State gives up plan to restrict tuition waivers

By NICOLE CARROLL
State Press

Legislators searching for a way to reduce the Arizona education budget are no longer toying with the idea of taking away university faculty and staff tuition waivers, a state senator said Monday.

"I nor anyone else I know has any intention of introducing legislation (restricting waivers)," said Sen. Jerry Gillespie, R-Mesa. "It's going to remain intact."

Currently, full-time employees of state universities can register for up to six credit hours and pay only $25. Those employees taking seven or more hours and dependent children of employees pay for 25 percent of their tuition.

In December, legislators were examining the elimination of tuition waivers as a possible means of increasing university revenue.

Gillespie said that although he will take no legislative action, he still opposes the waivers because they are only offered to university employees.

"If one section of state employees receive a benefit, all (state) employees should," Gillespie said.

A spokesman for Sen. Pat Wright, R-Glendale, chairwoman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said Wright would not seek to eliminate the waivers either.

Shelly Sorensen, vice chairman of the ASU Classified Staff Committee, said University employees value the benefit of reduced registration fees and were worried about its possible elimination.

"That's good news for us," Sorensen said. "That's a real concern for a lot of staff here."

Last semester, ASU paid $635,190 to provide 1,449 faculty

Faculty delays personnel plan

Senate motion would open staffing, tenure decisions

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

A Faculty Senate subcommittee decided Monday it would need more time to discuss a motion that would give faculty members a say in department decisions that currently are made exclusively by administrators.

The Personnel Committee decided to meet again Feb. 12 to continue its discussion of a proposal made by political science Professor Dickinson McGaw that asks that faculty be granted the right to vote on personnel matters within the department.

Such matters would include the hiring, promotion, retention and tenure of faculty members.

McGaw said the power of the faculty has been "disfranchised" in the past few years and the measure would give the faculty a chance to gain back some of its power.

"This is an opportunity for departments to be self-expressive," McGaw added.

Currently the dean of each college creates administrative search committees and makes all decisions regarding personnel. Final confirmation comes from the University president and the Arizona Board of Regents.

Some members of the subcommittee said the faculty should not have such a vote in hiring decisions or in granting tenure because their decisions would be based on popularity.

"If a department gets to vote on tenure then it becomes a popularity contest," said Alleen Nilsen, assistant to the vice president for academic personnel.

Nilsen suggested elected committee members with three-year terms study the issues of its department.

"An elected committee is more responsible," Nilsen said, adding that votes from the entire department would be "asking for careless evaluations."

Sen. Ann Casebolt from the School of Social Work agreed with Nilsen.

"It's disturbing if non-tenured faculty could read files on those up for tenure," Casebolt said.

In an effort to compromise, McGaw said that a department would not have to vote but could determine its own method of decision-making.

'If a department gets to vote on tenure then it becomes a popularity contest.'

—Alleen Nilsen

A substitute motion was introduced by James Schoenwetter, chairman of the committee that would require a three-fifths majority of the department before a decision could be passed.

This provision would require that decisions be made by a majority of the faculty instead of just a handful of interested members, Schoenwetter said.

Schoenwetter added that department chair positions should not be voted on by the faculty because those positions are officially administrative posts.

The committee will pass its decision on to the Faculty Senate during its meeting Feb. 19. If the Faculty Senate passes the proposal it will go to the President's Office for final approval.

Fine arts senator quits ASASU post

By DAN NOWICKI
State Press

College of Fine Arts Sen. Stacey Vogel announced her resignation from Associated Students of ASU Monday due to what she termed "professional conflicts."

Vogel, a second-year senator who served on the Appropriations Committee, said she will submit her formal letter of resignation to ASASU Executive Vice President Mike Pressendo today.

"It was not a personal conflict with any of the senators or with Mike Pressendo," she said. "It was a professional conflict with the way things were being handled."

Vogel said she feels her ideas were met with a lack of respect and her efforts to organize a college council for the College of Fine Arts were thwarted by Senate bureaucracy.

The College of Fine Arts has not had a College Council for more than two years.

"I promised myself two years ago, when I first ran for the Senate, that I was going to get a College Council started," Vogel said. "I finally had people interested, but I couldn't get any support from the ASASU council coordinator or anyone else."

"Michelle Neilson, the council coordinator, decided that Liberal Arts and Public Programs were more

Poll finds high approval for Corbin

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

State Attorney General Bob Corbin received his second highest approval rating since 1986 and has widened his lead over two of his rivals in the GOP primary race for attorney general, according to a poll released today.

The Rocky Mountain Poll found that, of 700 Arizonans polled, 35 percent thought Corbin was doing an excellent or good job, while only 13 percent rated his performance as poor or very poor.

Forty percent of the people surveyed said they would vote for Corbin if the primary were held today, but Corbin has not officially announced his candidacy.

"(The poll) is really nice and I appreciate it, but I'm not basing my decision (to run) on it," Corbin said.

He said he will to decide whether or not to run sometime this week.

Corbin attributed the 13 percent who rated him as doing poorly to followers of former Gov. Evan Mecham. Corbin's office had launched an investigation of Mecham that ultimately led to the embattled governor's indictment.

Corbin's principle rivals, David Eisenstein of Tucson and Grant Woods of Mesa, were skeptical of the importance of the poll's results.

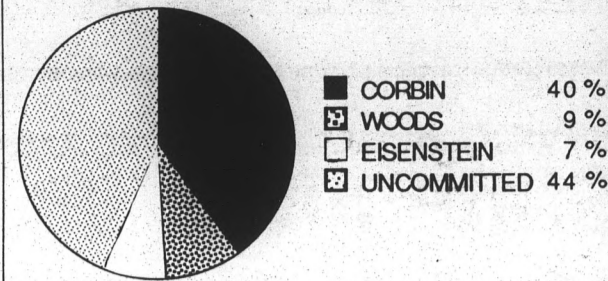

"The (Rocky Mountain Poll) has been ludicrous from the start," Woods said, adding that the poll was merely an exercise in name identification.

Eisenstein attributes Corbin's success in the polls to his recent publicity.

"I think he made a big splash on the Bolles case," Eisenstein said, referring to the newly reopened case on the murder of Don Bolles, a reporter for the Arizona Republic.

Eisenstein also said Corbin's role in reversing the controversial prison-term commutations for two convicted murderers helped. Corbin advised Gov. Rose Mofford that it would likely be legal for her to rescind the commutations when evidence arose that the victims' families had not been notified in advance of the action.

State Attorney General Poll

Source: Rocky Mountain Poll

State Press

Woods said early polls won't be indicative of the race's outcome.

"Our campaign is right on track," Woods said. Bernie Lumbert, a Kingman resident, announced his candidacy after the poll was taken. He challenged his GOP rivals to a public debate on knowledge of the law.

"I can whip the other two (announced candidates) in relevant law," said Lumbert, who is not a lawyer.

Lumbert said he doesn't feel not being a lawyer will hurt his candidacy for the state attorney general spot.

