Assistance into a new division because "there's a potential injustice going down." The memo, issued under the title of "Senate Alert," said the proposed move from the Student Affairs to the Academic Affairs division is "only the first step in chipping away at the existence of Student Affairs" and urged students to "mobilize the troops and stop this from happening."

"I'm just trying to get the word out," Pressendo said. "Personally, I am appalled by (the proposed change), but what the Senate and college councils do about it is up to them."

"It reeks of closed-door backroom politics to me," Pressendo continued. "It's quite possible that (ASU President Lattie) Coor will see that also."

Coor is expected to decide the fate of the

ROTC ban bid rejected

Committee to back motion against homosexual policy

By TENNY TATUSIAN

A Faculty Senate committee decided Monday that it will not support a proposal seeking the elimination of ROTC on campus, but it will back an addendum urging faculty members to lobby the government in an effort to eliminate the military's discrimination against homosexuals.

The Curriculum Academic Program Committee voted 10-2 to send the measure back to the Faculty Senate meeting March 26 without support after receiving a recommendation by a subcommittee that heard arguments from members on both sides of the issue last week.

"We have a responsibility to educate leaders in diverse fields, including the military," said Barry Van Hook, chairman of the ROTC subcommittee. "We couldn't justify removing the program."

The committee made its decision based on five points suggested by the subcommittee:

- The ROTC is not outdated and still serves a purpose.
- ROTC serves a defensible function, as shown by the fact that two-thirds of all management-level personnel in the military are provided by ROTC.

"Without these people, the military would be seriously understaffed," Van Hook said.

Mack dropped from team over charges of theft, fraud

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

ASU basketball player Sam Mack, who has been a suspect in two separate criminal cases in less than a year, was arrested on theft and fraud charges Sunday and subsequently has been dropped from the team, authorities said Monday.

Phoenix police said Mack, 19, was arrested at about noon Sunday, along with former ASU football player Fedel Underwood, 23, at Park 'N Swap, a flea market at Phoenix Greyhound Park, 3801 E. Washington St. The pair are accused by police of allegedly trying to purchase more than $1,400 worth of gold jewelry with a stolen credit card.

Mack, a junior redshirt transfer from Iowa State University, was released Monday from Maricopa County Jail, where he was held on suspicion of theft of a credit card, fraudulent use of a credit card and forgery.

Underwood, an offensive lineman who played his final season for the Sun Devils last fall, was booked on charges of fraudulent use of a credit card and conspiracy. He also was released.

Mack, a communication major who lives on campus, declined to comment Monday. Attempts to contact Underwood, a senior sociology major who lives in Phoenix, were unsuccessful.

"It's a rather elaborate scheme," Phoenix police spokesman Officer Leo Speliopoulos said of Sunday's incident.

Speliopoulos said that according to a police report on the incident, Mack allegedly stole a credit card from a purse belonging to ASU student Karen L. Stoddard, 19, during a party Saturday. Speliopoulos said he did not know where the party took place, and Stoddard declined to comment Monday about the theft.

According to the report, Speliopoulos said Mack and Underwood allegedly agreed to use the card and Mack wrote a note that was supposed to be from Stoddard, saying he had permission to use the card. The students reportedly were going to have a friend answer any telephone calls merchants might make concerning the card, he said.

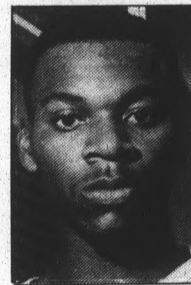

About 9 a.m. Sunday, the athletes went to the swap meet, where Speliopoulos said Mack later allegedly tried to buy the jewelry from a vendor.

"The vendor became suspicious and called police," Speliopoulos said, adding that off-duty officers working security there took the students into custody without incident.

Meanwhile, ASU athletic officials issued a statement Monday morning announcing that Mack had been dropped from the Sun Devil basketball squad. In addition, Mack's scholarship will be terminated at the end of this semester, an official said.

"I don't have any more time for Sam Mack," ASU basketball Head Coach Bill Frieder told a small group of reporters at the UAC during an informal gathering to discuss the team's NIT bid.

Mack had already been suspended indefinitely by Frieder in November 1989, after University police named him as a suspect in an alleged sexual assault of an ASU student Nov. 5 at Mariposa Hall. Mack, who was not arrested in the case, has remained suspended even though the Maricopa County

Attorney's Office declined to prosecute him.

Mack, a 6-foot-6, 210-pound forward, played only one game as a Sun Devil. He was the team's leading scorer during an intrasquad game in November.

Mack was a stand-out player at Iowa State before transferring to ASU last summer. He was a controversial recruit by Frieder because he had been acquitted in July of armed robbery and kidnapping charges in connection with the March 1989 hold-up of an Ames, Iowa, Burger King.

He was shot twice by Ames police as he fled the restaurant. He still has a bullet lodged in his right leg.

Mack was arrested along with former ISU football player Levin White, who also was shot.

A Story County, Iowa, jury decided that Mack was coerced into the robbery by White, who pleaded guilty to first-degree robbery and is serving a 25-year sentence. White testified against Mack at the trial.

Currently, the Academic Affairs division is in charge of all academic departments on campus, while Student Affairs consists of 12 departments that revolve around student-life concerns. ASASU is part of Student Affairs.

ASU's Council of Deans has asked Coor to consider moving the Undergraduate Admissions and Student Financial Aid departments out of Student Affairs and into the Academic Affairs division of the University because the deans feel that financial aid and admissions are important parts of a student's academic life.

Critics of the proposed shift, including ASASU President Paul Larson, claim that it will eventually result in alterations to admission standards and to the process of awarding

NFL to pick host of '93 Superbowl

Tempe committee to make offer to bring championship to Valley

By NICOLE CARROLL
State Press

National Football League team owners will decide today if the 1993 Superbowl, which is expected to generate more than $120 million in local business revenue, will be held at Sun Devil Stadium.

Gov. Rose Mofford and members of the Superbowl '93 committee will make the Tempe-site presentation today to the owners, who are meeting in Orlando, Fla. San Diego and Los Angeles are the two other cities vying to host the game.

ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris said the Superbowl will be held at ASU eventually, but he's not sure if it will be as soon as 1993.

"It's a matter of when, not if," he said.

Harris said ASU has more available land to offer the NFL than San Diego or Los Angeles, but that the other two cities have the experience of hosting a Superbowl game.

In addition, many Valley groups are urging the NFL to chose a site other than Tempe as host of the Superbowl because Arizona does not have a paid Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

Tempe Mayor Mitchell said he thinks ASU has a good chance of being selected as the Superbowl site and that the resulting benefits will impact all the surrounding cities as well.

"It will be a Valley-wide effort," Mitchell said. "There will be instant name recognition (for the Valley). It's going to get a great deal of publicity."

The Superbowl committee of each city must supply the NFL with information concerning lodging, transportation facilities, climate and stadium information and make a bid of proceeds and complimentary services. The entire package being presented to the NFL by the city of Tempe is worth approximately $13.5 million, Harris said.

He said that figure includes revenues generated by ticket sales at $125 each, complimentary hotel rooms for both teams, free accommodations for NFL owners at their meeting before the game and 70 police officers paid for by the city of Tempe for the event.

