NASA awards funding to state universities

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

Arizona's three state universities will receive more than $300,000 annually from NASA over the next five years for aerospace research in the first part of the nation's space agency grant program.

"This is a proud day for Arizona and its fine universities," stated Arizona Gov. Rose Mofford in a press release. "Over the past several days, the world has been treated to fantastic pictures of Neptune and our solar system.

"It's exciting to think that Arizona will become part of this exclusive club guiding future U. S. space exploration."

The program, which was mandated by Congress in 1987, names certain schools or consortia of schools as designated Space Grant Colleges.

Seventeen universities or consortia were selected based on a competitive evaluation of the institutions' aerospace research as well as the quality of their plans to strengthen the national educational base for science, math and technology.

Those receiving the funding from NASA will provide leadership and form partnerships with other universities, government and industry to better understand, develop and use space resources through research, education and public service functions.

The money will be used to help university undergraduates, high school teachers and students in space research.

The designated Space Grant Colleges will receive funding for five years. In fiscal year 1989 each designee will receive $75,000. In subsequent years, the universities will receive up to $225,000 per year.

Also, the institutions will receive $100,000 each to fund fellowships for undergraduate and graduate students beginning in fiscal year 1990. The universities will be required to match NASA's funding.

"It's some recognition for ASU's expertise in engineering," said Charles Backus, assistant dean of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences.

He said it was the strength of the UofA's planetary program that "carried" ASU and NAU along in getting the funding. The money will be divided among the universities with ASU and UofA getting 40 percent and NAU receiving 20 percent.

Backus said the NASA funding will help ASU in the future. He said ASU is "one of the space-oriented universities in the country" and will now be placed on a specialized list of institutions that will compete for funding in the future.

Eugene Levy, UofA professor of planetary science, was the leader in getting the project funding for the Arizona university system.

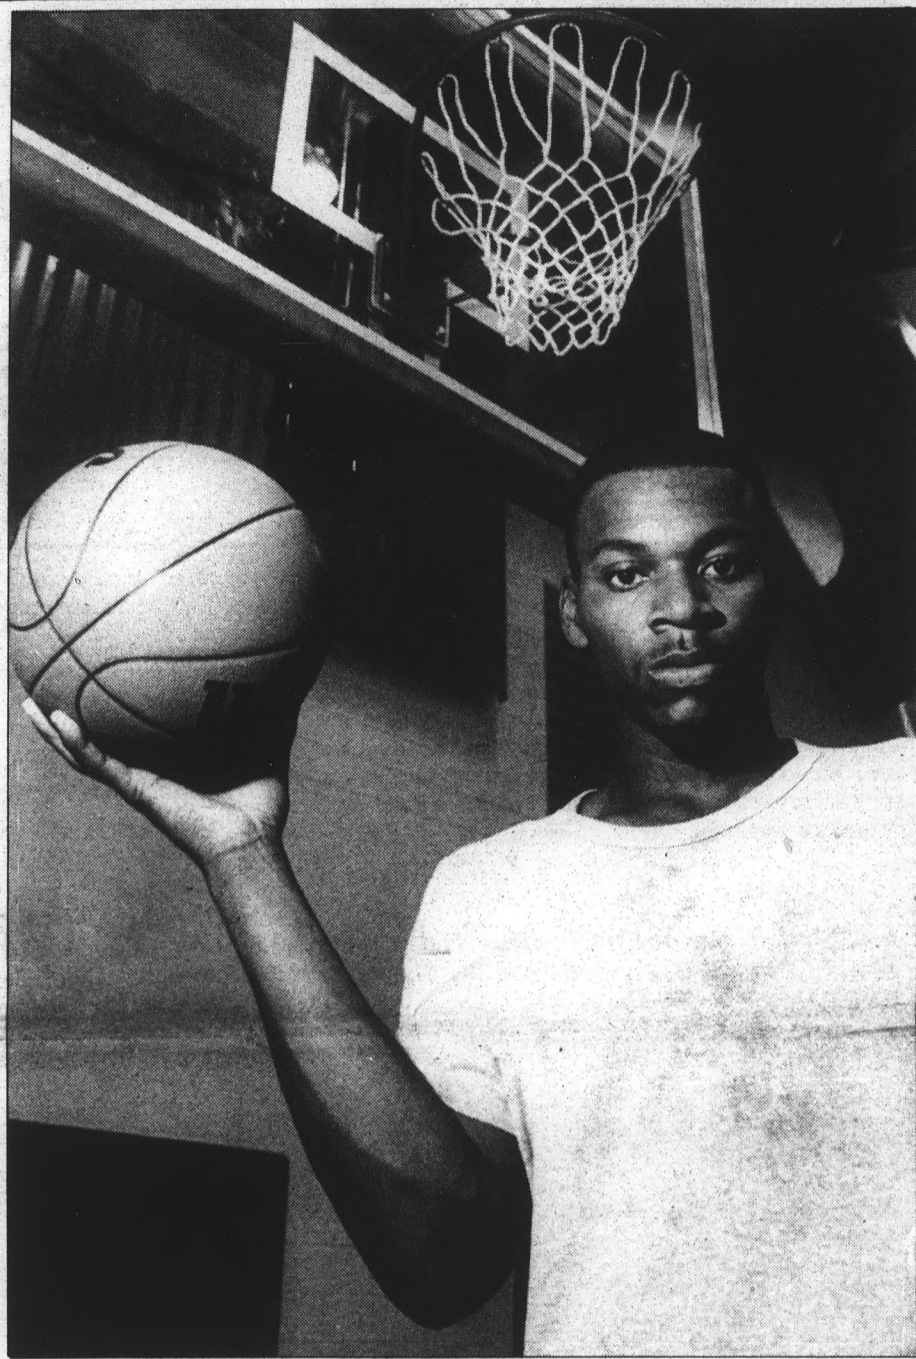

"I feel very good," he said. "The money will be used entirely for educational programs."

Levy agreed that future research at the Arizona universities will be enhanced by the NASA funding, calling it "a very important educational initiative."

Originally, the plan was expected to fund no more than 12 programs, but NASA administrator Richard Truly decided to extend the funding to 17 colleges or consortia in response to the high quality of the proposals.

"I expect this program to have a very significant educational impact throughout the nation," Truly said, "by enhancing the training of future scientists and engineers at the university level, as well as by improving the teaching of science, mathematics and technology at the elementary and secondary levels.

"The real potential promise of this program is what happens in the future."

Peck considers third campus

By JOIE ANN LaPOLLA
State Press

Increasing enrollment will likely cause ASU to seek a third campus or use community colleges to accommodate the growing student population in the future, Interim

Peck

President Richard Peck said Thursday.

"If we don't do something, we'll have 60,000 students by the year 2000," Peck said at a breakfast with reporters. "We need to control growth. It's very likely we'll be looking at a third campus."

Peck said that a special committee examining the growth situation has drafted a report containing options to handle the increasing student population. A final edition of the report will be issued to incoming ASU President Lattie Coor, who takes office in January.

The committee met with Valley community groups and leaders to discuss alternatives in expanding the University. Peck said alternatives in the report include opening more campuses in Mesa, Gilbert, Chandler or north Scottsdale.

Enrollment at ASU has been growing at a rate of more than 1,000 students each year at the main campus. At ASU West, the population is increasing by about 25 percent each year.

Education centers around the Valley, which would be run by ASU faculty, could also be an alternative, Peck said.

Golich fears lower education budgets

By MIKE VAN DYKE
State Press

Decisions by the Arizona Legislature and the Board of Regents during the coming year could signal a serious decline in the quality of higher education at Arizona's three state universities, the executive director of the Arizona Students Association said Thursday.

Brad Golich said he has sensed that legislators and regents might try to de-emphasize the importance of higher education in Arizona during the upcoming months.

