45 participate in boycotted March of Unity

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

About 45 people participated in a controversial March of Unity at the University on Thursday, as six black student organizations boycotted the event, saying it would cause the University to "sweep racial issues under the carpet."

"As a result (of the march), we feel that the ASU student community will lose and not gain or appreciate the challenge of alleviating social conflicts on campus," stated a letter from the groups boycotting the event.

The organizations are concerned that administrators will not complete the 13-point plan to combat racism that was the result of a massive campus civil rights protest in April. The protest was sparked by an attack on a small group of blacks by fraternity members on Alpha Drive.

During a press conference in the MU Thursday afternoon, the organizations said the march would "relieve pressure on administrators."

"Now people will be more confused as to what's going on," said Tanya Holmes, president of the ASU chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP was one of the six organizations not participating in the march.

The other five organizations not participating were Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.; Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.; Delta Sigma Theta sorority; Phi Beta Sigma fraternity and the Pan-African Research Committee.

The groups will not participate in or plan any type of march until the University completes the 13-point promise, Holmes said, adding that the march "negatively affected" the University's future plans.

"Let's complete the 13-points, and then we'll march," Holmes said. "We can wait."

and organizer and leader of the march, denied accusations that he is "selling out" and agreed that problems of racism still linger at the University.

"They (the organizations) feel their own selfish needs are more important than the needs of the University," he said. "I don't believe it will solve all our problems, but it's a step I'm willing to take."

"I would have loved for them to participate, but I gotta do what I think is right, and I think this is right."

Last April, about 250 students rallied in response to racial violence that erupted on Alpha Drive.

Four black students were attacked April 15, after they were mistaken for suspects in the assault of a Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity member.

Two black students were handcuffed and taken into "protective custody" by ASU police in front of the SAE fraternity house.

The students allege that ASU police bullied and humiliated them in front of the fraternity members who were chanting racial slurs.

The ASU police department is currently under investigation by the U. S. Justice Department.

The other organizations agreed with Holmes' comments.

"The march is a jaded view of the University," said Norman Long, a member of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity. "It's the wrong thing at the wrong time. It's like the (Oakland) Athletics (baseball team) already celebrating winning the series."

Paul Larson, Associated Students of ASU president, who marched with Bonner, said the event united students of all races.

"The vision of the event is positive," he said. "It (the boycott) did not overshadow what happened here today, but it was destructive. It worked toward everyone's disadvantage, and it will slow progress in the future."

Council delays vote on proposed market

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The Tempe City Council unanimously decided Thursday to postpone a public hearing and vote on the construction of a supermarket at Rural Road and Southern Avenue as a standing-room-only crowd expressed its disappointment.

"It's all set up," said Helen Simmons, a 30-year Tempe resident who lives on College Avenue. "This is a farce. This is the kind of thing that makes people stay home."

Grady Gammage Jr., a spokesman for Smith's Supermarkets, the company that would construct a grocery store on the northeastern corner if the measure is approved, asked the council for a continuance because Councilwoman Carol Smith was absent from the meeting.

The City Council will vote Nov. 9 on whether it will approve the rezoning of the public land and change Tempe's master plan.

The Rural Road/Southern Avenue land is the former site of the Rural Elementary School, which was closed because of declining enrollment. The land is currently vacant.

A petition drive to prevent the rezoning has produced more than 1,000 signatures from Tempe residents, and

Larson opposes pro ball park at ASU

The Associated Students of ASU president said Thursday he is adamantly opposed to the possibility of a professional baseball stadium on University property.

"I am extremely perturbed and concerned about it," Paul Larson said. "The campus environment would be severely impacted by that stadium. It would take up land that should be used for education and academic purposes."

Larson

ASU has been considered a possible site for a baseball facility since last summer, but efforts have increased since Oct. 3 when Phoenix residents rejected the construction of a downtown stadium.

If a stadium is slated to be built north of Sun Devil Stadium as a part of the Rio Salado development, the decision would be subject to approval by the Arizona Board of Regents.

Board President Edith Auslander said she could not comment on the issue because discussions are in the preliminary stages.

However, Dick Neuheisel, president of the Tempe Sports Authority, said earlier this week that there is a 60 to 70 percent chance that a stadium will be built at ASU.

Larson said he has been against this idea since its inception because the stadium would bring non-students to campus and create traffic and parking problems.

"We have these (traffic and parking) problems with just our own population," he said. "We don't need an influence like that one (the stadium)."

He said the Phoenix Cardinals in Sun Devil Stadium are acceptable because the team participates in about eight games each season. He said a professional baseball team would play about 80 games each season.

Larson said the baseball stadium could be a revenue creator for the University, but that does not sway him to support its construction.

"Even if it is a big revenue-maker for the University, I still don't believe the amount of money they could make would change the negative impact," he said.

Larson said he will encourage ASASU to take action against building a professional stadium on campus. In addition, he will follow the progress of the legislative committee and voice his concerns.

"Why there is not a student on (the committee) is real interesting to me," Larson said.

The ASASU president said he supports the concept of a stadium in the Valley.

"But there has to be a more appropriate place than here," Larson said. "In the big picture of the Valley, it wouldn't be negative."

Aftershocks, frustrations in Bay; deaths may be lower, police say

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Three strong aftershocks rattled a jittery northern California on Thursday, and rescuers who found fewer cars than feared under a collapsed freeway said the World Series may have reduced the rush-hour traffic.

"Maybe we got lucky because of the game," Oakland police Sgt. Bob Crawford said. "Normally at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, this area would be bumper-to-bumper."

Power and commuters returned to much of downtown San Francisco as a tentative city tried to recover and regroup following Tuesday's earthquake, which claimed an estimated 270 lives and caused $2 billion in damage.

At the 1¼-mile stretch of the collapsed double-deck Interstate 880, the Nimitz Freeway in Oakland, workers cut holes in concrete and used cranes to pull out pancake-flat cars. Rescuers reported finding the cars as far apart as 60 feet, rather than bumper-to-bumper as had been feared, Assistant Fire Chief Al Sigwart said.

That could lower the death toll in the highway rubble — estimated earlier at 250, Crawford said.

