Mercury spill closes Stauffer Hall, KAET

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A mercury spill caused KAET-TV Channel 8 to go off the air Wednesday night and forced about 125 people to evacuate Stauffer Hall after a light control panel that contained the poisonous chemical short-circuited, officials said.

There were no injuries reported in the incident, which began at about 5:30 p.m. when workers at KAET spotted a haze of mercury vapor coming from a room where the panel is located, Tempe Fire Department spokesman Russ Wollam said.

The vapor triggered an alarm, and firefighters were immediately dispatched to the scene.

Officials said on Wednesday night that KAET is expected to be blacked out until this morning, when industrial hygienists are expected to begin cleaning up contamination in a studio in the B-wing of Stauffer. The building's A-wing, where ASU's journalism and communication departments are located, will be open for classes.

The leak of about two cubic centimeters of the potentially deadly chemical came at the worst time for KAET. It was to be the first night of the PBS station's two-week pledge drive.

"It was going to be, but it never happened," said KAET General Manager Chuck Allen, who tried to stay positive despite the possible loss of an estimated $25,000 to $30,000 in pledges that were expected Wednesday night.

"This could hurt our budget, but that's secondary to the welfare of employees, students and volunteers," Allen said.

Allen said a similar accident occurred in August with the device that controls the lights in the studio. The device was purchased in 1972 and is considered obsolete in the rapidly changing technology of the television industry, he said.

After the building was evacuated Wednesday night, the Fire Department's Hazardous Materials Unit entered the building and conducted tests that showed the amount of

Suit alleging FIJI hazing to go to trial

By CAROLYN HUFFMAN

A lawsuit brought against ASU fraternity Phi Gamma Delta, known as the FIJIs, by a former member for alleged hazing will begin Monday in Maricopa County Superior Court.

ASU student Scott Dinin is suing the FIJIs, alleging that the fraternity subjected him "to violent, unnatural and humiliating initiation rites" and "coerced and brainwashed (him) into participating in the 'hazing' of others."

The lawsuit was filed in May 1988, shortly after the FIJIs were put on a two-year probation and ordered to vacate their Adelphi Drive house. University officials charged at the time that the fraternity had violated ASU's Code of Conduct by using various hazing techniques on pledges.

The suit claims that pledges and new members were forced to pile goat feces on themselves, were beaten on the buttocks and were subjected to arduous physical exercise, causing mental distress and physical injury.

Black leader: U.S. 'asleep' on rights

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

Black and white relations have deteriorated since the civil rights movement in the 1960s because of a lack of political leadership, said civil rights activist and former New York Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm.

"We just had a president for the last eight years who didn't know that discrimination existed," Chisholm said to a crowd of about 100 students in the MU Wednesday evening.

"What can you expect?" "We are at a crossroads in the 1990s. We are experiencing the dark path of hostility and the exploitation of race. Do we need a restatement of civil rights?" she added.

Speaking as part of a Black History Month lecture series put on by Associated Students of ASU, Chisholm said today's generation "seems to be like Rip Van Winkle."

"Nobody seems to be doing anything," she said. "And nobody seems to realize that everyone's asleep."

Chisholm's career in politics began in the early 1950s. She was the first black woman to be elected to the U. S. Congress, where she served a 13-year term. In 1972, Chisholm made history by becoming the first black woman to run for the presidency of the United States.

She said she entered politics because of a "burning need within me to help others become active."

"The (political) machine had failed so miserably to reach black voters," Chisholm said. "I wanted to make the system become more accessible to all Americans."

Chisholm said she was encouraged at the age of 20 by a professor at Brooklyn College to enter politics.

"I reminded him that I was black and female and that I had no chance of being elected to public office," she added.

She credited her premier political positions on her courage.

"I was the first black congresswoman because people were so afraid to challenge the system," she said. "At this age of 65, I am not afraid of anything or of anybody."

Chisholm reminisced about the '60s and '70s during her speech to a cheering crowd.

"There was a war on attitudes and policies in this country that was not right," she said. "There was a call of conscience."

She said issues are not being raised today as they were in previous decades.

"Back in the '60s, we wouldn't be as quiescent as we are today," Chisholm added. "We would be raising issues. You don't find that kind of commitment in America today."

Issues such as civil rights, environmental concerns and the Vietnam War made people stand up and make a difference, she said, adding that today, activism has died out.

"Change never comes about by people playing it safe," she added. "If we had courage, if we had guts — and most of us don't — we would be raising issues. That is the trouble with people's behavior today."

Chisholm encouraged the students to become active and use their college degrees for more than just getting a job.

"Your college degree means nothing to you if you fail to open up your hearts and embrace humanity," Chisholm said. "College is like the window of the soul. Open

Task force to 'bring University message' to Legislature

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

A University task force designed to bring the ASU community and the state Legislature closer together has officially begun working.

"It's quite innovative," said Claudelle Lecuyer, director of community relations for ASU.

The task force was created last semester in an effort to build better relations between the ASU faculty, staff and students and the senators and representatives at the state Capitol.

"We want to bring the University message to the Legislature," Lecuyer said. "We want to get back from the Legislature the feeling of responsiveness."

She added that the task force wants to create a "user friendly" ASU community for the Legislature.

"We want them to know we're interested in you," Lecuyer said.

ASU is the only university in the West that has such a program, Lecuyer said, adding that other universities try to "stay as far away as possible from the legislatures."

"They view them as loose cannons," she said.

The task force has an advisory committee to make sure that all activities stay within legal guidelines. Advisory committee members include ASU General Counsel Bruce Meyerson, Vice President for University Relations Brent Brown and Faculty Senate President Harold White.

"There are limitations but there are also opportunities," White said. "This is an excellent opportunity for citizens of the state of Arizona to increase their awareness of issues. We should be better citizens as a result."

The task force has met twice this semester. The first meeting included a discussion with state representative Heinz Hink, R-Scottsdale, and the second meeting involved a discussion with Mark Killian, R-Mesa.

Hink, who is also a political science professor at ASU, discussed general issues with the task force, and Killian spoke about financial problems facing Arizona.

The task force is made up of 65 faculty, staff and students, Lecuyer said.

The members are representatives from each college who also head smaller committees in their respective units, Lecuyer added.

Earthquake causes widespread minor damage

Quake measures 5.5; no reports of injuries

UPLAND, Calif. (AP) — A strong earthquake rocked a 200-mile swath of Southern California on Wednesday, triggering rock slides onto highways, breaking windows, toppling at least one wall and causing widespread minor damage.

There were no immediate reports of serious injuries from the quake, which was felt from San Diego to Santa Barbara and swayed high-rise buildings in Las Vegas, 230 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

It measured 5.5 on the Richter scale, and was centered three miles northwest of Upland, a city about 40 miles east of Los Angeles, said Hall Daily of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

The U. S. Geological Survey gave the same magnitude, but a preliminary reading by University of California Seismographic Stations at Berkeley put the magnitude at 6.0. Such measuring differences are common. A quake of magnitude 5.5 is capable of causing considerable damage.

Scattered damage was reported in the region east of Los Angeles.

At Harvey Mudd College in Claremont, about five miles from the epicenter, the quake broke a window and toppled wall-mounted bookcases in the president's office, said Burt Tashman, at the school.

"I'm on the second story and boy, I tell you, things started shaking," Tashman said. "Glass fell from the wall of the president's office and fell all over the place. Pictures fell.

Soviets approve bill allowing ownership of land

MOSCOW (AP) — Legislators overwhelmingly approved a bill Wednesday that allows Soviets to acquire land and bequeath it to their children, a major modification of decades of state control of land.

