After meeting with students and University administrators for more than two hours Thursday, ASU President J. Russell Nelson has taken under consideration a 10-point plan to combat racism on campus.

The plan, drafted by the newly formed Students Against Racism, allows for University sanctions, including expulsion, for students who perpetrate incidents of racial violence on campus.

Meanwhile, five members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon have been suspended from the fraternity indefinitely and all social functions at SAE have been canceled until further notice, ASU Office of Residence Life officials said Thursday.

In addition, three people have been arrested in connection with an assault on an SAE member and a female student that led to the racial violence on Alpha Drive early last Saturday, ASU police said.

Acting ASU Police Chief Doug Bartosh said ASU police will block off Alpha Drive to drive-through traffic this weekend and plan to beef up the number of officers on patrol in an attempt to prevent a repeat of last weekend's violence.

"I'm hoping for a quiet weekend," Bartosh said. Director of Residence Life Cliff Osborne said in addition to increasing security, officials will limit the size of parties and the amount of alcohol on Alpha Drive.

The actions are in response to an attack early Saturday on three black students by SAE members who had mistaken the men for suspects in an earlier assault on a fraternity member and a female student. During the brawl, the three black students were called racially degrading names and spat upon, according to police and eyewitness accounts.

Nelson called Thursday's meeting to advise the approximately 28 ASU officials and students in attendance of what action the University is taking in response to the incident and to solicit views about what else can be done to limit racism on campus.

"Each of the points is worthy of full and complete consideration," Nelson said in a prepared statement.

- The 10-point plan calls for:
- An independent investigation of the ASU Police Department and allegations of police brutality on minority individuals.
  - Associated Students of ASU to take an active stance against racism and oversee the investigation.
  - The Office of Student Life to expel any students involved in racial violence.
  - The Office of Student Life to revise the University Code of Conduct making the use of racial slurs and racial violence grounds for expulsion.
  - The Office of Residence Life to expel any fraternity involved in racial violence.
  - The Office of Residence Life to require fraternities to take

Complaint filed against 4 officers

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

An ASU student has charged that four University police officers harassed and injured him during an early Sunday incident in which he was arrested for trespassing in a campus parking lot.

James W. Hogg, 21, said he filed a complaint Thursday with ASU police, charging Officers Stewart Adams and Chris Moore, Sgt. Gary Dirks and an unidentified ASU officer with harassment and police brutality twice: once when he was arrested in Lot 57, and again at ASU police headquarters.

"My position is that the officers don't talk to the press; we have no comment," said acting ASU Police Chief Doug Bartosh. "It will be put under investigation."

The complaint against the officers comes amidst other allegations of misconduct by ASU police. An ASU student formally charged April 12 that he was assaulted by an officer because the officer thought the student called him fat.

In addition, ASU police have come under fire for handcuffing two black students, who had not been arrested, after they were attacked early Saturday by fraternity members who mistook the men for suspects in an assault case.

Citizen complaints do not deal with the criminality of an officer's actions, but instead are a way for the department to determine if an officer acted properly.

In his complaint, Hogg, a sophomore business major, said he and some friends were standing in Lot 57 early Sunday next to one of his friend's truck, watching a fight between

New student regent receives criticism

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

Several NAU students have expressed concern to the Arizona Students' Association that the new 31-year-old student regent nominated by Gov. Rose Mofford April 11 will not adequately represent them because of her age.

Brad Golich, executive director of ASA, said Thursday he is concerned about several phone calls he has received criticizing the nomination of Peggy Steffens.

"I understand their concerns," Brad Golich said. "But I believe Peggy Steffens is very qualified. I think they (the students) need to relax a little bit and give her a chance."

ASA is not acting on any of the complaints, he said.

Steffens will not officially become student regent until the Senate Education Committee votes to confirm her nomination.

As a student pursuing her doctorate degree in educational leadership at NAU, Stevens said she was "surprised"

Golich to hear of the students' concerns. But she added that "everybody has been real supportive" since the criticisms were voiced.

Steffens, who received a bachelor's degree in education from UofA in 1981 and a master's degree in 1983, has also been criticized by students who say she is not a full-time student.

"I am a full-time student," Steffens said. "I can do a good job of representing undergraduate and graduate students." Golich agreed with Steffens.

North trial judge says 'No one has legal right to violate law'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jury in Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial was dispatched Thursday to decide the guilt or innocence of the former White House aide with the judge's admonition that no one, including the president, had "the legal authority to order anyone to violate the law."

North has said he had authority from superiors including, he believed, then-President Reagan, for many of his actions in behalf of the Nicaraguan rebels at a time when official U. S. aid was banned.

Because of the late hour, jurors were sent to the nearby hotel where they will be sequestered, with orders to begin deliberations Friday.

U. S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell told them "your job is to decide the facts" in the first trial stemming from the mid-1980s affair in which profits from arms sales to Iran were diverted to aid the Nicaraguan rebels.

The judge was specific in his instruction about North's contention that he acted under orders from top White House officials and, he assumed, with Reagan's approval. "Neither the president nor any of the defendant's superiors had the legal authority to order anyone to violate the law," Gesell said.

Pope meets with Irish president, calls for an end to violence

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Thursday met with President Patrick J. Hillery of Ireland, calling for "courageous gestures of reconciliation" to stop the sectarian bloodshed in Northern Ireland.

The pope urged all parties in the conflict to find a political accord "that will respect the legitimate rights and aspirations of all the people of Northern Ireland."

"Signs of hope are not lacking, and we shall pray and be confident that a process guided by reason and mutual acceptance will not be long in bringing an end to bloodshed and the secure advent of a just reconciliation and peaceful reconstruction," John Paul said in English.

Bush meets with Republicans as he forms anti-crime proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Thursday he is still trying to establish which guns have "suitability for sporting purposes" as he puts together an anti-crime proposal.

As Bush weighed what to include in his package, a group of Republican lawmakers urged him to concentrate more on criminals than gun control.

Bush met with the group seeking ideas on what should result from his administration's review of the uses of assault weapons, which have proliferated among street criminals and drug dealers.

The lawmakers urged him to look beyond new regulation of weapons and focus instead on construction of prisons and incarceration of criminals to deal with "a national crime emergency," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who was joined in the meeting with Bush by Sens. James McClure, R-Idaho, Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and Rep. Bill McCollom, R-Fla.

State's first public civil rights forum to be held today

By SCOTT C. SECKEL
State Press

The first public forum on the civil rights movement in Arizona will be held today at the Tempe Mission Palms Hotel.

The forum, which will document Arizona's civil rights campaigns of the 1950s and 1960s, is open to the public.

The forum includes a lecture on the origins of the civil rights movement by Aldon Morris, a leading historian in the movement from Northwestern University, and a panel discussion featuring Arizona civil rights activists will follow. The program will begin at 9 a.m. at the hotel, located at 60 E. Fifth St.

ASU history professor V. P. Franklin, a nationally recognized expert on civil rights movements who organized the forum, said the panel discussions also will examine Arizona's role in the national civil rights movement.

Franklin said panelists will address how protests in different states were organized and if the movements in those states were aiming for the same objectives as activists in the Deep South.

"Then we can look at Arizona and see how it fits in nationally," Franklin said.

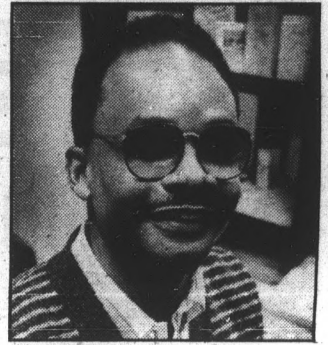

A film made by producer James Gipson of the UofA, titled "The Civil Rights Movement in Tucson," will be screened during the forum.

Franklin said the film, which has only been shown on cable TV in Tucson, is unique in documenting this particular aspect of Arizona history.

Franklin said the forum discussions will cover Arizona protests from the early bus boycotts in Montgomery, Ala., in 1955 to the march from Selma to Montgomery in 1965.

Sponsors include the ASU Department of History and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, the ASU Black Caucus, the Arizona Humanities Council and the UofA Black Studies Program.

House financial disclosure bill still alive

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

A bill requiring members of the Arizona Board of Regents to submit financial disclosure statements is not dead, despite being held by the House Rules Committee for more than two months, the bill's sponsor said Thursday.

