Tempe Police Cpl. Jay Spradling demonstrates the new computers that have been installed in 90 of the department's vehicles. The computers give the officer instant information on a car's registration and the status of the driver's license.

Police install computers in cars

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

The Tempe Police Department, keeping up with the new technology that has marked the 1980s, recently installed on-line computers in 90 police vehicles.

Within 20 seconds, officers can find out if a vehicle is wanted locally or nationally, has proper registration and if the driver has a valid license — all without leaving his patrol car.

"It's the best thing to come to this department in a long time," Cpl. Jay Spradling said.

According to Gene Obis, police systems supervisor, the computers give officers direct access to the Arizona Criminal Information Center, the National Criminal Information Center and the Motor Vehicle Department.

For example, officers can enter a license plate number into the system and all pertinent information will be displayed on the computer screen.

Spradling said he anticipates that there will be a higher recovery of stolen vehicles, and said officers feel much safer with this system at their fingertips.

Officers can directly access emergency information instead of going through a dispatch operator. This system is much quicker and allows officers to read information, Obis said.

Because all dispatched information is now visible, writing and repeating information is unnecessary.

Officers are able to send messages to other terminals and to the dispatch center.

In addition to other computer features, the Tempe police dispatch service and other patrol units are able to determine where other vehicles are with a touch of a button.

Also, the system gives the officers a computerized scratch pad which they can use to display hot information and various other notes, Spradling said.

The computer system displays daily officer activity for supervisors, including the types of calls and locations where the officers are sent.

Obis said the terminals save a great deal of time on the airways for emergencies and make the channels clearer. "It doesn't replace voice radio — it supplements it," he said.

The vehicle computer systems were installed within the last nine months.

Schmid friend blames drugs for 'abduction'

By JOIE ANN LaPOLLA and TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

ASU student Shantih Schmid was under the influence of drugs when she allegedly faked her abduction to extort money from her parents, one of her best friends said Wednesday.

"It wasn't Shantih who did this — it was drugs," said the friend, who requested anonymity. "People will do anything for drugs."

Schmid was released from jail Wednesday after her parents posted the $33,000 bail. Schmid, a freshman photojournalism major, was arrested Tuesday night for conspiracy to commit extortion, felony theft and armed burglary.

In addition to charges being brought against Schmid by Mesa police, the owner of Universal Video in Mesa, where she allegedly stole at least $500, a videocassette player and a pistol, has the option to bring charges against her too, said Mesa police Sgt. Mark Stevens.

However, the video store is now closed and the owner has moved out of state, he added.

Schmid, 19, has confessed to staging her July 21 kidnapping from the video store in an effort to extort ransom money from her parents.

Mark Lowery Terry, 18, of Mesa, was also arrested in connection with the incident. Schmid and Terry allegedly stayed in a Scottsdale hotel with another person during the 50-hour period that she claimed to have been held captive.

The city of Mesa spent about $20,000 to conduct the investigation that eventually led to her arrest, said Mesa Police Sgt. Jack Doyle.

Police said they have evidence that Schmid and Terry traded the money and items they took from the store for cocaine, which they allegedly used.

The friend said she was out of town during the alleged kidnapping, but returned the day Schmid was discovered.

"I sat up with her night after night (after the incident)," said the friend, who said she has known Schmid four years. "We both cried."

The friend said she was "stunned" to hear that Schmid had staged the incident.

"She bold-faced lied to me," she said.

Schmid's friend said she did not know the extent of the relationship between Schmid and Terry.

"They were just friends to my knowledge," she said.

Schmid's mother, Candyce, said Wednesday that the family was "devastated" about the incident.

"Right now we need to be with each other," she said. "We need to be together as a family."

Schmid, a Mesa resident, was released from Maricopa County's Madison Street Jail after 5 p.m. Wednesday.

A preliminary hearing for Schmid will be held Sept. 7.

Former regent pleads guilty to embezzlement charges

From staff and wire reports

Coconino County Supervisor and former Arizona Board of Regents member Tio Tachias pleaded guilty Wednesday to embezzlement from the Flagstaff car dealership for which he worked and to falsification of its corporate records.

Tachias, 53, who left the Jim Babbitt Ford dealership in July 1988, had been under investigation since October for theft of "well over $100,000," police said.

The Coconino County Attorney's Office had turned the investigation over to the Maricopa County Attorney's Office because of a conflict of interest. Wednesday's plea was part of an agreement reached with a special prosecutor, said Sandra Janzen, deputy Maricopa County attorney.

Tachias could receive up to 10 years in prison, a year in the county jail or probation. He also faces a possible $150,000 fine and will have to pay up to $352,000 in restitution.

Mike Benchoff, Tachias' attorney, told Coconino County Superior Court that Tachias had converted money from the car business for his personal use on more than one occasion and then had altered financial records to conceal the action.

Regents who worked with Tachias said they were surprised to hear about Tachias' guilty plea.

"I did know there were some legal problems but I did not know the particulars," Herman Chanen said. "I obviously feel terrible for Tio. He's a good friend."

Regent Donald Shropshire said he was sorry to hear about Tachias and that he "would rather concentrate on the positive things Tio has done for universities."

"He was a very sensitive individual on concerns of students," Shropshire said. "We all should be remembering him and his family in our prayers."

Judge William F. Garbarino told Tachias that his felony convictions automatically suspend his right to hold public office. Tachias, who has been District 2 supervisor since 1964, will be out of office once he is

Leona Helmsley, hotel queen, convicted of evading taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — Leona Helmsley, the persnickety hotel queen quoted as saying "only the little people pay taxes," was convicted Wednesday of evading $1.2 million in income tax by charging personal expenses to her business empire.

The federal jury acquitted Helmsley, 69, of the most serious charge against her — conspiring to extort payoffs from vendors.

Pictured as a regal perfectionist in ads for Helmsley luxury hotels, Helmsley was portrayed in court as an abusive, penny-pinching tyrant — part of a defense strategy of arguing she was the victim of spiteful ex-employees.

In opening arguments, her own lawyer labeled her "a tough bitch."

Helmsley shook her head while listening to the litany of guilty verdicts on 33 of 41 counts. Former aides Frank Turco and Joseph Licari were convicted of assisting in the tax-evasion scheme.

She walked past hundreds of reporters, photographers and bystanders on the courthouse steps, got into a limousine and departed without comment.

"Of course, we'll appeal," said Joseph Benfante, lawyer for Licari.

Helmsley remains free pending sentencing Nov. 14. Each of the 33 counts carries three to five years in prison. She also faces fines up to $8 million.

Talks on Cambodia suspended; no peace agreement reached

PARIS (AP) — An international conference on Cambodia failed to produce an agreement and suspended its work Wednesday until warring factions are ready for a compromise to end a generation of violence.

"We need time so the spirit of reconciliation can overcome the spirit of confrontation, but for Cambodia the hour of peace will come," Roland Dumas, the French foreign minister, told the conference just before adjourning the final session.

Some delegates said the failure increased the likelihood of full-scale civil war when Vietnam withdraws its military forces Sept. 27, after nearly 11 years of occupation.

Last-minute negotiations delayed a final statement by seven hours. It fell far short of the comprehensive settlement delegates from 19 nations hoped to achieve when the conference opened in late July.

Two white teens indicted in black youth's murder

NEW YORK (AP) — Two white teen-agers were indicted today on murder charges in the killing of a black youth last week that has set off a racial furor in the city.

The indictments were returned in Brooklyn Criminal Court just one hour before the funeral of Yusef Hawkins, 16. A crowd of about 300 people heckled Gov. Mario Cuomo and New York City Mayor Edward Koch as they arrived for the service. Koch had been jeered when he attended a wake for Hawkins Tuesday.

Keith Mondello, 18, and Pasquale Raucci, 19, of Brooklyn, were charged with murder, riot, assault, criminal possession of a deadly weapon, unlawful imprisonment and civil rights violations.

Mondello was the alleged leader of a gang of up to 30 whites, armed with baseball bats and golf clubs, that allegedly attacked Hawkins and three friends Aug. 23 in the predominantly white Bensonhurst neighborhood.

Among those at the crowded memorial service were the Rev. Louis Farrakhan and Cedric Sandiford, who had also been attacked in the 1986 Howard Beach incident. He accompanied Michael Griffith's mother, Jean.

Disabled Students director: Recreation center 'wonderful'

By ELISE ELSBERRY
State Press

ASU's new Student Recreation Complex is more than most physically challenged students had hoped for, said the program director of Disabled Student Resources.

