Skybox liquor inquiry to impact statewide

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The results of an extensive investigation into the use of alcohol in the Sun Devil Stadium skyboxes will have far-reaching ramifications for other businesses around the state, the Arizona liquor superintendent said Monday.

The comment follows a recent announcement by state Superintendent Hugh Ennis that two companies that deliver alcohol to the skyboxes have been cited by the state liquor board for violations in connection with alcohol consumption in the stadium.

The investigation is one of the first of its kind since a 1988 regulation was passed making it illegal for liquor to be served in an arena that does not have a license. Sun Devil Stadium lacks a license. The investigation results will set a precedent and determine the perimeters of the regulation for other businesses that might be acting illegally.

But Tom Sadler, director of the stadium, said all the actions taken by stadium personnel in distributing alcohol have been legal.

"As of right now, we are acting legal and forthright," he said. "I wouldn't do anything otherwise."

However, Ennis sent out notification to two companies that deliver alcohol to the skyboxes Friday.

In October, Sadler said Arizona Biltmore Catering is the company that brings in the food and alcohol to the stadium, and that the liquor is purchased from Sun Devil Liquors in Mesa.

"The two licensees have appeared to have violated the law," he said, adding that the investigation into how alcohol is handled in the skyboxes is not complete. So far, the investigation has lasted about two months.

The state Liquor Licenses and Control Department launched the investigation at the end of October after Attorney General Bob Corbin conducted a probe into the selling of alcohol in the skyboxes and determined that it was illegal.

At the time Ennis said he disagreed with the attorney general's opinion. Ennis said he still has several conflicts with Corbin's opinion.

"Let's just say there has been no (final) agreement yet," the liquor superintendent said.

Ennis said he will further investigate how liquor is supplied to the stadium, which pays for the delivery, whether the skyboxes are considered a business and whether there is a cover charge in the form of tickets to the Cardinals games.

Ennis said the licensees and the liquor board will meet informally to determine penalties.

Syphilis cases on increase in county

But student health center says ASU rate no higher

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

Maricopa County Health Department officials are concerned about a syphilis outbreak, which they said has been traced back to many residents of the Tempe-ASU area.

The number of syphilis cases has increased five times this year compared to 1988, and it continues to increase at a disturbing rate, county health officials said.

In November 1988, the Maricopa County Health Department tested eight people with syphilis, a potentially deadly sexually transmitted disease. This year the number increased to 55 and health officials are concerned, because for every person who tests positive for syphilis, there are nine unaware they have the disease.

ASU Student Health Center officials said doctors are aware and attentive of the increase in the number of syphilis cases. However, the health center has experienced no increases in test-positive cases of the disease on campus.

"The number of syphilis cases are so small that it would be easy to detect an increase," said Chuck McDuffie, health education coordinator. "In fact, two or three cases would be a large increase."

Health department officials said syphilis also is referred to as "the great imitator," since it can resemble many other medical conditions.

"One of the biggest problems we are having with syphilis is that people are often misdiagnosed, and also that many cases go unnoticed," said Lauro Martinet, supervisor of the public health advisory at the health department.

Although some sufferers may experience no immediate signs of syphilis, oftentimes a sore or rash will develop on the genitals, hands, feet or head. Therefore, doctors may confuse syphilis with a rash caused by detergent or another STD, such as herpes.

Also, an infected person might develop a common painless sore, which will then disappear, leading the sufferer to believe there is not a problem. Syphilis will then spread, and if it becomes well established in the body, it could attack the heart and spinal cord.

Officials await ASU police reports on weekend events

Dean of Student Life Leon Shell said Monday that he will wait until he receives a police report on an orange-throwing incident that occurred early Sunday morning at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity house before proceeding with any disciplinary action.

Shell, also the acting associate vice president of student affairs, said he expects to receive the ASU police report sometime this week.

ASU Police Chief William Bess said his department

Fighting resumes in Philippines; rebels say foreigners will be freed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government said today it has arranged bus transportation to evacuate about 2,000 tourists trapped for five days in hotels in the Makati financial district by fighting between rebels and loyal troops.

The rebels had offered Monday to evacuate the foreigners, including more than 200 Americans, to dispel fears that they were being held hostage.

At least 70 people have been killed and more than 500 wounded since mutineers seized several military installations and bombed the presidential palace Friday in a bloody attempt to oust President Corazon Aquino.

A rebel spokesman, Capt. Albert Yen, telephoned news organizations in Manila Monday and said the insurgents would release the foreigners to show they were not being held against their will.

He said the foreigners would be free to leave their hotels this morning and would be taken to the Manila airport aboard shuttle buses, but he said the revolt would continue.

Rafael Alunan, undersecretary of tourism, said he had received no direct confirmation of the rebel offer but would send buses to the battle zone to transport the tourists to the airport.

He broadcast a statement over Manila radio stations telling the rebels the routes the buses would take and said each vehicle would bear a white flag.

Alunan said there were an estimated 2,000 tourists in the Makati area.

U. S. Embassy spokesman Jerry Huchel said 215 Americans were believed to be in three hotels in Makati.

Bush praises Gorbachev, urges 'new thinking' toward Soviets

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President Bush said Monday it's too early to proclaim an end to the Cold War, but added that Mikhail Gorbachev's acceptance of sweeping reform in Eastern Europe "absolutely mandates new thinking" by the West.

Wrapping up his weekend summit journey with a stop at NATO Headquarters, Bush also told reporters the United States would maintain "significant military forces in Europe as long as our allies desire our presence."

The president said he wants a treaty making initial cuts in superpowers' conventional forces in Europe "in the bank" before seeking deeper reductions. He told NATO leaders he hoped a multinational summit could be convened in Europe next summer to sign such an accord.

Conventional forces aside, the United States and Soviet Union are negotiating a proposed 50 percent cut in long-range nuclear weapons, as well as a proposed ban of chemical weapons.

S&L regulator Wall resigns, says he was scapegoat in Lincoln affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — M. Danny Wall, under fire for his handling of what may become the costliest savings and loan failure in history, resigned Monday as the government's chief S & L regulator.

In his letter of resignation to President Bush, Wall complained he was being made "a scapegoat" for the problems of the entire industry and denounced a "steady stream of one-sided information" from congressional hearings concerning the collapse of Lincoln Savings and Loan Association of Irvine, Calif.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee, has blamed Wall for allowing Lincoln to remain open until last April even though government examiners had recommended in May 1987 that it be closed. The bailout of the institution is expected to cost taxpayers up to $2.5 billion.

