University Club delays seeking final approval

By NICOLE CARROLL
State Press

Approval of funding for the University Club, an on-campus restaurant and bar for ASU faculty and staff, will be delayed for at least two more months so that club organizers can raise additional private funds for the venture, a club official said Wednesday.

"We're trying to make sure we have all the dollars available," said Lonnie Ostrom, ASU director of development and chairman of the University Club Board of Directors. "We're working on raising money to reduce the cost to the University."

In January, the Arizona Board of Regents gave conceptual approval of $1.7 million in University investment income for the project. It was expected to go through final approval at the board meeting this month.

However, ASU President Lattie Coor removed the club proposal from the regents' February agenda, claiming that he wanted to personally investigate the financial backing of the club.

Ostrom said the decision to voluntarily delay seeking funding approval for the project came after a meeting with Coor, who expressed concern over the club's financial viability.

Coor has said he supports the concept of a faculty club, although he has concerns about the planned amount of investment income.

ASU Vice President of Business Affairs Victor Zafra said all parties were in agreement with the postponement.

"(The club proposal) is not on the agenda because we are reviewing other options," he said.

Club backers hired the consulting firm of Pannell Kerr Forster in October after the regents asked for additional information about the success of similar clubs. The firm had also done the original research for the ASU project.

The consultant's findings were controversial because the firm only researched the Phoenix University Club, a dining facility open to alumni of any college or university. It did not examine faculty clubs in peer institutions.

Student leaders have also denounced the project because it will allow club members access to alcohol on campus while denying students the same privilege. Others are concerned that the club will never be self-supporting and will be a continuing drain on University funds.

Ostrom said that despite the problems, he hopes the club would be ready for approval at the board's June meeting.

The idea of a faculty club has been kicked around campus since 1986, when physics Professor Dick Jacobs proposed the concept.

Faculty Senate President Harold White said he was one of the first faculty members to sign up for the club, and that he and many of his colleagues are waiting patiently for its doors to open.

"I haven't heard any discussions of discouragement," White said.

Faculty and staff members can join the club for a $25 initiation fee, a $300 renovation contribution and $12 each month in membership fees.

Community members may join by paying a $200 initiation fee and a $300 renovation contribution. Their monthly fees have not yet been determined.

Club organizers say they will pay back all University funds used for the project with these fees.

Fraternity vows to regain charter

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

Members of ASU's Beta Theta Pi fraternity say they are not packing their bags yet, despite the suspension of the fraternity's charter by its national headquarters and the loss of all University interfraternity privileges.

"We're shocked and upset, but we haven't given up the fight," said Beta Theta Pi President Len Wierzbicki, adding that he will appeal the decision at the fraternity's national convention Aug. 8 in California.

The national organization decided to strip the fraternity of its charter during a March 2 board of trustees convention in California, said Tom Cassady, general secretary of the Ohio-based Beta Theta Pi.

Insufficient housing, a consistently unsuccessful rush program, low GPAs and low number of members were cited as reasons for the suspension.

"We had very little choice but to suspend them," Cassady said, adding that the national organization must be sure that all chapters are the "best or one of the best" of all fraternities at each university.

"We could not honestly say that at your ASU, they were up there among other fraternities," Cassady said.

Interfraternity Council President John Kierman agreed, adding that the IFC can no longer recognize Beta Theta Pi as a fraternity.

"The chapter has had a history of weakness, which the national fraternity recognized as not being symbolic of what Beta Theta Pi stands for," Kierman said, adding that the fraternity will not be allowed to participate in any greek events or vote during IFC meetings.

In 1987, Beta Theta Pi was the first fraternity to require a 2.5 GPA or better of its members. Cassady said the ASU chapter's GPA was less than that at the close of the spring 1989 semester, but Wierzbicki argued that at the time of the convention, the fraternity's grades were higher.

The campus group had a 2.68 GPA at the end of the fall 1989 semester, making it the second highest of all fraternities on campus, Kierman said.

Wierzbicki blames lack of communication among the general fraternity, the Phoenix district advisory board and the campus group as the primary reason for suspension.

The fraternity's improved GPA was not sent to the national organization before the meeting, Wierzbicki added.

The fraternity experienced a period of "house cleaning" in fall 1988, when members who had low GPAs and past-due payments were kicked out, Wierzbicki said, adding that membership dwindled from 43 to 18 members.

Beta Theta Pi, which was established at ASU in 1977, does not have a fraternity house but uses a house on Ninth Street as its central point.

Wierzbicki pointed to the lack of housing as part of the reason why the group only had six pledges this spring, compared to 50 pledges each at Yale University and Johns Hopkins University.

"Students do not want to go off campus to be in a fraternity," he said. "They want to go to Old Row (Adelphi Drive) or to New Row (Alpha Drive)."

The national organization has plans to return to ASU in two years, Cassady said.

The ASU Research Park has been seeing a lot of researching and parking recently.

"There's been a lot of inspiring teenagers here," said Doug McQueen, the park's planning director. "We've always had people using the park for romantic reasons."

"We're trying to discourage this from becoming that type of place."

Beginning this year, ASU police have beefed up its patrol of the park, located at the corner of Price and Elliot roads, and routinely conduct security checks after its 10 p.m. closing in an effort to ward off vandals.

U.S.-British operation nabs nuclear devices

LONDON (AP) — Customs officials said Wednesday they foiled an attempt to supply Iraq with 40 American-made devices for triggering nuclear weapons, and they arrested five people after an 18-month investigation by U.S. and British authorities.

The probe climaxed in a freight shed at London's Heathrow Airport as an attempt was made to put the devices — which may have been dummies — aboard an Iraqi Airways flight to Baghdad, British customs officials said.

Of those arrested in and around London, one was an Iraqi national who was immediately served with a deportation order, authorities said. Iraqi diplomats in London refused to comment on the affair.

In Washington, the U.S. Customs Service said sealed indictments had been returned at a U.S. District Court in San Diego.

Customs officials in London, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the devices were capacitors, electrical components of the detonation chain of a nuclear bomb.

Defense experts said it demonstrated Iraq's determination to become a nuclear power, even at the risk of being caught violating Western bans on the export of strategic high technology.