The NFL also requires at least 20,000 square feet of working press room. This would require that Lot 59 be closed for up to one week before the game, which would wipe out almost 5,000 parking spaces during the second week of the spring semester.

Harris has said the committee is examining several ideas to remedy the parking situation, including having students park in satellite locations and be bused to ASU, utilizing empty parking spaces in campus parking structures and the possible use of parking made available by the city of Tempe's Rio Salado project.

financial aid.

The Student Affairs search committee is in the process of replacing former Student Affairs Vice President Betty Turner Asher, who left ASU last summer to become president of the University of South Dakota. The search is scheduled to continue Wednesday, when the committee will narrow the field to three- to five applicants.

Committee members say they need a decision on the departmental shift by then, so that they will have an accurate job description of the vice president's position.

Pressendo said it's likely that a resolution concerning the issue will be presented to the Senate at tonight's general session.

"I feel (the proposed change) definitely does a disservice to the student body," Pressendo said. "Why fix something if it already works?"

Pressendo said he has heard no good reasons for the proposed change, and took special exception to ASU Provost Richard Peck's comment that faculty members will be more willing to get involved with student advising if the departments are moved.

"I don't buy that at all," he said. "Organizational structure alone will not dictate faculty involvement."

"I hope the decision is to either postpone and investigate it more thoroughly or throw the whole thing out the window," he added.

Pressendo added, however, that he would be less opposed to the change if the decision was reached after extensive research and student involvement.

"This is just the preliminary stage, but they should have talked to the people that it's going to affect."

Poindexter ripped document, North testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver North conceded Monday that he saw John Poindexter "tear ... in two" a politically embarrassing document that showed U. S. involvement in a 1985 Hawk missile shipment to Iran.

Poindexter, President Reagan's national security adviser in 1986, is accused of concealing the U. S. role in the shipment of 18 Hawk missiles in discussions with Congress on the same day he destroyed the document.

The presidential "finding" that bore Reagan's signature depicts the transaction with Iran as a straight arms-for-hostages trade, contradicting Reagan's vow never to make deals with terrorists.

"You were present when John Poindexter in his office ... ripped" the document "into shreds?" asked Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb.

"Not the way you describe," North said.

"You ... saw" Poindexter "tear up the original finding?" asked Webb.

"Tear it in two," replied North.

"He threw it in a waste basket behind his desk or put it in a burn bag?" asked Webb.

"I think he just put it on his desk," North said.

U. S. District Judge Harold Greene rebuked North several times for "quibbles" with Webb over minor facts and for repeatedly failing to remember significant ones.

"Almost every time a question is asked, he says he can't recall," the judge complained of North, who had been declared a hostile witness. "It's like pulling teeth."

Prosecutors charge that Poindexter destroyed the document authorizing the November 1985 Hawk missile shipment the same day he told lawmakers he had known nothing of the deal until more than a month after it happened.

The retired Navy rear admiral also is accused of obstructing Congress and making false statements in connection with statements to lawmakers.

North reluctantly conceded that his former boss saw the false chronology prepared by the White House for answering queries about the unraveling Iran-Contra affair.

The chronology also falsely stated that the U. S. government was not involved in the Hawk shipment.

North also testified that Poindexter discussed with top Reagan administration officials a "cover story" that concealed details of the Hawk shipment the day before he briefed lawmakers.

A CIA document reflecting this "cover story" was discussed at a meeting in Poindexter's White House office on Nov. 20, 1986, that was attended by the late CIA Director William Casey and other top officials, North said.

North said his concern was that the U. S. role in the Hawks shipment remain hidden out of concern for the lives of the hostages.

North explained that Iran had been unhappy with the Hawks and that the U. S. government wanted to dissociate itself from that shipment.

Deposed ruler leaves Haiti; woman nominated for seat

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Deposed ruler Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril flew to Florida in exile Monday and the army caved in to civilian opposition demands that he be replaced with the first woman president in Haiti's troubled history.

In a ceremony at army headquarters carried on Haitian state television, opposition leaders gave the Army High Command a letter nominating Supreme Court Justice Ertha Pascal-Trouillot, 46, as provisional president.

Maj. Gen. Herard Abraham, the army chief of staff to whom Avril handed control after resigning Saturday, said he hoped to turn over power by Tuesday "so that the people can have a government of their choice."

"I am very happy that the Haitian people with their army were able to achieve this," said Abraham, who appeared on a second-floor balcony of army headquarters with opposition leaders. He did not mention Pascal-Trouillot by name, but clearly indicated the army accepted her nomination to lead Haiti, the Western Hemisphere's poorest country.

Wild cheers broke out from the crowd, which chanted "Liberty! Liberty!"

Excluding Avril and Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, who assumed power when dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to France four years ago, Haiti has had 38 presidents, nearly all military, since 1804. Haiti, the first slave nation to become independent, has also had two emperors, one king and a governor-general. The army wielded such political clout that the Duvalier dynasty created the dread secret police, the Tonton Macoutes, to offbalance the regular army.

Until now, no civilian opposition has taken control of the government without the military playing a major role.

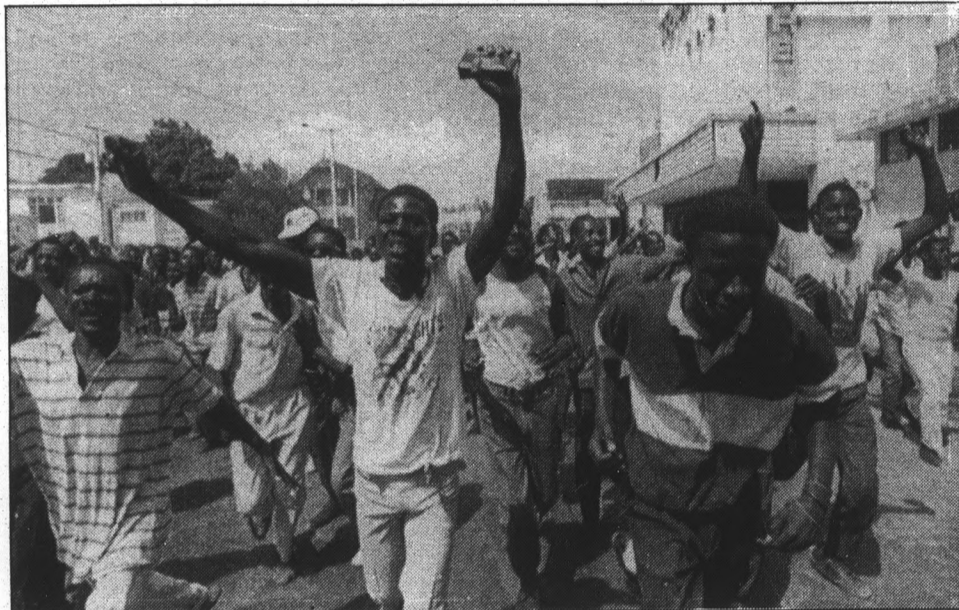

Unity Assembly, the opposition coalition that put forward Pascal-Trouillot, announced on radio she would be inaugurated at the Palace of Justice at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The coalition also said a general strike it called for Monday before Avril left this impoverished Caribbean country of 5.1 million residents would end at midnight.

The provisional government is to prepare Haiti, which shares the island of Hispaniola with the Dominican Republic, for national elections.