"It's a lot nicer than we anticipated," said Jim Hemauer. "We worked with the planning and construction committee (that built the center) before they had the plans drawn up, and they did a wonderful job."

Hemauer, John Figy, who is the coordinator for the Physically Challenged Program, and several disabled students spent many hours working with the planning committee in an effort to ensure that the recreation center would be accessible for all students.

Figy described the new facility as "incredible."

"This is one of only two pools I know of that has same-level transfer," he said. "The other one is in California."

At ASU's Mona Plummer Aquatic Center, those using wheelchairs have to be transferred from their chairs into a special waterproof chair before entering a ramp that drops into the pool. At the recreation center pool, a same-level ramp allows them to drop the arm of their wheelchairs and enter the water.

This means that students with wheelchairs no longer need as much assistance when entering the water.

The 70-meter pool is 20 meters longer than an Olympic-size pool and can be divided into three sections.

Rhonda Bowman, a sophomore social work major who uses a wheelchair, said she plans to take advantage of the new pool.

"The Aquatic Center was pretty accessible with a lot of help," she said. "But in the new rec center I should be able to get in and out by myself."

Bowman said she plans to use the pool three times a week for a couple of hours at a time.

"Swimming is great exercise for people in wheelchairs," she said, adding that it is fun, also.

Angie Gipson, a volunteer for the physically challenged program, said that working with the students at the new pool is a lot easier than working with them at the Aquatic Center.

She said that some of the larger people needed two or more assistants to help transfer them into the different chairs and that a water ramp was not as easy to work with.

In addition, the new recreation center has locker rooms that are fully wheelchair accessible. The special showers have benches and moveable showerheads that eliminate the need for special waterproof chairs.

The changing areas are laid out so the big electric chairs can easily maneuver through the lockers.

Bowman said that because she can now transfer herself in and out of the pool, all she has to do is learn how to swim.

Labor Day End-of-summer holiday lost its original meaning

Brian Tassinari
Opinion Editor

This weekend all across the country, Americans will be paying tribute to the last gasp of yet another summer gone by. Under the guise of a tribute to labor, Americans will send thousands of gallons of Coppertone and millions of cans of beer to their final resting place.

All over the country, we will head for the beaches, the mountains or just about anywhere that requires a car trip in order to "get away." Few, however will think for a moment about why we have a Labor Day. Friday afternoon the country will race to their weekend destinations, the only place for the true meaning of the holiday to appear being on the evening news that no one is watching.

And here in Tempe things are no different. If a chance to party is dear to the heart of the ASU student, then Labor Day is a religious holiday. It is an opportunity for the faithful to make a pilgrimage to the holy places and give tribute to the god of taut, tan skin.

There are many sacred places to the ASU student, from San Diego to L.A., but the most sacred place of all is known to the faithful as Rocky Point.

If there is a Holy Grail of partying, surely it is buried in the sand dunes of Rocky Point.

A trip there, preferably during Labor Day weekend, is an unofficial requirement for graduation from the University.

Rocky Point has everything a college student craves — beaches, other college students (of the opposite sex) and plenty of inexpensive Corona.

There is no place in our country that can compare to the beaches on the Gulf of California. We have no waterfront left in America that doesn't have condos and rules. Rocky Point has neither.

'If there is a Holy Grail of partying, surely it is buried in the sand dunes of Rocky Point.'

But lost amid the rubble of beer cans and drunken debauchers is the real reason we have a Labor Day. And at the risk of sounding like the Grinches' little "who" down in "Whoville", the true meaning of Labor Day is to honor the workers of America both present and past.

The holiday was made official by President Grover Cleveland in 1894. At the time, 12 hour days, children working in coal mines and industrial accidents that both maimed and killed were not uncommon.

It's easy to forget that the prosperity that allows each of us to attend college instead of digging for coal or working in a blast furnace is based on the work of these people. Today things come easily. Perhaps too easily.

Sure, many college students are forced to juggle classes and a job. And many students go through the year complaining about being broke. But we've all got a roof over our head and food on our table.

Most students are extremely well off compared to just about any historical or geographic standard.

Maybe that's the problem. Maybe things have come so easily to this country for so long that that we've gotten lazy. America today seems unwilling to work. Unwilling to work at saving the family, unwilling to work at solving the drug problem or lowering the deficit.

Even now, amid a flood of foreign products, America still sleeps. Given all this, it's hardly surprising that we've turned a day devoted to labor into one of the biggest parties of the year.

So while we're sipping cervesa this weekend, soaking up the rays one last time for the summer, remember that things have not always been this good — and they may not always be.

Pledgeship not problem

Editor:

Hazing is wrong! Any responsible fraternity man will tell you that. My question is will the suspension of pledge programs necessarily improve the greek system? As Scott Streitfield of Sigma Chi pointed out, the word "pledge" does not necessarily mean that the person is or will be hazed. The problem that is facing the greek system today is not pledgeship, but it is in fact what some fraternities choose to do with this crucial time period.

When a person decides to become involved in the greek system, he or she must endure the rigors of "rush week." During this time he will see and meet hundreds of new people. On the other hand, the fraternity is experiencing the same thing. Most invitations to become members of fraternities are extended on first impressions, recommendations from alumni, or if we're lucky, the person knows someone in the house. Truthfully, most "bids" are extended without really knowing everything about a person.

The purpose of most every pledge program is to provide time for the associate member, (or pledge), to learn the history and tradition of the fraternity. It is a time when he develops the bonds of brotherhood with his pledge class, and the active members. It is also a time to determine, for both pledge and active, if the person really does "belong." These can all be easily accomplished without hazing.

Hazing does nothing but destroy brotherhood, and often alienates individuals from the group. Why would you want to physically or mentally hurt someone you have asked to be your brother? Pledgeship is the most vital time of being in a fraternity. It is your most impressionable time, one in which your attitudes towards new pledges and other greeks are formed. By eliminating the pledgeship and the pledge program, the house is not solving any problems. In fact, they may be creating a bigger one. Being a member of a fraternity is both an honor and a privilege. If houses choose to automatically make anyone and everyone a member of their fraternity, fine. But I believe that it is a mockery of the brotherhood that I, and many other fraternity men, believe in.

All fraternities must re-examine their programs, and determine what course of action is necessary to correct the problems facing us today. Many houses have already taken responsible measures to do so. The problem is not a semester long pledgeship. It is what the fraternity does with that time. If it is spent educating, cultivating and nurturing the future members of our houses then we will thrive and prosper.

ROUGH NEIGHBORHOOD

Congressman

Can't drive home point

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

Slats Grobnik is not easily amazed. But as he looked at the TV screen, his jaw dropped and his eyes bulged.

"You know that congressman, Dan Rostenkowski?"

On and off, for many years.

"Is he playing with a short deck, missing a few bricks or maybe he's got a few woolly caterpillars crawling around upstairs?"

Are you referring to his mental state?

"Yeah, can't you understand plain English? Is he some kind of ding-a-ling?"

As far as I know, he has complete control of his mental faculties. One does not attain the powerful position of chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, which creates our tax laws, without possessing considerable political agility and intellect.

"You mean he's smart?"

That is how he is generally regarded in Washington.

"OK, what's politically smart about a little old lady protester winding up on the hood of your car?"

"Well, then I guess I don't understand politics."

Tell me what confuses you.

"OK, what's politically smart about a little old lady protester winding up on the hood of your car?"

I have to concede that it wasn't one of Rostenkowski's better moments.

"And what's smart about jumping out of your car and running away from people who think they're getting shafted by Congress with this here catastrophe health tax?"

Well, as Rostenkowski said, while escaping from the crowd of geezers surrounding his car: they really don't understand what is going on in Washington.

"Then why didn't he stop and talk and tell 'em what's going on in Washington?"

You must understand. He is a busy and powerful man. So when he went to that gathering of the elderly in his congressional district in Chicago, he thought it would be more productive to discuss the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act with the leaders of a few organizations.

"Wait a minute. Do the leaders of those organizations foot the bill for this catastrophe tax?"

No, it's spread out among the elderly as a special income tax.

"Then why couldn't he talk to those old folks who are footing the bill?"

Because he thought they were in a hostile mood and would boo and yell and express displeasure.

"So, I got roped into umping at Little League games, and I was always getting booed and yelled at. Every day when I go to work, my boss is in a hostile mood and he yells at me. Then when I sit in this joint too long, and go home, my wife is in a hostile mood and she expresses displeasure. So what makes him so sensitive?"

You must understand, it was a chaotic scene.

"What's the big deal? A bunch of old people show up at a meeting and want some answers from their congressman about how come they wind up with a higher income tax rate than millionaires are paying?"