"There are only a very few countries in the world capable of manufacturing this type of technology, and there is no other use for a nuclear triggering device than to trigger a nuclear weapon," said Tony Banks, a Middle East expert at the respected Jane's Defense Weekly.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: "This issue raises once again our concern for the nuclear proliferation in the Middle East. It continues to pose a serious risk to U.S. interests, and it continues to exacerbate regional problems."

There were indications the devices deposited at Heathrow were dummies, substituted for the real hardware as part of the U.S. Customs investigation.

British Broadcasting Corp. TV said customs officers made the switch after the packages arrived from the United States this week. Channel 4 TV News carried an interview with the manufacturer of the so-called krytrons, who said his company turned over dummies to U.S. Customs last year.

"We provided about 40 devices . . . to the Customs Service and they were deliberately made to be inoperative," said Don Kerr, president of EG & G in Wellesley, Mass.

He indicated he did not know whether these were the devices that reached London.

The Iraqi, arrested along with three Britons and a Lebanese, was ordered deported because of "attempted breaches of legislation governing the export of strategic goods from the United Kingdom," the Home Office said.

BBC-TV showed footage of the operation which it said was shot by an NBC crew that was in on the investigation.

NBC reported that Scotland Yard detectives raided the headquarters "of what is being described as a secret Iraqi nuclear procurement network," and removed documents and other evidence.

Lithuania backs off on guard plan

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuania's government backed down Wednesday on one of its hottest points of conflict with the Kremlin, a plan to establish its own border guard, saying it wanted to avoid clashes with Soviet troops.

It also told citizens not to resist if Soviet officials try to seize their weapons.

Red Army troops refrained from occupying Lithuanian buildings or rounding up more Lithuanian military deserters, a day after the first violent confrontations in the standoff with the republic.

However, the Soviet military stepped up a war of words against Lithuania, complaining of increased attacks on soldiers and accusing it of a campaign to discredit the Soviet army.

President Vytautas Landsbergis of Lithuania said his government suspended its plans for the border guard for fear of sparking clashes with Soviet troops.

"At present, establishing border points would be stepping up confrontation," Landsbergis told a news conference in the Lithuanian capital, Vilnius.

Lithuanian officials said they had pushed for the border guards in hopes of winning formal recognition from foreign governments of their March 11 declaration of independence.

Landsbergis said even discussion of the subject had provoked conflicts with Moscow, and he said there had been reports of Soviet troops trying to control the roads between Lithuania and Latvia, the neighboring republic.

Gorbachev ordered the sign-up for the border guard halted as soon as it began. In the same decree last week, he ordered Lithuanians to turn in their weapons and said those not surrendered by Wednesday would be confiscated.

Landsbergis said he advised Lithuanians not to resist if Soviet authorities came to seize their hunting guns. At the same time, he said citizens should treat the officials as uninvited guests.

Killer lawns: The price of being perfect

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $1.5 billion Americans spend each year on picture-perfect lawns may be damaging their health, congressional investigators said Wednesday.

The General Accounting Office, an agency of Congress, also said the Environmental Protection Agency isn't doing enough to regulate commercial lawn-care services.

Furthermore, the EPA is allowing lawn-care companies to use advertising it knows to be false, GAO investigator Peter Guerrero told a Senate Environment subcommittee.

The panel heard from several witnesses about the effects of commonly used lawn-care pesticides:

•Thomas Prior of Maplewood, N. J., said his brother died after being exposed to a chemical applied to a golf course he had played.

•Sharon Malhotra, a nurse from Murrysville, Pa., said the chemicals used outside her town house have made her so sick she has had to leave home during spraying.

Kevin Ryan said that past exposure to the chemicals has brought on numbness, chest pressure, aching joints, respiratory discomfort, nausea, stomach pain, memory loss, irritability, depression and fatigue.

The committee chairman, Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., said the EPA "does not appear to have given a very high priority to testing law care chemicals."

He said more than 7 million Americans use lawn-care services, which he said gross more than $1.5 billion annually.

Testimony presented to the committee by the lawn-care industry said that proper precautions are being taken by applicators and that the chemicals are safe.

Roger Yeary, of Chemlawn Services Corp., said lawn-care services present no special or unusual hazard.

Even though more pesticides are used on agricultural land, treated residential lawns show concentrations of up to 10 times the toxic chemicals used on farms, Reid said.

Study concludes being overweight is dangerous

BOSTON (AP) — An eight-year study of the dangers of fat concludes that being overweight causes about 40 percent of all heart disease in U.S. women, and putting on just 20 extra pounds during adulthood will double the risk.

While the report is not the first to suggest that being chubby is bad for the heart, it suggests that the hazard may be more serious than previously thought, especially for women.

The study in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine found that the thinnest women generally have the healthiest hearts. Even being average size seems to increase the risk of heart disease.

"Obesity is a major cause of heart attacks in U.S. women," said Dr. JoAnn E. Manson. "The risks of obesity have been underestimated and underappreciated."

American gunned down at prayer in Lebanon

RASHAYA FOUKHAR, Lebanon (AP) — Extremist groups claimed responsibility Wednesday for the slaying of an American missionary, who was shot to death in his south Lebanon home by masked intruders who burst in as he prayed with his family.

The groups accused the victim, William Robinson, of trying to establish an Israeli settlement in south Lebanon, a predominantly Shiite Moslem area. The Israeli government and Robinson's relatives in his home state of Massachusetts denied it.

Robinson, 59, had, since 1983, run an orphanage for handicapped children, called the Christian Children's Home.

Israeli troops scoured their self-proclaimed security zone in south Lebanon for the killers, who entered Robinson's home in Rashaya Foukhar on Tuesday night. The village of 4,000 is inside the security zone, about eight miles northeast of Israel's border.

Scores of homes burn in factional fighting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rival Zulu factions battled with guns, clubs and knives Wednesday in Natal province, setting scores of homes on fire and forcing hundreds of villagers to flee into the countryside.

Soldiers and police patrolled Natal in an effort to quell the violence, which broke out Tuesday and has killed at least two people.

