Second forum turns volatile for candidates

By DAN NOWICKI
State Press

The 1990 Associated Students of ASU elections begin today, following an explosive executive candidate debate forum on Monday.

Students will vote today and Wednesday for all four ASASU executive positions, ASASU senators from each college and several college council presidents.

Monday's midday executive candidate forum on West Lawn was the second of two such events sponsored by ASASU. KTSP-TV Channel 10 newscaster Claren Scott moderated the event, which drew about 200 students.

Presidential candidate Tami Willingham fired the first shot of the day by exceeding the time allotted for her opening speech, ignoring repeated requests from Scott to wrap it up. Amid cries of "cut her off" from members of the crowd, Scott turned off Willingham's microphone.

Willingham angrily told Scott to "hold on" and insisted that she "still had a point to make" before the sound was turned off.

When the microphone went dead, Willingham was in the process of attacking presidential candidate Chris Stiles for what she called his failure to achieve tangible results after his involvement in February's tuition protest/sit-in on campus.

The other presidential candidates are Matt Ortega Andy Ortiz and Greg Mechem. Mechem was the only executive candidate not to participate in the forum.

Willingham began her speech by describing her ability to generate campaign contributions and control campaign expenditures.

"A strong campaign, to me, demonstrates fitness for office," she said.

"As far as the issues are concerned, I found files and files of information, I read and read," Willingham said. "I read about issues about the quality of education, about protests for the Board of Regents to decrease tuition.

"If you had read those reports with me, you would realize how much rhetoric and lip service goes on at this University."

Presidential candidate Matt Ortega's speech concentrated mainly on the experience factor, but he also directed barbs at the other presidential hopefuls.

Calling himself "a leadership scholar," Ortega told the crowd that there is a shortage of qualified leadership among the opposing candidates.

"I'm not talking about experience gained overnight or experience in other areas, but experience that is specific to this job," he said.

Ortega pointed out his role in organizing the successful tuition protest in Great Hall last year, as well as mentioning his working relationships with the Arizona Board of Regents.

"I don't claim to have all the answers, but I have the ability to solve problems and make the tough decisions that will be necessary for next year's president," he said.

Stiles spontaneously altered his speech to respond to some of the leadership questions posed by Ortega.

"Inevitably in a presidential campaign, you hear a lot of rhetoric and you also hear a lot about issues, and I think that anyone who I had an opportunity to speak with in person, or anyone who has seen a copy of the Stiles agenda, knows that Stiles is about issues," he said.

Stiles chose not to elaborate about his participation in February's tuition protest and sit-in, saying "there's already been enough publicity on that."

However, Stiles added that his administration would not shy away from student activism and would not "put a damper on (students') ability and desire to spontaneously organize for themselves."

Stiles continued by briefly describing his four-point agenda, which addresses quality of education issues such as class sizes, availability of required classes and faculty salaries, campus recycling programs, business monopolies

In his address, Ortiz said the students will be the leaders in his administration.

"I wish to make my campaign a vehicle through which the voice of all ASU students may be heard and listened to, for the student voice is the most vital ingredient toward the goal of campus advancement and the realization of ASU's destiny of excellence," he said.

3 finalists named for Student Affairs vice president

By NICOLE CARROLL
State Press

The field of candidates for the position of vice president for Student Affairs has been narrowed to three — including the current acting vice president Christine Wilkinson — all of whom will be interviewed by the selection committee during this month, the committee's chairman said Monday.

"We were looking for somebody whose background and experience gave us the confidence that they would work well in this position," said John Menuier, dean of the College of Architecture and Environmental Design.

ASU President Lattie Coor will make the final selection after receiving from the committee an evaluation of all three finalists.

Wilkinson, who has served at ASU for 20 years, will compete with Thomas Aceto, vice president for Administration at the University of Maine; and Charles Shroeder, vice president of Student Development at St. Louis University, for the top spot in Student Affairs.

Coor said he is looking at the candidates' recommendations, leadership abilities and "their sense of fit at ASU."

The successful candidate will replace former Student Affairs Vice President Betty Turner Asher, who left ASU in the summer of 1989 to become president of the University of South Dakota.

While serving with Student Affairs, Asher was the only female vice president in the ASU administration. Wilkinson is the only female and the sole minority in the final selection process.