"It's still alive," said Rep. John Kromko, D-Tucson. "The disclosure is very popular."

Kromko said the legislation may be resurrected if he could attach it as an amendment to another bill that has the regents' support.

Rep. Bill English, chairman of the House Rules Committee, said his committee held the legislation even though he supports the bill's concept.

"The problem is not the regents' end of it," he said. "I support getting disclosure for the regents."

English said the bill's snag is that it is a Democratic-sponsored bill in a Republican-controlled Legislature, and it has failed to sway enough support to pass the House.

Kromko's bill was unanimously endorsed by the House Judiciary Committee Feb. 13, but it has been stalled in the rules committee since.

The measure would not only force the regents to publicly disclose their finances, but also would require members of the state Board of Transportation and the Central Arizona Project Board to file financial disclosure statements.

Kromko said he introduced the legislation in order to detect areas where the board may have a conflict of interest.

The regents have officially opposed the bill, calling it unnecessary because members of the board currently are required to withdraw from votes on matters that present a conflict of interest.

Kromko said he considered attaching the financial disclosure measure onto legislation granting voting powers to the student regent, but added, "I didn't want to kill that one."

Kromko said the regents are some of the few public officials who do not disclose their finances.

"It is pretty hard to justify," he said.

Meanwhile, another Kromko-sponsored bill requiring a state constitutional amendment to provide for public election of regents never reached a committee this session.

He said that bill had no support among lawmakers. Kromko has introduced the same measure during at least one legislative session, but that bill also was killed before receiving a hearing.

Currently, regents are appointed by the governor with the consent of the Senate and serve eight-year terms.

Regent

"She is an NAU student now," he said, adding that the student position on the board is to represent the perspective of all students at the three state universities.

Meanwhile, Associated Students of NAU President Larry L'Heureux, said he thinks the new student regent will represent Arizona university students well, despite the recent criticism.

"It's not a big situation at all," he said.

L'Heureux, who was vying for the position against Steffens, said some NAU students had voiced their concerns to him, but he does not expect further action.

Mofford recently signed into law a bill giving voting power to the student regent. If confirmed, Steffens will be the first student to exercise those powers. She will replace ASU student Pat McWhortor on the board in June.

McWhortor said he thinks Steffens is more than qualified for the job.

"I don't think they (students) have any reason to be alarmed," he said.

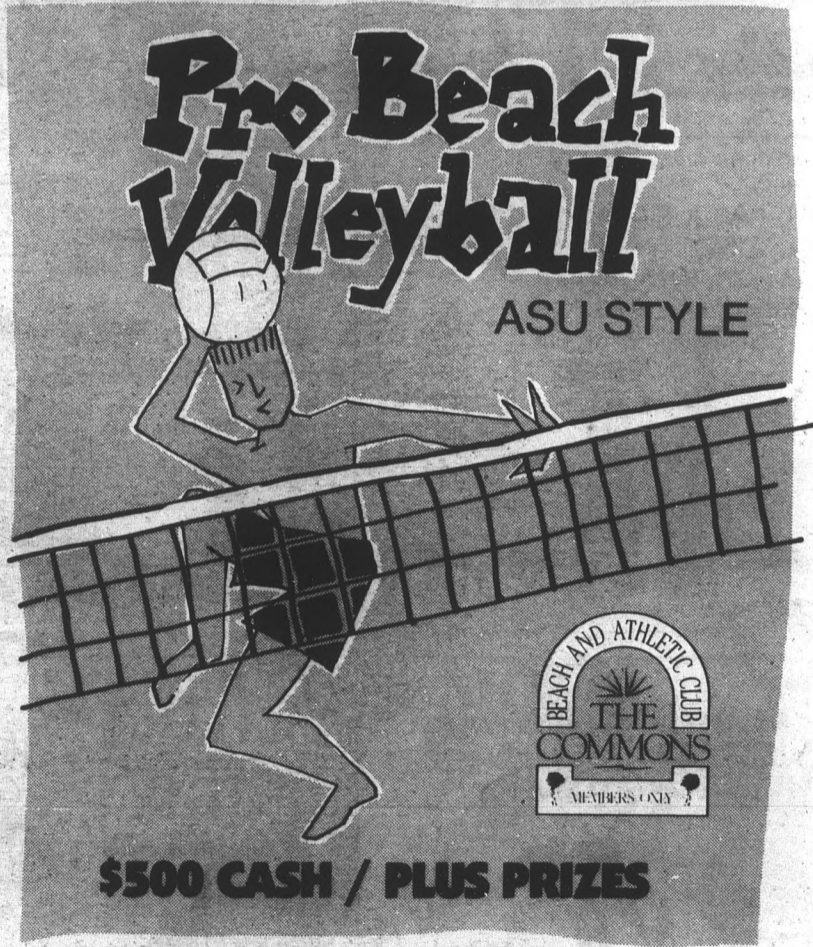

McWhortor added that Steffens has had a lot of experience in working with students.

Steffens was a teacher at Cross Junior High School in Tucson from 1984 to 1988 and also was named Arizona Teacher of the Year in 1988.

Golich said there is no law stating that the student regent must be an undergraduate student.

McWhortor said he has researched the issue of age groups that are attending college and the 25-year-old to 44-year-old group is "skyrocketing."

ASU, South Africa

Misguided policy punishes victim for crimes of oppressor

Brian Tassinari
Asst. Opinion Editor

After the incidents on Alpha Drive this past weekend, race has become the yardstick by which all University decisions will be measured for some time to come.

But sometimes a misguided bureaucrat, not malfeasance, causes damage to the reputation of ASU as a place of equal opportunity. Sometimes a cog in the bureaucratic machinery can become a clog.

The case of Dr. Phuti Ngoepe is an excellent example.

Dr. Ngoepe is a highly regarded South African physicist who also happens to be black.

It is difficult for anyone in this country to imagine the hardships a black man in South Africa must endure to get a Ph.D. in physics.

At one point in his education, Dr. Ngoepe was forced to take correspondence courses because he wasn't allowed to take classes with the white students.

Even now as a professor at the University of the North in South Africa his white colleagues in the physics department still call him "boy."

To have endured this kind of abuse and still prosper takes a man of extraordinary courage. Dr. Ngoepe, and other men (and women) like him, are the best hope for democratic majority rule in South Africa.

So one would think that a man like him would be a welcome addition to this University.

Guess again.

Dr. Ngoepe wanted to come to ASU as a visiting professor but was not allowed.

He may or may not have been a victim of racism, but Dr. Ngoepe was certainly the victim of a bureaucrat with some curiously misguided thinking about South Africa.

A few months ago, Dr. Stuart Lindsay, an ASU physics professor, requested permission for Dr. Ngoepe to come to campus as a visiting professor.

The request was received by the director of ASU's International Programs, Dr. Richard Olson, who generally works with an advisory committee.

But the chair of that committee, Joy Chaudhuri, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences said, "There was never any discussion about a physics professor from South Africa." Several other members of the committee also said that they never discussed the issue.

So Olson apparently acted unilaterally when he decided to "table the issue" — which is bureaucratese for deciding not to decide.

In the interim, Dr. Ngoepe has found another school in the United States that is willing to take him, the University of Pennsylvania.

And what was Olson's reasoning for tabling the issue and effectively barring Ngoepe from the ASU faculty?

"There is an honest disagreement on how to handle South African institutions," said Olson. "It has validity that when you work with the apartheid system you legitimize it."

In other words, according to Olson, if you bring a victim of apartheid to America you support his oppressors.

Using this logic, sending aid to the Contras supports the Sandinistas. Or bringing Maki Mandela to campus struck a blow for segregation in Africa.

Up is down, and good is bad.

It wasn't budgetary constraints or the credentials of Dr. Ngoepe that were questioned. What Mr. Olson decided was that dealing with anyone from South Africa is supporting the South African system of apartheid.

How does bringing a victim of apartheid to this campus — someone who has fought against it all his life — in any way support apartheid?

Dr. Ngoepe struggled against the system and excelled. We should be giving him support instead of punishing him for the crimes of his oppressors.

It is only a matter of time before the injustice of apartheid causes it to crumble and fall — the black majority will eventually rule in South Africa. We should support black intellectuals in South Africa so that when the inevitable does occur, the country will have a pool of capable individuals who are qualified to lead their nation.

