ASASU Senate asks regents to drop appeal

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The Associated Students of ASU Senate asked the Arizona Board of Regents Tuesday to drop its lawsuit against two Valley newspapers and encouraged the state to launch an investigation into the ASU presidential search.

A resolution, which was introduced by the University Affairs Committee and which also calls for the regents to pay their own legal fees, was unanimously passed by the Senate.

"I believe the regents shouldn't operate as a secret society," said College of Engineering and Applied Sciences Sen. Pat Shirley, chairman of the committee.

A court battle between the regents and The Arizona Republic and Tribune Newspapers began May 30, when the board filed suit seeking a judgment that state public records laws do not require the disclosure of unedited resumes of ASU presidential candidates.

On Sept. 5, Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Elizabeth Stover ruled that the regents had to release the names of the 240 candidates for the ASU presidency and pay all the legal fees accumulated by the regents and the newspapers.

The court battle continued Sept. 9 when the regents decided to appeal the case.

ASU must pay 50 percent of the legal costs, which have been estimated at more than $200,000, under a proposal approved by the presidents of the three state universities. NAU and UofA must each pay 25 percent of the fees.

Tami Willingham, ASASU campus affairs vice president who drafted the resolution, said the regents should not delve into the universities' budgets.

However, the regents have said they do not have a budget set aside for legal fees.

"Then they need to go to the state," Willingham said.

If the board is not willing to pay the costs, each university should pay equally, she said.

"I feel very strongly about what I wrote," she said. "I feel although the decision (to nominate Lattie Coor as the University's 15th president) affected ASU, they (the regents) are the trustees of all three universities."

ASASU President Paul Larson agreed, in part. "I don't think any of us should pay anything," he said. "Eventually NAU and UofA will have to go through a search. That's the rationale behind the distribution."

However, Larson said he has not yet decided if he supports an equal payment plan.

"Making it 33 percent across the board would be better for ASU," he said. "But honestly I can't comment on this yet."

Willingham said the payment of the legal fees creates many unanswered questions.

Peck says enrollment cap possible

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
State Press

In the wake of a UofA proposal to limit enrollment of out-of-state students, ASU's interim president said such an enrollment cap is also a possibility for the Tempe campus.

Although ASU's enrollment did not substantially increase this fall, Interim President Richard Peck said capping out-of-state enrollment is possible if the student population begins rising again.

"(Limiting out-of-state enrollment) doesn't take away from Arizona residents because the (Arizona Board of) Regents says we have to accept students from Arizona high schools with a C-plus or better average," Peck said.

"We don't have to do that for out-of-state students."

But the University has not given serious thought yet to capping enrollment or raising admission standards for out-of-state students, Peck said, adding that out-of-state students add diversity to the campus and generate a lot of the University's revenue.

"Since the out-of-state students pay more for tuition, we would experience a loss of income (if enrollment was limited)," he said.

Of 43,426 students registered this fall at ASU, 9,696 of them are out-of-state students.

UofA has experienced a 5 percent enrollment increase this year, and its student population is currently at 35,499.

Officials at the Tucson campus have said that if the population reaches 38,000, the school will cap out-of-state enrollment.

UofA President Henry Koffler said last week that the cap is needed to bring the population to a manageable size, and if the growth continues the quality of education provided by the university will suffer.

Like the UofA, NAU has experienced a significant increase in enrollment by adding 1,003 additional students this fall, bringing the total student population to 16,062.

Steve Chambers, NAU associate director for institutional research and analysis, said his university is limited in terms of facilities and may also be forced to explore the possibility of an enrollment cap.

"The campus is only so large, and we can only accommodate so many people," he said, adding that something will have to be done if the population reaches an intolerable number.

Although Chambers could not comment on what that number is, he said capping enrollment may be necessary in the future.

"We've experienced a healthy growth at our institution," he said. "If the Legislature doesn't supply the resources necessary to deal with the growth, we will have to keep (the enrollment status) at its level."

Student Health Center fielding calls about white flies at ASU

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

The ASU Student Health Center has been receiving about six calls a day from students curious about the thousands of white bugs in the air, a campus health official said Tuesday.

"We get calls from people who were running and biking and getting them down their throats," said Chuck McDuffie, University health education coordinator. "They are wondering if they are dangerous."

McDuffie said the bugs do not pose a health threat.

Bemisia tabaci, commonly known as white flies, have descended in hordes upon ASU and the Valley. Entomologists, who are zoologists that deal with insects, suspect that the bugs are searching for food after defoliating nearby cotton fields.

"I'm seeing more flies than usual — certainly more than the 11 years I have been here," said Allen Boettcher, a horticulturist at the UofA Cooperative Extension Service in Phoenix.

Most students said the gnat-like insects are annoying and difficult to avoid.

"Friday morning I was riding my bike, and they were hitting me from all sides," said Juan Tarango, a senior political science major.

Jon Krause, a justice studies major, said, "I've noticed them in the past week, and they are just annoying as hell."

In addition to the irritation the bugs are causing, Boettcher said they can pose serious damage to vegetables and vine-type plants by sucking the juice out of the plants.

"The gardening public is quite aware of the little white flies," he said.

ASU ground maintenance crew members said no insecticide spraying has been done on campus to control the swarm of white flies.

"As far as I know, there is no pesticide available that will contain the white fly," said Bill Blaine, ASU supervisor of ground maintenance.

To reduce the white fly onslaught, Valley residents can paint a piece of wood yellow and cover it with petroleum jelly. The bugs will be attracted to the brightly colored wood, stick to it and eventually die.

But Boettcher said the white fly population will not drop dramatically until after the first winter freeze.

2 Americans killed in Philippines hours before Quayle arrives

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen believed to be Communist rebels ambushed and killed two American civilians working at a U. S. military base Tuesday, shortly before Vice President Dan Quayle arrived to discuss the future of U. S. military installations here.

The victims were employees of Ford Aerospace Corp., which contracts to maintain an electronic warfare training range at Camp O'Donnell. The camp is a U. S.-run facility about 50 miles north of Manila and 12 miles from the U. S. Clark Air Base.

Ford Aerospace spokesman Norman Black identified the victims as William H. Thompson, 45, and Donald G. Buchner, 44. He said both were retired from the U. S. Air Force. Their hometowns were not known.

Also Tuesday, gunmen killed a member of President Corazon Aquino's presidential guard, about a mile from where the president will meet with Quayle on Wednesday.

The attacks followed a series of bombings this month and came amid growing opposition to U. S. military installations in the Philippines.

The Americans slowed their car as they approached a dump truck and a jeep blocking a highway near Capas, 60 miles north of Manila, police said. Six men sprang from the jeep and riddled their car with gunfire, according to police Lt. Pepito Pimentel.

The assailants then opened the car door and pumped bullets into the victims, Pimentel said. The attack occurred about 5 p.m.

Col. Florentino Amorabon, a spokesman for the Philippine Constabulary in central Luzon island, said the assassins were believed to be members of the New Peoples Army, which operates in the area.

Soldiers get emotional welcome as Vietnam troops exit Cambodia

MOC BAI, Vietnam (AP) — Relatives rushed across the border from Cambodia on Tuesday to greet their sons, fathers and husbands returning from Vietnam's nearly 11-year-old war in the neighboring country.

Vietnam said the withdrawal marked the end of its military involvement in Cambodia, but guerrillas claim thousands of Vietnamese soldiers remain, wearing Cambodian uniforms.

Schoolchildren, peasants and city dwellers lined Highway 1, waving flags and tree branches at the thousands of passing troops in a government-orchestrated welcoming ceremony.

Vietnam had promised it would have all of its 26,000 troops out of Cambodia by Sept. 26, and the withdrawal sparked fears that Cambodia will slide into protracted civil war as government troops try to fight the three-party guerrilla coalition without Vietnamese help.

Traces of explosive reported found in wreckage of French jet

PARIS (AP) — Experts probing the explosion that destroyed a French DC-10 over Niger and killed all 171 people aboard believe they have found traces of the powerful explosive Semtex in the wreckage, two French dailies said Tuesday.

The newspapers Liberation and Le Parisien said the find strengthened the connection between the UTA airline crash and the Dec. 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

The UTA flight originated in Brazzaville, Congo, and blew up over a desert less than an hour after it took off for Paris on Sept. 19 following a stopover in N'Djamena, Chad.

Both newspaper accounts cited unidentified sources involved in the investigation and said laboratory tests in Paris still had to confirm the presence of Semtex, a malleable, hard-to-detect explosive made in Czechoslovakia.

Greek official assassinated; Marxist guerillas claim blame

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The spokesman of the leading political party was shot and killed Tuesday, and a Marxist guerrilla group claimed responsibility.

The killing of Pavlos Bakoyannis took place hours before Parliament was scheduled to debate the biggest bank scandal in the nation's history. The guerrilla group, called November 17, has accused Bakoyannis of having a role in the scandal.

Police said Bakoyannis was shot at least five times in the chest and stomach with a .45-caliber pistol from close range in the hallway of his downtown office.

The 54-year-old former journalist and magazine publisher was rushed to the Evangelismos hospital, where he died on the operating table, police said.

Bakoyannis was elected to the 300-member unicameral

Parliament in June. He was the spokesman for the conservative New Democracy party headed by his father-in-law, Constantine Mitsotakis.

November 17 claimed responsibility in a 11½-page proclamation scattered near the scene of the shooting.

