Out-of-state tuition set to rise, officials predict

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Members of the Arizona Board of Regents and a state senator predicted on Wednesday that out-of-state tuition in 1990-91 will take a substantial jump in an effort to give a boost to Arizona's sagging economy.

However, Arizona Students' Association Executive Director Brad Golich and Rep. Jenny Norton, R-Tempe, said tuition costs for Arizona residents and non-residents should remain unchanged.

"Ideally, I would like to see tuition level for residents and non-residents," Golich said, adding that students should not have to turn down an education in Arizona because of rising costs.

However, Regent Andy Hurwitz said that eventually out-of-state students will pay 100 percent of the cost of education.

"My sense is that the cost of education for new (out-of-state) students will go up," he said. "There is a good consensus on the Board that out-of-state students should be paying more."

Currently, out-of-state tuition is $5,484, or about 80 percent of the cost of a student's education. This is 9.5 percent more than the previous year, said Steve Jordan, the regents' associate director for planning and finance.

In 1979-80, there was a 3 percent increase in the percentage of costs paid by out-of-state students, while the next year there was a 16 percent hike, Jordan said.

When the regents consider tuition increases in February or March, non-resident students may be faced with an even higher tuition increase, Golich said.

"This is the feeling at the Legislature," he said. "Some are saying that we shouldn't subsidize non-residents at all."

Sen. Doug Todd, R-Tempe, said an increase in the instructional cost of education is a reality this year.

"The cost of everything is going up," he said, adding that the Senate Appropriations Committee will meet with officials from the three universities Dec. 6 to begin discussions about this topic. "The fact that the tax burden on taxpayers has increased (means) user fees (such as tuition) will increase."

But Todd said he is a staunch believer in keeping costs to a minimum.

However, Norton said she is not in favor of any increases.

"I'd like to make it as easy as we can on students," she said.

"I'd like to keep tuition as low as possible and would like the rest of the population to help foot the bill.

"If we as taxpayers have to grit our teeth and raise taxes for things like transportation, we also have to grit our teeth and raise

Citizens group formed to urge resident action

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

A citizens group, Tempe Tomorrow, has arisen from the remains of the Smith's Supermarket opposition corps in an effort to spur city residents to take an active part in their government.

"Our objective is to educate Tempe voters and get them to the polls," said Mario Martinez, a co-founder of the petition drive that garnered more than 1,800 signatures against Tempe's largest grocery store at Rural Road and Southern Avenue. "We are looking for ways to improve the responsiveness of the City Council."

The council voted 6-1 last week to rezone the land and revamp the city's master plan to allow for the supermarket after a long and heated public hearing that lasted until 2:30 a.m.

The Tempe School District obtained almost 1,200 signatures in support of the grocery store and were also represented at the City Council meeting. The school district has leased the property to Smith's for the next 50 years, which will add about $19 million to the district's coffers.

"We are disappointed but not surprised," Martinez said, adding that Tempe Tomorrow currently has 20 members.

He said it is possible that the organization will also strive to

Board OKs motion to replace excess student rec center fees

By MARK CRISMON
State Press

The Student Recreation Complex Board passed a three-pronged motion Wednesday that seeks to resolve the debate concerning the use of surplus student rec center fees.

The motion asks the University for an additional $377,700 to balance the center's 1990-91 operating budget. The funds will be used to replace $377,700 in surplus student fees, which the measure removes from the budget. Student leaders claim the excess fees should be earmarked for future expansion of the recreation complex.

The motion also calls for a preliminary proposal for the Phase II expansion of the complex to be drawn up.

The debate centers on whether to use the $377,700 left after the proceeds from the $25 semesterly recreation complex fee are used to pay off the bond issue that paid for the center.

The 30-year bond issue must be retired at the rate of $1.5 million a year, all of which is raised by the student fee. Projections for the 1990-91 academic year estimate that the total amount raised through the student fee will exceed the $1.5 million by $377,700.

Paul Larson, president of Associated Students of ASU, said that when the students originally passed the referendum approving the fee in 1985, "our understanding was that the $25 would be used to pay off the bond issue, additional construction or possibly new equipment."

Until Wednesday's motion, the $377,700 in excess funds appeared in the complex's operating budget, which covers salaries and maintenance.

The board's concern has been that if the money were removed from the operating

President gets some advice while honoring young environmentalists

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush gave awards Wednesday to students for helping clean up America's environment. In return he got a pointed question from one winner: "Does your office recycle?"

The query from Allen Graves, a student at North Hollywood High School in California, caught the president by surprise.

Bush, who has said he wants to be the "environmental president," replied, "I don't know."

"It should," counseled the youth, who won one of the 10 President's Environmental Youth Awards for prodding his school and community to adopt a year-round recycling program.

"You got a good plan?" asked the president.

"Yes, indeed," injected Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William K. Reilly.

"We're going all through the White House on that," Bush added, without elaborating.

Stephen Hart, a deputy White House spokesman, said, "We don't currently recycle, but we are looking at some recycling programs. We are talking with GSA (the General Services Administration, the government's landlord) and other government agencies about a variety of such programs."

Salvadoran guerrilla offensive falters in 4th day of fighting

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The battle of San Salvador tilted in the government's favor Wednesday as troops drove guerrillas from working-class neighborhoods in fierce combat while civilians fled or cowered in their homes.

The rebels held positions in several neighborhoods in and around the capital, but the four-day-old offensive was stalled by the armed forces' air power and numerical superiority combined with lack of popular support for the guerrillas.

"If they stay here, we (the civilians) are the ones who end up badly," said Julio Cesar Martinez, a 15-year-old student in the eastern suburb of Soyapango. He said his family had been without food for two days and the rebels should retreat.

Arturo Rivera Damas, archbishop of San Salvador, seconded a Red Cross call for a truce between the rightist government of President Alfredo Cristiani and the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front to allow the evacuation of wounded.

At a news conference, he also demanded both sides silence their weapons and return to fledgling peace talks broken off earlier this month.

Casualty figures from the four days of fighting were inexact, but surveys of hospitals and a tally based on several sources indicated more than 500 people — civilians, guerrillas and soldiers — have been killed and more than 1,000 wounded.

Group says it kidnapped American woman, 2 W. Germans

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A previously unknown group said Wednesday it had kidnapped an American woman and two naturalized West Germans — a man born in Lebanon and his 7-year-old son.

The claim was made in a typewritten statement, in Arabic, for a group calling itself The Organization of Just Revenge. The statement was delivered to a Western news agency with photocopies of the passports and visas of the three people.

It identified the American as Deborah Fahrend, 54, of San Francisco. The two others were identified as Mounir Shamseddin Sami, 39, born in Lebanon, and his son, Danjel, born in Berlin.

"The Organization of Just Revenge announces its responsibility for kidnapping the West German Mounir Sami (born in Lebanon) and his son Danjel Sami and American publisher-journalist Deborah Fahrend in Beirut for their activities in Lebanon," it said.

No demands were made in the poorly typed statement, which gave no details and did not say when the abduction occurred. The kidnapping could not be confirmed.

E. German parliament will be asked to end party monopoly

BERLIN (AP) — An East German political group said Wednesday it would make the first direct challenge to Communist rule by asking Parliament this week to end the party's 40-year-old monopoly on power, and predicted an easy victory.

Communist officials spurned West Germany's offer of an economic bailout. They said they prefer their own course to recovery and hinted at reforms to encourage free-enterprise investment.

Bild, a mass-circulation West German newspaper, reported Wednesday that Chancellor Helmut Kohl would meet with party chief Egon Krenz after a Communist Party congress Dec. 15-17 that is expected to make major changes in the East German leadership.