But, they became unruly and surrounded Rostenkowski's car when he left the meeting. How would you feel if a crowd of geezers surrounded your car?

"I'd get out, invite 'em to the nearest tavern, buy 'em a round or two, maybe pinch a biddy on her bottom and try to tell them what the deal is."

That would not be statesmanlike.

"Yeah, well what's statesmanlike about Rostenkowski's driver letting the car move when an old doll is standing in front of it and her flopping on the hood? I mean, if it was me, I wouldn't want people saying: 'Hi there, Congressman Grobnik, I saw you on TV today with that old lady on the hood of your car. And I saw you hop out of the car and give the old folks the slip. You know, you should really run for president. Then we'd have somebody in the White House who knows how to get tough with people who got wrinkles and creaky joints.'"

You just don't understand. Tax legislation is very complicated. Even a CPA doesn't understand half of the tax laws. So how can you expect Rostenkowski, an expert, to explain so complex an issue to groups of elderly laypersons?

"Yeah, I guess you got a point. You don't explain it to 'em. You just stick it on their tax bill and tell 'em to pay it. But I'll tell you something. If I was running against Rostenkowski next time around, I know what my campaign posters would look like."

What?

"They'd show the hood of his car."

That wouldn't have much political impact.

"It would if the hood ornament was a little old granny."

Frank revelations

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — You have to admire Rep. Barney Frank, in a way. The Massachusetts Democrat is one of the smoothest operators in the House, and he proved it in the way he handled a potentially disastrous story of his sleazy conduct.

In the age of the "adversary press," Frank has shown a rare talent for getting the media to eat out of his hand. Until the other day, almost any news story concerning him was told the way he wanted it told.

When, in 1987, he declared himself a homosexual, the Washington Post responded with an admiring profile in its Style section, the part of the paper that reflects — and sets — the quasi-official attitudes of our liberal capital. The New York Times ran a similarly purring profile. Both papers have quoted Frank often and sometimes at length, never with a hint of criticism. When he threatened to expose the Republican homosexuals in Congress this spring, all the media treated it as honest indignation rather than open blackmail.

On Friday, Aug. 25, Frank's luck with the press ran out. The Washington Times revealed, at the top of its front page, that he had had a two-year affair with a male prostitute who had done business from Frank's apartment, while vaguely employed as Frank's housekeeper, chauffeur and "consultant." Even the big papers that have adored Frank were forced to follow suit with front page stories the next day.

Even so, Frank handled the story with finesse, making denials you may doubt but can't disprove. He said he'd hoped to reform his scapegrace lover, on whose behalf he'd often interceded with the law when the guy was in trouble over drugs, prostitution and sex with minors. He said he hadn't known that the man had been abusing access to his apartment; when he had found out, he said, he had broken off the friendship, which by then, he said, had become non-sexual.

Believe what you like. But it seems rather remarkably naive of Frank to need two years to catch on that his friend was still a practicing prostitute. After all, they had met when Frank responded to a classified ad for an "escort/model" in a homosexual newspaper, which read (get the kids out of the room) as follows: "Exceptionally good looking, personable, muscular athlete is available. Hot bottom plus large endowment equals a great time. Greg, 555-3706."

"Greg," whose real name is Steve Gobie, told The Washington Times that Frank had paid $80 for the first great time and kept coming back for more. As for Frank's claim that he only wanted to play "Henry Higgins" to Gobie's "Pygmalion" (he means Eliza Doolittle, of course), he admits that Gobie later offered to procure other male prostitutes for him, though he disputes Gobie's assertion that the offer was repeatedly accepted.

Frank says he was "suckered" by Gobie, whom he calls "a very good con man." Frank is no slouch himself. After years of attacking Republican "sleaze" and "hypocrisy," he turns out to have been a sleazy hypocrite. Now he adopts the Pete Rose defense that his only sin was "bad judgment."

But in some ways, Frank's judgment looks awfully good. He announced his homosexuality at about the time his landlord's complaints forced him to dump Gobie. In retrospect, it looks as if Frank was trying to defuse a big time bomb by revealing half the story pre-emptively. In declaring himself "gay," he ensured himself favorable treatment in the big liberal papers, which ran the story with profuse tributes to his "courage" from his colleagues. This was a slick move, winning sympathy at the time and preventing more serious damage later. The news that Barney Frank was homosexual didn't exactly rock Washington, the state that keeps re-electing Teddy Kennedy and Gerry Studds (talk about the Massachusetts miracle!).

Now what? There will be a congressional "ethics" investigation, Washington being a town that is short on morals but long on formal codes of behavior with lots of loopholes. (Not surprising, since men like Frank write those codes.) Frank will probably survive and win re-election, but he has lost his halo. His days as congressional leader, issuing snappy moral judgments on sordid Republican doings are over.

There you have it: another Washington story of a man whose intelligence was exceeded only by his compulsions and his effrontery. His big revelation of 1987 turns out to have been a part of a cover-up.

This story needs a moral. How about this: When your congressman confesses to bizarre sexual practices, the first question you should ask is, "What's he hiding?"

Ex-regent led life of 'political loner'

FLAGSTAFF (AP) — In 1964, when Tio Tachias first won office, election returns were posted by hand on a large chalkboard in the downstairs lobby of the Coconino County Courthouse.

On a brisk September night that year, Democratic primary watchers were interested in one race: the Board of Supervisors in District Two, where a strong, well-respected incumbent, Harold L. Huffer, was being challenged by a young, Hispanic upstart — a bookkeeper for a local automobile dealership.

Political observers had tried to warn Huffer, a long-time Flagstaff gasoline and oil wholesaler, that he was vulnerable. The veteran political and civic leader refused to believe it until figures started appearing on the board.

The race was over fairly early. Huffer stayed around gamely until the last results were posted. He was not a man to show emotion in public. He looked stoically at the figures for a long, long time.

Finally, his wife, Eva, took him firmly by the arm and said, "Well, pappy, you're beat. Let's go home."

Years later, Tachias would recall his telephone rang early next morning. It was Huffer, speaking in a big, rough baritone, offering congratulations on what remains the biggest political upset in Coconino County's history.

Huffer, who died in 1987, lived to see Tachias parlay that first victory into one of the longer public service careers in Arizona history.

Tachias was the youngest person ever elected a supervisor in the state's history. Even before he won reelection to the seat in 1988 — despite a considerable cloud over his head — he had become the supervisor with the longest record of service in the history of the state.

Now 53, Tachias has pleaded guilty to two felony charges stemming from an embezzlement from his former longtime employer, Jim Babbitt Ford.

He will have to leave the board when formally convicted, or he can resign before that takes place.

Either will mark the end of a career that has seen Tachias lead Flagstaff's minorities from being considered largely second-class citizens to a solid position in the political and economic life of the town and the county.

The county is represented today in the Arizona State Senate by a Hispanic. In intervening years, a Hispanic, a Native American and a black all have won election to the Flagstaff City Council. There are two Hispanics on the governing board of the Flagstaff Unified School District. The position of Flagstaff justice of the peace & won in 1970 by the late Joseph C. Garcia in a Tachias-like upset of veteran James E. Brierley — is held by a Hispanic.

Tachias has served on the founding board of directors of a new, local bank. In 1980 he was named to the Arizona Board of Regents — the first ethnic minority ever to serve. He held the position for eight years before being replaced by Flagstaff attorney Douglas Wall, a Republican named by Gov. Rose Mofford.

When Hispanics criticized Mofford and Wall for the appointment — saying the seat should go to another Hispanic — Tachias appeared before a committee of the state Senate to testify on behalf of the governor's choice.

In all his years in public life, Tachias was something of a political loner. He kept a certain visible distance between himself and Hispanic organizations, and the Democratic Party never coalesced into a strong force around him.

But he kept winning.

Then, it came 1988. That summer, Tachias abruptly resigned at Babbitt Ford where he had worked for almost three decades barring one short period.

sentenced on Oct. 13. Coconino County officials said they plan to solicit letters of application before selecting his replacement.

To avoid possible conflict of interest, Garbarino will turn sentencing over to Judge Richard Anderson of Yavapai County Superior Court.

Janzen said sentencing was being left wholly to Anderson's discretion and that the prosecution would make no recommendation.

Tachias, who was released on his own recognizance pending sentencing, left the courtroom quickly after the hearing and refused to speak with reporters.

Tachias was appointed to the regents by then-Gov. Bruce Babbitt and served a seven-year term that ended in 1988. In addition, he resigned a year ago as comptroller and treasurer of Babbitt Ford, where he had worked at two different times over a 30-year period.