The law, however, stops short of legalizing full private ownership of property by strictly forbidding the sale of land. Under the new law, plots only can be leased, and the lease prices will be set by the state.

The measure was part of a comprehensive package designed to give the force of law to the economic and social reforms championed by President Mikhail Gorbachev. The official news agency Tass called it "a major legal document of Soviet economic reform."

The law is to serve as the basis for further legislation by each republic to regulate land distribution.

State ownership of land, inscribed in the Soviet Constitution, has been a cornerstone of communism since the 1917 revolution. But reformers and economists repeatedly have called for allowing private ownership as a way of spurring growth in the troubled economy.

In a commentary in Wednesday's edition of the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, economist Pavel Voshchanov welcomed the reform as a first step to reversing a situation in which the Soviet Union, with some of the richest farmland on Earth, has become a net importer of food.

The Soviet Constitution says "the land, its minerals, waters and forests are the exclusive property of the state." The Congress of People's Deputies, the Supreme Soviet's parent body, will be asked to change the Constitution when it meets March 12.

By altering the Constitution and allowing the roughly 23 million people employed on the 26,000 collective and 23,000 state farms to acquire plots, the Kremlin leadership hopes to raise farm productivity, which is notoriously low on those farms.

Rural families already produce one-fourth of the country's gross agricultural production, including nearly 30 percent of the meat, milk and eggs on individual plots they are allowed to exploit.

In a poll published Wednesday in the newspaper Izvestia, 40 percent of those queried said they were eager to become individual farmers.

The Supreme Soviet legislature first voted separately on each chapter of the 52-article measure, then approved the entire law 349-7 with 12 abstentions. The full Congress of People's Deputies must now approve it.

Wednesday's four-hour session was the third time the Supreme Soviet considered the proposed so-called Law on Land. During earlier debate, about 150 proposals and criticisms of the bill were made.

Alexander Nikonov, the president of the Soviet Agricultural Academy who submitted the bill, said about 40 percent of the original draft had been revised to accommodate the proposed changes.

The law states that land is the property of the people living on a given territory and that every Soviet citizen has the right to a

East German defense minister recommends reducing military

EAST BERLIN (AP) — The two Germanys should reduce their combined military by two-thirds when they unite, and some U. S. and Soviet soldiers should remain during the unification process, the East German defense minister said Thursday.

Adm. Theodor Hoffmann said the armed forces should be purely defensive and both states should remain in their respective alliances until they are reunited under a new European security system.

West Germany belongs to NATO and East Germany is in the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact. About 380,000 Soviet soldiers are stationed in East Germany and NATO has more than 300,000 in West Germany, including about 250,000 Americans.

De Klerk accepts ANC proposal

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President F. W. de Klerk on Thursday accepted a proposal by the African National Congress to send a delegation for the first formal talks between the white government and its foremost adversary.

The ANC's commitment to dialogue "is a positive step," reflecting a desire to "search for solutions through peaceful means," said de Klerk, who lifted a 30-year ban on the guerrilla movement three weeks ago.

De Klerk also made his first public statement on a controversy involving Defense Minister Magnus Malan, who has been linked in press reports to a secret military unit that allegedly assassinated anti-apartheid activists.

Ortega halts attacks against Contras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega declared a halt to attacks on the Contras Wednesday and called again on the United States to help dismantle the rebel force.

President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, who joined Ortega on Tuesday in asking the U. S.-backed Contras to put down their arms, praised his move as a step forward.

"The causes of civil war in Nicaragua have disappeared," Chamorro told a news conference. "There is no reason for war."

She said the Contras, most of them based in neighboring Honduras, "must lay down their weapons and come home to work for the reconstruction of Nicaragua."

Ortega said in a statement that he ordered all offensive military operations against the Contras to halt. He said the United States should help pay for demobilizing and relocating the rebels.

Chamorro upset Ortega in an election on Sunday that he agreed to as part of a Central American plan for ending the war and which he clearly expected to win.

Demobilizing the Contras is the trickiest issue in transition talks that began Tuesday between Chamorro's 14-party coalition, the United National Opposition, and the stunned Sandinistas, who have been in power for 10½ years.

Sandinista officials say they cannot give up control of the armed forces and police, both party organs, as long as the 10,000-man Contra army is intact.

Volcano erupts twice more in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Redoubt Volcano resumed its sporadic emissions Wednesday, erupting twice within an hour, dropping ash on Anchorage for the first time and disrupting airline flights.

There was a moderate eruption shortly before 9 a. m., and then a much stronger blast that sent a plume 37,000 feet into the air about an hour later, said Tom Miller of the Alaska Volcano Observatory.

The mountain was quiet after the second burst, but light ash still was reported falling at mid-afternoon.

Most of the ash from the second eruption headed east-northeast toward the Nikiski area of the Kenai Peninsula. A light coating of ash, however, was reported more than 100 miles away at Elmendorf Air Force Base, in portions of downtown Anchorage and at Eagle River, about 10 miles north of Anchorage.

"We've got everything parked inside," Sgt. Dave Haulbrook, an Elmendorf spokesman, said of the aircraft on the base. "We've got ash falling on the snow now."

"A big cloud moved over. Nothing fell out of it. After it passed, ash started falling."

"We'll leave the F-15s in the sheds until we can determine there's no more danger or until we have to fly," Haulbrook said.

Some flights were canceled or diverted at Anchorage International Airport, but operations were continuing, said Marsha Sampson, a spokeswoman.

Pedestrians were seen wearing scarves over their faces in downtown Anchorage, and Anchorage Police issued masks and air filters for patrol cars.

"That's just for those whose cars suddenly need a filter

Student protest

It takes more than waving flags to make a difference

Lynn Vavreck
Asst. Opinion Editor

There are a lot of things ASU students need. Another committee to study the declining quality of education is not one of them.

The student leaders of last Wednesday's "tuition rally turned protest" are proud of themselves. Yesterday they sat down with University officials to discuss their demands.

Their demands? What demands? They don't really have any. At least they don't have any new demands.

These "student leaders," if you can call them that, are being suckered by the administration and regents again.

The tuition rally held last Wednesday was suspicious from the start.

The fact that the rally was organized by potential ASASU candidates, the day after election petitions were distributed, was somewhat disturbing. The fact that tuition had already been raised and ASASU President Paul Larson admitted that students got shafted made the rally a bit like beating a dead dog.

If the purpose of the rally would have been to get students registered to vote in the upcoming legislative election, it would have been brilliant. But instead, the rally was more like a "let's let the legislators and regents know we're upset" rally.

I'll bet they could have guessed that.

While last Wednesday's activities did help to increase public awareness about what was happening to students in the universities state wide, that was about all the good it did. Except for maybe helping a few ASASU wanna-be's get closer to being elected.

And if this is any indication of their leadership abilities, that may not be all good.

Now, a week later, these students are claiming a type of "moral victory" over the University administration. You can almost see the glimmer of ASASU president flickering in Chris Stiles' eyes. But if these students were really smart, if they knew anything at all about what they claim to be fighting for, if they had any inkling of a purpose or vision for their cause, they would know better than to let the University tell them: "Well, let's form a committee."

A committee. Worse than that, a task force. Nothing works slower than a University committee. What is even more disgusting is that there have been hundreds of committees formed at ASU to study the declining quality of education. In fact, one of them just completed a study about class size, another about faculty retention. All of the things that the protest leaders say they want this committee to look into have been studied already, numerous times. The reports lie in piles on some administrators desk somewhere on campus, or in an old filing cabinet. Never to be read again. Never to be acted upon.