On Thursday morning, three aftershocks struck south of San Francisco. The first, measuring 5.0 on the Richter scale of ground motion, hit at 3:15 a.m. and was centered near Watsonville, about eight miles from the epicenter of Tuesday's quake, according to the state Office of Emergency Service.

As of early Thursday, more than 1,400 aftershocks had been recorded. The strongest, 5.2 on the Richter scale, struck within 40 minutes of the initial jolt, according to the U. S. Geological Survey.

Autumn draws to sudden close as snowstorm blasts Midwest

(AP) — Trees in autumnal technicolor of crimson and gold turned suddenly white Thursday when a storm blitzed the Midwest with up to 6 inches of snow, causing power outages to more than 200,000 customers in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan.

It was the earliest snowfall on record for many cities, including Cincinnati, Dayton, Ohio, Indianapolis and St. Louis.

Snow also fell in portions of Kentucky, where a firefighter was electrocuted by power lines downed by the snow.

At least one other death, in Ohio, was attributed to the storm.

"I can't believe this," said Jan Fredbeck of Franklin, Ind., where 6 inches of snow fell. "We've got Halloween decorations up inside, and they look so stupid now."

Quake hits rural northern China, killing 29, razing 8,000 homes

BEIJING (AP) — A severe earthquake rumbled across rural north China early Thursday, knocking flat about 8,000 homes, killing at least 29 people and injuring 34, according to Xinhua News Agency and other official reports.

Xinhua said in a brief report that aftershocks continued.

The quake was centered about 135 miles west of Beijing on the border of Shanxi and Hebei provinces and struck less than 24 hours after a massive earthquake hit the San Francisco area, but State Seismological Bureau officials said there was no evidence the tremors were linked.

Residents of Beijing felt the tremors, but no reports of damage surfaced and the bureau said there was no need to take safety measures in the capital.

The epicenter was near Datong, famous for its Yungang Caves that hold thousands of Buddhist paintings and statues dating to the fifth century. Whether any caves were damaged was not reported. Efforts to reach Datong by telephone failed.

The Seismological Bureau said an initial quake hit at 10:57 p.m. Wednesday (7:57 a.m. Arizona time) and measured 5.7 on the Richter scale. At least four others registering 5 or above hit in the next six hours, including a quake of 6 on the scale at about 1 a.m. Thursday (10 a.m. Wednesday in Arizona).

about 10 citizens picketed the supermarket proposal during rush hour Wednesday.

The Tempe Elementary School District's proposal to redevelop Rural Road spurred more than 150 residents to attend the Thursday council meeting. After the continuation was announced, the audience grumbled.

Mario Martinez, an ASU computer programmer who spearheaded the petition drive and Wednesday rally, told the council the postponement was ironic.

"I'm disappointed that Carol Smith isn't here," he said. "She's getting paid, and she's not here. We wanted to get on with this."

"This shows that the upper echelon of Tempe government has lost touch with the community."

Councilman Bill Ream said after the meeting that the postponement will create more suspense and frustration for some.

"It's unfortunate," he said. "I would have liked to have gotten this out of the way."

However, Ream said he has not seen enough to change his mind about the construction of a supermarket.

"It will be a valuable tool for the district," he said, adding that the petition drive is valuable but people are not informed. "Most of the people signing the petitions are completely uninformed on all sides of the issue."

If the council approves the rezoning next month, the property will be leased to the Salt Lake City-based grocery store chain for 50 years. The move could net the district $19 million.

In August, the Tempe Planning and Zoning Commission heard 3½ hours of testimony from residents distraught about the idea of a supermarket in the neighborhood. However, it voted 6-1 to approve the plan.

Councilman Don Cassano said the continuance is unfortunate.

"(But) it's the way it works," he said, adding that it is a disservice to the people that showed up for the public hearing.

Jim Crossman, an ASU junior computer science major, was dissatisfied with the postponement.

"I think they will have to resolve this in favor of the neighbors," he said, but he added that he is still worried about the outcome of the decision.

Martinez said opponents of the rezoning will continue gathering signatures and try to mobilize opposition.

"We'll work. Eventually this (postponement) will help," he said.

Racism on campus

Lack of unity hurts cause

What a mess.

That's really the only way to describe the state of minority student leadership after Thursday's Unity Day fiasco.

Despite the name "Unity Day," disunity was the order of the hour, as leaders of six campus minority groups decided to boycott a march that was scheduled to bring together students involved in last April's protests against racial violence on Alpha Drive.

Leaders of the six groups, led by the NAACP's Tanya Holmes, decided to pull their members out of the rally — which began with appearances by ASU Interim President Richard Peck and Associated Students President Paul Larson. They felt marching would send a message to the ASU administration that the campus has achieved true racial harmony, and that no more work on racial problems is needed.

Ironically, their lack of participation may have irrevocably damaged their reform efforts — and their credibility as student spokesmen.

The march was not designed to celebrate the achievement of racial unity, as leaders of the dissenting groups claimed; to do so would be ridiculous on a campus with continuing racial tensions. Rather, it was created to further the effort toward reaching a mutual understanding among races.

After a long summer, which served as a buffer between the violence and protests of last spring, the march was meant to be a reminder of the problems we still face — and an opportunity for students of all backgrounds to get together and show their solidarity and determination to build an atmosphere of equality at ASU.

But the boycotters failed to understand this. And as a result, they have created the appearance not only that there is racial tension at ASU, but that minorities are unwilling to try and resolve it.

Sadly, if all the groups had participated in the march, it is likely that statewide news coverage would have prompted questions about progress in racial affairs at the University — and put even more pressure on administrators to bring about needed changes.

Instead, the message sent to the administration, students and all Valley residents by the boycotters is clear: ASU has racial problems, but the minority students on campus can't even unite among themselves, much less work together with the entire campus community.

The scene Thursday, as the minority student leaders defended their boycott during a press conference, was reminiscent of the conclusion of last April's MU sit-in, held to protest the Alpha Drive incident.

