Athlete investigated in assault, sources say

University police are investigating an ASU basketball player in connection with the sexual assault of a female student that occurred early Sunday in a room at Mariposa Residence Hall, police sources said.

A department source said the suspect under investigation is Iowa State University transfer Sam Mack. The source also said ASU Head Basketball Coach Bill Frieder telephoned police and told them that the alleged incident was a basketball matter, not a police matter.

No arrests have been made in the case, police said.

ASU officers were told about Frieder's call during Tuesday morning roll call, the source said.

"I did call them (police)," Frieder said Tuesday night. "When someone called me about a possible problem, I called them."

Another department source said ASU police were gathering information about Mack, who was acquitted in July of armed robbery and kidnapping charges in connection with the March holdup of an Ames, Iowa, Burger King.

Mack, 19, was shot twice by police as he left the restaurant and was arrested along with former ISU football player Levin White, who also was shot.

Mack's attorneys convinced Story County jurors that he was coerced into the robbery by White, who pleaded guilty to first-degree robbery and is serving a 25-year sentence.

Meanwhile, KCCI-TV in Des Moines, Iowa, reported Tuesday night that ASU police requested information from Ames police about Mack.

Acting ASU Police Chief Doug Bartosh said police have a suspect in the case but would not say if it was Mack.

When asked Tuesday if he had been contacted by ASU police, Mack said, "I don't know what you are talking about."

The junior communications major, who is ineligible to play for ASU this season because of his transfer, was the Sun Devils' leading scorer during the team's first preseason scrimmage.

Frieder would not say who told him about the incident and added that police would not provide him with any information. He also said he did not try to sway police into not investigating the matter.

"I might have told them if a police matter involved a basketball player, it's a basketball matter," Frieder said. "When I get all the facts, I am going to deal with it."

"If one of my players did something wrong, it is not going to be tolerated."

Controversy over cross nothing new to campus

By NICKI CARROLL

State Press

In 1948, Arizona State College had 4,000 students, a dress code on Sundays and a large controversy over a little chapel on the edge of campus.

Currently at ASU, 46,000 students make the campus the fifth largest in the United States, skirts below the knee are obsolete and a large controversy over a little chapel has the campus in a tizzy.

Again.

Today, the issue of whether the cross should remain atop Danforth Chapel will have its day in court — literally, with a suit filed recently by the Arizona Civil Liberties Union.

But 40 years ago, a concerned student — with a hacksaw — handled the controversy more personally.

The roots of the cross debate reach back to the years before construction began on the chapel.

On Feb. 1, 1945, William Danforth, founder and chairman of the board of the Ralston Purina company, was asked by his friend William Hutchins, an English professor at Arizona State College, to donate money to start a college chapel fund.

Danforth had helped other colleges around the country build meditation chapels. He spent his winters at the San Marcos hotel in Chandler and took an avid interest in the ASC project.

On March 13, he made an offer of $5,000 to then-President Grady Gammage to establish a nondenominational campus chapel. The money was given on the conditions that a painting of Christ be hung in the chapel, that the structure be called the Danforth Chapel and that an inscription furnished by Danforth be displayed somewhere in the building.

Three days later, the Student Religious Council, consisting of multifith student religious group leaders, accepted the gift and formed a chapel committee to raise funds for the new building.

The total cost for the project was estimated at $15,000. Chapel committee members aggressively set out to make up the $10,000 difference. They shined shoes, held campus carnivals and solicited campus organizations for donations.

Their two-year efforts, combined with faculty, alumni and community donations, raised $6,812.58.

By December 1946, the chapel site had been selected, architect Harold Eckman had finished preliminary drawings, and construction plans were approved.

A Phoenix building firm, Lescher and Mahoney, presented blueprints — which included a copper-covered wooden cross — to the committee, on Dec. 12, 1946.

Not until May 5, 1947, did anyone bring up the idea that the cross discriminated against non-Christians who might want to use the chapel.

According to Ronald Wyllys, Religious Council president at the time, a representative from the Hillel Jewish Student Center asked that the cross not be placed on the chapel. Wyllys said the council overwhelmingly approved the suggestion.

"Plans were being made with the understanding of all of us on the Student Religious Council that the chapel was to be nondenominational," said Wyllys, now the 59-year-old dean of the graduate school of information and library sciences at the University of Texas in Austin.

ASC Comptroller Gilbert Cady was then in Steve Tseffos, a representative of the chairman of the Tempe Sports Authority baseball committee, addressed the Associated Students of ASU Senate meeting Tuesday night. Tseffos said a measure condemning a proposed professional ball park on University grounds would be premature because the project is still in the "fact-finding" stages. The Senate, however, approved the resolution opposing the stadium.

ASASU Senate rejects planned baseball park

By MARK CRISMON

State Press

The Associated Students of ASU Senate passed a resolution Tuesday opposing the construction of a baseball park at the University, despite objections from a group seeking to bring a stadium to Tempe.

Larson

The stadium will "likely complicate traffic and create considerable amounts of noise and light pollution."

The resolution, which passed 14-6, states that ASU "should be dedicated to the pursuit of academic excellence."

It also claims that the proposed site could be put to "uses of greater concern to the students," and the

"The addition of another professional sports facility is not conducive to the preservation of the academic environment and reputation we (ASU) seek to promote."

Steve Tseffos, representing John Benton, the chairman of the Tempe Sports Authority's baseball committee, told the Senate the resolution was premature. He asked that a vote on the resolution be delayed until after a proposal for the stadium was presented to the University.

He said there is a tremendous amount of misinformation surrounding the committee's efforts and thinks the Senate should be "gathering information" that will allow an "informed decision" to be made.

He asked that the committee be given "a chance to solve parking and traffic concerns and any other problems you (the Senate) might foresee before

Virginia elects 1st black governor; Dinkins becomes mayor of NYC

(AP) — L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia, the grandson of slaves, clung to a slender lead Tuesday over J. Marshall Coleman in his bid to become the nation's first elected black governor. Democratic Rep. James Florio won the New Jersey governorship handily, ending eight years of Republican control.

Democrat David Dinkins moved ahead in his drive for distinction as New York City's first black mayor, the third high profile race of off-year elections enlivened by the combustible mix of race and abortion. The three TV networks said he would win, based on interviews with voters leaving their polling places.

In the sole congressional seat on the ballot, early returns from Texas put Houston City Councilman Anthony Hall and state Sen. Craig Washington far out front in an 11-way race to succeed the late Rep. Mickey Leland. Neither Democrat was gaining 50 percent of the vote needed to avoid a run-off.

With 98 percent of the Virginia precincts counted, Wilder held a lead of less than 5,300 votes in a long count.

Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown claimed victory for Wilder and Dinkins as well as Florio, and GOP chairman Lee Atwater did not dispute him. Atwater said abortion "made a difference" for the pro-choice Democratic candidates in all three races but said the results would have no bearing on the 1990 elections, with 34 Senate seats, 36 governorships and all 435 House seats on the ballot.

With 98 percent of the Virginia precincts counted, Lt. Gov. Wilder had 874,013 votes or 50 percent. His Republican rival, Coleman, had 868,734 votes or 50 percent.

In New York's race, with 86 percent of the precincts counted, Dinkins had 770,796 votes or 50 percent and Republican Rudolph Giuliani had 733,260 votes or 48 percent.

Dinkins, the 62-year-old Manhattan borough president, ran as the man who could bring racial harmony to the nation's largest city. Giuliani, 45 and a former U. S. attorney making his first try for elective office, hammered away at his rival's transfer of stock to a son and his failure to file income-tax returns for four years two decades ago.

Administration urges no changes to wage bill; vote delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration urged Republican senators Tuesday not to undermine a compromise to increase the minimum wage by seeking to amend the deal.

A final vote on the plan was delayed until this morning by congressional action to increase the government's debt ceiling.

Because of the delay, it was unclear whether several GOP senators said to be mulling amendments, would honor the administration's request, delivered in a letter to the Senate from Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

It appeared, however, that at least one amendment would be offered, a proposal by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to exempt small businesses from the increase in the minimum wage. The amendment, if offered, was expected to fail.

Talks on raising the debt limit dragged on throughout the day, and Tuesday evening it was announced the minimum-wage vote would be today.

The legislation, as it now stands, would increase the hourly minimum wage from $3.35 to $3.80 next April 1 and to $4.25 a year later. It also would create a new, subminimum "training wage" for workers 16-19 years old new to the job market. All workers in that age group could be paid the subminimum for their first three months and for another three months if enrolled in approved training programs.