Nicaraguan government offers concession to revive truce

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nicaraguan government has offered a major concession in cease-fire talks with the Contras by dropping its demand that the rebels demobilize, a Sandinista official said Wednesday.

As its price for restoring the cease fire the government allowed to lapse Nov. 1, Vice Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco said the government is insisting only that Contra forces in Nicaragua return to their base camps in Honduras.

"We think that is a very important change in our position," Tinoco told a news conference at the Nicaraguan Embassy a few hours before the peace talks reconvened at the Organization of American States.

Tinoco maintained that while the Sandinistas are willing to make concessions, the Contras have shown "not an inch of flexibility" in four rounds of talks starting last Thursday at the United Nations.

There was no immediate response by the rebels but administration officials said the Contras have told them evacuation from Nicaraguan territory is not feasible.

Walesa promises Congress U. S. aid 'will not be wasted'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, saluted on his historic visit to Congress with cheers, whistles and four standing ovations, declared Wednesday that American aid to Poland "will not be wasted, and will never be forgotten."

In an interview with The Associated Press a few hours later, Walesa said, "I am an optimist" that the economic assistance promised by Congress and President Bush will enable the first non-Communist government in the Soviet bloc to survive.

"I think we will have enough time," he said.

Walesa made his remarks on a day in which Bush hailed him as "America's special guest." He was treated exactly that way, from his historic appearance before a joint session of Congress in the morning to a private meeting with Secretary of State James A. Baker III in the afternoon and a dinner back in the Capitol at the end of the day.

In his speech before Congress, he asked for more investment to help pull a bankrupt Polish economy from "the verge of utter catastrophe" and said such assistance in peacetime is "better than tanks, warships and warplanes."

Real-estate boondoggle

Brian Tassinari
Opinion Editor

Before the "preliminary exploration" of a baseball stadium leapfrogs the discussion stage and heads straight to the backhoe stage, it might be useful to take a look at the last major real-estate project ASU undertook — the research park on Elliot and Price roads in Tempe.

You remember the research park, which was originally envisioned as 323 acres of beautiful grass, hills, lakes (with boat docks, of course), tennis courts and equestrian trails populated by researchers busy researching.

The park was to be a center for research — forming a symbiotic relationship with the University. Each would thrive off the other. It was to be the perfect marriage.

But where did the money come from to pay for this wedding?

Why, it was paid for through the magic of "financing."

Specifically, a $12.5 million bond was floated by Tempe on which ASU guaranteed repayment.

The theory was that tenants would flock to the new research park, eager to plunk down their ducats and hang out a shingle in the shiny new park.

It was a beautiful theory that was shot down by an ugly fact — nobody seems to want to move to the park.

In fact, tenant revenues were so disappointing that by 1987, the park was in a real bind for money. Thus the park officials were forced to refinance its debt with capital appreciation bonds due in 1993.

For those of you who have never heard of them, capital appreciation bonds are used to pay for tomorrow what you've got no money to pay for today.

Unfortunately, when 1993 rolls around, the entire amount will be due. At that time the park will once again refinance its debt, this time on the payment plan, according to Comptroller/Treasurer Jerry Snyder.

This is akin to the park running up its Visa card to the limit and getting a Mastercard to pay off the Visa bill. But when you try this and you're still broke what do you do?

Call Dad.

And this is exactly what the research park will be doing this Friday at the Arizona Board of Regents meeting here at ASU.

The park is going to ask the Board to let ASU "transfer" $196,000 from the University's investment fund to the park.

The word "transfer" is no doubt the product of dozens of memos and meetings, because it is sufficiently vague so as to confer almost no meaning. It is the quintessential bureaucratic verb.

When I called the vice president for business affairs office about this, I was referred to Snyder. When I asked him whether this "transfer" of $196,000 was a gift, he said no. When I asked if it was a loan, he said he would not characterize it as such.

When pressed, he described the transaction this way: There is "intention (for the money) to be repayed, but there is no timetable for repayment. It depends on the research park."

Sounds suspiciously like a "loan" from Dad — the kind that never gets repayed.

So what. So the research park ran up its credit cards and needs a little spending money? It's part of the family; so let's give it the $196,000.

So there is a big problem, that's what. The park was billed back in 1984 as a money-making venture. It was supposed to get on its feet and begin paying money back to the University.

As a non-profit corporation, the research park technically is not part the University family — too bad we're still paying for it.

There are two lessons to be learned from the business park boondoggle.

The first is that sure-thing business ventures by the University aren't sure things. In business, return is commensurate with risk, so every time the administration comes up with a plan that is going to benefit everyone at no cost, look twice, because there is no such thing.

Planners goofed when they set up the park. They failed to anticipate the Valleywide slump in the commercial real-estate market. But that should not be our concern.

From research parks to baseball stadiums, real-estate deals are risky and have no place at ASU.

The second lesson is less specific but more disturbing. It has to do with the sneaky way of conducting business used by administrators. This isn't a "transfer," it is a gift. When you give away money with no timetable for repayment, it should be called a gift. It would be more honest if somebody said, "We're sorry, we made a mistake and we're gonna have to take some of your money to fix it."

Snyder said it doesn't matter that there is no schedule for repaying the money because all the future profits from the park will go to ASU anyway. But what if no future profits materialize?

In the end, the University has to give the money to the research park; ASU's name is on the bonds. If the park goes under, the University will be left holding the bag — or the park.

But we can learn from this. In the coming months when the administration does the soft shoe routine trying to sell a "can't-miss deal" for a baseball stadium on Lot 59 we should say no, you already struck out with the research park and we can't afford to play ball anymore.

Sticking up for 'slime'

Editor:

I object to Mike Ritter's consistent portrayal of the campus bike police as slime such as in his cartoon of Nov. 8 and other issues. Perhaps Mr. Ritter doesn't realize that the bike police enforce bike rules so that bikers won't hit and injure pedestrians or each other.

I have, on numerous occasions, seen bike riders on campus who were:

- Going real fast, dodging in and out of pedestrians as if they were objects on an obstacle course.
- Listening to Walkmans so intently that they are virtually unaware of their surroundings.
- Going through stop signs where pedestrians were crossing.
- Riding with their heads turned as they stared at pretty women.

In each of these cases the only thing that prevented a collision was the pedestrian's quick thinking and jumping out of the way.

When I yelled at one of these riders that he should watch where he was going, he told me to shut up. With this kind of attitude — that bikers "own the road" and don't need to worry about little things like safety and common courtesy — we need the bike police.

I, for one, applaud them. If Mike Ritter or someone close to him got mangled by a speeding, arrogant, unlawful bike rider perhaps he would applaud the bike police, too.

Where was Lynn?

Editor:

Homecoming seemed to be good enough for Lynn Vavreck when she herself was homecoming princess last year, but now that her tiara is rusted she seems to have changed her tone.

I find it interesting that she wrote a whole article on homecoming without even contacting me, the homecoming director, but I guess that's her style. The portion of the article spent on homecoming itself was incredibly vague. She did not mention one single event and gave no specific mention of what event seemed weak. She merely saw homecoming as an assembly line pushing students through and increasing our numbers.

"The Homecoming Jam," homecoming's cultural day, reached out to thousands of students providing entertainment with a lighthearted celebration. The campus needed this day and it was very successful. Of course, I would not expect Lynn Vavreck, who wrote an article denouncing multicultural lounges, to pick up on something like that.

I have no idea what her motivation for attacking J'Lein Liese is. I am sure she is completely unbiased and the fact that she ran the campaign of J'Lein's opponent in last year's election has nothing to do with her objectivity.