"This is potentially a very economically bad year for Arizona universities," he said.

Because of economic pressures in the state, the ASA director said he would not be surprised if cuts were made in university budgets.

"Unless a decision is made to increase taxes or it is determined that higher education is important to the state, revenues may be increased by raising student tuition or lowering university budgets," Golich said.

Two regents echoed Golich's concerns about budget cuts. Regent Andy Hurwitz said Golich's concerns about budget cuts are "valid."

Colombian paint factory bombed; traffickers vow more killings

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A bomb strapped to an ice cream vendor's bicycle blew up at a paint factory in Medellin on Thursday, and drug traffickers vowed to intensify their terror campaign by killing more people.

The attack on the paint factory in Medellin, the heartland of the nation's cocaine trade, injured eight people, radio stations reported. About 20 cars were damaged, a police spokeswoman said on condition of anonymity.

The bombing followed the first night of a curfew imposed in Medellin and eight nearby towns. Police reported a series of bombings that caused minor damage in Medellin as the curfew went into effect Wednesday night.

About 530 people were arrested through dawn Thursday for violating the 10 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew.

In Washington, the Pentagon set Sunday as the target date to begin shipping weapons, aircraft and other supplies under President Bush's $65 million military aid package for Colombia's war on drug traffickers.

The bombing of the paint factory in Medellin was the latest in a two-week wave of assassinations, arsons and bombings by Colombia's drug traffickers in retaliation for a government crackdown on the narcotics trade.

The radio networks Caracol and RCN said they had received telephone calls from an anonymous man claiming responsibility on behalf of "The Extraditables," a group blamed for past violence linked to drug traffickers.

Until Thursday, most of the bombings have been at night, although an Aug. 24 bombing of a political party headquarters in Medellin killed a passer-by.

Hallucinating Bakker ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker was committed to a mental institution in handcuffs and manacles Thursday after a psychiatrist reported the TV evangelist was hallucinating and cowering in a fetal position in his lawyer's office.

U. S. District Judge Robert Potter suspended Bakker's fraud trial and ordered him taken to the Federal Correctional Institute in Butner for up to 60 days for psychiatric evaluation.

Dr. Basil Jackson, a psychiatrist who has been treating Bakker for nine months, told the judge that Bakker began hallucinating Wednesday.

"Mr. Bakker reported that when he left the courthouse Wednesday, suddenly people outside took on the form of frightening animals which he felt were intent on destroying him, attacking him and hurting him," Jackson said.

Group says 1 million sign petition for amendment on flag desecration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Legion said Thursday it has received about one million signatures on a petition seeking a constitutional amendment against desecration of the American flag.

Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole of Kansas, appearing at a press conference with American Legion national commander H. F. Gierke, said legislation calling for the amendment has been scheduled for Senate floor action Oct. 16.

Noriega earned $200-300 million from drugs, crime, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling him a man of "shameless excess," a top State Department official said Thursday that Panamanian Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega has amassed a personal fortune of between $200 and $300 million from drug trafficking and other criminal activities.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger made the allegation in response to a challenge from a Panamanian diplomat last week for the Bush administration to back up its claim that Noriega has a long history of involvement in drug smuggling.

Basketball star comes to ASU for new beginning

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Sam Mack is trying to forget the night last March when he was shot by police after a holdup at a Burger King in Iowa. But forgetting is difficult.

A bullet in his leg serves as a permanent reminder.

"I constantly think about it (the robbery)," said Mack, 19, the former Iowa State University basketball star who transferred to ASU after he was acquitted in July of robbery and kidnapping charges. "I'm always going to have the physical and mental scars."

'Right now I feel nothing can hold me back from being the best I can be.'

— Sam Mack

Mack, who said he goes into a daze every time he thinks about the incident, is trying to start over at ASU.

"Right now I feel nothing can hold me back from being the best I can be," Mack said during an interview this week at the UAC, his first since he was shot. "God gave me a chance to start all over again, and I'm just ready to get out there."

Mack and former ISU football player Levin White were arrested March 30 after they were shot by Ames police while fleeing a Burger King. Mack was shot twice — once in the back, just missing his spine, and once in the leg — and White was shot once.

According to police, Mack, carrying a knife, and White, carrying a .22-caliber rifle, took a large amount of money from the cash registers and herded employees into a cooler.

Mack, a 6-foot-6-inch, 210-pound basketball forward, will have to sit out this season but has been working out with Sun Devil team members about two hours each day at the Student Recreation Complex.

The Illinois native said he is enjoying his new life in Arizona. He has already bought a bola tie, and a pair of cowboy boots are next.

Mack, a junior communications major who hopes to work someday as a television sportscaster, said he did not leave Iowa State because of any difficulties he may have faced returning to the Ames campus after the trial.

He said he and Iowa State basketball Coach Johnny Orr thought it would be good to get a fresh start.

"We were looking out for what was best for me," Mack said. "I am glad I made the decision. I think this is the best decision for me as far as my collegiate career and my education career, and I'm glad to be here."

Mack said he turned down offers to relocate at several collegiate basketball powers and chose ASU for his genesis because new ASU Coach Bill Frieder was once an assistant coach to Orr when Orr was

ASU basketball officials said they could not comment on Mack because he is not officially a member of the Sun Devil team and will not be eligible to play for a year.

He said he believes since Frieder and Orr coached together their styles are similar. He also was impressed with the facilities at ASU when Iowa State played at the UAC last winter in the Kactus Classic, an annual basketball tournament held at the University.

his family spent almost $50,000 in legal fees and had to sell many of their belongings. He said the two things he misses most are his 1988 Ford Mustang GT and his gold chains.

Also, during the five-month period, Mack's stepfather suffered a stroke and his brother was critically injured by a hit-and-run driver.

Mack's attorneys convinced Story County jurors that he was coerced into the robbery. White, who pleaded guilty to first degree robbery, is serving a 25-year sentence at the Iowa Men's Reformatory in Anamosa,

Mack, an All-Big Eight Honorable Mention last season who averaged 11.8 points and 6.1 rebounds per game, said the last five months have put a tremendous strain on him and his family — both emotionally and financially.

Mack, the youngest of six children, said

Iowa. Although White testified against him, Mack said he holds no grudge against White.

"I was brought up not to wish bad things on people," he said. "Obviously I'm going to feel some resentment — it's just something I can't explain."

Lattie Coor

Freshman president must experience 'student orientation'

TO: President Lattie Coor
FROM: ASU Student 38,432

So, moving back to Arizona? Well, great. But before you start thinking about sun, golf and day trips to the Grand Canyon, remember: You are not coming to Arizona to relax and retire. And, even though a move to the nation's fifth-largest university is a career advancement, think about this. It's been a while since you've attended Northern Arizona University. Things are a lot different in Arizona today than they were when Eisenhower was president.

Since you were one of the 6,000 incoming freshman who chose not to attend Orientation Week, let's review some of the vital details. Here are some things to think about as you begin your new student experience at ASU.

While you're wrapping up in Vermont, consider yourself a new student at ASU. This certainly is the best way for you to understand what life as a Sun Devil is like for 43,000 students every year. After all, how will you be able to make decisions affecting students unless you know what it is like to be one?

First off, you'll need to register for classes. Remember, ASU's general studies requirements rival those of Harvard — that is if you can get into any of the classes. When the University raised the general studies requirements, they must have forgotten to hire the extra faculty and add the extra classes.

A typical freshman takes a language, a lab science, a math class and one other elective. I recommend trying to get into Spanish 101, Biology 100, Math 117 and maybe, if you like, Psychology 100. However, I should tell you these classes have been filled since late May. What should you do? Well, I don't know. Ask any of the 23,000 other ASU students this happened to.