President Aquino defends record on human rights in Philippines

OTTAWA (AP) — President Corazon Aquino of the Philippines on Tuesday defended her government's record on human rights, saying she was personally committed because she had been a victim of abuses.

Speaking with reporters following a meeting with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, she said, "I would like to tell you that having been a victim of human rights abuses myself, I am certainly committed. In fact I have stated throughout my administration that we will not tolerate any violations of human rights."

Her husband, Benigno Aquino, was shot to death in 1983 at the Manila airport when he returned from self-exile in the United States to campaign against President Ferdinand Marcos.

Mrs. Aquino became president after Marcos was ousted in a military-civilian uprising in February 1986.

Several human rights groups claim Mrs. Aquino's government has failed to control army and paramilitary groups that the groups say violate rights in the fight against Communist rebels.

Mrs. Aquino is on a four-day visit to Canada and then will go to the United States for four days.

Customs Service probing trouble with drug surveillance planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Customs Service is investigating whether its supervisors at a vital drug surveillance center covered up problems with high-tech radar planes, and a House member said Tuesday he'll seek congressional hearings "to get to the bottom of this."

The Surveillance Support Center operates seven detection aircraft, including two four-engine Lockheed P-3 Orions that were turned into state-of-the-art airborne early warning (AEW) planes for the drug war.

The aircraft were outfitted with computer systems and ultra-modern graphic displays to locate drug smuggler planes — which are estimated by the government to carry about half the cocaine reaching the United States.

The first P-3 AEW, which arrived in June 1988 at a cost of $27 million, has been plagued by electronic and mechanical problems that seriously compromise its ability to find and track drug-smuggling aircraft, according to Customs Service documents.

Deficiencies have included an unreliable computer system that has trouble locating and tracking smugglers; faulty on-board communications for the crew and a problem with a spinning, metal radar dome, according to the documents, most of which were written by crew members.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., a Government Operations Committee member who has conducted numerous hearings on the customs program for interdicting airborne drug smugglers, said he would request hearings by the full committee.

Postal Service to begin testing self-adhesive stamps in 15 cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U. S. Postal Service is about to begin testing peel-and-stick postage stamps in 15 cities, including Phoenix, but buyers will have to pay extra for the convenience.

Eighteen of the 25-cent stamps will be sold in a sheet that folds into a booklet. The price will be $5, 50 cents more than the face value of the stamps.

"It is expected to appeal to consumers willing to pay extra for a deluxe product," the Postal Service said in announcing the test marketing program.

The stamp, which displays artwork of an eagle and shield, will go on sale for the first time Friday at a stamp show in Virginia Beach, Va.

University Club

Regents' request for further study ignored by ASU

Lynn Vavreck
Editorial Asst.

The sign outside of the Fine Arts Annex reads "University Club." A bit premature for a project that has yet to gain funding from the Arizona Board of Regents.

What makes the University Club backers so sure that the project will receive funding the next time it goes before the Board?

They are willing to lie to get it, that's what.

At the September Board meeting, several regents requested more detailed financial information about the dining facility before allocating funds.

The proposed funding is from the investment fund — a collection of revenues off items like parking decals and book store sales — money generated by students.

Vice President for Business Affairs Victor Zafra said after the regents meeting that the next step would be to hire a consultant to study the economic issues of the club.

But this is not happening.

John Haldane, acting assistant to the vice president, is in charge of collecting information for this project. He said the University is not employing a consultant and will use data that is six months old when it presents the issue to the regents' resources committee in January.

The study Haldane was referring to was performed by a certified public accountant who works for the University Club of Phoenix, hardly a fair comparison to the proposed ASU club. It is doubtful that this is what the regents had in mind when they asked to see more data that was less generic.

It seems there are a lot of things the regents don't know about ASU and the University Club. For example, Regent Donald Pitt compared the faculty's need for a University Club to the students' need for the new Student Recreation Complex.

Has Regent Pitt completely forgotten that ASU students paid for every penny of that rec center? Maybe this shows how much attention Regent Pitt is paying to Arizona State University.

If the faculty and staff want or need a fine dining facility as badly as the students wanted or needed a rec center, then let them raise all the money to build and operate the facility.

The only similarity between these two projects is that both are underfunded, but Regent Pitt probably didn't know that either.

But we can't blame the regents for information that is not accurately presented to them. That is why it is critical for the University to hire a consultant, someone in food services or the restaurant business, like they said they would, to determine whether or not the club can be self-sustaining.

If the University really wants or needs this club so badly, then you would think they would anxiously do another study to prove the feasibility of the club to the regents.

But just the opposite is true. By not doing a complete and recent study, the University is proving another, more subtle point. They want the club built, and they don't care how or who pays for it.

'A real study might prove that the University Club could never make enough money to pay the students back the money it "borrowed."'

What would be the harm in conducting another study? A study done this time by someone familiar with the area of food services? The harm is that maybe a real study will prove that the University Club can not be profitable on this campus. After all, university clubs all over the country are failing miserably.

A real study might prove that the University Club could never make enough money to pay the students back the money it "borrowed."

What would be even worse than using student dollars to build this club would be getting the approval to use those dollars through deception and trickery. The University promised the regents it would bring them more information, less generic information, and Vice President Zafra said the next logical step would be to hire a consultant to do the research.

Unless the University follows through on this and does another study of the financing possibilities, it has lied.

The fact that they are so sure this funding request will pass at the next regents' meeting is ridiculous. What do the club-backers know that nobody else does? Is there some secret population of faculty and staff that will emerge from nowhere to patronize this club during winter and summer off-seasons? Is there ample parking around the facility that nobody else knows about? Are there enough patrons willing to pay $25 a plate for dinner, plus an initiation fee, plus a monthly fee, plus a tip?

Why is everyone concerned about these questions except the University Club Board of Directors? It seems all they're worried about is sneaking by the Board of Regents with old and generic information and being the first people to dine in the new elegant restaurant.

The University Club is a fine idea; funding it with student dollars that will never be paid back is not. If the University can prove that the club could make enough money to pay back the students, plus interest, then the idea should be considered. But without even making an honest attempt to prove the club can make it, the University is admitting that it can't.

It's time for physical plant to take down that sign. One hopes the Board of Regents will agree.

Drinking and driving

Editor:

On Friday, Oct. 13, a group of ASU students were together in one apartment listening to music, talking and drinking beer. Around 11 p.m., there was a knock at the door and two Mesa police officers were invited into the apartment. Without any warning, the officers told everyone that the party was over and that they were all to go home.

Considering the party occurred more than two miles from the ASU campus, it is hard to believe those officers thought everyone at the party lived close enough to walk home.

In light of the problems our society has with people who drink and drive, it is very hard to understand how a person in a position of authority, and especially a police officer, could tell a group of students who have been drinking to go home.

While the officers did not mean to let anyone drive while drunk (as there was a third officer waiting in the parking lot), their actions are not excused. There must be a better way to educate people about the dangers of drinking and driving than to scare them into doing it and then arrest them for it.

Perestroika

Soviet economy in worse shape than previously thought

Cody Shearer
North American Syndicate

WASHINGTON — A friend recently returned from the Soviet Union with this startling revelation. The large miners' strike that took place several months ago in Siberia was not triggered by an appalling lack of safety standards. The uprising was touched off by a lack of soap. It turns out for months prior to the strike, there had been no soap to use around the mines or to buy in the nearest town.

As a result of an increasingly free press, news is leaking out that suggest the Soviet Union is and always has been a backward Third World country. The evidence indicates, for example, that millions of Russians have not eaten meat in 10 years. Moreover, Soviet citizens cannot feed or house themselves and make nothing that the rest of the world wants to buy.

There are other explanations for unhappiness in the Soviet Union. Consider the environment. Last year, heavy Soviet industry discharged 40 million tons of poisonous chemicals into the atmosphere. And of the 158 environmental clean-up projects ordered at the beginning of the year, only 10 have begun. The Soviet Union is fast transforming itself into a potential ecological wasteland.

The latest anxieties about the environment have been set off by reports that much of the scarce food supplies around the country are laced with poisonous pesticides. Horror stories are plentiful that suggest sausage-makers, for example, meet production quotas by twice boiling rejected products.

'As a result of an increasingly free press, news is leaking out that suggest the Soviet Union is and always has been a backward Third World country.'

Mikhail Gorbachev returned home from Finland the other day and was confronted with grim news that the Russian economy has grown worse — if that's possible — during the past three months. In the face of a mounting $143 billion deficit, production has dropped dramatically and food supplies in many areas are declining rapidly. And food distribution conditions aren't much better. Approximately 176,000 containers and 22,000 railway vans, containing food and other goods, are stuck in depots.