During the early 1980s, Tachias worked briefly as comptroller for the Museum of Northern Arizona but returned to Babbitt Ford in early 1982.

The charges to which Tachias pleaded guilty dealt with his actions between January and July 1988, but the period to be covered by his restitution dates from March 1986, according to court documents. The documents did not specify the amount taken.

ASU prof: Soviet educators cannot criticize government

By JOIE ANN LaPOLLA
State Press

Despite the impact of glasnost or "openness" in the Soviet Union, an ASU professor who returned from Russia earlier this month claims that USSR academicians rarely criticize their own government.

"They are not allowed to challenge the Marxist system but they can criticize the economic conditions," said ASU political science professor Marvin Alisky, who traveled to the USSR as a member of the World Media Association this summer. "Most reports don't advocate changing the form of government but changing the economy."

Alisky spent two weeks at the Russian Latin America Institute in Moscow, where he attended press conferences given by Soviet officials. The institute deals with issues concerning communist Latin American countries such as Cuba and Nicaragua.

In addition, it directs research on all phases of Latin American life for the government and the universities.

It contrasts with the more than 100 Latin American Institutes in the United States that operate independent from the government, said Alisky, who also developed a similar institute at ASU.

He also toured several areas of the Communist country with 20 journalists — both American and foreign — to study the Soviet way of life.

Alisky's interest in Latin American affairs blossomed when he was a correspondent there, he said.

"I am personally involved in the government-media situation in Latin America and elsewhere," Alisky said.

And it was his curiosity about foreign media that landed him in Russia this summer.

"I wanted to see how much leeway the media had in the USSR," Alisky said.

The political science professor attended press conferences given by Soviet officials. For example, one conference was given by a press relations officer from the KGB, the Soviet police and military.

"He assured us that public criticism in the press will be tolerated," Alisky said. "People were no longer punished and we found this to be true, but they are not allowed to challenge the Marxist government."

After spending time with the local Russian people, he said the country's social conditions are in a state of disarray, and if the economic situation does not improve soon, there could be trouble.

"There is a shortage of toothpaste, meat, shoes — basic products — and a very severe housing shortage," Alisky said. "There are four families sharing one kitchen and bathroom."

"Many of the (Soviet) faculty and students we talked to felt that if (President Mikhail) Gorbachev can't bring about improvement in economic and living standards within the next two years, then the danger exists that hardliners in the Communist party will oust him and institute a more repressive government."

Atheism is mandatory for Russian citizens, but Alisky said many Soviets confessed to him that they have been baptized and attend church on a regular basis.

"We've visited Eastern Orthodox churches and found them filled not only with old people but with young men and women," he said. "There are not enough churches to serve those who would attend."

Although Alisky said his trip increased his knowledge about the Soviet lifestyle and media, he is not planning to return to the country because he is more interested in Latin America.

Federal disclosure rules to ease credit-card shopping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal disclosure rules taking effect today will make it easier to shop for a credit card, fostering competition that could lower interest rates for the nation's 107 million cardholders.

The regulations, adopted in April by the Federal Reserve Board, require credit card issuers to disclose the interest rate, monthly fee, grace period and other terms in a chart on the application used to sign up customers.

Until now, companies have been able to attract customers through hyped-up advertisements and mail solicitations, without disclosing the card's costs until it arrived in the mail.

Hype and glitz are still permissible but now will have to be accompanied by hard facts.

"The ball is now clearly in the consumer's court. There will be big print, upfront disclosure," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., the sponsor of legislation adopted last October that directed the Fed to formulate the disclosure rules.

The rules apply to bank cards, such as Visa, MasterCard and Discover; to department store cards; and also to charge cards, such as American Express and Diners Club, which require all charges to be paid each month.

"Companies that were using gimmicks to hide their high rates can't now," said Peggy Miller, a lobbyist for the Consumer Federation of America. "I'm very hopeful that this will at least provide the edge to consumers to make better judgments."

Consumer activists are hoping the regulations will force credit card companies to compete by lowering their interest rates and annual fees. But Robert B. McKinley, publisher and editor of RAM Research's Bankcard Update, a Frederick, Md., newsletter that follows the industry, has doubts.

Competition has increased in the past several years, but rates are still high, even in the dozen or so states such as California and New York which have their own disclosure laws, he said.

Nationally, cards offered by banks had average interest rates of 18.28 percent in August and an average annual fee of $16.97, McKinley said.

One reason is the growing concentration of the industry as large institutions buy out smaller credit card operations, he said. Another is that consumers do not appear to pay much attention to interest rates, even when card companies disclose them.

Economists attribute the indifference in part to the fact that most people intend to pay off their entire bill each month, avoiding interest charges. But a substantial portion don't follow through on their good intentions.

Credit card rates first became a political issue in the early 1980s when short-term interest rates soared above 20 percent. Consumer groups sought disclosure rules and federal caps on the rates but made little headway until they dropped their demand for caps.

Trade groups such as the American Bankers Association supported the final legislation because it pre-empted state disclosure laws, making the rules uniform throughout the nation and did not include caps, which bankers argued would force them to offer cards to only the most affluent customers.

Although earlier disclosure of card terms should help card shoppers, McKinley said it still will not be easy to pick the right card.

Big national operations, which do the most advertising and mail solicitation, generally charge higher rates and fees. The best bargains often come from banks and savings institutions that, at most, advertise only regionally.

McKinley said consumers, before choosing a card, should decide whether they will use it for convenience or to borrow. Cardholders that pay their entire balance monthly should look for a card with no or a low annual fee. However, those that carry balances of $1,000 or more may find it cheaper to pay a fee in exchange for a lower rate.

Under the 1986 tax law, the deduction for consumer interest is dwindling — down to 20 percent this year — and as a result more than 40 percent of cardholders now avoid interest charges by paying their full bill every month, he said.

McKinley lists some gimmicks that consumers should beware of, even with the new rules:

- Some cards with no annual fee compensate by charging interest rates more than 20 percent. Often the annual fee is waived only for the first year.

- Other cards offer skip-a-payment options but tack on added interest costs to the next bill.

- Cards with low rates compensate by charging high annual fees or they allow no grace period, assessing interest as soon as an item is purchased. Others advertise "cost-saving" variable rates that wind up being substantially higher than national averages for fixed rates.

- Some banks offer a lower annual fee or an interest rate break but only if customers maintain a checking account which carries a $5 or $6 a month service charge.

- Other companies tout 1 percent rebates on purchases but charge interest rates three percentage points to four percentage points higher than most cards.

Suit filed to block abortion access law

TUCSON (AP) — Two Arizona Planned Parenthood offices and a corporate subchapter filed suit in federal court here Tuesday to stop the minor's access law, the non-profit service announced.

Planned Parenthood of Central and Northern Arizona, Planned Parenthood of Southern Arizona and Arizona Women's Clinic filed suit to bar enforcement of the law which goes into effect Sept. 15, the service said in a statement.

The Central and Northern Arizona office said, in the statement, that 15 medical experts in fields from pediatrics to gynecology filed affidavits stating that the law interferes with their medical judgment and puts patients at medical risk.

The service said that the parent consent statute threatens physicians with vague criminal sanctions and limits their ability to diagnose and treat adolescent patients.

The law does not allow minors to be treated without parental consent.

'Guns' star 'expresses self' by urinating on jet

PHOENIX (AP) — The rhythm guitarist for the rock group Guns n' Roses has been released on $5,000 bail after being arrested for urinating in the galley area of an airborne jetliner, the FBI said.

Izzy Stradlin was arrested Sunday at Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport during a scheduled stop of USAir Flight 350, which was en route from Indianapolis to Los Angeles.

Bryn Bridenthal, a publicist for Geffen Records, said Stradlin was angry at having to wait to use the plane's restroom and "relieving himself in the galley was just his way of expressing himself."

Stradlin, whose real name is Jeffrey Dean Isbell, was arrested and charged by the FBI with interfering with the duties of the plane's crew — a felony. He spent Sunday night behind bars at Maricopa County Jail and was released Tuesday after posting $5,000 cash bond to U.S. Magistrate Michael Mignella.

Bridenthal said the incident capped a bad day for Stradlin. "He'd been bitten in the face by a dog in Indianapolis and he was still a little bit shocked by that," said the publicist for the band's record label. "And when he got on the plane, he was bumped from first class into coach. It was just sort of one bad thing piling up on another."

FBI agent R. Scott Rivas said Stradlin repeatedly cursed a flight attendant who told him four times that he could not smoke in the no-smoking section of the aircraft.