Undoubtedly, one of your classes will be held in Murdock 101, defined in Webster's as a "large, open space where students can sleep, eat, drink and talk amid the distant drone of professor's lectures." Don't be discouraged. By the second or third week of class, most of your cohorts will have become so frustrated with Murdock Hall that they will not even bother to come to class. That should guarantee you a fine seat.

Getting to campus for your classes is another story. Try to get a parking decal for one of the five parking structures on campus. But, I should tell you that most of the spaces were sold early last spring. Don't worry though. There is always "enough" room for students to park in Lot 59. I know it seems like a long walk to Murdock, but you can take the tram. Even though trams are scheduled to run every 15 minutes, sometimes there are little delays. You might want to arrive at 7:10 to catch the tram to make it to your 7:40 class. Or, if you're the athletic type, you could ride your bike. However, the ratio of bike patrol cops to ASU students seems better than the student-teacher ratio. If you do get ticketed, figure on spending the day in Bicycle Safety School, attended by more ASU students than Homecoming.

If you choose to ride your bike to campus, you will have to learn the art of maneuverability. There seems to be a population problem at ASU lately. Students call it a population problem; administrators call it a public relations problem. Regardless of the semantics, there are just too many people on campus.

The students are wondering when the University is going to realize that it can not continue to grow like it has. If current trends continue, ASU will be the home for upwards of 60,000 students in the next decade.

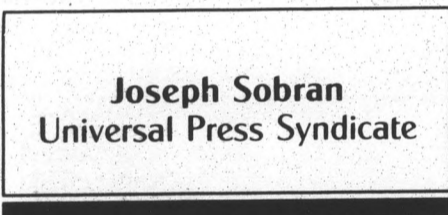

Some type of enrollment management might be a good idea. Either hire more faculty, ask the underpaid faculty to teach more than two classes a semester or cap enrollment.

I don't know which is growing faster, student population or the ranks of senior administrators. Maybe the physical plant should consider putting revolving doors on all the offices in the Academic Services Building. We don't need any more chiefs or any more Indians.

As you can see, this job's not going to be easy. If you get a chance, add another ASU visit to your schedule. Not to meet with community leaders or attend stuffy luncheons. Get out to Palm Walk, attend class in Murdock, talk with students. That way, when you move into your office, you'll be able to remember the 43,000 most important reasons Arizona State exists.

The students.

Amjad Jibril, forgotten victim of Israeli brutality

WASHINGTON — Another American has fallen victim to terrorism in the Middle East, but this time the United States is being careful not to overreact. The president hasn't interrupted his vacation to fly back to Washington for consultation with his top advisers. The airways aren't full of blustering congressmen demanding retaliation. In all likelihood, the killers will go unpunished. They may even be rewarded.

The dead man this time is a 14-year-old boy, Amjad Hussein Jibril. He grew up in Colorado. Three years ago, his parents took him back to Palestine — the West Bank, Judea-Samaria, whatever you want to call it. A few days ago he turned up dead, his body showing signs that he was tortured and murdered.

A dispatch from Agence France-Presse, published in The Washington Times on Aug. 21, reported a sequence of events as follows: Amjad left his family on the evening of Wednesday, Aug. 16, to attend prayer services at a mosque in the town where his family now lives, El Bireh. After the service, there was a demonstration. Israeli troops fired on it, and Amjad was among a group of youths who fled.

"What happened to him during the next 48 hours," writes the reporter, Marius Schattner, "remains a mystery."

Some witnesses said Amjad was later seen in an Israeli army jeep. His mother went to Israeli occupation administrators to find him but was told Amjad was not among those who had been arrested. She didn't believe them. She then went to the U.S. Embassy in Jerusalem, since Amjad was a U.S. citizen, and asked officials there to help find her son. They have asked Israeli authorities to investigate the matter.

Amjad's body was found last Friday. It was identified by his cousin, Dr. Walid Tawil, also a U.S. citizen.

"According to Dr. Tawil, a Vietnam veteran," Schattner writes, "Amjad's teeth had been smashed, his skull had been fractured, his body was covered with cigarette burns and his left eye was missing." The Times adds, in brackets, that "Reuters news agency, in a censored dispatch, quoted unnamed Israeli military officials as saying that Palestinian activists might have killed the boy to incite anti-Israeli unrest."

This explanation is, to put it very mildly, implausible. At a time when Israeli forces disguised as tourists are killing Palestinians, the idea that Palestinians would not only murder a Palestinian boy for propaganda advantages but also torture and mutilate him first, is so hard to believe that the man who said it probably didn't believe it himself.

You may note the disparity in moral indignation between the murder of Col. William Higgins and the murder of Amjad Jibril. Col. Higgins' death caused our politicians and pundits to call for an all-out "war on terrorism," preferably a war against "the source," presumed to be Iran. Amjad's even crueller murder has evoked almost no public reaction, certainly no calls for retaliation — because any retaliation would most likely have to be directed against our "reliable ally" and fellow champion of "democratic values," Israel.

The critic of Israel knows what to expect. The columnist Patrick Buchanan is currently being assailed as anti-Israel and anti-Semitic for asking bluntly just what benefits the United States is getting from this costly alliance. Those who revile him have no answer except personal abuse.

Not only abuse, but peculiarly baseless abuse. Buchanan has never suggested that Israel has no right to exist, or that Jews should enjoy fewer rights than other people. On the contrary, he is applying a single moral criterion to everyone.

The charge ought to be turned around. Anyone who defends Israel's present laws pertaining to non-Jews and especially its treatment of non-Jews in the occupied territories ought to be asked whether he would approve the similar treatment of Jews anywhere.

"Amjad's teeth had been smashed, his skull had been fractured . . ."

To ask the question is to answer it. Any such abuse of Jews would instantly get the infamy it deserved. A torture-murder like that of young Jibril would result in a flood of speeches, articles, probably a book and a movie, not to speak of military reprisal.

And what does our fellow citizen, Amjad Jibril, get? As far as I know, one newspaper column, which will probably cause more anger here than his wicked killers.

Death penalty for pushers solution to drug problem

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

When I tossed out the idea that some drugs be legalized, I knew what the response would be. Most of those who called or wrote said, in effect, "you must be nuts."

Actually, the idea isn't that bizzare. Some people who have been involved in the "war" on drugs think it's the answer.

By making some drugs legally available, as we do with liquor, we'd put most pushers, smugglers and gangs out of business, since they'd have few customers and little profit. Street crime by addicts would be dramatically reduced. And the use of cocaine, still glamorous to some prosperous boobs, would lose its illicit appeal.

But it won't happen. I knew it when I made the suggestion. I thought I'd mention it anyway, just to stimulate debate.

It won't happen because public opinion would be against it, and few politicians stick their heads out for unpopular causes.

So where does that leave us in the so-called "drug war" that we've already lost?

Well, we're sending a lot of military hardware to the government of Colombia, our leading cocaine supplier, so the Colombians can fight their own war.

Now, that is a real drug war. The billionaire drug kings, with their own armies, don't mess around.

After the drug kings murdered a presidential candidate who had vowed to go after them, the government retaliated with mass arrests, by seizing their palatial estates and mansions, and promising to extradite top dealers to the United States.

Did that send the drug kings into retirement? Of course not. They simply set off bombs in several buildings, committed more murders, and declared war on the Colombian government, the army, commerce and industry, the press, and anybody else who interfered with the lucrative business of satisfying the United States' drug craving.

In the most chilling threat of all, they said that for every Colombian drug lord shipped to the U. S., where they are a cinch to get life sentences, they would kill 10 Colombian judges.

You don't think they mean it? The Colombian judges know, because they've been killing judges for years.

And after the 10-for-1 threat, about 500 Colombian judges — more than one-tenth of the country's judiciary — resigned. They know a sincere threat when they hear one. Better to write wills and do real estate closings than wonder if there's a bomb under your courthouse.