In addition to these nightmares, Gorbachev must preside over a corrupt bureaucratic structure that services favoritism and exploitation. As much as he might like to balance certain aspects of Soviet life, he can't abolish the special roads in Moscow and other favors that are reserved for party bosses.

While official Washington ventures private wagers on Gorbachev's ability to hold his crippling nation together and survive politically, the Soviet leader finds himself with the inevitable task of slowly abandoning the Soviet economic system. He knows he must make rapid progress toward a free market, private property and the sale of unprofitable state enterprises. Perhaps, the December summit with Bush will help him in this regard. Gorbachev's foremost challenge is the attitudes of the Soviet people. Most of them, after all, are indifferent and skeptical after decades of fear, regulations and a lack of any personal responsibility. His immediate goal must be to fire their imaginations and forge a definition of purpose.

In learning more and more about the real Soviet Union, one has to wonder how a government of nearly 300 million people managed to claim a standard of living that 99 percent of them don't enjoy or could ever aspire to? How is it that U. S. public officials never gave the American people an accurate assessment of Soviet limitations?

Why did Washington spend so much of the taxpayers' money defending itself against a particularly regressive Third World nation?

The FBI has been conducting a top-secret investigation in recent months to determine if a former National Security Administration (NSA) employee has assisted Gen. Manuel Noriega jam U. S. technological hardware. Frustrated by Panama's new jamming capabilities, Washington has been unable to obtain the kind of raw intelligence it once used to track every step Noriega took. At present, no U. S. intelligence renegades have been nabbed. It appears as if Noriega has taken advantage of highly sophisticated East German assistance to skirt the long arms of the U. S. intelligence community.

It's difficult to believe in this day that a nation would conduct a war on abortion and contraception, but that is what is happening in Ireland. Last week, for instance, Cosmopolitan magazine was forbidden by Ireland's Office of Censorship of Publications from carrying advertisements for abortion agencies in other countries. (Abortions are permitted in every European Community nation except Ireland and Belgium.) Moreover, Irish authorities are now prosecuting those who sell condoms. The penalty for doing so is comparable with those arrested for drug dealing.

For the first time ever, investment by foreigners in the United States exceeded investment abroad by Americans in 1988, according to the Securities Industry Association. Foreign direct investment in the United States totaled $328.9 billion, compared with $326.9 billion invested by Americans in overseas nations. Regardless of this news, the total value of foreign assets held by U. S. investors is still twice the value of U. S. assets owned by foreigners.

Why Bush may be stuck with Quayle in '94

Jeff Greenfield
Universal Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — A new California poll says that President Bush is doing well among that state's citizens, but that only 22 percent rate Vice President Dan Quayle's performance in office as good or excellent; fully 31 percent rate him as "poor" or "very poor." Those are remarkably grim numbers given the relative contentment with the way things are going in the country.

Veteran sleuth Jack Anderson goes on national television to report that there is already talk within the White House and the Cabinet of replacing Quayle with HUD Secretary Jack Kemp come 1992.

There are three lessons to be learned from this:

First, on a slow news days, anything can make the papers.

Second, even in an age of "manufactured consent," when every official above the level of dog catcher has professional media advisers, it is not always easy to change a public perception — even with the resource of the vice presidency at hand to do so.

Dan Quayle stumbled onto the national stage last August in New Orleans when, as the surprise choice of George Bush for vice president, he gave a disastrous press conference in front of approximately 6 million reporters (OK, maybe it was a few thousand).

He got a tremendous boost when — by accident or by design — he held a free-for-all news conference in Huntington, Ind., just after his nomination in which the press looked like a bunch of sharks. Clearly, the country, in general, was disposed to give the young man another chance.

Instead, Sen. Quayle proceeded to go out and earn the bum rap with so many insertions of foot in mouth that, in the last days of the campaign, he was reduced to appearing before groups of Mouseketeers in the remotest ranges of the Wasatch Mountains. The slogan of the Bush campaign seemed to be: "Keep this man off the tube!"

The real shocker for me, however, came after the inauguration. In political journalism, the pendulum effect is very powerful; as soon as the pack has moved to one judgment ("Quayle's a moron"), there is an inevitable corrective movement ("Hey, Quayle's OK").

In fact, I was certain that a half-dozen or so serious speeches, combined with some self-effacing humor, would quickly rehabilitate the vice president.

It hasn't happened yet. Why? In the first place, there is a powerful constituency that needs Dan Quayle as a target: not the Democrats but America's professional comedians.

There is no way that Jay Leno, who coined the classic line about the movie of Quayle's life — "Full Dinner Jacket" — would let so juicy a punch line go quietly. Nor would Johnny Carson nor would David Letterman.

Without inflating this beyond its natural borders, the constant use of a public figure as a source of humor imposes a substantial handicap on anyone trying to look good.

'Such critical rigor suggests that Mr. Quayle still finds himself in the cross hairs of the national media.'

More important, Quayle himself continues to cooperate. He has appeared before small groups of journalists and been given good marks — only to go before the United Negro College Fund and, attempting to echo its slogan that "a mind is a terrible thing to waste," observed "What a terrible thing it is to lose one's mind — or not to have a mind at all."

He goes to observe the Bay area earthquake and gets into a nasty political spitting contest with the mayor of San Francisco, and then describes the plight of the victims as "heart-rendering."

It is, in my view, significant that the last national figure to be caught in every mangling of the English language was Ted Kennedy, in the first, worst days of his 1980 run for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Such critical rigor suggests that Mr. Quayle still finds himself in the cross hairs of the national media.

And what of the third lesson? That is yet to be played out, but it is connected with the fact that dumping vice presidents is a lot easier talked about than done.

Franklin Roosevelt got rid of John Nance Garner in 1940 because Garner actively tried to deny Roosevelt a third term; he was a political enemy. Henry Wallace was dumped in 1944 because party leaders simply could not tolerate the idea of a radical one heartbeat away from the White House — especially given FDR's health.

And in 1976, Nelson Rockefeller was "volunteered" out of office as the price of getting conservative support for President Ford in his nomination fight against Ronald Reagan.

Dan Quayle, however, remains George Bush's personal decision. How does he dump him without appearing to concede bad judgment in the first place? Unless it looks like a factor that will cost him the White House, don't start calling the moving van yet.

Stadium

coming out with a blanket resolution against the stadium."

"We invite you to participate in this project by assigning a committee or liaison that we can work with to keep the Senate abreast of our progress and ensure that your important input is heard," Tseffos said.

Tami Willingham, ASASU vice president for campus affairs, said the Senate's resolution is an effort to act proactively rather than reactively.

ASASU President Paul Larson echoed the Senate's view.

"The campus of ASU or any other campus is a wholly inappropriate place for it (the stadium)," he said.

But Larson said he would like to see a baseball team "somewhere in the state of Arizona."

Larson said he thinks the majority of the Tempe City Council is in favor of the stadium being built at the proposed site, which is in Lot 59, just west of Packard Stadium.

Before a stadium can be built, it first must be approved by the University and then the Arizona Board of Regents, Larson added.

"If and when a proposal is made to the University, a referendum would be an appropriate method to articulate the students' view point," he said.

Tseffos said after the vote he was "truly disappointed."

"I applaud the senators who had the good sense to hold off on this until more information is known," he said. "The resolution is detrimental to the democratic process."

Tseffos said if the Senate had waited to see a proposal, the possible benefits to the University and the students could be examined objectively.

The proposed stadium will be an open baseball-only facility that will be used strictly for professional baseball. Packard Stadium still will remain home to the ASU baseball team.

Allan Barfield, a College of Law senator who voted against the resolution, said the stadium could be advantageous to the campus.

"Nobody ever wants anything good for a community if it's right next door," he said.

Assault

Athletic Director Charles Harris said he was informed Tuesday by ASU police that an ASU athlete was under investigation. He said police always notify his office about any incidents involving athletes on campus.

The incident occurred between 12:30 and 12:50 a.m. Sunday in a Mariposa room rented by two ASU basketball players. The 18-year-old victim reported the incident late Monday night, Jones said.

Police said the victim was convinced by friends to report the incident.

According to the police report, the victim was "frightened" by the suspect because he was "a big and overpowering type of guy. Also because she knew of his past record."

Mack, a basketball standout at Iowa State, transferred to ASU this semester after he was acquitted.