Others swore, but Dick was caught on tape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon says that a most unfortunate disclosure during Watergate was that he used foul language in the Oval Office. Other presidents also swore, he says, "but none of them had the bad judgment to have it on tape."

Most people swear at one time or another, he says, "but since neither I nor most other presidents had ever used profanity in public, millions were shocked. I have heard other presidents use very earthy language in the Oval Office."

Elections

Don't stumble over campaign signs: Get out, vote

Lynn Vavreck
Asst. Opinion
Editor

It's spring. And along with the tulips and petunias that have added color to campus, campaign posters have sprung from the warm earth of ASU's campus.

It's time for ASASU elections — a more important time than many students might think.

The signs may get in your way and they clutter the lawn space — not to mention the way you are accosted with papers as you maneuver your path towards the MU.

Elections don't seem to hold the excitement for most students that they do for the candidates. No doubt comments like these will be heard on the malls every day until the campaigns end:

"Oh, sure, I'd run for student body office if I didn't have to work to pay my way through school. These people should try working for a living."

Or, "What a bunch of junior politicians out there everyday pressing palms and making promises just to get an office in the MU and fill their resumes. They never do anything, anyway."

Or even, "It's just a play job, it's not like it's a real responsibility."

But these types of statements are not entirely correct.

The job of student body officer is a serious responsibility. A lot of money needs to be spent; a lot of action needs to be taken.

Being a student body officer involves a lot of problems and difficulties. Perhaps the biggest is gaining the respect of University administrators, regents and legislators only to end up telling them you think they are making grave mistakes. Yes, the job is a real job.

It doesn't pay like a real job. It barely even pays at all. But it requires somebody with real passion, real ideas and a real sense of what students should be getting from the University and the state of Arizona. It requires somebody who is willing and able to go in fighting, and is not worried about being thought of as loud and demanding — essentially, a pain in the butt. However, it also requires a person who is not a complete maverick, shouting out against every decision made by every person on campus.

Officers have to be bright, quick and able to go the mat for students.

So before you dismiss ASASU elections as recess for the politically playful, consider the potential roles these students have as officers in ASASU.

At least take the time to go to one of the forums and listen to each candidate speak about his ideas. Get to know their personalities. Talk with them on the malls. You'll be able to tell if they're sincere. And then vote.

Only about 10 percent of the student population at ASU votes in student government elections. But all 41,000 students get upset when tuition is raised, when they get shut out of classes or when the libraries are closed on weekends.

But for this week, the average student is the most important person on campus. This looking for a title to help themselves find out who they really are. But a year as a student body officer is not the time to find this out.

Other candidates are running because they want to make a statement about ASU. "Single issue"-type candidates should be watched closely. They usually have no broad philosophy behind their campaigns, only a series of single things they want to achieve. What happens when they achieve those goals? What do they do then?

Still other candidates are running because they have a sincere interest in the welfare of all students at ASU. They are not interested in discovering themselves, but they will probably find out a lot about who they are along the way. They have a philosophy for their leadership and they do not have over-enlarged, self-fulfilling egos to feed.

These are the candidates to find. So, instead of cursing the campaign signs as you trip over them this week, take a minute to learn about the people behind them. Your decision is an important one.

Not only your decision about who to vote for, but your decision to vote at all.

There is a candidate forum today at 12:30 p.m. on the West Hall Lawn.

ASASU elections are April 3 and 4.

Get over the idea that ASASU elections are just for play. Get past the sales pitches of some of the candidates and get out there next week and vote.

"Before you dismiss ASASU elections as recess for the politically playful, consider the potential roles these students have as officers in ASASU."

is our chance, as students, to find out who is going to help change the things we think are wrong at ASU.

There are many different reasons why people run for student body office.

Some of the candidates are running for office out of their own insecurities. They are

Yes on five

Editor:

After being a student at ASU for the past five years there is one thing missing from our University environment.

It is a feeling of tradition and a sense of pride for our school.

As the candidates for ASASU fill our heads with rhetoric of what they want to accomplish, one of the things that transcends most campaigns is a vow to instill a sense of pride in the students.

ASASU Senate is affording all students the opportunity to make a statement about what is important in our community by putting Petition Five on the ballot.

After being gone for almost 13 years from our campus, the Sun Devil Spark was the vision of a few individuals. Their vision materialized into one of the nation's finest yearbook publications. Not only is this something to be proud of, it is also the student showcase to the rest of the country about what our community is all about.

Now, we are in jeopardy of losing our yearbook again. I urge all students to get out and vote during the elections and to vote yes for Petition Five. An increase of $1 on your tuition will lower the price of the yearbook almost 50 percent. It will also insure that the vision of a few students, who cared so much about their University that they stood up to make a difference on this campus, will continue for years to come.

Downtrodden rise Homeless have become powerful political force

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — Has success spoiled the homeless? I can remember when they were called bums and winos, not "the homeless." They were sad old guys who'd politely ask if you could spare a quarter.

Those guys are still around, but they've been swamped by a new breed of more aggressive panhandlers who don't so much ask your charity as tell you their rights, sometimes with a hint that they could make things unpleasant for you if they wanted to. They even wear signs advertising themselves as "the homeless." It all seems so media-driven. The old winos never thought of themselves as having a collective identity.

With the rise of the homeless has come a new breed of political entrepreneurs, known as "homeless advocates," whose role is to soften up public opinion by making you feel guilty if you work for a living, sleep under a roof and bathe. The homeless advocates — led in Washington, D.C., by Mitch Snyder — make a big show of battling the System. But in fact, Morbid Mitch and his friends are an integral part of the System they affect to oppose.

That System is, in fact, highly hospitable to the likes of Mitch. One component of the System is the news media, which engage constantly not only in their professed mission of broadcasting information, but also in an unannounced mission of manipulating our attitudes. Another component of the System is the federal government, which, far from resisting demands for public funds, actually encourages such demands.

In "The Captive Public" (published in 1986 by Basic Books), Benjamin Ginsberg brilliantly explains how the welfare state keeps generating new constituencies for itself. It helps create the demand for what it wants to supply: increased dependence on its services. The real relation between a Mitch Snyder and an Edward Kennedy is not adversarial, but symbiotic. The rise of "the homeless" is not an anomaly, but a corollary to the principle that the state should tax those who are productive but unorganized for the benefit of those who are unproductive but organized.