To say that we should boycott all South Africans is shortsighted and cruel. What about Dr. Ngoepe? Should he be held hostage to the ideological whimsy of a professor at ASU?

Why should he have to endure the jeers of his ignorant colleagues in South Africa, waiting for a revolution that may be years away?

Black intellectuals are the best hope for the peaceful resolution of South Africa's tragic problems.

"If I had to do it over, I would do it differently," said Olson. "But hindsight is easy."

Prejudiced beliefs take time to kill

Editor:

In response to your editorial of April 18, "Racism: Kill the Cancer," I'd like to make a few comments.

First of all, you cannot simply kill racism. This is something that has been with this country since its founding, affecting immigrants as well as emancipated slaves. Whenever a "stranger" is introduced into an established community, there is going to be a degree of conflict arising as the members resist the changes and differences the newcomer represents. It's basic human nature to resist change.

Also, racism is a learned process of thought established in childhood by parents, teachers and peers. It is not possible to "control" how others think, feel or behave. Nor is it possible to "control" how you think and feel. The only part you have control over is how you, individually, behave. That's the first place to start dealing with racism, with yourself, concerning your own actions, not at the SAE house looking to throw off campus anyone who has prejudiced beliefs. If that was the case, then we best all leave now since we all have prejudiced thoughts to one degree or another.

Secondly, in my opinion, this incident has a racial slant to it, but racism is not the crux of the issue. This incident stemmed from assault and battery perpetrated on two people by four other individuals! The color of their skin is of no importance here. This was an act of cowardice on the part of the offenders; attacking a male and female with pipes is a completely unfathomable act to me and raises my blood pressure quite a few points as I'm sure it did Hedgecock and the other members of the SAE house.

Anger is a strong emotion that brings out the core of people's hatred. Being black, they were called offensive names which are directed toward blacks. Had they been Mexican, white or any other group, they would have been called by any number of other slurs. The racial slur is simply name calling in an attempt to express anger and disgust at the actions of the individuals and to goad them into a confrontation.

How these slurs are interpreted is the key here. If the black community feels these remarks are directed at the entire black population, then there is definitely a problem. However, if it is taken in context, the remarks are statements aimed at a few cowardly individuals who are poor examples of the behavior of the community at large. The color of a person's skin is a very small part of who they are, and any derogatory reference made to it should be seen in that light as a very small insult.

I am not saying we should accept racially discriminating behavior as an unchangeable part of ourselves. I am saying we all have prejudiced thoughts and we must control our expression of them so as not to insult the dignity of others. I do not support the taunting or spitting behaviors, as they are childish, immature acts. The original assault and battery should have been dealt with by the authorities and them alone.

I am not pointing a finger at the four students, harassed by over 200 people Saturday, as being the cowards who committed the assault, and I feel for their plight and how they must have felt, being innocent. I think Mr. Liddell should best think first about killing someone for calling him a name before actually doing it. That is the most ignorant attitude of all.

This incident could have been avoided altogether had Hedgecock just let the proper authorities handle it rather than acting on his own in concert with 200 others. The only way to quell racism is with the slow change of attitudes that time cultivates being passed on to our children, pointing out that a person's actions speak much more about him than the color of his skin.

Cross on Danforth Chapel must come down

Editor:
The cross on Danforth Chapel should be retained as part of our cultural heritage, Ed Schubert maintains in his Wednesday column. Does he also advocate keeping those quaint old handicapped-inaccessible bathrooms as a cultural artifact? Or a sign over a water fountain that says, "For Whites"? Each of these in its own way automatically establishes a premier class of citizen, automatically relegating all others to a back-seat status. A non-Christian is no more likely to feel comfortable worshipping in a building with a cross on it than a black would drinking from a fountain with such a sign, even if told it is merely decorative history.

In his letter on April 20, Professor Emeritus W. P. Shofstall is unable or refuses to distinguish between an off-campus mosque and a building on government property that stands like a centerpiece between ASU's student center and its main library, arguably the campus core. He or she writes, "The cross is a symbol of our roots." Clearly the collectiveness in "our" does not refer to the U. S., which has explicitly ruled out any connection between religion and government for nearly 200 years. I suggest he or she use "my roots," rather than "our roots."

Loinel Deschamp's letter, et al. (April 20) sees the cross as trivial issue, in light of such things as racism on campus. ASU is fostering an attitude that creates problems like racism by creating a group of "belongers": white, Christian and physically able, among other things. To "outsiders" who don't conform to any of these criterion, issues such as these are not so trivial.

Schubert clearly hasn't even looked at Danforth Chapel, or he would realize that the vestigial steeple he discusses doesn't exist — no cross, after all, was in the building's plan — but instead, a structure that resembles a chimney flue sits atop the chapel, just waiting for a weathervane. But more bicycle racks would be the best.

Racial incident "disgusting"

Editor:
After reading Mike Burgess' article on April 17 explaining the events that led to the brawl on Alpha Drive Saturday, I was appalled. I thought ASU was an institution housing well-educated, civil adults — I'm afraid I'm mistaken. It's a shame that one fraternity and its ignorant president can label all us white students as racists. I plead with the ASU police to come forth and press charges against the police officers and the SAE fraternity and all others involved in the incident on behalf of James Liddell, Rob Rucker and Darren Viner. When Rob Rucker called the situation "disgusting," he was exactly right. Once 500 madmen surround my truck, spit in my face and yell racial slurs at me like "nigger" and "porch monkey," I would kill them the next time it happens — just like James Liddell. Wouldn't you?

Condom use should be encouraged

Editor:
I am prompted to write you of the concern I have over the apparent lack of effort by not only the three major television networks but also my own University of facilitating the use of condoms in casual sexual relationships.

I would like to take the initiative and do my own "60 Seconds" for condom use.

Remember, students, condoms prevent the spread of sexually transmitted disease. According to the American Journal of Public Health, condoms are 98 percent effective in doing so. The Journal also states they are 99 percent effective in preventing pregnancy, which is the real tragedy in casual sexual relationships.

If all this is starting to sound like the same old song and dance, listen to this: My wife and I have been married for four years and two months. In Oct. 1987 I was served a court document naming me as the defendant in a paternity suit. In July of 1988, I took a court-ordered blood test, and in August 1988 I was informed over the telephone that the percentage (99.72) was "devastating" to my case and that I was the father of a four-and-a-half-year-old boy.

On that one evening in September of 1983 when I neglected to wear a condom I lost the power to choose.

I met him for the first time eight weeks ago. He seemed to be a bright, happy, open-minded little boy. My wife is rolling with it. The mother dropped her demands for back child support contingent upon my interest in getting to know him.

I still shake my head in disbelief; how could I have been so careless?

Please, all of you who participate in casual sexual relationships, take the initiative and USE A CONDOM!

Sources say proposal to build stadium not being considered

By JOIE ANN LAPOLLA
State Press

The Tempe City Council is "not really considering" Martin Stone's proposal to build a baseball stadium in south Tempe, Councilman Don Cassano said Thursday.

But Cassano added that the council will consider alternatives for using the 189 acres at Kyrene and Elliot roads that Phoenix Firebirds owner Stone has in escrow.

"The location (of the proposed stadium) is up in the air, but it is probably not going to be in south Tempe," said Councilman Rowland Oonk.

About 300 people, most opposing construction of the stadium, attended a meeting to express their views on the proposed site Wednesday evening.

The proposed $65 million stadium, which would have been financed by Stone, would seat 10,000 to 14,000 and could expand to 43,000, if a major league baseball team moved to Tempe.

"He wants to build a stadium and make it expandable, if and when major league baseball comes to Phoenix," said Craig Pletenik, public relations director for the Firebirds. "He would ideally like a stadium in downtown Phoenix."

Residents opposing the project say the stadium will create severe traffic problems, noise problems and lower their quality of life.

Greg Corns, vice president and general manager of the Firebirds, said Stone was "aware of the response of the people."

"If it doesn't work out, we will find a different area," said Corns.

He said that he spoke to Stone only briefly about the Tempe site proposal, but has not discussed withdrawing the proposal with Stone yet.

But, some Tempe council members are already looking at alternatives to the south Tempe site.

Council members Frank Plencner and Barbara Sherman suggested a possible stadium site might be near the Rio Salado development or ASU.