In turn, Wall criticized Gonzalez on Monday, saying he "resorted to corruption of the truth" in trying to force the regulator out.

Another committee member, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said Wall "deserves to go" but added that he "should not be held as the scapegoat for the thrift mess."

Poll: Most students unaware of faculty club proposal

Student Viewpoint is a weekly poll of student opinion in the State Press. The unscientific poll, conducted at points around campus, is meant to provide an insight into students' views on issues of the day.

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
State Press

Sixty-eight out of 100 students polled Sunday said they had not heard of the University Club, a proposed dining and social facility for faculty, staff and local business leaders.

Of the remaining 32 students who were aware of the proposal to build the club, 14 said they were undecided about the issue. Twelve students did not support the development, while six supported the proposal, and one student was indifferent.

The club is expected to be financed through the interest generated by ASU's investment fund. Investment funds are University revenues generated by such items as parking decals and ASU bookstore sales that are then invested in interest-producing government securities.

The proposed site for the club, which supporters hope to open in 1990, is ASU's Fine Arts Annex. The University is expected to lease the building for about $85,000 each year for the next 10 years if the Arizona Board of Regents approves the plan.

The unscientific poll was conducted over the phone and at various sites on campus, including areas in the MU, Hayden Library and residence halls.

Student Viewpoint

Comments from those against the club varied, but many students were concerned about the financing of the facility.

"The funding should come from the alumni," one student said.

Another student said faculty members do not deserve the club.

"ASU faculty is worthless," he said. "It's just another way

However, some students thought that the University club is a good idea, regardless of the funding or the quality of the faculty.

"I think it's a good way to bring the faculty together," a student said.

The undecided students claimed they were not informed enough about the issue to make a reasonable judgment.

Ping-pong balls compete in 1st engineering pentathlon

By MICHELLE HENRY
State Press

"Pele" kicked his way to the goal line, swooshed down the giant slalom, rowed his heart out in the single scull, pole vaulted over the cross bar and ski-jumped his way to a gold medal.

No, this is not the latest episode of "Battle of the Network Stars". "Pele" is a ping-pong ball competing in the first MAE Design Pentathlon.

The course MAE 498B teaches students to combine creativity and imagination in engineering.

Jami Shah, an associate professor in mechanical engineering, said he teaches the creative aspects of engineering while psychology professor Peter Killeen studies the processes of creativity in the class.

"Traditionally everything in engineering is taught quantitatively," Shah said. "We feel this class teaches things related to using the right side of the brain. We devised it to teach engineering students to be creative."

Shah said this is the first time students of engineering and psychology have been put together in a class of this sort. The one-credit course offers problems with no mathematical solutions to its students.

"As engineers, we tend to think laterally," Shah said. "But the exercises in this class have many solutions. Students have to think about them in abstract terms."

In the "Design Pentathlon," the class was divided into two teams of five, team ALPHA and team UNO, and assigned to re-create five NCAA sporting events.

There were several events students could re-create, including high hurdles, 100-meter butterfly, tennis, giant slalom, single scull, 100-meter dash, water polo, basketball, ski jumping, yachting, pole vault, 3-meter springboard, volleyball, figure skating and soccer.

The course was laid out in a pentagon, with each person controlling a leg of the course representing one sporting event. The players worked to move the ball through each event so spectators could recognize the sport being represented. Each team had to complete the course twice within four minutes.

Students had a limited supply of materials they could use in building their sporting apparatus, including five 32-by-40 sheets of foamcore, 15 rubber bands, 20 square feet of any color paper, 36 inches of wooden pegs and white glue.

Tom Wolcott, a senior mechanical engineering major, was a member of the winning ALPHA team. He said the hardest aspect of winning the gold was trying to make the events look like actual sporting events.

"You really had to think creatively and decide how to make a ping-pong ball look like a sporting event with a limited amount of materials," he said.

The ALPHA team, which won with a time of 3:40, included Wolcott, Mary O'Connell, Mike Hager, David Aitchison and Bryan Leavitt.

Michael Brock, a silver medalist on team UNO, had a different opinion of what was the toughest job in the project.

"Trying to combine two events with one piece of foamcore was hard," he said. "We designed our events with duality in mind. To get the ball from one plane surface to another was hard."

Brock, a senior mechanical engineering major, said to conceptualize a project in two weeks was a great way to be more creative.

"So many people are set in their way of thinking," Brock said. "This course gives you a new way to think about ways of doing things."

A preliminary competition was held on Saturday to check materials used by the students. If any problems were found, they were allowed to redesign.

Teams were judged on several areas by another engineering design class, with the most important evaluation being how efficiently and inventively the game moved between two events.

Students also were judged on how well they reproduced the excitement and enthusiasm of the events.

"We wanted students to use engineering in a different domain," Shah said. "We hope to integrate what we did in this class into a regular course, as a lab."

Spring agenda

Students face full slate of issues next semester

Lynn Vavreck
Editorial Assistant

It's that time of year when everyone starts whistling holiday tunes, shopping malls stay open 'til 10 p.m., students break out crisp, unweathered syllabi to see exactly how much reading they should have done in the past 16 weeks. Finals week is practically upon us (much to the dismay of students). The State Press has only three more newspapers to print (something I'm sure everyone is disappointed about) and soon, students will return home, taking a four-week break to celebrate the holidays. (Some will celebrate the fact they managed to read a semester's worth of material in a week.)

But others at the University don't take four-week holiday breaks. In fact, while students are relaxing, skiing and planning how to procrastinate more effectively next semester, some important decisions affecting student's welfare will be made.

Many of the issues facing students this semester will be resolved before January. Still others will be resolved next semester.

• Tuition: The fact that there has been no great debate about a possible tuition increase next year is a sure sign that the Arizona Board of Regents is going to recommend an increase — and it is going to be a big one. Rumor has it that out-of-state tuition will suffer the biggest blow. Either way, get your protest shoes ready — it's going to take a lot more than a tuition rally this year to convince the regents that students can't afford to pay grand increases in tuition.

For those of you who are new to ASU or missed the opportunity to participate in last year's tuition battles, ASASU usually involves as many students as possible, hundreds, in an all-out effort to prove to the regents that students shouldn't be paying huge tuition increases without the University improving the educational opportunities.