Professor Ginsberg puts it this way: "Contemporary students of public opinion assume that the citizenry was the only beneficiary of the linkage that was forged between government and opinion in the West. But in some respects the ultimate beneficiary was the state.

"As they began to respond to citizen opinion, governments, in effect, created a mass market for their services and, in so doing, opened the way for expansion of the size and power of the state. During the past 50 years, governments have learned to expand their power by actually stimulating citizen demand of their services."

The "public opinion" democratic governments defer to, he goes on, is not "the natural and spontaneous popular force that confronted their predecessors," but "in many respects an artificial phenomenon that national governments themselves helped to create and that their efforts continue to sustain." All the modern arts of pooling, propaganda and promotion are used, first to define "issues" (what shall we do about problem X?) and then to engineer the illusion of consent for the foreordained solution (let's have a new federal program!).

What passes for consent, in the general public, is usually a weary resignation to the machinations of a campaign too huge and complicated for the individual citizen to cope with. How do you fight the combined forces of organized lobbies, mass communication and government bureaucracy?

Today's homeless are younger and more able-bodied than the winos and bums of yesteryear. Most people pass by them with quiet irritation and contempt. The homeless don't vote, but the others do. Yet the politicians are likely to prefer the interest of the homeless to those of the taxpayers.

You can interpret this as the taxpayers' "consent" if you want to. But an alternative interpretation is that our political system — in which 98 percent of our congressmen get re-elected — has become seriously disengaged from the people it's supposed to represent.

LEARNING THE MARKET ECONOMY.

Non-academic ASU

Editor:

This University never ceases to amaze me.

The administration is constantly announcing its attempts to improve academic standards. They are constantly complaining about ASU receiving a "party-school" image.

But, this same administration decided to close all campus libraries last Sunday, March 18, the first Sunday of Spring Break. Their reason, as I was told the next day, was: "I guess they figured it was Spring Break and no one would want to use the library."

Well, you figured wrong ASU!

This may surprise the administration, but not all students leave during break. Many use the break to catch up on school work. Many students work extra hours at their jobs.

Students working at their jobs during the week were counting on getting some school work done on the weekend.

It isn't any wonder that the "non-academic" image is perpetuated at ASU when the administration contributes to it with such thoughtless acts as these.

Unpredictable rise of a child tennis prodigy

Cody Shearer
North American Syndicate

WASHINGTON — This is a good time to discuss the unpredictability of mankind. Who would have forecast that Lithuania might someday declare its independence from the Soviet Union? Who would have suggested 40 years ago that Japan would match the United States at its own game of productivity? Or who possibly could have envisioned a 13-year-old girl reaching the finals of a professional womens tennis tournament?

Certainly womens tennis is not on the same level of importance as other historic events unfolding in our world, but one would be foolish not to draw lessons from the promising signs demonstrated by 13-year-old Jennifer Capriati last week at the Virginia Slims of Florida tennis tournament. In her first outing as a professional, all 5 feet 6 inches of Jennifer Capriati made it to the finals before losing out to Argentina's 19-year-old sensation Gabriela Sabatini.

No doubt there are other young people like Jennifer Capriati throughout our country. The names of these individuals, who'll influence, entertain and inspire us, are probably unknown to most of us. But they are out there. After all, how many people at the middle of this century had ever heard of Mikhail Gorbachev? Or, even last year, knew much about Jennifer Capriati?

Nevertheless, one can't deny that big steps in our world are taken by people who disregard conventional wisdom and do something unexpected. For such dreamers, unpredictability is the hallmark of their genius, regardless of whether they're politicians, scientists or athletes.

Most parents probably wouldn't permit their teenage daughter to follow the hectic pace that Jennifer Capriati has chosen to pursue in recent years. Such reluctance is understandable. Jennifer is off to the Palmer Academy near her home in Tampa, Fla., at 6:30 a.m. each weekday. After classes and a light lunch, she hits the tennis courts with her coach, Tommy Thomson, for drills between 1 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. Thereafter Jennifer must head to a local gym for an hour's workout, and then return home in time to do her homework.

In spite of such a rigid routine, Jennifer has stuck to it. But now that she has turned pro, she must drop out of school in favor of a tutor.

Whether Jennifer Capriati succeeds in tennis probably has less to do with her backhand volley than the condition of her mental framework. She must be allowed to go through the confusion and pain of adolescence just like any other teenager, never mind that she's earning a million dollars a year in endorsements. If she's not afforded an opportunity to seek balances in her life, she could leave her teen years without a sense of her own identity.

Yet, throughout the first week as a tennis professional, Jennifer demonstrated an impressive maturity in dealing with the demands of performance and public relations. Her introduction to the world of professional tennis has been a revelation and an inspiration to all concerned.

Capriati's behavior makes one think that one of the great tasks before all of us is to learn to organize our societies in such a way that unpredictable things have a chance to blossom. Just like Jennifer. Surely, a number of revolutions in our thinking are long overdue.

Coretta King, the widow of the late civil rights leader Martin Luther King, is threatening to go to court in London to stop a controversial musical about her husband from being staged April 1. It is Coretta King's contention that the estate of Dr. Martin Luther King owns his image and likeness and it cannot be used for commercial purposes without the formal consent of the trustees. Now surprisingly, the production company's lawyers think King's claim are off-base because English law does not recognize the right of personality.

The word for the CIA is that its dirty tricksters are going to be difficult to control when it comes to subverting the last hard-core Stalinist country in the world — Cuba. U. S. authorities have already warned Casto that if he tries to jam U. S. TV and radio stations in retaliation for newly planned U. S. TV broadcast to Cuba, that he will have hell to pay for.

North Korea's President Kim II Sung, 78, is preparing to turn his country's leadership over to his 48-year-old son, Kim Jong I in the near future. The problem is that young Kim is less than promising successor. He is reputed to be a heavy drinker with a taste for high-heeled shoes, racy women, pornography, Hollywood films and international terrorism. Such eccentric taste have led many observers to question how long Mr. Kim can run North Korea's shop.