In April, minority student leaders nearly lost all the positive gains made by protesters during the sit-in and an earlier march by loudly demanding an immediate meeting of the Arizona Board of Regents — a logistic impossibility, as board members are scattered all over the state.

Thursday, minority leaders made it clear that they want something else that is impossible — racial unity without opportunities for interaction and discussion between all students.

If yesterday's events were any indication, minority student leadership is disorganized, splintered into factions and unwilling to work together for positive change.

Minority students, who are the unfortunate victims of this state of affairs, deserve better.

Lost opportunity

Editor:

There have been many interpretations about the purpose of the March for Unity on Thursday, and as a participant I'd like to share my views of both the event and those who boycotted. My understanding is that the March for Unity was designed to unite people with a common goal — to stamp out racism at ASU. I do not believe the event was meant to suggest that unity now exists at ASU. However, I felt by participating in the march, we were taking a small step toward reaching a united campus. It is obvious that much more substantial measures must be taken before we even begin to reach that goal.

It is my understanding that the groups who boycotted did so because, among other reasons, they felt the march would send a false perception that unity exists and "all is OK" at ASU. I respect their decision to boycott on that basis, however, I still feel they lost an important opportunity to further their cause and to let the community know that the issue of racism is alive and well at ASU.

Tasteless cartoon

Editor:

I am writing to protest against your publishing an offensive cartoon.

On Oct. 11 you published a cartoon featuring a policeman standing in a restroom doorway with three grotesque characters sitting nearby. One of them, wearing a ballerina costume was saying, "Wo, big boy, take a number."

It is obvious that this cartoon refers to the recent sex offender arrests on campus. It is also obvious that the State Press has singled out homosexuals in particular for this type of scrutiny and ridicule.

By publishing only the names of homosexuals arrested you have shown your true colors. It is obvious that you are full of hate towards this minority.

It may not occur to you and your staff that many people have gay or lesbian relatives and friends whom they love dearly.

Your recent cartoon is highly offensive and stereotypical. It is reminiscent of cartoons that made fun of blacks before the civil rights movement. Would the State Press print a cartoon of a black person drooling on a piece of watermelon or a Jew hoarding piles of money? Your recent cartoon is equally offensive, especially to gays and lesbians and their friends. To characterize homosexuals in this fashion, no matter what their individual mistakes may be, is both ignorant and insensitive.

I am tired of seeing homosexuals ridiculed and stereotyped. I strongly urge you to look into the reality of what it means to be a gay man or a lesbian woman. Homosexuals are as varied in their personalities and lifestyles as heterosexuals.

Due to the prejudice and violence that homosexuals encounter on a daily basis, there is a strong need to educate people about their gay and lesbian neighbors and friends.

Instead of using your newspaper to stereotype and ridicule homosexuals, why not work toward making their lives more positive?

Your newspaper has a great deal of power in influencing public opinion. It's about time you used it responsibly.

Crash

Stock market high fliers deserve abrupt landing

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

I can't help it. While it might sound cruel and sadistic when the stock market takes one of its periodic head-first dives, I enjoy the spectacle.

Not that I really understand it. It baffles me that one day a big corporation can be worth $10 billion. But a day or two later, it is suddenly worth only $8 billion.

It is still making the same products that are selling for the same price in the same quantity. The same people are coming to work and getting the same paychecks. Yet, on paper, the company is worth far less today than it was yesterday.

But what I do understand is that when this happens on a grand scale, to hundreds or thousands of companies, somebody is taking a financial bath, getting clobbered, maybe even losing their shirt, trousers, underwear, driver and limo.

I'd feel bad if I thought that little old widows in three-room flats were being wiped out. Or those who sweep streets, empty bedpans or put out fires were losing their nest eggs.

But, from what I read, that isn't the case. The average person is not on the phone telling a broker to buy, sell, go short, go long, go medium, stop, start, hop, skip or whatever all that jargon is.

My guess is that if I called most of the people I know and asked them if they just took a bath in the market, they'd say: "No, took a shower in my washroom."

That's because most people have wised up. They'd no more get involved with that strange creature called The Market than they'd buy a gold watch or chain from some seedy guy standing in a doorway.

The Market. All you have to do is look at the headlines or listen to the daily broadcasts and you think you are hearing the latest medical report on someone who ought to be in therapy, on tranquilizers or strapped down by the attendants. It sounds like a manic-depressive-psycho-head-case.

"The Market up on heavy trading this morning, buoyed by reports of . . . The Market closed sharply down on light trading this evening, in the wake of reports . . . The Market reacted nervously to reports that the President found a pimple on his neck . . . The Market bounced back on reports that the President saw a dermatologist."

What kind of way to do business is that? No, if we get another Black Monday, Gray Tuesday or Olive-Drab Wednesday, I won't be shedding tears for those with the vanishing bottom lines. Just as I never offer sympathy for those who try to fill inside straights.

The last time The Market went from manic to depressive, we were told it was caused by computers going berserk or some such thing. If that was the reason, why didn't somebody crawl behind the computer and pull out the plug? That's what I'd do if my TV started spewing smoke.

This time we're told that the sudden drop was caused by the fear that there won't be any more greed-oozing takeovers. If that is so, it's a delight.

That means that the stock prices of companies have been going up and up and up not because anybody thinks what they make or sell is getting better or more popular.

It's because they think that a Wall Street land shark has an eye on a company and is circling. And that the land shark intends to borrow a fortune at high interest rates, break up the company, sell off chunks of it to pay off the big debt and walk away with a fat profit.

In the process, productive careers will be ruined, workers will find their lives turned upside down, companies might no longer exist, but the land sharks and those who finance them will have full bellies.

And that's why — despite the hysteria of Black Monday — the prices of stocks have been creeping upward. It's been a guessing game. Will this or that company be taken over? One little rumor, and the stock becomes manic. No, the rumor goes, now the company is no longer a tasty morsel. So the same stock sinks into a blue funk.

Now on Wall Street, LaSalle Street and all the other places the sharks lurk, they're screaming: "Nobody is going to take over nothing anymore for ever and ever."

And suddenly those who wanted to be in on the kill are in a panic. What? No more feeding frenzies? No more ripping and shredding of slow-swimming companies? Lemme out!