"The site has to be at least two or three miles away from the residential areas," Sherman said.

Although the majority of Wednesday night's crowd opposed the site, Councilwoman Carol Smith said she received "many calls Thursday from people who were in support of the stadium but were afraid to speak at the meeting."

ASU site for animal rights rally

Two local animal rights groups will be sponsoring "World Animal Week," next week, which will feature films depicting animal use in laboratories and conclude with a candlelight memorial service and rally.

Question and answer forums featuring speakers from the medical field will also be held.

"We are not out to attack animal researchers at ASU," said a member of Concerned Arizonans for Animal Rights and Ethics who asked to remain anonymous.

"Our goal is to provide a forum to get the issue out for public discussion."

The animal rights groups said they chose to rally for their cause on ASU's campus because they wanted to inform the public that the University is involved in animal experimentation.

Seventh Generation, an ASU animal rights group, is co-sponsor of the event.

"World Animal Week" is recognized and celebrated nationally by animal rights groups around the country.

Separate shootings leave 1 dead, 1 injured critically

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A Tempe man was killed by a shotgun blast outside his home Wednesday night and another man was critically injured in a separate shooting Thursday morning, police said.

"Two shootings in 24 hours is a rather violent period of time for us," said Tempe police spokesman Sgt. Al Taylor.

Taylor said Michael Jolicoeur, 42, was shot in the chest about 8:43 p.m. outside his home at 1849 E. Hayden Lane and was taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

He said Jolicoeur had gone outside his home to speak to a man just before the shooting. Jolicoeur's 7-year-old son told investigator's that his father apparently went outside to sell some tools, he said.

After the shooting the suspect fled on foot and a police canine was called to track the suspect, but was unsuccessful. Police canvassed the neighborhood Tuesday checking to see if residents there could identify a suspect, Taylor said.

Taylor said Jolicoeur's home is for sale and that police have responded to the home numerous times on family disturbance calls.

In the second shooting, which occurred about 9:53 a.m., a 51-year-old man from Ventura, Calif., was shot three times with a handgun and stabbed in the back twice when he went to his estranged wife's house to pick up the couple's 2-year-old son, Taylor said.

Charles Mueller underwent surgery at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn and was listed in critical condition.

Taylor said the shooting-stabbing occurred at a townhouse at 5212 S. Hazelton Lane after Monica Mueller noticed a handgun tucked in the back of her estranged husband's pants while he was waiting in the apartment for the child.

He said Monica Mueller then jumped him from behind and knocked the gun loose. They struggled for the weapon and Monica Mueller wrestled the gun away and fired three shots, striking her husband twice in the stomach and once in the groin, he said.

Taylor said Charles Mueller continued fighting his estranged wife when his mother-in-law, Bettina Lopez, 62, who was visiting from Tucson, stabbed him in the back twice.

He managed to leave the townhouse and then collapsed outside, Taylor said.

Taylor said the women called "911" and police and paramedics responded.

There have been no arrests and police are still investigating the altercation, he said.

Complaint

members of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. Five people were arrested and three ASU police officers were injured in the fight.

During the fight, which broke out behind 706 Alpha Drive at about 1:20 a.m. Sunday, Officer Adams told Hogg twice to leave the parking lot.

According to the complaint, Hogg said he asked Adams if Lot 57 was a public parking lot, and the officer replied, "Yes, get in the cab (of the truck)."

While walking to the truck, "Adams pushed me against the end of the bed (of the truck) and handcuffed me," Hogg said in his complaint.

The complaint said Sgt. Dirks then drove Hogg to the ASU police station where he was read his Miranda rights. While Hogg was at the station he asked Adams where he could file a complaint. Hogg charges that Adams told him he would not be able to file a grievance.

Hogg was cited for criminal trespassing and released on his own recognizance. Hogg said he was leaving the station when he saw Dirks sitting in an office. He entered the office to obtain Dirks' name.

As he was leaving the office, Officer Moore asked Hogg if he was loitering. Hogg asked the officer for his name and when Hogg attempted to finally leave the office, an unidentified officer said, "Let's take him," according to the complaint.

"I was then pushed against a door very roughly and handcuffed very tightly," Hogg said in his complaint. "Then a night stick was pulled out and placed between my back and the handcuffs. I was then lifted up by the nightstick underneath the handcuffs to where only my toes were touching the ground."

"Then I was put in a position of my head down . . . in front of my knees by the officer pushing down on my back with the nightstick and pulling up on the other end so that my handcuffed hands were being pulled upward," the complaint said.

"They made me walk to the door where the (jail) cell is in this position."

Hogg said in the complaint that just before the police who had immobilized him came into view of other officers in the station, they let him stand up straight. Another unidentified officer asked if Hogg was causing trouble and the officers responded, "He's calmed down now."

Hogg was then booked into the Maricopa County Jail in Mesa on a second charge of criminal trespassing.

Hogg said Thursday in an interview that he suffered soreness to his back and shoulder as a result of the officer's alleged actions.

part in a cultural awareness program.

•All ASU police officers to take part in training sessions on how to control and diffuse racial incidents.

•Professors, staff and administrators to be required to attend cultural awareness programs.

•Making a cultural awareness course a requirement for graduation.

•Making sure the 21-point Action Now program is completed.

Bob Johnson, a member of Students Against Racism, said of the plan's points: "They are something that have to be met. They are not negotiable."

About 50 students denounced racism Thursday by picketing on Cady Mall to protest the Alpha Drive incident. The demonstration was the second such protest in two days.

ASU officials said the University currently is following through with the Action Now program, which was developed in 1988 to increase minority recruitment and retention at the University.

The administrators also said the University Code of Conduct currently is being revised to include racial slurs, harassment and violence as punishable infractions and that the Interfraternity Council already has requested materials for a cultural awareness program.

ASU police Sgt. Bob Jones said police expect to arrest the fourth suspect in the initial assault on students Sean Hedgecock and Susan Burch that led to the brawl by the end of the week.

Jones said Torrey L. Wright, 19, a Mesa Community College student who lives in Chandler, was arrested in connection with the incident on a charge of misdemeanor assault. He was released on his own recognizance.

Jones, who heads the Police Department's detectives squad, said police arrested Wright's brother Toby, an 18-year-old Dobson High School student, on a misdemeanor assault charge Wednesday and released him on his own recognizance also.

ASU football player Steven Wayne Rausch, 18, of Tempe, was arrested Tuesday, also on a misdemeanor assault charge, Jones said.

Jones also said police learned Thursday of an additional incident that occurred involving fraternity members and the suspects shortly after the 9:30 p.m. assault.

He said the four men allegedly involved in the assault, along with two other men, reportedly returned to Alpha Drive at 11:30 p.m.

According to a Tempe Police Department report on the incident, the six men drove in a truck to Alpha Drive, and a large group of people from the SAE house came at them with sticks and baseball bats and yelling racial slurs. The men in the truck fled and fraternity members got in another truck and chased them.

The report said the fraternity members followed the men from Alpha Drive to Stadium Drive, and then south onto College Avenue where the two vehicles stopped at a red light. The truck with the fraternity members then backed up about 50 feet and accelerated forward, ramming the other truck and knocking it into the intersection before fleeing.

One of the men in the rammed truck suffered minor cuts. The fraternity members' truck was described as a dark-colored 4 x 4 with a push bar in front and possibly a roll bar over the top of the vehicle, police reported.

The men said they could not see who the fraternity members were because the other vehicle's bright headlights were turned on.

Tempe police are investigating the incident as an aggravated assault, but have no suspects, the report said. Tempe police have jurisdiction over this incident because the chase occurred on Tempe streets.

Jones said fraternity members claim the men in the truck had weapons, including a gun, but he said investigators have not substantiated weapons were involved.

Festival of Life

Musician to help raise funds for suicide prevention

By MISH TELL
State Press

The Festival of Life concert will be a time of reflection and hope for those who may have lost this optimism in the past. Local musicians will gather on the Mesa Amphitheater stage this Sunday to help raise funds for the Suicide Prevention Program's teen crisis line. The concert will begin at 11:30 a.m. and will feature the talented Walt Richardson and the Morning Star Band, Chuck Hall and the Brick Wall and Radio Architecture. The price is $5 and children under six are admitted free.

But the festival, though it aspires to be a fun-filled celebration with door prizes, concession stands and clowns, does hold a purpose that needs to be recognized.

