would do at the championship meet.

"I hope he does great," he said, "but if he beats me I'm going to be mad."

ASU sprinter to put on spikes in front of home crowd

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The only thing left for sprinter Jacinta Bartholomew to see in Arizona is the Grand Canyon.

The senior recreation major made her last trek around Sun Devil Stadium last Saturday as the ASU season came to a close, but she still has not had the opportunity to go up north and peer into one of the seven wonders of the world.

Maybe she is too busy running and jumping. The Sun Devil season may be complete, but Bartholomew said she is not ready to hang up her spikes.

Wednesday night, she flew to her home country of Grenada for a national track meet.

The Organization of Eastern Caribbean States sponsors the event each year alternating the island it will be held on.

Bartholomew will make a repeat performance in the meet. In 1987, she was the honored athlete winning the 200-meter sprint, long jump and 4x100-meter and 4x400-meter relay events.

"It is a big honor," the All-American athlete said. "I'm happy that I'm going. I'll get a chance to see my family."

Because Bartholomew is a celebrity in Grenada, she said there is a lot of pressure to repeat her wins this year.

"I really have to win," the trackster said with a smile. "But this gives me a bigger incentive."

Bartholomew is used to challenges and thrives on them.

During the 1988 season, her first at ASU, she was a member of the NCAA champion 4x100-meter relay team and placed third in the long jump and 4x400-meter relay team.

It took the student-athlete five meets to beat her personal best last season and only took her three meets to accomplish that feat in 1989.

"Overall, I did very well," Bartholomew said, about this season. "There is a lot more in the future. I am on my own now. I will continue competing and training."

"I don't want to stop here. I have a lot more I can do."

Currently, the sprinter said she is shopping around for a track club to participate with for a couple of years.

After graduation in May, Bartholomew said she is undecided as to whether or not she will return to Grenada.

The long-jumper was born in this Caribbean nation and became interested in track and field in high school.

"I went out on the track for fun," she said, about her experiences at St. Joseph's Convent in St. George's, Grenada.

Then Bartholomew decided to travel to the United States and attend Alabama A & M.

In 1986, she was the NCAA Division II long jump champion and a member of the winning 4x100-meter relay team.

In 1987, she transferred to ASU because she had a couple friends in Tempe and wanted a change. Bartholomew redshirted her first season here.

The Sun Devil said there are many differences between the "Valley of the Sun" and Grenada.

"The temperature (in Grenada) is 80 degrees year round," Bartholomew said. "You don't have to bother with winter. This is why I go home for the summers."

The athlete said many people describe her as "quiet by nature."

"People just have to get to know me," Bartholomew said, adding that she is not as reserved as people seem to think.

ASU archer Mike Bergenheier was the top Sun Devil finisher in the University-hosted Arizona Cup International that ended Wednesday.

Arizona Cup International ends; Bergenheier top Sun Devil finisher

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

ASU's archery team hosted its first Arizona Cup International Tournament, which started Saturday and ended Wednesday and featured teams from Finland, Great Britain, Sweden and United Nations.

Among the individual Sun Devils who qualified for the cup championship were Janet Schaffer, Kris Maskrey, Kari Granville and Chris Castner. Senior Michael Bergenheier was the sole senior to finish in the top eight.

"It was the first time I have made it to the semi-finals or the finals," Bergenheier said.

The one aspect of the tournament that set it aside from any other, according to Bergenheier, was the foreign competition.

"This was the first international tournament I have been in," he said. "Having the foreign competitors out on the field adds more depth to the tournament."

tournament, as well as throughout the season.

"The season's going great," she said. "We're shooting as well as we were last year at this time."

This year marks Rhodes' 13th year as ASU head coach. Throughout her career, she has led the Sun Devils to 26 of 27 national team crowns.

She hopes to have a repeat performance this year when the Sun Devils travel to Atlanta for the U.S. Intercollegiate Championship in mid-May.

"We should do alright if we don't have any last minute stresses," she said, adding that it is an important time of year for the team members to keep their grades intact.

