Fire, power outage hit Manzanita Hall

By MIKE BURGESS and KEVIN SHEH
State Press

A fire Wednesday night and a power outage only hours earlier at Manzanita Hall forced student residents to evacuate the building in a driving rain storm.

There were no injuries in the fire, which occurred about 9:23 p.m. in a second-floor room, ASU Police Chief Bill Bess said.

Bess said the fire, which was under control by 9:34 p.m. but forced the evacuation of all residents until about 11 p.m., was caused by a lit candle on a dresser in a closet. The blaze, which was extinguished by ceiling sprinklers, sent smoke throughout the second floor, he said.

There was water damage to the building, but a dollar loss had not been established, officials said.

Earlier in the day, a power outage left students without lights and hot water, said Cliff Osborne, director of residence life.

He said the emergency backup system only powered the corridor and stairway lights and the fire alarm systems.

Hall residents immediately noticed the problem.

"The showers are cold, there's no electricity and we can't study," said Erin Weissman, a freshman resident.

New bill would require regents to face election

By NICOLE CARROLL
State Press

The state House Education Committee will hear a bill Wednesday that would require four of the nine appointed members of the Arizona Board of Regents to face election.

Rep. Bev Hermon, R-Tempe, said she introduced the bill in an effort to make the board more responsive to its constituents.

"I thought that it would be appropriate to elect some of the regents," Hermon said. "I chose not to make it a majority."

Hermon's plan stipulates that one regent would be elected from each of the three counties that houses a state university. The fourth member would be elected at-large.

Currently, board members are appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Legislature.

Hermon said the first election would be held in 1992, when the terms of Herman Chanan and Regent President Edith Auslander expire.

The Arizona constitution must also be modified for this change to occur, Hermon said.

She said the document now requires that board members be appointed. The voters would have to approve an amendment allowing the regents to be elected.

Hermon hopes to have this option on the November general election ballot.

But Auslander is opposed to the proposal. "I believe this board has been a group of people who are dedicated to the universities without concern for having to seek election," Auslander said. "I think it could change everything; it would be detrimental."

Two other legislators are also sponsoring bills that could greatly affect the board.

Rep. Eleanor Schorr, D-Tucson, is pushing a bill — also being considered by the Education Committee Wednesday — which would change the regents' terms from eight to six years.

And Rep. John Kromko, D-Tucson, will introduce two bills within the week. One would require all regents be elected from their congressional districts. The other would make appointed members comply with the state financial disclosure act.

The law requires all elected state officials to make public their personal income, business interests and property holdings.

Kromko said the regents should be bound by the same requirements.

"The purpose of this is so there is no conflict of interest," Kromko said. "The regents give out a lot more contracts than the Legislature. If someone can't divulge that, we don't need them on the board."

Kromko said he has introduced these bills "for the past few years", but that recent events have peaked the lawmakers' interest in the regents' affairs.

He cited the example of the U.S. Memories project.

Professor leads drive to have ROTC removed from ASU

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

An ASU education professor, backed by 11 other professors and a dozen students, is asking the University to eliminate the ROTC program on campus because "its business is killing."

"The day of militarism and killing is over," Roger Axford said.

He said he will ask the Faculty Senate during a meeting Monday to create a resolution that will stop the military training program in 1991.

If the Faculty Senate decides the proposal needs to be clarified or needs more research, a committee will be created, Senate President-elect Arlene Metha said.

The second option would be for the Faculty Senate to vote on the measure in February without further study, she said.

Metha said that if the proposal passes, it will then go to University President Lattie Coor.

Axford's proposal has miffed campus ROTC administrators and students enrolled in the program.

Many of the 160 student cadets at ASU are on government scholarships and would not be able to attend college without the financial assistance, said Col. Frank Gavin, professor of military science.

He disagreed with Axford's description of ROTC training.

"We don't train people to be killers here at the ASU campus," Gavin said. "We teach basic soldier's skills and the art of leadership."

The ROTC program teaches intelligence, logical thought and creativity, Gavin added.

"Because we wear uniforms to work does not mean that we are not creative thinkers," he said.

As a student ROTC cadet, Kristen Springer, 21, said she would not be able to attend ASU if it were not for the government picking up her $2,700 out-of-state tuition tab each semester.

"It (the resolution) is ridiculous," she said. "I'm all for world peace. All I want to do after I graduate is serve my time and (that) it all be peaceful. They (those against the program) are not educated about ROTC."

Springer, a biology major, said the government pays her

UofA president plans to retire amid controversy

TUCSON (AP) — University of Arizona President Henry Koffler, under fire by some faculty members and minority groups, has told faculty and administrators he intends to retire and return to teaching.

"I'm not going to be president after 1992," he said flatly.

Koffler's contract is subject to annual renewal by the Board of Regents. It expires in July.

Koffler, who turns 70 in 1992, told faculty members he felt that was a good age to retire, adding that he hoped to have fulfilled his agenda by that time.

If the regents approve Koffler's contract this year, the nationwide search for his replacement is expected to begin in July 1991, providing a smooth transition of leadership.

"Typically, a university president gives the board a year's notice of resignation," said Molly Corbett Broad, the regents' executive director and chief executive officer. "That year gives us the opportunity to prepare a search, conduct a search, make a deal and get the new president on board."

The Tucson chapter of the American Association of University Professors earlier this month called for Koffler's termination now, saying he has lost touch with faculty members.

In December, the chapter polled faculty members, and almost 70 percent of those responding said Koffler should not remain as president. Koffler supporters noted that only about 10 percent of the faculty answered the survey.

In September, several prominent Hispanics in the community criticized the university for slow progress in attracting Hispanic students and administrators. Koffler received much of the heat.

A month later, a coalition of Hispanics demanded "action now" to increase minority students and faculty members. Koffler responded by saying that he understood the frustrations of the Hispanic community but, that the job was not easy.

Azerbaijanis mourn one of the victims of ethnic violence during a funeral in the town of Gyandzha Wednesday.

Kremlin orders soldiers to shoot to halt civil war

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin Wednesday told the thousands of soldiers it sent to the Caucasus to shoot if need be to halt bands of Azerbaijanis and Armenians fighting each other in hills around the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Thousands of Armenian refugees poured from the southern republic of Azerbaijan, many beaten or chased from their homes by angry mobs. Some blamed the attacks on Azerbaijanis who earlier fled ethnic violence in Armenia.

The death toll rose to 58, mostly Armenians, and the number of injured to 169 in five days of civil warfare, an Interior Ministry official said.

The evening TV news show "Vremya" ran a statement from the KGB and the interior and defense ministries, which control troops in the area, that said:

"Risking their lives, they have so far refrained from using arms against criminals to prevent bloodshed.

"However, a sharp increase in outrageous attacks has made the situation unbearable," and the soldiers now were permitted to use their weapons in accordance with military rules and Soviet law.

Four burned bodies were found in Baku, the capital of Azerbaijan, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Wednesday. Eighteen Armenian residents were injured in Azerbaijan the past 24 hours.

The violence erupted Saturday with anti-Armenian riots in Baku. Fighting rapidly spread to Nagorno-Karabakh and nearby areas of Azerbaijan, with the belligerents using helicopters, armored vehicles, machine guns and other arms seized from government arsenals or offered by compatriots.

It was the worst fighting between mainly Moslem Azerbaijanis and mostly Christian Armenians since their decades-old feud over Nagorno-Karabakh erupted in violence two years ago. The enclave, populated mainly by Armenians, has been ruled by Azerbaijan since 1923 and the current troubles were sparked by its demand in February 1988 to be annexed by Armenia. It has about 160,000 people.

Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, said Wednesday that Islamic fervor was behind events in Soviet Azerbaijan, and warned Moscow not to deal harshly with the Shiite Moslem upsurge, Tehran radio reported.

'They are killing us.'

— Alisa Arakelova

The broadcast, monitored in Cyprus, quoted Khamenei as saying "anyone who thinks or pretends that the motives behind these movements are ethnic or nationalistic is making a big mistake. These sentiments are Islamic, and Soviet leaders should face this fact with realism."

The Kremlin has empowered local officials to ban demonstrations and strikes, impose curfews, censor the media, confiscate weapons, disband unofficial organizations and detain people for up to 30 days. Interior Ministry officials said they could not recall such measures being imposed since World War II.