Then there is the Colombian minister of justice, who was to lead the legal battle against the drug lords. They sent word: If you do, we will kill you.

So she resigned too, and is expected to stay in the United States for a while, where squat men with automatic weapons are less likely to ventilate her home.

'By making some drugs legally available, as we do with liquor, we'd put most pushers, smugglers and gangs out of business . . .'

The minister of justice shouldn't be criticized. Nor should the judges who quit. Even with our limited help, they know there is no absolute defense against determined murderers. And the drug lords, who are protecting their billionaire empires, are nothing if not determined.

If anyone or anything deserves criticism, it's this country and our head-in-the-sand leadership. When President Drowsy let Nancy lead the great "Just Say No" campaign, the response of the nation's pushers and crackheads was, "Say what?"

We don't have enough local police, federal narcs, border patrols, judges and prison space to cope with our own drug dealers and the smugglers. And we're not going to have them because it costs money and the majority of Americans seem to still believe in the free lunch.

So what's the answer? Well, if public opinion, which sways politicians, opposes some sort of government-controlled legal sale of drugs, then maybe we ought to reconsider the thoughts of Lar "America First" Daly, a Chicago bar stool salesman.

The late Mr. Daly was an eccentric who wore an Uncle Sam suit and was always running for public office. He seldom got more than 1 percent of the vote, but he enjoyed the attention.

His favorite theme was "execute drug dealers." Everybody would laugh because at that time this country wasn't even executing mass murderers. And in those days, hard drug use was confined mainly to the big city's poor, while hippies puffed some grass. It wasn't thought of as a major problem.

But now that drugs are a national epidemic, it might be time to give some thought to Lar Daly's proposal.

True, a case can be made that the death penalty doesn't discourage murderers. And it probably doesn't, since murders are often done in a moment of impulse, rage or passion. And many murderers are simply crazy.

There are crimes, though, that can be discouraged by the promise of death. Calculated crimes for profit.

Kidnapping for ransom was once a common crime. Then the government passed the death penalty. Kidnappers suddenly found other lines of work.

If Colombia is willing to fight a genuine war against the drug cartel, the least we can do is pass a law imposing the death penalty on professional drug pushers and smugglers.

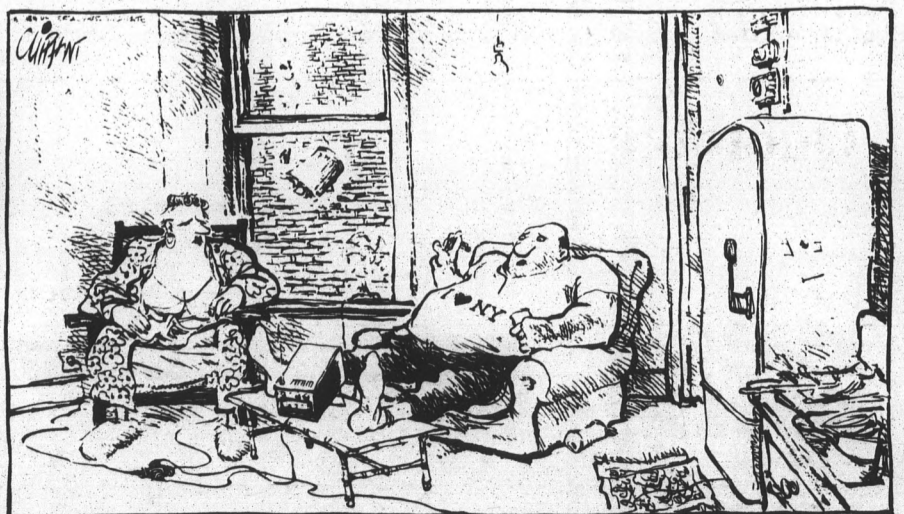

It shouldn't be hard to define what a professional is. Obviously, a teen with two joints isn't. Somebody with 10 pounds of coke in his trunk would qualify.

Would the courts find death to be "cruel and unusual punishment?" Why? Drug dealers also deal in death. Users die. Or they kill someone for money to satisfy their craving. And drug gangs kill each other, informants, cops and bystanders.

As for public opinion, no problem. It would cost the taxpayer nothing. We could even overdose the condemned on their own products and save on the electric bill.

ASU focuses on ethnic diversity in wake of racial tensions

By MICHELLE HENRY
State Press

ASU is increasing its efforts to promote cultural diversity on campus in the wake of racial tensions last April by adding another assistant dean of student life, an ASU official said.

Because of the Alpha Drive brawls of April 14 and 15 involving more than 500 people, the assistant student life dean position has been split. One of the assistants will focus on cultural diversity issues, and the other will deal with student conduct, said JoAnne O'Donnell, associate dean of student life.

In addition, ASU's Residence Life office is stressing the need for cultural awareness.

The Student Life positions opened up this summer when former Assistant Dean Art Carter took a job at Tulane University in Louisiana.

A search committee, headed by William Cabiana, a psychology education professor, has been formed to seek out and interview potential candidates for the assistant dean positions. Cabiana could not be reached for comment.

O'Donnell said the jobs need to be filled soon.

"We hope they (the assistant deans) can start in October," O'Donnell said. "Our response from Student Life is to have someone who can spend time with cultural diversity."

Four black male students were allegedly attacked in April by members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. The black students were mistaken for suspects involved in an earlier assault on an SAE member.

The incident sparked massive protests on campus.

O'Donnell said the assistant dean will focus on cultural diversity and work with various ethnic student organizations on campus to provide support.

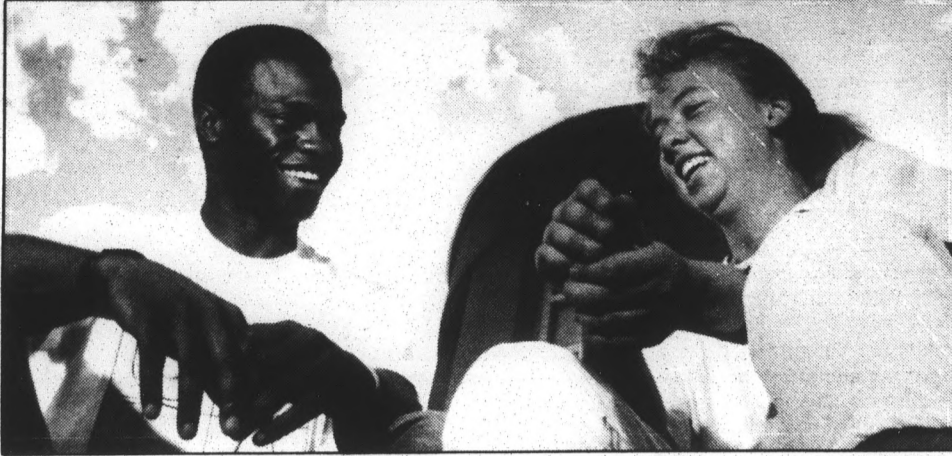

However, she pointed out that ASU has always had an interest in promoting cultural diversity.

"I assume there will be a stronger emphasis on it this year," O'Donnell added.

Similar to Student Life, the Residence Hall Association is emphasizing cultural sensitivity and diversity in ASU dormitories.

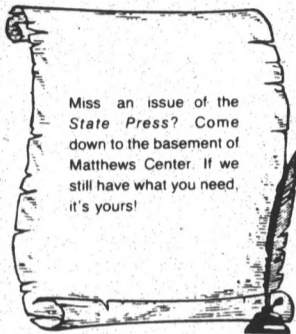

Debra Sells, Residence Life acting assistant for education, said her office is or move when the lease expires next year, Peck said.

Peck

Another alternative is to engage in a partnership with Maricopa Community Colleges. The community colleges would run the first two years of instruction with ASU taking over the last years, Peck said.