Avril and his family arrived aboard a U. S. C-141 transport plane at Homestead Air Force Base, 25 miles south of Miami, at 8:20 a.m. and left at 3:30 p.m. — destination unknown. A U. S. government official speaking on condition of anonymity said Avril left Florida.

Avril's departure followed a week of political turmoil that left at least 24 people dead. His military government ruled Haiti

Jubilant Haitians run through the streets of Port-Au-Prince Monday following the departure of ousted strongman Gen. Prosper Avril and an announcement that a new ruler had been chosen. Haiti's military leadership and a civilian political coalition agreed to name female Supreme Court Justice Ertha Pascal-Trouillot as new president.

— often harshly — for 18 months.

Thousands of people milled about this capital city of 1 million, which had been deserted before Avril's departure because of the violence.

Youths danced to meringue music featuring revolutionary themes such as "The General's Gone" and "Uproot the Killers." The mood of the city, however, appeared to be one of disbelief — not jubilation.

Radio stations reported instances of youths building flaming barricades and pillaging a government food warehouse, but the incidents were far from the bloody clashes of the previous seven days.

On Monday, the Unity Assembly, an opposition coalition instrumental in Avril's downfall, submitted its choice of Pascal-Trouillot — the only woman on the 12-member Supreme Court — to the Army High Command.

Chile's new president steering clear of post-repression trials

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — New President Patricio Aylwin pledged respect for human rights Monday in a speech to a huge gathering celebrating the rebirth of democracy in Chile, but indicated he will avoid holding trials for past abuses.

Singing, flag-waving, sometimes weeping Chileans packed the 82,000-seat National Stadium, five miles southeast of downtown Santiago, to hear Aylwin — a site that long served as a dark symbol of bloody political repression.

Aylwin, a 71-year-old centrist Christian Democrat, became president Sunday, ending 16½ years of authoritarian rule by right-wing Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

Moscow 'alarmed' but won't use force; Vilnius won't back down

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leaders pledged Monday not to use force to crush Lithuania's newly reclaimed independence, and the Baltic republic's leaders raised the ante for talks by demanding Kremlin compensation for economic ruin and political repression.

Neither side gave any ground a day after Lithuania's Legislature formally declared a restoration of the independence lost in 1940 to Stalin's army.

But they set the tone for a long dispute over Lithuania's drive to turn a political declaration into reality that must encompass questions of territory, compensation, the status of thousands of Soviet soldiers, ownership of factories and land, and control of the police and KGB.

Second Greyhound bus hit by sniper

By The Associated Press

A Greyhound bus in Connecticut was hit by sniper fire Monday and the chairman of the strike-crippled bus line offered a $25,000 reward for information about a weekend shooting in Florida that injured eight passengers.

"We will not bend or move because of intimidation and violence," Greyhound Chairman Fred G. Currey insisted before boarding a Greyhound bus from Jacksonville to Orlando, Fla.

No one was injured in the Connecticut shooting, which occurred on Interstate 84 shortly before 11 a.m. as a New York-to-Boston Greyhound bus headed into Hartford with 19 passengers. Passengers reported hearing a small pop that some thought was a blown tire.

Police recovered a bullet from the baggage compartment on the driver's side, and were trying to determine the caliber and type of gun used, said state police spokesman Adam Berluti.

The Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions disavowed responsibility for the Florida shooting, but a union spokesman in Hartford said he believed the Connecticut shooting was motivated by the strike against the only nationwide bus company.

"I would say it's probably strike-related because I have been driving for 17 years and was never shot at," said spokesman Charles True. However, pickets in Hartford denied that union members were responsible.

The union, which represents 6,300 drivers and more than 3,000 office and maintenance workers, went on strike March 2. There have been scattered violent incidents since, including a striker crushed to death by a bus operated by a replacement driver in Redding, Calif., and shots fired at buses in Chicago and Phoenix.

Currey, Greyhound's chairman and chief executive officer, and Frank Schneider, its president, flew to Jacksonville early Monday from Dallas after learning of the Florida shooting.

The eight passengers were hurt when someone fired a bullet through the front of a Greyhound bus Sunday night in south Jacksonville. The passengers were injured by fiberglass and shrapnel.

When asked if he thought the shot had come from a striker, Currey said: "I pray that it is not true. I hope that it is not true. I do not want to believe that anybody involved in Greyhound would do such as thing."

The two executives visited the three passengers still hospitalized Monday. Five others were released after hospital treatment. They also visited bus riders who were put up by the company in a Jacksonville hotel overnight.

One hospitalized passenger, Michael Rogers of Atlanta, was critical of the company: "I don't think they should run their lines while they're having a situation like this going on. Or at least warn the general public that a situation like that might occur."

In Orlando, Currey criticized union leaders for not speaking out against intimidation.

"Their silence is deafening," he said. Asked why he rode the bus, he said: "I took the trip because I thought it was important for Greyhound people not to be intimidated."

An executive board member of the Jacksonville union local said he didn't believe strikers were behind the shooting.

"As far as I'm concerned it wasn't one of our strikers," said Bill Nicholson. "They've been like choirboys."

Sheriff's spokesman Steve Weintraub said Monday there have been no arrests in the shooting, and added that the possibility that the shot came from a striker "is one of the leads we are following."

The latest violence came as federal mediators in Washington, D. C., met for three hours Monday for "an exploratory, informal meeting" with union officials.

Jim Power, a spokesman for the Federal Mediation Service, said the union "agreed to the possibility of additional meetings with the mediation service and management to start the collective bargaining process again."

Student vs. Academic affairs

Don't fix what isn't broken

Richard Peck, ASU provost and academic affairs vice president, calls it an "accident of history" that the University admissions and financial assistance departments are under the authority of ASU Student Affairs — instead of under the control of one large, all-encompassing Academic Affairs division.

But Peck is wrong. It is no accident. Nor is it, as he asserts, a mistake.

These two departments exist, as does all of Student Affairs, by design. And for excellent reasons.

Indeed, the proposal made by some members of the ASU Dean's Council last week that President Lattie Coor shift the two departments to Academic Affairs has a good segment of the University community hopping mad — and more than a little concerned. Many worried students, administrators and faculty say this ill-advised move will have a long-range negative effect on the student body, and could be a harbinger of the destruction of the entire Student Affairs jurisdiction.

Equally troubling, and heightening the sense of urgency, is the news that Coor has to make this complex decision — involving the partisan passions of the deans, the University vice presidents and even his closest lieutenants — by no later than Wednesday.

Because of the intense pressure on Coor, the decision must be difficult. However, from a student perspective, the problem is easily solved:

Don't move Admissions or Student Financial Assistance. And don't tinker with the success of ASU Student Affairs.

Student Affairs is set up for one purpose: to facilitate student life. This task it performs well. So well that it is recognized nationally as one of the finest departments of its kind.

The professionals in Student Affairs are trained to help students overcome the problems — academic, financial, residential and even psychological — that they face in a University atmosphere. And they are there as student advocates, providing an entryway for student opinion into the administration.

While Academic Affairs is also a vital part of the University, its administrators and professionals are trained in different areas and have a different set of concerns. Absorption of Student Affairs duties by Academic Affairs would reduce sensitivity to student needs — and would create a thicker layer of bureaucracy for students to wade through in order to get solutions to their problems.