This weekend, ASU will travel to Long Beach, Calif., for the West Regional Collegiate Championship. They will face teams from Arizona and Southern California.

Today's results were not available at press time.

ASU linksters claim Lady Sun Devil crown

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

Amy Fruhwirth fired a one-under par 70 and won her second collegiate tournament as ASU rolled to a 22-stroke victory Wednesday at the Lady Sun Devil Invitational in Paradise Valley.

The fourth-ranked Sun Devils shot a final-round 295 — the low round of the tournament — at the Stonecreek Golf Course to easily outdistance sixth-ranked Oklahoma State in ASU's only home tournament this year.

Sun Devil head coach Linda Vollstedt said it was a great victory for ASU, which had not played in a tournament for more than a month.

"They played really well today," Vollstedt said. "They wanted to win and win by a lot.

"They stayed focused, which was our game plan."

Fruhwirth, whose only other victory was last fall at the U. S. Japan-Intercollegiate in Tanagura, Japan, had finished in second place at each of her last two tournaments.

"It is really exciting," Fruhwirth said. "I have been playing really well. It was just a matter of time."

The junior pre-season All-American shot a three-round total of 217, beating Tulsa's Kelly Robbins and UCLA's Jean Zedlitz by five strokes.

"It was very good to see Amy win our tournament," Vollstedt said.

Fruhwirth said the strength of her game this week was her putting.

"I got a lot of good breaks and I putted well," she said. "I didn't make too many mental errors."

"Everything was good. I was able to hit the putts, which made the difference."

Vollstedt said the victory was a good preparation for the upcoming Pac-10 Conference Championships, April 23-25 at Pasadena, Calif.

"Winning this was really important because the conference championships are coming up," Vollstedt said. "We needed to know we are doing really well."

ASU's victory marked the second straight year the university has won the nine-year old tournament. The Sun Devils also won the first tournament in 1981.

Freshman Lynne Mikulas had her best collegiate finish, placing fifth, 10 strokes behind Fruhwirth.

"Lynne had a great tournament," Vollstedt said. "That was a really good performance."

Senior All-American Pearl Sinn, currently the top-ranked golfer in the nation, led after Monday's first round, but shot an 83 Tuesday after feeling lingering effects of a heat stroke suffered last week.

Sinn rebounded to shoot a 76 Wednesday, good for a 14th-place tie.

Other Sun Devil finishes included Julie Shephard, who tied for 12th at 232 playing as an individual; Heather Hodur, who tied for 25th at 236; Missy Farr, who placed in a 29th-place tie at 237; and Mindy Bono, who finished in 64th playing as an individual.

Rohde said he was a hyperactive child and did well in most sports, but decided to focus on just one. When he was seven, he acquired an interest in gymnastics and by nine he won the California State Championships at the Class III level in club gymnastics.

By age 16, Rohde was a member of the Junior National Championship team, which consists of the top 10 gymnasts in the nation.

Rohde narrowed his college choices to three schools: UCLA, UC-Berkeley and ASU.

"Before I made my recruiting trip to ASU, I was sure I was going to UCLA," he said. "I came here and liked it a lot better. I liked the guys and the atmosphere."

"At UCLA, there is not the team focus. Everyone competes with each other and wants to do better than their teammates."

During the 1987-88 season, his freshman year, Rohde said the weight of trying to do well for the team created nervousness. But overall, there was less pressure than when a coach depends on a gymnast's performance every meet.

"Coaches don't know if they can count on your score or not," he said. "I think we just had to establish ourselves and handle the pressure."

"Last year, I wasn't expected to do as good a job. Now, it's not 'let's see if you can do it' — they count on you to do it. In competition, the lineup begins with a solid performer, and the ability to score higher increases with each gymnast. On pommel horse Rohde is the anchor man."

"I always end up going last," he said. "The only time I really feel the pressure is when a teammate falls ahead of me (in the lineup). There is more pressure on you to do better."

But Rohde said there will not be as much tension for the Sun Devils at the championship meet as people may think.