Let's hope that ASASU is planning to pull out all the stops this year. If not, then maybe the University will have finally found a solution to the enrollment problem — increase tuition so much that only 50 percent of the current students can afford it. Watch for details on the tuition rallies next spring.

• University Club: Here's an issue that will not directly inconvenience students but still affects them. After much debate, student leaders have finally said that they believe in the concept of a University Club but disagree with the financing program for the club. The University Club Board has finally admitted that maybe the club can't support itself and the University might have to help bail it out. Students always are fighting to survive at a University.

Last spring, students went to the Legislature and practically begged them for more money. If the University throws away dollars on the club — maybe not the same dollars that students lobbied for, but real dollars it would be a paradox. Especially, because we all know thanks to Lonnie Ostrom, head of the University Club Board and director of development at ASU, that "dollars are dollars" — no matter where they come from.

So, if the University uses this investment fund money to subsidize the University Club, it has really used students by sending them to the Legislature to lobby for more money and spending those dollars on a club that students can't use.

'Many of the issues facing students this semester will be resolved before January. Still others will be resolved next semester.'

Here's an interesting thought: How many of the original 500 faculty members who said they would join are still interested in being members of the University Club? Remember, the club's inception was years ago and since that time, according to several faculty members, no correspondence has occurred between the club board and the faculty who expressed interest. In fact, many faculty who said they would join several years ago may not be interested anymore. After a quick survey of their list, the University Club Board may find that it only has 200 members instead of 500. It might be a good idea to check up on this before the regents decide the issue at their January meeting.

• Lattie Coor: The University will have a new president when classes resume in January. Lattie Coor, current president at University of Vermont and a former NAU student body president, is returning to Arizona.

What issues would you like President Coor to think about?

This is your chance to say whatever you'd like to the new president. Voice your concerns to Lattie Coor through letters to the editor. Simply follow the letter policy at the bottom of this page. This way, President Coor will have a chance to find out what the student body is concerned about.

You can see that this holiday break is no time to take a vacation. Next semester promises to be full of important issues and students should voice their opinions. Most importantly, we must let President Coor know that students at ASU are interested in their educational environment.

At least that way if tuition rises and classes fill up and the University can't afford to hire more faculty because of the state's fiscal crunch, you'll know that you tried to make a difference.

And remember, you can't complain about the results unless you've tried to influence the process.

Letters

'Grossly misquoted'

Editor:

In response to Nicki Carroll's Dec. 4 article, I would like to state that I was grossly misquoted. I was quoted as saying: "People should be punished only if their words result in violence" and "Saying a racial slur and being kicked out of school is not fair." Both of those statements are viewed by me as totally ridiculous.

Due to verbal, racial and sexual harassment, people may experience severe psychological and emotional problems in which there is not a trace of violence. These victims need justice.

In reference to the second misquote, I would say that when looking at this statement one has to consider each case individually. First, one has to look at the damage done to the victim, the intentions of the perpetrator and does he/she have a past history of related incidents, etc. To sum it all up, this is an institution of higher learning and any form of racial or sexual harassment should not be tolerated and some form of punishment should be imposed on those who represent themselves in this negative manner.

On a correct note: I was quoted as saying, "That the provisions should cover every group void of sex, religion, race or color." Yes, that was a statement that I made and stand behind. For sexual and racial harassment affect all of us and the protection against its degrading nature should cover our entire campus. In closing, minorities and women are more likely to be recipients of racial and sexual harassment. Last year minorities led the fight for everyone so that this provision could be added to the student code of conduct. So please, State Press, let's make sure our quotes are correct in the future. For this provision is too important for it to be watered down into nothingness.

Keating

S & L mess makes other criminals appear saintly

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

The massive Lincoln Savings and Loan scandal has renewed my appreciation for Pops Panczko, a simple hard-working old crook.

Throughout his long career, Panczko, now in his 70s, never made any bones about what he did for a living. When he was asked what his occupation was, he always responded: "I am a teef."

Which he was. The cops knew it, the judges knew it and occasionally a jury would agree. And when he did prison time, Pops never whined that he had been framed, that the government was picking on him or it was all a terrible misunderstanding.

He played by the rules. As a professional thief, he would go out most days and look for something to steal, whether it was a humble crate of cabbage or a jewelry salesman's sample case.

If he succeeded, he won. If he was caught and convicted, the cops won. What could be simpler?

He lived and practiced his trade in a accordance with the old Chicago philosophy: "Only suckers beef."

Compare that to what is happening with the Lincoln Savings and Loan scandal.

The main character is a tall, regal banker, Charles H. Keating Jr., who likes living in luxurious splendor.

The government says that when he bought Lincoln Savings, in California, he began throwing money into high-risk, fast buck investments.

There wouldn't have been anything wrong if it was his own money. But it was money entrusted to the S & L by depositors. And insured by the government.

Now the government says that Keating made so many bum deals, while living like a king himself, that this might be the biggest single bank flop in history.

By the time the paper wreckage is cleared away, the government says, it will cost the taxpayers about $2 billion. That's almost a ten-spot from every man, woman and child in this country.

The feds once sent Pops to prison for using slugs in telephones. Pops' free phone calls didn't cost every man, woman and child in this country a ten-spot.

And how does banker Keating respond to this? He goes before Congress, invokes the Fifth Amendment and rides off in a limo.

Then his aides pass out an indignant statement saying that everybody is to blame but Keating. The government is picking on him, Congress is picking on him and all the troubles are their fault.

He didn't mention the little old ladies who have told how hustlers from Lincoln talked them into putting their savings into junk bonds that flopped, when they thought they were investing in chips of blue.

As far as I know, Pops Panczko never fleeced little old ladies. Even a Chicago "teef" has some standards.

Then we have the government's bank regulators, who were supposed to be alert to risky operations such as Keating's.

It appears that some in California were wise to him a long time ago. But they couldn't persuade the Washington desk jockeys who were in charge to get moving.

Now the bank regulators are pointing fingers at each other and saying, "Your fault, your fault," "Told ya so, told ya so," "Not me, not me," "He did it, he did it."

And we actually give these people fancy titles, handsome salaries, large offices, clerks and secretaries.

Finally, there are the five senators, who have been dubbed "The Keating Five."

It seems that while Keating was being investigated, they wanted to be sure that he wasn't bullied, harassed, picked on or otherwise mistreated by the bank regulators.

So, in Keating's behalf, they took a personal interest and poked their noses into the investigation.