The group first surfaced with the assassination of Athens CIA station chief Richard Welch in 1975. It also claimed responsibility for the killing in June 1988 of U. S. defense attache William E. Nordeen.

The group takes its name from the day in 1973 when students at the Athens Polytechnic Institute rose against the military dictatorship that ruled from 1967 until it collapsed in 1974.

It accused Bakoyannis, 54, of connections to a banker linked to a scandal that contributed to the defeat in June elections of the Socialist administration of former Premier Andreas Papandreou.

Bush pleased by Soviet response to chemical weapons proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today he was pleased by the Soviet Union's endorsement of a plan to slash stockpiles of chemical weapons and said the two superpowers had achieved "some good common ground."

House Speaker Thomas P. Foley called Bush's plan for U. S.-Soviet reductions "a good first step" but said it does not answer the question of how to control chemical weapons production by other countries.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, in a United Nations speech today, said Moscow will join the United States and "radically reduce or completely destroy" all its chemical weapons stockpiles.

He also challenged Bush to join the Soviet Union in stopping production of all chemical weapons, halting nuclear tests and stopping the manufacture of weapons-grade plutonium and uranium.

At the White House, Bush said, "I am very pleased with the way things are going. The reaction from the Soviets to our proposals yesterday has been positive so now the goal is to get moving and try to work out these agreements."

"But we've got some good common ground that I don't think we had before the foreign minister came here," the president said. "I know he's accurately reflecting Mr. Gorbachev's view."

The 'Voice' speaks

ASU's racial conflicts on display

Darrin Hostetler
Editor

The Sept. 26 issue of The Village Voice, New York City's weekly "alternative press," has a little surprise for the image-conscious ASU administration.

A very unpleasant surprise. The most recent Voice issue contains a massive story on last spring's racial problems at ASU, headlined "There's a Riot Going On: Racism 101 at Arizona State."

The story, termed "an anatomy of a campus race riot," gives a detailed account of the evening of April 14, when several black ASU students were assaulted on Alpha Drive, and more than 600 students, faculty and staff marched in protest of racial violence a few days later.

In a minute-by-minute account of that April night, pieced together from interviews with students at the scene, the Voice paints a damning picture of ASU police, the Arizona press, the greek system and the entire white population of the University.

The paper says the racial incidents on fraternity row rank "among the worst examples of racist riots on an American college campus in the last few years," and condemns the campus police for stonewalling and misleading Arizona newspapers, who were all too willing to buy the official line downplaying the seriousness of the incidents.

ASU fraternities are depicted as bastions of racism, populated by club-toting junior Klansmen, while none-too-subtle hints are dropped that white students at ASU are nothing but uncaring closet bigots, indifferent, if not openly hostile, to campus minorities.

To a university frantically pursuing a national reputation as an outstanding educational institution, the appearance of a story like this — in a nationally circulated publication, no less — is akin to Dan Rather announcing on the evening news that every ASU official, from interim President Peck on down, beats up on small children and old ladies in his spare time.

Maybe worse. You almost have to feel sorry for the people who draw paychecks for doing University public relations. Because this time, they have a crisis that not even the slickest PR mind can cope with. The word is out, on the national level, that ASU has the worst kind of social sickness — a racism problem — and it is a good bet that the future will bring only more embarrassing national attention.

This is indeed "bad press" for ASU, and it demonstrates that the scars from last spring are going to be a long time healing.

True, the Voice account of ASU's racial problems is one-sided and sensationalistic and goes out of its way to make all white members of the University community look like unreconstructed Confederates or modern-day white supremacists.

To those of us who know ASU students don't wear bedsheets and pointy hoods to class, that characterization seems tremendously unfair. The Voice story is flawed in its over-generalized portrayal of fraternity members and students as racists and its reliance on "facts" that haven't yet been proven to be anything of the sort.

But if you can wade through the hyperbole and the hysteria, what comes through is a powerful account, through the eyes of the threatened blacks, of a truly terrifying event.

And a devastating indictment of this University.

The story's author, Ron Ridenhour, graphically describes the mob of students chanting racial slurs, swarming around four black students, one of whom was "bruised, beaten, his shirt torn to shreds and ripped literally off his back, and rubbing his now-blind eyes (from police mace)." He tells how one of the blacks was handcuffed and stuffed in a patrol car, presumably for his own protection, while "several white students stood outside . . . knocking on the window and taunting him."

"Tap. Tap. Tap. Tap. 'Nigger! We know who you are! We're going to get you! Hey nigger!' Tap. Tap. Tap."

Powerful stuff. The violent incidents that rocked fraternity row happened, and they are not easily denied. The ugly image of students out on fraternity row yelling the word "nigger" and threatening to bash in the skulls of a group of blacks does not die easily.

Nor should it. The Voice story not only raises questions about the conduct of the ASU police (currently under investigation by the Justice Department), but about the kind of environment at ASU that would foster and allow such an event to take place.

What kind of place is this? The Voice wanted to know, and so will a great many others.

Combined with race-oriented attention focused on Arizona and the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday battle, the racial climate at ASU is ripe for further investigation and national reporting.

In other words, ASU has only begun to take its lumps in the national press.

The Voice has spoken. Now get ready for the chorus.

Equal opportunity for all

Editor:

Since I arrived at ASU as a transfer student, I haven't seen much of a break in the talk about minority issues. After reading all the articles involving minority issues, I started to wonder what being a minority is like. They have always been the victims of condescending attitudes from the "majority," while poor opportunity, less pay, forced segregation and possibly racial attacks historically have come along with it. Now there are things like employment quotas requiring percentages of minorities and women to be hired regardless of who does or doesn't apply and incentives or higher pay to attract the people needed to fill those quotas. There is also the talk about minority recruitment, retention, help plans, exclusive lounges and the misconduct of police or governors when they are courting through minority/racial issues. It would seem that minority issues are finally getting the attention they deserve. Can they make up for the problems by tipping the scale in favor of minorities? Will it eliminate racial tension by recruiting minorities in order to make integration "visually" apparent? The condescending view of helping "them" adjust to "our" world here at ASU and maybe giving them their own lounges promotes integration fully. Yes? No.

As I wander towards class staring at all the blank expressions hidden behind dark sunglasses, I start to think about that 44-45 thousand students number. It can make me feel lost and underprivileged, perhaps like being a minority on campus except that I am excluded from any benefits that would befall me if I were. Ironically, now that I feel alien and am excluded from those certain privileges, I get a little taste of being a minority. From this viewpoint it is obvious that minority and racial issues cannot be adequately dealt with solely through policies and laws. Showing favoritism towards any race is still racism, and integration is only partially effective if any one race of people encourages or allows a segregated area for themselves or others. Enlightened good judgment must prevail to provide an equal opportunity for all.

Gun bans racist?

Editor:

Upon reviewing an "NRA Facts Guide," I discovered a startling revelation. I call it "The Willy Horton Factor."

The strictest denial of Second Amendment rights is in areas with large concentrations of blacks; and, likewise, large concentrations of blacks are subject to denial of their Second Amendment rights.

This got me thinking: is the lily-white liberals' agenda to "save blacks from themselves" really masking a deep-seated fear of a fully enfranchised and autonomous black population? We have four amendments to ensure blacks their due rights, and such blatant and dogmatic resistance to grant blacks their freedom due under this one amendment at least warrants further inquiry.

I believe it has something to do with why we disarmed Japan after World War II. (Interestingly, we rearmed Germany — we also interned Japanese and did not intern Germans. Surely this has nothing to do with race?)

We disarmed Japan because the American constituency felt fear. Fear that Japan could not be trusted as a full equal with arms because they would be a threat.

Do the so-called "good people of America" feel that an armed black populace couldn't be trusted and would be a threat? George Bush's victory says yes.

Drugs

'Word-warriors' know nothing about real issues

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

John is a white Chicago cop. He doesn't want his full name used because what he had to say might not please his superiors, although many probably agree with him.

"I'm a sergeant and I've worked on the West Side by choice most of my career. So I know something about the problem of drugs. I think I know more about it than some of the people who do a lot of talking about winning the drug war and make the laws and set our national policies, but have never been on the street where everything is happening.

"For years I've been advocating, mostly to my friends, the legalization of drugs and using the billions we'd save from trying to fight the import and sales to cure those who want to be cured.

"The way things go now, the courts will sentence drug offenders and people who steal to get drug money to rehabilitation as a condition of probation.

"But what happens when they want to go straight and can't get into a program for six months, which is very common? I'll tell you what. They go right back to their friends and habits. So instead of spending all those billions pretending you're doing something, some of the money could be used for rehab, some of it for ad campaigns not to use it, the way it's done with cigarettes and liquor.

"We'd still have laws against the sale to minors. You know, it pains me to see how rich drug laws have made punks and white collar opportunists. But once the profits aren't there, the punks and the others are out of business.

"On the West Side, kids used to complain that we stopped them because they were black and driving a new cadillac. That was true. Most often the car was stolen and we had to chase them.

"But now, that's changed. Now the cars belong to them and they've paid cash. And some of them aren't even old enough to drive.

"Those of us in law enforcement look like fools trying to fight a battle we can't win. And that just breeds contempt from law and order.

"You know, even if we were able to stop the coke from Colombia and Peru, it wouldn't change things. It would come in from somewhere else. And if we stopped that, it still wouldn't change because now they can make this synthetic stuff right here. They're doing it already.

"The problem is the demand. And the only thing for sure is that where there is demand, it will be satisfied. That's a basic market principle, and that's why all the arguments against legalizing and controlling drugs are nonsense.