"People have a resentment for lawyers," he said. Corbin said, "He's a joke. There's no way to run for (attorney general) without being a lawyer."

Legally, a candidate for attorney general does not have to be a lawyer, according to Richard Brown, director of ASU's law library.

But Woods concurred that Lumbert "is not a serious candidate."

The Rocky Mountain Poll, an independent, non-partisan survey conducted by the Behavior Research Center of Arizona, is based on 700 telephone interviews statewide. The margin of error is estimated to be plus or minus 6.6 percent.

New national budget a lesson in giving, taking

Cites trees, trains, saving accounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's budget promises to save your family $114,000 in taxes over the next 25 years if you can set aside $5,000 a year. It makes enticing promises, too, if you love trees, have a houseful of tots or are fascinated by magnetic levitation.

But in budgetry, an exercise somewhat removed from reality, the budget that giveth also taketh away.

The taking would come from people who ride Amtrak or the airlines, go boating on weekends or work for the federal government.

Don't bank on the $114,000 windfall or get rid of your boat. By August, when Congress usually focuses on budgets, January's proposals have a habit of changing or vanishing altogether.

Bush's proposal to require a $25 decal on any recreational or commercial boat using waterways patrolled by the Coast Guard revived an idea originally floated by President Reagan. Congress balked, and the idea sank.

So, too, did Reagan's proposal to drop the federal subsidy received by the Amtrak rail passenger system. Reagan said it would be cheaper to hand an airline or bus ticket to every Amtrak passenger than to pay a subsidy averaging $30 for every Amtrak rider.

Bush's fiscal 1991 budget plan drops that argument, but retains the proposal. His budget director, Richard Darman, told reporters Monday that "the federal government's responsibility is not to run the railroads."

Magnetic levitation is something else again. The budget document describes it as "a new transportation technology that relies on the use of magnets for propulsion and levitation rather than conventional steel-wheel-on-rail technology." Bush proposed spending $9.7 million to check it out.

In the meantime, Bush proposed eliminating subsidies to keep big-city mass transit systems operating. Darman said that's a local responsibility.

Air passengers would pay more — a boost in the 8 percent ticket tax to 10 percent — but would get more, for airport construction and hiring 495 more air traffic controllers to help the 17,000 now scanning the skies.

The $3 tax on international flights would double.

Here's how that $114,000 windfall would work for families able to save:

Families with incomes under $120,000 would be able to open two savings accounts in which husband and wife would deposit a total of $5,000. If the accounts were left untouched for more than seven years, the interest earned would escape taxation. Early withdrawal, in less than three years, would carry a 10 percent penalty on top of the regular tax on interest.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady figures that in 25 years a family would save $395,000 of which $114,000 would otherwise have been paid in taxes. He assumed the family pays income tax at a 28 percent rate and can find a bank paying 8 percent interest.

Poor families would get a tax credit of $1,000 — subtracted from taxes owed — for every youngster under age four. And parents who adopt children with special needs could deduct $3,000. To start those tots on the road to school, Bush proposed making room for 180,000 more Head Start youngsters in a program that now enrolls 450,000 needy preschoolers.

For investors who hold onto their stocks for three years or more, 30 percent of the profits when they finally sell the stocks would be tax-exempt. That's more generous than the capital gains tax proposal that, with Bush's backing, passed the House but stalled in the Senate last year.

Federal workers would be among the losers in the budgetary game of winners and losers. Bush's budget proposes a three-month delay in a federal pay raise that is scheduled to take effect Oct. 31; and the 30 percent of state and local government workers who are exempt from Social Security taxes — and benefits — would lose that status.

Those steps, said the budget, should "close the gap between taxes owed and taxes paid."

What the president proposed for trees was to plant more of them — one billion a year through a $175 million reforestation program plus another 30 million through a community "plant a tree" initiative.

His budget message said growing more trees across America would fight the threat of climatic warming known as the greenhouse effect. An acre of trees removes up to nine million tons of carbon dioxide from the air, but the country is losing 700,000 acres of trees annually, it said.

Finally, grim prospects for tax sharpies. The budget proposes more money for enforcement of the tax laws, specifically for collecting delinquent taxes, checking out fake dependent claims, auditing mortgage interest deductions, and matching what the taxpayer says he received in interest against what interest payers said they paid.

Opposition supporters rally in Bucharest

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The government accused opponents Monday of attempting a coup and supporters rallied behind it, occupying the offices of one opposition party and forcing another's leader to flee in an armored car.

More than 15,000 people rallied in Bucharest to support the self-appointed government that took over when Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu was deposed and executed last month. News media reported similar demonstrations in several other cities, but gave no details.

On Sunday, about 15,000 people protested in the capital, demanding the resignation of the Council of the National Salvation Front, the name adopted by the government that is running the country until elections planned for May 20.

After initially declaring its only purpose was to guide Romania through the immediate post-revolutionary period, the Front recently said it would enter candidates in the elections.

That decision angered the fledgling opposition, which says the Front — 150 intellectuals, technocrats and former Communists — has an unfair advantage.

Many opposition politicians have pointed to the Communist pasts of leading Front members and suggested it really is the Communist Party in disguise.

As the thousands of pro-government demonstrators gathered Monday outside Front headquarters in Victory Square, three of Ceausescu's henchmen pleaded guilty in court to complicity in genocide.

Former Interior Minister Tudor Postelnicu, former Central Committee secretary Emil Bobu, and former Politburo member Manea Manescu, along with Ion Dinca, a former Politburo member who pleaded guilty Saturday, admitted supporting Ceausescu's order to shoot demonstrators at the revolution's outset.

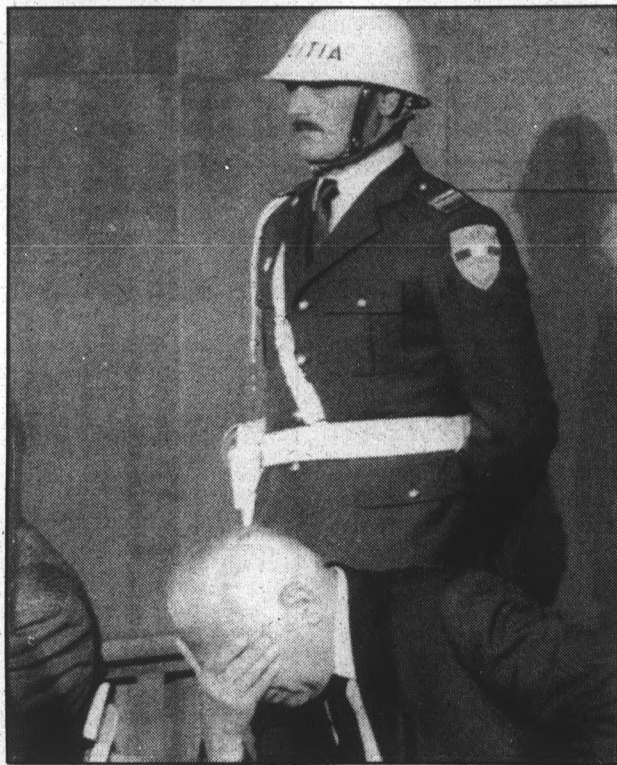

About the Sunday protest, Front member Silviu Brucan said it was organized by the Peasants Party, which was a dominant presence in Parliament before World War II and is thought to be the strongest opposition party now.