The University will also consider the option of all community colleges becoming four-year schools, he said.

"All community colleges (would) become ASU colleges and ASU becomes the University," Peck said.

Peck said the University should not solve the enrollment problem by raising tuition and enrollment requirements.

"That makes it impossible for people to go to school, and we are a public institution," he said.

Peck, who has been in office since June 22, also commented on ASU's successful programs for the recruitment of minority faculty and students. But Peck said the University will strive to make the programs better.

For example, the Hispanic Mother/Daughter program, which was featured in Time magazine earlier this month, may be expanded to include a Black Mother/Daughter program.

Another program designed for minority retention is Program STARS, Students Taking Action to Reach Success, which was started more than a year ago by a group of black graduate students. The program helps black community college students and ASU students stay in school and pursue graduate studies.

The graduate students advise and counsel undergraduates on different issues relating to classwork and adapting to the college environment.

"The students know there is someone there," Peck said. "It's true that students will listen to other students."

Recruitment of minority and female faculty also increased during the past year, Peck said.

"Our hiring last year (included) 111 positions, 45 Anglo males and 57 women and minorities," Peck said. "We are not hiring anybody who is not the best person."

Last year, ASU received an award from the magazine "Saludos Espanos" for its effort in hiring women and minority faculty.

Peck said there are several items he would like to see completed before his term ends on Dec. 31.

Touch-tone registration, where students will be able to register by phone, is one of the projects Peck wants developed before the beginning of the spring semester.

"A student could phone and ask the computer what classes are closed or available," Peck said.

In addition, students will be able to register for class and be placed on a waiting list if a class is closed, he said.

The program would also expand so that students could receive their grades over the telephone, thus cutting down on the University's transcript mailing cost.

"It would cost about $3,000 in comparison with $10,000 for mailing," Peck said.

Peck said he also wants to make advising mandatory for freshmen and transfer students before he leaves office.

Peck also said the Legislature needs to raise more money for faculty salaries, which are below the national average.

"In faculty salaries being average, then we have average faculty," Peck said. "What I think we need to do is have the Legislature and people decide how good they want education to be."

Peck said he supports tax increases if the money is spent on education.

When Peck's term is up in January, he said he will probably return to his former position as provost.

Tram hits, injures student

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

An ASU student was hit by a tram Thursday morning while she was sitting on her bicycle at the corner of Orange Circle and Normal Avenue, ASU police said.

Jammie Liang, 20, was hit by tram driver Dennis Wilson at 9:11 a.m. Wilson was driving west on Orange Circle when the back of the tram hit Liang.

Liang was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital where she was treated for an injured left leg and released at 11:15 a.m., hospital officials said.

Passengers on the tram were not injured.

"She was wedged between the curb and the tram on Orange Circle where no one is to be riding," Officer Chris Moore said. "No one has been cited yet. We are still investigating the accident."

Wilson has driven a tram at ASU for three years.

Lt. Craig Emanuel said the investigation should conclude this morning.

DPS readies DUI offensive, ready for summer's last blast

Labor Day historically has been one of the most hazardous three-day weekends on the calendar, but the Arizona Department of Public Safety is ready and waiting with a full force.

DPS will saturate the state highways and interstates with officers ready to catch drunk drivers and other careless drivers, said Officer Roy Van Orden.

"This is the last weekend before a long stretch," he said. "Playtime is almost over with, and this is the last major weekend before summer's end."

Although DPS will have sobriety checkpoints on Arizona's highways, Tempe police never conduct them because of the city's large population and the police force's limited man power, spokesman Roger Austin said.

But the Tempe DUI task force will be out on the streets during the weekend, he added.

DPS will station all of its officers and reserve officers — which in combination total three times its normal man power — at various checkpoints on state highways, Van Orden added.

"All vacations and days off have been canceled," he said about his officers. "We're going to have intense enforcement. Hundreds of officers will be out there. We want to be visible enough to stop speeders and drunk drivers."

DPS will leave unmanned patrol cars on roadsides in an effort to slow down drivers, Van Orden said, adding that he wants holiday drivers to slow down without having to be issued tickets.

At the end of 1988, the DPS arrested 6,996 drunk drivers, he said. So far this year, it has arrested 3,752 drunk drivers.

DPS has a hotline for motorists who experience highway emergencies or want to report drunk drivers. The number is 1-800-525-5555.

To promote safety, DPS is encouraging travelers to wear seat belts.

"Last year, there were 791 seatbelts present in the 1,995 accidents," Van Orden said. "Of those present, 632 lessened or prevented injury in the officer's opinion."

WWII 50 years later a grim anniversary

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — World War II began 50 years ago today. One of many events marking the grim anniversary will be a concert in Warsaw, the first target of blitzkrieg, Adolf Hitler's fearsome "lightning war."

The Soviet Union called the conflict "the most horrible and destructive of all wars." An ultra-conservative West German Cabinet minister said Germans should not bear all the blame.

More than 50 million people were killed in the war touched off by the German invasion of Poland on Sept. 1, 1939. The Nazi extermination of 6 million Jews shocked the world like no other atrocity.

Major events are scheduled for Friday in West Germany, East Germany and Poland, including an internationally broadcast concert in Warsaw conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Pope John Paul II used the occasion to declare: "We have a duty to learn from the past so that never again will there arise a set of factors capable of triggering a similar conflagration."

Bush vows to catch the Big One

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine, (AP) — Not since he drew the line against new taxes has President Bush given such a solemn promise.

His reputation as an angler is in serious trouble because of nearly a fortnight of fishing with nothing to show for it. Bush threw down the gauntlet Thursday.

"Between now and when I leave on Monday, I guarantee you, I positively guarantee you that this jinx will be broken," Bush said at the end of a joint news conference with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, who visited him overnight at his seaside vacation home.

Although he spoke in a joking manner, Bush indicated he did not particularly care that his fishing reputation was being made something of a laughing stock in the region where he spent all but one summer of his life.

"My record fishing in these waters is well known," he said. "It's a superb record, a record of bountiful catches."

"And somehow something's gone wrong for the last 13 days. Something's happened."

By the end of the day, the fishing story was taking on a life of its own, with Bush inviting the press corps to watch him take off for a late afternoon fishing jaunt after he saw Mulroney off.

When they arrived at the pier, the Bushes were greeted by a small demonstration of family members and friends singing "When the fish come marching in," and chanting, "Go For the Bluefish."

They jumped up and down waving signs that read, "Fish till you drop," "You can do it," "1,000 dreams of bites," "A fish a day keeps the press away."

Media representatives wore T-Shirts reading "Fish watch" with a circled fish and a line through it indicating no fish. The demonstrators carried a sign with a circled fish and no line through it.

Bush said he was considering taking a member of the media out on his next fishing expedition "to thwart these evil rumors that I don't know what I'm doing fishing."

Mulroney, who came back empty-hooked after an outing with Bush, offered "the impartial international assessment of the fact that there are no fish out there. I can certify to that. It's not the president's fault."

Mulroney joked, "It is not the case that . . . there are, out in the bay, Canadian frog men with Nova Scotia salmon ready to put on anybody's line."

Mulroney was not the first to come up with that idea.

A couple of days earlier on being told that Bush had publicly stated that he would definitely catch a fish that day, a Secret Service agent sighed, "Time to get out the diving gear."

"There is a definite pressure this year to cut the budget," Hurwitz said, adding that health care, the state prison system and the universities are the most likely targets of legislative budget cutters.

Regent Herman Chanen said, "I think everyone recognizes that the state is facing a budget problem."

"The state is facing a $400 million shortfall and either revenues will be increased or budgets will be cut," Chanen said.

Based upon legislative action over the past year, Golich said higher education funding may be forced to take a back seat to other programs that need the money to stay alive.