"I'll tell you what the biggest change in the last four or five years has been. It's the drug dealers themselves.

"Now we have 13-year-old dealers who make more than me. They go out and sell, then they give some money to Mom, who maybe lives in Chicago Housing Authority or some dump. She needs it to make ends meet.

"How can President Bush fault someone who lives in a drafty apartment and is want for food and has no chance for a decent education or a job for selling drugs?

"How are you going to convince the kids to get back to school so they can be a factory worker, or get a low-paying job in a fast food place, or be unemployed, when they can sell drugs for big money?

"Then they're going to have kids and they won't be able to steer them away from drugs or get them to go to school because they can't lead by example. If you're going to have values and morals, they have to come by example. And that's why we have all the usual violence out there, the disregard for life and death.

"The way we're going at this thing reminds me of Vietnam. A quagmire. Lives lost, then we pack up and leave.

"One of the reasons we study history is to learn from our own mistakes. Well, it looks like we didn't learn anything from Prohibition.

"I keep reading that every poll shows that most people are against any kind of legalizing of drugs.

"You know what that tells me? It tells me that most people who get polled don't know what the hell is going on out here."

That's one cop's opinion. But I suspect it is also the opinion of thousands of other cops in Chicago, New York, Los Angeles and in most cities where the problems are the same.

Since they're the ones who are actually fighting this no-win war, I respect their opinions more than the word-warriors in Washington who have never been any closer to Chicago's West Side, or New York's Bronx, or Los Angeles' Watts than their TV sets can get them.

University assists athletic department by adding extra tutors

By LAURA SCHMIDT
State Press

The demand for more help in the ASU athletic department tutorial program has prompted the University to hire 15 more tutors and possibly seek the assistance of a computer program.

Phil Moses, a University academic counselor, said a new computer program will help athletes complete their work more efficiently because their study hours are limited.

"They practice 25 hours a week — they don't have the type of schedule that a normal student has," he said.

Jill DeMichele, assistant athletic director for academic student services, said six MacIntosh computers have been donated by Apple.

"We are looking into some programs using computers for assisting with word processing," she said.

Last year about 250 of the 600 ASU athletes used the tutorial program for at least one class, DeMichele said. She added that tutors are needed for upper-division courses such as aerospace engineering and biology in addition to basic math and English classes.

Don Robinson, ASU men's gymnastic coach, said if members of his team earn lower than a C, they are required to attend weekly study sessions.

"If they have a problem, they get a tutor," he said.

The sixth floor of the Intercollegiate Athletic Complex will house the computers along with the existing study sessions, DeMichele said. The tutorial program costs about $115,000 every year and is funded by the athletic department, she added.

Moses said a price tag for the new computer program has not been set and that it will depend on the training and software expenses.

Moses said that out of about 50 tutors in the athletic department, 15 upper-division tutors were hired 2½ weeks ago.

DeMichele said all of the tutors are part-time and are available to assist all athletes during designated hours Monday through Thursday. Tutoring sessions are held in four study hall rooms in the IAC.

DeMichele said freshman athletes are required to attend eight to 10 hours of study-hall sessions every week. She said individual coaches may decide if a required tutor is necessary.

"We really suggest it for freshman to get a tutor," she said.

Mike Kelly, an ASU sophomore business major and baseball player, said he likes the tutoring program because it supplies class information when he is at away games.

"There are times when you can't go to class," he said.

Harold Smith, an ASU freshman accounting major and football player, said his three tutors help him make time for homework.

"They set aside certain hours of the day for you to study," he said.

DeMichele said there are two incentive programs for the athletes to maintain good grades. In the post eligibility program, if student athletes finish their athletic career but are within 36 hours of graduation, the athletic department will pay for their remaining education at ASU.

Graduating student athletes involved in the post eligibility program have risen from 62 percent to 95 percent during the last two years, DeMichele said.

Public television to broadcast 2 programs concerning AIDS

KAET-TV, Channel 8, will televise today two special programs dealing with acquired immune deficiency syndrome and its impact on the nation and the state. "AIDS Quarterly" will air from 7:30 to 8:30 tonight. This program will address the impact of the disease. "Arizona AIDS Update," which will run from 8:30 p.m. until 9 today, will update viewers on AIDS issues for the state of Arizona.

ASU campus groups may request educational materials or special educational presentations on AIDS/HIV infection by calling the Student Health Center at 965-4721 or the National Women and AIDS Risk Network Project at 256-WARN.

Sessions to teach students to relax, deal with stress

A stress management program sponsored by the Student Health Center and the Recreation Complex meets each Monday and Wednesday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. for the remainder of the fall semester. Sessions will meet in Small Gym A on the second floor of the recreation complex. Each session includes information on stress and relaxation. Students should wear loose, comfortable clothing and bring a towel. For more information, call Chuck at 965-4721.

Health Center offers advice, analysis on diet, nutrition

The Student Health Center invites you to visit the Wellness Center in the Student Recreation Complex on Thursdays from 1 to 7 p.m. for walk-in dietary analysis and nutritional consultations. A computerized dietary assessment program called NU-DEAL is used to help students and staff evaluate their current eating habits. A nutritionist will be in the facility to provide dietary consultation to interested participants. For more information, call 965-4721. Compiled by State Press reporter Sonja Lewis

'Veggie' yuppies are big business

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

The attitudes of the go-getting, health-conscious, pacesetter "yuppies" are partially the reason behind the increased business at Tempe vegetarian and diet shops.

"Business is really good," said Lora Geil, an employee at the In Season Deli in downtown Tempe, which specializes in vegetarian tamales and pastas. "Yuppies are our main source of income."

'Yuppie' is a term referring to the young, upwardly mobile adults with an above-average income.

Geil said vegetarianism has become "trendy," but some people resort to vegetarian diets because of their belief in animal rights.

Karen Moses, the nutritionist at the ASU Health Center, said vegetarians are healthier and have fewer illnesses.

However, vegetarians should make sure they get enough amino acids in their diet, she said. Amino acids are the basic chemicals from which proteins are made and are essential for a body to function properly.

"A vegetarian's lifestyle is harder," Moses said. "You can't eat convenience foods and be a vegetarian."

The nutritionist said that generally vegetarianism does not fit into the American lifestyle, which is built on the convenience of fast food.

"McDonald's doesn't have much to offer a vegetarian," Moses said.

But there are alternatives, Gregory said. The Gentle Strength Co-op, west of Mill Avenue on University Drive, sells organic vegetables and other health products. Anyone can become a member of the co-op and receive food at discounted prices. Non-members pay a higher price.

Lare Clark, who is in charge of membership and marketing at the co-op, said sales have increased 15 percent since last year, and student customers are common because of the store's proximity to campus.

Ed Moore, membership coordinator at Gentle Strength, estimated between 200 and 250 students per day enter the shop.

Moses and employees in the Tempe health food shops agreed that a vegetarian lifestyle is generally more expensive because vegetarians do not have as many cheap and convenient foods to eat.

Geil said, "It can get expensive; but to those who believe in that way of life, they have no other choice."

But Clark said some foods cost more because consumers are paying for higher quality.

"If you eat things that are bad for you, you are going to have to pay in another way," he said.

'A vegetarian's lifestyle is harder. You can't eat convenience foods and be a vegetarian'
—Karen Moses

Gregory, an art major and ASU student, who would not give his last name for professional reasons, said he is a "vegan" vegetarian — a vegetarian who not only abstains from meat but from dairy products also.

"I follow the diet I do because milk from a cow is for cows, and a dead animal is for creatures of the night," he said.

Gregory said he is a vegetarian for ethical and moral reasons as well as health reasons.

"One misconception is that it's so necessary to have all that protein from meat to stay alive and healthy," he said, adding that his diet consists of fruits, vegetables, nuts and beans.

Senate

"It's unbelievable to me," she said. "Where is that money coming from? What could that money have been used for?" ASU officials have said the money would come from interest earned from various University funds.

In addition, Willingham said she does not know who should investigate the selection process for the state.

"No one knew who should look into it," she said. "Ultimately, they (the regents) are responsible to the state. If there are any inequities or the Board of Regents acts in poor judgment, then it should be looked into by the state."

Diane Eddy, a senator for the ASU College of Nursing, said it is time for the lawsuit to be laid to rest.

"I think it (the resolution) is a good idea," she said. "It (the lawsuit) has cost us a lot of money. We need to move on."

The resolution states that the regents' appeal could last up to two years and that "the ASASU Senate call upon the state of Arizona to meet their obligation to us as citizens and students with a full investigation of the presidential selection process which has occurred."

Larson, who expressed his concern about the regents' appeal during the September board meeting in Flagstaff, said he supports an investigation into the selection process.

"We want everyone to know how the search was conducted (by way of an investigation)," he said.

However, Willingham said she does not know if the regents will take the resolution seriously.

"If they won't, they are not listening to the students," she said. "My main concern is that they understand our point of view."

Carlos Fuentes' Residency Inaugurates Centennial Lecture Series

Carlos Fuentes, Mexico's leading novelist as well as an internationally renowned critic and diplomat, will be in residence at Arizona State University's Honors College from Sept. 24 to Sept. 29 as the University's first Centennial Lecturer. Endowed by the Flinn Foundation, the Centennial Lecture Series is a new program organized by the University Honors College for the Office of the President.