Brucan, a ranking Communist who fell out with Ceausescu after criticizing his dictatorial methods, told reporters the rally was an attempt to overthrow the Front.

"Their shock troops came close to the main entrance of the building," he said. "The whole event amounted to a putsch, a coup d'etat."

Peasants Party spokesman Ion Ratiu said of Brucan's allegations: "The whole thing was turned around to justify their actions today."

He spoke at a news conference held in the hotel room he has called home since returning last week from decades of self-exile in Britain.

Ion Dinca, one of the four close collaborators of former ruler Nicolae Ceausescu who are on trial in Romania, is overcome by emotion Monday. The four are accused of genocide.

Ratiu, a wealthy shipbuilder and real estate investor, accused the Front of staging Monday's demonstrations. Many protesters arrived at Victory Square in buses and trucks.

Another pro-government rally formed around the building that houses Peasants Party headquarters, about two miles from the Front building, and at the nearby Liberal Party headquarters.

"We won't leave until you dissolve the party!" demonstrators chanted as they forced their way into Liberal headquarters. Peasants Party leader Corneliu Coposu evacuated the building aided by soldiers in an armored car.

No injuries were reported at either headquarters. Brucan said three people suffered stab wounds to the back during Sunday's protest, but that none was in serious condition.

News Briefs

Honecker to be tried for treason

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Erich Honecker, who ruled East Germany for 18 years until his downfall in October, was arrested immediately after his release from a hospital Monday and will be tried for treason, the national prosecutor said.

Plans to put the former Communist Party chief and three members of his Politburo on trial in March were announced by Prosecutor Hans-Juergen Joseph at a session of parliament, where Premier Hans Modrow offered a grim account of the state of the nation.

The swift action against Honecker, 77, indicates the strength of a nationwide backlash against corruption in his Stalinist regime.

Economic problems and widespread unrest have forced Modrow, the embattled Communist premier, to move the country's first free elections up from May to March 18 and bring the opposition into a coalition that will govern until then.

More than 100,000 people demonstrated in Leipzig and other cities Monday night. Many called for the election defeat of the Communists and reunification with prosperous West Germany.

Moscow fails on consumer goods

MOSCOW (AP) — New government figures have confirmed what Soviet shoppers already know: most industries in 1989 failed miserably at fulfilling Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's promise of more consumer goods.

A diplomat who spoke on condition of anonymity said what little increase there was in consumer goods could be attributed to inflation, a greater emphasis on producing alcohol, and imports from the West.

Wheat farmers had a good year, but they were about the only ones in agriculture, according to statistics printed in most newspapers this weekend. After an investment of $110 billion in agriculture in 1989, food production rose just 1 percent — not the 6.6 percent expected.

Most of that small increase came in grain, sugarbeets and potatoes. Soviet consumers will find the increase in the last category hard to comprehend, since the normally ubiquitous potatoes are hard to find and are several times more expensive on the farmers' markets this winter.

Math path

NAU students should be forced to take college algebra

Brian Tassinari
Opinion Editor

A group of 1,800 NAU students have compounded the educational error of choosing to attend NAU over Arizona State University by signing a petition, asking the NAU officials to rescind the requirement that all students take college algebra.

It would be more appropriate if they rescinded the registration of these students and sent them all over to work at the McDonalds (with an abacus to keep track of the Big Macs).

The argument these pedagogical isolationists are clinging to is that math is unimportant to their particular majors — a slippery slope, indeed, because it is difficult to imagine how a person taking the first step in a career can know what is, and is not, relevant to his future. These students are obviously less concerned about getting an education than they are about keeping their evenings free to watch "M*A*S*H" reruns.

However, I am going to refrain from belaboring the point that American students finish last on just about every test of knowledge imaginable — with the possible exception of the MTV Top-10 video countdown. We've all become accustomed to the fact that in addition to not being able to read, Johnny can't add.

In discussions I've had with my friends, most have said that while they support the tightened math requirements here at ASU, they are glad they don't have to meet them.

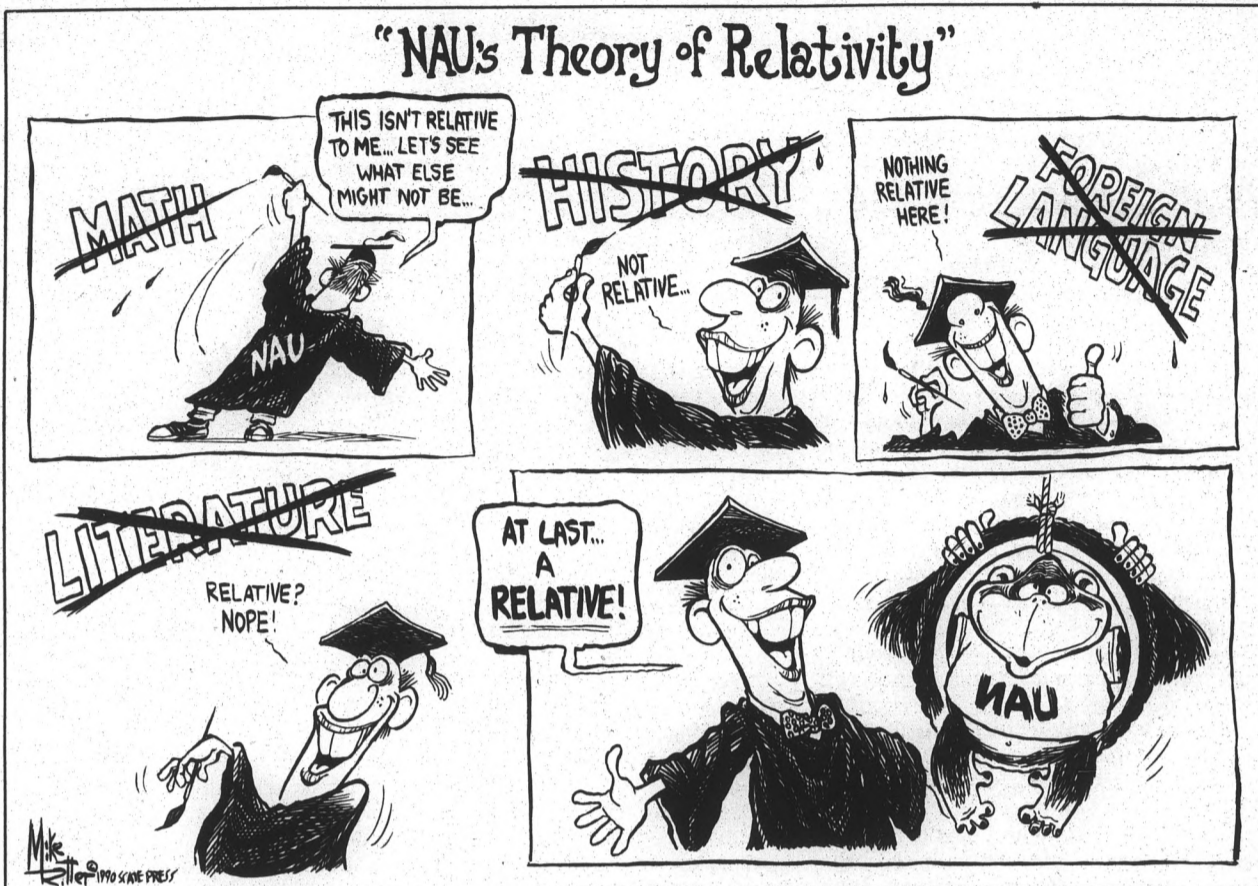

This is too bad. It's too bad that math is treated like the plague by university students, grade-school children, parents, the media and just about everyone else in North America.