We keep hearing that the small investor no longer is interested in the stock market. Of course he isn't. Little fish know that it isn't safe to swim with the sharks.

Concept of marriage taking new direction in U.S.

Cody Shearer
North American Syndicate

WASHINGTON — The televised court case of actor William Hurt ended last week with a controversial decision by New York Judge Jacqueline Silberman that could have significant implications for millions of couples living together out of wedlock.

Silberman ruled in the New York Supreme Court that Sandra Jennings, Hurt's former live-in girlfriend and mother of his son, was not his common-law wife and rejected her claim that she was entitled to more than the annual $60,000 child support she was receiving from the man said to have at least $10 million.

Silberman's decision was based firmly on points of law and precedent. The concept of common-law marriage does not exist in New York, but Jennings' case focused on the weeks the couple spent in South Carolina in 1983 when Hurt was filming "The Big Chill." South Carolina does acknowledge common-law marriage.

"The sole question to be decided by this court is whether Sandra Jennings is the common-law wife of William Hurt," the judge explained. It was not, she reiterated, a "palimony" dispute.

"Jennings' claim that a common-law marriage existed stems, to a large extent, from her present recollection of Hurt's alleged utterance after an argument about seven years ago, that as far as he was concerned they were married in the eyes of God and had a spiritual marriage. To which utterance Jennings says she agreed.

"Even were this court to find this testimony credible the event described by Jennings and the words allegedly spoken do not evince an 'intent' to solemnize a marriage but rather the kinds of words used by one desiring to continue the parties' present state of living together."

Using precedents handed down in previous South Carolina cases, the judge concluded: "The intent in marriage consists of living together by agreement by a man and woman as husband and wife according to what we know to be the law of the land, and according to what we believe to be the law of God . . .

"That mutual understanding or consent must be conveyed with such clarity on the part of the parties that marriage does not creep up on either of them and catch them unaware. One cannot be married unwittingly or accidentally."

In spite of Silberman's decision, the courts are full of cases, involving heterosexual and homosexual couples, who, as a result of some misunderstanding, feel they've been unfairly shortchanged in their love relationships. One need only travel to one's local courthouse to appreciate the complexity and intensity of such battles.

Two "palimony suits," for example, are currently making their way through the lower courts here. Both involved homosexual couples. In one case, a local man has filed a lawsuit against a man he says was his former lover. The plaintiff contends he had a three-year "oral cohabitation agreement" with the defendant and seeks real estate assets estimated to be worth $100,000. Meanwhile, a protracted civil suit between two men in Frederick, Md., involving hundreds of thousands of dollars in disputed assets is scheduled to go to trial in a few weeks. This disagreement began in 1984, when the men, who were business partners, ended a 26-year personal relationship.

If one thinks any of these personal matters are straightforward, consider what's unfolding in San Francisco. This November, voters in the bay area will have a chance to approve or disapprove a domestic partners law, passed by the Board of Supervisors last April. Under the law, unmarried couples will be allowed to register their relationships, just like couples filing for marriage licenses. The pending statute would also permit unmarried couples to hospital visitation rights and allow for further study of a plan to extend health insurance to partners of city workers.

The Catholic Church, even in a liberal city like San Francisco, is not the only body that believes Proposition S would undercut the sanctity of marriage and family. Legalizing live-in lover relationships seems to be asking a bit much for a lot of people. Recent public opinion polls suggest that voters in San Francisco are divided evenly over the domestic partners law.

This classic battle between conservative religious types and the gay community is shaping up to be an ugly affair. Regardless of how this showdown resolves itself, it is sure to underscore the extent to which our culture is in transition in its attitudes toward marriage.

Still, individuals continue to fall in love and enter into serious relationships, as much for their posterity and family, as for their own well-being. Adapting to the flowing rhythms of change that are involved in such relationships can create a wonderfully dynamic connection. Perhaps, society may some day come to view marriage or live-in arrangements less as fixed economic units and more as the best route to the highest level of personal development.

Columbus began Indian genocide

Editor:

On Oct. 13 the State Press published a letter which stated that Columbus was a brave man for discovering the New World and that Columbus Day should be kept.

The author also made reference to celebrations of the 500th anniversary of this "discovery" to be held in 1992.

The reality is that Columbus was a greedy opportunist who saw an opportunity to make large sums of money at other people's expense, who with a mutinous crew, got lost and ended up in what is now called the Americas.

He and his crew survived due to the hospitality of the Taino Indian Nation. He kidnapped some of them, and not too many years later there were no more Taino.

So began 497 years of genocide.

In spite of the best efforts of Columbus' successors, Indian Nations continue to survive. Instead of millions of dollars being spent celebrating genocide, monies should be spent on programs to promote Indian self-determination, education and related areas.

Instead of promoting something negative, people should be promoting something positive to undo the wrongs of the past and present, so as to build a better future for our generations to come.

March

"I do not believe the campus is unified. My intentions were to draw attention to the issue and bring about more pressure for change."

ASASU will begin "watchdogging" the University's progress in the plan through an existing board, Larson added.

The organizations not participating were disappointed with Larson's appearance at the march and called for a meeting with him and Interim President Richard Peck to discuss the University's position on the march and their boycott.

While marching, Peck expressed concern about the dissention between the two groups.

"The march is better than not doing anything at all," he said. "I'm sorry if there are people who think they can do more by sitting in the MU."

Students marching did not feel they were compromising efforts towards better race relations.

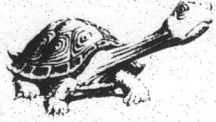

"This is to put discrimination and racial barriers down for at least a day," said Diane Ayvazzadeh, a junior psychology major.

Bernard Jones, a first-year law student, said the march would "enhance messages and help ultimately to push the points through."

Students who did not march said racism is still prevalent on campus.

"This is a small appeasement," said Marco Sanchez, a sophomore finance major. "There is no unity. I can't see it (racism) but I can feel it."

Health officials: Stressed-out students often have insomnia

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

ASU Student Health Center officials said many college students are suffering from insomnia because of school-related stress.