After switching seats to the smoking area, Stradlin "went to use one of the restrooms," Rivas said in a court statement. "When he got to the restroom, it was apparently occupied and he stated, 'I'm not waiting any . . . longer' and unzipped his pants and urinated in the galley area" in front of an audience of several passengers and a flight attendant.

Jarvik-7 to be made at ASU Research Park

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Arizona State University's Research Park will become the new home of the company that produces Jarvik-7 artificial hearts, an official with the Salt Lake City-based company said Wednesday.

Lane Castleton, Symbion chief financial officer, would not go into detail about the move but confirmed that it will occur.

Kim Gaffney, marketing manager at the University Research Park, said she could not release any information about the relocation.

"I have to respect the company's wishes," she said.

A press conference will be held at 10 a.m. Friday at the Plaza Club on the 26th floor of the downtown Phoenix Citibank building, 3300 N. Central Ave. University and Symbion officials will be on hand to discuss the move.

Symbion is a worldwide marketer of cardiovascular products including the Jarvik-7. Dr. Robert Jarvik, who invented the artificial heart, lost his job as chairman of Symbion in 1987 when the capital firm of Warburg, Pincus Capital Co. established an interest in Symbion.

Now the Jarvik-7 is known as the Symbion-7.

The artificial heart manufacturing company will establish itself in Tempe after reducing its employees from 65 to 25. Symbion's sales have increased to $5.8 million in 1988 from $4.3 million in 1987.

Five humans received the artificial hearts before researchers discovered that they caused infections and several recipients died of strokes.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Freedom and Understanding

No. 8b

Human beings are endowed with the precious gift of freedom but fail to exercise it responsibly.

True freedom can only exist when we consider freedom for all. To be free does not mean that "I can do anything I want."

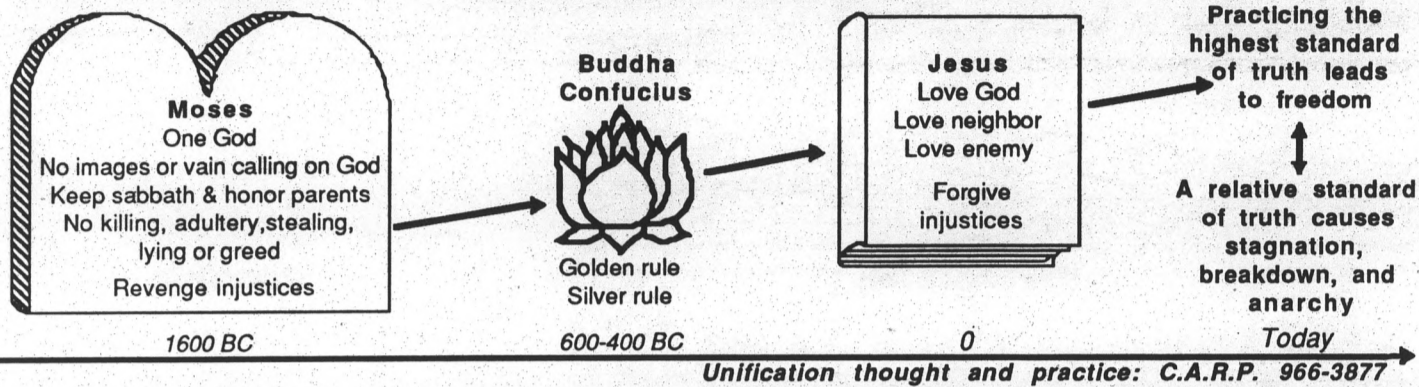

The present selfish world of loneliness, crime, and corruption is the result of such a narrow view.

True freedom comes from love of others; Love comes from God. When you love somebody you want to serve them. We respect Mother Theresa and ML King because they put love into action.

The people we admire most throughout history are the prophets who revealed God's truth to humanity. They were despised by their contemporaries but taught us how to love. A proper use of freedom requires self-discipline and self-control based on a fundamental understanding of right and wrong.

The Land of the Free is in dire need of a new expression of God's truth. To (1) teach how and why to love and (2) harmonize dispartent old value systems with modern science.

Frat sued for wreck caused by member

TUCSON (AP) — A Puerto Rican man who was blinded, paralyzed from the neck down and brain damaged after a traffic collision with a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity has sued the fraternity and the youth's father.

Tucson attorney William J. Risner, on behalf of Ruben A. Hernandez and his family, amended on Monday an existing suit filed against UofA student John Earl Rayner, 20, to include Rayner's father, the local chapter of Delta Tau Delta, the national fraternity and 100 of the local members.

Hernandez, 59, was critically injured Aug. 28, 1988, at 1:45 a.m. when his vehicle collided with Rayner's as Rayner left a fraternity party, Risner said.

Both Hernandez and Rayner had been drinking, Risner said. It was later determined that Rayner had a blood-alcohol level of about 0.15 and Hernandez a level between 0.086 and 0.10. Under Arizona law, a blood-alcohol level of 0.10 is considered intoxicated.

Gerritt A. Gehan, president of the local chapter, declined comment Tuesday on the suit.

Figures of scandal speak on ethics

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the theory that no one knows scandal like someone who has been caught in one, organizers have signed up participants in some historic instances of Washington waywardness to address an ethics seminar.

Figures of scandals past and present — from the delinquency of Watergate to the unseemliness at HUD — will address about 200 career government officials, who will pay fees of $345 to $445 to attend the sessions, on "Scandals, Scoundrels & Saints."

The Nov. 1 and 2 event is the fifth running of the Senior Executives Association's annual course on the straight and narrow. The association represents 2,500 career government executives and managers.

Among those taking part is Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., chairman of a subcommittee handling ethics issues. He agreed to appear before getting caught up last week in an uproar over his own behavior.

Frank, an acknowledged homosexual, asked the House ethics committee on Monday to investigate his relationship with a male prostitute whom he said he had hired to do household chores, then fired after suspecting that the man was selling sex from Frank's apartment on Capitol Hill. House rules require members to act "at all times in a manner that shall reflect credibly on the House."

From another scandal front comes Charles L. Dempsey, retired inspector general of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, who says he couldn't address congressional interest in his reports of questionable behavior at HUD during the Reagan administration. His topic: "The Flesh Is Willing . . ."

"But the Spirit Is Weak" is Elsa Porter's topic. A former assistant secretary of commerce, she's director of the Project on Development of Moral Character at Work.

Jeb Staurt Magruder, a former aide to President Nixon who became a minister in Columbus, Ohio, after getting caught up in the Watergate affair, will discuss "Life After a Scandal."

That's Robert Bauman's topic, too. He was a Republican congressman from Maryland who was defeated after disclosures about his life as a homosexual.

For an evening's entertainment, seminar participants will be able to take a two-hour bus "Scandals Tour of Washington," which carries intrigued tourists to such places as the Watergate; the Tidal Basin, where an inebriated Wilbur Mills saw his congressional career sink when his lady friend, stripper Fanne Foxe, took a plunge; and the Capitol Hill townhouse where Gary Hart entertained model Donna Rice and doomed his 1988 Democratic presidential hopes.

New interim law dean to seek funds for library

By ADRIANE HOPKINS
State Press

ASU law professor Alan Matheson, who was chosen as interim dean of the College of Law in June, said he wants to continue seeking funds to finance the college's new $9 million library.

"Our goal is to raise $2 million through law firms and corporations," he said. "So far, $650,000 has been raised."

The remaining $7 million will come from the sale of state-authorized bonds.

Matheson was dean of the ASU law school from 1979 to 1984 and was succeeded by Paul Bender. Matheson has agreed to return to this position as an interim dean, replacing Bender, who left the post on June 30.

As dean for the College of Law last year, Bender received a salary of $110,777. The new dean's salary will be $115,000.

"My second priority is to do whatever I can to help maintain the quality of the school," Matheson said.

He will serve as interim dean until Dec. 31, when Richard Morgan, a former ASU faculty member, takes the post.

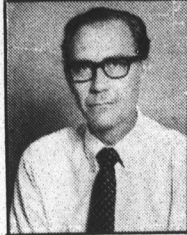

Morgan served in ASU's College of Law as associate dean and professor from 1983 to 1987. In addition, he was an associate professor of law at ASU from 1980 to 1983.

Morgan will not begin his new job until Jan. 1 because he is finishing his work as dean and professor at the University of Wyoming's College of Law, where he has worked since July 1987.

Morgan said in a phone interview from UW Wednesday that he is pleased with the current staff at ASU's Law College.

"They (College of Law) have a good group of people and I hope to continue to bring in other faculty members to continue to enhance the college," Morgan said. "I also hope to continue to bring in more quality students."