Residents cite reasons for opposition to supermarket

By JOIE ANN LaPOLLA
State Press

A Tempe residents group opposed to the construction of a supermarket on the corner of Rural Road and Southern Avenue said Tuesday it has collected more than 1,800 signatures.

The group, armed with picket signs and wearing bright pink hearts that represented the "heart of Tempe," held a press conference in front of City Council chambers late Tuesday morning.

However, the Tempe School District has obtained about 1,200 signatures supporting the proposed Smith's supermarket, said Augie Orci, the superintendent of District No. 3.

"The reason (for the support) is the lease of property to Smith's will generate about $220,000 per year for the school district," Orci said.

Councilman Bill Ream said the district collected the signatures in the past two weeks.

The school district has leased the property to Smith's, which will be the largest supermarket in Tempe, for the next 50 years. Orci said the total revenue gained from the lease will add about $19 million to the district's budget.

"Rural and Southern are at the heart of Tempe, so please don't ruin it with a grocery store," said Mario Martinez, an ASU computer programmer, who led the petition drive and past protests.

The Tempe City Council is expected to vote Thursday night on the rezoning of the land for the commercial purpose of constructing a supermarket.

The council was supposed to vote on the measure at its Oct. 19 meeting that was packed with citizens, but the vote was delayed because three-fourths of the council was not present. That number is needed to either pass or reject the measure.

The group believes that a supermarket will increase the already heavy traffic flow at the corner and add to overcongestion of the neighborhood, said Martinez, who has conducted a financial analysis of the proposal.

In addition, Martinez said Smith's will fall short of the city's projected tax revenue goal.

However, Ream rejects the group's analysis, which claimed that the market will have to gross $55 million a year in order to generate the necessary revenue.

"There is no way you can make it (the supermarket) work with the way they came up with that," Ream said, referring to the formula used to calculate the necessary revenue.

Gary Harris, a member of the group opposed to the supermarket, said it is "more than a neighborhood issue, it is an infill issue."

"Infill becomes a key issue in the rest of Tempe's life," Harris said. "They take public land and put it to commercial use without an increase in taxes — there is no benefit."

Ream said he supports the measure, but that the council is just voting on the zoning of the property not the "extraneous" matters that the group cited.

"It is not the City Council's job to weigh impacts of zoning," Ream said. "All other things are extraneous. Economic things are not to be considered in land use.

Jack Beasley Jr./State Press

"We (get the) request to zone land, (the other items) are valuable but not relevant to the zoning decision."

Orci said the district leased the property because of the state's lack of funding for public education.

"The Legislature has not met the needs of public education in this state," Orci said.

"The need (for revenue) is so great that we will lease or sell surplus property."

But Jalma Hunsinger, a 20-year Tempe resident and member of the group, said the issue is about preserving the "quality of life" in Tempe not the funding of education.

Both Ream and Orci countered the group's argument that the supermarket would increase the traffic flow.

"Traffic is a big problem at that intersection, but the traffic problem at peak hours will not be affected at all," Ream said. "The other times traffic will remain heavy, (anyway)."

Cross

charge of coordinating the development of the building, and construction was progressing rapidly.

"When the building was nearing completion, there was a cross on top," Wyllys said. "We petitioned the administration of the University to have the cross removed.

"Nothing happened for several months. We got more and more concerned over it."

According to a letter sent by Gammage to a disgruntled alumnus, William Daws, the cross was never taken out of the original blueprints even though the Religious Council had voted for its removal.

The letter states that Cady "failed to communicate this action (the plan to keep the cross off the building) to the foreman who was supervising the day labor of the erection of the chapel. Consequently, he followed the blueprints."

A note in the files of the 1948 Religious Council said that when the cross arrived on campus, Cady asked Mildred Sayre, dean of women students, what should be done with it. The note states, "Dean Sayre replied that it was voted not to be put on."

However, Cady allowed the workmen to place the cross on the cupola of the chapel.

Gammage further defended Cady in the letter to Daws, "After the cross was erected, it seemed the finest architectural feature of the whole building. I asked for it to remain there until further consideration was given the matter."

Gammage went on to say the executive committee of the Arizona Board of Regents felt the same way. The letter said one member of the Board claimed that no objection would come from the Jewish people and that he personally would see the local rabbi if it did.

No mention was made of the Student Religious Council's original vote.

Wyllys said the council inundated the administration with requests to remove the cross, but a week before the formal dedication of the chapel, the symbol had still not been removed.

"We felt it would be inappropriate for the chapel to be dedicated with a cross," Wyllys said.

The 17-year-old math student decided to do something about it.

"One Saturday morning about 10 a.m., I borrowed a tall ladder from the maintenance department," Wyllys said. "I climbed up on top of the building with a hacksaw and cut the cross off.

"I remember waving at people from the top of the chapel."

Wyllys said he put the cross in the janitors' closet of the chapel and waited for the inevitable.

On Monday morning, it came.

"I got an oral scolding from President Gammage when he called me into his office," Wyllys said. "I didn't try to hide the fact. I was rather proud of it."

Wyllys said that with only four days to go until the dedication ceremonies, the campus administration was frantic. Some officials called for Gammage to fire Wyllys' father, R. K. Wyllys, who was the head of the history department.

"To President Gammage's credit, he didn't do it," Wyllys said.

The Rev. Frederick Barnhill, a speaker at the dedication, said the cross removal didn't hamper but heightened the ceremony.

"I didn't think it belonged," said Barnhill, now the 82-year-old priest of All Saints Episcopal Church. "The Danforth Chapel was not meant to be a Christian chapel.

"The meditation chapel gives you a place to drop in and practice religion no matter what your faith."

After the dedication, the cross issue was ignored for almost five years.

In the fall of 1952, Cady formed a committee to refurbish the chapel. On Nov. 13, he held a meeting to go over the redecorating plans. They included new furnishings, painting the walls, putting in stain-glass windows — and re-establishing the cross.

Very quietly the cross was placed on Danforth's cupola "on a temporary basis for the holidays," according to a letter from and ASC dean who was a friend of Cady's. No newspaper carried the story, and no student religious groups protested. It seemed as though no one noticed the new symbol on campus.

Except for Dean J. O. Grimes.

Grimes was the dean of the correspondence school for ASC. He championed a one-man fight to remove the cross — but it was only on paper.

On Jan. 10, 1953, Cady's temporary action had not yet been removed. Grimes wrote his friend with a suggestion to solve the problem.

"To me the answer is clear," Grimes said in the letter. "Put no symbol on top of or on the exterior of the chapel. It is dedicated to all who worship a Supreme Being. Why should the majority insist on a symbolism that is offensive to minorities?"

"Therefore, let's saw off the cross from that yankee-cheese-box-on-a-raft once again, and let it stay sawed off for good this time."

His first memo did not generate any response, so he took his case to the Rev. Charles Crouch, coordinator of religious activities for ASC.

In a letter dated Jan. 21, 1953, Grimes states, "A number of the students feel that a policy has been forced upon them without their consideration or approval."

He went on to say that neither the Religious Council nor the administration had approved Cady's actions.

"Policy-making is the function of the Administrative Council, not of any one individual," Grimes said in the letter. "It seems the drive is now to make the temporary, permanent.

"Suppression or totalitarian methods never furthered the cause of religion on any campus elsewhere."

This letter got Cady's attention. He took the matter to President Gammage.

"I think he (Grimes) is sincere in feeling that my actions have been 'those of a dictator', since I, according to him, dictated the cross be re-established," Cady wrote to Gammage on Jan. 22, 1953. "But so far he doesn't realize that he's attempting to dictate its removal."

Cady said he volunteered his plans to anyone who was interested and was not trying to force anything on anyone.

"If this course of action is construed to be the actions of a dictator, I'd like to submit that I am at least a considerate, democratic, cooperative type of a dictator," the letter said. "Ike's in the White House, God's in his heaven, if we can get Him back in the chapel, everything is bound to be rosy."

Cady's wish was granted, and the cross remained until the issue grew cold.

It was 36 years later before the issue was formally raised again.

In the spring of 1989, ASU Professor Randell Helms introduced a measure into the Faculty Senate asking for the removal of the cross. The faculty approved the motion. The action was echoed by the Associated Students of ASU Senate and the ASU Interfaith Council.

The ASU administration chose to leave the cross up and let the courts decide the issue.

A lawsuit filed by the Arizona Civil Liberties Union against the University asking for the removal of the symbol will make sure the issue is heard by the legal system.

The legal decision on the Danforth cross is drawing near, and now, just as in 1948, the cross is being debated in all corners of the campus.