"School has become more demanding both academically and personally," said Dr. Andy Hogg, a counselor at counseling and consultation in the health center.

Hogg also said more older students have families and jobs that add to the daily pressures.

Dr. Dudley Weems, a psychiatrist at the health center, agrees with Hogg that added stress could be the reason for both lack of sleep and unsatisfactory sleep periods.

"From the people I've seen, it seems the issues of sleep are getting more complicated," Weems said. "The quality of sleep is related to the amount of stress a person has during the day."

A survey at San Jose State University last summer found what researchers call "striking changes" in the sleep duration and satisfaction among college students.

The survey compared students tested in 1978 to students tested in 1988. It found that students' quality and quantity of sleep have declined this decade. More than half the students tested reported dissatisfaction with their sleep, and the duration of sleep had been reduced by 30 minutes.

ASU student Eric Kalinka, who averages about 30 hours of sleep a week, said the variety of activities he participates in prohibits him from getting adequate sleep.

"I'm taking a lot of classes, and it's hard to weigh and balance your academic and social life," said Kalinka, a broadcasting and telecommunications major.

Elisha Fiore, a business administration major, said the lack of sleep affects her ability to concentrate during the day, and she misses her early classes sometimes.

But students need not sit up at night worrying about a remedy.

Rob Hughes, a fitness specialist at the health center, said stress is controllable.

"One of the things we try to teach in stress management is that you need to prepare for sleep just like you would to exercise," he said.

Hughes recommends that people do muscle-relaxation exercises before going to bed to alleviate the stress.

Steve Petruzzello, a graduate student majoring in sports psychology, said people with insomnia should also consider doing aerobics.

Students who want help dealing with stress should contact the health center, which offers free time-management workshops. The education support program also can help students deal with stress.

ASU Police Report

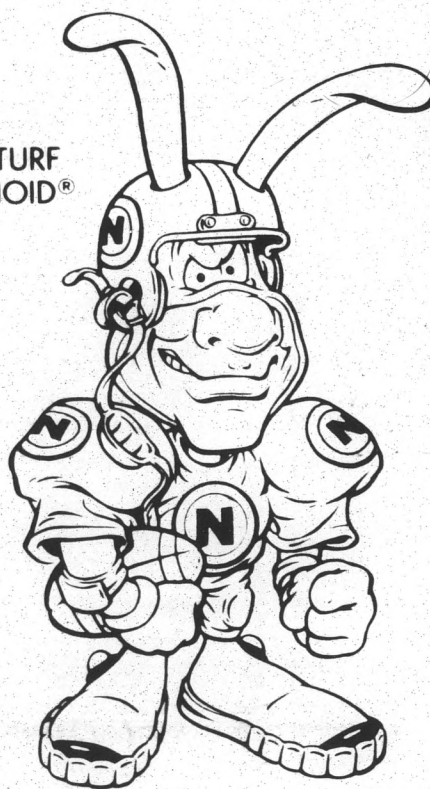

ASU police reported the following incidents that occurred between 7 a.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday:

- An ASU police officer ran into a student Wednesday morning while both were riding their bicycles on Lemon Street and College Avenue. No injuries were reported.
- A vandal wrote graffiti pertaining to homosexual activities on the walls of the fourth floor mens restroom with a black felt pen at Hayden Library.
- A thief stole a graphic equalizer and a CB radio from a student's truck while it was parked in Parking Structure Five between 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday.

- An ASU employee, driving a University truck, backed into a cement trash container. The vehicle was not damaged, but the container was left in four pieces.
- A student observed an unidentified man masturbating in a car parked in Parking Structure Three. The man is described as a white male in his 40s with dark, shaggy hair and a pudgy face.
- A student was arrested after she wrote a false birthdate on her application for a driver's license.
- An ASU employee injured her left ankle after she stood up from a bench on the southwest side of the MU. She did not - need medical attention.

 - A student drove her car into a metal pole Wednesday morning while leaving Parking Structure Five. The pole was not damaged, but the car received $1,000 in damages.
 - A student reported that someone stole his First Interstate automatic teller card and used the machine in the basement of the MU to withdraw $970 from his account between Oct. 9 and Oct. 16.
 - An ASU student was arrested because his unleashed dog was seen roaming the area of Cholla Apartments.
- Compiled by State Press reporter Tenny Tatusian

Fake fitness IDs involved in student arrests

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
State Press

Two ASU students were arrested earlier this month for allegedly possessing falsified identification cards for Beauvais' Fitness Gym in Tempe, police said.

Tempe Police Sgt. Al Taylor said Colt Downer and Brad Stern were arrested after employees at the gym, 1301 E. University Drive, noticed the fake IDs.

The students were booked and released pending a complaint from the County Attorney's office, Taylor said, adding that the charge of forgery is a class-four felony with a maximum sentence of four years in prison and a fine of $150,000.

Five cases of possession of false membership cards for the gym have been reported. Police are still searching for the other three suspects.

"This is an example of trying to get something for nothing," Taylor said.

A membership for Beauvais' costs $30 initially and $30 each month thereafter.

Stern told police he purchased the ID from a man he called

"Rene" in the parking lot of the Meridian Corners Apartments, 1440 E. Broadway Road. Stern added that he knew Downer, and that Downer knew "Rene."

Jeff Lasinski, manager of the gym, said a "Rene" was employed at Beauvais' for approximately a week. Lasinski told police "Rene" was fired because "it was felt that he could not be trusted."

Downer declined to comment on his arrest, and Stern could not be reached.

Taylor said employees of the gym were able to detect the falsified IDs because the cards did not have a highlighted expiration date and the pictures of the cardholders did not have weight equipment in the background.

Lasinski said employees had been noticing the fake IDs for the past three weeks, but he refused to comment further, pending completion of an investigation into the incidents.

Taylor said detectives are also searching for the manufacturer of the fake IDs.