I'm sure that in each of their states, there are many people who are having financial difficulties, whether it is paying the rent and putting food on the table, making car payments or mooching a few coins for a bottle of wine.

But these five senators — Alan Cranston of California, John McCain and Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, Donald W. Riegle of Michigan and John Glenn of Ohio — were so concerned about a high-living millionaire banker that they flexed their political clout for him.

How considerate of them. And how generous of Keating to toss a total of about $1.4 million in campaign contributions their way.

So now the Senate Ethics Committee is going to ponder the question of whether all of this was ethical. But do they really have to ask? Even a Chicago alderman would laugh.

If the five senators truly have a commitment to public service, they could best serve the public by immediately resigning their offices and saving the public the cost and hassle of establishing the obvious: By any other name, a fix is still a fix.

Of course, they won't. And the worst that will happen to the negligent bank regulators is that they might have to go find honest work. And it will take years for Keating's mess to be dragged through the courts, and when it is over, he'll probably still be living the high life.

And they put Pops Panczko away for using slugs in a phone?

Some things, besides Keating's bookkeeping, don't add up.

Doves don't deserve our tears

Editor:

Deborah Dakin's Dec. 1 letter concerning the problem of doves flying into the windows of the Student Services Building struck me as a bit humorous. In the first place, if we were to crusade against all the minor tragedies of life, we would spend many hours lamenting the deaths of helpless bugs being stepped on, flies being swatted and cats being flattened by speeding cars.

Personally, I find the situation somewhat amusing but not nearly as amusing as the fact that Deborah's mother finds it necessary to protect her family from a similar plight with their own arcadia door. Although Deborah claims that "doves possess the kind of lives lots of people dream of," I'd like to think there's more to life than being a simple-minded bird that pecks at the sidewalk filth.

You've really flown the coop with this one, Deborah.

Who won Cold War? Does anybody really care?

Jeff Greenfield
Universal Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — At the height of Cold War tensions nearly 40 years ago, with a new Communist government in China, with American boys dying in Korea, with trials of suspected Communist spies making headlines in the United States, a popular political slogan of the times was: "Who lost China?"

The meaning of the question was clear: People in positions of power here in the United States had — through ineptitude at best or conscious malevolence at worst — delivered the most populous nation on Earth into the hands of our mortal enemies. Now it was time to punish those responsible.

Today, a more beneficent question is likely to make its way into American politics: "Who won the Cold War?"

With virtually all of Eastern Europe abandoning communism, with Gorbachev making promises of increased freedom in the Soviet Union — and apparently making good on at least some of them — a sense of triumph for Western values will inevitably lead to a battle over who gets political credit for the deed.

If, as John Kennedy once said, "victory has a thousand fathers," then competing political forces are already lining up for paternity tests.

It is not a contest in which mainstream Democrats are likely to do well. Their last president, Jimmy Carter, did indeed put a defense buildup and anti-Soviet sanctions into place in 1979 and 1980, but his re-election campaign was so determined to paint Ronald Reagan as a warmongering simpleton that Carter simply spoke too softly to make credible claims of carrying a big stick.

He also had problems within his own party, heavily dominated by "pro-peace" forces. In fact, during his 1980 acceptance speech, Carter was booed by his own delegates when he referred to reinstating draft registration.

In 1984, Walter Mondale ran as the candidate of the nuclear freeze and assailed President Reagan for never meeting with his Soviet counterparts at the summit.

The party's 1988 nominee, Michael Dukakis, had campaigned in earlier years with disarmament's den mother, Dr. Helen Caldicott. By 1988, however, the prospects for peace were so much brighter that Dukakis wound up his campaign arguing that he was closer to Reagan's foreign policies than George Bush was.

So the apparent success of the Reagan (and Bush) policies should benefit Republicans enormously, right? Not so fast.

In politics, success has a way of triggering a funny reaction for the electorate, best described as "what have you done for me lately?"

The classic example comes for Great Britain, when voters threw Winston Churchill's Conservative government out of office mere weeks after VE Day in 1945. It was as if they were saying, "Well done, Winnie, old man. Now let the Labor Party build the postwar welfare state."

But it happens in America as well. In 1946, just a year after World War II ended, voters gave Republican congressional candidates one of their biggest off-year election victories of the 20th century — in effect, telling the incumbent Democrats that they were impatient for peacetime affluence.

Dwight Eisenhower presided over eight years of relative peace and prosperity, but in 1960, voters chose a new, fresh face in John Kennedy over Ike's heir apparent, Richard Nixon.

Indeed, the steady desertion of the white middle class from Democratic Party ranks over the last 20 years can be traced, in part, to the very success of Democratic programs. Having made the journey from working class to relative comfort, millions of voters decided to turn to Republicans to protect their gains.

So what could this mean for Republicans seeking votes on the strength of the Cold War victory?

It could mean that voters will stop worrying about which party can best protect the national security if there is no perceived threat to that security.

It could mean voters will start itching for the supposed billions from a "peace dividend" to be diverted from defense spending into health care, college scholarships or the American infrastructure. And if it's spending that voters want, Democrats are almost always seen as the right party for that job.

Perhaps most ominous for Republicans, voters might see the end of the Cold War as the clear end of a chapter in history — a time to turn consciously toward a new direction.

Some of that mood was in evidence in 1988, but in that campaign the Republicans managed — honorably or otherwise — to plant grave doubts in voters' minds about Michael Dukakis' capacity to lead the country and protect it.

Now, however, it will be very hard to paint Democrats as "soft on defense" when President Bush's defense secretary is talking about $180 billion in defense cuts. It will be hard to suggest that the Soviets are on the march when they are so obviously in retreat.

Thus, the very events that will have Republicans pointing with pride could wind up depriving them of one of their most consistently powerful themes over the years.

Honesty pays: Man awarded $75,000 he found last year

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
State Press

An ASU alumnus, who last week was awarded $75,000 that he found stashed away in his rented Tempe condominium last year, said he plans to use the money to buy a house.

Kenneth Lain, who resides in Sacramento, Calif., and works for a credit-reporting firm, discovered the cash in June of 1988 while spraying his Tempe condominium for pests. But he was challenged for ownership of the money by his landlord, Gust C. Nichandros of Orinda Village, Calif.

"It was a shock (to find the money)," Lain said. "It obviously was something you wouldn't normally see. I decided to turn in the money the next day to Tempe police — after a sleepless night."

Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Gloria Ybarra ruled in favor of Lain on Wednesday, reasoning that he did what "most law-abiding and honest citizens would hope all finders would do — he turned the money over to police."

In June 1988, as Lain prepared to spray under an air filter in a furnace closet, he noticed a dusty bank bag filled with $10s, $20s, $50s and $100s.

Lain said the money appeared to be illegal because it was found in a bank bag. But no one claimed the money during an investigation of the condominium's previous tenants.

The bag also included receipts from a Chicago restaurant, but police found that the money was not connected with the restaurant.

Raymond Miller and Mack Jones, attorneys for Lain, claimed that their client had the right to the cash because Lain found the money and occupied the condominium.

"Our view is that the law encourages to turn in (money that is found)," Jones said, adding that if a probe cannot locate the original owner, the ruling is the best way to reward the finder of the cash.

Lain said his ex-landlord can appeal but has heard nothing of such an action. Nichandros has 30 days to file for an appeal.

"My lawyers say (if he does appeal), he doesn't have a chance," Lain said.

Don't touch that dial! Peck, others spin tunes for KASR

By MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

After a hard day at work, Interim President Richard Peck slides behind the wheel of his car and reaches for the radio dial.

Soon, he is enveloped by the soothing sounds of ... what? Metallica? Barry Manilow? Echo and the Bunnymen?

If you've ever wondered what kind of music the University's chief listens to, you'll have the chance to find out this week when Peck is a guest disc jockey on ASU's own KASR.

From 3 until 4 p.m. Thursday Peck will be spinning the cuts of his choice for his listening audience. Anything from Donny Osmond to Ozzy Osbourne is fair game.

But Peck said his taste runs between the two.

"I'll probably be playing 1960's and '70's light rock," he said. "To others they are oldies, but to me they're not."

Peck is one of this week's featured DJs during "Outrageous Guest DJ Week." Monday night's format was "Gab with the Greeks," with Sigma Nu fraternity President Derek Hall and Sigma Kappa sorority President Michelle Morris.

The duo stuck primarily to alternative music, the station's usual focus.

Before the broadcast, Morris said she was nervous but excited.

"I think it's great, but I've never done anything like it before."

But Julia Trainor, promotions director for KASR who developed the event, said most of those who will be performing had little or no prior experience.

Peck, however, was a disc jockey for a year "before the Beatles when there was only Elvis and Chuck Berry," and said he is not nervous.

"It was a long time ago, in Milwaukee," Peck said.

Trainor said the idea for the guest DJs "just came to her" and was met with excitement from all of those invited.

"Everyone we asked was really enthusiastic," she said. "We thought it would be great for the station."

In the spotlight tonight will be Sun Devil center Eddie Grant — someone who is used to performing in front of people.

Wednesday afternoon from 3 until 6, State Press Editor Darrin Hostetler and cartoonist Mike Ritter will take the mic.

And Friday from 3 until 6 in the afternoon New Times food critic Cap'n Dave will run the show.

Station officials hope the promotion will bring attention to KASR.

The station — 680 on the AM dial — can be picked up most places on campus, and it is played continuously in the rec center. Most residence halls can get reception of KASR.

The licensees can either agree that they violated the law and settle on a penalty or they can disagree and a hearing will take place, Ennis said. Either way, a complaint will be filed by the liquor control board and the names of the licensees will be announced.

The delivery businesses have two weeks to respond to the notification of wrongdoing, he added.

Rick Burns, manager of Sun Devil Liquors, said Monday that he could not comment on whether he had received any notification.

Susan Suggs, public relations spokesperson with Arizona Biltmore, said she has not received any notice that the method of delivery was improper.

In addition, Sadler said he had not heard of any action by the state liquor board.

"If there is any new interpretation (of alcohol in the skyboxes), we will be happy to sit down with them (the liquor control board)," he said.

The Arizona Board of Regents in June 1988 gave the University permission to serve alcohol in the skyboxes.

After that, Ennis, Bruce Meyerson, ASU legal counsel, and Sadler determined that the actions in the skybox were legal.

The skyboxes had been leased to businesses with the promise that alcohol would be permitted during Phoenix Cardinal games in Sun Devil Stadium, even though it is a University facility.

Syphilis

Since the symptoms are not usually painful and may take a month after sexual contact to detect, people often do not connect the sexual link to the symptoms.

"It can take 21 days to develop a symptom, and if you haven't had sex in 21 days, most likely you're not going to associate that symptom with sex," Martinet said.

Annette Quintana, a registered nurse at the health department, said syphilis cases are likely to increase at ASU since students are typically sexually active.

"If the Student Health Center knows what to look for, I'm sure they will find a lot more cases of the disease," Quintana said.

Dr. Pamela Tom, the health center's interim director, said the doctors in the center are aware of the disease.

"We're aware of the increase in the county overall, and if we start noticing an increase here, we will increase campus education of the disease," Tom said.

McDuffie said the health center's current focus is on other sexually transmitted diseases.

"Right now, we do have other STDs that are spreading rather quickly, such as the human papillomavirus," McDuffie said.

HPV can surface as genital warts and a variety of skin diseases.

The county health department has traced the history of syphilis patients and found that the disease is spreading through drug-related behavior.

"We find a lot of the cases are drug related," Quintana said. "People are giving sex for their drugs and dealers are taking sex for drugs."

The health department also is attributing multiple sex partners with the spread of the disease.

"Before, they used to call this a gay disease," Quintana said. "But it's mostly heterosexuals now. A lot of people who come in don't use drugs, but they are having multiple sex partners."

The health department recommends that anyone having sex with an unfamiliar partner or not practicing safe sex, should be tested for syphilis.

Health officials recommend condom use to avoid becoming infected with syphilis.

Health department officials could not speculate on the extent of the outbreak.

"We haven't reached our peak," Martinet said. "There are a lot of cases, and we're just scratching the surface."

Tempe Police Report

Tempe police reported the following incidents that occurred between 7 a.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday:

•Two officers, responding to complaints of a loud party in the 1200 block of East University Drive, were assaulted by two men. Police arrested one of them.

The other man shouted obscenities and pushed the officers but later escaped when his friend grabbed the officers from behind so he could get away, police said.

•A 40-year-old woman, responding to her daughter's screams, found her husband molesting the girl while she was in bed, police said. The man threatened the woman with a gun. The woman later ran to a neighbor's house to call police. The man, who the woman claims had been drinking heavily before the incident, was gone before police arrived.