If these students let the University convince them that this committee will make a dime's worth of difference, then they get what they deserve — which will be nothing.

If the protest leaders had taken the time to think, to research this topic and to work out a plan, instead of just waving flags and banners, and screaming at the top of their lungs, they would know that the only compromise they should accept from the administration is a promise to act on what other committees have already proven.

They should be demanding action on the research that has proven that class size matters; a commitment to small class size in every discipline. They should be demanding action toward the goal of full faculty participation; a commitment to hire more faculty, not just instructors without doctoral degrees who can't speak English. They should be demanding that a student sit on the University Budget Committee. This committee, possibly the most important committee at the University, is the only committee at ASU which does not have a student representative.

It is not hard to find out things like this. It does not take much effort to learn that the University has had numerous committees studying these types of things before. All it takes is a little bit of research and some cynicism.

A smart student leader knows never to completely believe anything an administrator tells them. If you're smart, you check everything out, or you get used.

The problem is that these students think they are the first group of student leaders to come up with the idea that the University should look into class size. And the truth is that they are not.

They would have done themselves some good if they would have talked with other students who have fought these battles before. They could have learned much from that type of meeting. But instead, they mounted their high horse and road right into the administration's plan for them.

The result of what could have been a brilliant call for action by students has been diminished into another laborious committee. A committee that will probably meet once or twice a semester for two or three years. And after most of the students enrolled now have graduated, the committee will stop meeting, and file its reports in manilla folders. No action will ever occur. Class size will never diminish and there still won't be a student on the University Budget Committee.

So, if the leaders of last Wednesday's activities are serious about wanting to call themselves student leaders they had better get some guts and start demanding action.

And if the University doesn't want to commit to acting on issues like class size, faculty participation, academic advising and the Budget Committee, then let's have rallies and sit-ins. Then, let's take over campus buildings and disrupt the flow of things.

Then we could make it so miserable for any administrator here that they would have to compromise.

Then we could say we made a difference.

ASU not founded by Satanists

Editor:

As I read Anthony Martello's letter on Feb. 26th, I could not help but think it was a practical joke. But anyone who could go to that much trouble must be serious. For those of you who did not read Mr. Martello's letter, let me fill you in. According to Anthony and his "letterology," "USA=God=Good." Therefore, if we reverse USA we get ASU, then we take the negative of God and get... Devil. And then "good," what do we get? That's right, Evil! Anthony, take a break from the PTL and Oral Roberts for a while, get some air.

Anthony has "proven that ASU is haven for evil and spiritual deprivation." Sure, it all fits, "Sparky was no accident." What are you saying? ASU was founded by Satanists? If you leave ASU, where will you go? Arkansas State? No, wait! That's an "ASU" also! Alcorn State? Egad, we're surrounded!

I have used another little known system passed down by Kurdish yak herders. It told me this: Anthony Martello=Paranoia=way too much free time. Or did I just hear it when I was playing my records backward? It's all so confusing.

WASHINGTON — Two months have passed since U. S. troops invaded Panama and still there are no complete figures from authorities on how many Panamanians died as a result of U. S. military activities.

The U. S. Army has said approximately 300 Panamanian soldiers died during the invasion. Brad Hall, a spokesman for the Pentagon, has claimed that 220 additional civilians died in the action. The U. S. Southern Command has estimated that 250 civilians perished.

During a recent news conference in Panama City, Dr. Roger Montero, Director of the Legal Medicine Institute, reported 314 military and 202 civilians dead, a total of 516 Panamanian casualties. Meanwhile, Panorama Catolico, a Panamanian Catholic church weekly, has reported 655 civilian deaths.

In sharp contrast to what seems like an official conspiracy of silence on how many people really died from the U. S. invasion, the U. S. and Panamanian governments are quick to come forward with a host of other figures. The U. S. Southern Command, for instance, proudly reports that our government has paid $811,078 for 8,848 weapons it has received voluntarily from Panamanian citizens. It has also stated that 417 bombs were dropped by U. S. forces during the first 14 hours of its military operation. Apparently our government is better at counting weapons than people.

Not to be outdone for accuracy, the Endara regime has been quick to reveal that property losses amounted to $2 billion for the Dec. 20 invasion. The Jewish community alone in Panama has declared losses amounting $400 million, $250 million of which are unrecoverable.

In spite of such news, there seems to be a news blackout regarding the recent events in Panama. Whereas downtown restaurants in Panama City are packed with people of different backgrounds who live it up before the midnight curfew falls, crime is rampant in the capital. During January, the crime rate approximately doubled the monthly rate increase registered last year. Regardless of Panama's new Public Force and all the U. S. military troops in the city, there were 22 homicides, 49 serious attacks, 200 thefts and 80 stolen cars that occurred under their watch. Panamanian officials have reported that many of the attackers have been armed with AK-47 rifles, which Noriega's paramilitary group distributed during the invasion. Last weekend alone, 19 people were wounded with firearms in Panama's capital.

Nor have there been any reports of an incursion by U. S. troops into the University of Panama on the afternoon of Feb. 12, which nearly provoked a serious incident.

Indeed, what's striking about recent events in Panama is the historic parallel when it comes to official silence regarding the truth. A case in point is an article just published in the March issue of Life magazine by one of America's best investigative reporters, Seymour Hersh. In his expose, Hersh, using the best U. S. intelligence sources available, reveals for the first time that our government knew General Noriega had orchestrated the deaths of two presidents — Ecuador's Jaime Roldos in May of 1981 and Panama's Omar Torrijos in August of 1981. In both instances, Noriega reportedly used remote-controlled bombs that were placed on the dignitaries' aircraft.

An obvious question comes to mind. Why would the Reagan-Bush Administration continue to have close relations with Noriega throughout the 1980s when it knew he was involved in drug trafficking and had also ordered the deaths of two chiefs of state?

The answer may be that everything the U. S. has done in Panama is an acute embarrassment to our national values. Given what's gone on down there, it's no wonder our government wants the truth hidden.

Research from the Department of Transportation suggests that airline crews and passengers flying between Europe and the United States are exposed to more radiation than most workers at nuclear power plants. Aircraft flying over the North Pole, where the Earth's magnetic field raises radiation levels to four times those of the Equator, are particularly vulnerable.

Concern regarding cosmic radiation has increased in the medical community as more aircraft fly for longer periods, at higher altitudes, where the protective atmosphere is thinner. The potential harm from cosmic radiation is so serious that many doctors now recommend that women in the midst of pregnancy — weeks eight to fifteen — avoid flights from the U. S. to Europe.

The Americanization of the Soviet Union continues unabated. Walt Disney Production has already issued the first 500,000 copies of the Mickey Mouse comic book in Russian within the framework of a cooperative agreement with the Fizkultura Sports publishing house in Moscow. And Levi-Strauss has opened a store in Leningrad that will market jeans for hard currency. The U. S. company is currently holding talks with the Ministry of Light Industry, Minlegprom, on establishing a joint venture to manufacture denim clothes.

The National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities reports that earning a college degree has become a six to 10 year chore for most students. Only 15 percent of college students complete a bachelor's degree within four years of finishing high school. Six years after high school graduation, only 46 percent of students had completed college.

Residents of Utah have the longest life expectancy rates and those from Delaware the shortest, according to a recent study by Northwest Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Art of cynicism killed by modern-day vanity

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — Washington is a city of cynicism without wit. Other great capitals — ancient Rome, London, Paris — have redeemed their corruption with epigrams. In them, moral decadence has generated a countervailing moral insight, usually expressed in mordant concision. Not her.