Homecoming's new programs, the Evening Parade and Street Festival, had attendance in the thousands and were highly praised by President Peck, administrators and students alike. Not that I would expect her to know. When homecoming asked the Devils' Advocates, an organization that is supposed to promote ASU and school spirit, to participate in the parade, they could not find the time. Are you not president of the Devils' Advocates, Lynn?

You stated that the big question surrounding homecoming was, "Where was J'Lein Liese?" I know where J'Lein was, she was working with me. The question in my mind is where were you?

East Germany

Just for once, just for a moment, relish the freedom

Jeff Greenfield
Universal Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — Just for once, just for a moment, I want to ignore the very intelligent, very profound thoughts that very intelligent, very well-informed experts have about the consequences of what is happening in East Germany.

I just want to savor the sights and sounds of that all-night party at the Berlin Wall.

Just for once, just for a moment, I do not want to knit my brow at the burden represented by 250,000 East Germans who have poured into the West in order to begin new lives.

I do not want to worry about the competition for jobs and housing these newcomers represent, nor about the prospects for more democracy in the East if the economy is crippled by an exodus of talented, educated men and women.

I just want to remember a day when one place in the world looked like the end of an old Frank Capra movie, when Jimmy Stewart or Gary Cooper rallied the good-hearted people around him to celebrate a victory over the forces of greed and evil.

Just for once, just for this moment, I do not want to listen to State Department officials and academics and think-tank mavens talk of what this means for German reunification, the 1992 European Economic Union, NATO, the Warsaw Pact or Mikhail Gorbachev's prospects for political survival.

I just want to revel in the knowledge that in East Germany, one of the most repressive of the Communist Bloc nations, where the first anti-communist workers' uprising was crushed in 1953, the leader of the Communist Party is talking about free elections, a multiparty state and a free press.

I want to enjoy the idea that millions of people may soon be moving from the ranks of the subjugated to the ranks of the free; that they may be able to go out into the streets, the shops, the cafes, the halls of their nation and yell at each other about books and newspapers and theories and ideas, and call each other and their government officials idiots without waiting for the shadow of a man in uniform cutting across them.

Just for once, just for this moment, I want to put aside the hundreds of millions of words over the last 40-plus years that have so glibly decided that "freedom" is a sentimental luxury out of place in the real world.

I want to forget all those experts who explained why the Soviet Union's strategic interest required the maintenance of political systems symbolized by a foot on the neck of a prostrate citizen.

I want to forget all of those realpolitik Kissingerians who saw the world as nothing but a collection of national interests and who could, with a flick of the wrist, dismiss the idea that perhaps the citizens of those countries had a hunger for freedom worth nurturing.

I want to forget all those tough-talking pessimists who believed that the welter of conflicting voices within free nations somehow made free nations weaker and totalitarian states stronger, as if the very robustness of our democracy was a threat to the survival of freedom.

I want, just for now, to put away those remnants of the hard left whose "passion" for freedoms never seemed to embrace those living within the sphere of Soviet influence, and who simply assumed that those outraged by repression in Prague and Warsaw and Budapest and Berlin were nothing but cold warriors in the pocket of the CIA.

Just for once, just for this moment, I want to be able to reaffirm not a romantic sentiment, but a truth that is indeed becoming more and more evident: That the hunger for freedom is well-nigh universal; that it is not a function of culture or color but a natural hunger of the human being.

That's what that party on the Wall was all about. And just for once, just for this moment, I thirst not for explanation but for celebration.

Bishops never addressed sexual revolution

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — The American Catholic bishops have held their annual meeting in Baltimore this year and, among other things, offered some thoughts on the Middle East. You didn't have to find their views on the Middle East objectionable (and I don't) to wish they'd devote more of their attention to topics nearer to home.

The bishops did take a firm stand on abortion, as they have in the past. But that stand has been diluted in recent years by their habit of taking on so many additional subjects, such as economics and foreign policy. The killing of the unborn, instead of being an issue of special urgency, has been subsumed in a checklist.

There is even a rationale for this subsumption, summed up in the phrase "the seamless garment." Coined by Chicago's archbishop, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, the phrase signifies that "life" is not a single issue but a continuum of concerns.

Taken in the proper sense, that is profoundly true. Taken the wrong way, however, it turns into an excuse for evasion, as too many Catholic politicians have proved.

Abortion is the terminus of what we have come to call "the sexual revolution." The overthrow of traditional morals, in which sex was recognized and cherished as the life-giving act, could have no other result. The change was inevitably fraught with far deeper consequences for women than for men.

If men are free to have sex on whim, women are going to want abortion on demand. You can't fairly say that everyone is allowed to have sex at any time but that all consequences have to be borne by the women. The trade-off of easy abortion for sexual license is one that the panders of the sexual revolution, such as Hugh Hefner, have been only too happy to make, since their whole idea is that a man should be able to get what he wants without the risk of becoming a father.

So in order to oppose abortion effectively, you have to oppose the sexual revolution at the root. Otherwise you're trying to prevent a touchdown when the other team already has the ball on your 10-yard line.

Officially, Catholic sexual morality hasn't changed a bit. But the American bishops haven't been reaffirming it very vocally lately. They have been remarkably quiet throughout the sexual revolution.

This is not an exclusively Catholic concern. Anyone who has reservations about the wholesale rejection of a long-standing moral code must regret that there has been no public bulwark of that code during the period when it has come under relentless attack. The Catholic Church in America might have played that role, offering a powerful alternative norm against the secular fad for cheap sex. But even the gay rights movement has been a more effective moral presence in American life these last few years than the Catholic Church.

Possibly the bishops have been stung by the gibes that they are celibate old males who have no business discussing sex. But their celibacy gives them a special authority to urge restraint on others. If they can give up marriage, others ought to be able to forgo fornication.

There has also crept into the debate on sex the curious notion that our old sexual code, unlike other moral rules such as those prohibiting murder and theft, serves no secular purpose and must have been invented by theologians. More likely it was invented by mothers who wanted to protect their daughters.

Empirically, the returns on the new morality are in. The rates of every sex-related malady, medical and social, have soared. The very fact that the bishops this year were discussing AIDS, a fatal affliction unheard of when the revolution began, says it all.

The bishops would now be in a position to say, "We told you so," if only they'd been telling us so. But they haven't. They have been issuing position papers when they should have been jeremiads.

You can't have moral authority unless you're willing to be unpopular. The word jeremiad recalls the prophet Jeremiah. His views were very unfashionable in his day. That's why we still remember him in our own day.

Majority polled see no significant racial problems at ASU

Student Viewpoint is a weekly poll of student opinion in the State Press. The unscientific poll, conducted at points around campus, is meant to provide an insight into students' views on issues of the day.

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
State Press

Although there have been recent efforts to ease racial tensions on ASU's campus, only 19 out of 100 students polled this week said a significant race-relations problem exists at ASU.

Student Viewpoint

Seventy-eight students said they did not feel there was a significant race problem at ASU, and three students said they did not know, in the unscientific poll.

Students Against Racism, a cultural awareness group on campus, organized a student march last month that was designed to exemplify a positive image of ASU to the surrounding community.

Although the march was boycotted by six other black organizations, the march occurred as planned.

Most of the students who said race problems do exist at ASU did not offer any support for their answers, saying only that they believed the tension exists.

However, of the few students who did comment, some said the race problems stem from substantial media coverage.

One student said, "Minorities segregated themselves from society, crying 'racism,' while they are the creators of the so-called racism."

Another student said, "There are a lot of prejudiced people on this campus, and it is definitely overlooked."

"I think the incidents that may or may not have occurred have been blown way out of proportion and have been sensationalized by the media," another student said.