The possibility exists that such a transfer would also result in the movement of financial aid monies away from need-based scholarships — which are designed to encourage the enrollment of the poor and minorities — to the merit-based aid favored by Academic Affairs. Access to the University by those who deserve to be here — but can least afford to attend — would undoubtedly suffer.

But perhaps the most troubling aspect of the proposed departmental shift is the way in which it was undertaken. At no point in time did the deans suggesting the move consult students or Student Affairs personnel in order to obtain their input. The plan was kept a tightly guarded secret while the deans attempted to ram the proposal through Coor's office before protesting groups could coalesce and object.

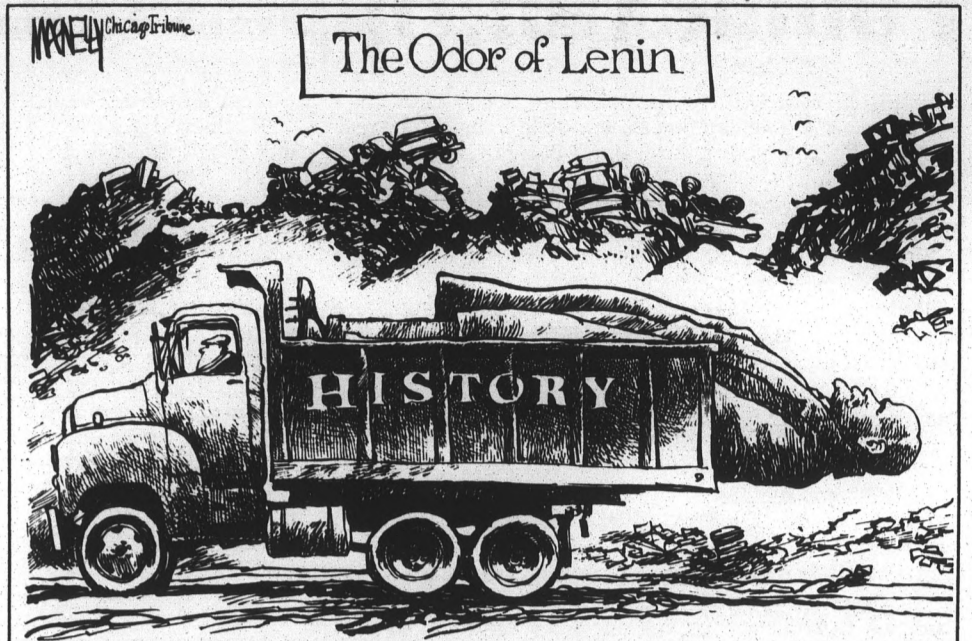

In fact, if Associated Students of ASU President Paul Larson had not discovered the plan and spoken out last week, it is doubtful if the University community would ever have learned of its existence — until after the decision was made, of course.

While students have become accustomed to such secret policy-making practices at ASU, it is only logical to question the motives of those who choose to prohibit open discussion of a vital policy issue — and instead to come as a thief in the night, urging that decisions at this public university be made in the dark.

The only argument proponents of the plan have offered is to suggest that the transfer into Academic Affairs will provoke more faculty into taking an active role in advising students. This simply doesn't wash. An organizational shift will not change the circumstances of over-worked, under-paid professors — most of whom have neither the time nor the inclination to learn the voluminous University rules and regulations necessary for an advisement post.

From appearances, the move would seem to be little more than a simple example of "empire building" on the part of the deans and Academic Affairs bureaucrats. And the desire of a few administrators for more turf and power isn't a good enough reason to radically alter a successful administrative arrangement.

The old adage, "if it ain't broke, don't fix it," clearly applies.

ROTC: Not for credit

Editor:

The question of whether ROTC belongs on campus has been ineffectively and emotionally argued from both sides. It appears that neither side has been swayed by the opinions of the other because the disagreement is over values. Rather than join in on either side, I would like to attempt a different approach to the issue.

Having spent slightly more than four years in the Marines, and having observed the manner in which officer candidates are instructed at the Military Academy, I believe the value of educating a professional military officer corps in public universities is not something that can be overestimated. Cadets in the service academies do not receive adequate instruction in the humanities or the fine arts. It seems to me that the preservation of peace is enhanced when a diverse group of well rounded individuals commands our military. For this very basic reason ROTC should be retained by ASU.

This position does not differ substantially from many of those which have been published lately; however, what follows does. Students who take ROTC classes presently receive credit for these classes through the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, (I believe), yet the college has no input into the syllabus of these courses, or the selection of the instructors. Precisely what material is taught, and who conducts the classes, is decided by the Department of the Army or Air Force. Neither ROTC classes, nor their instructors have to meet the standards required of other courses and instructors in the University.

ROTC is a pre-professional program that does have value; however, its courses are not equivalent to those taught in the other departments of the University. Therefore, I propose that ROTC classes no longer provide credit toward a degree. As ROTC sets itself apart from the rest of the academic community it should not be included in the degree granting process. This act might be sufficient to satisfy those faculty, staff and students who feel the military presence on campus is not denying access to ROTC for those students who see it as necessary preparation for their future careers. Naturally this is not a solution that will completely satisfy either side, but it might establish some middle ground where both sides could feel comfortable.

Fudge factor

Numbers don't always tell truth in Washington

Jeff Greenfield
Universal Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — The secretary of defense is not happy with the director of central intelligence. William Webster went before a congressional committee to say that, even if Soviet hardliners ousted Mikhail Gorbachev, "there is little chance that Soviet hegemony could be restored in Eastern Europe."

"Not helpful," Secretary Cheney said over the weekend. In Washington talk, when an administration says "not helpful" about the comments of another administration, this is the plain English equivalent: "You complete moron. How could you utter such absolute garbage?"

Why is Secretary Cheney so angry at William Webster? Because if the Congress believes the CIA view of the world, it may be tempted to make deep cuts in the defense budget.

After all, why build nuclear-powered widgets to defend Western Europe or the Pacific Rim or the Canary Islands if the Soviets have neither the intention nor the ability to do anything to Western Europe or the Pacific Rim or the Canary Islands?