Maybe democracy is to blame. Americans worship democracy and lack any sense of irony about it. Political commentary is as deferential to pressure groups as politicians themselves. Ask Andy Rooney. Even H. L. Mencken has lately been added to our Index of Forbidden Wits. It's considered blasphemous to insult the majority and inhuman to criticize minorities. That doesn't leave much room for frank observation.

Ask yourself what would happen to a government official who made a remark like this one: "Most women mourn the death of their lovers less because they loved them because they want to seem worthier of being loved by others." In case you haven't guessed the answer, his remark would be picked up by the media, attacked by feminists, deplored by senators and repudiated by his superiors, whereupon he'd be out of a job. Nobody would savor the remark for any truth it might contain, not only about women, but about human nature in general. Americans aren't good at interpreting this metaphorically. Today, as truly as in the 20s and 50s, America is dominated by its most moralistic and literal-minded elements.

The remark was made by Francois de la Rochefoucauld (1613-1618), sixth in a line of dukes of that name. During the reign of Louis XIV, he fought against the influence of the great schemer Cardinal Richelieu and lost. Out of power and favor, he took his revenge by writing his memoirs.

But La Rochefoucauld is best known for his 642 maxims. If he were alive today, he would be known for only one: the one that would have gotten him into trouble with the National Organization for Women. Fortunately, he pre-dated such hen-pecking lobbies, and the elegant subtlety of his outlook had time to penetrate the awareness of cultivated Frenchmen. He is as much a part of the French mind as Samuel Johnson is of the English.

La Rochefoucauld's target wasn't women; it was vanity. He assumed that women had it, too. If he were alive today, he might have found it even in members of minority groups, thereby ending his career faster than Richelieu did. He was unsparing of anything human.

A sampler: "We confess to small faults to create the impression that we have no great one." "However well people speak of us, they teach us nothing new." "We refuse praise from desire to be praised twice." "Our enemies opinion of us comes closer to the truth than our own."

"When our vices desert us, we flatter ourselves that we are deserting our vices." "What often prevents our being enslaved by a single vice is that we have a number of others." "Quarrels would not last long were all the wrong on one side." "We always like 'Weak people cannot be sincere.'"

"Everyone complains of his memory and no one complains of his judgment." "In the business of living, our faults are often more attractive than our virtues." "There are bad people who would be less dangerous if they had no good in them." "Selfishness, which we blame for all our crimes, often deserves to be praised for our good deeds."

This is not the whole truth about human nature, but it's a good corrective to the peasant platitudes we usually live by. "Weak people cannot be sincere": And only a shrewd, strong mind could have been so sincerely cynical. La Rochefoucauld's wit is cutting because it isn't merely flippant. It flays our customary self-flattery.

Democracy should give us all the freedom to speak like dukes. Instead it seems to make us all talk like toadies. people who admire us; we do not always like people we admire."

"The vast pleasure we get from talking about ourselves should warn us that we are giving almost no pleasure to those who are listening." "Why is our memory good enough to recall to the last detail things that have happened to us, yet not good enough to recall how often we have told them to the same person?"

your's up. Stop being so tight."

She said that she is disappointed when she visits colleges and sees divisions among ethnic and race groups.

"How sad it is to go on college campuses in this nation to see blacks in one corner, hispanics in one corner and whites in one corner," Chisholm added.

She said man's inhumanity to man is crippling the United States.

"Ever since the inception of this great republic, there has always been racism in this country," Chisholm said. "We are our greatest opponent. We must never forget that the constitution was written by men who owned slaves."

She added that throughout history, blacks were expected to improve their own situation.

"The passport to American society was a white skin," Chisholm said. "People always said, 'Why don't African-Americans pull themselves up by their bootstraps? What bootstraps? They don't have any boots.'"

Chisholm added that she was 11 years old when she heard the word "nigger" for the first time.

"I'll never forget that day as long as I live," she said.

Throughout her speech, Chisholm said she has positive feelings for the United States.

"No one can question my patronage to this country," she said. "I am just a person seeking the real truth of the U.S. Constitution."

Students periodically applauded Chisholm's comments.

"I grew up in the '60s and early '70s," said senior accounting major Bob Riddle. "She was one of the few people to have the guts to say something that was unpopular."

Paul Crawford, 20, a Glendale Community College student, traveled from his home in Phoenix to listen to Chisholm.

"She agrees with a lot of my theories and philosophies," Crawford said.

Law professors to debate on individual's rights

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

The ASU Students of Law Chapter and the Phoenix Lawyers Division of Federalists will host a free debate between two law professors on individual's rights under state constitutions tonight at 7:30.

The debate topic titled, "Expanding Individual Rights Under State Constitutions: Popular Liberty or Judicial Tyranny?", will be addressed by Earl Maltz, a law professor at Rutgers University in New Jersey, and Paul Bender, an ASU law professor.

Law school student Bridget Shelton, involved in organizing the debate, said that an individual's state constitutional rights has become a timely subject in many states, including Arizona.

"In the past, most commentaries have been concentrated on the federal constitution but in the last two years more emphasis has been placed on the individual state's rights," Shelton said.

Shelton added that the debate should be of interest to people other than law students.

"The debate should provide a scholarly discussion on constitutional interpretation but will also be of interest to all students because the interpretation of the state constitution impacts our daily life," Shelton said.

Doug Drury, president of the Phoenix Lawyer Division of Federalists, said Maltz and Bender will discuss whether there are greater rights in the state constitution than in the bill of rights and if that is necessarily a good thing.

He said that expanding individual's states rights can sometimes be a dangerous thing.

Individual's states rights should not contradict federal rights, Drury said, since the loopholes created may allow criminals to walk free.

"Individual rights and liberties are the most important rights people have in the country," Drury said. "And the courts are deciding what rights people have."

The discussion will be presented in standard debate form in the Law College's Great Hall.

Students, administrators plan talks

By DAN NOWICKI
State Press

Student protest organizers met with University administrators Wednesday in an effort to lay the groundwork for future negotiations.

The student contingent at the meeting consisted of College of Liberal Arts and Sciences College Council President Walter Richter, Associated Students of ASU Sens. Chris Stiles and Gloria Ruiz and ASASU President Paul Larson. The ASU administration was represented by Vice President for University Relations Brent Brown and Assistant Dean of Student Affairs Bob Soza.

Richter and Stiles were key organizers of the 53-hour student demonstration against recent tuition hikes which began February 21.

The student representatives presented a list of demands at Tuesday's meeting which call for increased faculty and staff salaries, a financial aid pool for out-of-state students, a tuition rollback, and an ad-hoc task force "to address the relationship between the cost of education and the quality of that education."

The negotiators established an agenda and resolved to meet again next week at an undetermined time and place with a "core negotiating group," consisting of two administrators, two representatives from the Liberal Arts College Council and two representatives from ASASU.

The agenda for next week's meeting includes the following:

- The negotiating team will try to come to a consensus concerning the ad-hoc task force requested by the student protesters.

- The administrative representatives will provide the students with ASU President Lattie Coor's perspective on solving the problems facing the campus.

- The administrative representatives will provide the students with a background paper concerning the correlation between cost and quality of education.

- The administrative representatives will provide the students with copies of the University budget and statistics on minority recruitment and retention at the University.

- The negotiating team will attempt to develop "tactical strategies" in approaching the faculty salary and financial aid issues.

The group members will include Brown, Soza, Richter, Stiles, Larson and Shannon Sellers, the ASASU state relations director.

Richter said he thought Wednesday's meeting "went fair."