Foreign reporters have been barred from the region.

President Mikhail Gorbachev sent 11,000 army and internal security troops to the southern region Tuesday, but they have been slowed by Azerbaijanis who erected barricades on roads and at a military airfield.

The reinforcements "haven't helped yet because they haven't started to act," said Dmitri Seleznyov, spokesman for

Houston hijacking attempt ends in emergency landing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A man claiming he had a bomb took over an America West airliner late Tuesday and demanded to be flown to Cuba, but was arrested soon after the plane made an emergency landing in Austin, police said.

No one was seriously injured during Flight 727 from Houston to Las Vegas nor during the arrest at Robert Mueller Municipal Airport, officials said.

SWAT team members overpowered the man aboard the plane, officials said.

FBI agent Byron Sage identified the man as Jose Manuel Gonzales-Gonzales, 39, and said he was believed to be from New Orleans. Gonzales-Gonzales was believed to be of Cuban descent.

The flight was diverted to Austin after trouble was reported aboard, America West spokeswoman Kathy Christensen said in Phoenix, where the airline is based.

"The man said he had a bomb and had some electronic device that blinked when he pointed to the front of the aircraft," said passenger Herb Atwood of Cold Spring, Texas.

"He grabbed one of the stewardesses and had something around her neck," Atwood said in an interview with radio station KVET. "He was shouting orders. He said he wanted them to fly to Cuba, but the pilot said that we did not have enough fuel."

The man ordered all the passengers to move to the front of the aircraft, Atwood said.

Austin police received a report of a bomb threat at 11:28 p.m., said police spokesman Harold Elmore.

After the plane landed, nearly 40 police officers, including hostage negotiators, surrounded the aircraft. Passengers evacuated the plane using emergency chutes, and Gonzales-Gonzales was arrested.

Police began searching the airplane for a

Videotape evidence in slaying

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A 57-second videotape showing the slaying of a young man tied to a tree is a key piece of evidence in what authorities allege to be an intricate but unsuccessful murder-for-hire scheme involving two killings and counterfeiting.

Konstantinos Fotopoulos, 30, is charged with hiring hit men to kill his wife, Lisa, 29, the daughter of a wealthy Greek immigrant. Court records show six mostly bungled attempts to kill her over five days; she suffered a gunshot wound to the head in the final attempt on Nov. 4 but says she has recovered.

One of the people alleged to be a hit man, Bryan Chase, is dead, shot by Fotopoulos, who told police the young man was burglarizing his home and had shot his wife.

Two others are in jail.

Fotopoulos was charged with the murder of Chase, of plotting his wife's killing and in the killing of 19-year-old Mark Kevin Ramsey.

Also charged is Deidre Michelle Hunt, who told authorities that she killed Ramsey while Fotopoulos videotaped the slaying.

All those involved in the case are barred from discussing it because of a gag order imposed by a judge who became incensed when he learned of re-enactment of parts of the case on the syndicated television shows, "A Current Affair" and "Inside Edition."

But search warrants, police affidavits and arrest reports unsealed Tuesday help complete a portrait of Fotopoulos.

The documents also detail a

No need to sow oats?

BOSTON (AP) — Contrary to cereal ads and popular belief, oat bran does not lower cholesterol levels, according to a study that challenges one of the biggest food crazes of the 1980s.

The new research concluded that people who eat lots of oat bran do indeed have less cholesterol in their blood, not because of any special powers of oat bran but because they eat less saturated fat and cholesterol.

"There really isn't any cholesterol-lowering property in oat bran," said Dr. Frank M. Sacks, a co-author of the study. "Oat bran pretty much does the same as other cereal products."

Oat bran has been promoted as a health food largely because it is rich in soluble fiber. Several studies have suggested that this kind of fiber somehow removes cholesterol from the body.

"Murder Month" in D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush called January "the month of murder" in the nation's capital Wednesday as the city recorded its 28th killing of the month and 17th since Friday. Mayor Marion Barry promised action but added, "I don't know what."

Meanwhile, a Washington high school mourned the slaying of a football and basketball star who police said "was just in the wrong place at the wrong time."

The new wave of killings has put the city ahead of the pace that led to a record 438 murders in 1989, a total that had broken the record 369 set the previous year.

"We have seen great progress where it counts, in the streets, where record amounts of cocaine have been seized... yet we have yet to turn the corner," Bush said before a luncheon with the heads of federal law enforcement agencies.

"In this very city, January has been the month of murder, the deadliest month in the history of the District of Columbia," the president said.

Last January, 52 persons were killed in the nation's capital, including 18 in the first two and one-half weeks.

Police blame more than 60 percent of the killings on drug-related violence.

Market plan falters

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — A desperate plan to jolt Poland into a free market economy is faltering and will fail without a quick dose of foreign capital, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said.

At the same time, he added, Poland must create a climate in which outside resources could be put to use.

Walesa, one of several Polish leaders interviewed this week on the plan's first results, warned:

"We are like a car with four wheels running in different directions, moving fast but slipping backward. Nothing can be done from inside the car."

Asked if foreign assistance already committed might alleviate the crisis, Walesa answered with a resounding "No."

He added, "It is too slow and too little. This is why I see this as blacker and blacker. We cannot reform our old system within our own means. This is impossible without outside help."

Tuition battle

Out-of-state students may face unfair fee hike

Carolyn Höfig
Managing Editor

The hearing on the Board of Regents' latest plan to raise tuition won't take place for a week, but already one idea that might take the sting out of a hefty proposed increase for non-resident students has virtually been dismissed out of hand.

Regent Donald Pitt has suggested the board should "grandfather" any major fees hike for out-of-state students. Incoming out-of-staters would pay the full amount of whatever tuition increase the regents vote in. But non-residents who qualified under the grandfather clause would see their 1990-91 tuition increased only by the rate called for by current board policy.

Associated Students of ASU President Paul Larson agrees with that approach to a potential tuition hike.

"You have to protect the people who are currently in the system," Larson said. "Philosophically, it's the most appropriate solution."

But other officials involved with this year's tuition-setting lottery disagree.

And if the dissent on grandfathering wins out, out-of-state students will become as scarce as center-campus parking spaces.

This year's tuition-setting meetings promise to be just as tortuous and convoluted as most. On the out-of-state front, regents will consider their off-fudged five-year plan, which would call for non-resident students at ASU and UofA to pay 83.5 percent of the average cost of education for 1990-91 — or a tuition total of $6,016. This sum already represents a $532 increase from the present tuition cost.

But the board is also flirting with the possibility of throwing policy to the wind and requiring out-of-staters to pay up to 100 percent of the cost of education next year. There's no sense in the state subsidizing schooling for non-resident university students, the thinking runs. So out-of-state students could face a bill of $7,204 for the next academic year.

That's a difference of $1,720 — to be swallowed in one foul-tasting lump.

It's an unexpectedly high increase, as well, which has left some officials looking for ways to deflect some of the impact on students from outside Arizona who find themselves mid-stream in their studies.

So Larson and Pitt each suggested a grandfather clause.

Odus Elliot, regents associate director of academic affairs, was less enthused.

"We're looking at the administrative complications that it may create," he told the State Press.

Administrative complications?

Paul Barberini, director of student financial assistance, suggested that establishing a new classification in the ASU data base would be costly and time consuming, and that tracking students who qualified under the grandfather clause would be difficult.

Funny, but the University's immunization policy didn't seem to cause that kind of trouble. It reads: "All students born after Dec. 31, 1956, must provide documentation of either immunization or immunity to measles prior to registration." Now, let's change the wording some for theory's sake. How about something like: "All out-of-state students enrolled after Aug. 15, 1990, will pay 100 percent of their cost of education."

'Regent Donald Pitt has suggested the board should "grandfather" any major fees hike for out-of-state students.'

The inevitable grey areas of readmission or leaves of absence would have to be codified, but the qualitative difference is slim.

Barberini also summons the issue of equity. Two out-of-state students could sit in the same class doing the same work but would pay different fees for the opportunity. That's not fair, Barberini argues.

But yet a resident student and a non-resident student can be in the same course, and neither thinks of the vast discrepancy between their respective tuition bills. Nor does an in-state student begrudge a member of the faculty his fee waiver.