The festival, which hopes to raise enough money to keep the teen crisis hotline open, is also a means for the program to honor the many teens who have placed numerous voluntary hours in the program in order to help fellow youths.

The hotline is sponsored by the Suicide Prevention Program and consists of a group of trained teen-agers who listen to the problems of callers, including relationship problems, pregnancy, drugs and abuse.

The teens are taught not to "solve the other persons' problems," said Cheryl Splansky, program manager of the Suicide Prevention Program, "but (through listening) help that person through that process."

"We wanted some way to honor (the teen-agers) who completed the first phase of training," said Splansky. To complete the first phase of training which enables the teens, who volunteer from all over the Valley, to "listen" to callers, the trainees worked six hours every Saturday for two months, said Splansky.

"The kids help other kids," she said. "(The festival) is also to generate funds and (increase) public awareness of the hotline and to get community support for the line," she said.

But government funding through the substance abuse office denied the needed money for the program this year. And local musicians are coming to their aid.

"Personally, I've lost several friends to suicide over the years, so that hits kind of close to home," said Chuck Hall, who will be performing with the Brick Wall at the festival.

"If we can use our music and performing to benefit a good cause, that's great with us," he said.

Hall, who is enthusiastic to perform at the concert, said that musically, fans of Chuck Hall and the Brick Wall can expect a little difference in the band's music.

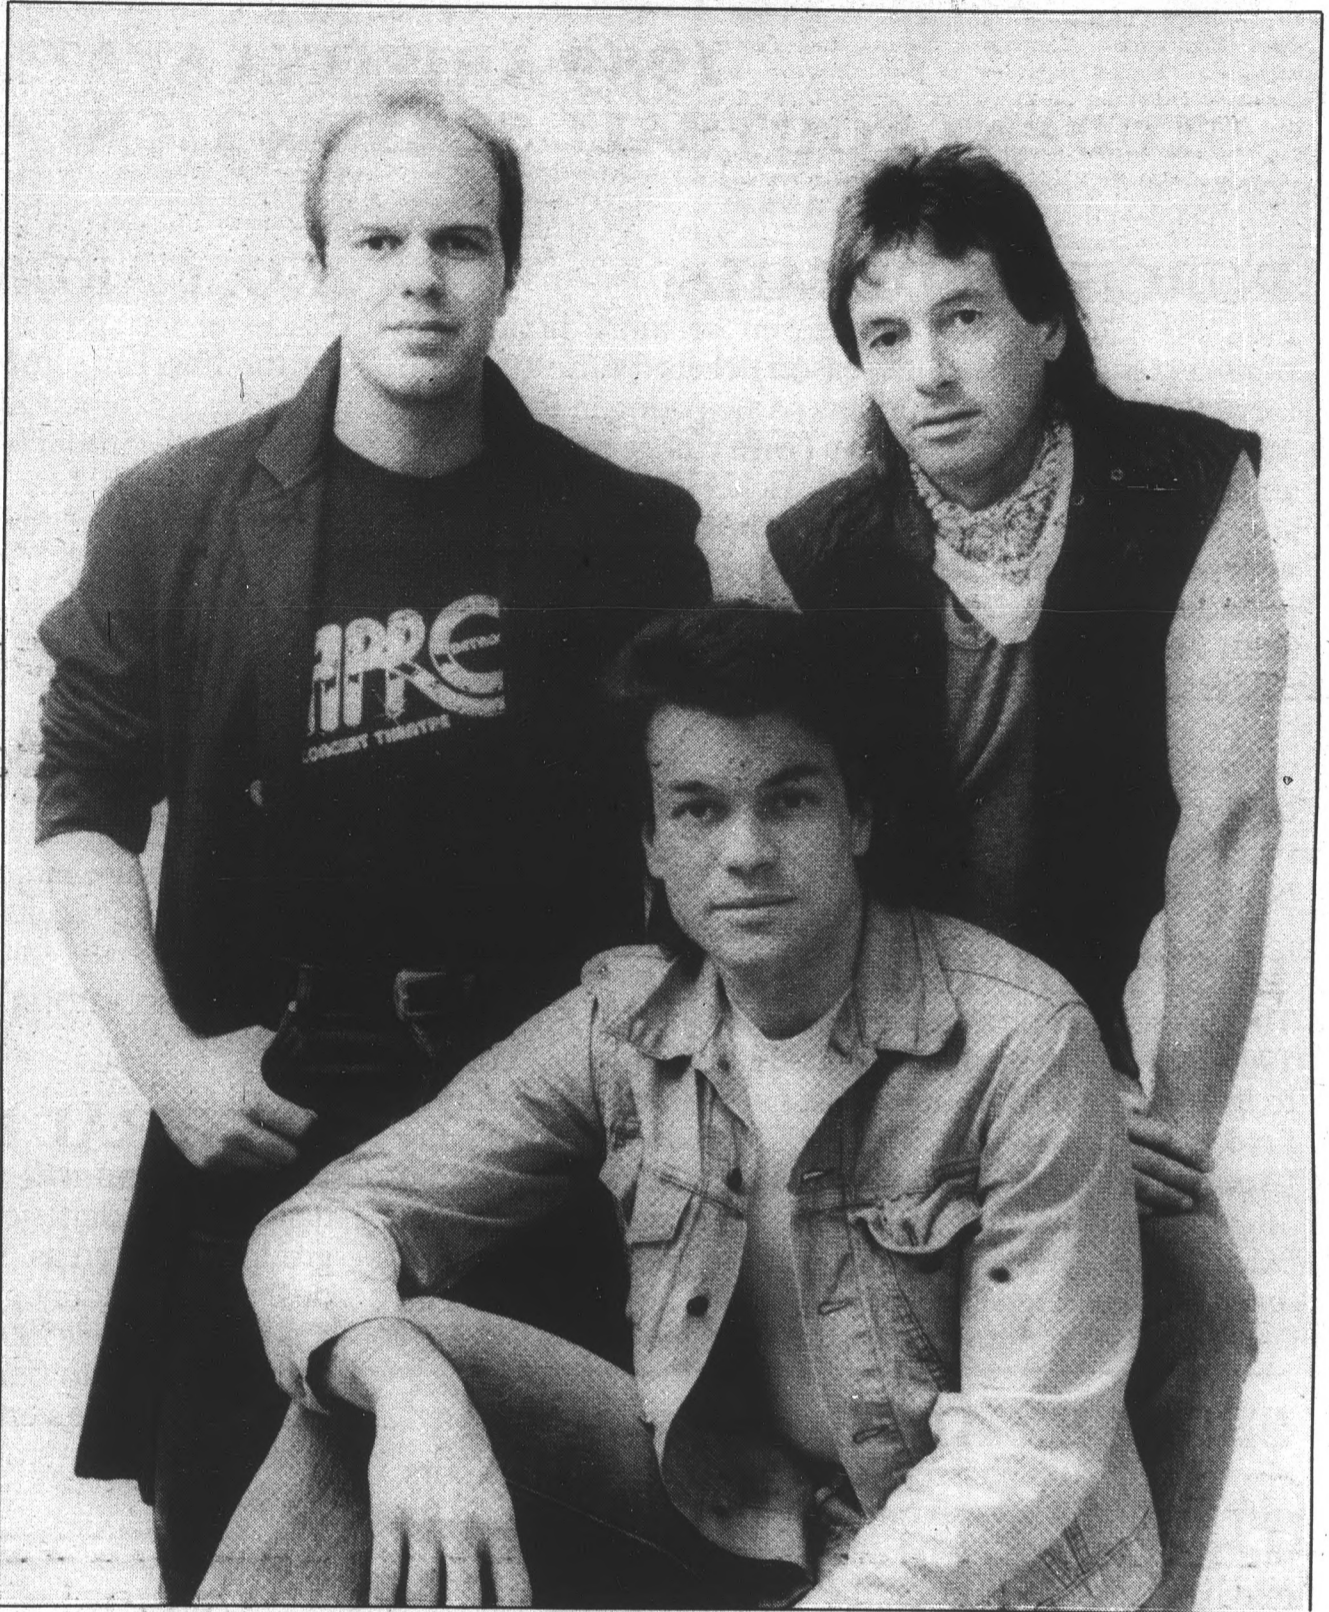

"We've kind of evolved into a rock 'n' roll band — we've been modernizing our songs for the past couple of months. We don't play blues anymore — the music we're playing now is more punchy. We're just having a ball with it," he said.