"I think we're in a better position to know what we can expect next time," Richter said. "I'm glad Paul Larson and Shannon Sellers are now once again part of the loop."

"We never meant to exclude ASA from the negotiating process," he added.

Stiles agreed.

"We're going to take advantage of the resources ASA and the State Relations Department have at their disposal so that we may provide the clearest, most articulate presentation of the needs of students, faculty and university students throughout Arizona," Stiles said.

"We're doing everything in our power to avoid 'committee-shaft' so that the momentum created by student protesters carries us through the whole process."

Soza also said that the dialogue was "very positive."

"(We have) a lot of common ground and a lot of common interest in these issues," Soza said. "We're looking forward to the next set of meetings."

Regents to hold forum for female staff

By NICOLE CARROLL
State Press

An Arizona Board of Regents commission will hold an open forum at ASU on April 4 for women faculty and staff members to discuss the problems female employees on campus face, such as sexual discrimination, promotion and tenure and the lack of a major campus child care facility.

"Women's groups on all three university campuses will have an opportunity to find out what the commission is doing and express their views of what the commission can do," said Regent Donald Pitt, chairman of the Commission on the Status of Women.

Similar forums will also be held at UofA and NAU.

"It's been done on individual campuses (around the nation) before," said Lorraine Frank, the commissions staff director. "I've been told this is the first statewide effort."

The commission, formed last October, is charged with the responsibility of pinpointing specific women faculty and staff member problems and reporting possible solutions to the full board.

Subcommittees focusing on the campus climate, personnel problems and career development discuss their objectives at the commission's meeting on Tuesday.

Regent Esther Capin, chairwoman of the campus climate subcommittee, said her group is looking at flexible work hours for employees, support for women on campus, cultural diversity among the female workforce, child care and dependent care.

Faculty Senate President-elect Arlene Metha, a member of Capin's subcommittee, said a study of the campus climate will probably be instigated as well.

"The goal of the committee is not just to report what is, but to look at what might be," she said.

Chamorro made it clear she expects Ortega to keep his promise to turn over power and that her government plans to run the army and security forces.

"I'm the one who is going to give orders," said the silver-

The 1978 death of her husband, opposition publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, touched off the revolution that overthrew dictator Anastasio Somoza and put the Sandinistas in power.

ASU schedules Women's History Month in March

By GREMLYN BRADLEY
State Press

ASU is celebrating Women's History Month in March with speakers, lectures and workshops designed to "enlighten people and have fun at the same time," according to Martha Bander, a women's studies committee member.

One of the first events sponsored by women's studies will be a panel discussion on abortion, featuring Ed Buck and other pro-choice speakers. "Abortion: The Past, Present and Future" will be held from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on March 3 in Room 101 of the Nursing Building.

"We're expecting a rather large turnout," Bander said.

She added that pro-life activists are expected to hold a counter-panel discussion two hours prior.

"I'm assuming they're going to invade our panel," she said. "It may not be as peaceful as it was planned."

"A Tribute to Ethnic Women," sponsored by ASU's Cultural Diversity Committee and the University Women's Council, will be held March 26-30. The opening celebration will be from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on March 26 on Cady Mall.

Other highlights of the week include: a Miss Indian ASU Pageant from 1 to 3 p.m. on March 27 in the MU Pima Room; Sen. Carolyn Walker speaking on "Ethnic Diversity in Arizona Higher Education" from 7 to 9 p.m. on March 29 in the MU Alumni Lounge; and an "Afro-Caribbean Dance Demo" featuring dance major students, from 2:30 to 4 p.m. on March 30 on the Student Services Building lawn.

An art exhibit featuring the work of American Indian women also will be shown in the Student Services Building that week.

In the late 1970s, Women's History Month was only a week-long celebration. In 1987, the national event expanded to a month.

This year's theme is "Courageous Voices Echoing in Our Lives." For a complete calendar of events, students can contact the Women's Studies Office.

Although the month is in honor of women's history, Bander said it is not just for women.

"I really feel strongly that men have been ripped off just as much as women have," she said, referring to the lack of historical documents about, and made by, women.

"They're (the men) are missing half of the history, too."

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents on Wednesday:

•A non-student was arrested after he allegedly displayed a dart gun in a threatening manner at about 12:15 a.m. Wednesday after he was refused entry to Manzanita Hall. The weapon was impounded and the man was cited and released on his own recognizance.

•An ASU employee suffered a possible broken arm when she fell down five steps after she caught her right heel on a step at the Purchasing Building. She was treated at Desert Samaritan Hospital in Mesa.

•An ASU student suffered cuts to his arms and left leg Tuesday when he fell off his bicycle on Tyler Mall. He was treated at the scene by paramedics and taken to the Student Health Center.

•A juvenile non-student suffered a cut to his forehead after another youth assaulted him Tuesday in Lot 59. The victim was treated at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital and the suspect, who also was a non-student, was referred to juvenile authorities then released to his parents.

•The Maricopa County Sheriff's Office has recovered a $9,000 vehicle that was reported stolen last week from Lot 17. The car was stripped and abandoned.

•An ASU student's motorcycle sustained $300 in damages when someone accidentally backed his motorcycle into it Tuesday in Lot 15. The motorcycle also knocked over a third motorcycle.

•A thief stole the handlebars from an ASU student's bicycle and cut the brake and shifting cables between Sunday and Tuesday. Loss is $150.

•A thief stole an ASU student's $80 pair of sunglasses Friday from a computer site at the Moeur Building where he left them unattended.

Tempe police reported the following incidents on Wednesday:

•A Mesa woman was injured critically Tuesday when she was thrown from her car after it collided into the rear of a pickup. The woman's car then was knocked into oncoming traffic where it was hit by another car.

Deborah Gloden, 23, was taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn after the 9 p.m. accident in the 2500 block of East Southern Avenue.

The driver of the pickup, Steve Frajio, 51, of Tempe, was taken to the same hospital as Gloden but was in serious condition. The driver of the third vehicle, Mary M. Lewis, 59, of North Dakota was treated and released at Desert Samaritan Hospital in Mesa.

•Eight youths robbed a convenience store of three 12-packs of beer and assorted junk food Sunday after one of the juveniles swung beer at a clerk's head. It missed.

The incident occurred about 7 p.m. at the Circle K store at 1125 S. Terrace Road after the 28-year-old clerk tried to keep them from leaving the store. The suspects then filled their arms with potato chips and candy before fleeing.

ASU female sexually assaulted in PV East

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 19-year-old ASU student was sexually assaulted Monday night in her room at Palo Verde East Residence Hall by a man who went to visit her, police said.

ASU Police Chief Bill Bess said the victim knew the suspect, who is a non-student, in the alleged incident which occurred at about 7 p.m. It wasn't reported to police Tuesday night, Bess said.

No arrests have been made and the case will be forwarded to the Maricopa County Attorney's Office which will determine whether to file formal charges, he said.

Bess said no weapons were used in the assault and investigators do not believe alcohol played a factor in the case.

The sexual assault is the first reported to ASU police this year. Students reported 13 sexual assaults on campus in 1989.

Fine Arts Center receives award

By KRISTIE YOUNG
 State Press

ASU's Nelson Fine Arts Center has won one of 19 American Institute of Architects' 1990 Honor Awards — a recognition considered to be the most important and prestigious an individual building can receive.

The awards were presented last week during a four-day AIA "Accent on Architecture" celebration held in Washington, D. C. Prince Charles, known for his criticism of modern architecture, was the keynote speaker.