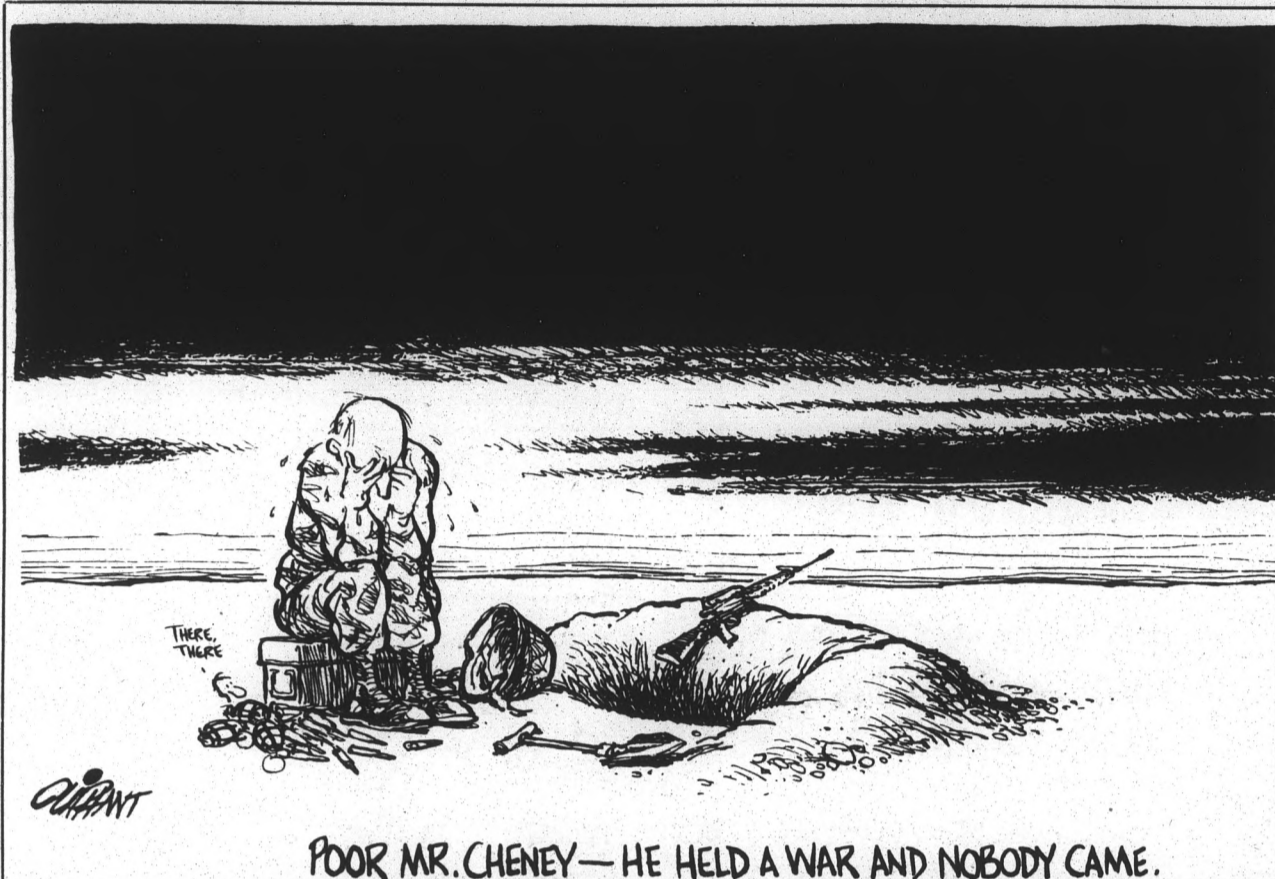

This dispute will be welcomed by the Washington deep-think community, which now has a genuine, 24-karat gold-plated Issue and Controversy to wrestle to death on TV talk shows and op-ed pages. You know the drill: "Is Moscow Still a Threat? Shaping Defense Budgets in an Age of Glasnost." That sort of thing.

But isn't there a much more basic question at stake here? Shouldn't we be getting intelligence estimates based on our best grasp of reality, rather than on the policy implications of that reality?

Let's start with a really simple analogy. Suppose you're trying to lose weight. You've also been invited to a weekend at which there will be wonderful, fattening food.

So you get on the scale. You want, you desperately want, the scale to show you have lost 15 pounds so you can eat yourself silly this weekend. But suppose the scale says you've gained three pounds.

That is, of course, "not helpful" to your desires. But would you prefer it if a friend dropped over and had turned the scale back 15 pounds so the numbers looked better?

In the long run, this would not be a good idea. But it is how the numbers game is played in Washington.

Remember the fight over a CBS story that high-ranking officials ordered enemy troop estimates in Vietnam down played to make it look as if the United States was winning the war?

Whatever the truth of that specific allegation, there is no doubt that the Johnson administration repeatedly misled the American people about the nature and cost of the Vietnam War; casualty figures and other numbers were repeatedly jiggered so the reality would appear more palatable.

This same thing happens in the economic arena: The administration will estimate strong economic growth in order to estimate a declining deficit in order to show there is no need of new taxes.

Congressional estimates will show lower economic growth and higher deficits in order to prove that the administration is not dealing responsibly with the deficit.

And the whole debate is treated with consummate seriousness by the press, because it's considered impolite to laugh yourself silly in public.

So maybe we can leave this dispute with few impossibly simplistic notions:

If the Soviets remain a military threat, we could base our policy on that premise. If they are substantially weaker, no matter who's running the store, we should plan accordingly. It does not matter what we want the facts to be; it does not matter if they confirm or contradict our cherished ideology. Let's gather the facts as best we can.

And now you know why I will never get an important job in government.

Smokers get burned by researchers once again

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Syndicate

If they had asked me, I could have saved some researchers at the University of Pennsylvania a lot of time and bother.

The scientists recently did tests on more than 600 people, some who smoke and some who don't.

They had them sniff various scents. Then they jotted down what, if anything, these people smelled.

And guess what they found? Of course. It's what any smoker or former smoker could have told them before they even started.

They discovered that people who don't smoke have a much sharper sense of smell than people who do smoke.

And they found that people who smoke more, and have been smoking longer, have a less acute sense of smell than those who smoke less or haven't been smoking as long.

Then they published their findings in a scholarly medical journal, which is how university researchers who ask people to sniff things justify their paychecks.

So what do their findings tell us? How significant is the fact that smokers don't detect scents as well as non-smokers?

The directors of the project said: "the loss of the sense of smell is yet another good reason to quit smoking."

"Smoking creates the possibility of losing, at least in part, the ability to appreciate flowers, good food and good wine. So, if one likes those things, one should think twice about smoking."

This project is the best example that I've seen of how far America's non-smokers are willing to go with their ever-growing nagging, pummeling attack on the country's smokers.

It isn't enough that the packages have warnings; that smoking is now forbidden in most public buildings and many private workplaces; that white-knuckle airline passengers must now risk imprisonment if they light up.

It isn't enough that many non-smokers frantically wave their arms and begin gasping for breath even before a smoker 20 feet away lights up.

It isn't enough that in those goofy ads single people put in newspapers, almost all of them say something like: "Female, 30, professional, attractive, wishes to meet tall, lean, handsome wealthy, sensitive, humorous, erudite, professional male interested in skiing, jogging, gracious dining, long walks in the park, concerts and Woody Allen movies. Non-smokers only, you smelly pigs!"

And it isn't even enough that the surgeon general of the United States, who ought to be concerning himself about the cost of health care for the poor and the elderly, is yammering what everyone already knows: that smoking isn't good for those who smoke.

No, we now have scientists doing a big study to establish that those who smoke do not fully appreciate the bouquet of a Lafite Rothschild or the scent of a daffodil.

Apparently it hasn't occurred to these scientists that what they have discovered is the only benefit that smoking provides.

Yes, it does reduce one's sense of smell. But is that bad?

It would be bad if we were all Indian scouts, hunkering down over some charred wood and saying: "Hmmm, they break camp four, five hours ago." Or if we were all professional wine tasters or cultivated English rose gardens.

But the fact is that much, if not most, of the world we inhabit doesn't smell very good. Bus fumes, car fumes, industrial chimneys and people stink up the place.

Think of the millions of people who work in places that make things that smell bad. Or the hundreds of thousands of people who pick up and dispose of our garbage.