Ronald Wyllys said he is happy to see the issue, which he set fire to decades ago, has been rekindled.

"I think just what I thought 40 years ago," Wyllys said. "It's inappropriate for a chapel on a public university to have a specific religious symbol on it."

ASASU Senate votes to preserve historic buildings

By MARTY SAUERZOPF
State Press

The Associated Students of ASU Senate overwhelmingly approved a resolution Tuesday night in support of preserving West and Dixie Gammage halls, which are in danger of being destroyed to make way for Phase II of the Hayden Library expansion.

The resolution, which states the two buildings have "significant value to past, present and future students at this institution," passed 17-3. The measure was introduced by College of Engineering Sen. James Shirley, chairman of the University Affairs Committee.

"West Hall is one of the few historic buildings left at Arizona State," Shirley said, adding that this resolution reaffirmed a similar measure passed by the Senate in May 1988.

Shirley said he could not find a copy of last year's resolution in the ASASU records.

The Senate amended the resolution to include Dixie

Gammage Hall, which is attached to the west side of West Hall, because senators said they felt both buildings had historical significance for the University.

College of Education Sen. Anne Borhardt said: "I couldn't see tearing down West Hall and leaving Dixie Gammage. If one should stay, both should stay."

She added that the University should make better use of the buildings it already has, "instead of knocking everything down and getting bigger and bigger."

Sen. Chris Stiles from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences agreed, saying, "We need to pay tribute to the historical aspects we already have."

Phase II of the Hayden Library expansion is scheduled for development in 1991 or 1992. Phase I of the expansion, the Hayden Underground Building, was completed earlier this year.

West Hall, located across West Lawn from the library, is the last remaining building of what used to be the "quad," consisting of North, South, East and West halls.

Bob Carroll, from the School of Social Work, which is housed in West Hall, voted against the measure because he said he had been informed that the school would be getting a new building within the next six years.

Carroll said he could not reveal where he heard the information but assured the Senate that it was on the "highest authority."

Social work Sen. Nancy Mork said she was "adamantly opposed" to the destruction of the building because it provided the relatively small college with a place for students to meet.

There are currently 272 undergraduate and 430 graduate students enrolled in the School of Social Work.

"I'm opposed to building another library," Mork said, adding that she felt the University should spend its money on projects other than new buildings.

The resolution passed by last year's Senate stated that the ASU administration "should not pursue a goal of capital expansion at the expense of effective education."

State secretary speaks on voter registration

By KELLY JAIN
State Press

Arizona Secretary of State Jim Shumway, speaking to about 25 students at an ASU Young Democrats meeting Tuesday, said Arizona desperately needs to cut its voter registration period to 30 days before the election.

The current voter registration period is 50 days. Shumway said registering 30 days before the election would allow more people to vote because many change addresses.

"Twenty-seven percent of Arizona's population will change addresses in any given year," he said.

Secondly, people get more interested in the issues and are more inclined to register to vote as the election day comes closer, he said.

The 30-day registration bill will be proposed to the state Legislature in November, Shumway said.

"I think it will pass (next-session)," he said.

Currently, the U.S. House of Representatives is considering a 30-day voter registration bill that would allow the shorter cutoff "in any and every case throughout the United States," he said.

The national legislation also proposes voter registration by mail, which means registration forms could be picked up at any public location and mailed, Shumway said.

In addition, the legislation proposes agency-based registration, which means any government agency providing licensing would be required to provide voter registration forms.

"That makes the whole registration voter process accessible to almost anyone, anywhere at any time without making virtually any effort to get out there and do it," Shumway said.

Shumway

In February, Shumway will have worked in the secretary of state's office for 10 years. He was appointed as Arizona's 14th secretary of state in April 1988 after Gov. Rose Mofford took over after the impeachment of Evan Mecham.

Shumway grew up in Tempe, graduated from Tempe High School and later attended ASU. Shumway began his career in 1961 with the Maricopa County Election Department.

Liberal Arts college elects new executive council members

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
State Press

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences selected its executive council members in an election held Tuesday.

The newly elected officers are starting over because the council was inadequate last year, said Chris Styles, an Associated Students of ASU senator from the college.

"Last year we had people that were elected for offices to put on their resumes," he said, adding that the previous members did not follow through with their ideas. "Eventually, the leadership vaporized."

The executive council is the representative of the college on campus and serves as a liaison between liberal arts students and ASASU.

Walter Richter, who was elected president of the council in a run-off election with Justin Plummer, said he is prepared for the challenges and is ready to involve liberal arts students in the council's decisions.

Richter said one of his main objectives as president is "to be as easily accessible to the students as possible." He added that he would like the programming of the council to benefit various groups on campus — not just liberal arts students.

Other officers elected to council Tuesday were Lionel Estrada, executive vice president; Angela Barone, activities vice president; Gary Starikoff, public-relations vice president; Greg Edgar, treasurer; Jennie Lemon, faculty liaison; and Bob Johnson, parliamentarian.

Richter, who is also president of ASU's Young Democrats, said his new role on the council will not interfere with his current duties.

Johnson, who is president of the Arizona chapter of the Young Democrats, said there is no conflict of interest between the two groups, which are unrelated.

The council will plan different events such as guest speakers and fund-raising concerts, Richter said.

Richter and Estrada previously worked together as president and vice president, respectively, of Associated Students of Scottsdale Community College.

"All of our council members have a lot of experience," Richter said.

The Usual Suspects

Visiting the colony

IN HONG KONG Prince Charles and Princess Diana got an extravagant colonial welcome Tuesday as they began their visit to the British territory that has been shaken by the approach of Chinese rule in 1997.

A 21-gun salute reverberated over Hong Kong's famed harbor as the couple stepped off their plane to be greeted by Gov. Sir David Wilson and his wife.

The welcome came despite a flare-up of anti-British sentiment this summer, when London made clear it will permit only a fraction of Hong Kong's 5.7 million people to settle in Britain after the communist Chinese take over.

Charles and Diana then boarded the governor's yacht for the short trip across the harbor for an arrival ceremony that included brightly colored lasers flashing across the sky, a variety show and a traditional Chinese fan dance.

Dafoe at Auschwitz

ACTOR WILLEM DAFOE says he cannot identify with the Greek prizefighter he plays in "Triumph of the Spirit," an Auschwitz prisoner who survived the camp by fighting other inmates to death.

He told Model magazine for its December issue that he met Salamo Arouch, the man the movie is based on, and found him to be different from the character he played.

"The Salamo I know is not the Salamo of our story. To presume there's any way you can understand what people felt (in Auschwitz) is a little ludicrous. I just confronted the action in the story," he said.

Dafoe, who played Jesus in "The Last Temptation of Christ" and a righteous FBI agent in "Mississippi Burning," said Arouch cried when he returned to the camp in which his family died. The movie was filmed there.

"He told me that when he survived the camps he felt like life was a gift, so I think he's been devoted to the earthly pleasures ever since. He's a successful businessman, and he's proud of that," Dafoe said.

Oprah's Place

TALK SHOW STAR Oprah Winfrey will star in and co-produce a new half-hour ABC series, "Brewster Place," based on her miniseries about black urban life in the late 1960s, ABC said Tuesday.

The network said the new show, to premiere in the spring next year, will begin production in March in Chicago, where she tapes her syndicated talk show. ABC said she will continue that weekday series.

Keep the day job, chairman

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE chairman Lee Atwater is shedding his chores long enough to play guitar and sing on a blues album with B. B. King, Isaac Hayes, Billy Preston and other artists.

Atwater has slipped into Nashville about four times since September to work on the album on the Curb Records label, said record producer Fred Vail.

"I'm talking about long days, I'm talking about 10 to 14 hours in the studio," Vail said. The album is expected to be finished by January.

Atwater, campaign manager for President Bush in 1988, performed at the inaugural ball and co-wrote one of the songs on the album with King.

"He knows a great deal about this music, and he respects it totally," Vail said. "He knows infinite details about old music and old records. When it comes to R & B, Lee is untouchable."

Still, Vail said, Atwater might do well to keep his day job.

"He's a good player but obviously he's not B. B. King." Blues guitarist King is best known for his hit single "The Thrill Is Gone."

Classic

ASU's 'Of Mice and Men' aims at the heart

By SHARON KANEY
State Press

It can be considered a triumph on both counts. "Of Mice and Men" proves to be a touching bit of theater, gracing the stage as both the first "home-grown" theater production to hit the Paul V. Galvin Playhouse, and as the last directoral effort by longtime faculty member James Yeater.