Described by the New York Times as a "citizen of the world," Fuentes is one of the most celebrated writers in Spanish. He has won virtually every major literary prize in that language, including the Biblioteca Breve Prize (Spain, 1967); the Romulo Gallegos Prize (Venezuela, 1978); the National Prize in Literature, Mexico's highest literary award (given by President Miguel de la Madrid in 1984); and the Miguel de Cervantes Prize, Spain's highest literary award (given with a $90,000 honorarium by King Juan Carlos in 1988).

Nine of Fuentes' novels have been translated into English and published in the U.S. The Old Gringo was a national best seller in 1985 and has since been made into a film starring Jane Fonda, Gregory Peck, and Jimmy Smits. Other Fuentes' novels include: The Death of Artemio Cruz, The Good Conscious, A Change of Skin, Aura, Terra Nostra, The Hydra Head, Distance Relations, and most recently Christopher-Unborn.

Lecture series: ASU profs reveal perspective on life

By MICHELLE HENRY
State Press

What would you say to a group of students if you knew you were going to die at 6 p.m. tonight?

That was the question posed to ASU English professor G. Lynn Nelson, who kicked off the Last Lecture Series Tuesday afternoon in the MU.

About 15 students attended the first lecture in the series that offers a chance to hear ASU professors speak about their personal experiences — a departure from the classroom setting.

The lectures, which will be held twice a month, are sponsored by several campus ministry organizations. The Rev. Richard Pike of the United Campus Christian Ministry introduced the idea to ASU after its success on other campuses across the country.

Each speaker chooses a topic based on the assumption that their life will end soon.

Nelson, who described himself as an "introverted farm boy from Nebraska," said he was comfortable doing the lecture because he liked the idea of speaking directly with students about personal issues.

In the lecture, which was titled "Why didn't they tell me?" he questioned what he called the "illusion of life."

"I grew up thinking somebody knows what's going on (in the world)," he said, adding that he wishes someone would have told him that it was all right not to know everything.

Nelson said he did not understand as a child how his alcoholic father could know so little about what was happening to him and his family.

In addition, Nelson said he hated carrying the burden of male stereotypes throughout his life, such as being afraid to cry. Nelson said the lecture series allows him to speak from the heart. He said much of what was taught to him in his life was not true and now much of his life has been spent "unlearning" those things.

Nelson, who spoke mainly on subjects that related to his childhood, said he hopes the lectures help both students and professors become closer.

"That is why I shared stories of my own struggles," he said.

He said students should write personal journals on the meaningful events in their lives because it helps put their lives into focus.

Students who attended the lecture said they have tried Nelson's philosophy of writing journals.

Ivan Lacore, an unclassified graduate student who has taken several of Nelson's courses, said each time he hears the professor's stories, it reinforces his desire to learn more about himself.

"He's taught me to write my feelings down," he said.

Allison Taylor, a sophomore architecture major, said the lecture was valuable to her.

"It is an unusual pleasure to hear a professor talk about something other than the classroom," she said. "Students have to realize professors have feelings, views and a life outside the classroom. It is easy to fall into the perception that professors live in the classroom."

At the end of the lecture, Nelson warned students about the dangers of the real world.

"We are right in the middle of this madness," he said. "You can learn lots of facts here at ASU, but the real stuff you have to learn yourself."

Tempe's 3rd yearly Bed Race to benefit Valley United Way

By KELLY JAIN
State Press

It's the pillow-talk of the town. The third annual Bed Race will be held in downtown Tempe Oct. 11, bringing together box-spring hot-rodgers from all over the Valley, including ASU. Their efforts will benefit the 1989 Valley of the Sun United Way campaign.

The souped-up sleepers will line up at 3:30 p.m. in the parking lot of Centerpointe Plaza on the corner of Mill Avenue and University Drive, said Ann Johnston, ASU relations assistant.

The teams will involve four members pushing the bed while one is riding it, Johnston said.

The race is designed to help ASU students get involved in the University's campaign for the United Way, said Steve Patterson, ASU's director of community relations.

"There really was no outreach to students last year," Patterson said.

Any student organization, residence hall council, faculty group, sorority or fraternity can enter as many teams as they wish, provided each team pays the $200 entry fee, Johnston said. Local businesses also may sponsor teams, she added.

All proceeds of the entry fees will go to the Valley of the Sun United Way, Johnston said.

Race coordinators said they would like for teams to enter the race by Friday. Teams are encouraged to decorate their beds and wear uniforms, Johnston said.

In addition, prizes for best outfits and best theme will be awarded, race coordinators said.

The race will resemble a drag race, Patterson said. Teams will compete in pairs and the loser of each heat will be eliminated.

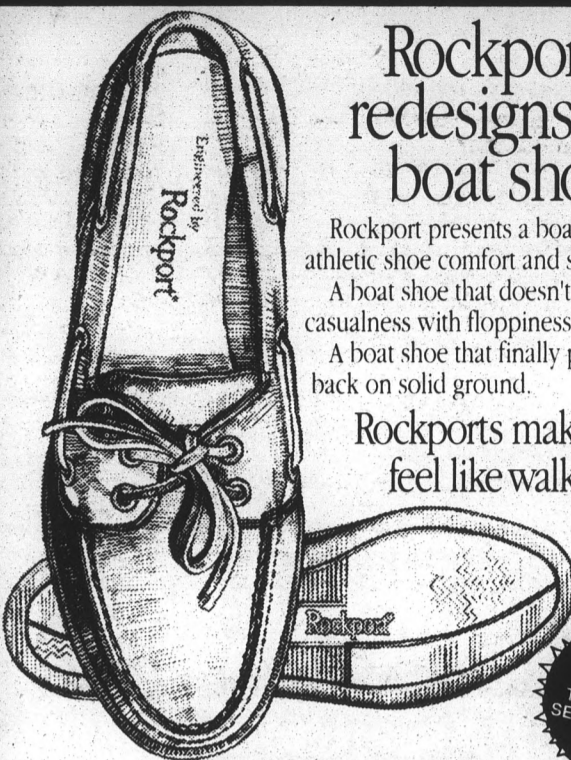

Patterson said the winning team of each division will receive a trophy and participate in ASU's homecoming parade. He said all registered teams will be entered in a Firebird-sponsored raffle for a trip to Pomona, Calif., and two team members will receive an all-expense paid trip to Firebird's winter nationals.

Patterson said anyone can participate in a Castrol-sponsored raffle offering a 1989 Oldsmobile as first prize. Second prize is $1,000 cash, third prize is $500 and fourth prize is $250. Tickets are $25.

Raffle tickets will be sold today through Friday at the booth under the MU clock, Patterson said, adding that teams can raise money for their entry fee by selling raffle tickets. The car will be displayed near the booth today through Friday, he said.

Educators: Schools raid faculty to add Hispanics

PHOENIX (AP) — Educators say U. S. colleges and universities try to add Hispanics to their faculty, but they're doing it by raiding each other.

And that's exactly the wrong approach, according to educators who gathered for the annual meeting of the Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities.

Instead, the participants agreed, institutions need to expand the number of Hispanic graduate students to then increase the pool from which to draw professors and, ultimately, administrators.

"The response, by and large, has been, 'Let's raid everyone else,'" said Antonio Rigual, the association's executive director. "What has not happened is to look at how it is we can make a difference in the next five or 10 years in terms of the pool of Hispanics

'Your average Hispanic student doesn't understand what graduate school is all about.'

— Gary Keller

with doctorates."

Efforts are being made to increase the pool of Hispanic graduate students, and one of the them which was highlighted at the conference is an 18-month-old initiative at Arizona State University's Hispanic Research Center.

That initiative, called Project 1000, tries to help Hispanic students snare openings in graduate programs nationwide by leading them through the application process and helping them obtain financial aid.

Gary Keller, the project's executive director, said he expects to meet this year's goal of helping 200 students gain admission to graduate school.

Hispanic students often fall prey to exaggerated fears of the difficulty of getting admitted and of obtaining aid. The project helps dispel those myths, according to Keller.

"Your average Hispanic student doesn't understand what graduate school is all about," Keller said.

Keller said faculty members need to do more counseling of Hispanic students while they are undergraduates. "They're isolated, they're alienated, and they need somebody they can talk to," he said.

The association's three-day meeting ended Tuesday. The association is a non-profit group based in San Antonio whose members are largely colleges and universities where Hispanic enrollment is at least 25 percent of the total.

Tempe Police Report

Tempe police reported the following incidents that occurred between 7 a.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday:

- A 15-year-old high school student died Monday afternoon during football practice at Corona Del Sol High School, 1001 E. Knox Road, from inflammation of a heart muscle. Christopher Cochran, 1313 E. Krista Way, was taken to Chandler Regional Hospital by ambulance after losing consciousness during a water break. He was pronounced dead at 5:11 p.m.

Cochran had a history of asthma and mononucleosis and received doctor approval to play football just a few hours earlier.

The inflammation probably was caused by a virus, doctors said.

- An 18-year-old man was arrested for aggravated assault after he allegedly pulled out a pocket knife while fighting with several people in a parking lot at 2141 E. University Drive.
- A man was arrested for aggravated assault after he allegedly bit two police officers while they were trying to arrest him for a previous assault incident.

- A 19-year-old man reported receiving 12 threatening phone calls from another man he met over The Party Line.

NAU prof, his wife killed; their son held on 2 murder counts

FLAGSTAFF (AP) — The bodies of a Northern Arizona University professor and his wife, apparently both stabbed to death, were found Tuesday in their home, and police later arrested the couple's 20-year-old son.