Kids are socialized early in life to think that math is hard and bad and something to be avoided at all costs, like cod liver oil.

But it shouldn't be this way. Math is just a language of logic. You have to put in the hours to learn the syntax of the language before you can speak it. Learning algebra is to math what learning spelling and the rules of grammar are to English.

Only when one masters the language of math can one write the essays of logic that are calculus or differential equations.

In the same way that English professors don't sit around conjugating verbs for fun, math teachers don't worry about when train A will meet train B if train A leaves one hour before train B. This is the boring part of the discipline, but it is necessary to learn the basics before moving on to more interesting topics.

Everyone agrees that students must learn to read and write well, and that their failure to do so threatens our country's future. But for some reason, math illiteracy, which is as big a problem as English illiteracy, is winked at because, "well, math is hard."

Of course, the real reason math seems hard is that students are not forced to take enough of it to get past the boring drudgery and into the more interesting areas — or to develop a true proficiency. English would be hard, too, if all the exposure we had to it was our fifth grade grammar books.

The students at NAU should be forced to take algebra and learn the language of logic because it may help them clear their obviously cluttered minds.

In addition to providing its graduates with marketable skills, colleges have another, older obligation — to educate its students in a multidisciplinary fashion. The world needs fewer myopic vocational majors and more people who can think in a clear and logical fashion.

Another purpose of college is to expose students to the world so they can find their place in it. Math is the language used by scientists to describe our world; without it one cannot understand how our world works. So, when NAU students claim that math is not relevant to their majors, they are, in essence, saying their majors aren't relevant to the world.

Let's hope the administration at NAU doesn't let the students off too easily. Although the debate has already been cast in the old light of math is bad, administrators should make the dissenting students take the algebra class anyway.

If the NAU students can't pass a simple algebra class, then they have no claim to a college degree.

Send the message that without a rudimentary understanding of math, they aren't going to graduate — that's the kind of language they'll understand.

Letters

ROTC must be stopped

Editor:

Reasons for requesting that ROTC be discontinued at ASU:

1) Secretary of Defense (called defense) Chaney has recommended a $35 billion cut in the military budget. We should and can help him, and here is one of the places.

2) If the business of ROTC is not "training to kill" what is it? Even my ROTC friends admit that. Remember Calley and Mai Li??

3) When the A-bomb went off at Hiroshima (and overkill Nagasaki), Dr. Albert Einstein (scientist) said, "everything in the world has changed but our thinking, and we are drifting toward catastrophe!" That was 1945. We are now one world, with world law (only answers to terrorism, admit it), and with blurred boundaries (which are only in our head, right?). The astronauts taught us a lesson, if we would listen, when they said from the moon looking down on our fragile earth, "There are no boundaries."

4) Dr. Ernest Boyer, former commissioner of education and former head of all higher education for the New York Higher Education, said in the Mesa Tribune a week ago, titled "From Swords to Schools," that we should cut the military budget in the U. S. $10 to $20 billion and give it to improve our schools.

5) When Gov. Mofford is proposing cutting education $63 million, 5 percent from school budgets, isn't it prudent to cut the ROTC program from a university, which has no business offering it in this decade? We are not a land grant institution, so the reason for offering it must be the money, and the military buys the minds and souls of our students in the universities.

6) I was reminded by Dr. Benjamin Ferencz, Professor of World Law, Pace University, and prosecutor of the Nazi War Crimes Trials when he spoke on campus, ASU, and was a visiting peace scholar for the Arizona Institute for Peace Education and Research in Tempe, that half of the men that killed 6 million Jews in the death camps, Holocaust, had Ph.D's and one had two! Hitler militarized the universities, and we are now being strangled by what President Eisenhower warned us of, "the military industrial complex"!

Sinner's confession

Marion Barry remains master of political theater

Jeff Greenfield
Universal Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — There's a story they tell about a Southern governor back in the 1950s who had gotten himself quite a reputation for hell-raising.

His bedrock constituency, God-fearing, churchgoing country folk, were becoming unsettled by these stories, and one Sunday the governor visited a rural church and found himself confronted by a parishioner.

"Governor," the American Gothic said, "what's all this we hear about you carrying on up there at the capital, drinking and sporting with women and having yourself a time?"

In response, the governor grasped the hand of his inquisitor, looked him square in the eye and said with a choked voice, "Brother — pray for me."

I thought of this tale as I watched Washington Mayor Marion Barry go before the TV cameras before checking into a Florida rehabilitation center. Regardless of the ultimate outcome, it was, in purely political terms, one of the more skillful maneuvers I have seen in years.