"I also have a goal to complete the funding for the $9 million law library," he said.

Matheson

ASU Interim President Richard Peck stated in a memo that both Matheson and Morgan will be an asset to the University.

"We are fortunate that Alan Matheson has agreed to hold this important position while Dick finishes his work in Wyoming," Peck stated.

In addition, Peck stated that the College of Law is an important part of the University, adding that "we need the kind of leadership that both of these men will provide."

Bender agreed with Peck in the selection of the interim dean and the dean for the College of Law.

"Both Matheson and Morgan will do a fine job," Bender said.

Bender, who was dean for five years, is still active on campus. As a member of the faculty he is currently directing the University's Indian Program and serving as legal analyst for KAET-TV Channel 8.

Matheson said he would like to see students continue to receive the first-rate education they deserve.

Morgan said the programs that the ASU law school offers are respected and he has no plans to start new ones.

Morgan said he thinks Matheson has been doing a fine job since he started the interim position.

Matheson has served as a faculty member and administrator of the ASU College of Law since 1967.

"I hope to continue to bring in more quality students"

— Richard Morgan

Matheson is experienced in administrative law, constitutional law, community property law and education. He was a member of the Board of Governors of the State Bar of Arizona and the Board of Directors of the Maricopa County Bar. He has also served on numerous other legal councils and committees.

The software was purchased for $49,000 from Public Safety Systems, Inc., a company in Lanham, Md., Obis said. The digital terminals were purchased from Motorola for $500,000, he added.

Officers began training on the system Aug. 22, and Obis said the system has been working very smoothly.

"The reception (by the officers) has been very good," he said. "It's a slick operation."

Obis said officers receive all information within 15 to 20 seconds.

No measles outbreak at ASU yet

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

So far this year ASU has been untouched by the statewide measles outbreak, but leaders at the Student Health Center said the disease is easily spread.

"One case can be considered an outbreak," said Dr. Dudley Weems, the health center's acting director. "One person can theoretically contaminate 100 people."

Early symptoms of measles are similar to the flu. High fever, cough or nasal irritation usually precede the disease. A person is usually most contagious three to four days before

"One person (with measles) can theoretically contaminate 100 people."
— Dudley Weems

the rash appears, Weems said.

He said the disease is sometimes spread by coughing or sneezing, and the virus can linger for up to five hours. More often a person contacts measles by direct contact, Weems added.

Students who suspect they may have measles should contact the health center.

"We've also set up a separate entryway to minimize that person's (affected with measles) exposure to others," Weems said.

Since 1986, all ASU students have been required to show proof of measles vaccination before registering for classes.

Currently, the health center is encouraging all faculty and staff to get measles shots. Those born after 1957 or those who received their shots between 1963-68 are asked to get another immunization.

People vaccinated between those dates were given a less effective immunization, said B.J. Laing, a nurse consultant at the Arizona Department of Health Services.

Dr. Pamela Tom, the health center's soon-to-be interim director, hopes those in these groups are getting vaccinated again.

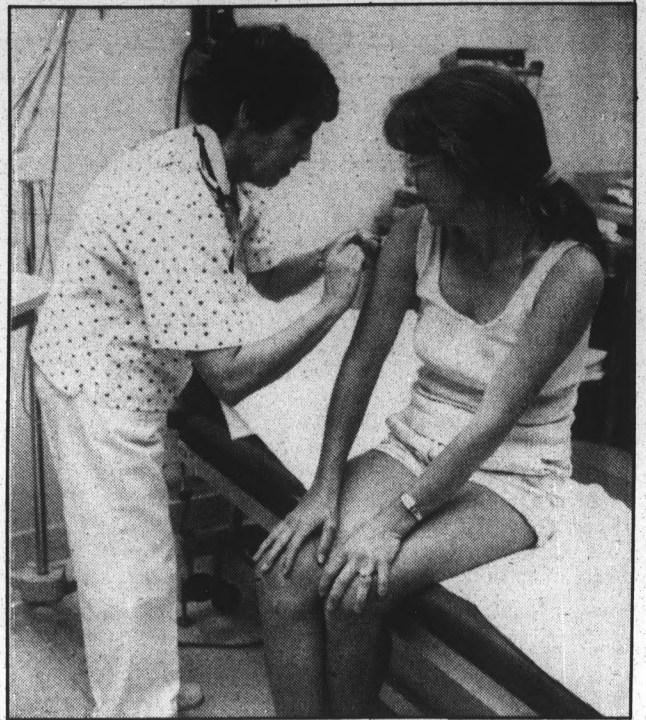

An informational letter detailing the measles-watch situation is being mailed to faculty, she said.

Weems said the health center "would like to emphasize the possible seriousness (of measles) without panicking people."

Laing said the disease is monitored so closely by the state Department of Health Services because it is highly viral.

"The problem, because it is so contagious, is that the disease can be spread up to a four-day period before you know you have it," she said.

There are 30 sites in the county offering free immunization shots. Call 252-4610 to find the nearest location.

ASU honor society receives highest chapter recognition

By KELLY JAIN
State Press

ASU's chapter of the Golden Key National Honor Society has received the society's highest chapter award because of their unique programs, chapter officials said.

"This is the best award a chapter can get," said Mark Pastin, an ASU professor and the chapter's adviser, who has been involved with student organizations since 1972. "No other organization has made the job of adviser easier."

The annual Key Chapter Award is presented to outstanding chapters that go beyond their responsibilities and create an environment of achievement and leadership at their universities, said Mark Spahle, a national Golden Key Society representative. The chapter also won the award in 1984.

One of the main factors that led to the ASU chapter's award was its scholarship program, he added.

So far this year, the University chapter solicited $1,400 in scholarship funds from corporations such as Cigna, while the national society only acquired $1,200, Spahle said.

The ASU chapter also was honored for its annual professor program in which professors are named as outstanding teachers by students and various groups on campus.

In addition to the chapter winning the award, Spahle was named the 1989-90 national student representative for the honor society. He was selected from three finalists.

Spahle's goals include voicing students' views and increasing the amount of communication between current society members and alumni.

Spahle was president of the ASU chapter for the 1988-89 school year and is currently working on a master's degree in public affairs at ASU.

New Karsten Golf Course above par

Karsten Golf Course swings into action Friday

By JOEL HORN
State Press

After nearly 20 years of planning and hard work, the Karsten Golf Course at ASU will open Friday to students, faculty, staff and the public.

Originally conceived by former ASU athletic director Fred Miller in 1971, the 160-acre former desert junkyard has been transformed by the Sun Angel Foundation into a championship course at no cost to the state.

"We're trying to make this the key golf facility in the state," said Duff Lawrence, director of golf for the Karsten Course.

Located on the corner of First Street and Rural Road, the $7.3 million course was designed by the legendary Pete Dye.

"This is probably one of the more playable courses Dye has designed," Lawrence said. "He has built this knowing that you're going to have students and novices playing it."

Dye's trademark, wooden railroad ties, are found on some of the holes. Dramatic mounding directs play on each hole and provides landscaping.

The first two holes are under 400 yards, and Lawrence said the toughest hole on the front nine appears to be the sixth, a 209-yard, par-3 running east to west into a prevailing wind.

The ninth and 18th holes mirror each other. Both are long par-4s with a big lake separating the fairways.

In addition, the 16th hole is a 248-yard, par-3 with water all the way on the right.

Discount rates will be available at designated times for ASU students, faculty and staff. Anyone playing at the discount rate, Lawrence said, will receive three free Titleist golf balls and balls to warm up with.

Golf cart rentals will cost $6 for each person riding for nine holes and $10 for 18 holes. Club rental will cost $15 and shoe rental $5.

At the driving range, a practice bag will cost $5 and a warm-up bag $3.

Lawrence, an ASU graduate who was named the school's athlete of the year in 1959, said the Karsten facility will offer "a level of gratification for whoever plays the golf course. It's a well-conditioned golf course that will be a challenge."

Less than 5 percent of the universities in the country have golf courses, he said, and the ASU golf teams will have separate practice areas.