Companies and unions opposed to tough air legislation contributed at least $27 million to congressional elect campaigns since 1981, according to a recently released report by the U. S. Public Interest Research Group. The non-profit organization says that the big three automaker and the National Auto Dealer Association gave almost $6 million of that total. USPIRG also found 153 PACs, primarily from the electric utility, coal, auto and chemical industries, contributed $3.45 million to congressional campaigns in 1989, based on Federal Election Commission data.

The Federal Trade Commission has "special responsibilities" in the areas of advertising and marketing of alcohol and tobacco products, according to FTC chairman Janet D. Steiger, who told the American Advertising Federation last week that she "would give the highest priority to allegations that such products are being promoted to young people."

Steiger told the meeting here that she is concerned "by charges that some members of the tobacco industry appear to believe they can target 18-year-old smokers without substantial risk to younger teenagers or even to pre-teens."

ASASU forum canceled because of poor response

By DAN NOWICKI
State Press

Wednesday's scheduled Associated Students of ASU executive candidate debate forum was canceled due to a poor response from the invited candidates.

The forum was organized by residence assistants at Manzanita Hall and was to have been held at the dorm at 8 p.m.

"The reason it was canceled was (because) there was a very poor response from the candidates," said Carlos Elvira, a residence assistant at Manzanita and co-organizer of the ill-fated forum. "Only two candidates responded promptly."

Elvira said the two candidates who responded were Matt Ortega, who is running for president, and Frank McCune, who is running for activities vice president. He added that executive vice president hopeful Jeanette Wiedemier made a belated confirmation.

"All candidates were notified two days prior (to the event)," Elvira continued. "I put a notice in each of the executive candidates' mailboxes."

He added that the notice asked all candidates to confirm their appearances.

"We were very appreciative of the candidates who took the time and effort to contact us," he said. "I think that demonstrates the willingness to get their platforms and ideas across to the residence students."

"The time and initiative that they took should be commended."

McCune said he was disappointed by the forum's cancellation.

"It's too bad because there's thousands of individuals in this residence hall alone and we need to reach those students," he said. "A lot of people talk about the lack of (student) involvement but very few people are willing to make an effort to reach the students."

Presidential candidate Chris Stiles conceded that he contributed to the cancellation of the forum.

"I basically had a mega-tight schedule and didn't receive the information until late this morning and I didn't call to confirm," Stiles said.

ASASU Elections Coordinator Brian Boley said that even though the Manzanita forum was organized independently, he would have liked to have seen the candidates turn out.

"The residence hall staff has been very helpful in promoting the election, regardless of this (forum) being canceled," Boley said.

Boley added that "there should be no problem" with the ASASU-sponsored candidate forum scheduled for today at 12:30 p.m. on West Lawn.

"I'm happy that (KTVK-TV Channel 3 newscaster) Ann Lanker has agreed to moderate," Boley said. "A newscaster like that really adds some credibility to the debate."

"This will be a great opportunity for the candidates to express how they feel," he said. "It's important that students know who they're voting for and we have some very dynamic candidates this year."

A second executive candidate debate forum is planned for next Monday at the same time and place. Elections will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday.

College students slap campus newspaper with 2-week suspension

By College Press Service

Student leaders at Pennsylvania's Millersville University, citing election violations and a failure to print a certain column, slapped The Snapper, the campus paper, with a two-week suspension March 15.

The student government's action, said Mark Goodman of the Student Press Law Center in Washington, D. C., "is patently unconstitutional under the First Amendment."

"It's just plain an offensive notion. They don't even do this in South Africa anymore," Goodman added.

The suspension is the first to be reported this term, Goodman said, although a similar controversy erupted in February 1989, at Duquesne University, also in Pennsylvania, when student politicians abruptly changed the locks of the paper's office in the middle of the night. They claimed the editor of The Duke was guilty of misconduct.

With a little more than two-thirds of the 40-member Millersville student government present, the vote was 12-8 in favor of stopping the paper, with six members abstaining.

The student politicians cited violations in last semester's newspaper elections and the failure of the editor-in-chief, who has since resigned, to run a certain student column.

The suspension of the weekly paper is set to start March 28, but University lawyers are going to decide whether the suspension is legal, said Millersville Vice President for Student Affairs Gary Reighard.

"Because of the importance of the matter, we will take the recommendation of the Senate before the legal counsel to be certain that there are no violations of the U. S. Constitution and the freedom of speech amendment," Reighard added.

Many have already said the suspension is illegal.

"To cease publication," said journalism Professor Paul Belgrade, "is beyond the right of anyone."

"It sort of bothers me this is student-on-student," added Snapper adviser Ralph Anttonen, "and I find it very strange to have students trying to stifle others."

"It was wrongdoing by the Millersville University Student Senate to suspend the newspaper," said Charles Williams, president of the Black Student Union.

Yet student government member Kathy Rinino said the journalists deserve the suspension.

"We are here to be educated," she told the Intelligencer Journal, the local paper. "We are not here to be on a newspaper."

Nearby campus papers, including those at Franklin and Marshall College and Elizabethtown College, have offered to help The Snapper print during the suspensions.

Most of the time, officers run into young couples instead and shoo them away.

Take, for example, the most recent incident that occurred at 1:25 a.m. Wednesday, when an officer cruising Centennial Circle came across a couple parked on the roadway. When contacted, they gave the officer the standard answer: They were "just talking."

The scenario has been played out countless times this year.

"We ask them to have their conversation elsewhere," ASU Police Chief Bill Bess said.

Bess said police have not caught anyone in a more advanced stage of "talking."

"We got there too early," he said. "We had the good fortune of being able to avoid that type of embarrassment."

Police currently are warning people about trespassing and loitering if they are found in the park after it closes. "We may start arresting," Bess added.

But he said the problems police encounter at the park really aren't with people "feeling amorous and looking for a quiet place."

The problems are from vandals or groups of people partying. The majority are non-students and teenagers.

Meanwhile, McQueen said officials don't want anyone to be discouraged from using the park during the day.

"It's public space," McQueen said of the park, which was completed in 1987. "It's a popular place to walk a dog, fish and boat."