And like Regent Pitt said, "The administrative work is worthwhile to protect somebody who is already in place."

Barberini also asserts his commitment to out-of-state students who are currently at ASU. "We want to make sure no one is denied an education," he said.

But he favors the notion of a financial aid pool for non-residents who need it. After all, why give a blanket break to students when a certain proportion of them will be willing and able to pay the higher rate?

Presently, only about one fourth of all undergraduate out-of-state students at ASU receive financial aid; the rest are financially self-sufficient, in the official view. But would they all still be that way after a $1,720 tuition increase next year? Certainly not. So those who cannot make the tuition leap will be forced to join that one fourth of out-of-staters in financial aid lines.

And would these current out-of-state students receive some kind of aid preference over their newly incoming counterparts? If the program were to have effect where it was most needed, it would have to single out non-residents who were enrolled before the tuition increase to help them finish their degrees.

They'd have to be identified. And tracked. That sounds rather like a grandfather clause . . .

If non-resident students will be expected to face such a sizeable tuition increase, grandfathering sounds like the only plausible option for those already in the system.

A good idea is a terrible thing to waste.

More parking problems

Editor:

I think most people would agree that parking is a problem on ASU's campus. Why, then, would ASU block five parking spaces in Lot 16 with a "mobile mini" storage shed and a tar machine?

Lot 16 is a miniscule lot located between Best, Irish, and Hayden residence halls. Everyday, residents drive through this lot praying they will find a space so they don't have to park in Lot 17, inconveniently located on the southeast corner of College Avenue and Apache Boulevard. During orientation week and the first week of classes, residents are trying to unload their cars and move into their rooms. This is not always an easy task if you have to park far away from the door.

For the past two weeks, workers have been retarring the roof on Hayden Hall. ASU has graced Lot 16 with a tar machine and a massive four-parking-space-long storage shed. Of course, there is enough lawn adjacent to the parking lot to fit the charming tar machine and storage shed. ASU obviously figured residents would never miss five parking space they paid $45 to use, especially during the weeks the lot is needed the most.

In the future, let's hope ASU considers the inherent problems that obstacles like this storage shed cause to those who use the few parking areas on campus.

No shortage of ignorant people for Noriega jury

Jeff Greenfield
Universal Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — Can Manuel Noriega get a fair trial in the United States? Is it possible to find 12 jurors who have not been swayed by the TV pictures of the former general in chains and handcuffs, or by presidential denunciations of Noriega as a "thug . . . poisoning the children of America . . . ?"

Put another way, can a judge really find 12 American citizens so removed from the flow of news and information that they can deal with Noriega with a clean slate?

Never fear. It's a done deal. The search for a dozen blissfully ignorant American citizens is no hunt for a needle in a haystack; it's more like looking for a needle at a sewing bee.

To start with, the Noriega judge should canvas the college classrooms in his district. If those students reflect the thinking of most college students, the judge will find a majority who can not date the Civil War to the nearest half-century, who believe that the Holocaust is a Jewish holiday, and that Chernobyl is Cher's full name.

If he moves off-campus to the broader population, he'll find significant minorities or thumping majorities who cannot name a single justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, nor their congressman, nor the hemisphere in which El Salvador is located.

He'll also find a majority that believes that UFO's are real, but that NASA faked the moon landings from a television studio.

If this isn't promising material for an utterly unprejudiced jury, I don't know what is.

Don't misunderstand me; I am a thoroughgoing Jeffersonian with implicit faith in the fundamentally sound judgment of the American people. But that's because I believe a citizen can have a lot of common sense without knowing a lot about the outside world.

And, bless 'em, an awful lot of Americans seem to cherish first among all their freedoms, the freedom not to be informed about current events, or about the way the world works, or about pretty much of anything.

Indeed, if the Noriega judge finds this hard to believe, all he has to do is look through my mail or the mail of anyone in the news business.

Along with a lot of uninformed, thoughtful, concerned inquiries and criticisms, he will find demands that the crown jewels of Great Britain be returned to their rightful owner (who lives in Kew Gardens), demands that the FBI investigate the aliens who are turning the writer's laundry gray, and requests for the current mailing addresses of James Dean, Elvis Presley and President John F. Kennedy.

And if these examples don't convince you, consider a young man who was interviewed a few years back by a colleague of mine from ABC news.

The young man was among a group of honors students being asked to talk about Important Concerns of Our Time.

Youth's Role in a Changing World, that sort of thing. At the end of the interview, the young man took my colleague aside and said, with some urgency: "Listen, I have to ask you something, you work for ABC, right?"

"Yes," answered my colleague.

"You guys run 'The Love Boat' and right after that you run 'Fantasy Island,' right?"

This was all true my colleague responded.

"OK," said the young honor student. "So what I want to know is: How do they get the cameras off the Love Boat and onto Fantasy Island in just two minutes?"

With citizens like these in our midst, gathering an unbiased, unprejudiced jury for Manuel Noriega will be no trick at all.

Mencken: Irreverent, prejudiced or open minded?

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — This week's scandal concerns H. L. Mencken, whose newly published diaries are said to expose him as a bigot. He uses phrases like "dreadful kikes" and calls it "impossible to talk anything resembling discretion or judgement to a colored woman. They are all essentially childlike," etc.

The news has been too much for such folk as Jonathan Alter, Newsweek's resident attitude monitor, who writes of "Mencken's dark side" and his "total lack of concern for fascism's victims, even after Pearl Harbor." Sounds Bad.

'Mencken was a liberal in an old and honorable sense. He didn't feel obliged to pretend he liked everyone.'

So what else is new? I've never cared much for Mencken, myself. His wit always strikes me as strained, his ideas as callow. Anyone who knows his work, though, has no right to be shocked by the diaries. His notebooks, which he published under the title "Minority Report," have plenty of scathing remarks about "pushful" Jews and Negroes.

Throughout his career Mencken also ridiculed Christianity, from its central teachings to its modern adherents. Liberals like Mr. Alter don't, however, regard this as his "dark side." They see it as his bright side.

Let me explain the ground rules for you youngsters out there. Bashing Christians and their cherished beliefs is quite permissible under liberal etiquette. It's called "irreverent" — meaning good clean fun. But bashing Jews and blacks is strictly taboo. It's called "insensitive." Meaning don't ever do it, ever.

It would be nice to have the same rules of consideration for everybody. And in his perverse way, Mencken did; give him that much. He was an omnidirectional curmudgeon, sparing nobody.

But the old iconoclast is now shown to have chipped a few liberal icons, and that's going too far. He must be posthumously punished. We must teach our young people the limits of free speech. Otherwise they may grow up to be like Mencken, and we wouldn't want that, would we?

Now nobody suggests that Mencken actually favored the persecution of Christians, Jews, blacks or anyone else. On the contrary. He believed that they all had their rights and that he had the right to whale away at them verbally. He hated civility.

In person, he could be genial and generous to individual members of the groups he criticized. His criticisms weren't prejudices, they were tentative conclusions that didn't get in the way of his judgment.

There is nothing "dark" in Mencken's diaries, on the evidence quoted so far. There is much that is rude and rambunctious, reminding us of an era when there was actually much more robust freedom of expression and opinion than we have now.

Mencken was a liberal in an old and honorable sense. He didn't feel obliged to pretend he liked everyone. He felt obliged to respect the rights of people he didn't like. For him, being liberal didn't mean being "nice." It meant being just. It meant telling the truth without undue mercy.

In my opinion, our world suffers from a shortage of prickly personalities, people who are willing to risk the disapproval of all the birds with hyperactive indignation glands who are currently reviewing Mencken's secret and spontaneous thoughts as if his diary were a manifesto, soliciting agreement. We are doing a first-rate job of suppressing verbal energy and discouraging any opinion that might be deemed "offensive."

Mencken was at least interesting. If you go through his notebooks picking out offenses like raisins, you will miss a lot of real thinking. He was willing to risk being mistaken, because he was willing to be himself and no one else. He called his own newspaper column "Prejudices" — a good indication that he both didn't take himself too seriously and had a genuinely open mind.