Of the 78 students who did not think there is a significant problem with race relations at ASU, some also accused the media of sensationalizing campus racial tension.

"I don't think racism is a big issue because the papers seemed to drag everything out," a student commented. A white member from the womens track team said, "I am the definite minority on the team," she said. "There is not as much racism as some people may think." She added that there is no racial tension between her friends on the team. Most of the 78 students said there may be race-relation problems at ASU but none that they had seen or experienced. The poll was conducted at various sites around campus, including the interior of the MU and the surrounding mall areas. Participants varied in age, gender and race.

ASASU to sponsor 'Family Feud' type game show on campus

By MARK CRISMON
State Press

Students are invited to participate in a campus game show offering them the chance to win cash and prizes, tonight at Palo Verde Beach beginning at 7 p.m.

Jay Poplawski, special events director for Associated Students of ASU, said the game show is tailored after Family Feud and will pit teams of three students against each other.

Two teams will participate at a time and players will be chosen from the audience. Approximately 12 students will be chosen in all.

All students will receive a number upon entrance to the event and lucky students will be chosen to play if their number is called out by the announcer during the game. The first 100 students to appear for the event will receive a free grab bag prize, Poplawski said.

General Foods International Coffees is putting on the promotional event at eight universities across the country and ASU is the sixth school to participate.

Representatives of the game show were on campus yesterday video taping student responses to various questions posed to elicit funny or unexpected answers.

Poplawski said, the questions generally regarded "campus culture": What is the strangest thing you have ever done on campus? What is your favorite thing to do on a first date?

During the game show, contestants will be shown film clips of students being asked these questions. However, the video will be frozen before the answer is given and the contestants' chore is to figure out what the student's response to the question was.

Poplawski said basically what they're doing is taking a survey of "student personality" and making a game show out of it.

The show will be hosted by Howard Stevens of "Who's The Boss" and "Star Trek" and by Robin Marrella of "Double Dare".

Lisa Sanchez of the Student Union Advisory Board at the UofA, where the event was held earlier this week, said, "participation is the important thing."

"We would love to have them back next year," she said. "It looks exactly like a game show — it is perfect; everyone who went was really excited."

Sanchez said the biggest winner walked away with $60 in cash, a Walkman and a pair of Bose speakers.

Free coffee will be available at the hour-long event sponsored by ASASU Special Events.

Skelly: Public's views are switching

By ELISE ELSBERRY
State Press

Since the landmark Supreme Court abortion decision in Roe vs. Wade, state Rep. Jim Skelly has been active in the fight in restricting abortions.

The Scottsdale Republican, speaking on behalf of ASU's pro-life organization, Students for Life, in the MU Wednesday, said that the majority of Arizonans are not for "abortion on demand."

Skelly

Skelly recalled the changes in social attitudes since the 1960s, saying the views of the American public are switching again.

"In the late 1960s, a couple of states liberalized their abortion laws," he said. "Republicans are mainly pro-life, and the Democrats are more pro-choice — these are written into their party views. Before, it was just the opposite."

Skelly said that states used to be against abortions, but now, after several years, states are going back trying to restrict abortions in "socially convenient" instances.

"Socially convenient abortions include all the women, 95-97 percent of the abortions performed, who decide that they just don't want to have this child — they would rather buy a new car or go out on Saturday nights — than be responsible for their actions," he said.

Pro-lifers claim that only around 5 percent of all abortions are attributed to what Skelly classified as "hard cases," those that are the result of rape or incest. Skelly told the small group of students — predominantly men — who attended the lecture that he has supported bills requiring automatic jail sentences for such "vicious and vile crimes."

But the pro-life advocate questioned the fairness of using capital punishment on the "innocent baby" conceived during a rape.

The representative said things have changed in the past two generations.

"When I was growing up, abortionists were on the same level as child molesters," Skelly said.

The number of abortions have increased to 1.5 million a year, according to Skelly's statistics, and he blames the increase on the money being made.

"You take the profit out of abortions you'll stop them immediately," he said.

Skelly also said there "is not a more evil organization than Planned Parenthood" and referred to it as the "evil empire." "Planned Parenthood claims to be a friend of families," he said. "But they are as much a friend of families as Deng Xiaoping was a friend of the students in Tiananmen Square."

In the upcoming gubernatorial election, Skelly said abortion will be a major issue in the race and that candidates will no longer be able to side step the controversy.

"Everybody is going to be forced to take a stand," he said. He added that the people are going to want to know where the elected officials stand.

Scholastic Aptitude Test scores are rising; minorities usually score lower, director says

By NICKI CARROLL
State Press

A national educator said Wednesday that high school students' Scholastic Aptitude Test scores are currently inching their way out of a slump that began in the last decade due to a lack of college preparation by the public school system.

"They've (the scores) been creeping up each year a point or two," said Stanley Kaplan, director of the Stanley Kaplan Educational Centers.

Kaplan said the decline began because students, who were not adequately prepared for the standardized test, were being encouraged to take it.

"It's like getting into a tennis game without ever having held a tennis racquet," Kaplan said.

Kaplan said the schools were not programming the children to achieve excellence and work toward better test scores.

"Youngsters are withering on the vine," Kaplan said. "They're interested in the quick fix, making money fast."

He said minorities generally score 100 points below white students, not because they are less capable, but because they did not have the same opportunities.

"Whites in general have had a better education," Kaplan said. "They haven't had the prejudice against them."

He said the popularity of television has contributed to overall lower test scores.

"You may be entertained (by television), but you're only a spectator," Kaplan said. "When you read you're using your imagination, you learn vocabulary."

He said when parents ask him how to prepare their young children for college-level work he always replies, "Read, read, read."

Kaplan said the rising divorce rate in this country also has had an effect on students' concentration when taking the tests.

"The family is disintegrating; children are upset," Kaplan said.

He said increased funding for early childhood education and parents' involvement with their children's schools will help restore the struggling scores.

Kaplan has 136 permanent and hundreds of temporary centers around the country that help prepare 120,000 students each year for many standardized tests. The ASU location, 1000 E. Apache Blvd., has an annual enrollment of approximately 1,000 students.

He said his philosophy is not to rely on gimmicks, but to focus on each student's weaknesses and rebuild test taking confidence.

"An improved student is the only one that gets an improved score," Kaplan said.

Police chief speaks about 'Do Drugs, Do Time' campaign

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

The Phoenix assistant chief of police said Wednesday there have been more than 1,000 arrests in the state thanks to Maricopa County's nine-month-old drug policy that targets the casual user.

In a speech to the Golden Key National Honor Society in the MU, Jerry Oliver outlined the objectives of the "Do Drugs, Do Time." campaign.

"We are shifting gears to target the demand side of drug use," he said.

"What you do in Colombia won't make any difference as long as there's a demand side," he added, referring to government efforts to extradite drug cartel leaders to the United States for punishment.

He blamed policing attitudes from the 1960s that mainly targeted the supply side of the drug problem for rendering the user an innocent victim.

"There is so much demand for drugs that major seizures (of narcotics) have absolutely no effect on the problem," he said. "Someone will always figure out a way to get drugs here."

Oliver said the police trend in the 1970s was still aimed toward arresting sellers and regarding the user as the only person affected by drugs. He added that the user arrests were mostly conducted in inner-city and ghetto areas.

But all that is changing now, he said.

"We've always written off the middle class — but they're the engine that runs the machine," he said.

The "Do Drugs, Do Time." program is a cooperative effort among 26 Maricopa County enforcement agencies that targets the occasional drug user mostly at bars and parking lots over the weekends. A treatment program is offered to those arrested in exchange for a clean police record.