•Two drunken drivers hit each other while one driver was traveling west on Southern Avenue near Diablo Stadium and the other driver was exiting the stadium. Both men were taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital, where one man is listed in critical condition and the other man is listed in stable condition.

•A 5-year-old boy was shot in the leg by his 13-year-old stepbrother while the boys were playing with a rifle in their house in the 1200 block of South Wilson Avenue.

Nicholas Williams was treated by the Tempe Fire Department and then transported to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital, where he was released Monday afternoon. The mother was at a friend's house when the incident occurred.

•A robber entered Rio Salado Bank, 2645 E. Southern Ave., and demanded money from an employee. The employee removed bills that activated a silent alarm, but the robber escaped before police arrived.

•A 20-year-old man was arrested after he pounded on a patrol car, swore at officers and spit on them. He was charged with aggravated assault and disorderly conduct.

ASU Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents that occurred between 7 a.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday:

•An ASU student is alleging that he was assaulted by a Tempe police officer during the Phoenix Cardinals/Washington Redskins game on Sunday, ASU police said.

Matthew Krumtum, a senior political science major, alleges that he was hit in the face by an officer when he refused to remove a large bed sheet, with "DeConcini Resign" written on it, hanging from a section of the bleachers, ASU spokesman Keith Jennings said. The banner was hindering the view of spectators sitting in the lower sections, Jennings added.

"The first contact I had with a police officer was the end of his fist," Krumtum said. "My rights were violated."

•During Sunday's Phoenix Cardinals/Washington Redskins game at Sun Devil Stadium, one man was warned of scalping tickets and four people were ejected for disorderly conduct. Also, one man was ejected from the game for throwing a drink on spectators, and 26 people were ejected for alcohol consumption.

Fight

also will submit a police report to Shell on another fight over the weekend that involved 75 members of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, 609 Alpha Drive and Phi Delta Theta fraternity, 701 Alpha Drive.

That fight occurred at 2:30 a.m. Saturday and left several students with minor injuries. No arrests were made and neither house wanted to file a police report.

Bess said a report on the SAE orange-throwing incident should be ready for examination today.

There were no injuries or arrests in the SAE incident, which police said involved 25 to 40 people. The incident occurred about 3:30 a.m. when officers responded to the SAE house, 706 Alpha Drive, after receiving an anonymous call about a disturbance in a parking lot near the fraternity.

The SAE fraternity is currently serving a two-year probation period for its role in a racial brawl on Alpha Drive in April that prompted Universitywide protests and led ASU officials to adopt a 13-point plan to combat racism on campus.

"What we will be looking for is if the fight occurred between individuals or within the fraternity," Shell said. "If the fight occurred between individuals, then it will possibly be referred to code of conduct violations."

Shell said his office would conduct an investigation of the incident after reviewing the police reports. He said he hoped a decision would be reached by the end of the week.

WE CAN HELP WOMEN SUFFERING WITH ANOREXIA OR BULIMIA

New Hope Begins at Remuda Ranch

A SAFE, SECURE, AND CARING ENVIRONMENT. Remuda Ranch is a residential treatment center for women only and is exclusively dedicated to the treatment of anorexia and bulimia. The ranch is significantly different from the institutional focus of traditional hospitals and clinics.

A CHRIST-CENTERED FOUNDATION. Remuda Ranch treatment programs provide a balance of physical, emotional, and spiritual emphasis designed to produce a continuing life-style change. Our Christ-centered approach, combined with family involvement, allows each guest to build the confidence to deal with the problems and stresses of everyday life without starving, binging, or purging.

A HIGHLY SKILLED PROFESSIONAL STAFF. Our medical, psychiatric, and clinical program staff prepares each Remuda Ranch guest to return to her family with the courage and determination to live a happy, healthy, and productive life.

A critical part of our continuing commitment to our guests once they have left Remuda Ranch is to maintain a referral program with affiliated professionals around the country who provide our guests and their families with on-going support and treatment.

A RELAXED WESTERN SETTING. Remuda Ranch provides a broad range of activities including a complete equestrian program as an integral part of our individualized therapy. Each guest actively participates in every phase of her own recovery. This active yet casual Western setting is located in the high Sonoran desert of Wickenburg, Arizona, 60 miles northwest of Phoenix.

TAKE THE FIRST STEP. We realize the first step is often the most difficult. It is also the most important! Please take time to call Remuda Ranch now, at 1 (800) 445-1900. Do it for yourself or for someone you know. We will answer any questions you have and we assure you that your call will be kept completely confidential.

Remember, new hope begins at Remuda Ranch.

NEW UNDERWOOD, S.D. (AP) — Rancher Gabriel Raba figures the present calendar switches around too much on the number of days in a month, so he's drawn up a new plan where there'd be 28 days each month — all 13 of them.

"I haven't had hardly anybody that didn't agree with me" said Raba, 78. "But I might not live long enough to see the change."

His calendar would be easy to understand and remember, Raba says. Thirteen 28-day months equals 364 days. Making up for the 365th day is simple. Just create a 48-hour New Year's Day.

Leap Year every four years also would have an extra 48-hour day, wiping out the current Feb. 29.

The Raba calendar would mean fixed-date holidays would always be on the same day of the week. Christmas always would be on Monday, and Friday would always be on the 13th. Every month would start on Monday, which is the first day of Raba's weeks.

Ice Devils to skate in Veterans Memorial Coliseum

By TOMI McELROY
State Press

Ice hockey fans will be given the opportunity to attend two games for the price of one Saturday at Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

In attempt to gain more recognition, the ASU Ice Devils (8-4) will play against Southern Colorado-Pueblo at 3 p.m. before the Phoenix Roadrunners game at 7:35 p.m.

The promotion was devised by ASU manager Mike Hoffarth and Roadrunners general manager Adam Keller. Hoffarth said the doubleheader was put together to "help get the word out about ASU hockey."

The Ice Devils play at 7 p.m. Friday at Tower Plaza and tickets cost $2.

Saturday's tickets, which are valued at $8, will be sold for $6 and are valid for both the ASU and Phoenix game.

Tickets may be purchased at Cady Mall on Thursdays and Fridays between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. or at Friday night's home game. No tickets will be sold at the Coliseum on the day of the game, but donations will be accepted.

Because of the Ice Devils' low attendance, Hoffarth said it is difficult to generate money into the hockey program.