If you can stand the tedious cleverness, there is a lot to like in Mencken. And apart from his literary and intellectual merits, it's a wistful pleasure to read a man endowed with the self-assurance that comes of taking freedom as a birthright. He never gives you the sense of a man walking on eggs, as we all are trained to do nowadays.

But I don't really want to defend him. I just felt a certain impulse to chase the vultures away from his remains.

Investigation results of racial incident to be released

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

The results of an independent University panel's investigation of the ASU Police Department's handling of a racial brawl last April will be released on Monday, the panel's chairman said Wednesday.

Gerald Richard said the panel's investigation, which has been plagued by delays, will provide ASU President Lattie Coor with several recommendations, although he would not say what they are.

"You'll have to wait and see," said Richard, who is a legal adviser for the Phoenix Police Department. "We put a lot of work into this and I think the recommendations we make will reflect that."

The panel, which was appointed by former ASU President J. Russell Nelson last June as part of a 13-point plan to combat racism at ASU, had been expected to release its findings during winter break but later opted to wait until students returned for the spring semester.

"We wanted to make sure students were back so they can respond right away," Richard said.

The panel was formed to examine police conduct during a racial attack April 15 on Alpha Drive in which a mob of white fraternity members assaulted two blacks students and yelled racial slurs at them after they mistook the students for suspects in an earlier assault.

When ASU police arrived, officers only arrested the two black students. The students, who were handcuffed and put in police cars in "protective custody," said officers bullied them and humiliated them in front of the crowd of whites.

The five-member panel had originally been expected to complete its work in October but was hampered by a string of delays that began in August with the resignation of a panel member, who cited possible conflict of interest.

The probe was delayed further when the officers who handled the Alpha Drive incident refused to speak to the panel until a Justice Department investigation of the incident was completed. The officers said their attorneys warned them that they might incriminate themselves by speaking.

The Justice Department closed its case in October when it decided not to prosecute, but the case was later reopened after it was learned that the FBI never interviewed the two black students. The renewed Justice Department investigation still is pending.

Manzanita

At 3:30 Wednesday afternoon — almost 14 hours after the outage — the Physical Plant provided a portable generator to supply enough power for the hot water pumps, the heating and cooling system for the first floor and food services, two of the four elevators and all security.

"The Physical Plant has done a tremendous job of getting portable power to Manzanita Hall," Osborne said. "They are to be commended."

But the emergency power system and the portable generator combined still do not provide enough electricity for individual room lighting or electrical systems or the dorm cafeteria.

Osborne said accommodations have been made to assist residents.

"Palo Verde East, Palo Verde West, and Main will provide food service to Manzanita residents until power is returned to Manzanita Hall," said Osborne, adding that the three dorms also will offer their cafeterias to Manzanita residents for studying.

Osborne said the entire resident assistants staff of 32 is watching out for medical emergencies within the resident population.

Some residents were unaware of the dorm's efforts in assisting students. Mindy Weinstock, a freshman liberal arts major, said the RA staff was less than helpful when residents attempted to acquire information.

"They (the staff) said not to call," said Weinstock, who decided to spend the night at a motel. "They don't know what's going on."

RA Lisa Stegman disagreed.

"If (residents) ask, we'll tell them what they want to know," she said. "Many RAs are just coming in."

Since lighting is reduced and only two elevators are operating, Osborne suggested a way residents can help.

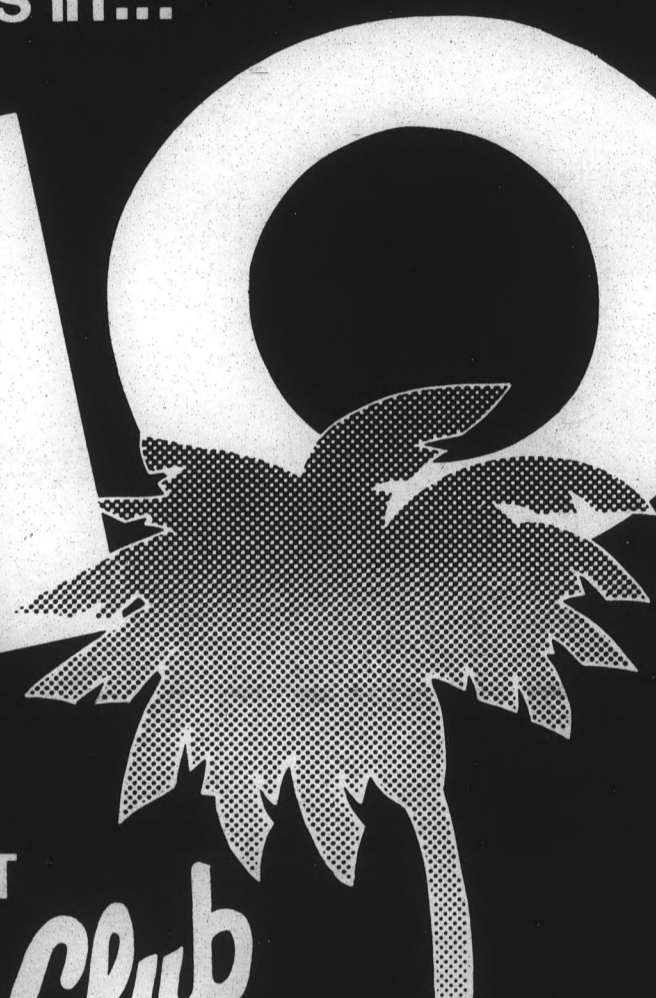

"Until power is returned, we ask residents to reduce the number of visitors they entertain," he said.

A replacement transformer is en route from California and is expected Friday.

"We will hopefully have power some time Friday or Saturday morning," said Osborne.

The regents were discussing selling UofA land to project developers for the now-defunct microchip manufacturing consortium. But when the issue came up for a vote, three of the regents had to abstain due to their involvements with some aspect of the project.

"That's probably going to sway the Legislature," Kromko said.

Auslander said all public officials encounter conflicts of interest and that there are laws to deal with the situations.

"It's always going to happen," Auslander said. "I doubt any elected official is free from contact with issues. Everyone has a job, everyone has affiliations."

She said money matters and conflict situations are different subjects.

"That (conflict) has nothing to do with financial disclosure whatsoever," Auslander said. "Conflict is a different issue."

bomb. "We doubt there was a bomb aboard the plane," Elmore said.

Gonzales-Gonzales was taken to a hospital early Wednesday for treatment of cuts to his head suffered when he was arrested, said city emergency services shift commander Bob Gutierrez.

The stewardess who was grabbed was also taken to a hospital for minor cuts and burns when coffee spilled on her, Gutierrez said.

Several passengers were treated at the airport for minor injuries suffered when they evacuated the aircraft.

Elmore said passengers were taken to an airport terminal for questioning. It was not immediately known how many people had been aboard the plane.

Sage said authorities intended to charge the man with air piracy and kidnapping.

"You always hear about this," passenger Atwood said, "and I never thought it would happen to me. I was scared like everyone else. I was looking forward to a trip to Vegas. But my gambling ended before it started."

counterfeiting scheme in which prosecutors suspect Fotopoulos bought $100,000 worth of counterfeit $100 bills in Italy. Two people have implicated Fotopoulos as their source of the bogus bills.

In one of the court documents, Daytona Beach Police Lt. Charles Evens describes the videotape of Ramsey's killing.

"The camera then pans to the face of Kevin Ramsey and then back to Deidre. She says, 'Ready?' The male voice says, 'OK.' With that, Deidre draws the gun from her right side, aims at the chest of Kevin Ramsey and fires three times into the chest. Kevin grunts with pain and says, 'God.' He then says, 'Ahhhh' and lifts his left leg in pain. With that, Deidre walks to him, grabs his hair, raises his head up and puts the gun to his left temple area and fires once more. Kevin falls forward and is silent. His hands can be seen tied behind him with rope. Video ends."

Fotopoulos then shot Ramsey in the head with a rifle, Evens said. X-rays showing bullets in Ramsey's body are in court documents.

Ramsey was an employee of Fotopoulos, but the unsealed court documents give no possible motive for his killing.

An indictment alleges that Fotopoulos hired Chase, 18, to break into Fotopoulos' house and kill his wife. Thinking his wife had been shot to death, Fotopoulos allegedly killed Chase to silence him.