If the user does not want to participate in a rehabilitation program then felony charges will be brought against the individual.

A student in the audience said she felt that the program may not be effective.

"Something needs to be done, but it's hard to tell if this is the program," said Georgia Geis, a 20-year-old junior family resources major. "But the program is starting at the local level, which is good."

oust city officials from office.

"It could happen," Martinez said.

However, Councilman Bill Ream said the council did what it should have in the supermarket issue, and that its job was to rezone the land — not dabble in economics and decide if the store should be built.

In addition, he said he is in favor of the group's objective to increase voter turnout.

"Getting people to vote is a great project," Ream said.

Councilwoman Pat Hatton agreed.

"I think that any group that tries to do this is good," she said. "There is a very small percentage that turns out to vote."

Hatton said the City Council's popularity is still high despite the supermarket issue.

Kathleen Hollingsworth, chairwoman of Tempe Tomorrow, said one of the main functions of the group will be to inform Tempeans of the issues.

TRAVELING ABROAD

PASSPORTS

A passport is an official identification document issued to citizens by their country and allows them to travel to/from a foreign country according to visa requirements.

To obtain your first passport, you must appear in person: 1) at a federal or state court or U.S. Post office authorized to accept applications; 2) at the passport agency in Boston, Chicago, Honolulu, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle, Stanford or Washington, D.C.

You must present the following items: 1) proof of U.S. citizenship (copy of birth certificate, naturalization certificate or consular report of birth of a U.S. citizen abroad); 2) two recent identical photographs (2" x 2"); 3) proof of identity (previous U.S. passport, certificate of naturalization or citizenship, a valid driver's license, or recent government identification card); 4) completed Form DSP-11 "Passport Application."

Processing Time: Allow four weeks, longer during peak travel season (March-Sept.).
 Cost: A ten-year passport for citizens 18 years or older is $35 plus a $7 execution fee. A five-year passport for citizens under the age of 18 is $20 plus $7 execution fee. You may be eligible to apply by mail and not pay an execution fee if:

- 1) You are able to submit your most recent passport issued within 11 years prior to your new application; and
- 2) Your previous passport was not issued before your 18th birthday.

To apply by mail, obtain Form DSP-82 from a passport agency or travel agent, complete, and return to passport agency.

For more information, order Your Trip Abroad, for $1 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

The fear of traveling to a foreign country can be devastating. Here are a few tips to prepare you for your journey abroad . . .

MONEY

The safest way to carry money while traveling is in traveler's checks. They are issued by American Express, Thomas Cook, Citicorp, Barclays Bank, Visa, and BankAmerica. When buying traveler's checks consider: how you're protected if they're lost or stolen, how quickly refunds are issued, how widely they're accepted. Have some local currency before entering a country. Exchange money at banks or currency exchanges (usually better rates than banks). Daily currency rates are quoted in major newspapers. Carry a major credit card for emergencies only!

Volunteer Service Gains Favor Among College Students

New York, N.Y., February 15, 1989 - A growing number of young Americans are combining travel and volunteer service through journeys of international goodwill — restoring a 10th century watermill in France, working at a children's crisis center in Ireland, harvesting crops in Czechoslovakia or excavating a Roman city in Spain, according to the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE), which sponsors its International Workcamps program in 14 countries in Europe and North America.

"Volunteer workcamps have been popular in Europe since the 1920's, but it's a relatively unknown concept for Americans that's growing rapidly," says CIEE program coordinator Rick LeVert, who saw enrollment rise more than 30 per cent last year.

One reason for the increased popularity of workcamps is a greater interest by Americans to meet people from other cultures, along with a growing emphasis in the U.S. on participation in voluntary service. In a typical workcamp setting, 15-20 volunteers from all over the world live in communal fashion, working long hours and then relaxing and sightseeing together.

"The work provides a loose structure and a continuity which hold people to a place and to one another long enough for bonds to form," says Don Hudson, who spent two weeks in France last summer excavating a chateau. "You spend enough time with people to see through the differences to underlying similarities and through the similarities to underlying differences."

18-year-old Erica Goldberger, who worked on a forest reclamation project in West Germany, was the only American among volunteers from Holland, West Germany, Algeria, Spain and France. "I learned so much," says Erica. "I feel much more responsible, independent and self-confident. I learned about life in many different cultures and made friends from all over the world."

International workcamps take place in the summer and are arranged by CIEE in cooperation with organizations in Canada, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Turkey and the U.S. Workcamps range in length from two to four weeks.

Projects are located in small villages, cities, national parks and forests, archaeological digs, historic monuments and castles. Activities include construction and renovation, forestry and nature conservation and work with children and the elderly. Minimum age for volunteers is 18, with limited opportunities for 16-year-olds. Most participants are 20 to 35-years-old.

Volunteers, who are responsible for transportation costs to the workcamp and a $100 program fee, are provided with free room and board.

International ID Card Offers Special Benefits for Students Traveling Abroad

New York, NY, April 24, 1989 — More than 1.3 million students in 62 countries this year will obtain lower airfares, visit museums and theaters at reduced rates and tap into a toll-free, 24-hour travel assistance hotline by carrying the International Student I.D. Card, made available since 1951 by the International Student Travel Confederation, a worldwide federation of student travel organizations based in Zurich, Switzerland.

"The International Student I.D. Card helps high school and college students enjoy international travel at a discount and also provides a comprehensive package of benefits that reduces anxieties about traveling abroad," says Ann Bellows, of The Council on International Educational Exchange, the U.S. sponsor of the card. "It's the only internationally recognized proof of student status."

Americans tend to be surprised that students have a special status in foreign countries and are entitled to reduced rates for travel, lodgings and cultural events, says Bellows.

Major benefits include domestic and international travel discounts by air, rail, bus and ferry; discounts on accommodations and shopping, reduced or free admission to museums, theaters, cinemas and other places of interest. There is also a basic accident/sickness insurance package included.

While the discounts are of special appeal to the student traveler, the card's new Travel Assistance Service is particularly popular with parents.

"It's reassuring for parents to know that in case of a medical, legal or financial emergency — from locating an English-speaking doctor to help in replacing a lost passport — a student traveling abroad can dial a toll-free number and get help," says Bellows. "The hotline also helps student travelers with practical advice such as necessary health precautions for travel to remote areas and even information about car rentals, exchange rates and the dates of national holidays."

Students who are at least 12 years old and enrolled in a program of study leading to a diploma or a degree at an accredited secondary or post-secondary educational institution are eligible for the card. Maximum age restrictions may apply for some of the discounts. Information about how to obtain the card, which costs $10, is available by contacting the Council on International Educational Exchange, Dept. 16, 205 East 42nd St., New York, NY 10017. (212) 661-1414.

budget, many cuts would have to be made. The cuts would be primarily in the areas of student wages, athletic programs and the number of hours of operation.

Gary Maas, director of the recreation complex, said, "We are one of the biggest employers on campus, and the cuts would mean taking money out of students' pockets."

The projected student wage budget for the 1990-91 academic year is $586,962.58.

Maas said the cuts would leave the complex with a "bare bones" operation, providing equipment but scant services and instruction.

Larson said that by passing the motion asking the University to replace the funds, "We are trying to uphold the original spirit of the agreement while maintaining the services that we are currently offering."

John Chavarria, a re-entry student on the board, said "We have to attempt to pull it (the $377,700) out; if we don't we deserve to be criticized by the student body."

But he said that if the request for the $377,700 is turned down and there are no other alternatives, "we would have to put it (the student fees surplus) back in (the budget)."

If the University approves the motion, the $377,700 request will be added to a request already being considered by the Arizona Board of Regents for $432,100 — the amount needed to balance the rec center's operating budget when the $377,700 was still included.