The play, which remains quite true to the John Steinbeck novel, follows the path of two migrant farm hands who travel to the Salinas Valley in the 1930s. It is the story of two very different men whose symbiotic friendship stems from not-so-different needs.

The dim-witted Lenny (Eddie Wedell) needs George (John Sankovich) to look after him. George needs someone to believe in his dreams, and Lenny fills that spot. It is a perfect symbiosis until Lenny unwittingly runs them into trouble.

"Of Mice and Men" is a fairly low-key story that aims at the heart more than the head.

And this production strikes home.

Sankovich gives a strong performance, which (thankfully) bears no resemblance to his most recent role in "Big River." Wedell seems to perform, though, with a few too many remnants (particularly his manner of speech) of his lead role in "The Foreigner."

The acting, as a whole, is convincing and touching. Many of the cast seem to run into trouble with their dialects, and have minor diction and volume problems now and then.

Performance highlights are manifested, rather, on the physical plane. Whether as jaunty farm workers, a suspicious boss, or a sensuous wife, the actors prove themselves to be comfortable and well-focused on stage.

Yeater's staging and David Barker's fight choreography provide the well-honed vehicles for these talented performers.

Eddie Wedell stars as Lennie in ASU Theatre's "Of Mice and Men."

The lofty bunk house and barn sets by Jeffrey Thomson are impressive. The river bank set seems too narrow and something the actors almost have to work around rather than on, but the use of the hydraulic lift in the orchestra pit to raise and lower the set is ingenious.

Some beautiful sunset back-lighting, by Marc Riske, completes the picture.

Craig Everett's sound effects are wonderfully real and subtle — they don't blare at you from mysterious speakers somewhere in the house, like many ill-mannered effects do.

All told, this production of "Of Mice and Men" is nothing new and nothing that will completely knock your socks off. But it's every bit worth its weight. What it is is a classic treatment of a classic work that will forever remain a valuable piece of Americana.

Bidding farewell to an ASU institution

By SHARON KANEY
State Press

On Thursday, ASU performed its first production in one institution and will soon bid farewell to another.

"Of Mice and Men," by John Steinbeck, was the first ASU theater department production to grace the stage of the Paul V. Galvin Playhouse.

The show's director, theater professor James Yeater, will be retiring this semester after 31 years with the department.

"The faculty perceives him as a mainstay for the department, and he is," said department chair Lin Wright. "He's been here from the beginning."

In fact, he has — there's no one on the faculty who has been with the department longer.

Don Doyle, who's been with the department 28 years, is the next runner-up. "I was a student here just after Jim Yeater came. I had him as an adviser. He directed me in a play. It was the first Shakespeare he had done here," Doyle said.

Doyle described Yeater as the foundation of the theater department. "It is his root that is down there and is the deepest," he said.

Indeed, Yeater has witnessed more growth in the department than anyone. When Yeater came to ASU, upon receiving his doctorate at the University of Illinois, the theater department was combined with the department of speech.

"I was the second person with a theater specialty. For quite a few years it was a two-person department," he said.

Frank ("Uncle Frank") Byers was the other theater specialist at the time. "We gradually eased in faculty. There was no support staff so we did all of our own technical work," Yeater said.

"When we first came we could seat about 60 people in folding chairs," Yeater said of ASU's all-purpose auditorium which housed plays, music concerts and even womens basketball games. "Then the plaster fell off of the balcony, and they condemned it. They came and closed it down in one day.

"Until the completion of the Galvin, all of our other theaters have been hand-me-downs," he said. What is now the Lyceum Theater originally was a boiler room for the University. "Then it was used as a kind of (student) union building. After World War II it got turned into all kinds of things, psychology, education, student records," he said. Gradually, as those departments found other homes around campus, the theater department acquired the building and had it remodeled.

Don Doyle remembers that when the Lyceum opened,

Yeater told him they'd be opening a brand-new theater in a few years.

"I have drawings here that were shown to me by Dr. Gammage, who was the University president then," Yeater said. "Grady Gammage was to be the cornerstone of a complex," he said. The proposed facility was to include theater classrooms, music rooms and an outdoor band shell, among other things. Yeater said that as the University began its rapid growth, space become sparse, and plans for a theater complex were pushed aside.

"It was frustrating. It has taken a long, long time," Yeater said of acquiring the Galvin, which he calls an unrivaled facility. "Of Mice and Men" is the first theater production at the Galvin that has not been imported by an outside organization.

Yeater directed "Of Mice and Men" at the Lyceum in 1965. "It was one of the first shows we did at the Lyceum," he said. "It's the only show I've come back to. This is kind of the end of the beginning."

Although faculty and staff were scarce in the early days, Yeater said that the department managed to produce as many shows per season as it does now. "We lived hand to mouth. You got one play up and geared up for the next one," he said.

Doyle said that Yeater did much of the technical designing at that time. "He was a wonderful designer. We built the sets in the basement of the Lyceum. We had to build them in small enough pieces to carry up the stairs," Doyle said. "Carolyn Yeater used to wash the costumes in her home."

Yeater estimated that he has directed approximately 60 productions at ASU and has acted in close to 100, both on campus and off.

Theater facilities and technical staff are not the only things Yeater has watched grow over the years. "When I first came here we had two students who majored with an emphasis in theater," he said. Now the department is home to more than 200 undergraduates and 35 graduate students. The department has gone from offering a combined degree in speech and theater to fine arts specialties in graduate and undergraduate levels. "We're pretty well on our way to offering a doctorate. We're now one of the larger theater departments in the country," Yeater said.

Doyle said that Yeater's retirement represents a loss to the department. "It's a shame for the department to lose an older person like Jim because he has so much knowledge. Students will not have the advantage of his knowledge anymore," he said.

Yeater said he hasn't quite determined what he will do after retirement. "I may continue, now and then, to do some teaching because it's been so rewarding," he said.

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — An Air Force Academy cheerleader was kicked off the squad for swinging a chicken by its head during halftime at a football game against Army, officials said.

The cadet, who wasn't identified, also was ordered by the school to perform 100 hours of public service at the Humane Society, said academy spokesman Col. Mike Wallace on Monday.

Officials at the academy and the Humane Society said Monday they received several calls from spectators, faculty members and cadets about mistreatment of the birds.

The chickens were released on the field by West Point cadets during halftime events before 52,000 spectators. Both are "alive and scratching around the back yard" of the academy's game warden until a home can be found for them, Wallace said.

Stanford takes first in Pac-10 — for injuries

By JOEL HORN
State Press

Here's a new statistic for you: The Stanford University football team is the most injured squad in the Pac-10, according to the San Jose Mercury News. The Cardinal has started 43 different student-athletes this season.

"We don't get any badges for that, I guarantee you," Stanford Head Coach Dennis Green said.

The Cardinal (2-4 Pac-10, 2-7 overall) faces ASU (2-2-1, 5-3-1) at 7 p.m. Saturday at Sun Devil Stadium.

Green, who was head coach at Northwestern in 1981-85, was named Big Ten Coach of the Year in 1982. He is in his first year as Stanford's head coach but was a Cardinal assistant in 1977, 1978 and 1980.

"Stanford has an extremely strong tradition," he said. "I think we have the capability to recruit some of the finest players in the country."

In the 1970s, the Cardinal compiled a 70-40-4 overall record, including four bowl appearances. In the 1980s, Stanford is 43-64-2 as has played in only one postseason game

— the 1986 Gator Bowl.

"We're optimistic about the future," Green said. "We had a fine recruiting class last year, and we think we will this year."

The Cardinal's top 1989 recruit was Bob Whitfield, a 6-foot-7, 300-pound offensive left tackle. He chose Stanford over Michigan, Notre Dame, UCLA and Miami (Fla.).

"Bob's playing real well," Green said. "He has played every down of every game — that's admirable."

The Cardinal has rushed for only 612 yards on 289 carries, averaging only 2.1 yards-per-carry and 68 yards-per-game — last in the Pac-10.

Junior fullback Jon Volpe, a 1986 graduate of Tucson's Amphitheatre High School, rushed for 1,027 yards in 1988 and was named All-Pac-10. He had arthroscopic knee surgery earlier this fall and has been limited to 120 yards.

"I think any team expects its best players to be there," Green said. "Jon is a tough, hard-nosed player that has had bad luck this year."

Junior tailback Charlie Young, who played slotback and was Stanford's leading receiver with 43 catches last season, has been slow to recover from offseason arthroscopic knee surgery and has not played this year.