Are they sniffing the bouquet of a glass of fine burgundy or tiptoeing through the tulips?

Of course not. And those among them who smoke are fortunate in that their nose nerves don't quiver as much as the nose nerves of the non-smoker.

When a smoker finds himself on a crowded subway train or elevator, he will not be as aware as a non-smoker that there is someone nearby who did not shower that morning. And if someone is seized by a fit of flatulence (possible a non-smoker who totally disregard the rights of a smoker not to have his air tainted by others), the smoker will be immune to this gross and vile intrusion.

No, this is a smelly world most of us live in. It is filled with more garbage than petunias, more smoke and fumes than estate bottled wines.

And speaking of wines, where does that scientist get off encouraging drinking? Has he ever poured a bottle or two down a mouse's throat? Try it. The poor little creature will get drunk. And then we can read about that in a scientific journal.

ROTC

"ROTC programs are more oriented toward civilian values."
 •The economic impact on the cadets receiving aid would be too detrimental.
 "It is often suggested in the hearing that the ideal situation is that students should not have to ally themselves with the military to get scholarship monies," Van Hook said. "Reallocation of tax funds is not on the immediate horizon. We do not want to deprive any of our students."

•Academic freedom. Van Hook said for such a resolution to pass, the Faculty Senate would be setting a dangerous precedent.
 •Cadet admittance policies are set by the U. S. Defense Department, so ROTC does not directly discriminate against homosexuals. Therefore, anyone can take ROTC classes, Van Hook said.
 The committee's decision will be passed on to the Faculty Senate for a final vote.
 The measure was proposed by ASU education Professor Roger Axford who said the ROTC's "business is killing."

 Axford said he was not upset by the committee decision.
 "Nothing is as great as an idea when its time has come," Axford said. "And its time has come. (ROTC) will eventually be eliminated."
 ROTC professors who attended the meeting were pleased with the proposal.
 "We're satisfied with the committee recommendation," Cpt. Kevin Scott said. "We're anticipating the March 26 meeting."

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incident Monday:
 •Two non-students were assaulted Sunday night by two unknown men in Lot 57. One of victims suffered a three-inch cut to his chin and was treated at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.
 Tempe police reported the following incidents Monday:
 •A 25-year-old clerk accidentally shot himself in the ankle Sunday night at the Circle K store at 2044 E. Southern Ave. The worker, who was treated at Desert Samaritan Hospital in Mesa, told police he dropped the loaded handgun as he was preparing to clean it.

•Two men were arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to transport marijuana after officers seized 100 pounds of the drug Saturday at a Scottsdale apartment. Police, who were working on a tip, also confiscated four vehicles and $25,000 worth of property.
 Anthony J. DeFranco, 31, of Phoenix, and Marco A. Saldate, 25, of Scottsdale, were also booked into Tempe City jail on charges of possession of marijuana.
 •Two Mesa teenagers were arrested on disorderly conduct charges after they tried to pick a fight with two skinheads

Friday night outside the Coffee Plantation, 680 S. Mill Ave. A similar incident occurred last week outside the business.
 •An ASU student was arrested Friday after police said he allegedly tried to sell an undercover officer marijuana at Palo Verde West. Steven R. Belton, 18, was booked into Tempe City Jail on two felony counts of sale of marijuana.
 •A 22-year-old ASU student was arrested for indecent exposure Friday night after an officer saw him urinating on the side of a building in the 600 block of South Mill Avenue.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Two dozen students discovered that being a parent to an egg can really scramble your life.

Third-grade teacher Charla Easley gave her students at Ima Dell Fitzgerald Elementary School hard-boiled eggs to name, clothe and nurture for one week as a firsthand lesson about the responsibilities of parenthood.

The students were given $100 in play money with which they could pay to leave their eggs in day care — at the back of the classroom — if they wanted some free time. Overnight care was available at $10 a night.

The "eggs-perience" was eye-opening, the students said.

The high cost of day care forced Espie Randolph to take his "daughter," Jessica, everywhere, he said.

"She really got on my nerves," Espie said. "I had to take her to the park, to the mall, and even on the bus."

"I thought raising a kid would be a lot easier," said 9-year-old John Moffett.

Moffett said he is glad the shell game is over and has plans for his triplets.

"I'm going to throw them in the trash compactor," he said.

California third baseman Chris Saunders slides safely past the diving tag attempt of ASU third baseman Mike Scialo in the Sun Devils 12-4 win Monday.

Devils continue hit parade, crush Cal, 12-4, for sweep

By SETH SULKA
State Press

Although the weather remained unseasonably cold, the Sun Devils continued to heat up Packard Stadium with their recently-acquired offensive spunk.

ASU compiled 14 hits on Monday to bring its total to 52 for the three-game series en route to a 12-4 win as 2,060 fans saw the Sun Devils complete a Pac-10 Southern Division sweep of California.

For the first time this season, ninth-ranked ASU reached the .500 mark in conference play with a 19-9 overall, 5-5 Six-Pac record. The Golden Bears dropped to 9-14, 2-6.

Catcher Eric Helfand, who homered in each of the three games bringing his season total to six, said that it was a very important series for the Sun Devils, especially heading into this weekend's stint with UofA.

"We really needed this," Helfand said. "I thought that we did a good job all three days, especially today. We came out real flat and they got ahead but we came back. We just kept pouring it on."

Helfand got ASU on the scoreboard when he doubled in the second inning and scored on designated hitter Jim Henderson's single.

California took the lead with an odd fourth inning. With two men out, third baseman Chris Saunders hit a fly ball that right fielder Tommy Adams apparently caught for the third out. However, the home plate umpire said that Helfand interfered with the batter and he awarded Saunders first base.

Following a botched play by third baseman Mike Scialo and a walk to Chris Clapinski, second baseman Jason Evans cleared the bases with a double off ASU starter Kip Vaughn.

The Sun Devils battled right back in their half of the fourth with Henderson and third baseman Mike Scialo driving in runs to chase starter Ron Flores (1-1) to the dugout.

Center fielder Mike Kelly broke the tie with a double and then scored on second baseman Anthony Manahan's single to make the score 6-3.

Vaughn, who has gone from being a starter to a reliever and back to a starter, said that he felt good making the switch back.

"It's a lot different than coming out of the (bull) pen," Vaughn said. "Coming out of the pen, you can just go after guys because they haven't seen you yet. But when it was their second and third times around, you have to go after them with a lot more meaning behind it."

Vaughn (2-3) went six innings scattering five hits and three runs while striking out six before he was relieved by Gary Tatterson.

Tatterson picked up his second save and was pitching with the varsity Sun Devils for the first time since being converted to a submariner in practices last week.

"It (the adjustment) was pretty tough at first, but it's getting easier," said the right-handed transfer from Glendale Community College. "I really had to make the switch because I couldn't find the (strike) zone before. I was throwing strikes today and I felt a lot more confident."

Head Coach Jim Brock said that he was very encouraged with Tatterson's new delivery.

"He has gone from being our sixth or seventh (pitcher) with little or no chance to contribute in a big way, to being a real factor," Brock said. "At this point, anyway, (he's) our short (reliever)."

ASU did not need much relief though, as it scored 48 runs in the series.

Even though the offense flourished, Brock said that the defense is still not to the point where he wants it.