Police initially thought Fotopoulos was a husband protecting his home and wife.

But then detectives noticed that Chase had entered the house through one of the few windows not hooked to an alarm system, had walked past bedrooms occupied by Mrs. Fotopoulos' mother and brother, ignored expensive stereo equipment and other property, and had gone straight to the couple's bedroom where he shot Mrs. Fotopoulos.

The indictment says Ms. Hunt, 20, worked for Fotopoulos at Top Shots, a billiard hall he owned on Daytona Beach's boardwalk, arranged for the hiring of Chase for $5,000 and served as the contact between Fotopoulos and the hit men.

She and Fotopoulos are charged with first-degree murder in the deaths of Ramsey and Chase; conspiracy to commit murder in planning the death of Mrs. Fotopoulos, Ramsey, and Chase; attempted first-degree murder, and solicitation to commit murder.

Also arrested were Teja Mzimmia James, 22, and Yvonne Lori Henderson. They are charged with conspiracy to commit first-degree murder in the shooting of Ms. Fotopoulos; attempted first-degree murder; and solicitation to commit murder.

All four are being held without bail in the Volusia County Jail.

ASU students reluctant to discuss, use condoms

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

ASU students' attitudes about condom use are typical among college students, who say they often feel embarrassed discussing condoms and therefore do not use them, health officials agreed.

"I'd feel embarrassed — definitely so. How would you ask someone to use a condom?" said Michelle, a junior undeclared major, who asked that her name not be used.

"I'd feel uncomfortable, maybe pushy; it's hard to say," said "G.M.," another female.

Maricopa County health counselor Linda Helmstadter said she frequently hears these statements from some of the female clients she sees.

"They (women) feel uncomfortable asking men to wear condoms. A lot of (men) just say 'no' right off the bat, that they won't wear them," Helmstadter said. "And they are putting themselves at risk."

Steve, a senior physical education major, said he would wear a condom if he were asked to.

"In today's society, it is definitely better to be safe," he said. "Especially with sexually transmitted diseases."

Fred, a freshman architecture major, offered a similar response. "I think it would be a very wise thing to ask, and it wouldn't offend me at all," he said.

Bob England, a medical epidemiologist from the state Health Department, said those kind of responses from males are reflective of attitudes today. He added that although students often don't object to the use of condoms, someone needs to take the initiative in talking about them.

"Most guys say they are willing to use them, yet neither person is the first person to say it," England said. "It's one of those things that will require seeing the word 'condom' all over the place for people to feel comfortable about it."

Health officials agree that college students realize that condoms can help reduce the chance of contracting AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, but they said students are slow to change their sexual habits.

According to one survey of college women, as reported in Fitness & Beauty magazine, of the 50 percent of college-age women who feel their sexual behavior has been affected by the threat of AIDS, only 3 percent have begun to use condoms.

"When the response is 'yes', that they have changed their sexual behavior in regard to AIDS, it sometimes means, 'I don't sleep with him on the first date anymore,'" England said.

England added that people should view condom use as mandatory, and society's attitudes about not using them should be more severe.

"The place we have to get to in society is that when a person refuses a partner's request (to wear a condom), or they try and discourage a partner from using one, it will be

Turn to Condom, page 13.

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents on Wednesday:

- A thief stole a patio table and three chairs, valued at $200, from the front lawn of the Community Services Building sometime between last Friday and Tuesday morning.
- A thief stole an $80 bicycle from the south side of the MU on Tuesday.
- A thief stole a color television set, a VCR and a television cart from the living room of the Solar House. Loss is $320.

There were no signs of forced entry and the rear door to the building was found unlocked.

•An ASU student was assaulted by an unidentified man early last Friday in Lot 13. The victim was punched but did not require medical treatment.

The suspect in the case is the boyfriend of the victim's ex-girlfriend.

•A thief stole a woman's wallet and its contents, valued at $5, from her purse, which was left unattended Tuesday in a room at the Physical Science A-wing.

•Two ASU students were arrested for underage possession of alcohol Tuesday during a party at Manzanita Residence Hall.

Tempe police reported the following incidents on Wednesday:

•A 38-year-old Phoenix woman was arrested Tuesday after she allegedly attempted to steal $440.88 worth of Nintendo tapes from a Target store at 1818 E. Baseline Road.

The woman concealed the tapes in a large tote bag and was detained by store security when she tried to leave the store.

•A drug suspect drove off with an off-duty ASU police officer hanging out of the passenger window of his truck after the officer tried to arrest him in north Tempe last Wednesday.

The incident occurred about 6 p.m. in the 900 block of East Harry Drive when Cpl. R.B. Morales grabbed the suspect, who later got away, and told him he was under arrest.

The suspect then drove off, riding about one block with Morales hanging outside the truck before the suspect stopped the vehicle and fled on foot. Morales was uninjured.

Radicalism in the 90's

Communism is dead. The walls are crumbling. The liberated nations are looking to the Christian West for hope.

Corruption and hypocrisy
Judeo-Christianity has produced confused societies filled with racism, sexual frustration and immorality. Pollution and exploitation, greed and materialism signal the end of our civilization.

Communism arose condemning the corruption and hypocrisy of 19th and 20th century Christianity. Karl Marx' call for radical change was right on. But his promotion of atheism and violence is not the solution.

The change is first spiritual. Neither fire nor bullets but God's truth will kindle a revolution in men's hearts. God is the source of radical and lasting change. Only God's true love is large enough to embrace the whole world.

Jesus taught the basics in the Sermon on the Mount, but old Christianity is failing Jesus by not practicing what Jesus taught.

A revolutionary movement

New Christianity is a revolutionary movement. It must enable us to go beyond belief and just nice words. Only a lifestyle of love beyond race, nation and religion can unify people above the cultural barriers between East and West, North and South. Principles need to be practiced.

Radical true love

To be radical means "to get to the root." Unificationism=radical true love; It brings a quiet revolution from selfishness to unselfishness. This is the radicalism needed in the 90's.

just as unacceptable as drunk driving," he said. ASU health educator Danae Brownell often speaks in classrooms and on a confidential basis with students who are interested in broaching condom use to their sexual partners.

Brownell said it is important that, when speaking with a partner, one is careful not to imply anything negative.

"A lot of times people will think 'well, does she think I'm infected, or does that mean she's infected—'"

Brownell recommends using "I messages" instead of "You messages."

"First start with how you feel, and then ask them 'what do you think?' and 'what do you feel?'" Brownell said. "Say something like 'what do you think about AIDS today? I've been reading a lot about it.'"

The best time to talk about the use of condoms or a person's sexual history — which often accompany's that discussion — is when a couple is feeling close and at ease with each other, Brownell said.

"The best time is when both individuals would feel comfortable talking about it," she said. "Not when you're in a really romantic situation or when you're using chemicals such as alcohol or cocaine, which disrupt the communication process."

Helmstadter said people are still relying on a person's physical appearance to decide whether or not to have sexual relations with them.

"A lot of these kids are basing a person's background and whether they're clean, as to whether that person is safe," Helmstadter said.

Brownell agreed, saying it is difficult to make changes in a person's sexual behavior.

"It takes a different level of maturity and acknowledging that they are at risk," Brownell said.

In general, England added, the statistics on college students have been somewhat disappointing.

"Before we're through with all this, there will be thousands of people in Arizona dead from AIDS, and that's ridiculous," he said. "We have to get to a place where using a condom is natural and expected."

Education College to be re-evaluated

By TENNY TATUSIAN

State Press

The ASU College of Education, which has spent the last decade plagued by problems ranging from student dissatisfaction with class curriculum to minority recruitment, is entering 1990 facing a battle to retain its accreditation.

Johnston

The National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education guidelines state that to be reaccredited, the college must limit enrollment, follow up on graduates from the program, work on minority enrollment, develop cooperation between the college and public schools, evaluate the student teaching program, build up a multicultural curriculum and improve the advisement system.

The council will be using this criteria to examine the college this year.

The Education College was last accredited in March 1982 with a good review and no provisional stipulations, according to college officials.

But in the years that followed the college and Dean Gladys Johnston have drawn fire from students, legislators and members of the Arizona Board of Regents.

Johnston refused to comment Wednesday.