Hoffarth said ASU is hoping to qualify for the National Championships. The Ice Devils need to win their next two series to strengthen their chances for an invitation.

To help reach ASU's goal, Hoffarth said he would like to see recognition and fan support improve within the program.

"If there was support," Hoffarth said, "I think it would help the team's mental attitude."

The Ice Devils began the season with a home sweep against the Bruins, 8-3 and 11-2, but the UofA Icecats ended the Ice Devils glory the following weekend, 8-4 and 10-4, at Tuscon Community Center.

ASU defeated the Stanford Cardinal at home, 6-1 and 10-2, and then the Ice Devils boosted their record to 6-2 after sweeping Southern Cal, 14-1 and 6-3, in Los Angeles.

ASU lost the Ohio University series, 5-1 and 8-3, but held the Bobcats below their offensive average of 10 goals per game.

Last Friday and Saturday, UCLA was unsuccessful on home territory as the Ice Devils again swept the Bruins, 15-2 and 7-3.

Approaching the midseason mark, Hoffarth said the ASU ice hockey team has received good outside support from local papers, which run game scores, promotions by the Roadrunners organization and local radio and television stations. He added that he would like to see more University support.

"Hockey is a fast and exciting sport — it's something different," Hoffarth said. "Basically, we have a new program and the team is winning, but we need support to keep going."

ASU exceeds expectations, wins Las Vegas Invitational

By JOEL HORN
State Press

The ASU wrestling team hit the jackpot Saturday, winning the Las Vegas Invitational with a score of 128.50 and finishing ahead of No. 1-ranked Oklahoma State in the process.

"This is a repeat of 1987," Sun Devil Head Coach Bobby Douglas said. "At this time, we find ourselves in the same position we were in prior to (winning) the NCAA championships. I have to take my hat off to this team. They're certainly better than I thought they were."

Douglas said the most exciting aspect of the ASU team is its spirit.

"From 118 to heavyweight, there has been improvement. To say I am pleased would be to understate a feeling. We scored more points than we've ever scored in the Las Vegas Invitational and to be ranked second and beat Oklahoma State is a great accomplishment for the Sun Devils."

Douglas noted that ASU wrestled four consecutive days, which is a situation very similar to what they will face in the national championship tournament.

"Our conditioning was superior," he said, "so we know we're on the right track. And with the attitude that this team has, we're definitely a contender for the national title."

"Our staff of coaches and volunteer assistant coaches have really added a great deal of energy, Sun Devil spirit and pride to our effort."

Three ASU wrestlers won individual titles in their weight classes — Zeke Jones (118 pounds), Townsend "Junior" Saunders (142) and Dan St. John (167).

Jones, ranked first by Amateur Wrestling News, won a 4-1 decision over fourth-ranked Donnie Heckel of Clemson.

"Zeke wrestled a flawless tournament," Douglas said. "He had four falls. He wasn't just wrestling to win. He was wrestling for the team to win, and that's the type of attitude it takes to win a national title."

Saunders, ranked No. 1, outwrestled No. 3 Pat Boyd of Notre Dame to win a 9-8 decision.

"Junior wrestled like a national champion," Douglas said. "He struggled with his weight, and it slowed him down. There could be a change in his weight class (Saunders moving up to 150, Thom Ortiz dropping to 142) that would give us a legitimate shot at two (individual) national titles."

St. John, ranked first in the nation after winning the 1989 NCAA championship at 158 pounds, defeated Nebraska's No. 6 Scott Chenoweth, 3-1, to win at 167. He has won 45 consecutive matches — a school record — and has 177 career victories for a third-place tie.

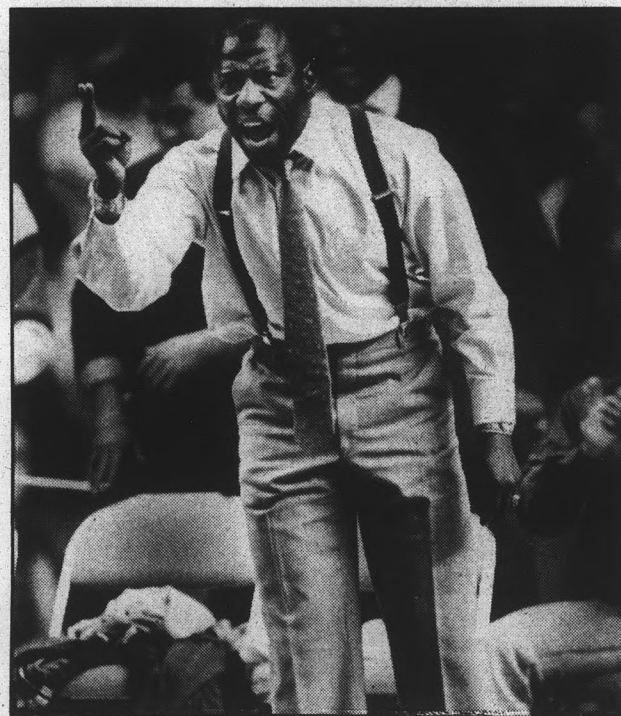

"He still looks like a national champion," Douglas said. "He had trouble in his last two matches but handled the weight class easily."

Redshirt freshman Shawn Charles, who upset fifth-ranked Gary McCall of Iowa State and fourth-ranked Chris Bollin of Oklahoma in consecutive 126-pound matches Wednesday and Thursday, lost to No. 1-ranked Kendall Cross of Oklahoma State in the semi-finals. However, Charles humbled Iowa State's No. 5 Gary McCall, whom he upset Wednesday in Tempe, in a consolation match.

"Shawn's an amazing freshman," Douglas said. "To finish third in that weight class and to beat McCall a second time proves that he's legitimate."

Andy McNaughton, who shocked top-ranked T.J. Sewell of Oklahoma Thursday at home, won a 6-4 victory over the Sooner star in Las Vegas.

"He won the semifinal with seven seconds left," Douglas said. "Andy is probably the most improved wrestler on the team at this point, and he'll get better with every match."

Ortiz, another Sun Devil All-America, upset top-ranked Brian Dolph of Indiana in a semi-final match but lost in the final to second-ranked Rich Bailey of Bakersfield.

"Thom beat the No. 1 seeded wrestler in the country," Douglas said. "Bailey has a similar style to Ortiz, which creates some problems for us. But he wrestled a great tournament. He leads by example and gave us 100 percent effort."