"The cases have been assigned to detectives and will assume the charges through the County Attorney's office," Taylor said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Newton Hazell found the sweetest treat of all at the bottom of his cookie jar — a long-forgotten lottery ticket worth $1.3 million that would have become worthless just four days later. Hazell, 58, bought the New York Lotto ticket for the Oct. 22, 1988, drawing at a delicatessen on Staten Island, selecting the same numbers he picks every week. He dumped the ticket into his cookie jar at home and never checked to see if he had won. Last week, Hazell was back in the deli when he noticed a sign encouraging Lotto players to check their tickets because a $1.3 million prize was still unclaimed. A newspaper story pinned next to the sign showed the missing ticket contained his numbers. That's when Hazell began to search.

UNLV offense to test ASU in weekend tilt

By TOMI McELROY
State Press

The undefeated Sun Devil baseball team enters its fifth fall season game, playing host to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas Friday and Saturday.

UNLV boasts six newcomers that are hitting over the .500 mark. The Running Rebels won three of four games against their first fall season opponent, Cypress (Calif.) Junior College.

"It will be good for our pitchers to see better hitters," ASU Head Baseball Coach Jim Brock said. "It's a step up in the level of competition from last week."

UNLV third baseman Mike Stobel, a freshman, hit four home runs in his Rebel debut, tallying eight RBI and a .538 batting average finish.

Another freshman and five junior college transfers are also above the .500 mark.

Two returning outfielders, Sean Murphy and Ethan Flowers, both have shoulder injuries which minimized their playing time in the Rebels' season opener.

Greg Elkin, the UNLV assistant sports information director of baseball, said Murphy and Flowers might play this weekend. Head Coach Fred Dallimore was unavailable for comment.

The Rebels will start returning pitcher Donovan Osbourne in Friday's game.

In his first fall season outing, Osbourne pitched four perfect innings and struck out three against Cypress.

"He's a pretty strong pitcher," Brock said. "It will give our hitters a chance to see a better pitcher and what our hitters can do."

Gary Tatterson, who transferred from Glendale Community College, will be the starting pitcher for the Sun Devils. Tatterson was third in the Sun Devil rotation last weekend.

"We just want to get him in a night ball game to see how effective he is under the lights," ASU pitching Coach Dub Kilgo said. "We're still trying to determine the rotation, and we're giving all the guys a chance."

In their most recent head-to-head competition, the Sun Devils demolished the Rebels in the 1988 West II Regionals, 27-8.

Earlier that year, the Rebels' visit to Packard Stadium turned sour when Brock said they had some problems with the umpiring, and Dallimore was ejected from the game.

Saturday's doubleheader features Todd Douma and Rusty Silcox on the mound, a reverse of last weekend's rotation.

"We like to keep Todd in between two stronger throwers," Kilgo said. "We'll keep flip-flopping Tatterson and Silcox."

Friday's game begins at 7 p.m., and Saturday's doubleheader will begin at 10 a.m.

Ducks bedeviled, lack quack attack

By JOEL HORN
State Press

University of Oregon Head Football Coach Rich Brooks said it is a "fairly well known fact" in Eugene that the Ducks have never beaten the Sun Devils.

ASU (3-2-1 overall, 0-1-1 Pac-10), which leads the 24-year-old series 9-0-0, takes on Oregon (3-3, 2-3) in its Pac-10 home opener at 3:30 p.m. Saturday at Sun Devil Stadium.

The two teams met for the first time in 1966, with the Sun Devils narrowly defeating the Ducks, 14-10, in Tempe. The closest contest in the series came last year at Autzen Stadium, when ASU edged Oregon, 21-20. Sun Devil cornerback Eric Crawford blocked a field goal attempt and cornerback Jeff Joseph intercepted a pass to secure the victory.

ASU has outscored Oregon, 279-130, in the series with the average score being 31-14. The Sun Devils are 4-0 against the Ducks at Sun Devil Stadium and 5-0 in Eugene, where four of the last five games have been played.

ASU Head Coach Larry Marmie said Oregon is a very good football team.

"Their skill position players on offense are as good as there are in the league," he said.

Among the Ducks' skill position players is quarterback Bill Musgrave, possibly the Pac-10's finest signal caller and certainly the most valuable player to his team.

Musgrave was 5-0 as Oregon's starting quarterback last season before suffering a broken collarbone in the first half against ASU. He had thrown two touchdowns against the Sun Devils prior to his injury.

The junior from Grand Junction, Colo., had completed 51.2 percent of his passes, throwing only four interceptions in 121 passes. Musgrave had led the Ducks to conference victories against Washington State, Stanford and Washington.

With Musgrave out of the lineup, Oregon went on to lose its last four games of the season and finished with a record of 6-6.

"I think everybody knows what (Musgrave's) background is," Marmie said, "and what he's capable of doing."

Thus far in 1989, Musgrave has completed 127 of 217 passes for 1,544 yards and 13 touchdowns. He has been intercepted 10 times.

In addition, Musgrave leads the Pac-10 in total offense, averaging 247 yards per game. Oregon ranks second in the conference in passing offense and third in total offense.

Marmie said he is also impressed with the Ducks' defensive backfield, which he labeled "outstanding."

"I think their secondary is what catches your eye defensively," he said.

Senior cornerback Chris Oldham ranks second in the Pac-10 with four interceptions, while senior free safety Derek

Jack W. Beasley Jr./State Press

ASU freshman fullback Jeff Simoneau, who has scored four touchdowns this season, hopes to cross the goal line Saturday against Oregon.

Horton has picked off three.

Nose tackle David Cusano, a 6-foot-2, 260-pound senior from Folsom, Calif., also captured Marmie's attention.

"(The Ducks are) pretty physical up front," he said. "They're a typical Oregon football team."

The Ducks currently rank fifth in the Pac-10 in total defense, surrendering 346.3 yards per game. They are sixth in scoring defense, allowing opponents 20.7 points per game.

For the Sun Devils, senior split end Ron Fair hopes to continue his all-conference type season. The senior from Asheville, N.C., caught six passes for 130 yards against Oregon State.

For the season, Fair has 26 receptions (sixth in the Pac-10) for 452 yards. He is averaging 17.4 yards per catch and 75.3 yards per game. Fair needs just two catches to surpass junior tight end Ryan McReynolds' season-high 28 catches in 1988. His 452 receiving yards is 32 yards more than senior split end Leland Adams' team-leading total of last year.