Hall, who feels that the cutting of the funds for this prevention project was a "serious mistake," hopes that the performance of the Brick Wall will generate a big crowd response.

Walt Richardson is equally enthusiastic about playing for such a cause.

"It feels real good," Richardson said. "I hope, from an educational standpoint, people learn how much work and how much attention needs to be focused on teen suicide prevention. And what areas are available for teens to get help. Expect a good show," he said.

Tickets are available at all Dillard's Stores or the Mesa Community Center Box Office.

Chuck Hall and the Brick Wall (above) and Walt Richardson and the Morning Star Band (below) will perform at Sunday's Festival of Life Benefit. The concert will be held to help raise funds for the Suicide Prevention Program's "Teens Talking to Teens" crisis hotline. The hotline number is 461-8888.

A STATE OF PRIDE

1989 ARIZONA STATE STUDENT FOOTBALL SEASON TICKET INFORMATION

PURCHASE DETAILS:

Fulltime ASU students with seven or more hours may purchase student discount season tickets for the 1989 Sun Devil Football season. Students participating in the season sale must fill out an order form (one ticket per student) and mail it to the Sun Devil Ticket Office along with appropriate payment. Ticket applications will be accepted through the mail only, as a prioritization process. Applications must be postmarked no sooner than May 1, 1989. Applications not conforming to the processing time period will be returned. A balloon made of ladies' silken lingerie carries Baron Munchausen (John Neville) aloft on his quest for allies to fight the Sultan's army in "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen."

Adventure film frees imagination

By ERIK LYONS
State Press

It's not every day that a film takes a prominent place in motion picture history. Considering the rate at which movies are being produced today, this is an honor which cannot be bestowed lightly. To deny that "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen" is worthy of such an honor is to deny the spirit of imagination. Director and co-writer Terry Gilliam may have finally justified the use of millions of dollars in the production of a film.

"The Adventures of Baron Munchausen" is Gilliam's finale in a trilogy of films, along with "Time Bandits" and "Brazil," that deal directly with the imagination. In "Time Bandits," a boy is taken on a fantastic journey through time and never knows if it was real or a dream. "Brazil" is the story of a young man who refuses to accept the cold, real world and ultimately escapes into madness. Munchausen is the happy conclusion where fantasy reigns supreme.

This huge film chronicles the incredible escapades of Karl Friedrich Hieronymus, Baron von Munchausen, in the "Age of Reason" — the late 18th century. In the midst of a long war with the Turkish army, a European city suffers from the calculated oppression of elected official Horatio Jackson, humorously portrayed by Brazil's Jonathan Pryce.

The town's Theatre Royal is performing a mocking production of the supposedly mythical Adventures of Baron Munchausen, when the real Baron (John Neville) interrupts the show to set the record straight. The only believer among the crowd is 10-year-old Sally Salt who follows the Baron right into his world of unlimited possibility. Thus begins a series of wild adventures in which the now aged Baron, who is totally uninhibited by the parameters of reality, sets out to end the war that he was responsible for starting.

In the Baron's prime, he and his small band of peculiar super-heroes were adventurers in the spirit of Peter Pan, Gulliver and Indiana Jones. Munchausen's four faithful companions are Berthold (hilariously played by Eric Idle), the fastest man alive; Albrecht (Wiston Dennis), the strongest man on Earth; Adolphus (co-writer Charles McKeown), who can see for hundreds of miles; and Gustavus (Jack Purvis), a midget with a set of lungs that could divert a hurricane.

The Baron (with stowaway Sally) leaves the city in a balloon made of underwear to gather up his group of resourceful friends for a final crusade against the Turks. This takes them to the moon, where Robin Williams is a crazy king with a detachable head, and they find the now slow and elderly Berthold. They go on to visit the comical god Vulcan (Oliver Reed) at the center of the Earth and are also swallowed by a giant monster fish.

When the five crusaders are together again, they proceed to wage an incredible battle with the Turks, all of them having to overcome old age or some other inhibition to exercise their comically extraordinary abilities. The genuinely frightening personification of death (a sort of "grim reaper" — one of the many spectacular visual effects) shadows the Baron throughout his adventures, always lending a strange, mystical note of sobriety to the wild tale.

Pity is the best response to anyone who is not thoroughly entertained by this movie. As he so effectively did in "Brazil", Terry Gilliam has the ability to create a completely alternate existence on the screen. Both films have a magical mood about them that defies description, though "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen" has a more light-hearted, cheerful tone. While it does threaten to be preachy at times, Munchausen skillfully relates social commentary and a refreshing sense of hope.

Terry Gilliam has been burdened for years by the Monty Python association and the seemingly dreaded British sense of humor. Fans of his will contend that "Brazil" was more than sufficient to dispel this limited association. With Munchausen, the bold director can stand alone on a reputation of unparalleled innovation.

'Peer Gynt' recreated in Hartford

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — At the Hartford Stage Company, director Mark Lamos has recreated the magical, mystical world of "Peer Gynt" in a dazzling two-part, five-hour production of Henri Ibsen's rarely performed masterpiece.

The play, running through May 20, is a glorious theatrical adventure, a journey that Lamos manages to make both epic and intimate.

Using 26 actors in more than 70 roles, the director and scenic design wizard John Conklin transport theatergoers around the globe — from rustic Norway to a bizarre troll underworld to the sands of North Africa to a Cairo madhouse to a ship wrecked in a raging sea and then back again to Norway.

But Lamos doesn't forget this tale is one man's story of self-discovery, from a brash, self-centered, carefree and charming youth to a cynical, even despairing, old man who finally finds redemption through the love of a forgiving woman.

Negotiating the sweep and intimacy of Lamos' production is actor Richard Thomas. He plays Peer with a fierce determination. Thomas, who was a robust, non-melancholy Dane in Hartford's "Hamlet" last year, is one of those fearless, energetic actors, willing to take a chance. Despite his eagerness, he doesn't rush through Ibsen's difficult poetry, done here in a new, very modern translation by Gerry Bamman and Irene B. Berman. They follow the playwright's original rhyme schemes.

Bamman played the older Peer in Livui Ciulei's production of the play in 1983 at the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis. Lamos saw that revival and thought about doing it at Hartford.

In fact, Lamos said if it weren't for Thomas, he wouldn't have attempted the mammoth revival. The actor, according to Lamos, exuded "a willingness to take a journey with 'Peer Gynt' that really didn't always seem as if it had a purpose or a goal to it. That was really the best part of the rehearsal process. We just kept looking at each other and saying, 'Well, let's just keep traveling. We aren't going to get all the answers right away.'"

Unfitting Diamond still sparkles

By JENNIFER YEE
State Press

"I don't fit in," said pop artist Neil Diamond. "But you could put me in any show and I wouldn't fit in. You could put me in a rock show and I wouldn't fit in. You could put me on stage with Sinatra and I wouldn't fit in."

Neil Diamond's musical style has transcended musical fads by consistently touching people of all ages and interests. After two decades at the pinnacle of pop success, his music is still as unclassifiable as it was when he started 33 years ago.

"I never tried to fit in because that meant conforming what I could write or what I could do to a certain set of rules. The last group I remember joining was the Boy Scouts, and they threw me out for nonpayment of dues. So I suppose you could say that I've always gone my own way."

Neil Diamond

His "own way" is his unmatched ability to tell stories in his songs, leaving his audiences as mesmerized with the tale as with the tale-teller. Communicating one-on-one with his fans has always been his chief concern — a concern his fans hold in high regard.

"My fans are all well above average. When you have done so many songs, one of them has got to have attracted at least somebody."

This attraction has worked well with Diamond. As he brings the third leg of his North American tour to the University Activity Center tomorrow and Saturday, fans will take a trip down memory lane. His show is a combination of timeless romanticism, a touch of rock-show theatrics and a wealth of sweet, unabashed sentimentality — a combination that has sold out more performances at New York City's Madison Square Garden than any other performer. Tickets for both ASU performances are sold out.

If critics have slighted Diamond's success, he has had the supreme compliment of having his songs covered by everyone from Sinatra to UB40, Presley to Deep Purple.