The winners were selected from more than 600 entries nationwide that included two schools, five single-family residences, a recreational sports facility, a skyscraper, a winery, a church, a park pavilion and a band shell.

"In a word, this award program reflects the essence of American hybridization as architects continue to seek an authentic American architecture," said Stanley Tigerman, FAIA jury chairman.

The awards were given to buildings that approached the level of "art form" yet still held their functional prerequisites.

The jury that judged the contest wrote that the Nelson Center is "mysterious and intriguing . . . (the center) evokes images as diverse as ancient cities and drive-in movie theaters.

"As romantic and colorful as the desert Southwest, this vibrant city of art awakens imagination and stirs the senses."

The award was received by Victor Zafra, president for business affairs.

"It was a real honor for ASU to be recognized," he said. "The building has been featured in many publications — we've always known it would win."

Zafra said that ASU has received national attention for both the building and the award.

"The award brings recognition to ASU," he said. "It shows that the University is willing to invest time and money into creating brilliant works of art."

Zafra said that the Nelson Fine Arts Center is a "very controversial building."

"Some people comment on how beautiful and intriguing the center is, while others still ask when the building will be finished," he said.

When the center was first built last spring, several complaints were voiced about its color and appearance. Several students thought the building resembled a prison.

James Rapp, assistant dean of ASU's College of Architecture, said that the controversy over the building was "not surprising."

"When anything new and different is introduced into a society, it becomes controversial," he said. "The people had to get used to it."

The center was designed by Antoine Predock of Albuquerque, N. M., and cost $16.4 million to build.

Quake

The pane broke. That sort of thing."

The side of a one-story auto parts building collapsed in La Verne, 10 miles from the epicenter said Mayor Jon Blickenstaff, adding that nobody was hurt. The wall as measured 20 feet by 80 feet and was made of unreinforced concrete, at least 80 years old.

At Ontario International Airport, a few miles from the epicenter, ceiling panels and signs fell, and windows cracked in the operations tower, said Manager Michael DiGirolamo.

A small rock slide on Interstate 10 in Pomona, not far from the epicenter, startled motorists, causing minor accidents, the Highway Patrol said. Another small rockslide closed the road through Soledad Canyon, 35 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

A boulder twice the size of a car fell onto Angeles Crest Highway in the San Gabriel Mountains, blocking half of the two-lane rural road.

It was the strongest earthquake in California since a 7.1-magnitude quake struck the San Francisco Bay region Oct. 17, reawakening fears throughout the state of a massive quake scientists predict in coming years. The San Francisco quake, which hit as the first game of the World Series was about to begin, killed 67 people, injured about 3,000 and did $7 billion in damage.

The worst recent Southern California quake struck the Whittier area Oct. 1, 1987. It measured 5.9 on the Richter scale and, together with a 5.3-magnitude aftershock Oct. 4, killed eight people, injured more than 200 and caused $358 million in damage.

Wednesday's quake, felt as a rolling motion in Los Angeles, came three hours after a smaller quake in the same area.

The main shock was followed by more than a dozen aftershocks of magnitude 2.3 or greater within 2½ hours, Caltech said.

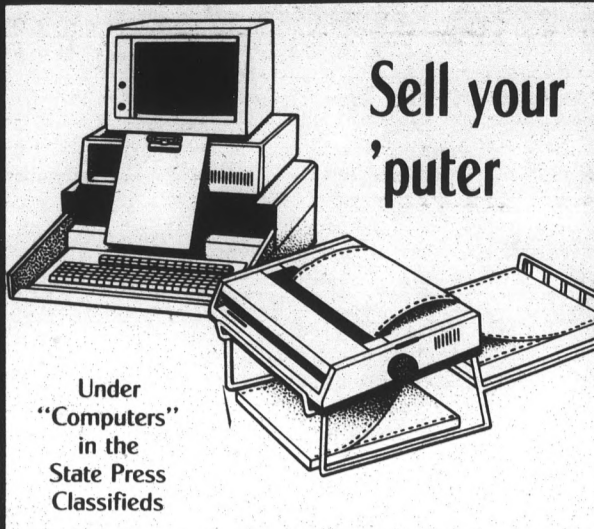

U. S. Geological Survey scientist Lucile Jones said that based on historical records of past California earthquakes there was a 5 percent chance the main shock would be followed by a larger quake within three days. However, the odds drop off rapidly so that by Thursday morning the likelihood of such a quake probably would be at most 2 or 3 percent, she said.

Southern California Edison said 6,000 electrical customers lost power but only 1,300 remained without service 90 minutes after the main shock.

Southern California Edison Co., operators of the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station just south of San Clemente, reported an "unusual event" to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Both reactors at the plant continued to run and power supply was uninterrupted, said Edison spokesman Bob Goodlow. An "unusual event" is the lowest of four emergency designations for nuclear plants.

Phone service to thousands of customers was disrupted, but Cati Flynn of Pacific Bell said it was likely caused by callers jamming lines.

Soviet Land

piece of land.

According to the law, land can be distributed by the kolkhoz — a state collective farm — or by the local city council in the case of city dwellers or others who desire to hold land. Religious groups also have the right to acquire land.

However, land is not actually purchased but leased, and is subject to taxes. Lease prices will be set by the state and sale of the plot will be strictly forbidden, the law says. The land can be bequeathed to the holder's children. But the children would not be allowed to divide the plot and the land can be revoked if the state determines that it has not been utilized in a "rational" way or if the holder seriously pollutes it.

Under the law, foreigners also are not allowed to purchase land, as they are in some parts of Eastern Europe.

During Wednesday's debate, one Supreme Soviet deputy said the law did not help move the Soviet Union toward a market economy since it did not allow for the transfer of land from one citizen to another.

Another law regulating private property is still in committee for revision.

change, and for anyone having to work outside," said police department spokesman Walt Monegan.

"From all indications, it looks like it was a short burst, said Dave McDowell of the state Division of Emergency Services in Wasilla. "Ash was reported at the Eklutna Fish Hatchery. Two generator units were shut down at Beluga" across the Cook Inlet from Anchorage.

The Drift River Oil Terminal was evacuated as a precaution, he said.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone, expressing concern that jurors wouldn't be able to get home because of limited driving visibility, recessed the criminal trial of Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood two hours early.

Miller said the observatory was about to upgrade its alert status when the volcano erupted because of "a general increase" in seismic activity, he said.

But Miller said scientists' ability to predict the mountain's activity remains limited because of equipment damage from an eruption last week.

"We still don't have our summit station," he said.

The 10,197-foot peak sprang back to life in mid-December after being quiet for more than two decades, and has erupted intermittently since.

Previous eruptions coated the Kenai Peninsula, south of Anchorage, and areas north of Anchorage with up to a half-inch of ash, but the state's largest city was spared any fallout.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An elementary school principal and her assistant sat all day on the roof to pay off a bet. Pupils were delighted but the head custodian wasn't too pleased.

"They called for blankets, legal pads, and their hats kept blowing off and I had to take them back up," custodian Elizabeth Sheffield said of Monday's stunt.

"Next year, I think I'll ask them to put me on the roof."

Principal Janet Wynne agreed to spend the day on the roof if the 350 pupils at Jackie Carden Elementary School read 2,000 books in six weeks. They finished in two weeks.

Her assistant, Marsha Miholovich, then agreed to join her on the roof if the students read another 2,000 books. The children surpassed their goal by 75 books within another two weeks.

The two administrators passed the time sunbathing, listening to the radio, snacking, and reading books of their own.