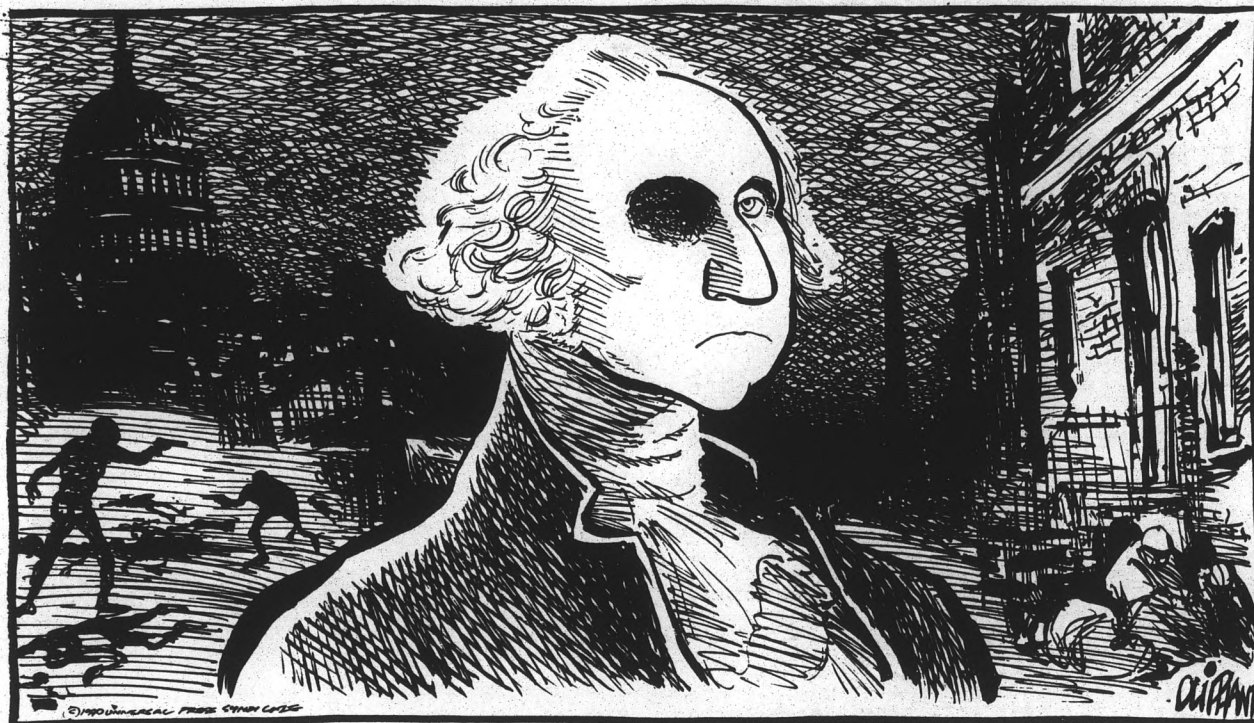

Most elected officials, learning they had been captured buying and using a dangerous drug on videotape, would have resigned their office at once and thrown themselves on the mercy of the powers that be.

Not Marion Barry. He traced his fall to an excessive political devotion; he had simply been too busy caring about others to care about himself. It was the political equivalent of 100 million mothers who have pounded their chests with their fists over the centuries, declaring to heaven that "My problem is — I'm too good!"

He never mentioned exactly what his failing was — a wise maneuver, considering that a specific admission of drug use would have opened him to charges of perjury, since Barry had repeatedly told grand juries he was not a drug user. He simply announced that he had a problem and would set about healing himself.

A spokeswoman then told the press that the mayor's real problem was alcohol abuse — a failing that is far more socially acceptable in America than the use of drugs.

What is likely to come next is right out of a handbook of political relations strategy: In a few weeks, the mayor will check out of Hanley-Hazelden and stage a triumphant return home. Before a packed church, surrounded by friendly clergy, the mayor will declare himself purged of toxins, ready and able to return to the business of leading the great city of Washington.

He will likely eagerly confess that he has sinned. Look for appearances on local talk shows, on a Barbara Walters special, on "Donahue" and "Oprah," where members of the studio audience will praise him for his courage in confronting his weakness and dealing with it. Members of the studio audience will lustily applaud.

Barry's supporters will charge his critics with a racist double standard: They will point to the white celebrities who have returned to their lucrative work after a stint at Betty Ford and ask why this black leader should not be accorded the same privilege.

Meanwhile, the years of lies and scandals, the appalling state of the public schools and the public hospitals in the District of Columbia, the hundreds of millions of taxpayer dollars stolen or wasted, the condition of what the Washington Monthly magazine called, "the worst government in America," all will be swept aside as the celebration focuses on the redemption of Marion Barry.

To be sure, this may not work; it well may be that this time, Marion Barry went too far, even for his remarkably loyal and patient base.

At the least, however, the mayor's performance shows that the use of crack may not affect that part of the brain where the instinct for political survival is located. So far, Barry has played a losing hand with the skill of a riverboat gambler.

Clean Air Act could save billions of dollars, lives

Cody Shearer
North American Syndicate

WASHINGTON — A fifth of the world's population, more than a billion people — breathe contaminated air every day that is above international safety limits. From Warsaw to Madrid to Los Angeles, air pollution is inflicting a mounting toll on health and the world environment.

Anyone who doubts that pollution is now a more immediate and perilous threat to humanity, than say nuclear weapons, should peruse an alarming report issued here last week by the Worldwatch Institute. The study offers exhaustive health statistics from around the world. It claims deaths in Athens to be sixfold on heavily polluted days. And industrial pollution in Bombay leaves the air so putrid that a day's breathing is tantamount to smoking half a packet of cigarettes.

While air pollution in urban America may not be toppling citizens on the sidewalks, it's hardly something to brag about. It's estimated to cause up to 50,000 deaths a year and to cost $40 billion in health care and lost work days.

Over the next several weeks, the U. S. Senate will have a chance to make history by tackling clean air legislation when it considers the reauthorization of the Clean Air Act. Though there is little doubt some kind of green legislation will be approved this year, it's uncertain how stringent the new air pollution controls will be, what they will cost and who'll pay for them.

The reason the Clean Air Act reauthorization process is so controversial is that Senate Bill 1630 is not your typical sell-out legislation, at least at this stage of the debate. It contains a provision to combat acid rain, toxic air pollution and three pollutants that exceed Clean Air Act health standards in many cities: ozone, carbon monoxide and fine particles. The bill also requires a phase-out of chemicals that deplete the stratospheric ozone layer, regulate municipal waste combustors and establish carbon dioxide tailpipe standards to combat global warming.

Naturally, a wide range of industries are touched by the legislation, but the most vocal opponents are automakers and oil company executives.

While all aspects of the legislation will be debated intensely, three areas will trigger the greatest controversy, they are as follows:

- Acid rain legislation that mandates polluting electric utilities to fund the purchase of technology resulting in a 10 million ton per year reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions by 2000;

- The future of cleaner-fueled vehicles that operate on minimally polluting alternative fuels, which are intended to cut motor vehicle emissions in cities not complying with national air standards;

- Several provisions that are intended to control more than 100 toxic pollutants emitted by U. S. industries.

Environmental Protection Agency officials suggested on Jan. 19th that approximately $40 billion would have to be spent yearly to implement all aspects of the Senate bill. But industry lobbyists predict the private sector and government can expect to underwrite as much as $104 billion a year to facilitate the legislation.

To make sure that its interests are not short changed, the Clean Air Working Group, a consortium of 2,000 companies comprising a wide range of industries, has been fiercely lobbying members of Congress to move cautiously in amending the Clean Air Act. The group has even produced national television ads warning citizens to learn about the costs of complying with a strict clean air bill. One of the industry drama pieces alerts small businesses that errors in paperwork requirements alone would yield a fine of $25,000 per day, per violation.

In recent weeks, CAWG put together a group of 40 senators to ask related agencies to develop detailed state-by-state, industry-by-industry cost estimates on implementing the reauthorization. As part of its stalling strategy, William Fay, the administrator of CAWG, admits to resorting to any plan that will pressure senators to slow down the legislative process on this matter. He has charged the Senate leadership with "railroading" the bill through committee without discussion. Now he wants a full, deliberate debate.

In the middle of this high-stakes poker game sits President Bush trying to befriend all parties. But how can the president look out for the public interest while protecting industry's pocketbook? Aren't those roles conflicting? Of course they are.