"The Best Years of Our Lives," is the title to his first studio album in more than two years. Produced by multi-grammy winner David Foster, this album is a close look at the contemporary world through a proven artist.

ASU senior Jim Strickland attempts a chip-shot to the 15th hole. The Sun Devil shot a four-under-par 68 to capture second place.

Two ASU squads lead golf classic after first round

By DAVE HODGES

State Press

SCOTTSDALE — Going into Thursday's first round of the Sun Devil/Thunderbird Classic, ASU head coach Steve Loy said it would not be a surprise to see the top-ranked Sun Devils in first place after 36 holes.

But Loy did not expect to see his "B" team lead UCLA by two strokes and his "A" team by three after one round of the 54-hole tournament at McCormick Ranch Golf Course.

Sophomore John Bizik and junior Todd Kernaghan shot rounds of two-under-par 70 and redshirt freshman Brett Dean fired a 71 to lead the "Maroon" team to a first-round score of 285 at ASU's only home tournament of the season.

Senior All-American Jim Strickland shot a four-under 68 and junior Scott Frisch recorded a 71 to lead the "Gold" team to a 288 finish, three strokes behind the Maroon.

Strickland is tied for second place with Ken Tanigawa of UCLA, one stroke behind Aaron Bengoechea of the University of Pacific.

Play continues at 6:30 a.m. today at McCormick Ranch, 7505 E. McCormick Parkway.

Although ASU leads, Loy said he is not sure if the Maroon team is eligible to win the tournament. When a school fields two teams, one of the squads usually plays as an exhibition, he said.

Loy said he did not actually designate one team as an exhibition team and another as the competing team before the tournament began, but added a ruling should be made by Saturday's final round if it is still necessary.

Whether or not the Maroon team is classified as the exhibition team, it did put on an exhibition for the other golfers.

"I'm very pleased with the play of my Maroon team," Loy said. "There's always room for some surprises."

Loy said he was not as happy with the play of his Gold team.

"I'm disappointed with the Gold team, overall," he said. "They played too defensively today. We have to come out tomorrow and play more aggressively."

Loy said the threesomes his Gold team played with, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State players, also were playing defensively.

Sun Devils hope to eliminate Bears from playoffs

By DEAN GYORGY

State Press

It's back to the Pac for the ASU baseball team, as the fourth-ranked Sun Devils play host to the California Golden Bears for a three-game series this weekend at Packard Stadium.

Game times are today and Saturday at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 1 p.m.

ASU (34-12 overall, 15-6 Six-Pac) is in second place in the conference, one game behind Arizona. California (29-18, 7-14) has slipped in recent weeks, and is fighting to keep its playoff hopes alive.

"They're hungry, desperate, fighting for their postseason life," ASU coach Jim Brock said, "and they have to see it that way."

California is in a three-way tie for fourth place in the conference. The Bears started off at 4-2 in the league, but have gone 3-12 since and have disappeared from the national rankings.

"Cal is hard to figure out," Brock said. "If you look at the record lately they're terrible, but their stats are still good."

"It doesn't look like their ability has fallen apart, they have just hit some hard times, and you can certainly bounce back from that."

California's strength lies in its pitching, as ASU hitting coach Jeff Pentland said.

The Bears will throw Mike Mathews (6-6, 3.18) tonight, and Travis Willis (6-4, 3.52) and Mark Juhas (5-3, 3.40) in either order Saturday and Sunday.

ASU will counter with Oscar Rivas (6-2, 2.88), Brian Dodd (6-1, 4.17) and David Cassidy (1-1, 3.74).

Brock said both he and the Sun Devils are beginning to feel the strain of a tightening Six-Pac race and a possible title-deciding series with UofA May 12-14 in Tempe.

"This is the first really close race we've had in a long time," Brock said. "It's been a while since it's been this close this late in the year. It builds a unique kind of pressure. It gets to be a mind game this time of year."

Men's tennis set on NCAAs; rival in way of national berth

By VICKI CULVER

State Press

In 1985, UofA's football team killed ASU's chances of making it to the Rose Bowl by defeating the Sun Devils in a game that benefited nothing but their record.

On Saturday, the ASU men's tennis team will aim its efforts towards payback. If the Wildcats win the match, they are on their way to the nationals, but if the Sun Devils win, a spot in the national tournament is not definite.

According to ASU coach Lou Belken, the match is more than a simple rivalry — it's a battle.

"It's going to be brutal," Belken said. "We will have to be prepared for it."

Although a victory over UofA will not ensure ASU a seed at the NCAAs, the Sun Devils have a healthy chance of making it, Belken said.

"If we beat UofA, we'll sit back on pins and needles waiting to see what happens," he said. "It's going to be close."

Earlier in the season, ASU defeated the Wildcats in a home match, 6-2. Last year, the Sun Devils beat them both times the two teams encountered each other. Belken knows UofA is hungry for a win.

"We have beaten them the last three times," he said. "They really want to beat us now."

Belken is somewhat concerned with the fans in Tucson, who have been a problem in the past.

"They (UofA) have no control over what is said and done in the stands," he said.

One of the Sun Devils' major emphasis this week has been their mental game. Belken knows his team has the intensity it takes to play a tough match of tennis.

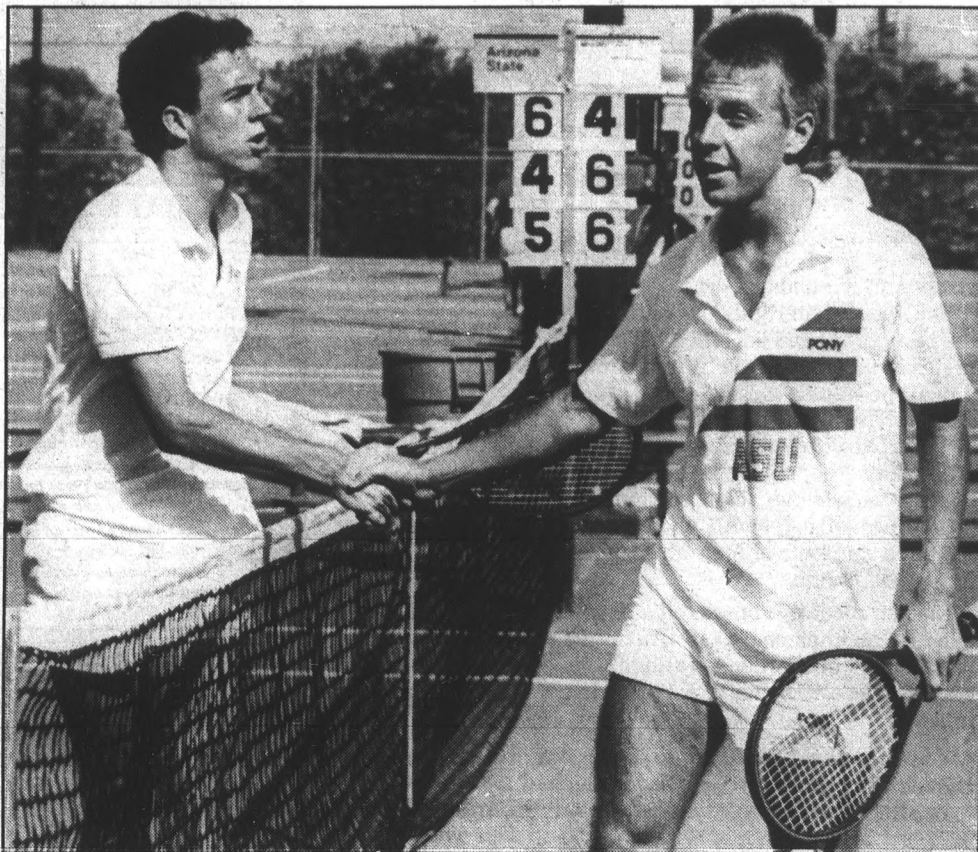

"We are lucky to have a rivalry," he said. "We enjoy the competition and look forward to the challenge."

But Belken also worries that maybe his Devils are too enthusiastic.

"I don't want to pump them up, but keep them on a good emotional level," he said. "If you can't get excited about playing UofA on your own, you're dead."

Last year, ASU was defeated in the first round of the NCAAs by UC-Irvine. UofA did not compete in the national tournament.

"They used to want just to beat us," Belken said. "Now, they want to make it to the nationals."