Devils sweep Raiders, finish homestand 6-1

By SETH SULKA
State Press

The sixth-ranked ASU baseball team scored three runs in the eighth inning as it completed a two-game sweep of Texas Tech, 8-6, Wednesday in front of 1,101 baseball fans at Packard Stadium.

Much more to Head Coach Jim Brock's liking, the Sun Devils (16-7 overall, 2-3 Six-Pac) shook off Tuesday's sluggish performance as they scored five times in the first three innings.

"Even if we had lost the ball game, I still was not upset with the effort," Brock said. "The effort was encouraging. We came out right after them and scored some runs."

Actually, though, it was the Red Raiders (8-7) who came out sizzling, scoring five times in the first two innings.

ASU starter Steve Brody helped Texas Tech's rally by giving up back-to-back walks with two outs in the first inning. Left fielder Joe Mendazona scored the two runners with a double.

The Sun Devils responded with three runs in their half of the first off of center fielder Mike Kelly's fourth home run of the season.

However, the Red Raiders, who have lost six consecutive games after an 8-1 start, regained the lead with center fielder Jeff Boydston's two-run homer. Wayne Ball relieved Brody and gave up three singles and a run before ending Tech's spurt.

After the Red Raiders took a 6-5 lead with a run in the fourth inning, both teams went into a drought for the next three innings.

ASU's third pitcher of the game, freshman Tony Pena, kept the Sun Devils within one run retiring 10 consecutive batters before Danny Jordan led off the eighth inning with a single.

Pena, who was expected to be ASU's closer coming into the season, had excellent command of his pitches allowing just two hits and striking out three over 3 2/3 innings.

"My pitches were moving well and I was able to place them," said the Santa Ana, Calif., native. "When I first started out this year, I was sort of nervous. But now I feel really comfortable."

Texas Tech made a threat in the eighth when it put runners at first and second. But ASU second baseman Fernando Vina used the hidden ball trick to get Tim Tadlock out and end the Red Raider threat.

"I have tried it a few times in last few weeks but the umpires have missed it," Vina said. "He (second base umpire Mike Pietro) almost missed it but luckily he saw the ball in my glove. It really helped us out of a jam."

The Sun Devils took the lead for good getting three runs in the eighth when Jon Halland drew a two-out walk and scored on Dave Robson's double. Tommy Adams then drove in Robson and scored on Vina's triple to secure the win for Kip Vaughn (1-2).

ASU's rally ended when shortstop Anthony Manahan was called out on strikes on a ball that seemed to be out of the strike zone.

Brock also thought that the ball was outside and was ejected from the game by home plate umpire Jeff Jenkins after he pleaded his case.

"It was absolutely a bad call," Brock said. "The ball was at least a foot outside. I can't ask my players to not argue and just hustle off the field after a call like that. I have to stand up for them and if I'm ever going to stand up for them, it's going to be on that one."

Womens basketball team closes season on road

By KRISTEN TIMMONS
State Press

The ASU womens basketball team travels to the Pacific Northwest this weekend for its final road trip of the season and the team is hoping for their second conference road win.

The next Pac-10 win for the Sun Devils would tie their record for the highest conference win total (five).

ASU (12-12 overall, 4-10 Pac-10) face the Oregon Ducks (16-9, 8-6) tonight in Eugene. The game will be televised live on ESPN at 10 p.m. The Sun Devils downed the Ducks 81-68 Feb. 3 in Tempe.

ASU is coming off Pac-10 losses to No. 3 Stanford and the unranked California Golden Bears. Senior Carolyn DeHoff had a season-high 19 points and tied a career-high with 13 rebounds against the Bears.

Oregon's star center, Stephanie Kasperski, a 6-foot-7 senior from Hamburg, West Germany, is questionable for the game against the Sun Devils as a result of a torn muscle in her foot.

ASU Head Coach Maura McHugh said that the offensive shutdown of Kasperski was the key to the Sun Devil victory against the Ducks last month. "I thought we did a good job as far as not letting her get offensive boards on us," McHugh said.

Kasperski, who is second in the conference in shooting percentage, was only allowed one offensive rebound and shot three for 13 from the field in the two teams' last meeting. This is something Sun Devil Assistant Coach Bob Clark said she won't do again.

"She's not going to shoot three for 13 again," Clark said. "We would like her to, but I doubt if she will."

Oregon Head Coach Elwin Heiny said Kasperski "represents a good share of the points and she's intimidating on defense. She's the leader on the floor."

McHugh said that the fact that ASU has already beaten the Ducks will be instrumental in a victory tonight. "We know that we can beat them because we have," McHugh said. "And we need to get a win out of this weekend, if not two."

"We're going to have to take care of the ball and make every possession count. We're also going to have to keep them off the free throw line. Our goal is to get to the line more times than our opponent."

ASU tries to end 5-game skid

By PAUL CORO
State Press

As if overcoming its recent performances was not enough of a burden, the ASU basketball team has not received any help from its schedule.

After dropping two in Los Angeles three weeks ago, the Sun Devils opened three consecutive road games with nationally-ranked UofA at the McKale Center, where the Wildcats have now won 45 games in a row.

Now, after extending its losing streak to five games in the Bay area last week, ASU comes home to the Pac-10's two hottest teams — Oregon State and Oregon.

The Sun Devils (12-13 overall, 5-11 Pac-10) must pull off upsets tonight and Saturday if they are to avoid their seventh straight losing season. Their chances appear slim as Gary Payton and the 16th-ranked Oregon State (21-4, 14-2) visit the University Activity Center tonight at 7:30.

"We're just trying to find a way here to finish up on a positive note," Head Coach Bill Frieder said. "Regarding last week, we didn't shoot the ball well. Outside of that, we played about as good as we can. We're just always fighting from behind and we just can't get over the hump."

ASU can not afford to shoot the way it has in its five-game slide (34.5 percent) against the Pac-10 leading Beavers. Much of the scoring blues have followed forward Alex Austin, who has shot 28 percent from the floor and 16 percent from 3-point range in the last five games.

"When the guy you build your team around doesn't shoot well and you don't have a lot of depth or a lot of things that you can change, you just suffer," Frieder said.

After coaching the nation's top field-goal percentage team the previous two years at Michigan, Frieder said his team's struggle to make baskets has been the toughest thing for him to contend with this season.

On the other end of the spectrum is fast-breaking OSU, a team that shoots over 50 percent while averaging 80.4 points per game. Payton is the Beavers' definitive leader, as well as being a candidate for national player of the year honors.

Payton is coming off an awesome 58-point performance against USC last week. The senior point guard leads the Pac-10 in scoring (27.1), assists (8.6) and steals (3.6).

"He's truly one of the great guards in the country," Frieder said. "He'll definitely go in the top 10 of the draft, maybe the lottery."

"We just have to contain him a little. We're not going to stop him. He's going to score points. In a situation like that, you just try to make sure he doesn't have the great, great game and you try to control the others."

The Beavers are not ranked 16th on Payton's merit alone. He receives plenty of help from backcourt mate Will Brantley, who averages 11.4 points per game, and forward Earl Martin, who chips in 12.8 a game.

"Brantley makes Payton so good because he can really have a 20-point game and so can Martin," Frieder said. "They're very tough to contain because they're all so quick and you can't key on the others to help on Payton or else Martin or Brantley will burn you."

Marting makes the right choice, picks tennis

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

Ever since Daniel Marting can remember, he has been a sports fanatic.

As a pre-teen, the junior ASU mens tennis player competed in basketball, football and had extensive experience in baseball.