Since the beginning of the year, President Bush has taken two steps to please the environmental community. He endorsed the elevation of the Environmental Protection Agency to cabinet level status and signed a proclamation to commemorate April 22 as "Earth Day." In the later ceremony, he hedged his environmental passions by warning Congress that he intended to veto any clean air measure that was "too restrictive." Responding to delirious criticism by industry groups that $1650 would impose overly stringent and costly controls on business, Bush made it clear he was only going to approve "carefully balanced (legislation) to restore clean air for all American while sustaining job creation, competitiveness and economic growth."

Unfortunately, President Bush can't be the eternal accomodationist. At some point he's going to have to move beyond the politics of cosmetics and embrace CO2 emissions reductions in automobiles, as opposed to letting them be decided upon in an international forum 10 years from now. Whether he exudes such leadership in private or public makes little difference. But he can't have it both ways.

The president says he wants the Clean Air Act passed in time for the April 22nd commemoration of the 20th anniversary of Earth Day. But should the legislation not be approved by then, one can conclude that the vested hands of monied interests have soiled the public welfare once again.

Arsonist causes minor damage to Tempe clinic

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

An arsonist threw a Molotov cocktail at a Tempe Planned Parenthood, causing minor damage to the front of the clinic, police said.

No one was injured in the incident. It is the first time that a family planning center in Tempe has been a target for arson, said Tempe police Sgt. Al Taylor.

Taylor said there are no suspects in the incident that occurred between 4:30 p.m. Friday and 7:55 a.m. Monday at the clinic, 1250 E. Apache Blvd.

Damage to the building was limited to a glass door and some carpet. It was discovered by an employee about 8:45 a.m. Monday, Taylor said.

He said the fire bomb was made from a Bud Lite beer bottle filled with some type of accelerant. Tissue and paper was used as a fuse, he said.

In an unrelated fire, a vacant apartment sustained $10,000 to $15,000 in damages early Monday.

The blaze occurred about 7:07 p.m. at the Chez Michelle apartments, 1077 W. First St., said Tempe Fire Department spokesman Russ Wollam. Two engine trucks and a ladder company had the blaze under control in about 23 minutes.

Wollam said the origin of the fire in the two-story building has not been determined, but he added that transients have been known to use vacant apartments in the past.

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents on Monday:

- Two non-students were warned about having weapons on campus after they were found carrying air guns in an ASU parking lot.

- A thief stole an ASU student's 1989 Honda, valued at $15,000, from the north side of Sahuaro Hall. The theft occurred sometime between Saturday and Sunday.

- An ASU student was arrested Sunday for causing $100 in damages to another student's car by walking on it in Lot 35. The student was cited for criminal damage and released on his own recognizance.

- A vandal caused $95 in damages to an ASU student's truck by breaking a rear window in an attempt to steal a stereo. The incident occurred sometime between Friday and Sunday on the north side of 418 Adelphi Drive.

Tempe police reported the following incidents on Monday:

- An arsonist set fire to Prendergast Towing, 1971 E. Fifth St. about 2:18 a.m. Monday. No one was inside the building during the fire, which was put out by the building's sprinkler system.

Officials said the business sustained $3,000 in damages, mostly from water.

The blaze was discovered by two patrol officers checking the area near the business for a fire alarm that had gone off. They discovered smoke coming out of a broken glass door at the business.

An unknown suspect had set a sofa and the carpet in the business on fire.

- Two Tempe men were arrested Friday in connection with the attempted burglary of a car parked at Club Rio, 430 N. Scottsdale Road.

Cesar V. Cintron and Robert Kelly Richardson, both 20, were arrested about 12:15 a.m. at Sixth Street and Stadium Drive on felony charges of possession of burglary tools and attempted burglary from a vehicle. Both men were booked into Tempe City Jail.

Cintron was also arrested on suspicion of criminal damage.

The suspects were arrested after police saw two men using flashlights to look through vehicles, including an unmarked police car, at the University Theaters, 1025 E. Broadway Road. Police then followed the men through numerous parking lots in the city.

Police followed the men to the Club Rio parking lot where they allegedly tried to break into a car but were scared off by passersby.

- A 20-year-old ASU student was arrested Saturday after he allegedly tried to steal a gallon jug of water from the Safeway store at 926 E. Broadway Road. The student was also arrested on a charge of giving false information when he gave a police officer his brother's drivers license.

- A Tempe man suffered a cut about his right eye early Friday after he was robbed at knifepoint at his apartment at 737 S. Priest Drive. The robbery occurred about 1:50 a.m. when the man answered a knock at his door and let the suspects in his apartment.

The suspects took a television set and four guns before fleeing.

and staff tuition waivers, said University Budget Director Alan Carroll. He estimated that the state pays more than $2 million each semester in tuition waivers for all three Arizona universities.

Carroll said employees would probably not attend classes if the waivers were eliminated, and that would have a negative effect on the University budget.

"It would probably cost the University and state money to get rid of the waivers," Carroll said.

Meanwhile, a bill was introduced to the House Education Committee last week that would allow members of the Arizona National Guard to receive two-semester tuition waivers for each year of service in the Guard.

The bill was sent to a sub-committee for further examination.

Sub-committee member Rep. Bob Williams, R-Sun City, said the National Guard waivers are an excellent idea but probably will not become a reality because of the state's financial situation.

"Money is the only thing anyone can have against (the bill)," Williams said. "It's something to work towards."

Resign

important than Fine Arts," Vogel said.

Neilson, who is in charge of reorganizing and revitalizing college councils for ASASU, said that the Fine Arts Council is a "top priority."

"We had to prioritize all the college councils . . . and Public Programs and Liberal Arts wanted an election. It just sort of fell into our laps (in that order)," she said.

"Fine Arts is now definitely one of the next ones."

Vogel is the second ASASU senator to resign in the past week. College of Law Sen. Allan Barfield submitted his letter of resignation Jan. 23.

Pressendo said Vogel's resignation was unfortunate. "We've always tried to work with Stacey," Pressendo said. "As with Allan, we'll miss her, but we'll survive. We'll overcome."

Because Vogel was the only senator from the College of Fine Arts, her resignation leaves the college with no ASASU Senate representation.

"My only concern is for my college," Vogel said. "I'm not going to say that I neglected my college, but I don't feel that I achieved my goals as a senator. I represented them the best that I could."

Vogel said she felt like her hands were tied.

"I don't feel that another semester of the same thing would do any good."

Vogel said she will continue to work for her college in a non-senatorial capacity.

"Once I resign, I'm going to try my darndest to get the college council started. Maybe I can succeed as a Fine Arts student where I failed as a Fine Arts senator."

Pressendo said he is concerned about the Fine Arts situation and hopes to have at least one of the two Fine Arts seats filled within three weeks.

"We've already got several people who say they're interested. Although it's within my power to appoint, I'd prefer to hold elections. That way, there's a mandate from the college."

Pressendo said the formation of a Fine Arts College Council has become "priority No. 1."

"We're very hopeful that we'll have one by the end of the semester. We will have representation and soon."

Pressendo said he hopes the nomination process will flow smoothly so elections can be held by the end of next week.