An early indication that the Legislature may be preparing to restrict university budgets can be found inside the pages of "Fiscal 2000" — an attempt to restructure Arizona's tax system along with state university funding — which at this point is still in the drafting stages, Golich said.

He said the findings of the report could be used as evidence in support of a tuition hike.

The report has found that Arizona sends 20 percent more students through the community college and university system than the national average.

Also, the draft shows that tuition for Arizona in-state students is among the least expensive in the country, ranking in the bottom third nationwide.

Golich said this underlying theme of the report may lead legislators to believe that tuition can be raised without drastically hurting the state.

"It may appear that it is all right to squeeze students out of school through pricing without hurting the state, because Arizona puts 20 percent more students through the system (than average)," he said.

Chanen said he would be "keeping an eye on Fiscal 2000" to see if appropriate tax increases are made to help avoid budget cuts or tuition increases.

Paul Larson, Associated Students of ASU president, has also expressed concern about the report.

Larson said the report should be presented to the Legislature in full this fall and expects there to be a special session in October or November to discuss funding of state universities.

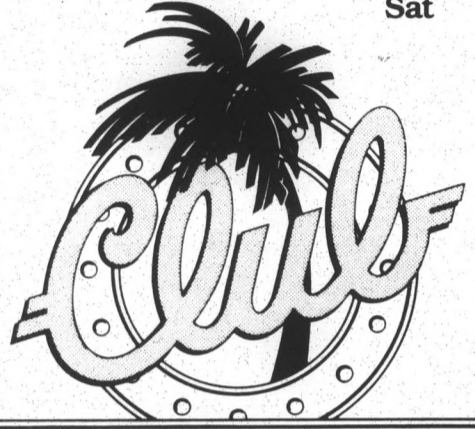

Despite discouraging signs, Golich said ASA is prepared for this year's battle against an unnecessary tuition hike.

"We are way ahead of the game this year," Golich said. "There are five or six members (of ASA) returning from last year's successful tuition fight that understand the complicated calculations involved in determining tuition hikes and are qualified to explicate our position and concerns to the regents."

"Additionally, we have already begun lobbying regents to make sure they maintain dedication to low cost education."

targeting three areas this year.

"The first will focus on support and retention of minority groups," she said, adding that minorities will be sought out in residence halls to meet with RHA officials to discuss issues that pertain to students.

The second emphasis will include the education of the entire residence hall population, Sells said.

RHA is planning several programs including student panels, seminars, speakers and cultural exchanges throughout the semester.

"We will be working with both greek students and all those in residence halls," Sells said. "We want to videotape some of the best sessions and let other groups on campus use them."

Sells said RHA will work with Marriot, ASU's food service company, in an effort to include cultural meals on dormitory cafeteria menus.

Third, RHA will emphasize extensive staff training, Sells said.

"We want our staff to have a good grasp and feel of cultural diversity," she said. "We want people to feel free to talk with other people on their floor."

"We want our staff to have a good grasp and feel of cultural diversity," she said. "We want people to feel free to talk with other people on their floor."

Sells said the resident assistants have received training manuals and have gone through numerous workshops so they will be able to create open communication between their residents.

"This (cultural diversity) is something that requires changing students values and attitudes," she said "It cannot be done on a short-term basis, so this is something we are planning to instill on a long-term basis."

Two student resident hall assistants from Cholla Apartments, who participated in a training session about combatting "isms," said RHA's new focus is essential.

Sondra Valentine, a senior textiles major, said the four-hour session was enlightening and emotional.

"It was powerful because, in the end, we separated the room down the middle," she said "People of color were on one side and people not of color on the other side. Both sides were given the chance to ask three questions — what we wanted them to know about us, what we never wanted to see them do again and what we could do to work together as allies."

2 inventors discover cooling system

By KELLY JAIN
State Press

While working on a water purification system, two inventors stumbled across a cool idea.

ASU chemical engineering professor James Beckman and businessman Walter Albers said they have discovered how to cool homes for half the cost of the average monthly cooling bills — without damaging the ozone layer.

And it can work in Arizona's record heat.

Beckman and Albers received a patent last May for their new air conditioning system.

It does not use high pressure systems or the damaging chlorofluorocarbon refrigerants used in current technology, Beckman said.

CFCs are the chemicals that scientists say are slowly destroying the earth's ozone layer.

The machine cools homes by dehumidifying outside air with a salt solution and evaporating water at atmospheric pressure, Beckman said.

High pressure systems require expensive and energy consuming compressors, he said.

"(However) we just need a fan and some pumps," Beckman said, adding that their invention is quieter than many air conditioners.

If that's not enough, the machine also purifies the air inside the buildings by trapping pollens, dust and radioactive radon in the salt water solution, he said.

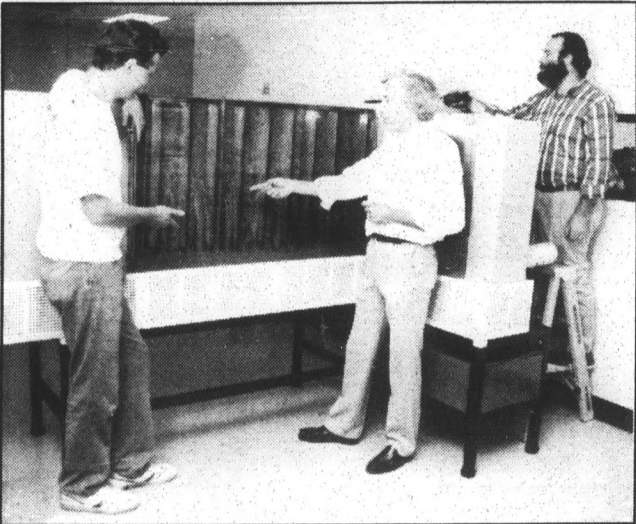

Beckman said all of the home's inside air is purified every 15 to 20 minutes, Beckman said, adding that conventional air conditioners recirculate the same pollutants.

A prototype of the air conditioner delivered two tons of cooling during more than 700 hours of operation this summer. Two tons of cooling capacity is typical of many American home systems, Beckman said.

The new air conditioner is scheduled for testing in homes and businesses next summer, and they hope the invention will be on the market by 1992, Beckman said.

Albers, 51, has been developing this air conditioning technology since 1978, and more than $1.4 million has been invested in the project. He is the president of Albers Technologies Corporation and holds a bachelor's degree in economics from Yale University.

Beckman, 46, is an associate professor in chemical and bioengineering at ASU. He has a doctorate degree from the UofA and master's and bachelor's degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

New street signs stylish, functional

By LAURA SCHMIDT
State Press

Stylish, lighted, green signs have been erected at 33 Tempe intersections in an effort to promote safety, said the city's assistant traffic engineer.

"The street name signs are much more visible because you can read them from further distances," said Ed Vanderginst.

Tempe has 179 traffic signal intersections and eventually all of these will be equipped with the modular traffic signal poles and mast arms within the next three years.

Vanderginst said about two years ago the Tempe City Council voted to revamp the city's traffic signal poles, adding that the street signs have been placed at all intersections south of Guadalupe Road and will be constructed up to Tempe's north boundary at College Avenue and Continental Drive.

However, in keeping with Mill Avenue's "turn of the century look of downtown" Tempe, the blue, lighted signs that are currently in place there will stay.

Other cities in Arizona that have utilized the modular traffic lights besides Tempe are Scottsdale, Chandler and Tucson.

Eventually there will be a city name logo in the upper righthand corner of each sign, Vanderginst said, adding that the intersection of McClintock Drive and Baseline Road is the first to have this.

He said the cost of constructing the lights at each intersection runs about $45,000 to $50,000.

"It depends on how complicated the intersection is," Vanderginst added.