"We want to keep that ambiance in the park for people to enjoy."

Club

The consultant's report said this idea is plausible if the club opens with 600 members and attracts 100 new members each year for five years.

However, Coor's caution with the project is forcing club organizers to re-examine their reports.

"We're looking at the operating budget to see how realistic the consultant's assumptions were," Zafra said.

Smuggle

It quoted authorities as saying that "the man at the top of the Iraqi operations is Ali Dagher, who was sent to London from Baghdad almost two years ago."

Dagher was arrested at his office shortly after the Iraqi flight took off, NBC said.

British officials declined to name any of those detained or make any formal statements directly confirming the affair.

"They're sensitive about Iraq and the number of British citizens there," U. S. Customs spokesman Ed Kittredge said. He mentioned Iraq's execution March 15 of Farzad Bazoft, an Iranian-born reporter who was working for a British newspaper.

Iraq accused Bazoft of spying. Britain reacted by withdrawing its ambassador from Iraq and expelling some Iraqis, but it has been reluctant to let relations with Baghdad worsen further.

Military experts said the devices are available only to a handful of major powers, and their export is strictly controlled. They recalled two previous smuggling attempts, one involving Israel and the other Pakistan, both of which have nuclear weapons ambitions.

Lithuania

This is in keeping with the Lithuanian strategy of refusing to obey "foreign" Soviet law while avoiding violent conflicts.

Only about 1,000 of the 30,000 guns registered in Lithuanian have been turned in to local police, said a Lithuanian Interior Ministry official, Yaroslav Prokopovich. He said local police were refusing to hand them over to the Soviet Army as Gorbachev ordered.

In Moscow, the commander of Soviet paratroopers alleged there had been an increase in attacks on soldiers since the independence declaration.

The state-run news agency Tass said Col. Gen. Vladislav Achalov reported "a noticeable increase in incidents of provocation against soldiers and armed attacks by groups of young hooligans against both individual soldiers and military sites."

Vilnius was calm Wednesday. In a continuing show of force, Soviet paratroopers guarded the republic's Communist Party headquarters, which they seized Tuesday, but removed their riot gear and no longer carried automatic rifles.

2 reported cases mark beginning of typical chicken pox season

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

Two reported cases of chicken pox this week mark the onset of the virus's typical season, and the director of the ASU Health Center is asking students to call the clinic if they develop symptoms.

"In comparison to previous years it's not as high," Pamela Tom said. She added, "Maybe we are at the beginning of the season."

The chicken pox virus is contracted through respiratory droplets, such as through coughing and drinking out of the same glass as someone who is infected. The illness is considered contagious two days before the outbreak of skin lesions up until seven days after noticing them.

Because there is no immunization from chicken pox, individuals must depend on their natural immunity to avoid getting sick, Tom said. Therefore, the only defense is to stay away from people who have it, she said.

Tom added that people who contract chicken pox when they're older often have a higher fever, a longer recovery time and feel more debilitated than younger patients.

"We definitely recommend they stay at home as to not affect other people," Tom said.

ASU nursing supervisor Phillip Hellyer said that because the virus can develop into something more serious in college-age students — such as pneumonia and meningitis — they should see a physician as soon as the symptoms occur.

"If the kids think they have the chicken pox they should come to the back (emergency) door at the health center," Hellyer said. "They should at least get a diagnosis."

Female condoms offer women more choices for birth control

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

They are a little too big to carry in your wallet, but when introduced, female condoms will offer women another choice in birth control and protection against sexually transmitted diseases.

Female condoms are awaiting FDA approval and have received contradictory reviews in clinical studies. Trained contraceptive personnel said they applauded the alternative choice the female condom offers but are reserving final judgement until demand is evaluated.

The revolutionary method of birth control is made of a soft, loose-fitting polyurethane sheath. It is approximately two inches across, is pre-lubricated and has a flexible ring at each end. The close-ended ring is inserted to fit against the cervix, similar to a diaphragm; the other ring fits on the outside of the vagina.

The condom will be available without a required fitting from a health care professional and will be available for purchase wherever traditional condoms are sold.

A study conducted by Reality, a producer of the new product, listed protection against STDs, a lower leakage rate over male condoms and less disruption to the sex act as advantages of the new contraception. The condom may be inserted a few hours before sex.

But some study participants complained that "either they or their partners don't like having something hang outside the vagina." In addition, some women complained of vaginal itching and irritation and labia irritation, the study reported.

An ASU health educator and counselor on contraceptives, Danae Brownell said the largest appeal of the female condom is that it offers another choice to women. "We really need more options," she said.

Brownell said if the female condoms are accepted by a large part of the population and proves effective and economical, the health center will probably stock them.

A model displays the new female condom.

"We would evaluate the effectiveness and the cost," she said. "It's likely female condoms will be more expensive" because they will be new to the market and relatively rare.

The associate director of Planned Parenthood of Central and Northern Arizona said female condoms might help lower STDs such as AIDS since it will be a "barrier method" of protection, similar to the condom.

"There's always been some reluctance on the part of men to wear condoms, so we think this is a very positive thing," Cheryl Swain said.

Man stabbed during fight

By CAROLYN HUFFMAN
State Press

A 33-year-old man was stabbed six times during a fight early Wednesday, Tempe police said.

Enrique Rodriguez, address unknown, was stabbed about 2 a.m. at 1218 S. Smith Road and was taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn where he underwent surgery and was later listed in fair condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Investigators still are searching for the suspect in the case. It is unknown if Rodriguez knew the suspect.

Police said Rodriguez was stabbed after he allegedly instigated a fight when a car with two passengers approached him and he blocked the car with his own.

Rodriguez exited his car holding a metal bar and allegedly smashed the rear window of the other car before he hit the driver over the head with it, police said.

The driver then retaliated by stabbing Rodriguez repeatedly with a knife. He also hit Rodriguez with the metal bar before fleeing the scene with a female passenger who was not involved in the fight.

Man with fork robs store

A Tempe convenience store clerk was forced to fork over $80 in cash to a robber early Wednesday.

Police said a barefoot man armed only with a metal fork entered the Circle K store at 904 W. Broadway Road at about 2 a.m. and confronted the clerk.