The university identified the victims as Larry and Barbara Gardner. Gardner, 52, was a 25-year member of the faculty of NAU's College of Business Administration. Mrs. Gardner, 48, was a nurse for Planned Parenthood in Flagstaff.

Booked into the Coconino County Jail for investigation of homicide was their son, Paul Edwin Gardner.

Sgt. Pascual Macias, a police spokesman, said the couples' son was booked after being questioned by a detective. Macias declined comment when asked if Paul Gardner gave police a statement.

The son appeared Tuesday afternoon before Justice of the Peace James Sedillo, who ordered him held without bond on two counts of first-degree murder. Sedillo also ordered Paul Gardner be held in lieu of $274,000 bond on two counts of aggravated assault. Those counts allege that the son assaulted his parents before allegedly killing them.

Further proceedings in the case either would involve a grand jury issuing indictment against the younger Gardner or a judge holding a preliminary hearing to determine whether to bind him over for trial on a complaint filed by prosecutors.

Macias said the Gardners suffered multiple stab wounds and apparently had been dead about an hour when the bodies were found.

Officers were dispatched to the Gardner residence after getting a call about 4 a.m. from personnel at Flagstaff Medical Center.

Macias said the son had gone to the hospital to seek treatment of superficial lacerations on his hands and arms. The son told hospital employees he had been attacked and that he had found his parents dead in their home, police said.

When police arrived at the home, they found Mrs. Gardner dead in bed. Her husband's body was found sprawled on the floor of a den in the rear of the home.

The younger Gardner had been sharing an apartment with friends, but there also were reports he had returned to live in his parents' home in recent days, Macias said. The son was employed as a cook at a Flagstaff restaurant, the spokesman said.

Macias said police had been called to the Gardner home approximately two weeks ago to investigate a reported burglary. There was no sign of forcible entry at the house at that time, he said.

NAU President Eugene M. Hughes expressed shock and sadness at the death of Gardner, who received an outstanding faculty award in 1986.

Bush: Troubled schools need change

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Tuesday he hopes his two-day education summit with the nation's governors this week will produce ways to "dramatically change things" in America's troubled schools.

"We've got to see what it is we're doing wrong, how can we be more accountable," Bush told reporters after hearing business leaders complain about the problems that poorly educated students cause in the workplace.

Bush will travel by helicopter to Charlottesville, Va., on Wednesday afternoon for an education summit with the governors on the University of Virginia campus.

It will be only the third such presidential convocation of governors in history and the first since President Franklin D. Roosevelt summoned governors more than half a century ago for their advice on coping with the Great Depression.

Even before the governors gathered at Thomas Jefferson's "academical village," educators and politicians were expressing hope that the summit would give new impetus to a school reform movement that has shown signs of floundering.

White House officials and leaders of the National Governors' Association have said the meeting's top priority will be to lay the groundwork for the first set of national performance goals for the schools.

Bush, who promised in last year's election campaign to become "the education president," said, "I think we're going to come together with the governors on major objectives for this country in terms of education, something that's never been done before."

He said he has his ideas for changes but was keeping them private. "I'm going down there to listen and work with the governors, not try to impose an agenda from here," he said.

"I want to see us come up with some suggestions that will dramatically change things," Bush said. "I was just reminded by a group of business leaders that, on a per capita basis, we spent far more than Germany, far more than Japan, and yet we're not achieving the way they are."

"We've got to see what it is we're doing wrong, how can we be more accountable," he said. "It's in those areas of goals, national goals, but coming up through the governors, that I think we can make a real contribution."

John F. Akers, chairman of International Business Machines Corp. who led a Business Roundtable delegation of corporate executives who met with Bush, scoffed at the notion that America's $353 billion education system suffers from a lack of money.

"There's twice as much money per student than is available in Japan, and the Japanese are beating our brains out," Akers said.

George Bush, who says he wants to be the "education president," will meet today with state governors to discuss national performance goals for the nation's schools.

"It's not a money problem," he said. "It's a management and an execution problem."

The Business Roundtable executives, including the chairmen of Xerox, Du Pont, Bell South, K-Mart, Procter & Gamble, Alcoa and Union Carbide, pledged that they and other leaders of the 200 major companies would get personally involved with school improvement efforts in their home states.

"We're not getting (enough) educated people to fill the jobs ... of importance to American industry," Akers said.

David Kearns, the Xerox chairman, said, "We don't yet have any momentum in the country for real, structural change" in the schools.

He said the summit could "draw the governors and the administration into a coalition to really drive this."

Kearns said that among needed changes are increased authority for teachers and principals to "run the schools the way they need to, not the educational bureaucracy."

Also, he said, "we need Head Start for everybody." The $1.1 billion preschool development program for poor children now reaches fewer than 20 percent of those eligible.

While Bush supports Head Start, he has sought to dampen educators' hopes that any major new commitment of federal funds will flow from the education summit.

Education summit lauded, but reforms not expected

By College Press Service

The school reform movement promises to reach some kind of new plateau today and Thursday when President Bush sits down with 50 governors at the University of Virginia to conduct his long-awaited "education summit."

Colleges and college students, however, probably won't occupy more than 20 to 30 percent of the summiters' time, some observers predict.

Moreover, even in an era of accelerating tuition hikes, a flight of good faculty members into private enterprise, deteriorating student housing and living conditions and a general federal retreat from funding colleges, few observers have very high expectations for big higher education reforms coming out of the meeting.

"I don't know what to think," said Tom Brice, student government president at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks. "I haven't heard much about it."

Those who have heard about it think money is the answer to fixing whatever is wrong with American colleges.

"If Bush really wants to be the 'education president,' let's have him put his money where his mouth is," said Julianne Marley, president of the U. S. Student Association, the student presidents' lobbying group in Washington, D. C.

"It's not enough to have 51 creative people sit around and talk about education," agreed David Imig, president of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education in Washington, D. C. "If the president assumes we can find money for improvements from elsewhere, that presents some very interesting problems."

"It cannot simply be leadership at the national level," added Richard Rosser, president of the 830-campus National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, based in Washington, D. C.

The summit itself grew out of a Bush campaign promise to be "the education president." The president invited the governors to Virginia "to help develop a set of realistic goals for the nation in education," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

But by doing so, he'll have to "assume some personal responsibility for the future of the quality of education," said Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton at a mid-September National Governors Association meeting.

"There's quite a bit of agreement the federal government should play a strong role," observed Chris Pippo of the Education Commission of the United States.

The Usual Suspects

Chant against crack

ON MONDAY IN SAN FRANCISCO actor Lou Gossett Jr. joined black religious leaders and about 1,000 chanting marchers to rally against crack cocaine and drug-related killings.

"If we do dope and kill one another, we don't have a reason to be mad at anybody but ourselves," Gossett said outside City Hall. "There are jails . . . being readied for you to go in," he suggested to a group of teen-agers in the front row of the crowd.

"What we have here today is a group of religious people who are saying, 'We're tired.'" said organizer Rev. Martin Grizzell, a minister with the San Francisco Christian Center. Grizzell is a one of 60 religious and community leaders who helped to form the Committee for Community Healing, a city-wide organization to fight crack use.

Wilder art

THE DIRECTOR OF "The Apartment" is ridding his apartment of art work. Pieces from Billy Wilder's art collection will be auctioned by Christie's in New York on Nov. 13.

It seems everything must go. Bidders can grab a Picasso for around $5 million to $7 million or works of Miro or Balthus for a bargain-basement price of only $1.5 million to $2 million.

Wilder, 83, says that he's selling the collection because he can "no longer add to them. All of the sudden the prices of the art I like have a number of zeros added to them."

"The insurance got too high," said Wilder's wife, Audrey. "I don't worry about theft, but I was concerned about fire. We lost a lot of good things in a fire in Billy's office at Goldwyn Studios."

Several of the director's friends were invited to a preview of the auction at the Beverly Hills Hotel, including Cesar (the original Joker) Romero and Vincent Price.

"Marvelous!" Price said of the exhibit. "I just wish I could afford them."

Love, Japanese style

THE IMPERIAL HOUSEHOLD AGENCY of Japan has announced that Prince Aya will marry in June. The prince left Tuesday to resume graduate studies in zoology at Oxford University in England.

The 23-year-old prince is the second son of Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko and is second in line to the throne, after his brother, Crown Prince Naruhito.

The 10-member Imperial Household Council (what, chambermaid, butler, chauffeur, I guess) unanimously approved the engagement of Prince Aya and Miss Kiko Kawashima on Sept. 12. The couple first met four years ago at Gakushuin University in Tokyo.

Kawashima is the daughter of a Gakushuin professor and is studying psychology at the university.

The wedding was postponed until after January, which marks the end of a one-year mourning period for Aya's grandfather, Emperor Hirohito, who died earlier this year after a 62-year reign.

Word processor war

IT'S A WAR. Edie Adams is in a vicious battle with her word processor.

"That machine and I are mortal enemies," said the woman who became famous for the Muriel cigar company ad in which she tempted, "Why don't you pick one up and smoke it sometime?"

Adams, the 60-year-old widow of pioneering TV comedian Ernie Kovacs, is now working on her autobiography in which she plans to divulge the secrets of her successes and failures, as soon as she can figure out how to use her word processor.

Adams said she was forced to work in 1962 when her husband died in a car crash and left her with $500,000 in debts. She's a millionaire now, though, thanks to her 20-year stint as the Muriel cigar model — and that sexy line about smoking sometime.