In May of 1986, several East Valley legislators suggested that the University's fourth largest college — which they labeled as "terminally ill" — be closed because it was failing to adequately educate its students.

And in the past decade, the College of Education has had three inquiries into teacher training — the most recent in January 1989.

In 1986, then-Gov. Bruce Babbitt formed a special commission to study the College's worth and propose solutions aimed at strengthening the education curriculum, but in 1988 another study found little improvement in the program.

A survey conducted in 1988 by education professor William Stock found that 80 percent of the faculty felt that morale in the college was lower than when Johnston took over, and 69 percent rated the "quality and rationale of ideas" coming from the dean's office as "low or very low."

Johnston was also criticized in 1989 when she used $80,000 of the school's budget to remodel her office.

When some faculty questioned the expenditure, Johnston's public relations assistant — who is paid $30,000 annually out of the College's budget — said that the charges were the result of the "bruised egos" of a few professors.

Also that year, Regent Patrick McWhortor charged that the college was discouraging qualified, interested students from pursuing degrees in education and was not providing enough field experience in student teaching.

Despite the college's rocky past, college officials are confident that the council will approve reaccreditation.

The Education College has faced re-evaluation in the past with "flying colors," said Larry Faas, assistant division director for curriculum and instruction.

"I've been here for the last 21 years and we've had no problems (being re-evaluated)," Faas said.

KAET-TV lets students study at home

By KELLY JAIN

State Press

Would you rather go to class or watch TV?

A program offered by ASU's KAET-TV, Channel 8, will let you do both.

Through the magic of cable, students can receive a maximum of nine credit hours while lounging on the couch and munching chips in their bathrobes.

"ASU has had televised courses for a very long time, but it's only had live, interactive cable TV courses for a year and a half," said Elizabeth Craft, the head of ASU's Instructional Television division said.

"In some of the courses you can call in questions from home right on the spot. The remaining (classes) are pre-produced," Craft said.

The pre-produced courses offered this semester include Fitness for Living and Home Gardening.

ASU also offers several live, interactive courses, including Adolescents at Risk, Religion in America, Arizona Constitution and Government, and the Geography of Mexico and Middle America.

One drawback of the program, professors agree, is the lack of student-teacher interaction.

"Students at home don't actually meet me, they just come to take exams," said political science instructor Janalee Jordan-Meldrum.

Family resources and human development professor Owen Morgan agreed.

Morgan teaches Footsteps, a pre-produced course about parent-child relationships.

"The only time I see students is during the exams," he said. "I wouldn't want students to take the majority of their education this way."

However, Morgan continued, a pre-produced course does have its pluses.

"The main advantage is making it (the class) available to a large number of people."

The class is shown twice a day on KAET, which means anyone — whether or not they're enrolled for credit — can watch it.

Jordan-Meldrum said she jokingly compared her Arizona Constitution and Government class to the Oprah Winfrey and Donahue talk-shows because of its call-in feature. In reality, however, she said students hesitate to use the phone — something she would like to see change.

Proposed Tempe stadium site last chance for Valley baseball

By HOBART ROWLAND
State Press

A proposed stadium site northwest of Tempe Butte may be the city's last hope of bringing Major League Baseball to the East Valley.

City officials, who are re-examining the site, plan to assemble a proposal to compete with bids from Denver, St. Petersburg, Fla., and Buffalo, N.Y., for one of major league baseball's next two expansion teams.

The location, described by City Hall as "site A", is near an area previously considered by planners.

"The city is very interested in pursuing the new site location," Tempe City Councilman Frank Plencner said. "But we can't do this alone."

Plencner said Tempe will need the help of county and state officials to push the proposal through City Hall.

Earlier proposals for the construction of a stadium on a site north of Sun Devil Stadium on the ASU campus were opposed by University officials and student groups and never reached the Arizona Board of Regents, who would have had the final word on the University location.

Because of the uncertainty of an ASU location, Plencner fears the site now being considered may be the city's last option.

"We're running out of space," he said. "If we can't do it here, we can't do it anywhere."

According to Plencner, the site north of the butte is the most accessible of the proposed locations.

"It is near all major roadways," he said. "All but 2.5 acres of the 12-acre property is owned by the city of Tempe. The remaining acreage is part of the Hayden Flour Mill."

Tempe Community Development officials contend that the site does have its drawbacks. By building a stadium on the land, department officials say, the city will lose valuable commercial property set aside for its downtown revitalization program.

Plencner said any traffic problems will be minimal due to the abundance of parking space on the site.

"Parking will be greatly increased in the area," he said.

City officials are delaying the site proposal until a County Sports Authority report on the financing of the project becomes available.

Interior Ministry in Moscow.

Troops engaged in at least one battle Tuesday, when an armed group tried to seize five armored personnel carriers near the village of Tazikend. Soldiers fired on the group, wounding two men, Tass reported.

"Since then, attempts to take APCs have stopped, because before this they weren't used to having weapons used against them," Seleznyov said.

Reinforcements also were sent to the nearby border with Iran, Tass said. More than 7,000 Armenians have been evacuated from Baku, many in ferry boats across the Caspian Sea.

In Baku, a handful of Soviet soldiers for nearly three hours held back a crowd of 5,000 people trying to prevent the detention of 10 nationalists who broke into the apartment of a Russian family, Tass said. They finally agreed to release the 10, and led the Russians and an Armenian family out of the house, protecting them with shields.

In Armenia, residents broke into police stations and other buildings seeking weapons, Seleznyov said. About 50,000 people attended a rally in the Armenian capital Yerevan to hear reports about the fighting, said Armenian activist Karen Shakhbazyan.

Azerbaijanis staged protests in Baku and elsewhere to demand they be armed and allowed to defend their claim to Nagorno-Karabakh, newspapers and officials said.

Azerbaijanis continued their rail blockade of Armenia's 3.5 million people, cutting short fuel and other supplies. Azerbaijan has 6.9 million people.

The Soviet government and the Communist Party issued a joint statement of condolence to families of the dead.

In Moscow, a 49-year-old Armenian woman spoke sadly of the night Azerbaijani thugs beat her in front of her 15-year-old son.

"They are killing us," said Alisa Arakelova, her face swollen and black from a fractured jaw, her left wrist and two fingers broken and encased in plaster, and fingernails blackened and smashed. She escaped Baku for Moscow after the attack in her apartment, just days before ethnic hatred erupted in the latest, most deadly round of two years of ethnic violence in the Caucasus.

Armenian refugees milling about the Moscow office of the Armenian republic traded horrendous stories of atrocities, but none claimed to be direct witnesses. Many blamed Gorbachev for failing to halt the violence that has torn the two southern republics for nearly two years.

Both Arakelova, interviewed at the Armenian office, and the government newspaper Izvestia said much of the violence in Baku involves Azerbaijani refugees from Armenia forcing Armenians from their apartments so they will have a place to live. Izvestia said tens of thousands of Azerbaijanis who fled ethnic violence in Armenia in late 1988 remain without homes or jobs in Baku.

Ambartsyum Galstyan, an Armenian activist reached by telephone in Yerevan, said soldiers were advising Armenians in villages along the border between the republics to evacuate, leading them to fear that the government has decided to solve the ethnic violence by permanently separating the two populations.

Man shot, crashes truck

Scott Troyanos/State Press

A Tempe police officer inspects a Nissan truck driven by an unidentified man who was shot twice Wednesday night by two hitchhikers he had picked up.

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 29-year-old Tempe man was shot Wednesday night by one of two teenage girls he picked up at a convenience store and took drinking at the Salt River bottom, police said.

The victim, whose identity was being withheld pending notification of relatives, managed to flee in his Nissan pickup truck for about three miles before he crashed into another vehicle, Tempe police Sgt. Mike Ringo said.

Ringo said the victim had been shot twice in the chest with a small-caliber handgun. He was transported to Maricopa County Medical Center in Phoenix, where he was undergoing surgery late Wednesday.

Ringo said the incident began at a Circle

K in Phoenix where the man met the two girls, whom police could not locate after the shooting.

The man then drove to the Salt River bottom near Priest Drive, just inside the Phoenix city limit, where he was shot by one of the girls for an unknown reason, Ringo said.