Redshirt freshman Ray Miller, fresh off a win over Brandon Dennington of Oklahoma, lost for the second time in a week to Portland State's Dan Russell at 158.

"He did a great job, even in losing," Douglas said. "He wrestled a tremendous tournament. There was a locked hands situation that was missed that cost him the match."

Douglas said he was disappointed in G.T. Taylor, who lost a 15-8 decision to Dominic Black of West Virginia in his second match of the season.

"He has some work to do," Douglas said. "He's getting off to a late start. I feel he has enough pride to overcome the problems he is having now and make a contribution to the team."

At 190, redshirt freshman Rex Holman lost a quarter-final match to second-ranked Joe Stafford of Oklahoma. But Douglas used nothing but superlatives in describing Holman.

"Another phenomenal freshman," Douglas said. "He's a workaholic. He'll break a lot of ASU records. When freshman wrestle like Holman, Charles and Miller, that's really an inspiration to our coaching staff."

Heavyweight Mike Anderson, whose hard has also impressed Douglas, dropped a 6-4 decision to Oregon's Cam Strahm.

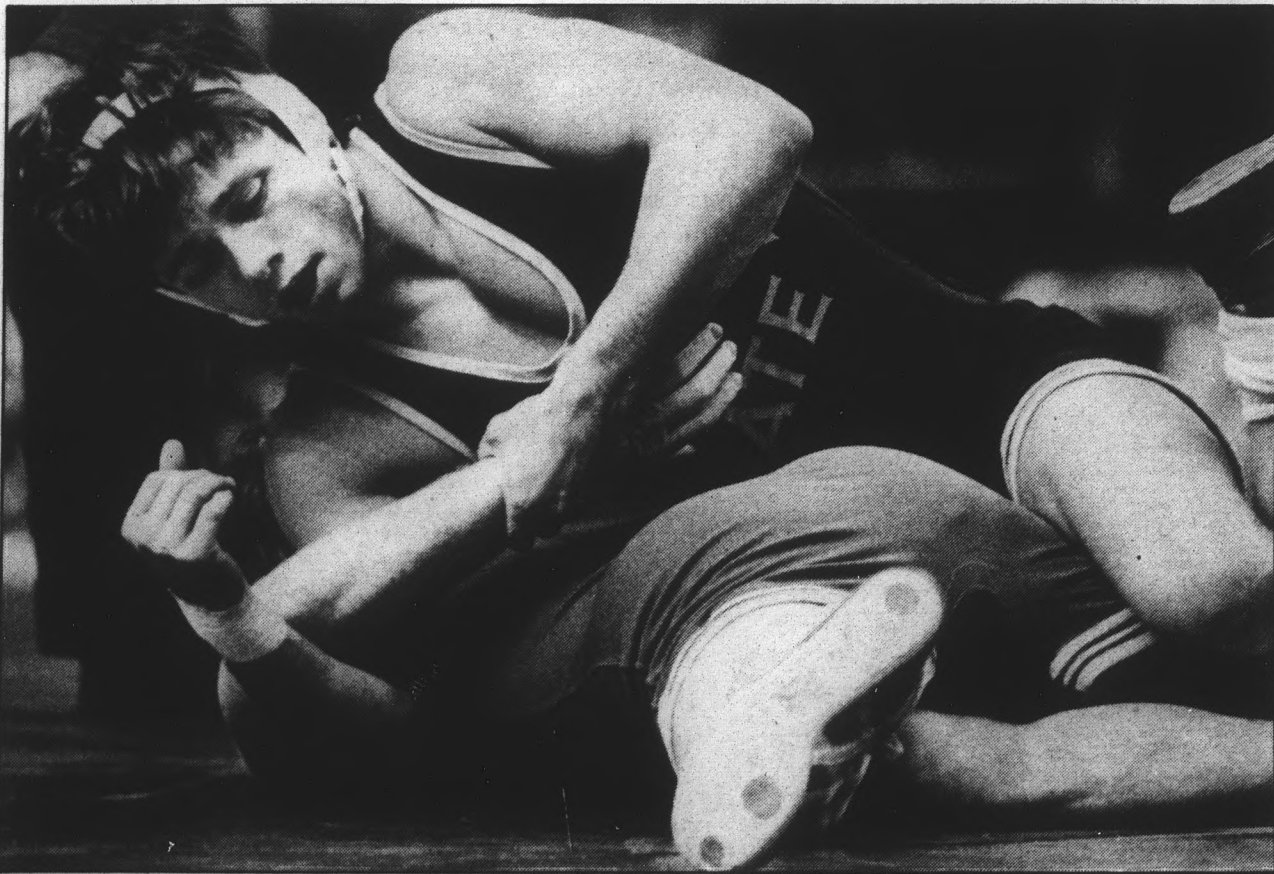

"Mike is making great progress," Douglas said. "He needs more time on the mat to develop strength. He should win the conference if he continues to improve."

The Sun Devils' next match is the Dec. 29-30 Midlands Tournament at Northwestern University in Chicago. Douglas said the break could not have come at a better time.

"We have to correct our mistakes," he said. "We've not kicked it in high gear yet. That won't come until January."

"This is a team to fear in the nationals. We've got the respect of everyone that was at the Las Vegas tournament, and we're looking forward to meeting (No. 4-ranked) Iowa at the Midlands."

"Personally, I can't wait to see these guys wrestle again. They're fun to watch."

Introducing seven members of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity with their 1979, '81, '82, '84, '85 and '88 Volkswagens. We caught up with these brothers—University of Maine chapter—and snapped this photo before the snow came.

"Up here, winter is not a season to be taken lightly," explained fraternity President Andrew "Cappy" Pelletier. "A lot of people drive Volkswagens.

They've got front wheel drive and they're dependable. Especially when it's cold."

Brother Wick Gartley agreed, "I don't know how you happened to pick our fraternity. Seems like everyone up here drives a Volkswagen."

"I love my Vee Dub," offered Ben Maxcy. "I've got 135,000 miles on it and it's still running great."

Andrew Michaud, the newest Delt, had his mind on more important matters. "How's my car look? Where's this ad gonna run? Will girls see it?"

At the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity in Orono, Maine—even the cook drives a Volkswagen.

It's time to think about Volkswagen again.

If you drive a Volkswagen, you might be selected to appear in an ad like the one above. Send your story and a photo to: Volkswagen Testimonials • 187 S. Woodward, Suite 200 • Birmingham, MI 48009