Lowell Crary, assistant to the vice president in the Student Affairs Office, said, "The $377,700 will have to be carved out of someone else's budget. I see the probability of getting more than the $432,100 as right around zero."

The Student Recreation Complex Board

discussed other means of raising the money, such as selling limited memberships to alumni. This would compliment a program that enables memberships to be sold to full-time employees of on-campus businesses such as Marriot, the travel agency and the credit union.

However Crary expressed the concern that if the complex is able to produce more revenue, then "they (the Regents) will think it should be spent on operations."

Chavarria said, "They may cut the $432,100 by the additional amount," of money raised by the center.

To Fall in Love

No 10

Are you experiencing true love or is it an illusion?

First, the emotional impact of early love is no proof for its authenticity. The force of both true and false love overwhelm and lead the intellect.

Second, love at first sight often becomes hate at the next moment. Those who fall in love crash land. True love takes time.

Third, true love must grow. Only commitment, effort and sacrifice will allow an acquaintance to mature trust into love.

There are two kinds of love; one self-centered, sympathetic and pitiful love. The other is unselfish sacrificial love. The self-centered type is destructive. The unselfish type is constructive. Motivation, purpose and direction determines the quality.

The origin of false love is described in the story of the Garden of Eden. The first man and woman were tempted to eat the "forbidden fruit." This fruit was a symbol of premature sexual love.

The biblical fall of man was a misuse of love. It caused spiritual death. We are now numb to quality love and question if a God of true love really exists. As a result, most people settle for less.

Temptation, deception and excessive desire lead the masses to cheap love. It looks good but will never satisfy. An excellent fruit is always bitter or sour before it becomes ripe.

Tuition

taxes to pay for educating students."

The Board has a formula that it uses to calculate tuition each year.

When tuition is calculated, the cost of education per student and the expected student contribution percentage are taken into account.

The cost of education is the amount of money it takes to put a student through college each year. The figure has been under fire in past years because there are numerous ways in which the regents can tabulate it, Golich said.

The total cost of education for 1989-90 is $6,820. Residents have to pay 20.5 percent, or $1,362, and non-residents pay 82.5 percent.

Golich said traditionally the student contribution fee rises one-half of a percent for residents and 1 percent for non-residents each year.

The net rise in tuition depends upon four factors:

- The availability of financial aid.
- Demographics of the three state universities.

• Other extraneous costs that students are faced with, including housing and food costs.

• How much money is utilized by the universities on building projects.

Currently, Arizona universities rank about 32nd on the list of the most expensive schools for out-of-state students, Golich said.

"It (the university system) should be accessible to everyone who is academically qualified," he said. "But if push comes to shove, the state of Arizona should provide for the residents first."

Regent Esther Capin said the cost of education percentage for non-resident students will definitely rise.

"It is our first responsibility to keep resident tuition lower," she said. "It won't go up to 100 percent this time, but it will go up."

"We're looking at the state picture (economy) and offering what we think is quality education."

Regent President Edith Auslander said it is too soon to make any tuition projections.

"It has been traditional for out-of-state students to pay more," she said.

No cigarettes today, cancer society urges

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

With American lungs already fighting for survival against high levels of air pollution, the American Cancer Society is urging people to quit smoking for 24 hours and give their lungs a break.

Today is the annual Great American Smokeout, and people are being urged to quit smoking for at least one day to prove that they can possibly kick the habit for life.

For its third year, Alpha Epsilon Delta is helping the American Cancer Society sponsor the smokeout, titled FreshStart.

FreshStart consists of four one-hour sessions held during a two-week period. A dozen smokers who are trying to quit will be led by an ex-smoker through four sessions. FreshStart emphasizes stopping and staying stopped.

Though it is possible to quit on your own, FreshStart is for people who prefer the structure and support of a group experience.

The pre-med society will be in front of the MU from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. today and Friday trying to persuade people to put out their cigarettes and trade them for sugarless candy.

"We won't actually fight them for it but will try and trade them for some candy," said Chuck Wysong, president of Alpha Epsilon Delta.

Wysong added that the views on smoking have changed. "It seems to be getting more and more socially unacceptable."

The American Cancer Society agreed, saying that 20 years ago, 80 percent of the American population smoked and today only 20 percent of the population smokes.

The U. S. Surgeon General predicted that this year there will be more deaths from smoking than from AIDS, heroin, crack, cocaine, alcohol, fire, murders and car accidents combined.

But the cancer society said that there is hope for the 20 million people who will try to quit tomorrow.

The smokeout is an excellent day to try to kick the habit, said Laurie Steen, communications director at the Arizona division of the American Cancer Society.

"There's a real strong feeling of commitment all over," Steen said. "We're hoping people will try and give quitting a try, and if they do it for 24 hours perhaps they can do it for life."

According to tests by the World Health Organization, an ex-smoker will see immediate results after quitting.

According to the tests, after quitting smoking, the levels of carbon monoxide and nicotine in a person's system will decline rapidly, within a few days your sense of smell and taste will improve and breathing will become easier. After a few years, smoking will no longer be a risk factor for heart disease.

Clinical Lab Sciences program receives 7-year accreditation

By KELLY JAIN
State Press

ASU is one of four universities nationwide that recently received the maximum seven-year accreditation for its Clinical Laboratory Sciences program.

The CLS program is part of ASU's Microbiology Department, which is housed in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. It offers students a bachelor of science degree in clinical laboratory sciences.

"Most (CLS) programs can hope for five-year accreditation, but because ASU's program met additional criterion, it received the maximum seven-year accreditation," program Director Diana Mass said.

Fourteen university CLS programs were reviewed in the same period ASU's program was reviewed, but 10 received accreditation for five years or less from the American Medical Association.

Community support refers to hospital lab experience, Mass said. As part of the curriculum, students receive practical lab experience in several of the eight Valley hospitals affiliated with the program, Mass added.

"The curriculum exposes them to a variety of work situations," Mass said. "Other cities don't have the community support because it's expensive and time consuming (for hospitals) to participate with education."

The Valley hospitals that provide practical lab experience are to be commended, she said. They take time to teach students and allow them to use equipment.

Mass said the experience adds to the quality of the program.

The CLS program qualifies graduates for national certification, which is required to work as a medical technologist and especially as a technologist in a licensed lab, Mass said.

ASU senior Kari Patterson said hospital lab experience was a major reason why she switched from microbiology to clinical laboratory sciences. Patterson said another reason for switching to CLS was "because the instructors are nationally recognized."

Mass is one of those nationally recognized instructors. She recently received the Sherwood Medical Professional Achievement Award in Education from the American Society of Medical Technologists.

She has been the director of the CLS Program at ASU for six years but has been involved in clinical laboratory sciences education for almost 20 years.

Her educational contributions and achievements include publications, presentations and involvement in ASMT and other professional organizations.

She has served as the editor of the Journal of Medical Technology and Clinical Laboratory Science: Strategies for Practice.

PHOENIX (AP) — The Phoenix Zoo has begun what is expected to be a years-long process of determining whether an elephant who paints also can differentiate between colors.

Because her keepers believe 16-year-old Ruby can differentiate among red, blue and other hues, they are working with researchers from several universities to develop a way to test their hypothesis.

"It's not a trivial question to answer," said Chris Murphy, a veterinary ophthalmologist with the medical school at the University of California-Davis. "It sounds trivial, but you can't just hold out red and blue plastic blocks and then say that proves it."

Murphy and colleagues at California-Davis — who are conducting their own research into the physiology of elephant eyes — are among those who have coached zoo personnel on how to conduct the color testing, zoo spokesman Dick George said Wednesday.