The Sun Devils rank fifth in the conference in total offense, averaging 347.3 yards per game. They are sixth in scoring offense, putting 19.3 points per game on the board.

ASU is fourth in total defense (344.5 yards per game) and third in scoring defense (18.3 points per game).

Senior nose guard Richard Davis, a 6-foot-1, 263-pound native of Jenks, Okla., has eight quarterback sacks for 58 yards in losses. He has 47 tackles, a forced fumble and a deflected pass.

The Sun Devils will enter the Oregon game relatively healthy. Sophomore defensive tackle Brian Hooks (lower leg) and junior strong safety Phillippi Sparks (fractured left hand) will not play. Both are expected to redshirt this season.

Oregon is also nearly injury-free. Cusano suffered a strained back against Washington last week but is expected to play. However, junior center Scot Boatright (knee) and senior outside linebacker Bjarne Jensen (knee) are not expected to see action.

Sun Devils face top competition in nation with new addition

By PAUL CORO
State Press

The third-ranked Sun Devils and eight more of the nation's top 12 womens golf teams will convene in Tulsa, Okla., today for the opening round of the Ping Tour Tulsa Invitational.

"We really want to win this," ASU Head Coach Linda Vollstedt said. "When you start beating the top teams, people will know how good you are."

After nearly four weeks without competition, the Sun Devils will return to action with a welcomed addition to its lineup. Highly touted freshman Brandie Burton will make her collegiate debut.

"This is the most important tournament of the season for us," Burton said. "The team really wants it bad."

Burton, a two-time Rolex junior player of the year, has been detained by the rehashing of a left knee injury. The knee, which underwent surgery earlier in the year, must have arthroscopic surgery again in December after a freak classroom incident last month.

"I'm as comfortable as I am going to be," Burton said. "I just hope I can perform up to my ability."

Burton has not played and carried a bag for a month. Vollstedt said the knee's condition has improved, but it is not near 100 percent.

"She is such a good player, she will be fine," Vollstedt said.

In their season opener, the Sun Devils finished third at the University of Oregon Invitational without Burton.

"I'm very excited to start playing," Burton said. "I thrive on the competition."

Accompanying Burton in Tulsa are sophomore Lynne Mikulas, freshman Tricia Konz, and seniors Amy Fruhwirth and Missy Farr. Fruhwirth was ASU's top finisher in Oregon with a ninth-place showing, while Mikulas and Farr tied for 10th.

The Sun Devils ended the Portland tourney 27 strokes behind defending NCAA champs and second-ranked San Jose State, who also travels to Tulsa. The invitational's field is led and hosted by top-ranked Tulsa, who won by nine shots over ASU last year.

"We are excited about the tournament and going to Tulsa," Vollstedt said. "We want to beat Tulsa on its home course."

The Golden Hurricane is a far and away favorite on their Tulsa Country Club course (par 72, 6,000 yards). Vollstedt said the tree-lined course is difficult with a 75.7 rating.

Tulsa will also welcome the likes of No. 5 Texas, No. 6 UCLA, No. 8 Oklahoma State, No. 10 Duke, No. 11 Southern Methodist and No. 12 Florida.

Vollstedt, who recently garnered her second national coach of the year award for last season's exploits, said the team has been playing very well during qualifying rounds.

Vollstedt said she has been especially impressed with the play of Konz, who will be teeing off in just her second collegiate tournament. Konz finished 17th in the team opener.

As the ASU mens golf team experienced in Dallas earlier this week, bothersome weather could come into play.

Baysters fix 'Stick; workouts resume

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — While jackhammers and drills fixed Candlestick Park, the Bay area began putting back the pieces of its earthquake-stricken World Series on Thursday.

In San Francisco, the Giants played a simulated game. They went through the motions without the usual shouts that punctuate team practices.

"This is my job, so I'll go out and play. But it's not the best of circumstances," first baseman Will Clark said. "Probably nobody will feel comfortable for a while."

At the Oakland Coliseum, the Athletics worked out — minus outfielder Rickey Henderson, who didn't show up. Before the team took the field, it voted not to celebrate with champagne if they win the series, which they lead 2-0.

"We don't think it's appropriate," designated hitter Dave Parker said. "This team has a hollow feeling."

Baseball is still hoping to resume the Series Tuesday at Candlestick Park, provided the stadium is ready. There is a six-inch crack in the upper deck in right field, but that is under repair and apparently poses no danger.

An NFL game scheduled for Candlestick on Sunday between the 49ers and New England, however, was shifted 35 miles south to Stanford Stadium.

"We're in the process of jackhammering the stands. But everything is cosmetic," said Jorge Costa, vice president for stadium operation.

Giants Manager Roger Craig believes that, sort of.

"From what I hear about the stadium it's perfectly safe and I'm not afraid of it — really," Craig said. "But I'm managing from second base."

If all goes normal — and that's supposing a lot — Games 3 and 4 and 5, if necessary, would be at Candlestick. Games 6 and 7, if needed, would be back in Oakland. The Coliseum sustained no visible damage.

Of course, this will never be a normal World Series. No matter who wins, it will be remembered for tragedy more than triumph.

"Nobody wants to play right now," Oakland first baseman Mark McGwire said. "I know I wouldn't play if they asked us today."

"For the next week, minds will be wandering at the workouts," Giants reserve infielder Greg Litton said.

Both teams plan to practice every day until the Series resumes. With a forecast of rain over the weekend, Oakland Manager Tony La Russa said the team would train in Phoenix, if necessary.

Henderson, who has a history of skipping workouts, was absent and the Athletics said they didn't know where he was. La Russa said he left a message for Henderson on his answering machine.

"I'm not upset," La Russa said. "I don't know if he got the message."

Giants pitcher Kelly Downs also missed practice, but Craig said he got permission to go to Salt Lake City for a personal matter.

Craig said Don Robinson, who was just about to warm up when the earthquake struck Tuesday 30 minutes before gametime, will start Game 3, whenever it is played. Scott Garrelts, hit hard in the opener, will pitch the fourth game.