The assistant traffic engineer said the Arizona Department of Transportation is paying for the modular traffic signs on new freeway developments, such as the East Papago Freeway, but the city will pick up the rest of the tab.

Bill Assenmacher, president of T.A. Caid & Sons in Tucson, one of the companies supplying the modular traffic light fixtures, said they make a city look unique.

Zoo may have wrongly fired whistle-blowing technician

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix Zoo officials refused Thursday to confirm or deny a report that the zoo had fired the lab technician who notified government inspectors that most of the drugs at the zoo's animal hospital were outdated.

Marge Erdmann, who had been suspended with pay since Aug. 11, said zoo administrator Wayne Smith called her Tuesday afternoon and told her that her final paycheck and discharge notice would be mailed to her.

Zoo marketing director Jeff Blaugrund said legal issues prevented him from commenting on personnel matters and refused to confirm or deny the discharge.

Erdmann called the U. S. Department of Agriculture earlier this month to report an estimated 90 percent of the zoo's medications were out of date. Some of the drugs were marked to expire in 1965.

A USDA inspector visited the zoo and ordered that outdated medicines be labeled as such and be physically separated from current medications, said William R. DeHaven, sector supervisor for animal care with the USDA.

Zoo officials removed the drugs the following day, although DeHaven said zoo officials told the inspector they'd been in the process of inventorying the outdated medications prior to Erdmann's report.

DeHaven said zoos can use outdated medication under the supervision of a veterinarian who must take responsibility for the outcome.

Neither DeHaven nor Blaugrund was able to comment on the quantity of outdated medications.

Five days after the drugs were removed, Erdmann was suspended for one day without pay on the grounds she had returned late from lunch, she said. When she returned to work after the suspension, she said she was told that she had been suspended indefinitely with pay.

Erdmann and her attorney, David Gomez, maintain she was never told why she was suspended the second time.

Erdmann said she had been recommended for a merit raise in April and had never been reprimanded for botching a lab test.

State law allows damage claims if a company fires an employee for reporting a violation of the law, Gomez said.

"This lady has done nothing wrong and deserves to be back at work, he said.

Ex-player hangs up cleats, now coaches

By PAUL CORO
State Press

You can't keep a good man down. Former ASU standout Tony Johnson has been injured and cut in his football career, yet remains on his feet with the receivers/tight end coaching job at Phoenix College. "It was a way to stay close to the game," Johnson said. "It's kind of like social work (his major). I feel I am giving back and helping where I came from."

Johnson, who played at receiver for the Sun Devils from 1986 to 1988, landed the position at PC in July, through recommendations by ASU Head Coach Larry Marmie and Offensive Coordinator Mike Martz.

"It has been a very easy adjustment," Johnson said. "I have always prepared myself for the time when I wouldn't be playing. I don't mind waking up without the pain."

Johnson is also handling the distribution of game passes for VIPs, high school coaches and players. As he becomes more comfortable with the job, he will be taking on more responsibility with the Sports Information Department.

"This is a good place to start," Johnson said. "I would like to parlay this into something bigger much quicker than most beginning coaches do."

Johnson credits the ASU coaching staff with preparing the players better than anyone in the country. He said that he has been able to translate this into his coaching.

"I am able to relate to the players," Johnson said. "I am pretty good as a technician. I can tell the guys what they need to know and when they need to know it in order to be ready."

Johnson feels that in order to be the well-rounded coach he desires to be, he will have to learn more about the play of the offensive line.

The ASU coaching staff is confident that Johnson will succeed and hopes that he will return as a graduate assistant, Martz said. Johnson chose to spend time in another program because he felt it would be difficult to deal with players who were once his teammates.

"He will be a tremendous coach," Martz said. "It has a lot to do with his love for the game. He is also a good communicator."

Martz said he fears Johnson may identify too much with his players and have discipline problems since he is so close in age to the players.

Johnson, who graduated in May, tried out this summer with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League. He said that he was cut due to a "numbers game." The CFL allows just 14 American players to each team. Winnipeg invited 60 Americans to camp.

After transferring from Tulsa in 1985, Johnson posted 48 career receptions for 764 yards at ASU. In two of the three seasons, he started at both flanker and split end. Last season, he was second on the team in receptions (23) even though he missed the final three games due to a lacerated toe.

Devils show off for fans

By JOEL HORN
State Press

Suffering from college football withdrawals? Can't wait for the Sun Devils' opening game Sept. 9? Well, your prayers have been answered.

ASU football spectators, young and old, are invited to bring their cameras at 10 a.m. Saturday to Sun Devil Stadium for the second-annual "Fan Photo Day."

Parents are encouraged to bring their children onto the field, mingle with the players and get autographs.

Tables will be set up on one of the sidelines and players will be available to sign posters, which will be handed out at the gate.

Complimentary hats, visors and other Sun Devil gifts also will be distributed to fans as they enter the stadium.

Following the morning activities, which conclude at 11:30 a.m., the team will have a walk-through practice.

Mike Parkinson, ASU director of marketing and promotions, said the event was extremely successful last year, with over 3,000 spectators in attendance.

Season tickets will be sold Saturday to ASU home games, he said, and individual game seats are available for $5 to students high school-age and under.

Parkinson said the athletic department is making these tickets available to youngsters as part of a new concept called the "knot hole gang," because it appears ASU home games will not be sold out for the first time in three years.

An adult does not have to be present for youngsters to purchase these tickets, he added.

Football tickets still available

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

Similar to the years before ASU played Michigan State in the 1986 Rose Bowl, there has not been a rush this fall to buy student season football tickets.

"There are just over 4,000 tickets sold right now, which is not very many," said Diney Mahoney, supervisor of ticket sales. "We're trying to sell them faster. I believe we can sell them all if the students know they are available."

Mahoney said 3,000 of the 10,000 student tickets were sold before the fall semester began, and about 1,200 were purchased this week.

For the second year, the ASU Athletic Ticket Office has conducted a mail-in procedure of purchasing tickets. Students send their requests and a check during the summer and pick up the tickets the first week of school.

Mahoney said student response may be lower this year because of the relatively new process.

"I think most of the people are not informed," she said. "Most of the calls we get are asking if we have any tickets."

Fliers are available at the Memorial Union information desk and were distributed in the dormitory mail boxes earlier this week.

Also, brochures were sent in late July to 20,000 students who preregistered for the fall semester. Mahoney said there was a big response within a few days after they were mailed.

Hoping for another noticeable increase in season ticket sales, Mahoney said tickets will be sold Tuesday through Friday inside the MU on the north side.

If there is an abundance of tickets left over, Mahoney said they can be used as guest passes for students who want to bring a non-ASU student to the game. As a last resort, the student seats may be available to the general public, she said.

Season tickets cost $33 — about $4 a game for the eight home-game schedule — while single-game tickets cost $8.

Gowell

ASU volleyball player recovers, returns a star

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

If anyone had told Mindy Gowell two years ago that she would be a key player for this year's Sun Devil volleyball team, she would not have believed them.

At that time she was recovering from major reconstructive knee surgery, and rehabilitation was very slow.

"I was lost for awhile," said Gowell, a junior. "Volleyball was a big part of my identity."

Now, two years later, she has completely recovered and is ready to take over the position that All-America player Christy Nore vacated last season.

Although Head Coach Patty Snyder is quick to call Gowell worthy of filling Christy's shoes, Gowell modestly denies the charge.

"I have a lot of respect for Christy and how she plays," Gowell said. "But I don't think we're close (in talent)."

Gowell came to ASU from Portage, Mich., after a high school volleyball career that led her to a first-team all-state ranking and three state championships.

She chose to play for ASU, after being heavily recruited by other Pac-10 schools, because she knew ASU offered an excellent athletic program.