"All of us have been in really crowded meets," he said. "When you're on the floor, you look up and see the people. But the second you touch the bar to compete, it all goes blank. You go into your own little world."

Suns win fifth-straight with Dallas harnessing

DALLAS (AP) — Jeff Hornacek scored 21 points and the Phoenix Suns rolled to their fifth consecutive victory Wednesday night, defeating Dallas 109-94 despite the return of Roy Tarpley to the Mavericks' lineup.

Tarpley missed 49 games while undergoing treatment for a cocaine-related suspension.

The Suns hit seven straight shots in the second period to stretch a three-point lead to 14 and continued to pull away. Phoenix led 70-47 early in the third period and coasted home before a less-than-capacity crowd of 16,851.

Tarpley, who was suspended Jan. 5 because of cocaine-related violations of the NBA's drug policy, came off the bench to score 16 points and grab 13 rebounds.

However, Tarpley wasn't enough firepower for the fast-sinking Mavs, who have clinched their first losing season since 1982-83.

The Suns, who were only two games behind the first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division, as well as the Western Conference, going into the game, received balanced scoring from Kevin Johnson, Eddie Johnson and Tom Chambers.

Eddie Johnson scored 17 points and Kevin Johnson and Chambers each had 15. Adrian Dantley led Dallas with 17 and Derek Harper added 16.

Olson opts to remain at UofA

TUCSON (AP) — Lute Olson, though heavily wooed by Kentucky, decided to remain as the University of Arizona's basketball coach Wednesday, with regents authorizing a new five-year contract that could add more than $75,000 to his annual earnings.

After the regents approved by conference call a salary increase and performance incentives for Olson, university president Henry Koffler thanked them, saying Arizona's basketball success depended heavily on the 54-year-old coach.

Arizona finished the regular season ranked No. 1 but lost in the NCAA West Regional semifinals after reaching the Final Four in 1988.

Gov. Rose Mofford, one of the regents, said that, "On behalf of the state of Arizona, let me say thank you to Lute. I'm glad that he decided to stay with us because he certainly is a definite asset to our state."

Olson was attending a dedication naming Cholla High School's gymnasium for Wildcats' star Sean Elliott, an alumnus of the high school. But in a written statement, Olson said Tucson "is truly home" to him and his wife, Bobbi.

"I would like very much to finish my coaching career at the UofA," he said. "I will be the head basketball coach at the UofA next year and, hopefully, for many years to come."

Kentucky Athletic Director C. M. Newton said he talked with Olson Wednesday morning. "He told me that he had decided to remain at the program that he has built up," Newton said. "He also said . . . that his family wants to stay there."

Newton said Olson was one of four coaches "we've been involved with. We're going to proceed right on."

Olson, generally regarded as the front-runner for the Kentucky opening, said Tuesday he would make a decision by the end of the week.

The regents approved a base salary of $130,000 and a series of incentive bonuses which, if all achieved in a given year, would be worth $39,000. Before Wednesday's special meeting, Olson's base pay was $93,307.

His total earnings package, including income from radio and television appearances, a shoe contract, camps, clinics and other activities, is estimated at $400,000 to $500,000.

Kentucky, looking to replace Eddie Sutton, who resigned last month, reportedly is considering a package worth at least $600,000. But Olson said previously there he was not a formal candidate and that no offer had been made.

Olson has coached at Arizona for six seasons. He took over in 1983 after the Wildcats went 4-24 and has led Arizona to a 137-55 record, four Pac-10 titles and five NCAA tournament berths.

Prior to that, Olson coached one season at Long Beach State and nine at Iowa, leading the Hawkeyes to five straight NCAA tournament berths and into the Final Four in 1980.

Olson's contract had another three years to run, but the regents had not acted to extend the pact before authorizing Koffler to prepare a revised five-year agreement.

The regents agreed to bonuses for winning the Pac-10 Conference title or the third game in the NCAA tournament, for reaching the Final Four and for having a team whose members achieve superior academic performance within a school year.