Carlos Fuentes is light during dark times

By SCOTT SECKEL
State Press

An attempt to close the gaps of perception between his native land and its northern neighbor is how Mexican ex-diplomat and novelist Carlos Fuentes defines his mission on his first visit to Arizona.

"I'm trying to convey the sense of crisis and creativity occurring in Latin America at the same time," said Fuentes, 1988 winner of Spain's Miguel de Cervantes Prize and acclaimed as Mexico's foremost author.

"It is dramatic because (Mexicans) are searching for democratic light at a moment when we are going through a deep economic crisis."

Fuentes is at ASU this week to inaugurate the Centennial Lecture series, which is being sponsored by the University's Honors College. The Flinn Foundation is paying Fuentes $40,000 plus expenses for this week's readings, receptions and lecture, according to Ted Humphrey, director of the honors program. Humphrey said that Fuentes' normal fee for one lecture is $14,000 plus expenses.

During a press conference Monday, Fuentes discussed his writing, the expanding international consciousness and drugs, among other topics.

Once Mexico's ambassador to France, Fuentes announced that he is putting away the diplomatic bag to give full attention to his art — his casual jeans and white cotton guayabera shirt reflect on his career choice — saying, "many people can (be diplomats) and only I can write my books."

The 1984 winner of Mexico's National Prize in Literature said that he writes from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. every day.

Nine of Fuentes' novels have been published in English, as well as a collection of short stories and a recently-published book of essays titled "Myself With Others." His latest novel is "Christopher Unborn," a worst-case scenario set in the Mexico of the near future.

On the variety of his novels, Fuentes characterizes his voice as a protean one and that he hates following successes with repeats, preferring literary experimentation. "Every book is like a bottle with a message inside," he said.

He said that the role of the United States in Latin American affairs is not as important like it was in the past because now there are different power centers in the world. Fuentes, answering questions rapidly and without hesitation, named Argentina as an example, pointing out that its principal trading partner is the Soviet Union.

According to the author, international ties shouldn't simply be limited to economic spheres. "When you have the chance of having a bilingual or plurilingual society, I think it is a great advantage and should not be sacrificed." Fuentes, who speaks English like a native, predicts a new world order in the 21st century where no single culture will have a monopoly on ideas, culture or language.

He practices what he preaches; Fuentes said that he gives lectures and interviews in English, writes strictly in Spanish, and uses French "to write thank-you notes." His dreams, however, are solely in Spanish.

Immigration and trade are not the only things that bind the Americas today, Fuentes said. The drug problem is not new, he said; it has been with mankind since the beginning.

"I have been in drug-consuming ceremonies in Mexico with the Indians and it's another thing than taking (drugs) in a middle-class apartment in Mexico City where it has no meaning."

Fuentes said possible solutions to the drug frenzy is legalizing drugs and treating drug problems the same way alcoholism is treated. He also said that the inner-city poor in America need help with their problems.

"You can declare drug wars in Colombia but it's another thing to declare war on your own people in the inner cities of the U. S."

Of 'Devices and Desires'

By RICHARD A. VIGIL
State Press

The premiere of a new major work by an ASU faculty member and the debut of two new conductors will highlight the ASU Symphony Orchestra and Concert Choir's season-opening concert tonight.

"Devices and Desires," a new major work by ASU composing faculty member Randall Shinn, will be premiered at the concert. The piece was commissioned by the College of Fine Arts to commemorate the opening of the new J. Russell and Bonita Nelson Fine Arts Complex and the 25th anniversary of Gammage Auditorium.

Also debuting are Henry Charles Smith, the new ASU Symphony conductor, and Donald Bailey, the new director of choirs.

Shinn describes his piece as a "celebration of existence."

"It's a celebration of love, in a sense," Shinn said. "The text is not truly erotic but it approaches it at times."

Some of the text of the work is taken from 17th century poet Robert Herrick. Herrick, who was an ordained Anglican priest, wrote poems of praise for his imaginary mistress. Other text is taken from the Anglican Book of Common Prayer.

"What makes for some extra interest in the work is the juxtaposition of (Herrick's poems) with the church text," Shinn said.

The 35-minute, five-movement piece is not the first major work Shinn has composed, but he said he is very excited about the premiere.

"I've been to a lot of the rehearsals," he said. "It's been so exciting how well it's going. I haven't been sleeping well thinking about it."

Shinn's works, including other major works for orchestras with choir and operas, have been performed by Phoenix Symphony, the Flagstaff Symphony, the ASU orchestra and ASU's Lyric Opera Theater.

The orchestra also will perform Nicolas Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade" at the concert.

The show starts at 7:30 at Gammage Auditorium. Admission is free and there will be a free reception after the show in the lobby of the auditorium.

Popsters with a cause, Camper Van Beethoven.

In defense of 'Key Lime Pie,' surfing and social karma

It's Camper Van Beethoven and the meaning of life, music

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

When quirky popsters Camper Van Beethoven were invited to perform at Arizona's largest alternative music fest, they were hesitant to sign on.

After some thought, however, the band concluded that performing at the fest would be in keeping with the band's latest image.

"It's kind of surreal because it's at Big Surf," lead singer David Lowery said. "It would be like playing at the largest mall in the world or like at Disneyland where that stage comes out from the ground."

"The fact that it was a benefit for (multiple sclerosis) is probably what led us to do it. I don't know much about (the disease), but obviously things like that are a great danger."

This summer, benefit concerts have become a part of the band's repertoire. They did a show that promoted a boycott of General Electric products in San Francisco and toured with 10,000 Maniacs (lead singer Natalie Merchant is an animal rights activist).

Camper's social consciousness almost disputes the band's reputation of being a quirky pop quartet. This is not to say that the band's newest LP, Key Lime Pie is full of wacky, meaningless lyrics, which Lowery suggests the other albums were about.

"On this album, we were trying to capture a single mood through the whole record," he said. "We wanted to do something dark, slow and kind of reflective. I mean, we're pop experimentalists, that is what we are supposed to do."

Even though Lowery likes Key Lime Pie, he managed to work himself into a huff trying to defend it.

"I personally think it's the best record we have ever done," he said. "It may alienate a lot of people but I don't give a shit. I've actually been surprised that the fan response has been really good. It's the mainstream people that are having the problem."

"I like going out on a whim. If you don't take some chances you're stupid. You can't think about being successful and make music. It's like you shouldn't think about mowing the lawn if you're making music."

Missouri apprehensive about sizzling Devil den

By JOEL HORN
State Press

University of Missouri Head Football Coach Bob Stull is worried about the heat — not from the UM alumni but from the hot Arizona desert.

"The temperature could conceivably be in the 90s at kickoff, and we've had such unusually cool weather," he said.

Although the weather may be a factor in the game, Stull said he is concerned about more than the Valley heat.

"Arizona State has been one of the premier Pac-10 teams ever since they entered the league," he said. "They're a good, solid football team."

Stull, in his first year at UM after coaching Texas-El Paso to its best record (10-3) in school history in 1988, has taken over a team that has a 16-40-1 record since 1984, including 1-2 this year.

Stull said comparing the Tiger program to Texas-El Paso's was like "apples and oranges," because the UM program receives state funding and tremendous support from alumni.

After winning its first season opener against Texas Christian, 14-10, the Tigers lost to Indiana, 24-7, and Miami, Fla., 38-7. Two of UM's first three games were at Faurot Field in Columbia, Mo.

"We've had our ups and downs here," Stull said. "Unfortunately, when you're trying to learn (a new system) against teams like Miami, it's tough to learn."

Quarterback Kent Kiefer, who transferred from Phoenix College after starting his career at ASU, leads the Tiger offense.

His 24 completions against Miami were a UM school record and his 301 yards passing was the eighth best in school history, but he also had a school record of six interceptions against the Hurricanes.

Kiefer, a junior, leads the Big Eight in total offense, accounting for 212-yards per game, and the Tigers' passing game leads the conference.

"Kent's doing well," Stull said. "We're not helping him operate much at times."

Stull said Kiefer has been blind sided several times this season and has had many passes dropped by UM receivers.

As a senior at Tempe's McClintock High School, where his father is the head coach, Kiefer set a national high school career record by completing 67 percent of his passes, with more than 600 attempts. He also holds state high school records with 6,433 career passing yards and 51 touchdown passes.

Bruton

"We weren't looking to get a junior college quarterback at the time (Kiefer decided to enroll at UM)," Stull said, "but we knew about him."

A marketing major, Kiefer earned a perfect 4.0 GPA in his first semester at UM.

Senior fullback Tommie Stowers ranks 10th in Tiger rushing history with 1,612 career yards and led the Big Eight's fullbacks in rushing yardage in 1988 with 667 yards. He caught five passes for 33 yards against Miami and is averaging 10.6-yards per catch this season.

Junior wide receiver Linzy Collins, who was recruited heavily by ASU out of Bakersfield (Calif.) Junior College, leads the Big-Eight with an average of 26.6-yards per reception. He caught three passes for 108 yards against Miami, including a 67-yard touchdown pass that was the longest by a Missouri wide receiver since 1985.

"Linzy Collins is proving the type of ability he has, especially the big-play ability," Stull said. "He can play with anybody."

Tim Bruton, a 6-foot-4, 245-pound tight end, ranks third in the Big-Eight in receiving with 10 catches for 132 yards. The junior caught eight passes for 109 yards against TCU.

"He's got good potential," Stull said of Bruton. "Physically, he looks the way you'd like him to look."