"We hit the ball this weekend as I thought that we would be hitting at this point of the year," he said. "However, we have a great deal of work that we have to do defensively."

ASU tie with UofA marks year's best performance

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

Just because the ASU womens gymnastics team did not defeat UofA in a meet held last weekend does not mean it was not the Sun Devils' best meet of the season, Assistant Coach Lisa Zeis said.

ASU and the Wildcats tied in a meet at McKale Center Friday, 190.15-190.15. The score marked the Sun Devils' highest of the season which Zeis said will help the team to make it to the NCAA Championships to be held in mid-April.

In order to be guaranteed a position at nationals, a team must meet a qualifying score set by the NCAA. A team's score is computed by averaging five home and away meets with the regional scores counting twice.

Zeis said with only one away meet remaining in the regular season, a score of 190.15 will be highly beneficial to the team.

"It should help us," she said. "When we compete like we have been, we are capable of being competitive against any team — we are right up there difficulty-wise."

After getting a weak start on the uneven bars during the meet against UofA, Zeis said the Sun Devils felt staying competitive with the Wildcats was out of the question.

ASU suffered five misses on the bars, and senior Suzy Baldock was the sole gymnast to perform her routine without any falls, wobbles or slips as she led the team competition with a 9.65.

"We are very excited that we tied, because when you start a meet with that many misses, you are not thinking there is any chance you may win," Zeis said. "When we found out we tied (after the meet ended), the girls wanted to kick themselves because they knew what they could have done, and they could have done higher."

The meet against UofA marked Kelly Cyskiewicz's season debut on the bars, in which she scored a 9.15. Zeis said Cyskiewicz would have scored much higher if the bars would have been set to her measurements.

Bars has been ASU's toughest event all season. Despite the coaching staff's best efforts in practice, Zeis said she has failed to see any major improvements. This week, before the team travels to the Pac-10 Championships at Cal-Berkeley, Zeis said each gymnast will be required to successfully execute a handful of bar routines.

"You cannot go to Nationals and expect to be a contender if you miss all of your bar routines," she said. "We have been having great workouts, I just think it's more mental now."

Even though ASU earned some of its lowest scores of the season on bars, it garnered its highest mark in the balance beam with a 48.2.

"I was very pleased with the performance — that is above a 9.6 average," Zeis said. "It was a good finish to what we thought was a disaster."

Zeis said the Sun Devils also performed excellently on the vault and floor.

"We fought back and nailed the vault," she said. "From then on, we were doing pretty well."

Wrestlers cruise to Pac-10 title

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

The NCAA championships are still 10 days away, but there is good reason to believe that the ASU wrestling team is definitely capable of coming out of College Park, Md., as national champions.

The second-ranked Sun Devils solidified their reputation as the best the Pac-10 has to offer by claiming six individual champions en route to their sixth consecutive conference title Sunday night in Bakersfield, Calif.

ASU easily placed first in the nine-team field with 109.25 points, almost 20 points ahead of second-place Cal State-Bakersfield, in what was basically a two-team tournament. Oregon was a distant third with 42.5 points and Cal State-Fullerton placed fourth with 31.

"We had an outstanding tournament," ASU Head Coach Bobby Douglas said. "I think we are in an excellent position for the national championships."

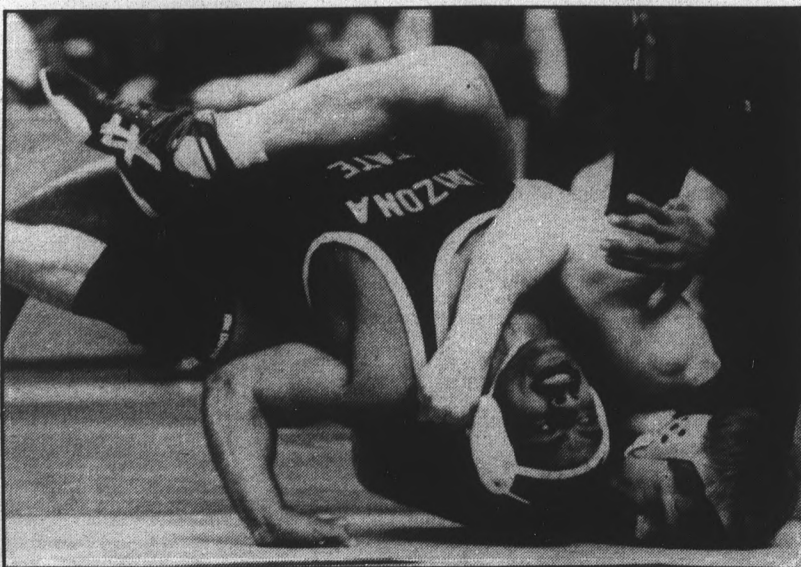

The Sun Devils will send nine wrestlers to the University of Maryland's Cole Field House on March 22-24. The tenth member of the team, heavyweight Mike Anderson, was selected only as an alternate for the NAAs, a decision that greatly upset Douglas.

"I thought Mike should have been a wild card selection; he had a super tournament," Douglas said. "But unfortunately, politics came in. I feel the conference is making a big mistake by not sending him to the nationals."

The top three finishers in each weight class qualified for the NAAs, and the tournament's coaches selected seven wild card qualifiers following the meet. Anderson placed fifth with a 4-1 decision over Boise State's Anthony Vaneck.

The possibility that the entire team could appear at the national championships is a good reflection of how well ASU performed in Bakersfield. The Sun Devils were led by Townsend Saunders, ranked third in the nation at 150 pounds. Saunders was named the tournament's Most Outstanding Wrestler.

ASU's Townsend Saunders won his second consecutive Pac-10 title this weekend.

Turn to Wrestling, page 13.

Wrestling

Saunders won a conference title for the second straight year by scoring his second consecutive victory over top-ranked Richard Bailey of CSUB, a 5-3 decision. Saunders, who won the championship at 142 pounds in 1989, romped to the final by defeating CSUF's Jim Walker 12-0, Fresno State's Phil McLeon 10-3, and Cal Poly-SLO's Terry Watts 11-4.

Freshman Wayne McMinn, replacing injured Andy McNaughton at 134 pounds, showed the production Douglas had hoped for when he recruited him by winning the championship with a 9-3 decision over CSUF's Lyndon Campbell.

"He wrestled exceptionally well," Douglas said of McMinn, who compiled a 118-0 record and four state titles at Apache Junction High School. "We watched him make progress from his first match. I think he is our most improved wrestler."

Along with McMinn, the Sun Devils' three other freshmen also qualified for the NCAAs. At 190 pounds, Rex Holman won the championship with a 7-1 decision over Oregon's Joe Rissone. LeShawn Charles was the runner-up at 126 pounds after losing 5-1 to CSUB Ahmed El-Sokkary. Ray Miller claimed third place at 158 pounds with a 5-1 overtime victory against Oregon State's Steve Lander.

ASU's three other champions came as no surprise: •Dan St. John, ranked first in the nation at 167 pounds and a candidate for Wrestler of the Year, extended his unbeaten streak to 71 consecutive matches by claiming the conference crown with a 9-3 decision over Stanford's Steve Buddie.

•Zeke Jones won the championship at 118 pounds with a 4-2 decision over CSUB's Pat Higa. The win improved the top-ranked Jones' season record to 34-0.