The suspect, who was believed to be a transient, took the money from the clerk and fled on foot westbound from the store. A search by officers who used a police dog was unsuccessful.

Police described the man as a Caucasian male, 5-foot-8, 190 pounds, with brown hair in a ponytail, in addition to having a beard and moustache. He was last seen wearing a red shirt and blue pants.

Sgt. Al Taylor, of the Tempe police department, said holdups involving forks are uncommon.

"They're not normal," he said.

ASU to host high school science and engineering fair

By KRISTIE YOUNG
State Press

Arizona whiz kids will display their wares at ASU next week when the University will host the 1990 Central Arizona Regional Science and Engineering Fair.

Junior and senior high school students from six central Arizona counties will exhibit their projects in 13 categories of science and engineering for the 37th annual fair on April 5 and 6 in the University Activity Center.

"The fair is held to promote science and engineering studies," said Mike McNerney, a temporary staff member hired to help organize the fair. "We want students to go beyond high school and continue their education."

Any students from grades seven through 12 can enter. Each project will be judged in either the junior or the senior age category.

The topic categories include behavioral and social science, biochemistry, botany, environmental science, medicine and health, microbiology, computer science and zoology.

McNerney said that several "interesting" projects had been entered already.

The projects range from psychological affects studies to rats in a maze.

Titles such as "Does the Color of a Goldfish Affect its Learning?" and "Do Plants Have Ears?" are some examples of the projects in the competition. "What Does Mold Prefer to Eat?" and "Cooking with the Sun" were also entered.

McNerney said that the senior division has projects that are very detailed and difficult.

"Some of them have pretty heavy-duty stuff in them," he said.

"One project in the senior division is titled 'Alcohol Dehydrogenase Selection in Drosophilla Melanogaster,'" McNerney said. "There's a vast difference between the alcohol projects and 'The Rats Go Four By Four.'"

The judging will be done by teachers from schools that do not have contestants entered into the fair and by ASU graduate students.

McNerney said that several businesses from around the Valley have donated money and awards to the fair.

"NASA, Kodak and the U. S. Army have all donated awards," he said. "Some awards will even be in cash."

Winners of the regional competition will proceed to the 41st International Science and Engineering Fair held in Tulsa, Okla., May 6 through 12.

FOND DU LAC, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin tourism promoters hoping to curdle the blood of sharp-tongued columnist Mike Royko are sending him a cheese carving in his own likeness, designating him an honorary "cheesehead."

The 45-pound, 2-foot-tall cheddar bust, complete with eyeglasses, is the latest tit-for-tat spat between the Fond du Lac tourist bureau and the acerbic Chicago Tribune writer. It began when the bureau made fun of Chicago's crime problems and Royko bit back by referring to Wisconsin residents as "cheeseheads... content to chomp on bratwurst."

Royko felt a little yellow behind the ears. "They can do whatever they want with their cheese," the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer retorted Tuesday.

A Royko column in January described Fond du Lac as a tranquil place where residents' "eyes are glazed, their jaws hang slackly and a few drooled."

"No, I can't find it in my heart to lash out at those northern neighbors we josh as cheeseheads," he wrote. "From its farms to its cities, you won't find kinder, simpler folk anywhere, except in custodial care."

Ron St. Mary, a chef at the Holiday Inn in Fond du Lac, carved the bust in six hours, using water and heat to mold it like clay.

"I guess it's just one cheesehead to another," the chef said.

Sun Devils win 11-0 as Silcox hurls 3-hitter

ASU designated hitter Jim Henderson steals second in Wednesday's 11-0 win against Cal Poly-Pomona at Packard Stadium.

By SETH SULKA
State Press

Freshman Todd Steverson belted a solo home run over center field's 30-foot high Green Monster and Rusty Silcox pitched a three-hit shutout as the Sun Devils won their 11th game in a row with a 11-0 rout of Cal Poly Pomona in front of 1,319 spectators.

On a night when the wind seemed destined to help some fly balls make it over the right field fence, Steverson became only the ninth player in Packard Stadium's 16-year history to accomplish the feat. Steverson was the second Sun Devil to do it this season as teammate Anthony Manahan knocked one over the monster in a Jan. 29 game against Cal-Riverside.

"It felt good," said Steverson, who has struggled at the plate this season, hitting at a .191 pace. "The ball was up and I got all of it. I'm making more contact because I'm keeping my hands up and driving the ball to right field."

The fourth-ranked Sun Devils (27-9 overall, 8-5 Pac-10 Southern Division) took a 2-0 lead in the first inning off loser Erick Gomez (2-6) when left fielder Jim Austin doubled in two runs.

ASU led 9-0 after the fourth inning, which was highlighted by center fielder Mike Kelly's three-run homer and left fielder Jim Austin's solo shot.

Kelly, who now has a team-leading nine home runs, also hit a double as he collected four RBI in the game. Austin, along with his eight home run of the season, hit a single and a double while driving in three runs.

The Broncos (9-21) were held scoreless by ASU's right hander. Silcox (1-2) allowed just three hits as he pitched his first complete game of the season.

"That's what I needed," said Silcox, who missed the first four weeks of the season while his eligibility was cleared. "Having not gone more than 6 2/3 innings, I thought it would be a good outing if I could complete it.

ASU center fielder Mike Kelly is welcomed at home plate by Todd Steverson and Fernando Vina after hitting three-run homer in the fourth inning.

"Anytime that you pitch a shutout, no matter who it is against, it feels good. But I think that I got more confidence from going the complete game than from getting the shutout."

ASU Head Coach Jim Brock said that he knew Silcox would be behind the other pitchers because of his late start, but that this game was very promising.

"It was very important that he showed himself that he could go nine (innings)," Brock said.

The Sun Devils' 11-game streak marks their longest since winning 26 straight in 1988-89.

The two teams will complete the series today at 2:30 p.m. with ASU right hander Kip Vaughn (4-3, 3.40 ERA) expected to face righty Bob Bishop (0-0, 6.26).

Softball splits doubleheader with No. 3 UofA

By MATTHEW KASTER
State Press

Despite being overlooked in this week's NCAA top-20 rankings, the ASU softball team has proof that it can run with the best.