"ASU had the best of everything," Gowell said. "The school, the campus, the athletic program, the coaches."

As a freshman Sun Devil, she held a starting position as an outside hitter. When she suffered a knee injury a month into practice, she redshirted for a year. She returned to play in mid-season of her sophomore year.

"I had six years of repetition under my belt," she said. "Being out a year, I lost a lot in the area of consistency."

Although Gowell said she does not feel as strong of a player in the areas of blocking and serving, she blames none of her inconsistencies on her injury.

"I am a step behind, but I am no more limited," she said. "Ultimately, my injury should not hold me back. There is no reason why I can't go further."

Gowell realizes she has two years to improve her game but holds certain goals for this particular season. She personally is aiming for consistency in playing and a positive attitude.

"I feel pretty confident in my play so far, and the feeling of the team is good," she said. "There is a good chemistry between the players."

Stallings to decide players' fate in San Diego game

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Chargers' coach Dan Henning and Cardinals' coach Gene Stallings are both occupied with resolving nagging personnel questions as their teams meet Friday night in an exhibition finale.

"We've got to reduce the squad down to 47 (the regular-season limit), so we've still got to make some decisions," Stallings said. "It can't be a guessing game for us. I think it's ... important that you stick to your plan and look at your players. When this game's over, it all goes back to zero. What we need to do is be good when we play Detroit."

Phoenix opens the regular season against the Lions in Detroit on Sept. 10, while the Chargers play the Raiders in Los Angeles.

Both San Diego and Phoenix are 1-2 in the preseason, and the teams have common problems in the running game and at quarterback, with new players at the position.

Gary Anderson, a 1,000-yard rusher for San Diego and the team's offensive MVP in 1988, remains unsigned, along with defensive lineman Joe Phillips.

"Running back is an area that's in a state of deep evaluation," said Henning.

Six backs remain on San Diego's roster, including free agent Timmy Smith, formerly of Washington, and rookies Marion Butts and Victor Floyd, both former reserves out of Florida State.

Though concerned by the absence of Anderson and Phillips, Henning said, "At this juncture, we have to assume we're going to play without them."

"Once you get to a certain point, you have to take the approach that it's something you can't do anything about. We have to get ready for the Raiders."

The Cardinals' running game, featuring Earl Ferrell, Stump Mitchell and Tony Jordan, has averaged only 2.5 yards per attempt in three preseason games.

But the void that most worries Stallings is at quarterback, with the consignment of Neil Lomax to injured reserve for the year with a degenerative arthritic hip condition.

Gary Hogeboom, who joined Phoenix as a free agent this year, will start the game and play about a half. He is coming off his best showing as a Cardinal, completing 9 of 13 throws for 126 yards and two touchdowns in Phoenix's 21-7 win over the Cleveland Browns last week.

Tom Tupa and first round supplemental draft choice Timm Rosenbach, who made his debut last week when he quarterbacked the Cardinals for one third-quarter series, also were expected to play.

"I think in the little time that Gary has been here, he has improved in each game," Stallings said. In his first two outings, Hogeboom threw five interceptions.

Jim McMahon, acquired by San Diego in an Aug. 18 trade with Chicago, has spent the past two weeks acquainting himself with the Chargers' system. Like Hogeboom, McMahon is expected to play about a half before being relieved by rookie Billy Joe Tolliver and David Archer.

"I think he's acclimated himself well," Henning said of McMahon. "He's come on at a pace I'm very satisfied with. I want to get a good feeling about Jim. I want Jim to let me know he has a good feeling.

"But I definitely want to get the other two guys some work, more so for Billy because he's a rookie and to get snaps for a rookie in the NFL in game conditions before he has to line up and compete in the season is essential."

As for how the Chargers and Cardinals will fare once the regular season starts, Henning and Stallings had these thoughts.

"We won't be the worst football team in the NFL, you can quote me on that," Henning said.

Said Stallings, "We've got to be good at the quarterback position, there's no question about that. We're losing Neil, so whoever plays at that position has got to perform to a level of NFL competition. And we've got to improve our kicking game. If those two things happen, we can very easily have a decent year."

The Chargers and Cardinals meet again in the regular season on Oct. 1 in Phoenix.

Wildcats adjust, host Stanford in Pac-10 opener

TUCSON (AP) — When Stanford and No. 18 Arizona kick off the 1989 Pacific-10 Conference football season Saturday here, winning will be a matter of adjustment, said the host Wildcats Coach Dick Tomey.

Though Stanford finished ninth in the Pac-10 at 1-5-1 and was 3-6-2 overall last season, the Cardinal has four returning all-conference players, more than any team except USC.

"They have a lot of talent, and they were real close last year," said Tomey, whose team tied for third in the conference with Washington State at 5-3 and ended the season 7-4. Arizona's ranked 18th nationally in the preseason Associated Press poll.

"We know that legitimately, Arizona should be ranked in the Top 20 in the country," said Stanford's new coach, Dennis Green, a former head coach at Northwestern who is on the Stanford staff for the third time after three years coaching the San Francisco 49ers' receivers.

"They were by far the best 7-4 team in the conference last year," and probably the best 7-4 team not to get to a bowl game in the last five to 10 years, Green added.

Stanford returns 14 starters, including eight from a strong defensive unit, and is anchored by three all-Pac-10 seniors: outside linebacker Rob Hinckley, who had a conference-high 13 sacks and 22 tackles for loss last year; defensive lineman Lester Archambeau, and cornerback Alan Grant.

Green said defense should be his team's strength and that "we are trying to catch up offensively."

Tomey, starting his third year at Arizona, said he had no idea what to expect from the Stanford offense because of its new coaching staff.

As a result, his team has watched film of Northwestern, Stanford and the 49ers. "Take your pick," he said.

Acknowledging that his staff has some ideas about what the Cardinal might do, he added that "they might come out and do something totally different."

"It's just like any other first game: the team that can adjust the best wins," Tomey said, "because there's a few surprises for everybody."

Green will start redshirt freshman Steve Smith at quarterback, who won the job in the spring from 1987 starter Brian Johnson and 1988 starter Jason Palumbis.

Smith will be throwing to wide receivers Ed McCaffrey, who missed last season with a thigh injury, Walter Batson, Chris Walsh and Jon Pinckney.

The Cardinal running game is centered around all-conference halfback Jon Volpe, a 5-7, 205-pound junior who rushed for 1,027 yards last season. Volpe, who is from Tucson, underwent surgery on both shoulders during the offseason and is recovering from a hamstring injury, but Green said he is expected to play.

But Green said he was unsure of the status of running mate Charlie Young, Stanford's leading receiver last year recovering from knee surgery.

Stanford will be going against an Arizona defense led by all-Pac-10 linebacker Chris Singleton, one of seven returning starters, along with tackle Reggie Gaddis, a 1987 starter who did not play last year.

In part because of Gaddis' return, minimum impact is expected from the graduation loss of noseguard Dana Wells, the Pac-10 defensive player of the year.

Absent is Singleton's twin brother, Kevin, who is undergoing treatment for leukemia.

Like Stanford, Arizona returns three starters in its defensive backfield and its place-kicker.

The Wildcats' offense will continue to be an option attack, operated by quarterback Ronald Veal, a shifty junior.

Senior David Eldridge, junior Reggie McGill and sophomore fullback Mario Hampton are back to trigger the wishbone ground game, which has led the conference the last two years, but all-Pac-10 running back Art Greathouse has been troubled since last season with a rare foot ailment. Tomey said his availability would be determined day to day.

Arizona also has several highly touted running backs, including Michael Bates and Erroll Sapp, who are expected to see playing time.

The two teams are 4-4, all in Pac-10 play. They last met in 1987, when Arizona won 23-13 at Palo Alto. Arizona is 60-19-5 in season openers, Stanford 60-31-4.