He said the man then managed to get the gun away from the girl and flee in his pickup south on Priest Drive into Tempe. He then crashed into a car near the Regal 8 Inn, 1720 S. Priest Drive, Ringo said.

The passengers in the other car were not injured and one of them ran into the hotel and called 911.

Ringo said Phoenix police will investigate the incident because the shooting occurred in that city.

Health officials say asbestos in campus structures is safe

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

Only one building on the ASU campus is completely free of asbestos, and health officials say it is easier to live with the potential carcinogen than recent controversy indicates.

"As long as there is no damage, we don't remove the asbestos," said Richard Lamb, University coordinator of health and safety.

He said asbestos removal on campus only takes place during building remodeling or if damage to the building occurs.

Currently there are 76 buildings on campus with asbestos, mostly in pipe insulation, Lamb said. The Fine Arts Annex, which was recently completely renovated, is the only building completely free of asbestos.

Health officials now agree that removing asbestos — which usually means releasing the fibrous mineral into the air — is more dangerous than leaving it intact.

Mike Charrette of the Office of Air Quality attributes the frequent unnecessary removal of asbestos to a general lack of knowledge.

"If it isn't damaged, leave it alone," Charrette said.

Bill Bess, director of ASU's department of public safety, said the University has an inspection program ensuring buildings with asbestos are safe.

"All buildings containing asbestos are visually inspected twice a year," Bess said, adding that all buildings are also air-monitored. Air samples are taken about twice each year and checked for health hazards.

Best Hall and Hayden Library had asbestos removed during remodeling over winter break. The Anthropology Building and Manzanita Hall are scheduled for asbestos removal this summer during remodeling.

$100 a month for living expenses and $195 a semester for books. All cadets on full scholarship receive the same amount.

As the student chair of the ASU chapter of the Coalition for World Peace, Sylvia Urrutia said she is backing Axford because "schools should not encourage militarism."

"By providing funds, the University encourages military ideals as the way for the future and encourages students to attend military classes," said Urrutia, a third-year law student.

The military science department receives $34,533 from the University, and the department of aerospace studies, which includes Air Force ROTC, receives $30,665, said Alan Carroll, director of the University Budget Office.

Carroll added that the University has to supply space for the ROTC program because ASU is a state university, adding that military personnel who act as faculty are paid by the government, not ASU.

Sheryl Santos, an education professor, agrees with Axford.

"The 'war machine' does not belong on a civilized university campus," Santos said. "It is an evasion of our educational domain and disrespectful to our academic community."

She added that "training hired guns is the job of the U. S. military and should be conducted on a military base or academy."

Methas said she does not expect Coor to pass the measure if the Faculty Senate approves it.

"In terms of past batting averages, we have not been very successful with issues related to the faculty," Methas said, adding that the ROTC is represented in the Faculty Senate.

She said she expects the measure to go to a committee for further refinement because it is "not developed."

In a similar case, the Faculty Senate at the University of Wisconsin-Madison approved a resolution to eliminate the ROTC from their campus based on army discrimination against homosexuals. The ROTC will remain on the UWM campus until the president approves the proposal.

ASU point guard Mike Redhair grimaces as UofA's Harvey Mason leaps in the Wildcats' 70-61 victory.

Cats win 70-61, bench too deep for Devils

By PAUL CORO
State Press

Arizona may be known for its deep canyons and valleys, but there is only one college basketball team in the state with the depth of an army battalion.

UofA proved that it could go down the bench as far as it needed in pulling out a trying 70-61 win Wednesday night against ASU in front of a season-high 13,646 divided spectators at the University Activity Center.

Without the services of sharpshooter Matt Anderson, the Sun Devils have been trimmed to basically a gritty six-member team while the 23rd-ranked Wildcats seemed to be rolling big men off the assembly line.

"Under the circumstances, we played about as well as we could possibly play," ASU Head Coach Bill Frieder said. "Arizona's depth hurt us — and size. They kept people fresh. We just didn't have the depth and size to go with them down the stretch."

An exhausted Sun Devils team battled to within four points, 49-45, with 10:20 left in the game when Emory Lewis hit a 4-foot turn-in jumper on Brian Williams.

Mark Becker drew his fourth foul, which brought Isaac Austin and his four fouls off the bench, on the Wildcats' following trip down the floor. Williams' two free throws triggered an eight-point rally that gave UofA a 57-45 lead with 6:10 remaining.

ASU gave an indication of a comeback when Alex Austin, who contributed a team-high 24 points, pulled off a five-point play. After making both shots on an intentional foul by Harvey Mason, the Sun Devils retained possession and Austin followed with a 22-foot bomb to make the score 57-50 with 5:53 left.

"We had to get out of the zone because (Austin) was extending us out so far," Wildcat Head Coach Lute Olson said.

The teams see-sawed until two Becker free throws cut the UofA lead to 62-57 with 2:23 remaining. The Wildcats put ASU away for good by answering with two easy baskets in the lane by Sean Rooks and Wayne Womack.

"Everybody on the team felt like we should have won the game," Alex Austin said. "I look at UofA and I see some of their players and I see their faces and it's not like it used to be. We had them frustrated."

Much of the Wildcats' frustration can be attributed to the first half, when the Sun Devils fought constant pressure to lead for most of the first 20 minutes.

"I was tired at halftime," Mike Redhair said. "If we played the way we did in the first ten minutes for the whole game, we would have been perfect."

Three 3-pointers by Alex Austin and six points from Isaac Austin, who finished with 12 points and seven rebounds, in the first 12 minutes of the game gave ASU a stunning 20-12 advantage.

The Sun Devils clinged to their lead until Womack connected on a baseline jumper with 2:57 left in the half to give UofA a 26-25 lead. Prior to that basket, ASU had held the lead for 14 minutes.

Williams, who scored 20 points, hit two free throws with 1:58 to give the Wildcats a 28-27 lead at halftime.

"This was (Williams') best game to this point," Olson said. "He showed a lot of aggressiveness."

The Sun Devils' season-high 25 team fouls put a hinder on substitutions on the evening. After having success in the first half with Alex Austin at guard, Frieder was unable to return to the big lineup because Isaac Austin picked up his fourth personal with 15:05 left in the game.

"That really hurt us," Frieder said. "We couldn't afford to have one of our inside people in foul trouble."

Although the game marked ASU's third straight loss and seventh consecutive to UofA, the team's play was a vast improvement over their loss at USC Saturday.

In his third start, freshman Brian Camper dished out seven assists and played solidly on defense. Redhair had a team-high eight assists, but the Wildcats' pressure forced him to commit five turnovers.

"Matt's injury is definitely a a real detriment to our team," Redhair said. "On the positive side, when he comes back, we're going to have some more players with some more experience and time under their belt and that will make us that much better of a team."

Austin posts big numbers despite Sun Devils loss

By SETH SULK
State Press

When the Sun Devils need someone to rise to the occasion, look for Alex Austin to do the rising.

Even though ASU lost to the UofA Wednesday, 70-61, Austin did all he could to keep the Sun Devils close. In 40 minutes of action, Austin had 24 points on seven for 13 shooting, of which six made were 3-pointers.

"Alex played really well," said Wildcats' Head Coach Lute Olson.

Olson said that Austin seems to be there when ASU needs him most, much like Sean Elliott used to be for the UofA.

"When you look at the numbers in their games, it sort of reminds me of Sean with us a year ago," Olson said. "You'd see the 10 and 11 point games against the teams that we won by big numbers."

"But you take a look at when Alex's games have been big games and they've been in the games that have been decided by a few points in either direction."

In fact, Austin has put up the big numbers in games that have been close this season. In each of the five games that have been decided by four points or less, Austin averaged more than 20 points.

As vital as Austin has been to ASU's success this season, the Sun Devils are going to continue to need help from some other players if they plan to get back on the winning track.

With the loss of senior guard Matt Anderson to a knee injury, freshman Brian Camper has had to step into the starting lineup. In 36 minutes of action against the UofA, Camper was impressive with seven assists and six points.

Senior guard Mike Redhair has also stepped up his playing a notch. Although he has continued to struggle with his shooting, Redhair has been able to find the right guy to shoot, averaging six assists per game.

Austin said that he feels things are about to change for the better.