La Russa said he has considered bringing back Dave Stewart, who pitched a shutout in the opener, for the next game. Bob Welch was originally scheduled to pitch Game 3, and La Russa said no decision had been made.

As much as the teams tried to concentrate on baseball, other matters occupied their attention.

Giants General Manager Al Rosen was thinking about his son, Jim, who lost his house in the earthquake.

San Francisco trainer Mark Letendre was worrying about his father, who had a heart attack at Candlestick Park when the stadium shook. Bertrand Letendre, from Coral Gables, Fla., was to be released from the hospital on Thursday.

The Giants and Athletics said they would donate a significant portion of their World Series shares to the earthquake cleanup.

Oakland's Jose Canseco said he would make a personal contribution. And the outfielder, who is ridiculed for his 900-number hotline, planned to tape a special message urging fans to help the relief fund.

Falcons hope to prey on Cards

TEMPE (AP) — The Phoenix Cardinals keep throwing games away, and the Atlanta Falcons are hoping one comes their way Sunday.

The Falcons (2-4) will be looking for their second straight victory and first road win of the season while the Cardinals (2-4) try to snap a four-game losing streak.

Phoenix leads the NFL with 25 turnovers — 18 interceptions and seven lost fumbles — and their minus-17 giveaway-takeaway ratio is the worst in the league.

"If we don't turn that around, we're in big, big trouble," Cardinals Coach Gene Stallings said. "We can't afford to keep turning the ball over. We're also not a good team taking the ball away. We're continuing to give up big plays."

The Cardinals have thrown 16 interceptions in the last four games, resulting in losses to the New York Giants (35-7), San Diego (24-13), Washington (30-28) and Philadelphia (17-5).

Last week, second-year quarterback Tom Tupa made his first NFL start, and the Eagles sacked him six times and intercepted six of his passes.

Stallings said Gary Hogeboom, who sat out the Philadelphia game with a sore right elbow, will be back in the starting lineup Sunday.

Hogeboom has completed 100 of 169 passes for 1,341 yards and 10 touchdowns but has thrown nine interceptions and been sacked 10 times in his last three games.

"We have got to be focused on Atlanta — We need this one bad," Hogeboom said. "The last three weeks, we've played games we very easily could have won. We're working as hard as we can, but this team has too much talent to have the record we have now."

Phoenix has been beset by injuries to 11 starters since Sept. 10 and recent off-the-field problems involving center Derek Kennard and defensive end Freddie Joe Nunn.

Nunn is under league suspension until at least Oct. 25 for violating the NFL's substance-abuse policy while Kennard is out indefinitely. He entered a alcohol treatment center Wednesday after being charged with drunken driving for the third time in 13 months, two of the times being in the past five weeks.

"They're still a fine football team," Falcons Coach Marion Campbell said. "I know they'll come out swinging. They're a

Pac-10 play features USC

By The Associated Press

Southern Cal will try to break a six-game losing streak against Notre Dame Saturday when the ninth-ranked Trojans and top-ranked Fighting Irish meet in their annual intersectional battle in South Bend, Ind.

The Trojans bring a 5-1 record into the game, having lost only to 13th-ranked Illinois 14-13 in their season opener. USC hasn't beaten Notre Dame since 1982.

Notre Dame is 6-0 and has won 18 straight games dating back to last year, when it was 12-0 and won the national championship.

The Fighting Irish lead the series 33-23-4. At Notre Dame Stadium, the Irish hold a 17-8-1 advantage.

Last year, when the teams met at the Los Angeles Coliseum in the final regular-season game for both, Notre Dame won a 27-10 decision despite the fact that the Trojans had 356 yards in total offense to 253 for the Irish.

USC Coach Larry Smith is calling Saturday's game, "the biggest challenge of my career — as far as psychologically, X's and O's, blocking and tackling, you name it."

After the Trojans beat Cal last Saturday 31-15, Smith said of Notre Dame, "They may be the best team in 20 years. If we play the way we did (against Cal), we'll go up there and get killed."

Arizona (3-1 Pac-10, 4-2 overall), the 22nd-ranked team in the nation, controls its own destiny for the Pac-10 championship because the Wildcats plays host to USC on Nov. 11. If either the Wildcats or Trojans go through the rest of the conference schedule unbeaten, they will win the championship and play in the Rose Bowl game.

team in a similar situation to ours."

Atlanta ended its three-game losing skid last week with a 16-15 win over New England. The Falcons drove 67 yards in 11 plays in the final two minutes, setting up Paul McFadden's 22-yard field goal with five seconds remaining.

"It was good for the whole team to see that we could do that," quarterback Chris Miller said. "I was confident we could march down the field. But we hadn't done that before in a game in a two-minute drill. Now, our guys can look around and say, 'We can do that.'"

Miller has completed 101 of 160 passes this season for 1,259 yards and three touchdowns with two interceptions. He is the NFC's No. 5 rated passer and leads the league in lowest interception percentage.

"I feel a whole lot more comfortable out there," Miller said. "This is my third year in the league, but it really feels like my first. I was injured last year, and 1987 was a strike year and I only played a few games.

"I've progressed a lot. It's a maturation process. I can't rate myself up there with Elway, Marino, Cunningham or Montana yet. But from a confidence standpoint and knowledge of the game, I am getting better with each game and each snap."

Two former Northern Arizona University standout wide receivers Michael Haynes (shoulder) and Shawn Collins (elbow) are questionable for the game, which will be Atlanta's first-ever trip to Phoenix.

A crowd of about 40,000 is expected at 74,724-seat Sun Devil Stadium for the 1 p.m. kickoff in 85-degree weather.

HELP WANTED

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY

That's right. No experience is necessary. Just motivation to participate in the creation of the ASU Student Handbook and Calendar from conception to birth. And of course a commitment to a perfect offspring.

The 1990/91 Student Handbook and Calendar is looking for a handful of students to manage its advertising sales this semester. We need ten ad salespeople who are high energy, self-motivated individuals who would like to earn money.

This is an excellent opportunity for business-/marketing/communication majors to obtain hands-on experience.

Call Jackie Eldridge today. 965-6555