Zoo personnel said Ruby received her first paintbrush two years ago when her keepers noticed she spent a lot of time using rocks and sticks to doodle in the sand. Before long, painting had become a favored reward for successfully completing her regular obedience training.

Fall NCAAs mark golf's return

By PAUL CORO
State Press

The ASU mens golf team will jump back in the fire after a month-long layoff today as they compete in the Golf World/Nike Invitational, the fall season's equivalent of the NCAA Championships.

"I hope (the layoff) helped us," Head Coach Steve Loy said. "We weren't playing that well when we took the break."

Last month in the Taylor Made Red River Classic, the Sun Devils finished in third place, 14 strokes behind Texas.

"The last 10 days, we are starting to play back to where we should be," Loy said. "We weren't getting that quality practice time before."

This week's tournament, which continues through Saturday, takes place in Hilton Head, S.C. The field is by far the strongest of the fall season. The top 16 teams in the nation will be represented.

ASU enters the tournament ranked No. 3 with Clemson, according to the latest coaches poll. Oklahoma State remains No. 1 while Florida moves to the No. 2 slot. The only other Pac-10 teams in the top 16 are No. 8 UofA and No. 13 Southern Cal.

"This is the fall NCAA Championships," Loy said. "The teams that come out first through fifth can all win the national championship."

ASU battled SU, nagging injuries

By JOEL HORN
State Press

Despite the Sun Devils being in contention for a Peach Bowl bid following Saturday's 30-22 win against Stanford, several members of the ASU football team were not jumping for joy after the game.

They were too battered to jump.

"We had some guys play that played with some pain," Sun Devil Head Coach Larry Marmie said. "I really think that needs to be mentioned."

Split end Ron Fair was limited in practice all week because of a shoulder sprain, yet he caught three passes for 54 yards Saturday. He now boasts a total of 56 receptions for 907 yards and four touchdowns in 1989.

Right outside linebacker Darren Woodson had an Achilles tendon injury, but led ASU with 12 unassisted tackles. Woodson now has a team-leading 110 tackles, 72 unassisted, and an ankle sprain.

Inside linebacker Scott Woodford, who substituted for Mark Tingstad in his first collegiate start, sprained his left ankle in the second quarter. He was replaced by Darrell Banks, who Marmie said played well, although he made only one tackle. Woodford is seeing limited action during practice this week.

Kevin Minifield, who also made his first career start, made six tackles (five solo) and a key second-quarter interception. He replaced right cornerback Lawrence Hubley, who has been cleared for full contact during practice this week after pulling a groin muscle Nov. 4 against Washington.

Other reserves who played prominent roles in the win were free safety Adam Brass, who was voted the Sun Devils' co-special teams player of the game, and strong safety Mark Smith, who, along with left outside linebacker Israel Stanley, was recognized for the game's big hit.

"We had some guys that I thought took up the slack," Marmie said, "and that makes you feel good."

Defensive tackle Shane Collins is being withheld from contact during practice as a result of a knee sprain.

Fullback Jeff Simoneau, who suffered a bruised neck three weeks ago, will not engage in contact action until his condition improves.

Because ASU is idle Saturday, Marmie gave the players Monday and Tuesday off. They resumed practice Wednesday in preparation for the Nov. 25 Big Game against UofA.

"I'm not a real fan of open dates," Marmie said. "But under the circumstances, I'm glad we have it this time."

The Sun Devils will practice either Saturday or Sunday and Thanksgiving morning. Next week's practices will be closed.

A combination of Saturday's win and Arizona and Oregon State's losses, advanced ASU to second place in the Pac-10 — the Sun Devils' highest league ranking this late in the season since 1986, when the Sun Devils won the conference title.

Jack Beasley Jr./State Press

Stanford fullback Scott Eschelmann (34) is corralled by ASU defensive tackle Shane Collins (83) during Saturday's game.

There has been much talk by the media about a possible Peach Bowl invitation. Marmie, who had been mum during the season about such talk, opened up Sunday.

"We're 6-3-1," he said, "and I'd like to think we'd get some consideration."

However, ASU must concern themselves with the task at hand — beating the Wildcats.

"There's not any bowl that's going to overshadow what's going to happen Nov. 25," Marmie said. "We've made it quite clear that it's of major importance to us."

Sun Devil nose guard Richard Davis, who has only one regular season game left in his ASU career, is not going to let UofA spoil his holiday season.

"Coach Marmie said nobody else believes in us," he said, "so we might as well believe in ourselves."

"This is a hell of an ASU team. We've come a long, long way, and we're not about to stop now."

Davis, who learned to play defense against the wishbone as a freshman at the University of Oklahoma, is ready for the Wildcats' option attack.

"To walk out of here and beat the UofA would be the ultimate for me," he said.

Sun Devil kicker Mike Richey, who was named co-special teams player of the game Saturday, is also anxiously awaiting the Wildcats. ASU has not defeated UofA in seven years.

"(The 'Big Game') was what I always thought about growing up," he said.

Since taking over the kicking chores during the Oct. 7 UCLA game against UCLA, Richey has booted five field goals in as many attempts and has converted 15 of 15 extra point attempts.

The 1988 graduate of Tempe Corona del Sol High School said he has had a life-long dream about kicking a last-second field goal to knock off the Wildcats.

"I've gone through that in my back yard a hundred times," he said.

Sun Devils' Kirso perfect on and off the volleyball court

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

Tracie Kirso epitomizes the term student-athlete.

The senior accounting major is not only a starter on the ASU volleyball team but also has maintained a perfect 4.0 GPA in her four years of school.

"It's hard to balance them, especially when you're on the road so often," she said. "I didn't come here to play volleyball but to get an education, and I'm using sports to get that education."

Among the academic accomplishments Kirso has enjoyed in her four years is the Dean's list every semester, various scholar-athlete awards and first team Academic All-America.

In addition to her educational achievements, she was team MVP in both volleyball and basketball in high school, Junior Female Athlete of the Year for the region of Montana, Idaho and Washington and was invited to the Olympic Sports Festival in North Carolina her freshman year in college.

Now, as she enters into her last two games of her collegiate career, Kirso is both sad and happy.

"I'm happy because there are so many other things I want to do, and it will be nice to have the free time," she said. "But I will really miss these guys (ASU players) a lot."

"We've been through so much, it's going to be hard not seeing them every day."

The thought of becoming remotely inactive after graduation is one that Kirso said scares her. After being involved in volleyball and basketball since her freshman year at Shadle Park High School in Spokane, Wash., she said she was always athletically slanted.

She decided to play volleyball instead of basketball collegiately because of her 6-foot height.

"It was one of those situations where I was caught in the middle, not tall enough to be a center and not fast enough to play outside," she said. "Plus I really like having my Christmas vacation off, and there is not as much physical contact in volleyball."

When she graduates, Kirso said she would like to play on a sand league, but a church or recreational league is out of the question.

"After playing for a Top 20 team, coming down to that level is putting a lot on the line," she said.

Among the highlights of Kirso's senior year, she said, have been being voted team captain and having her best performances against Washington and Washington State, teams from her home state.

When all the glory of her volleyball career are forgotten, Kirso said she will have plenty of other memories to replace them.

"I made friends which I will remember forever like Noelle (Fridrich) and Sue (Nord)," she said. "And what I learned from (former coach) Debbie (Brown), (and coaches) Patti (Snyder) and Steve (Schlick) will always have lasting impressions."

Friday and Saturday, the ASU volleyball team will play in Oregon against OSU and Oregon. Kirso said her final wishes are a victory.