In addition, redshirt freshman tailback Jay Jay Lasley and senior fullback Scott Eschelmann have spent time on the shelf due to injuries this fall. Redshirt freshman tailback Galen Foster, a converted cornerback, and sophomore fullback Tommy Vardell will start against the Sun Devils.

Six-foot-6 junior split end Ed McCaffrey leads the Cardinal in receiving, with 45 receptions for 756 yards (a 16.8-yard average) and four touchdowns.

Junior quarterback Brian Johnson, who has completed 65 of 108 passes for 749 yards and two touchdowns, will start Saturday. He has shared playing time with redshirt freshman Steve Smith, who has thrown for 1,347 yards, seven touchdowns and nine interceptions — the only interceptions Stanford signal-callers have thrown all year. The Cardinal is 0-7 in games Smith has started.

"We maybe asked (Smith) to do too much," Green said.

Junior left inside linebacker Jono Tunney is the Stanford leader in tackles, with 86 (54 unassisted), and quarterback sacks, with five for 37 yards in losses. Outside linebacker Rob Hinckley, a 1988 second-team All-American, has been injured. But the senior has returned to the lineup, and Green said he is playing well.

The Cardinal's secondary is one of the most experienced, talented groups in the Pac-10. Senior strong safety Rob Englehardt is second on the team in tackles, with 66, and junior free safety Kevin Scott is third, with 57.

Scott, who graduated from St. Mary's High School in Phoenix in 1987, was moved from cornerback and has 13 pass deflections.

"Kevin is playing some solid football," Green said. "We think he's one of the top defensive backs in the conference."

Left defensive tackle Lester Archambeau, a preseason All-American selection, has been playing with a banged-up knee. The 6-foot-5, 260-pound senior ranks fourth on the team in tackles, with 52, and has four tackles for 17 yards in losses.

Sophomore right cornerback Albert Richardson has three interceptions and senior left cornerback Alan Grant, a second-team All-Pac-10 pick in 1988, has six pass deflections and 38 tackles.

Stanford, which has scored only 19 points in the first quarter this season, upset UCLA, 17-14, last week in Palo Alto. Green said defeating the Bruins — and having some healthy bodies — will enable the Cardinal to perform well in their final two games.

"We're hoping it will take some pressure off of us," he said.

Badminton's Reidy ready for worldwide wins

By MONIQUE HEBERT
Contributing writer

Last week, it was Moscow.

After Christmas, it's England.

Then Austria, possibly Tokyo. But, best of all is Barcelona, Spain.

These destinations are not usually part of an ASU sophomore's extracurricular activities. But they are for Tom Reidy, an ASU badminton player who is winning his way to the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona.

"I like winning," Reidy said. "It really bothers me when I lose to guys that I should beat. I wanted to win so bad at the Olympic Festival."

And he did win. During the July competition in Stillwater, Okla., Reidy captured two gold medals in the mens singles and doubles competition.

"The Olympic Festival is an indicator of who is eligible for the real Olympics," ASU badminton Coach Guy Chadwick said. "And Tom is a number one contender."

As a result, he is a member of the U. S. Olympic Team, a squad of 32 men and women chosen by the United States Badminton Association.

"The cream of the U. S. team goes to international tournaments," Reidy said.

Last week, Reidy and three teammates flew to Moscow for a tournament. It was the second time he competed in Russia.

Reidy and athletes from 42 countries will compete in an Austrian tournament in February. The finalists will fly to Tokyo to compete for the Thomas Cup, which is equivalent of tennis' Davis Cup.

"The traveling is hell," the sophomore said. "People don't understand when I tell them that, but all I see are stadiums and gyms."

However, Reidy is not a stranger to world travel. Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., his Irish parents moved to Limerick, Ireland, when he was 6 years old. He was introduced to badminton a year later.

Reidy said that if he had stayed in Brooklyn, he would not be playing badminton today.

"Kids here (United States) pick up baseball or football," Reidy said. "Back there (Ireland), kids either start kicking a soccer ball around or they play badminton. In Ireland, badminton is as big as football is out here."

From the beginning, Reidy was a champion player in his age group. He said that he was offered several contracts to play professionally after graduating from high school in 1986.

Instead, Reidy took the summer off to visit relatives in New York.

Ted Helweg, then president of the U.S.B.A., convinced him to stay in America, Reidy said.

"At first, I was shocked at how complacent the U. S. is about badminton," Reidy said. "So I didn't play much. I bummed around for a year and played soccer with the L.A. Heat."

The L.A. Heat is a Los Angeles soccer team which includes such notable players as rock singer Rod Stewart.

Reidy said Martin French, the current U.S.B.A. president, restored his interest in badminton.

A second incentive to play, Reidy said, was the fact that badminton became an Olympic sport in January. In the 1988 Olympics, badminton was played as an exhibition sport.

In the fall of 1988 Reidy enrolled at ASU, but could not participate in badminton because of his professional status as a soccer player.

"I came to ASU because it's the only major university that has a scholarship program for badminton," the 20-year-old physical education major said.

Reidy was cleared to play this season and Chadwick said he has performed well for the Sun Devils.

"He won first place in mens singles and doubles at the St. Louis Classic," Chadwick said. "Reidy has taken over the number one spot on the team."

ASU volleyball to change lineup

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

In a final attempt at seasonal success, the ASU volleyball team is changing its lineup for the third time this season.

After losing to Washington State and Washington last weekend, Sun Devil Coach Patti Snyder said she needs to try something new with the current combinations.

The plan, Snyder said, consists of putting the two best players, Mindy Gowell and Noelle Fridrich, on the left side to hit. The change will mean giving freshman Jennifer Helfrich full setting responsibility.

"We're trying to give people playing time for next year," Snyder said. "(Ex-setter) Noelle is one of our best hitters and the best athlete on the team, but it's time to give Jennifer Helfrich that chance."

Against Washington State, ASU was defeated 11-15, 15-13, 15-11, 12-15, 15-5. Although the Cougars are the Pac-10 last place team, Snyder said they played like a far more talented one.

"They played outstanding," Snyder said. "Neither our record nor their record is indicative of actual talent. I think that was more of an incentive for Washington State."

One of the factors which sparked the loss, Snyder said, was the Cougar fans.

"They had a nice full gym, and the fans got crazy," she said. "On the road we don't have more than 10 fans clapping for us and it's hard to get our adrenalin going."

The long travel, Snyder said, was not a factor in the loss because it allowed a lot of time for relaxation. She said using travel as an excuse for losing is a poor scapegoat.

On Saturday, ASU lost to UW, 9-15, 15-5, 17-15, 15-3. Snyder said the Huskies' setter Melinda Beckenhauer dominated that match.

"She had our blockers guessing where she was going to hit," Snyder said. "She set the middle on us like no one I have ever seen.

"Over and over again she gave our hitters some great swings. She was the absolute difference in the match."

With only four games left in the season, Snyder said the 12-16 Sun Devils are going to focus on individual improvement. She said even if ASU was to win its next four victories, the team's chance of making it to the NCAAs is nil.

"It has been really trying for the team," she said. "We are capable of playing some good volleyball — we've proven that, but it's kind of like a catch-22 — we're searching for the perfect lineup, so it's hard to hone in on consistency."

ASU's Sig Alpha Lions to play for national championship in Bayou

By KEITH ROSENHAGEN
State Press

The Sig Alpha Lions will be the sole flag football team representing ASU in the National Collegiate Flag Football Championship Dec. 28-31 in New Orleans.

This competition, sponsored by the USF&G, is an event that allows the best intramural flag football teams from colleges around the country to compete in New Orleans the week before the Sugar Bowl.

However, these teams are doing a lot more than merely playing another flag football game. All proceeds from the tournament will be contributed to the Miami Project/Marc Buoniconti fund to cure paralysis.

The Lions are excited to play in the USF&G Flag Football Championship and it has also offered their fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, a chance to join together once again, said Rick Landry, the team captain.

"After what happened last year, a lot of people came together and kind of brought the fraternity back together," he said referring to an attack made on two black students by members of the SAE fraternity last semester.

The SAE members mistook the students for suspects in an earlier argument with an SAE member and a female student. The attack ignited a series of civil rights protests across the ASU campus.

"There was so much turmoil going on at that time," Landry said. "At a time when it would have been easy to fall apart, the house as a whole has now come together to work as a team."

The Lions and their fellow SAE fraternity members hope to raise as much as $4,000 through fund raising events and family and corporate donations.

"The team is having a couple of car washes along with one single big event with the whole fraternity to raise $1,000," he said.