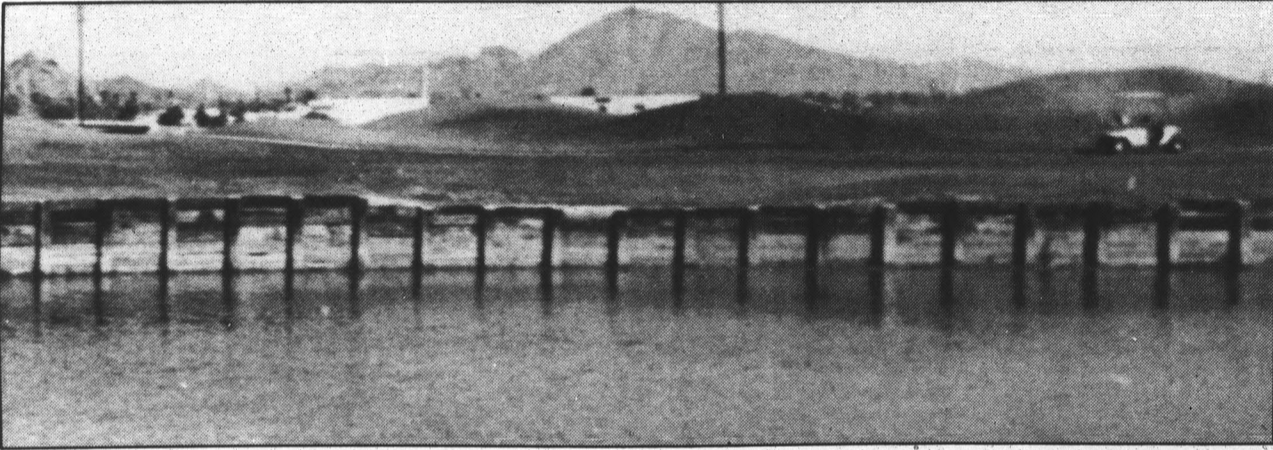

Lawrence said he hopes the Karsten Course will host national amateur events, such as the Walker Cup, and state high school events.

A proposal to host the 1992 NCAA men's championship was defeated, Lawrence said.

April will be a busy month with the Lady Sun Devil Tournament, the Thunderbird/Sun Devil Classic and the Pac-10 Tournament being held at Karsten.

In addition, several University organizations and charities will use the facilities.

"It's going to be a busy place," Lawrence said.

New facility in planning stages for Olympic sports

By JOEL HORN
State Press

Now that the Intercollegiate Athletics Complex has been occupied for a year, the luxury skyboxes have been built and the Karsten Golf Course will open tomorrow, the ASU athletic department has set its sights on another new facility — a multi-sport complex for the Sun Devils' Olympic sports.

"We would like to see a new facility that would seat 3,500 to 5,000 students to be utilized by the women's basketball, men's and women's gymnastics, wrestling, volleyball and badminton teams," said Herman Frazier, ASU associate athletic director.

The facility could also be used for men's basketball, he said, whenever the team is displaced from the University Activity Center because of scheduling conflicts. Indoor archery competition could also be take place in the facility.

The idea has been talked about since ASU

Athletic Director Charles Harris came to ASU four years ago, Frazier said.

Don Robinson, ASU men's gymnastics coach who has been at the University for 22 years, disputed Frazier's statement and said the facility has been talked about for nearly two decades.

"We need (the new facility)," he said. "What we're in now is an old barn (P.E. West).

"I would be pessimistic if I hadn't seen the tremendous growth on this campus," Robinson said.

But Robinson said he is concerned that one Olympic sport might be given precedence in the new facility. Each sport using the facility should have equal priority, he said.

The most cost-effective way of providing the ASU Olympic sports programs with adequate training facilities, he said, would be to renovate the University Activity Center.

"Get rid of the termites and the evaporative cooler," he said.

He also suggested removing the classrooms in the UAC to make a gymnasium and renovating the basketball court.

Robinson said the original plan was for the gymnastics teams to work out at the new Student Recreation Center, a facility with which he is impressed.

"I've never been at a university that has the facilities we have now," he said.

If the plan for the multi-sport complex is to become a reality, Robinson said he hopes athletic department administrators consult the coaches involved.

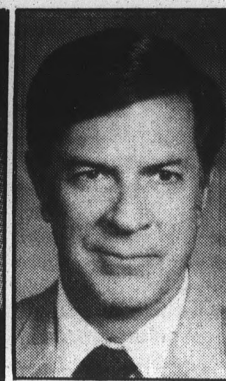

"I have not been consulted on what my needs are," he said.

Robinson said the gymnastics teams would require about 15,000 square feet of space for training and competition.

The main floor of the complex, Frazier said, would be used for competition. Behind the stands, or off to the side, would be practice rooms for the badminton, gymnastics, volleyball and wrestling teams. Robinson said, because the equipment is portable, he would like to see a gymnastics facility set up on the main floor.

Frazier

Robinson

"We would like to heat up and get this thing going," Frazier said.

"I hope it happens," Robinson said.

Position battle likely for women's hoops

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

The Sun Devil women's basketball team has nothing to do but improve when this season rolls around.

Having not lost any players from last season's 9-19 team and gaining five experienced freshman recruits, Coach Maura McHugh is looking for an intra-squad battle for starting positions.

"There will be a lot of competition for starting spots, which should make for a stronger team all around," McHugh said.

The freshmen, Monique Ambers, Crystal Cobb, Laura Miele, Lisa Halsman and Jovonne Smith were recruited by McHugh over the course of the last year. McHugh followed each of the players through all-star games, Basketball Congress International tournaments and other national high school competitions.

A weight training program for the team is already in effect, and McHugh said she is excited for pre-season practice to begin in mid-October so she can get a closer look at her freshman.

"They are very talented and should make an immediate impact on our team," she said.

Returning starters to the team include senior guards Carolyn DeHoff and Karen O'Connor, senior forwards Lisa Jones and Fran Clark and sophomore center Shannon Gridley.

This summer, DeHoff represented ASU on the Pac-10 team which played in Budapest, Hungary.

O'Connor was last season's leading scorer, averaging 18-points per game. Clark, who was a close second with a 16-point average, led the team and the nation in rebounds with an average of 10 per game.

Also returning to the team are sophomores Deborah McGee, April Mial and Dawn Bantum.

McHugh said each player from last year's squad worked to improve her game this summer by joining leagues and playing a lot of pick-up ball. The extra practice hopefully will pay off when the first game in early November rolls around, she said.

"We should be much improved over last year," she said. "Before we had no depth."

Even though McHugh is confident that her team will improve greatly, she said she still will not take this year's competition lightly.

"It's going to be as tough as ever," she said. "The Pac-10 is a tough conference. There are no teams that aren't good."

Youth, experience key to swim season

By KEITH ROSENHAGEN
State Press

Adding prominent freshmen recruits to an already top-caliber swim team makes Head Coach Ron Johnson confident this could be the best season ever for ASU.

"We have four new freshmen on the swimming team at this point," Johnson said, "and we're looking forward to two more outstanding athletes joining us at the (spring) semester."

The four new additions for fall are freshmen Fran Grey of Philadelphia, Fort Guerin of Mesa, Willie Landmark of Colorado, and Neil Lichter of Mesa.

Johnson said these swimmers will continue to strengthen ASU's competitive edge as well as maintain the youthful appearance of the team. Youthful in the sense that the new members are young in age; however, they are mature in experience.