Vogel is also upset by the Senate's "laid back and lackadaisical" attitude toward formal proceedings.

"It's 'rush, rush, hurry, hurry' so that we can get out by 9 p.m. I don't feel that's the right attitude to take," she said.

"I'm just not comfortable with the position the Senate has been taking," Vogel said. "I don't like the direction it's gone in. It was a great feeling serving in the Senate before and that feeling just isn't there anymore."

Architecture dean hoping to improve school's programs

By HOBART ROWLAND
 State Press

This is the fifth in a series of articles profiling the 10 major colleges at ASU, with special emphasis on the goals each wishes to accomplish in the 1990s.

When John Meunier took over as dean of ASU's College of Architecture and Environmental Design in September 1987, he set out to improve the programs he believed were falling far short of their potential.

"When I arrived here, the college had a well-established school of architecture," Meunier said. "Other programs needed more attention."

Of the four subject areas the college offers, only architecture and interior design are accredited. Approval or accreditation of programs in industrial design and urban and regional planning is pending. Students can choose concentrations in landscape architecture and urban development.

When he first arrived, Meunier said he was particularly disappointed with the department of planning, a program he hoped would play a major role nationally.

But since planning Professor Fred Steiner took over as head of the department last summer, Meunier said he has seen steady improvement and the department is well on its way to accreditation.

Steiner said student demand for training in this field has contributed to the department's new-found popularity and academic status. Within the past few years, Steiner said, applications to the program have tripled.

"There is a demand for people with planning degrees," Steiner said. "It's a unique field."

Steiner attributes the field's popularity to an increased concern for the environment.

"Urban and environmental careers are important and pressing," he said. "The issues are always dramatic."

Steiner, who recently contributed his designs to the final plans for Tempe's Rio Salado project, is now studying ways to resurrect and beautify the Valley's neglected canal banks.

"We would like to redevelop the identity the canals used to have years ago," he said.

ASU professors Madis Pihlak and Edward Cook are also involved in the study.

Meunier said that with these projects, the College of Architecture is destined to play an important role in shaping the community.

Meunier said he would like to see the minority situation improve within the college. In 1988, minorities made up 11 percent of the college's 1,266 students, up from 9 percent in 1984.

"The situation is improving but we're not where we should be," he said.

Progress has been made in luring Hispanic men to the college, and Meunier adds that a push has been initiated to increase women in the faculty.

"We're struggling with a cultural attitude toward architecture," Meunier said. "Women are discouraged from pursuing an education in the field."

In 1988, 35 percent of all architecture majors were women.

By increasing the number of women in the faculty, Meunier said he hopes to draw more female students into the college's most popular program.

The new Architecture building, Meunier said, is a real morale booster and will contribute to the college's academic growth.

The $11.5 million expansion project at the corner of Forest Avenue and University Drive opened its doors to students this fall.

"The new building was a tremendous boost for us," Meunier said. "It's a world-class facility and we have to live up to its implications."

Students view the structure as an added convenience and feel that it increases student and faculty unity.

"All of my classes are concentrated in one or two buildings now," said senior architecture student Karl Chavez. "It makes things much easier."

Senior urban planning major David Gravel said the new structure has given students and faculty a sense of pride and togetherness.

But then, Chavez said, the students and faculty have always been close.

"We're all good friends," he added.

Weird Wire

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — As if there weren't enough screaming, hood-pounding car commercials on television, a Bradenton dealer has launched plans for his own network consisting mostly of car ads 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Tom Stimus, known for his loud car ads and for offering a bounty on Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, is introducing StimusVision.

It premieres March 1 on a cable outlet here with plans to expand to the Tampa, St. Petersburg and Sarasota markets.

Aside from advertising his dealerships, it will include public-service announcements on missing children and wanted criminals, lost-and-found ads, a swap shop and even romance advice segments starring — you guessed it — Tom Stimus.

Stimus has been on TV before. It was on a national talk show in 1986 that he said he wanted to raise $10 million for bounty on Gadhafi.

His cable channel will be leased for about $1 million over four years, Stimus said.

Riverside outslugs Devils in 11 innings, 8-5

Scott Troyanos/State Press

ASU shortstop Anthony Manahan, who hit a two-run homer, sets to throw out a Highlander.

By SETH SULKA
State Press

The long ball had been a great friend of the ASU baseball team so far this season. The Sun Devil batters had hit a home run in each of their first five games and the pitching staff had yet to give one up.

But that changed somewhat on Monday as UC-Riverside (3-0) out-slugged ASU, 8-5, in 11 innings of non-conference play at Packard Stadium.

Although Sun Devil hitters kept their streak alive with three home runs, the pitching staff gave up its first home run of the year — along with its second and third ones, too.

"It kind of caught up with us," ASU Head Coach Jim Brock said of the long ball.

It especially caught up with the Sun Devils (5-1) in the top of the 11th inning. With two out, junior Gary Tatterson (1-1) gave up a walk to freshman Chad Townsend and a single to junior Troy Percival. Sophomore Mark Saugstad then followed with a three-run belt over the left field fence.

"It could possibly be his only one of the year," Brock said of Saugstad's first home run of the season. "He's their number nine hitter and I think that he just tries to make contact — but he jumped all over that one."

Brock said that even though Tatterson, who relieved Tony Pena in the sixth, pitched an "outstanding" game, he "tired very badly" at the end which led to the game-winning homer.

However, ASU jumped on a few balls of its own. In the second inning, the Sun Devils had back-to-back homers by sophomore Mike Scialo, his second of the year, and junior Bill Faysak which gave them a 3-2 lead.

Without a doubt, though, the biggest smash of the day belonged to ASU junior Anthony Manahan, who cranked one over the 30-foot-high "Green Monster" in center field. Manahan, who said he got a low, slow, curve ball, became only the eighth player in Packard's 16-year history to accomplish that.

Brock said that he wasn't sure that Manahan had that much power.

"It's an unbelievable thing," Brock said. "It wasn't wind-aided at all. It was just a line drive that was crushed."

Despite the three home runs, ASU went seven for 39 batting for a .179 average. Brock said that he expected a drop-off after the long weekend series with Long Beach State, but felt the damage was minimal.

"In college baseball, as far as hitting is concerned, you really need to make an adjustment," Brock said. "Very rarely do you see a college baseball player who can throw everything. To be successful offensively you make adjustments that you need to against the particular 'one-pitch' pitcher that happens to be out there."

"We didn't do that at all. The right hander (Bill Jordan) was throwing 95 percent breaking pitches and we just did not make the adjustment. It was a very good lesson for us."

The Highlanders were led by senior Pete Weber who had two home runs and drove in four runs. Weber gave Riverside the lead in the sixth inning when he followed senior Matt Davis' double with a homer.

After the Sun Devils regained the lead with Manahan's two-run shot, junior Ruben Ayala singled off Tatterson to bring home Weber in the eighth and tie the score, 5-5, and send it into extra innings.

•ASU's Anthony Manahan has got a hit in each of the first six games. He is nine for 23 (.391) and leads the team with 10 RBI.