OU football player testifies in preliminary rape hearing

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — An Oklahoma football player told a judge Wednesday he witnessed the sexual assault of an Oklahoma City woman by teammates Nigel Clay, Bernard Hall and Glen Bell in an athletic dormitory Jan. 21.

Clay, Hall and Bell are accused of first-degree rape in the alleged gang assault. Hall and Clay also are accused of two counts of furnishing liquor to a minor.

Jimmy Fennell testified in the third day of a preliminary hearing for the three former Sooners. Special District Judge Gary Purcell will decide if the three should stand trial on the charges filed against them Feb. 10.

After the state finished presenting its witnesses Wednesday afternoon, Purcell denied a defense motion to drop the charges. The defense was expected to present some witnesses as the hearing continued.

Fennell admitted to District Attorney Tully McCoy that he originally told authorities he knew nothing about the alleged rapes, but said he testified at the urging of friends who said it was the right thing to do.

Fennell told the court he was in the bedroom of Clay's dorm suite the night the woman said she was attacked. He said the woman did not resist when Hall led her back to the bedroom after she came out of the bathroom.

"I think he said 'I want to talk to you . . . and she just walked in with him,'" Fennell said.

The woman had testified Monday that someone grabbed her and led her into the darkened bedroom and began unzipping her dress. Fennell said the zipper, which ran diagonally across the front of the dress, was not unzipped.

Fennell said Hall turned out the lights in the bedroom. Soon, he and others in the front room heard a scream and he, Clay, Keith Traylor and Bell ran into the bedroom.

Traylor, another Oklahoma football player, contradicted a portion of Fennell's testimony when he took the stand later, saying he wasn't in the suite then.

Fennell said Hall tried unsuccessfully to have intercourse with the woman and then Clay attempted to have intercourse with the woman while Hall sat on her upper body. Fennell said the woman told Hall "take your hand off my mouth. I can't breathe. I'll do anything you want."

Clay then got up, Fennell said, and Hall took his place and "that's when he penetrated her."

"She said, 'Please, no, don't do this. I've never been with a guy before,'" Fennell said.

Fennell said Clay and Bell then had sex with the woman, but he did not.

He said Traylor was off in a corner of the room during the attack, but Traylor said Hall had let him into the bathroom area of the suite after Traylor heard someone yell, "No, stop." Traylor said Hall left the room and was followed by Fennell. He said he turned on a light switch and saw Bell having sex with the woman.

Traylor said he didn't see anyone else in the room.

Asked whether he thought about trying to stop what was going on, Traylor said, "At that time I really didn't feel it was my job to stop them."

Traylor admitted to McCoy and defense attorneys that he originally lied when questioned by authorities, but said "What I'm saying today is the truth."

Asked why he lied, he said, "Because I didn't want to be where I am right now."

Fennell said Clay and Bell then had sex with the woman, but he did not.

Fennell said before the attack Hall had told him "if we have to we're going to take some from her," McCoy asked Fennell what Hall meant by "some." Fennell said "sex."

Fennell testified he went to his own room after the attack.

Under cross-examination by attorney Fred Shaeffer, Fennell said he gave investigators from McCoy's office different stories the first two times he was interviewed.

"I told him (the investigator) two different ones. The third time I came out and told him everything," Fennell said.

Fennell also said the victim was drunk. The woman's friend "had to keep reminding her. (The woman) was sitting down and every now and then she would open her legs up and (the friend) would have to say 'watch yourself,'" Fennell said.

The victim had testified Tuesday that she did not consider herself intoxicated.

In other testimony Wednesday, Dr. Harold Haralson, who examined the woman at Norman Regional hospital on Jan. 23, said he found evidence the woman had intercourse two to three days before the examination.

Haralson said he based his findings on sperm and tears in the vagina. He said he also found a six-inch bruise on the woman's right buttock and a one-inch scratch on her thigh.

In addition, the doctor said, the woman winced when he touched the back of her head, a sign her skull was slightly tender. The woman had testified earlier that her head kept hitting a wall during the attack.