After splitting Wednesday's doubleheader against third-ranked UofA (5-3, 3-6), it seems certain that somebody must have goofed.

"I definitely think we should be ranked," shortstop Ann Rowan said. "I don't think that our record shows how good of a team we are. We're gradually improving, and we stayed in it with UofA right up to the end. I know we're up there."

The Sun Devils put forth a solid performance in the first game of the series. Rowan collected two singles in her three at bats, numbers that were matched by pitcher Melinda Cook and third baseman Stephanie May.

ASU's improved hitting paid off when it rallied in the fifth inning, collecting four runs to take a 5-2 lead. Designated player Michelle Madrid and second baseman Liz Phillips were each credited with two RBI during the rally while seven of the nine batters had at least one hit.

Despite the rally, ASU had to hold off one last Wildcat burst. UofA was able to put three runners on base in the bottom of the seventh inning, and power hitter Nikki Dennis was put into the lineup.

Dennis led the nation in RBI in 1989, but relief pitcher Terri Carnicelli was able to get Dennis out on strikes to preserve the win.

In the second game, the situation was reversed. Shortstop Ann Rowan came up to bat with ASU trailing 6-3 in the bottom of the seventh with two outs and the bases loaded.

Rowan had already put in an outstanding performance during the second game, driving in all three of the Sun Devils' runs. However, UofA pitcher Ginnie Scheller was able to retire Rowan on strikes.

Despite losing the second game, Rowan remained positive about the team's outlook.

"It gave us a lot of confidence," Rowan said, "not only to win the first game but to stay in the second one until the end. The team stayed positive all the way through the second game and we knew it could have gone either way."

Womens tennis edges UofA — again

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

For the seventh time in a row, the ASU womens tennis team defeated UofA in a down-to-the-wire battle as it edged the Wildcats, 5-3, Wednesday at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

Sun Devil Head Coach Sheila McInerney said she knew the match would be close due to the three 5-4 contests between the teams last season.

"It's a close rivalry and it's always intense," she said. "I think we were pretty evenly matched and we were definitely nip and tuck the whole way — it wasn't easy."

In singles competition, ASU's No. 1 player Krista Amend defeated Danielle Scott, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, No. 5 Barbara Thompson dropped Beth Choate, 6-1, 6-0 and No. 6 Karen Bergan beat Kyra Johnson, 6-2, 6-4, leaving the score tied at 3-3.

Due to the Sun Devils' strength in doubles play, McInerney said she felt confident going into the second half.

"Against most teams, we can win two out of three of the doubles," she said. "We felt good at 3-3, if it had been at 4-2, it would have been hard for us mentally."

ASU's 17th-ranked doubles team of Jennifer Rojohn and Bergan defeated the Wildcats' No. 12 team of Banni Redhair and Betsy Somerville, 7-6, 6-1. On the third court, Sun Devils Kristi Jonkosky and Pam Cioffi defeated Danielle Klurman and Johnson, 7-5, 6-2. The doubles match on court two was forfeited due to Laura Glitz's sore leg.

Redhair, who is the sister of Sun Devil basketball player Mike Redhair and only cheers for ASU in basketball, said the match could have easily gone either way, but felt the Sun Devils came through better in pressure situations.

"You have to give ASU credit, they got tough and really played well," she said. "They got some big points in some key games and when the pressure was on they came through more than we did."

Redhair said it was disheartening to lose to the Sun Devils because of the rivalry.

"We were definitely psyched up because they are good and they are our rivals and we were expecting a tough match," she said. "But when it comes down to it and you are playing tennis you don't worry so much about (the rivalry), but it always fires you up and is kind of sticking out in your mind."

Jonkosky said the rivalry factor ended up working more to the advantage of ASU, adding that winning felt better than it usually does.

"Even though we are higher in the rankings and were expecting to win, we know we have to play well to beat them," Jonkosky said. "If we had to beat any team below us, this is definitely the most fun one."

The match against UofA was one of many six-hour matches the Sun Devils have played this season. McInerney said no practice session could ever equal battles like that in terms of experience.

"As much as you try in practice, you cannot simulate a situation like this one in intensity," she said. "Plus, it's fun, the kids have fun and they feel good."

Bowlers pick up spare bid to nationals

By KRIS TIMMONS
State Press

While many ASU students were lounging on the beach during spring break, the mens bowling club was rolling to a second-place finish at the sectional bowling tournament in Fresno, Calif.

Coming off victories at the Southwestern Intercollegiate Masters League and regionals, the Sun Devils' needed a finish in the top two at sectionals to advance to nationals in Portland, Ore., April 25-29.

ASU's last appearance in nationals was 1988 with its last victory there coming in 1981.

"The second-place finish felt really good," Head Coach Mike Landrith said. "The team has improved a lot and I was happy for them."

San Diego State, the 1989 national champs, took first place at sectionals over ASU with a 208-201 team average advantage. The Sun Devils had three bowlers average over 200 for the tournament and senior Randy Keller (209) earned a spot at the state qualifications for TEAM USA.

"We felt that we could win," Keller said. "The team had the attitude to win."

Senior Dan Saltich (205) also will be competing in the state qualifications after his performance during sectionals.

The ASU bowlers now are looking ahead to nationals but freshman Josh Cobleigh said, "So far it's the best winning experience."

Joining Keller, Saltich and Cobleigh on the traveling squad will be Tom Ebbitt, Chris Valdivia and Rob Riojas.

"I would have felt cheated if we didn't make it to nationals," Landrith said.

Although two Sun Devil bowlers have been struggling of late, Landrith said he has confidence in the team.

"I think they have the potential and the ability to win nationals, but they have to put time into it," he said. "We don't offer scholarships for bowling so a lot depends on the bowlers themselves. I can't expect too much from them but they are willing to work. No matter what happens at nationals, the season has been a success."

Among the 12 teams at nationals, top-ranked Wichita State will be the Sun Devils' toughest competition. Ebbitt said he is not concerned with the Shockers.

"Any team can be beat at any time," Ebbitt said, "and we definitely have the confidence to win."

Valdivia said that making it to nationals is nice but "the job's not done yet."