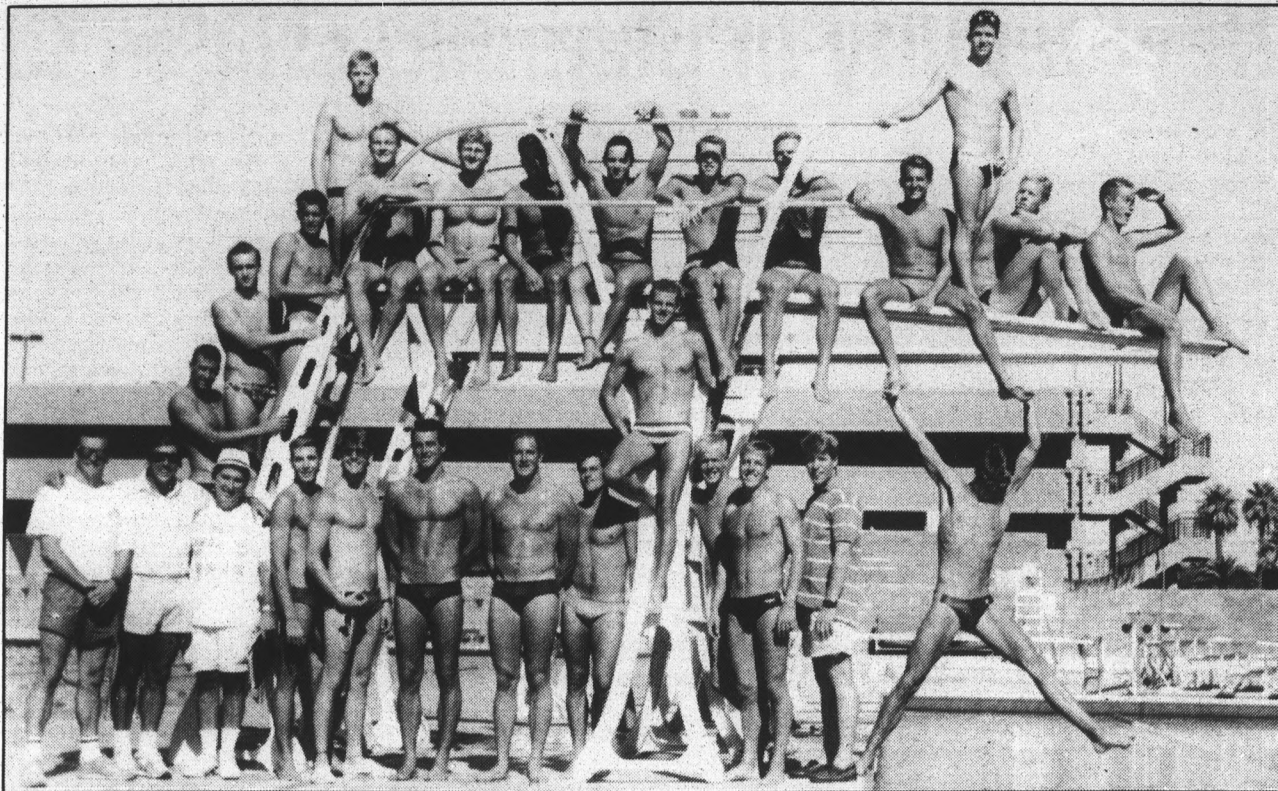

Grey, for example, was a 1988 Olympic Trials finalist in the 200-meter backstroke and is considered to be one of the 25 fastest backstrokers in the world.

Guerin, a graduate of Mountain View High School, holds the high school state title in the 200-meter individual medley and is a qualifier for the U. S. Senior Nationals.

"He is the top I.M.'er in the high school ranks in the state of Arizona — a very versatile swimmer," Johnson said.

Landmark, a middle distance freestyler, has received All-American recognition in the 200- and 500-meter freestyle.

Lichter, an All-American swimmer from Dobson High, is the third-fastest high school breaststroker in the nation and is the state champion in the 100-meter breaststroke and 100-meter butterfly, Johnson said.

This year's Sun Devil men's swimming team returns a combination of experience and young talent.

Sean Mohr/State Press

"The team has had an international flavor over the years," Johnson said, "some foreigners, several Arizonians, and a good cosmopolitan group of American swimmers from all over the country."

One of these "cosmopolitan American swimmers" is Troy Dalby.

Dalby, a native to this area, made the U. S. Olympic Team in 1988 and went on to claim two gold medals in Seoul, South Korea, in the 400- and 800-meter freestyle relays.

"I don't see where we've got any real weakness this year," he said. "If we get everybody healthy and eligible, I think very possibly we'll have our best year ever."

Wells brings experience, promotes to softball team

By AMY NETZEL
Contributing writer

The Sun Devil softball squad will play ball this season under newly acquired Head Coach Linda Wells, who hopes to add 15 years of experience to ASU's winning tradition.

Wells, who previously coached at the University of Minnesota, said she came to ASU seeking a new challenge and liked the opportunity to be in a warmer climate.

"I expect to bring my strengths to the team," Wells said, "not only in coaching, but also in promotion and marketing, including an increase in spectator turnout."

Wells said the transition from the Big Ten to the Pac-10 will be an easy one.

"Both schools are similarly structured, although Minnesota is a larger institution," she said.

Wells is currently looking for a new assistant coach. Tami Brown, last year's assistant, accepted a head coaching job at the University of Oregon.

Optimistic and looking forward to the upcoming season, Wells said she will have a strong team, despite the graduation of seven starters from last year's squad.

The Sun Devils have seven returning players on the roster: Brandi Hust, Melinda Cook, Stephanie May, Ann Rowan, Terri Carnicelli, Becky Davis and Christy Seritella.

According to Wells, six athletes were also recruited since last season: Amber Tintsmann, Cheri Keller, Elizabeth Phillips, Karey James, Dawn Wood and Rachel Brown.

"The fight for places on the team will be very competitive," Wells said.

Tryouts, which begin Sept. 25 and will run for as many as one to two weeks, are open to any student who is eligible to compete.

Season practice will begin after tryouts, with a scrimmage game Nov. 17 against Mesa Community College.

The Sun Devils will again battle Mesa Feb. 7, during their first game of the season.

Sun Devil women's squad pursues elusive national collegiate golf title

By PAUL CORO
State Press

In her nine years as ASU women's golf coach, Linda Vollstedt has compiled six top-10 NCAA finishes and five Pac-10 titles, but one thing has eluded her teams — the national championship.

"It eats away at me," said Vollstedt, last year's national coach of the year. "It is something that I am very committed to do. I feel I owe it to the community and the school."

One would be led to believe that this goal is in the future since the Sun Devils are losing last year's top-ranked amateur Pearl Sinn. Sinn was three-time All-America and the new recipient of the Up and Coming Athlete award. In actuality, Vollstedt believes they have a better opportunity to win an NCAA title this year.

"Having her (Sinn) for four years and knowing I could count on her performance, it is very difficult to lose her," Vollstedt said. "However, knowing how good our returning players are and having recruits like Brandie Burton and Tricia Konz come in, I am looking forward to a good year."

Senior Amy Fruhwirth heads the returning group. Fruhwirth, who was ranked fifth entering the NCAA Championship in May, was first team Pac-10 and second team All-America last season. She finished in the top 10 four times in 1988-89, including medalist honors at the Lady Sun Devil Invitational.

"I want to improve on what I have done," Fruhwirth said. "I would like to play more consistently at tournaments."

Senior Missy Farr and sophomores Julie Shephard and Lynne Mikulas are also key returning players. Farr, in her fifth year at ASU, is the most experienced member of the team. As a freshman, Shephard saw some tournament action during the regular season.

Mikulas, one of the nation's 10 impact freshman last season, was a Pac-10 honorable mention with four top-10 finishes.

"She will be able to use the experience from last year to her advantage," Vollstedt said.

Senior Mindy Bono and redshirt freshmen Tana Figueras and Tami Proctor also came back.

A major addition to this year's team was Vollstedt's high caliber recruiting class. Vollstedt landed the nation's prize recruit in Burton from Rialto, Calif.

"She has the best credentials of any freshman I have ever had," Vollstedt said.

Burton's list of credentials is long. She holds numerous course records, three of which she set this summer. Her recent titles include the All-America National Prep Championship and the USGA National Juniors Tournament. She was also runner-up at both the USGA Women's Amateur Championship and the Transnational Tournament.

Another talented recruit is Tricia Konz, a Dobson High School graduate. Konz finished third this summer in two junior tournaments, the AJGA at Mission Hills and Aspen Junction.

Freshman Ulrika von Heijne comes to ASU from Kalmar, Sweden. She is from the same area as Per Johansson and Lars Herne of the men's team.

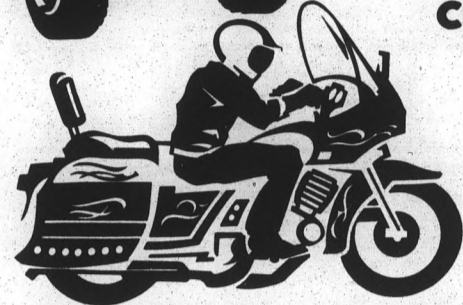

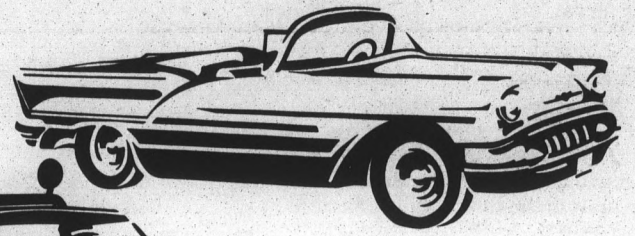

Another new addition for this year's team is their home golf course. The Karsten Golf Course, which will open Sep. 1 with a 7 a.m. team practice, is very demanding according to Vollstedt.

"It requires a lot of concentration," Vollstedt said. "It gives the players a chance to work on all parts of their game."

Off the course, the players have set a goal of a 3.0 team GPA. On the course, Vollstedt has set lofty goals of a Pac-10 championship, a NCAA championship and winning half of their tournaments.

"We have more depth and maturity this year," Vollstedt said. "The competition will be fiercer on the team and that will make them play better."