•Thom Ortiz, ranked second in the nation at 142 pounds, won his third conference crown with a 3-1 decision over CSUB's Steve Morris.

In addition, G. T. Taylor qualified for the NCAAs by finishing second at 177 pounds

"This was the toughest Pac-10 tournament ever," Douglas said.

Hoops shifts plans for NIT

By PAUL CORO
State Press

Bill Frieder was going recruiting, Mark Becker was going skiing, the Austins were going home to Fresno, Calif., with their parents and Mike Redhair was giving his shoes away and "getting used to retirement."

However, all those involved with Sun Devil basketball will gladly change their Spring Break plans in order to accommodate an addition in the ASU schedule — an NIT home game Friday against Long Beach State.

"We got a chance to get a title and get a banner up here," center Isaac Austin said, pointing to the University Activity Center ceiling.

Austin found out the news when he paid a casual visit Sunday night to teammate Brian Camper, who extended the good tidings.

"I said, 'Man, stop playing with me,'" Austin said. "I made him call (Assistant Coach (Joe Czupek)."

While Long Beach State is somewhat disappointed to be in the NIT after being snubbed by the NCAA, the Sun Devils are another story. At 15-15, they have the least amount of wins of any team in the tournament.

"I think any team getting into any tournament at the end of the season should be grateful," forward Alex Austin said. "Having an NIT Championship is not bad. People remember both championships."

In 1984, Frieder's team at Michigan won the NIT, leading to two Big Ten titles in the following two years. Frieder, who cancelled a Saturday recruiting trip because of ASU's upset of Oregon State, was also forced to juggle his hectic schedule.

"(Assistant Coach George) McQuarn was mad at me," Frieder said.

Redhair said he enjoyed watching college basketball for once this weekend but will happily postpone his "retirement." Although he said he believed the Sun Devils had a shot at the bid, Redhair was not optimistic.

"I look at it kind of as the icing on the cake," Redhair said. "We're just happy to be in it but I think in the next day or two I think we're not going to be satisfied with just being in the tournament. I think we're going to try to win some games and try to win the tournament."

ASU mens golf adjusts course

By KRIS TIMMONS
State Press

Coming off what ASU Head Coach Steve Loy considers the "poorest outing of the year" for the second-ranked Sun Devils, the mens golf team will be hitting the course hard, spending five to eight hours a day practicing for its next tournament.

ASU, following a second-place finish at the John Burns Intercollegiate in Honolulu on Feb. 25, finished in a fifth-place tie with USC at the Golf Digest Collegiate Invitational in Houston on March 10.

The Sun Devils (291-297-296-884) finished 13 strokes behind top-ranked Oklahoma State (293-291-287-871), who captured first place with a two-stroke edge over No. 3 Florida.

The 15-team field, competing on the par-72 Woodlands TPC, included eight of the nation's top 10 teams.

Florida's Pat Bates earned medalist honors by topping Duke's Jason Widener in a tie-breaking playoff round. Both Bates and Widener finished the tournament at five-under-par.

Defending NCAA champion Phil Mickelson and All-American Per Johansson were the highest ASU finishers. Mickelson and Johansson tied for 18th place, nine strokes back of Bates.

"Obviously, we have been taking things for granted," Loy said in reference to the Sun Devils' play throughout the tournament. "Everybody played where they were supposed to except us."

Loy said the team made mental mistakes as well as execution mistakes.

"We haven't been doing enough on our games at home," he said. "After the Hawaii tournament, we took a week to get caught up (academically)."

The original schedule had ASU slated for the Central Florida Invitational to begin today in Orlando, but Loy said he decided to cancel that tournament and play in the Austin, Texas, tournament over spring break so the team members would not miss more school.

According to Loy, both the long and the short game will receive a lot of attention from the golfers this week.

"We will have extensive practices," Loy said. "It will be a similar field in Austin so it's important that we get back on the horse and play like we're supposed to. We need better play out of our best players, and more consistent play out of the rest of the lineup."

Scott Frisch, the 10th-place finisher at the John Burns Invitational, tied for 34th at eight-over-par. Keith Sbarbaro tied for 41st at 10-over-par and Jim Lemon, who finished fourth in Honolulu, tied for 42nd at 11-over-par.

Loy, the 1989 Pac-10 Coach of the Year, finished seventh in the Mizuno Shoot-out which pitted the 15 coaches against each other.

"Pizzas, trophies and road trips—our Volkswagens deliver."

Andy and Liza Keene
Texas A&M University

Andy and Liza Keene, students at Texas A&M, talk about their silver Volkswagen GTI's.

"My husband Andy and I bought our first GTI in Texas and drove directly to Boston. A few days later we turned around and headed back to Texas, by way of Arizona. That cross country trip was all it took. We liked the car so much we decided to buy a second one."

"Volkswagens have a unique feel that no other cars have," explained Andy. And he should know. Andy's been racing his GTI on the Autocross circuit for years and he has a shelf full of trophies to prove it. When Andy isn't racing, he's delivering pizzas to A&M students. "I don't know what's more challenging—racing Autocross or delivering those pizzas before they get cold." Together, the Keenes' Volkswagens have logged over 200,000 miles. They love their GTI's parked side by side. But we don't know how much longer they can keep them together. Right after we took this photo, Andy ran off to look at a new 1990 Jetta GLI 16V.

If you drive a Volkswagen, you might be selected to appear in an ad like the one above. Send your story and a photo to: Volkswagen Testimonials • 187 S. Woodward, Suite 200 • Birmingham, MI 48009

SHOW US YOUR STUDENT I.D. YOU'LL GET A DINNER

FREE!
(Compliments of Mike Pulos)

This year we're doing it again! Every Sunday (but ONLY on Sunday), Mike Pulos of the Spaghetti Company will give you one FREE dinner* for each dinner you order! It's our 2-for-1 SUNDAY STUDENT SPECIAL. And it's good for the whole school year at both our Tempe and Phoenix locations.

Any day of the week, for lunch or dinner, The Spaghetti Company is known for a great meal at an affordable price. But the SUNDAY STUDENT SPECIAL makes our already terrific prices even better! Our dinners include a full course meal with all the trimmings — from salad to dessert. So, dollar for dollar, when you're hungry and you need a break, you can't beat The Spaghetti Company! ESPECIALLY ON SUNDAYS! With 2 diners for the price of 1! But you MUST have your student I.D. card with you to take advantage of this offer. 15% gratuity added to all discounted checks (except Senior citizen discounts).

Open at 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Sundays

Enjoy nightly drink specials on our patio.

We've just lowered the price of your ticket to the top.

Announcing new lower prices on the Macintosh SE and Macintosh Plus.

If you'd like to enhance your education and your budget, take note. We just lowered prices on two powerful members of our Macintosh® family, the Macintosh SE and the Macintosh Plus.

They'll put a world of possibilities at your fingertips. Like graphing the economic impact of Japanese expansionism. Analyzing Freud. Or just organizing that stack of notes. Better yet, once you've mastered one application you can use them all, because all Macintosh software works the same way. And since every Macintosh runs the same software and is expandable, it can grow with you as your needs change.

Considering all this, you should have no doubts about which course to take. Give a Macintosh a try, and save.