"She was anxious, somewhat uncertain about what happened to her and was having some difficulty, I feel, dealing with the events she described," the doctor said.

Fennell admitted having talked about the alleged attack with other witnesses while waiting in a witness room earlier in the week, but said nothing was said to try to change anyone's testimony or to get the stories straight.

"It was just a conversation of what took place," he said.

Such discussions are not allowed. The judge ruled against defense motion seeking to bar some of the testimony.

ASU names new coach; Wells takes softball job

From Staff Reports

Linda Wells has been named head women's softball coach, athletic director Charles Harris announced Wednesday.

Wells, currently in her 15th campaign as the University of Minnesota's head softball coach, will replace Mary Littlewood, who has announced her retirement at the conclusion of the 1989 campaign following 20 years at ASU's helm. Littlewood was the first Sun Devil softball coach.

"I am proud of the program at Minnesota, but I was looking for new challenges," said Wells. "I have a great deal of respect for Mary Littlewood and feel I am coming to build on an already solid program."

"I weathered through the Title IX years and have seen the growth of women's Division I softball and see a bright future at Arizona State."

She has compiled a career coaching record at Minnesota of 347-262-1 (.571), including a 12-14 mark thus far in 1989 and will finish the season with Minnesota before assuming duties at ASU on July 1. This year, the Golden Gophers were ranked 11th nationally in the pre-season poll, the highest ever for the school.

Last season, Wells directed the Golden Gophers to a 31-25 record en route to the Big 10 Conference Championship and a berth in the NCAA Championship. She was named Big 10 Conference Coach of the Year, as Minnesota earned its second conference championship in three years.

The assistant coach for the 1987 U. S. Pan American Games gold medal-winning softball squad, Wells has led Minnesota to three post-season appearances, including a third-place national finish in 1978. She also coached the U. S. national squad to a gold medal at the 1985 South Pacific Classic.

Similar to Littlewood, Wells served concurrently as Minnesota's head women's coach for basketball (1973-77), volleyball (1974-81) and softball (1974-89). During her stint as volleyball coach, Wells guided UM to a 246-95-5 record and a seventh-place finish at the 1981 AIAW National championship. The Gophers captured a conference championship in 1978.

"Linda Wells brings a strong coaching and academic background with her to Arizona State University," Harris said. "We feel she will continue the winning tradition at Arizona State that Mary Littlewood has built during her 20 years here."

Littlewood agreed, "She seems to be my type of coach." Littlewood has won two national titles and boasts a 494-214 record in 19-plus seasons at ASU.

"The fact that she still plays, especially as a catcher, shows that she has thorough knowledge of the game," she said. "I feel good about her taking over the team."

A 1972 graduate of Southeast Missouri State with a bachelor's degree in physical education, Wells lettered in five sports — softball, volleyball, basketball, tennis and field hockey — and played softball professionally. She earned her master's degree in exercise physiology from Minnesota in 1982.

Lopez signs with Pepperdine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Damin Lopez, who averaged 27.6 points and eight assists a game as a high school senior, topped a list of prep players who declared their West Coast college destinations with national letters of intent Wednesday.

Lopez, a 5-foot-10 point guard from Apollo High School in Glendale, Ariz., signed to attend Pepperdine, a West Coast Athletic Conference school in Malibu, after being recruited by several schools, including Arizona State.

"Damin has that uncanny ability to make everyone around him play better," said Waves coach Tom Asbury.

Lopez was named his league's most valuable player and shared statewide MVP honors for Arizona.

Wednesday was the first day, under NCAA rules, that prep athletes could officially declare their collegiate choices.

A real knockout.

Get ready for the final round on May 2! It's the last issue of the State Press for Spring 1989. We call it our Spring Shopper. It's full of great values on everything from food to bikes to housing . . . and then some. With the Shopper, you'll be able to take a study break to complete a crossword puzzle or read some of your favorite comics.

It's fun, a little entertaining and full of great values.