The Tigers' top defensive player is cornerback Adrian Jones, a consensus pre-season All-American pick. He has been nominated the past two years for the Thorpe Award (as has ASU free safety Nathan LaDuke), which goes to the nation's top defensive back.

Voted the Big Eight's defensive "Newcomer of the Year" in 1986, Jones has led the conference in interceptions twice. He made nine tackles against Miami, raising his career total to 262, and forced two fumbles.

"Adrian has got excellent quickness and is very strong," Stull said. "He's a great hitter. He can deliver once he gets there."

Senior defensive tackle Lee Johnson made five tackles against Miami, including three for 12 yards in losses and one sack. He lined up alongside his brother, nose guard Mario, for the first time. Their motto is "Johnson and Johnson, we'll wax you for free."

Darren McDonald, a senior inside linebacker, has led the Tigers in tackles the last two seasons. He had seven stops against Miami to raise his career total to 282, fifth in school history.

Just two Tigers are doubtful for Saturday's game — outside linebackers Jerold Fletcher and Greg Dumas, both of whom have ankle sprains.

In 1987, the Sun Devils defeated the Stull-coached Texas-El Paso team, 35-16, at Sun Devil Stadium.

The Tigers try to equally mix the run and pass, although Stull said so far they have thrown the ball more than they would like.

"(ASU is) going to do a lot of the stuff we do," he said, "although they're more complex defensively than a couple years ago."

UofA respects ASU volleyball team; Snyder 'flattered'

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

ASU Volleyball Coach Patti Snyder said she feels flattered that UofA is trying to set a game attendance record for today's 7 p.m. match in Tucson.

But on the other hand, she is a bit worried that the Wildcats may be a little too anxious to win.

"They are going to be fired up to sweep us in three," Snyder said. "It is quite an honor that they're trying to set the record against us. I hope our kids take it as a challenge."

"All of those fans are going to want UofA to beat us."

Over the past three years, ASU has beaten UofA by a margin of 4-2. Last season, the Sun Devils won both the home and away games between their archrival.

ASU junior outside hitter Kelly Plaisted said that no matter how much a player fights it, a tough rival match is going to promote hard feelings.

"A lot of emotions ride on a rivalry," Plaisted said. "In a Pac-10 match you already want to win, but since it's UofA, there is an extra incentive."

One positive aspect to having the Wildcats so intent on winning, Snyder said, is that if they start to lose, they will break down.

"For the past three or four years, as long as they beat ASU, their season is made," she said. "But when that is your only focus, you forget the process of winning. They get so frustrated that they can't play."

But Snyder said she realizes that home-court advantage would not bear that name if it were not an advantage.

"It helps a lot," she said, "because you feel comfortable with your surroundings. And when the team makes a great play, the crowd roars."

The Sun Devils will play tonight without the services of starting outside hitter Mindy Gowell, who sprained her ankle in Friday's match against Southern Cal.

Both Snyder and Plaisted said that the transition in offense brought about by Gowell's injury is going to be difficult.

"It's going to be tough executing our offense," Snyder said. "But our last few practices without her have been pretty good."

"She was a really consistent player, so (losing her) was a let down," Plaisted said. "We were used to having her pick up a lot."

Snyder noticed a fundamental breakdown in the team immediately following Gowell's injury.

"Our kids were pretty mad about their performance in L. A., so now they're fired up," Snyder said.

Despite the team's inconsistencies, Snyder said that she is confident the Sun Devils will fare well against the Wildcats.

"Our kids are pretty confident because we have beat them more times in the past," she said. "I like our chances."

Snyder sent a scout to the Wildcats' match Saturday to view their style of play. She said that they do not run anything difficult on offense or defense.

"They don't do anything we can't stop," she said.

"But we can't spend so much time on our game plan. We need to work on execution on our side of the net."

Key players for UofA will be outside hitter Terry Lauchner and middle blocker Kelly Wage. Lauchner led the team last season with a 4.33 kill average and a .45 serve average, and Wage was the team's best blocker.

Snyder plans to try to shut Combs down on the left side.

"We are going to have to employ certain blocking options," Snyder said. "We know enough about their left-side attack to do it."

Plaisted said, however, that the whole Sun Devil team is taking tonight's match rather nonchalantly.

"We should have no problems," she said. "For us, it's not as big a deal to play them."

Plaisted

Stump's career cut short by knee injury

TEMPE (AP) — Phoenix Cardinals running back Stump Mitchell underwent reconstructive surgery on his left knee Tuesday, likely ending his nine-year NFL career.

Mitchell, who injured his left knee in Sunday's 35-7 road loss to the New York Giants, had two torn ligaments repaired and torn cartilage removed during arthroscopic surgery at Phoenix's Good Samaritan Hospital.

Team orthopedic surgeon Dr. Russell Chick said the surgery was successful but Mitchell would need extensive rehabilitation.

The 5-foot-9, 194-pound Mitchell said Monday that if a ligament was torn in his knee, it would take a year to recover and he would likely retire instead.

Mitchell is the Cardinals' No. 2 career rusher with 4,649 yards and all-time leader in combined yardage with 11,988.

"We're going to miss Stump. He was a great competitor," Cardinals Coach Gene Stallings said. "He had a 4.4-yard average (per carry) last year and that was sixth or seventh in the NFL. He's a good player . . . We'll have to make a decision on whether to bring another running back in or activate somebody."

Stallings said rookie running back John Burch, an eighth-round draft pick out of Tennessee-Martin, is on Phoenix's six-man developmental squad and could be activated for Sunday's home opener here against San Diego.

The Cardinals, who have only one interception in the first three games this season, signed former Dallas safety Michael Downs and free-agent defensive back Michael Adams to contracts Tuesday and released cornerbacks Roland Mitchell and Kevin Guidry.

Downs played for the Cowboys from 1981-88 and had 34 career interceptions — fifth-best in franchise history.

"I coached Michael Downs a couple years at Dallas," said Stallings, who was the Cowboys' defensive backfield coach from 1972-85. "He came within a few votes of going to the Pro-

Bowl one year. He's extremely smart.

"He did not go to training camp with anybody this year, and he didn't play well last year because of a groin pull. But he can play both strong safety and free safety, and he can help us with his experience. It's going to take him a while to get ready, but we've got five days before we play this weekend."

Adams, a third-year pro who played for New Orleans last season, was signed as a free agent and went through Cardinals training camp before being waived Aug. 28.

"Michael Adams has been with us before. He was making progress, but we decided to let him go," Stallings said. "We've changed our mind, and we're bringing him back."

Roland Mitchell, a third-year pro acquired in a Sept. 20, 1988 trade with Buffalo, had 14 tackles and no interceptions last season and three tackles this year.

Guidry, a second-year pro, was signed as a free agent on Sept. 5 after being waived by Denver. He had one tackle so far this season.

Meanwhile, defensive end David Galloway (broken right thumb) and defensive tackle Gary Hadd (sprained left knee) are expected back this week.

They were among five starters injured in the Sept. 10 season opener at Detroit. Two others — free safety Lonnie Young (fractured left shoulder) and defensive tackle Tootie Robbins (strained ligament in left knee) — still have four weeks left on the injured reserve list.

Phoenix also may be looking to sign another lineman after starting defensive end Freddie Joe Nunn was suspended Tuesday for 30 days for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy.

Stallings, in the final year of his contract, said he is not using the injuries as an excuse if the Cardinals go on another long losing streak.

After injuries struck last November when they were 7-4 and tied for the NFC East lead, the Cardinals lost their final five games to finish 7-9 and out for the playoffs for the sixth consecutive year.

Mitchell

"It's easy to say you got four or five key guys out. Common sense says you're better off with your best guys out there," Stallings said. "It's my job to get what I got out there performing well. We're not going to collapse. You can bet on that."

Cubs Win! Cubs Win!

Chicago clinched its second National League East championship in six seasons, beating Montreal 3-2 Tuesday night with an unearned run in the eighth inning after second-place St. Louis already lost.

The Cubs took advantage of the Cardinals' 4-1 defeat in Pittsburgh and became the first team to guarantee a spot in the playoffs.

The Oakland Athletics clinched a tie for their second straight American League West title, beating the Texas Rangers 4-3 Tuesday night on Dave Henderson's two-run homer in the eighth inning.

Oakland leads the American League West by five games with five games remaining.

The San Francisco Giants missed a chance to clinch the National League West championship for the second straight day, losing 2-1 to the Los Angeles Dodgers on Tuesday night.

The Giants' magic number for clinching their second division title in three years remained at one as second-place San Diego beat Cincinnati 3-1 earlier in the night to move within four games of San Francisco. The Giants and Padres each have four games remaining, including a three-game series against each other in San Diego this weekend.

San Francisco has another chance to clinch the title Wednesday night if they can beat the Dodgers or San Diego falls to Cincinnati.

The Giants lost to the Dodgers 5-2 on Monday night but clinched a tie for the division crown when San Diego lost to Cincinnati.

Nunn disobeys substance rule

TEMPE (AP) — Defensive end Freddie Joe Nunn of the Phoenix Cardinals has been suspended for 30 days by the NFL for violating provisions of the league's substance abuse policy, the team announced Tuesday.

Cardinals General Manager Larry Wilson said Nunn was placed on the club's non-football illness list and "he's in a professional treatment facility" in the Phoenix area.

Nunn was among the NFL leaders in quarterback sacks last year with 14, but had only a half-sack this season in three games.

Wilson said Nunn, a fifth-year pro, has been instructed to remain out of the Cardinals' training facility and will not be allowed to practice or play for the team until at least Oct. 25. He also will not be paid during his suspension.