Marting

The experience he received in baseball came from within his family. Marting's father, Gerald, was a two time all-conference baseball player at Southern Illinois and was drafted by the Cleveland Indians, but refused the offer in order to start a family.

Marting's brother, Brian, played for two years on the junior varsity Sun Devil baseball team.

Marting said he knew he had found the sport he would stick with throughout his collegiate career when he and his parents took up tennis recreationally in the mid-1970s.

"When I was starting high school, I chose to go with tennis only because it is a year-round sport," the 1987 Phoenix Central High graduate said. "I like how it is an individual sport — when you are out there on the court, it is just you and the opponent."

Marting's parents, who live in Phoenix, currently play in leagues around the Valley.

During Marting's freshman year, he injured his hamstring and was unable to compete for half the season. When he recovered from the injury, he said he began having trouble with his shoulder and was diagnosed as having tendonitis.

The tendonitis never kept him from competing during his sophomore year, but he said the constant pain he endured hindered his performance in those years.

"I was playing, but I was not 100 percent physically — I was 80 percent," he said, adding that his serves were weak during that time period. "It was tough to get it going and I was really sore all the time."

Currently, Marting is playing in the Sun Devil No. 3 position and said he has completely recovered from his injuries. He said he learned a lot about staying healthy and remaining flexible at all times during his unhealthy years.

ASU mens tennis Head Coach Lou Belken, who has coached Marting since he was 15 years old, said he is pleased with the amount of progress Marting has shown in his three seasons at ASU.

"He has made a lot of progress both physically and mentally," Belken said. "He has posted some wins over some big-name players, and his is doing things now that will allow him to still come up with great wins."

Marting's biggest strength as a player, Belken said, is his quickness and his movement, while his weakness lies in his mental attitude on the court.

"Danny is constantly learning more about himself as a person," Belken said. "On the court, he often battles with himself, but he has gotten a lot better."

Before he graduates from ASU, Marting said he would like to compete in singles and doubles at the NCAAs. His ultimate goal is to assist the Sun Devil squad in a national championship victory.

After graduating, he would like to find a job related to his major, which is financing. He came to ASU on an academic scholarship, after graduating from Central in three and a half years.

Icecats spoil ASU's season with another sweep

By ROBERT LADD
State Press

The ASU ice hockey team's hopes of ending its season with a winning streak was ruined by the UofA.

Last weekend in Tucson, the Icecats swept the two-game series, 7-3 and 11-5. With the two victories, UofA took out the broom for the second consecutive season.

Although ASU lost the weekend series, it still had a winning record for the 89-90 season (15-12 overall, 15-8 against Collegiate Club Hockey teams).

Ice Devil Assistant Coach Gary Cornelson said he is pleased as a whole with the season and the overall effort of the players.

"We had a good record this year," Cornelson said. "I'm looking forward to this being the kickoff to better things in the future."

ASU's Keith Pazul scored the first Ice Devil goal in Saturday's game to even the score at 1-1.

UofA scored three more goals in the first period, but the Ice Devils stayed right with them with two goals from Dave Sarp and one from Kevin Hicks.

UofA scored twice in the second period with the last one being very questionable. With 7:19 left in the period, Icecat Corey Oleson's shot hit the post and fell in the crease as junior goalie Matt Malec fell on the puck apparently stopping it from entering the net.

"It (the puck) was not in the net," Ice Devil Head Coach Jim Manguso said. "That was the turning point of the game, it gave the crowd its first chance to really make noise."

With 5:26 left in the period, junior Dave Peterson assisted by Sarp, closed the gap to 6-5. This was the closest ASU would come as UofA exploded in the third period with five goals making the final score 11-5.

"The players showed they could do everything right and stay with them (UofA)," Cornelson said. "We just ran out of legs at the end and UofA began to score."

Malec saved a total of 72 shots on goal over the weekend, 36 each night.

"We have no complaints about the season," Cornelson said. "There was a lot of dedication and improvement throughout the season. The players did everything you could hope for as a coach."

Ducks

Oregon made 29 of 36 from the charity stripe in last month's contest, whereas the Sun Devils only shot 16 for 26. Four freshman also combined for a total of 35 points.

McHugh said that it is imperative that she gets a full 40 minutes of play from the team. "I think we've got to get it from everybody," she said. "We can't really look to just one person. The first time we won, it was a team effort and this time it's going to have to be the same thing."

Beavers

Sun Devil point guard Mike Redhair will start on Payton, but Frieder said Brian Camper and Matt Anderson will also cover the 6-foot-4 Oakland, Calif., native, who is 42 assists away from Sherman Douglas' NCAA career assist record.

Anderson, who is still recovering from a January knee injury, was the only ASU player to show signs of breaking out of his slump last week.

"I think Anderson played about the best he played this last week and moved on (the knee) the best in some time but still is getting a lot of swelling," Frieder said.

The Sun Devils are in a peculiar position. They could help rival UofA, who is one game back of the Beavers, by pulling off a surprise win tonight. OSU can clinch at least a tie for the Pac-10 championship with a victory.

In the two teams' last meeting (a 87-64 Beaver win in Corvallis), Emilio Kovacic led ASU in scoring with 14 points. Kovacic has played in just five games since the Nov. 30 season opener.

- The Beavers have won eight straight games against ASU
- The Sun Devils were at one time 6-1 in the UAC, but has lost four of the last five at home.
- As the Pac-10 stands now, ASU would open the conference tournament March 8 against Washington State, who has lost 15 games in a row.
- The Sun Devils are the only Pac-10 team not on television this week.
- ASU has not lost a game when outrebounding its opponent, shooting better from the field or led at halftime.
- The Sun Devils are ranked 98th in the nation by the USA Today computer rankings.

The Sun Devils' top reserves have come on strong for McHugh, averaging 30 points and 11 rebounds per contest over the last five games.

"I expect that we can come out and beat Oregon and I think the team knows that too," McHugh said. "The effort is going to have to be there and we're going to have to play hard."

Heiny said the Ducks will have to have a higher shooting percentage and limit turnovers in order to beat ASU. "We would like to get a little revenge. But we have a hard time matching the Sun Devils. They battle to the end."

OSU All-American guard Gary Payton scored 58 points last week against USC.

Saguaro tops Corona for state title, 88-78

By The Associated Press

Brian Forehand scored 28 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead Scottsdale Saguaro past Tempe Corona del Sol 88-78 Wednesday in the Class 5A state championship game at the University Activity Center.

Forehand made 9 of 15 shots from the field and sank 10 of 12 free throws, including six of seven in the final 1:20 to give Saguaro (22-8) its first state championship ever.

Defending state champion Corona (25-6) was outshot and out-rebounded and couldn't recover down the stretch.

Saguaro made 60 percent of its shots while the Aztecs were held under 50 percent.

Doug Harris led the Aztecs with 29, including four three-pointers.

Saguaro scored the last seven points of the third quarter to take a 65-53 advantage into the final period.

But Corona closed the gap to 76-72 with 1:37 left on Todd Zemlock's 12-footer.

Just 17 seconds later, Harris fouled Forehand, who sank both free throws and Jimmy Kolyszko scored a layup with 1:05 left, giving Saguaro a 80-72 lead.

Harris' fourth three-pointer cut the lead to five, but Corona would get no closer.

The Aztecs had led by as much 10, 26-16, midway through the second quarter but Saguaro ran off 14 straight points to take a 30-26 advantage. The Sabercats led 41-35 at halftime.

Derek Erickson had 19 points and four rebounds, while Kolyszko added 17 points and six rebounds and Danny Andersen had 15.

For Corona, David Harris had 15 points and Zemlock added 11.