"I want to end on a winning note because it is the last time my parents will see me play," she said. "It's the last games that you remember the most."

"After beating them earlier in the season, Oregon is going to be back for some revenge, but if we play like I know we can play, hopefully, it will kick in."

O'Connell sets high expectations for diving team

By LARRY NEWELL
State Press

Only ASU diving Coach Ward O'Connell's optimism surpasses his exhilaration when he speaks of his mens team's potential this season.

"I have never put myself out on a limb like this before, but I feel confident that our men will be the 1989-90 Pac-10 diving champions," O'Connell said. "This is the most exciting group of young people I have ever had the pleasure of working with."

"The chemistry of the group is such that I feel like I died and went to heaven."

Senior Josh Appel and sophomore Rick Sawtell, who both competed at last year's Pac-10 Championships, are the only returning members on this season's nine-member squad.

"Since these two athletes have been here, every dive that they do is new and more difficult," O'Connell said. "This work ethic has spread throughout the team, as all the divers have been adding new dives daily, and many are doing the international list of dives."

O'Connell said junior Drew Johansen, a transfer from East Stroudsburg (Pa.) University, has established himself as one of the Sun Devils' top divers. Both Johansen and Sawtell have qualified for the NCAA preliminary championships.

Senior Alan Kuester, junior Joe Gagliardi and freshmen Corey Closson, Bill Conti, Scott Holder and Chip Jones also will compete for ASU.

On Saturday, the Sun Devils played host to UNLV and rolled over the Runnin' Rebels, 86-54.

In the 3-meter dive, Sawtell took top honors with a score of 310.20 while Closson and Johansen finished second and third, respectively. ASU placed in each of the top six places.

Sawtell set the standard for all divers in the 1-meter dive with an NCAA qualifying mark of 305.00. Johansen finished second with a 292.05, duplicating Sawtell's feat of an NCAA qualifying score. Conti, Holder and Appel finished third through fifth as the Sun Devils captured the top five spots.

ASU also dominated in the platform dive, with Jones garnering top honors with a 258.45 score. Closson and Holder recorded second- and third-place finishes to complete the Sun Devil stronghold at the top.

"Our mens divers swam very well," O'Connell said. "Everybody has improved on points during the last few weeks, and as a team, we are improving every day."

Youth is the appropriate word to describe the ASU womens diving corps. The Sun Devils do not have an athlete on the squad with more than a year of collegiate experience.

ASU will be led by sophomore academic All-American Janae Lautenschlager, who recorded a second-place finish at the Pac-10 Championships and placed 21st at the NCAA Championships a year ago in the 1-meter competition.

"Janae is a world-class athlete who has all the tools to compete internationally in the near future," O'Connell said.

The only other returning Sun Devil is sophomore part-time diver Jessica Tudos, who is also an ASU gymnast.

"Jessica is a world-class gymnast who competed in the 1984 Olympics, and she has made giant strides in her diving over the past year," O'Connell said.

The rest of the team is comprised of freshmen, who are all walk-ons. This

Sundi Kjenstad/State Press

Freshman Scott Holder finished fourth in the 1-meter dive competition Saturday against UNLV.

quartet is Kara Dock, Alicia Gruderzinski, Linda Kometer and Dawn West.

Lautenschlager earned top honors for ASU with a 278.70 score in the 1-meter dive. West, Kometer and Dock placed fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively.

In the 3-meter competition, Lautenschlager took top honors with an NCAA qualifying mark of 297.30. Dock placed fourth in this event, bumping West and Kometer to fifth and sixth.

Lautenschlager completed her sweep of the diving events with a first-place finish in the platform competition with a 175.20 mark. Dock and West placed second and third, respectively, as the ASU womens swimming team posted a 89-60 victory

"I feel real good about our team's performance, as they are improving every time out and they are showing great progress," O'Connell said.

ASU will play host to Southern Cal Friday at 3 p.m. at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Georgia seniors said they voted to go to the Peach Bowl Dec. 30 in Atlanta rather than try the inaugural Copper Bowl in Tucson, because of special attention promised the Bulldogs by Atlanta organizers.

"The Peach Bowl representative thought we would be a little reluctant to go to Atlanta since it is so close," offensive tackle Curt Mull said Tuesday.

"So they said they're really going to take care of us. I'm not sure what's involved, but they are making a real good effort."

The bowl has not picked an opponent. The committee is looking at Syracuse, 6-3, Arizona State, 6-3-1, and Virginia, 9-2.

Virginia, reportedly headed for the Citrus Bowl, could become available for the Peach Bowl if it loses to Maryland this Saturday.

ASU runners end season at Districts

By LARRY NEWELL
State Press

For a standout trio of cross country performers, a long season has finally come to a close.

On Saturday, the Sun Devils fielded three athletes in the District 8 Championships in Fresno, Calif. The ASU runners all failed to place in the top three — the mark required for a berth in the NCAA Championships.

In the womens team competition, the University of Washington earned top honors with 75 points. UC-Irvine tallied 83 points for second place, followed closely by UCLA, which finished third with 89 points. ASU did not field the necessary number of runners to be recognized as a team.

In the individual contest sophomore Kelly Cordell placed 16th overall for the Sun Devils, recording a 17:47.7 time for the 5,000-meter course.

"I'm not surprised that Kelly finished high," ASU cross country Coach Ken Lehman said. "She ran very well, went out and competed, and did a very good job."

The other lone ASU womens representative was senior Teresa Barrios, who placed sixth last year on her way to a 51st place finish at the NCAA championships. This season Barrios, marred by illness, finished 26th at the District 8 Championship with a 18:00.8 time.

"Teresa went out and competed, doing everything possible and considering she was not in her top running condition, she did well," Lehman said.

Barrios has been hampered by hepatitis throughout the season and has competed in only two meets prior to the District 8 Championships.

Junior Todd Lewis was the lone male ASU representative on Saturday. He finished 59th with a 33:08.7 time for the 10,000-meter course.

"Todd ran great at the start as he was sixth or seventh in the first four miles," Lehman said, "but then he injured his hip descending from an incline, which held him back."

Barrios' cross country career is over due to graduation, but expectations will be high next season for Lewis and Cordell.

"For Todd and Kelly, one of their goals would have to be to compete at the NCAA Championships next season," Lehman said.

Golf

Loy will be sending a slightly different lineup for the trip — sophomore Phil Mickelson, junior Jim Lemon, senior Per Johansson, sophomore Brett Dean and senior Scott Frisch.

Dean is the 11th Sun Devil golfer to earn a spot on the traveling squad this season. Last year, Dean competed in just two tournaments. As a member of the B team at the Sun Devil/Thunderbird Invitational, Dean placed seventh.

"I'm really excited," Dean said. "I feel I'll be ready. My game is really coming on."

Dean has been a borderline candidate for the traveling team throughout the fall. Although he never posted an over-par round in qualifying, Dean always came up short.

"It's been frustrating, but it's made me work harder," Dean said. "As long as I keep improving, I'm not going to focus about things in the past."

Dean finished second behind Frisch in ASU's six qualifying rounds. Loy said he expects Dean to play well despite his lack of college experience.

The Sun Devils have played in the Hilton Head tourney the last two years. Mickelson, who owns the team's lowest stroke average (71.83), finished second last season to lead ASU to a runner-up finish behind Clemson.

The Arthur Hills Golf Course, which the Sun Devils begin their 54 holes on today, is a long, demanding, hazard-highlighted course, according to Loy. He added that bad weather is a highly possible factor.

"This time of the year, the most important thing is momentum," Loy said. "Everyone knows we're a national contender. The most important thing is to try to win one of these last two tournaments."