Wilson said league policy prohibited him from disclosing the nature of the violations.

"The league conducts the test," Wilson said at a news conference. "They notified us. Freddie was notified this morning. The testing is done on a regular basis by the league. It's basically confidential. They test for everything — alcohol, drugs, steroids. As far as what it was, we're not at liberty to say."

However, Wilson said he "was aware" that players are only suspended by the league after testing positive for substance abuse a second time. He would not comment on when Nunn's problem first surfaced.

"Freddie Joe Nunn will be undergoing a professional treatment program," Coach Gene Stallings said. "The Cardinals care for and support their players and will do everything possible to assist Freddie Joe's treatment and recovery. I'm very concerned about Freddie. I visited with him this morning. That's all I can say."

Nunn, 27, the Cardinals' first-round draft pick in 1985 out of Mississippi, had 84 tackles and three sacks as a rookie linebacker and 48 tackles and seven sacks the following year.

In 1987, he was shifted to defensive end and produced 46 tackles and 11 sacks. Last season, Nunn had 53 tackles plus four fumble recoveries and his 14 sacks were second only to the 16½ by Philadelphia's Reggie White among NFL linemen. This season, Nunn had 15 tackles.

"Hopefully, Freddie can come back and play football for us again," Wilson said.

Wilson said the Cardinals "have an employee assistance program," like most NFL teams, "and the players are given a lot of support."

Runners ready for high-caliber competition

By LARRY NEWELL
State Press

With the crucial part of the season still to come, the ASU cross country team is gearing up for the Pac-10 and District 8 Championships.

"Basically, the meets we are running in now are tuneups for the Pac-10, District 8 and hopefully the NCAA championship," said sophomore standout Kelly Cordell. "Each meet will present tougher competition than the previous one, and right now we are just trying to get in the best shape possible."

In preparation for the higher caliber of teams, the Sun Devils' daily practice has been modified.

"This week we will be running more speed drills and cut back slightly on long distance training," Coach Ken Lehman said.

The Aztec Invitational Saturday in San Diego was the latest test for the cross country team, with the mens and womens squads placing ninth and fourth, respectively.

Heading the mens squad was junior Todd Lewis, the top ASU finisher and the fourth best runner overall, who recorded a time of 25:24.3.

"Todd ran his best race ever at ASU, and he stayed in contention throughout the race," Lehman said.

The second Sun Devil crossing the finish line was senior Mike Frick. His time of 26:02.9 was good for 22nd place overall.

"I am not satisfied with my individual performance or the teams performance at the Aztec Invitational," Frick said. "I should have done better personally, and as a team we should have placed third."

Rounding out the top ASU finishers were senior Paul Boudreaux (who placed 71st),

The womens team fared better despite not having the services of top performer Teresa Barrios, who has had a virus for the past few weeks.

"Teresa's absence has made us pull together as a team and has forced each of us to perform at a higher level," Cordell said. "We hope she returns soon, but until then we will have to do as well as we can without her."

Exemplifying this spirit, Cordell recorded a time of 18:09.9, placing 10th overall and leading ASU runners.

"I decided to go out hard and lead the race the first mile, then I gradually fell back and settled into 10th place, and I maintained this position for the last mile of the race," Cordell said. "This was my best performance since I've been at ASU."

Cordell

Frick

Following Cordell was senior Amy Komitzky, placing 27th overall.

"Considering the level of competition and the toughness of the course, Amy ran very well for us," Lehman said. "Other than the Pac-10 and District 8 Championships, this was probably our toughest competition of the year."

ASU's next meet will be the Oct. 7 Colorado Invitational in Boulder, Colo.

An open letter to Bill Frieder

Joel Horn
Asst. Sports Editor

Dear Coach Frieder:

Last March, one of the greatest coaches in college basketball history retired.

Ralph Miller was the winningest active major college coach in NCAA Division I with 674 victories. His 674-370 (.646) record for his 38 years of coaching at Wichita State, Iowa and Oregon State placed him sixth on the all-time winning list, a notch ahead of UCLA's John Wooden.

Coach Miller, 70, was elected to the James Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame and was twice named national coach of the year.

In his final game at Gill Coliseum, OSU Athletic Director Dee Andros presented Coach Miller with a replica of the "Southwest Ralph Miller Drive" street sign that stands between Parker Stadium and Gill Coliseum. OSU also paid tribute to its coach of 19 years with the Ralph Miller Testimonial Dinner Sept. 8.

I want you to understand that Coach Miller was more than a coach. He was a teacher and a state hero.

OSU senior Aaron Currier said Coach Miller has been "part of what OSU is," not only in basketball but also to the entire school.

"Ralph has given (the school) a certain attitude that is going to be hard to change," Currier said of Miller's winning personality. "It will be interesting to see what the school's like without him."

The day after Coach Miller's final game in Corvallis, a group of fans turned out to watch the Beavers practice for the Pac-10 Tournament, including a student from Linn-Benton Community College.

"We're going to miss him so much," Shareen McKinney said. "This year a friend and I went to his office to get an autograph. He said, 'Don't you have anything better to do?' And we said, 'No, there isn't anything better.'"

Coach Miller was a student and player at the University of Kansas in the late 1930s and early 1940s when Naismith, the man who invented basketball, was the Jayhawk director of physical education.

Coach Miller's coach at Kansas was F. C. "Phog" Allen, who became the second biggest Division I winner (771 victories) behind Kentucky's Adolph Rupp (875).

"I learned more basketball from Ralph Miller in two years than I learned from all my other coaches put together," said John Johnson, an All-America at Iowa under Coach Miller and later a star with the NBA's Seattle Supersonics. "And that includes pro-coaches, exclamation point."

Coach Miller was a demanding teacher. "I'm fairly demanding — so is the effective teacher in your classroom," he often said. "The only difference is that my classroom is the court and 10,000 people witness each test."

"The mark of a good teacher is one who can simplify the subject matter for easy consumption and better understanding by the student. I keep it very simple and relatively easy to learn."

Many of Coach Miller's former players will tell you he was gruff. In fact, USC Coach George Raveling once called Coach Miller "Old sour-puss."

"I'm a teacher and I never did have a teacher smile at me all the time during class," Coach Miller said.

Despite his fondness for cigarettes and scotch, Coach Miller always represented OSU with dignity and class. He set a standard few will ever be able to match.

Coach Frieder, I wish you the best as you enter your first season at ASU. I hope that when the time comes for you to retire or leave the University, Sun Devil fans will have the same respect for you as I do for Coach Miller.

Aerobics Done Right

By Paul Lee

Barb Peebles and part owner Steve Rinaldo greet members at the door.

Aerobic enthusiasts have fun working out on the brand new suspended wood floor.

A new aerobics center has opened in Tempe. Catering primarily to students, CLUB AEROBICS is bringing a progressive approach to America's number one form of exercise—Aerobics.

The popularity of aerobics has grown tremendously with the fitness movement of the 80s. People who have recognized the importance of exercise but have found running and other sports too boring or too strenuous are switching to aerobics. They have found that aerobics maintains muscle tone, keeps the body slim and trim, and is just plain fun. Aerobics has also proven to be an effective compliment to other exercises. Those who regularly attend aerobics classes often improve their performance in other sports such as running, skiing, tennis, bicycling, and swimming. Aerobics improves one's cardiovascular capacity while developing and toning all major muscle groups.

The popularity of aerobics was demonstrated this semester when the aerobics classes at the Rec Center were full in a matter of days. Unfortunately, students are limited to one time slot, which can be frustrating when the academic schedule becomes busy. Students are also disappointed when the class is too big or the class format is not to their liking.

Club Aerobics solves these problems by allowing its members to attend any of 6 classes Monday through Saturday. This flexibility gives even the busiest student an opportunity to work out. Classes are taught in a variety of high and low impact formats. The classes are small enough to allow personalized instruction and lots of room to work out.

"Our approach is to meet the needs of the students," says Kelly Ryan, the managing partner of the club. "There are no membership fees or contracts. Student rates are only $25 for a 30 day pass (unlimited use) or $3 for a one day pass. And, members can come to any of our classes and take as many of them as they like. This way, members can follow their favorite instructor, or just take in a variety of classes."

Club Aerobics has been open just five weeks but has already gained a large membership. The close location to campus and low cost are big sellers with the students. However, the club feels that those are only bonuses to the tremendous facilities that they offer.

They have installed a state-of-the-art aerobics floor, an Actionflex Wood floor, which is specifically designed for aerobics. An Actionflex Wood floor is completely suspended on rubber pads mounted on sleeper boards laid one foot on centers. This system allows extra give beneath the leg when the foot strikes the floor, thus taking a lot of stress off the lower leg. The reduced stress reduces overuse injuries and makes the aerobic workout more comfortable.

Club Aerobics has also installed a $3500 stereo system producing a superb music accompaniment to the workouts. Also, the club has recruited its instructors from around the Valley. The result is a combination of quality aerobics instruction and superb sound that makes Club Aerobics the best place to work out in Tempe.

Members also like the Club because it features aerobics only. Therefore, students are not paying for facilities they do not use. Students are also spared the inconvenience of sharing facilities with weightlifters and stationary bicyclists who can distract from the aerobic workout. Overall, the club provides a pleasant atmosphere, a good workout, and a great way to meet new friends.

Club Aerobics is located at 1301 E. University, one half mile east of Rural Road. It is open Monday through Friday from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For further information, students can call 894-6543.