Third-ranked ASU prepares to defend Pac-10 title

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

It may not be as easy as last year, but head coach Linda Vollstedt said the ASU women's golf team is ready to shoot for its third consecutive Pac-10 Conference championship this weekend at Pasadena, Calif.

The third-ranked Sun Devils will compete Sunday through Tuesday at the 54-hole tournament at Annandale Golf Course.

In 1987, ASU cruised to an incredible 57-stroke victory over UCLA at the conference championships, with former ASU All-American Pam Wright winning medalist honors.

But the competition appears to be tougher this year, Vollstedt said. The Sun Devils probably will be challenged by top-ranked Southern California. ASU finished ahead of the Trojans in four of six tournament meetings this season.

Vollstedt said it may be tough for ASU to repeat because USC may have a home-field advantage.

"It's in their home territory and the tournament is being played on a course they are very familiar with," she said.

But Vollstedt said ASU, which is coming off an impressive 22-stroke victory last week at the Lady Sun Devil Invitational in Paradise Valley, is playing well.

"We're coming off a big victory," she said. "There's always work to be done, but right now we're playing really well."

"We definitely want to defend our title and win big."

Vollstedt said she wants to place as many players as possible on the all-conference team, and added there are four Sun Devils capable of earning the honor.

Junior All-American Amy Fruhwirth, who won the Lady Sun Devil Invitational by five shots, is playing the most consistent golf for ASU.

"She's been working very hard on her swing and her short game is going very well," Vollstedt said. "Tack on some confidence and that puts her in the position to win tournaments like she is."

Another player who has a major shot at all-conference honors is senior All-American Pearl Sinn.

Sinn, currently the nation's top-ranked female collegiate golfer, is recovering from a sunstroke suffered during last week's tournament.

"Pearl's doing much better," Vollstedt said. "She's ready to compete again and I expect a very good tournament from her."

Sinn, from Bellflower, Calif., joins Fruhwirth and freshman Lynne Mikulas as southern California products.

Sinn owns 20 top-10 finishes and one win in her career as a Sun Devil.

Mikulas, who tied for fifth-place honors last week, and junior Missy Farr also have legitimate shots for the All-Pac-10 team, Vollstedt said.

After the Pac-10 Championships, ASU will compete at the NCAA Championships, May 24-27 at Stanford, Calif.

"We're just trying to concentrate on one tournament at a time," Vollstedt said. "We want to play well at the Pac-10s and continue our momentum into the NCAAs, when the time comes."

Golf

"All three teams should and will play more aggressively tomorrow," he said.

Strickland, who started on the back nine, recorded a 32 at the halfway mark and shot a 36 on the front nine.

"He could have played better," Loy said. "But it is important to get off to a good start and improve as the tournament progresses."

Strickland had six birdies, including four straight between the 16th and first holes, and two bogies, on 14 and nine.

He said the impressive showing by the Maroon team demonstrates how strong ASU's squad is.

"We got a tough 'B' team," Strickland said. "I wouldn't call them 'B,' either. It just shows how much depth we have."

Freshman Phil Mickelson, who has won his last two outings and is a strong candidate for National Player of the Year honors; shot a disappointing round of 73, but Strickland said the left-hander probably will bounce back.

"He'll probably shoot a 68 or 67 (today)," Strickland said. "The more pressure there is, the better he plays."

ASU, which has won the Sun Devil/Thunderbird Classic only once (1984) since 1973, has won two tournaments this spring and is coming off a second-place finish at the Augusta Intercollegiate earlier this month.

The Devils will compete in the Pacific-10 Conference Championships May 1-3 at Seattle.

Cardinals interested in All-Pro Gastineau

PHOENIX (AP) — Former New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau, who would have made $875,000 this year if he hadn't retired, may be about to make a comeback in his own back yard.

Gastineau, 32, walked away suddenly with no word for several days last Oct. 11 to be with actress Brigitte Nielsen, his fiancée who was thought at the time to have cancer, though subsequent tests showed she didn't.

Now, reportedly on the outs with her, Gastineau has been discussing a return with the Phoenix Cardinals of the National Football League.

"I had one of the best years of my life last year," he said after meeting with Cardinals general manager Larry Wilson on Wednesday. "She got sick and it changed my perspective on how important (football) is. Now she's healthy and we both want each other to be good in our careers."

"I still want to play football," he added. "I told her the other day the reason I quit was because of her. I didn't make any statements if I was going to come back or if I was not."

Gastineau resides in suburban Scottsdale, a few miles from the Arizona State stadium in Tempe where the Cardinals play. He has family in Springerville, the mountain community where he was born 220 miles east of here near the Arizona-New Mexico border.

And the Cardinals need to bolster their defensive line where David Galloway has been out often with injuries. Gastineau could provide immediate help, even though the Cardinals may opt for Pittsburgh defensive end Burt Grossman in Sunday's draft.

The Jets retain rights to Gastineau, having placed him on the reserve-retired list when he left. He's in the final year of that contract, and the Jets are believed to be willing to make a deal, perhaps a middle-round draft choice, though Wilson said he hasn't talked with them.

"I visited with Mark and talked with him to get an idea if he still wants to play," Wilson said. "I haven't made any decision on whether to pursue him."

Gastineau also recently visited Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis, and Denver and San Diego also reportedly might be interested in him.

Nielsen recently completed a movie in London and will be starting another one soon, Gastineau said. And though he wasn't part of the London filming, he said, the four-month stay it took and being in a trailer every day "was just too much."

Gastineau said they plan to live in Arizona and commute, though she reportedly was saying she had moved out.

Gastineau, who played collegiate ball for Arizona State in 1976, set an NFL record with 22 sacks in 1984 when he was named defensive player of the year. He been selected to five Pro Bowls, including 1985 when he was most valuable player.

Softball team faces No. 1 UCLA in Pac-10 finale

By KYLE D.ENG
State Press

The Sun Devil softball team will meet its toughest challenge of the season today as it faces UCLA for the first of a two-game set.

ASU, (28-17, 4-6 Pac-10), is coming off a road trip in which they split a double header with Arizona on Wednesday.

Saturday's contest will mark the final Pac-10 game in ASU head coach Mary Littlewood's career. Littlewood needs only four wins in the Devils remaining eight games to reach the 500-win plateau.

UCLA, (29-2, 9-1), is ranked second in the nation and sits atop the Pac-10 with a four-game lead over second place California.

ASU must win both games to stay in contention for an NCAA regional playoff bid. The Sun Devils, who currently are in fifth place in the Pac-10, are two games behind fourth-place Arizona and three games behind third-place Oregon.

The biggest obstacle the Devils must overcome is injuries. ASU is still without the services of three starters: first baseman Brandi Hust, second baseman Karen Fifield and third baseman Stephaine May.

Since May went down to injury two weeks ago, the Devils have won only two of their last seven games.

Leading the offensive attack for the Devils is shortstop Ann Rowan and designated player Melinda Cook. Rowan leads the team in batting (.317) and hits (45). Cook is second in hitting (.311), second in hits (42) and leads the team in RBI (24).

Freshman Terri Carnicelli leads the ASU pitching arsenal. Carnicelli boasts an ERA of 1.32 while holding a 13-9 record. She leads the team in strikeouts with 55 in 143.3 innings at the mound.

The Bruins lost their No. 1 ranking early in the season, but have consistently stayed at No. 2 for many weeks.

UCLA's hitting attack is lead by sophomore outfielder Shanna Flynn and senior third baseman Janice Parks. Flynn leads the team in hitting (.376) and is tied with Parks for the lead in hits (35). Parks is hitting (.361) and leads the Bruins in RBIs (18), walks (11), triples (4) and doubles (4).

Pitching is where the Bruins hold an advantage over the Devils. Led by junior All-America, and Pan-Am game winner Lisa Longaker, freshman sensation Tiffany Boyd and reliever Samantha Ford, UCLA boasts the lowest ERA in the country (0.13).

Longaker (13-1), leads the team in victories, holds a 0.23 ERA and has struck out 85 batters in 91 innings. Boyd (11-1) boasts a 0.08 ERA and has struck out a phenomenal 105 batters in 84 innings.

Ford, the closer for the Bruins, is 5-0 with a 0.16 ERA. UCLA has given up 13 runs all season, and only five of those have been earned.