"You've seen Camper play well and you've seen Mike play well," Austin said, "and now we're going to go on a spurt."

Eric Moss, a heralded wide receiver/tight end from Ricks College, reportedly has signed a national letter of intent to play football at ASU.

School officials said Wednesday that Moss is enrolled for the spring semester but the list of signees will not be officially released until Feb. 16.

The 6-foot-3, 210-pound Moss caught 55 passes for 1,034 yards and 14 touchdowns last season for Ricks, which is located in Rexburg, Idaho.

Moss is the fifth junior college All-American player said to have signed with the Sun Devils thus far, joining four California products — running back Leonard Russell of Mount San Antonio College, offensive lineman Bob Robertson of Cerritos College, fullback Gino Valpredo of Bakersfield College and linebacker Gavin Hill of American River College.

All five players are eligible to participate in spring practice.

However, Russell was not on campus when classes began Tuesday. He said he must finish an algebra class at Mount San Antonio before he can return to ASU, where he originally enrolled in 1987.

Russell was ineligible as a freshman because his entrance exam score was not high enough and he ended up transferring to Mount San Antonio in 1988.

Tudos dives into gymnastics; ASU opens Friday in Fullerton

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

Even though the womens gymnastics team has lost two Sun Devils to injury, it has gained one team member who may be just the person to fill All-America alumna Karli Urban's shoes, Assistant Coach Lisa Zeis said.

Sophomore Jessica Tudos, who competed with the ASU diving team last year, brings five years of experience from competing with a national team in Canada. She also participated in the Olympic Games in 1984.

Despite her four-year layoff from gymnastics, Zeis said Tudos is regaining her grace quickly.

"We're looking for her to be a big help," Zeis said. "Hopefully, she will be able to somewhat take Karli's place."

Although she hated leaving the Sun Devil diving team, Tudos said she is thrilled with the gymnastics program, her teammates and the competition.

"The team is great, we have some great gymnasts and our motivation is really good," she said. "I'm a little nervous — it's been a while since I've competed, but I basically just want to be consistent."

Consistency is exactly what Zeis said she and Head Coach John Spini will be aiming for in Friday's season opener at Cal-State Fullerton.

The ASU mens gymnastics team will also be competing in California on Friday.

The Titans were ranked among the top six teams in the country last season, and they have not lost any players. Zeis said she is looking for a tough match-up.

"We are pretty evenly matched," she said. "We have five seniors and a lot of experience on our team and they have all juniors, sophomores and freshmen."

The hardships that the Sun Devils have suffered this season, which include injuries from Michelle Colavin and Marika LeSieur, are causing petty damage to the rest of the team, Zeis said.

However, when the two return to good health, Zeis said ASU will be a much stronger, more complete team.

"The first meet will be just good experience for the girls," she said. "We're not looking for our highest score ever."

All-American Suzy Baldock's return to an all-around competitor is one of the most positive highlights of the season so far, Zeis said. Baldock has now fully recovered from a serious knee injury.

"Suzy is one of those types who doesn't like to sit and watch," Zeis said.

The main focus of this season is going to be on dismounts, she said, adding that as the team builds further, more difficulties in the routines will be incorporated.

Zeis said she expects the Sun Devils to be among the top four teams in the Pac-10 with UCLA, Oregon State and UofA. The Bruins return three multi-event All-Americans, while the Beavers are led by Pac-10 All-Around Champion Joy Selig, and the Wildcats boast seven members from last year's squad.

The whole Sun Devil team wants to accomplish a spot in the second session of the NCAA's, Zeis said. In order to do that, ASU must finish the season in the top six of the Pac-10.

"We have to get good scores early, rather than only late in the season," she said. "But we have no worries and no pressures."

ASU Interim President Richard Peck congratulates Sun Devil baseball alumnus Reggie Jackson during a ceremony in which Jackson's No. 44, his professional number, was retired.

Jackson joins ASU elite

By SETH SULKA
State Press

When Reggie Jackson used to look at the right field fence of a baseball stadium, he was checking to see how far over the fence his home runs went.

But at the ASU alumni game Saturday, Jackson saw something different. He saw a sign bearing his name and number.

Jackson became only the third person in Sun Devil baseball history to have his number retired. The other two are Bobby Winkles, who managed ASU during its first 13 years of varsity competition, and Oddibe McDowell, the 1984 national player of the year.

"It's a nice deal — a hometown deal," Jackson said. "I appreciate it and I'm glad to come out.

"Everybody says nice things about me and I say nice things about them. It is just a nice, happy experience."

Jackson, who came to ASU on a football scholarship and was a regular in the secondary, only played the 1966 season for the Sun Devil baseball team. He hit .327 and led the team with 15 home runs and 65 RBIs.

When he finished at ASU, Reggie began a remarkable professional career that lasted 20 years. Jackson was a 12-time All-Star and hit 548 home runs (sixth most in major league history) during his career.

With 53 Sun Devils in the major leagues, Jackson said he would often run into fellow alumni.

"I remember seeing guys like Oddibe McDowell, Alan Bannister, and Alvin Davis," Jackson said. "You really do have a nice little fraternity out there."

Jackson recalled one incident that he had with Davis during the Seattle Mariner first baseman's rookie season.

"Alvin was off to a wonderful start in his rookie season and I got a double and he trailed me into second base," Jackson said. "I said to him 'just remember to take it one day at a time and don't put too much pressure on yourself.'

"Later, when I saw him on the set of a television show that I was doing, he recited it to me and said that it was one of the moments that he remembered as he was coming along. Running into Arizona State alumni like that, it was very special."

When asked what his most memorable moment was, Jackson recalled the Sun Devils' rivalry with the UofA.

"I had a home run in Phoenix Stadium and I threw a guy out at home plate in Tucson."

Suns pick up 5th straight victory, beat Mavericks 108-88

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Jeff Hornacek scored seven straight points to ignite a 21-7 burst over the last 8:50 that carried the Phoenix Suns to a 108-88 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on Wednesday night.

The victory was the fifth straight for Phoenix. Dallas has lost four straight and seven of eight.

Tom Chambers led Phoenix with 26 points, 14 in the third quarter when the Suns hit 73 percent of their shots. Hornacek finished with 20. James Donaldson and Rolando Blackman each scored 17 for Dallas.

With 8:50 to play, Phoenix led 87-81, but Hornacek's seven straight points, capped by a 3-pointer, made it 94-81 with 3:41 remaining and the Suns outscored Dallas 14-7 the rest of the way.

Phoenix led 28-24 after one quarter and Eddie Johnson came off the bench to score eight second-quarter points as the Suns stretched the lead to 50-44 at halftime. The Suns out-rebounded Dallas 29-14 in the first half and scored many of their baskets after offensive rebounds.

A 10-4 run by Phoenix in the early minutes of the second half built the Suns' lead to 60-49 but Dallas countered with an 11-2 spurt behind Blackman, who had all but two of his points in the quarter, and the Suns' led 84-76 after three periods.

Phoenix out-rebounded the Mavericks 53-33 for the game.

"The tremendous differential on the boards killed us," Dallas Coach Richie Adubato said. "We can't give them a lead and try to overcome it. We can't win rebounding like that. Phoenix out-hustled us and forced the turnovers. If we can't get control of the boards, we can't win."

Phoenix Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons agreed.

"Our defense was solid all night and our rebounding certainly improved the day that (Kurt) Rambis joined our team," Fitzsimmons said. "Our team will win with defense and rebounding rather than with offense. We're not as concerned with how many points we score. It was a good game for us."

Donaldson complained of a poor effort by the Mavericks.

"They killed us on the boards tonight, especially on the offensive boards. We weren't getting a total effort out there tonight from some of the guys," he said.

"We are a good team — an average team, not a great team. We have got to get a total contribution for 48 minutes from everyone on the team because when we don't, all our weaknesses are exploited and we become vulnerable."

Hornacek said the Mavericks "tried different things to try to stop us," but failed.

"There's no way they could stop us offensively," he said. "They can't double-team down low and not open up somebody to hit the shots. We match up good against Dallas. We can kick the ball back out and hit the jumpers."

Phoenix Suns guard Kevin Johnson gets the ball knocked down by the Dallas Mavericks Brad Davis as Johnson goes for a shot Wednesday night.