Intramurals raise money for cause

By KEITH ROSENHAGEN
State Press

ASU intramural flag football's one goal this November is to raise funds for the USF&G drive to cure paralysis.

The same cause collected over $4,000 from ASU last year, said Bob Gildersleeve, assistant director of intramural sports and officiating.

"We've been in the top 10 among fundraisers in the last two years," Gildersleeve said. "Our realistic goal is to be the school who raises the most amount of funds."

Those participating in the fundraiser are flag football teams, students involved in other intramural sports and other special events sponsored by the Student Recreation Complex.

"The USF&G Flag Football Tournament is a special tournament offered because football is so popular," Gildersleeve said.

Another special event will be the aerobic exercise-a-thon to be held Sunday, Nov. 12 from 2 to 5 p.m. in the red gym at the rec center.

The aerobics-a-thon will include direction from eight different instructors as well as prizes and raffles. Three passes (worth $15 each) will be given away to the top three fundraisers for their next aerobics session.

Those interested must pick up pledge sheets in the lower level of the rec center.

Gildersleeve said there will be a "Touchdown Ceremony" in late November to recognize all pledge contributors. Anyone who raises $25 or more will be awarded with a T-shirt inscribed with the USF&G logo.

The top fund-raising flag football team in the country will be awarded an all-expense paid trip to New Orleans to watch the Sugar Bowl, Gildersleeve said.

Intramurals

He added that he was not sure what the event will be, but the creative effort the team and SAE members are putting out is impressive.

"At the beginning of the (qualifying) tournament we watched a few films on paralysis," he said. "We were really shocked that the most prominent figures hit with paralysis were college-age students."

The films brought home the message of what the USF&G fund raiser is all about, he said.

"It made us feel like 'hey, one day it could be us,'" he said. "We felt that we're real fortunate that we were lucky enough to play."

Landry added that the road to victory in the qualifying tournament was not an easy one having to overcome tough competition from the Sig Eps and an independantly formed team named the Scrubs.

"During the finals the Scrubs were picked as the favorite," he said. "The refs and other people involved thought they would be the team to beat."

The Lions grappled to a clean 21-7 victory after coming back from being down 6-7 at half-time, Landry said.

"Our great defense during the second half was a big factor," he said. "We never show them the same thing twice and that's what helped us beat other teams with better athletes."

Landry added that although the average weight of the team is less than 160 pounds, they emphasize motion in their plays in a form of misdirection that "fakes-out" opposing players.

"We are a small and quick team," he said. "We use a lot of yelling and faking and our defense is real good."

In anticipation of playing in New Orleans, Landry said he feels that the flag football teams of the South East are farly advanced.

L.A. holds off Suns, 111-107; Magic and KJ ejected

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — James Worthy scored 35 points and Byron Scott added 20 as the Los Angeles Lakers withstood a furious Phoenix comeback to defeat the Suns 111-107 Tuesday night.

Worthy missed two free throws and blew a chance to ice the contest with 48 seconds left and the Lakers leading 108-103.

"I'm not that type of free-thrower," Worthy said. "I'll be working on it over the next few days. I must have been moving too much when I shot."

Rookie Greg Grant's drive and Tom Chambers' dunk pulled Phoenix within 108-107 with 22 seconds left.

The Suns then fouled Worthy again with 13 seconds remaining, and he made one of two free throws. After a Phoenix timeout, Dan Majerle drove against Worthy but missed a 12-footer with five seconds to play.

Magic Johnson, the NBA's Most Valuable

Player last year, and Kevin Johnson, a second-team all-league selection for Phoenix, were ejected for fighting after just 3:22 of the first period.

"We were both just trying to set the stage for our team," Magic Johnson said. "We just exchanged words and started pushing, but we were stunned when we got kicked out. To me, the officials should have seen a difference between pushing and fighting."

As the Suns' Jeff Hornacek attempted to inbound the ball after a Laker turnover, the two Johnsons shoved each other hard twice. Magic Johnson threw two punches that grazed Kevin Johnson before they were separated and ejected. Magic Johnson also was assessed a punching foul.

"I've never had a problem with anyone," Kevin Johnson said. "I pride myself on my conduct on the court."

Phoenix Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons attributed the ejections to the NBA's tightened sensitivity to violence.

"The officials are on edge," he said. "We've seen Detroit get fined a lot, and I think the officials have a quick trigger."

The Lakers took their largest lead 68-50 on A. C. Green's three-point play with 9:53 remaining in the third period. Capped by Majerle's breakaway dunk, the Suns went on a 12-1 run and closed the margin to 69-62 during the next 2:33.

Phoenix made 16 of 25 shots in the period and took an 82-81 lead on Hornacek's layup with two seconds left.

Fitzsimmons was pleased with the team's performance, especially their third-quarter comeback. But he said that Majerle's one-on-one drive at the end was not the intended play.

"We were fine tonight," Fitzsimmons said, "but on that play we wanted the ball in Greg Grant's hands so that he could drive and create an opportunity."

With the score tied 97-97, Los Angeles outscored the Suns 5-0 over the next 1:06, capped by Scott's jumper with 3:56 left in the game.

Chambers led the Suns with 30 points and Hornacek had 21. Yugoslavian rookie Vlade Divac sparked the Lakers in the fourth quarter and finished with 11 points, his high in three NBA games.

Worthy, who made 16 of 26 field goal attempts, said he felt it was his responsibility to replace Magic Johnson.

"I took a pounding tonight and everyone was fatigued, but when Magic's out, someone has to assume his big responsibilities," Worthy said.

Cardinals to re-evaluate conditioning

TEMPE (AP) — The NFL's Phoenix Cardinals will re-examine their off-season conditioning program after being decimated by injuries this year, Coach Gene Stallings said.

The Cardinals (4-5) have lost 16 starters since the season started Sept. 10 and had eight players hurt in Sunday's 20-13 loss here to the New York Giants.

"It's just sort of freakish things. It's unusual. It's also excessive," Stallings said. "I don't know if it's too much conditioning or not enough conditioning."

"I met with (team strength and conditioning coach) LeBaron Caruthers and we discussed the situation at length. I hear some people say LeBaron is to blame. That's way out of line. It's not his fault."

"I think we have an excellent off-season program. We did plenty of running and weightlifting. I saw things first-hand myself. But the great majority of the injuries have been knee injuries. Maybe we have to do a little more to strengthen the knees."

Of the nine players currently on the Cardinals' injured lists, five have knee injuries including running back Stump Mitchell, who is out for the year after reconstructive surgery Sept. 30.

Two-time Pro Bowl offensive tackle Luis Sharpe, who hasn't missed a game in his eight-year NFL career, will have his consecutive-game streak stopped at 110 Sunday here against Dallas.

Sharpe partially tore a ligament in his right knee in the first half of the Giants game and is out three to four weeks.

"It's unbelievable, all these injuries," Sharpe said. "We still have seven games left. What else can happen?"

Defensive tackle Bob Clasyby, who is on the injured reserve list with ligament and cartilage damage in his left knee, said: "The training room is like a battle field. There aren't enough tables. We'll have to expand it. I've never seen anything like it."

Three-time Pro Bowl special teams player Ron Wolfley pulled his right groin muscle while covering a second-quarter punt against New York and is out one to two weeks.

"It's the most bizarre thing I've ever seen," he said. "It's like a nightmare. But we're starting to get used to it. We're starting to get numb now."

Things have gotten so bad that Stallings has asked the media for volunteers to play, and defensive end David Galloway said the team is getting discounts by buying crutches by the bulk.

Tight end Robert Awalt and guard Lance Smith are the only players left who have started every game this year on offense for Phoenix.

On defense, there are five Cardinals who have not missed a game yet — safety Tim McDonald, cornerback Cedric Mack and linebackers Eric Hill, Anthony Bell and Ken Harvey.

"It's a violent game — no question about that," Stallings said. "But it's not too violent. It's just not for the faint of heart. Injuries are part of the game. It's just the nature of the beast. I worry every week."

Stallings said he has fielded numerous suggestions on how to curb the injury jinx.

"Some people say maybe you can wear knee braces or something, but you can find just as many people who say braces are as much a hindrance as they are a help," Stallings said. "These are professional athletes. To ask them to wear something that's not prescribed, I don't know if you can do that. You can suggest things."

However, it is likely that the knee brace theory will go the way of the suggestions given to quarterback Neil Lomax on how to cure his arthritic left hip.

Lomax said some ideas from supposed well-meaning fans have ranged from eating eye of newt to drinking brake fluid.