•Tommy Adams, who reinjured his hamstring in Saturday's game against Long Beach State, has missed the last two games. Brock said it will probably be a couple of weeks before Adams is fully recovered and available for action.

Men swimmers, divers get first win ever at Berkeley

By LARRY NEWELL
State Press

On the strength of its best performance in recent years, the 12th ranked ASU mens swimming and diving team managed to do what the Sun Devil basketball team couldn't — upset the sixth-ranked Golden Bears on Saturday in a close contest, 71-69, marking ASU's first-ever win at Berkeley.

"This is the best team performance we have had in years," ASU mens swimming Coach Ron Johnson said. "The major reason we won was our team's tremendous enthusiasm and focus during the entire weekend."

Sun Devil sophomore Keith Dennison had a career day Saturday against the Bears, recording a lifetime best in the 100-yard butterfly (48.86) and winning the 200-yard butterfly (1:49.95). Dennison's 100-yard butterfly time was also an NCAA standard mark.

"Dennison was the outstanding swimmer of the meet," Johnson said. "His performance was really exceptional, especially considering that he did it unrested and unshaven."

Complementing Dennison was freshman teammate Magnes Eriksson, who was also a double winner, recording first-place finishes in the 50-yard (21.12) and the 100-yard (45.74) freestyle events.

"Over the weekend Eriksson won a total of eight individual events, and his performance on Saturday was definitely a shock to Berkeley," Johnson said.

Other ASU winners included sophomores Terry Flock and David LeBlanc in the 100-yard backstroke (51.96), and 200-yard breaststroke (2:03.21), respectively. Freshman Fran Grey also tallied a first-place finish in the 200-meter backstroke (1:52.67).

"Cal fielded its strongest lineup and we beat its best," Johnson said. "This win was not a fluke."

"This victory definitely ranks among one of the biggest upsets of the year," Johnson said.

The Sun Devil mens diving team proved to be the difference at Berkeley as they scored 12 points, to help ASU pull out the upset.

"The victory at Cal was definitely a team effort," ASU diving Coach Ward O'Connell said. "We were very happy to help our mens team win."

Freshman Bill Conti took top honors in the 1-meter dive (265.95), with sophomore teammate Rick Sawtell placing second (245.10). In the 3-meter dive junior Drew Johansen finished second (280.875) and Sawtell recorded a third place showing (246.00).

Friday's meet at Stanford followed more to form, as the Sun Devils lost to the third-ranked Cardinal 74-39 in Palo Alto, Calif.

ASU winners were Dennison in the "Overall, Stanford was just too deep," Johnson said. "They are a team that has no weaknesses and could possibly be an NCAA championship team."

The seventh-ranked ASU womens team found Palo Alto equally as inhospitable, losing 104-36 to the top-ranked Cardinal freestyle.

On Saturday, the ASU womens team was drowned 84-56 by sixth-ranked Cal in Berkeley.

Although ASU seemingly had little to cheer about, Sun Devil womens Coach Tim Hill had nothing but praise about his team.

"I felt very good about this road trip," Hill said. "Our athletes swam very competitively, and this has been two of our most successful losses ever."

"Right now, I am very excited about our chances in February and March."

Ice Devils improve record, teamwork in sweep of Stanford

By ROBERT LADD
State Press

The ASU ice hockey team improved its season record to 12-8 by sweeping the Stanford Cardinal 4-2 and 12-0 last weekend in Palo Alto, Calif.

Ice Devil Head Coach Jim Manguso said the team is beginning to work well together and is improving each game.

"At the beginning of the year, everybody would just take the puck and go," Manguso said. "Now we're beginning to move the puck around."

In Saturday's game, the Ice Devils jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first period by goals from sophomores Jeff Beske, Dave Sarp and Abel Moreno.

"During the first period it seemed like the same situation as Friday," Moreno said, "but when we got some breaks and had some short-handed goals, things began to click."

Once the second period began, ASU never looked back, scoring five goals and four more in the third. Contributing these goals were Sarp (3), junior Kevin Hicks (2), sophomore Ron Matthews (1), Moreno (1), and junior Dave Peterson (1).

"Once we took the lead, our main goal was to get the shut-out for (goalie) Matt (Malec)," Moreno said. "We wanted to concentrate on tough defense, but we kept putting up goals."

Malec, a junior, contributed to a strong ASU defense by saving 24 of 26 shots on goal in the series.

Coach Manguso was happy with the way the Ice Devils spread the puck around and said it is important to continue this type of hockey.

"We want to keep improving our passing," Manguso said. "To do well against good teams we must be effective at passing the puck."

In Friday's game, sophomore Rob McClelland scored the first goal with 9:58 left in the first period on Beske's assist.

Minutes later, Peterson assisted Hicks on a goal that put the Ice Devils on top 2-0. Stanford closed the gap to 2-1 by scoring with 1:02 left in the first period.

"During the first period, we didn't have much intensity," Moreno said, "but once they scored, the intensity came back and we played a good game."

Early in the second period, the Ice Devils took a 3-1 lead when Peterson stole the puck from center ice and scored unassisted.

Hicks finished the scoring for ASU with 13:15 left in the third period. Matthews and Moreno were credited with the assists.

Stanford added a late goal in the third period to make the final 4-2, Ice Devils.

The Ice Devils take a four-game winning streak to Colorado this weekend when they play Southern Colorado-Pueblo.

Strawberry charged with assault

By The Associated Press

ENCINO, Calif. — New York Mets star Darryl Strawberry was arrested and charged with assault with a deadly weapon last week after allegedly threatening his wife with a pistol, police said Monday.

Strawberry was arrested at his home in Encino and spent a "very short time" in jail at the West Valley station early Friday morning, Sgt. Woody Baca said.

Los Angeles Police Cmdr. William Booth said Strawberry posted $12,000 bail "and is back with his wife."

"It was very basic type stuff, a family dispute," Booth said.

Baca read a police statement that said West Valley officers were called to the Strawberry home at 3:45 a.m. after a report of "domestic violence." Lisa Strawberry, 25, said she and her husband had argued and that Darryl, 27, hit her in the face with an open hand, the statement said.

According to the report, Lisa grabbed a metal rod and hit Strawberry in the ribs and wrist. Lisa alleged that Strawberry got a handgun and threatened her, the report said.

A .25-caliber semi-automatic pistol registered to Lisa was found in the house, police said. The statement said Lisa showed "no visible injury" and that Strawberry had bruises on his ribcage and wrist.

"There was a pistol in the house. I don't remember all of the circumstances," Booth said. "He was taken into custody because there was a dispute. We have prima facie evidence that he had violated the law."

Booth said he did not know whether a court date had been set on the assault charge. An investigation by West Valley officers is continuing, police said.

Strawberry and his wife were separated in 1987. She has alleged in the past that he has hit her.

Last Wednesday, blood tests established that Strawberry was the father of a child born in 1988 to a woman in St. Louis. Strawberry did not contest the finding and a judge in St. Louis County Circuit Court took under study the amount of child support the All-Star outfielder is to pay.