However, Coor said he will not let gender and culture issues sway his judgment.

"In fairness to all candidates I will weigh and assess all qualities," he said. "I have such respect of the search process that I don't want to go in this with any pre-conceived ideas."

Associated Students of ASU President Paul Larson, who served on the search committee, agreed with Coor and added that it was going to be a tight race.

"Our deliberations produced three very highly qualified candidates," Larson said. "They are very strong and very comparable candidates."

Menuier agreed that the committee's selection was based solely on the finalists' qualifications.

Wilkinson received two degrees from ASU: an undergraduate degree in English education in 1966 and a doctorate degree in higher education in 1976. She was awarded the title of ASU's outstanding female graduate after completing her

Tempe to consider proposal to enhance city canal

By HOBART ROWLAND
State Press

A city study focusing on the enhancement of Tempe's canals could become reality as early as this fall, when community development officials hope work will begin on a waterfall designed to empty treated water from the Western Canal into Kiwanis Lake.

Senior Planner Gary Meyer said the proposal, which covers the section of Western Canal that runs through Kiwanis Park, should go before the Tempe City Council within the next few months. Meyer said that in future years, a bike trail, trees and additional landscaping should be added along the canal.

But Meyer said Tempe must reach a new agreement with the Salt River Project for use of the canal banks. The city's proposal, he said, would take the 1972 agreement between SRP and the Tempe Parks and Recreation Board a step further by allowing further enhancement and the possibility for commercial development along the banks.

Meyer said Scottsdale reached its own legal agreement with SRP last year.

"Scottsdale is a leader in this (canal enhancement) because (a canal) runs right through their downtown," he said.

Most of Tempe's canals, he said, run through less densely populated residential areas.

Meyer said the Kiwanis Park section of the Western Canal was chosen by the city because of the park's high use and canal's easy access. He also pointed out that within a year, reclaimed water from Kiwanis Lake could be used to maintain the new landscaping.

But according to Meyer, adequate funding is needed before ground can be broken on the project. Meyer said $500,000 has already been provided for a basic system to be installed by the city's engineering department that will add oxygen to water reclaimed from Kiwanis Lake. The "aerated" water will then be fit for use on the landscaping along the canal banks.

Meyer said the city already has the funding to build the aeration system, but, he added, an extra $200,000 is needed to create an aesthetically pleasing waterfall.

According to SRP representative Mike Zimmerman, approximately 131 miles of main canal run through the Valley. Granite Reef Diversion Dam — a back-up to the main source, the Salt and Verde rivers — fills the arteries with water. In addition, he said, 800 miles of smaller waterways sprout from the Southern and Arizona canals to irrigate the parched Valley.

According to Fritz Beeson, an attorney in SRP's law department, Tempe's proposal will be similar to Scottsdale's master agreement, opening the Arizona Canal to public use and possible commercial development.

"It's a legal structure in which the cities are permitted to do certain activities on the canal banks," Beeson said.

Although commercial development is permitted under the Scottsdale agreement, Beeson said SRP's "primary obligation is to service water and power to its customers."

Any commercial development, he said, would be under the company's "very close scrutiny."

Beeson said the Tempe agreement is still in the negotiation stages.

The ASU College of Architecture and Environmental Design is finishing up its own canal enhancement study begun in 1988 with almost $100,000 in grants from the National Endowment For the Arts, SRP and other Valley cities.

Lithuania wants gradual, full independence

President asks Moscow to send officials for talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Lithuania's president on Monday invited Kremlin officials to Lithuania to discuss the republic's secession drive and struck a conciliatory note by saying Lithuania wants gradual, not immediate, full independence.

While government officials sought a compromise solution to the dispute, 1,000 pro-independence demonstrators rallied at the Lithuanian prosecutor's office to protest its occupation by Soviet soldiers.

Washington deplored Moscow for ordering all 100 foreign journalists in the republic to leave by Monday.

There was no immediate response from Moscow to the invitation from President Vytautas Landsbergis of Lithuania.

Landsbergis told Lithuanian legislators that officials face "political difficulties" in dealing with Lithuania's March 11 declaration of independence.

"Therefore it is essential to look for a way of helping them and ourselves," he said in comments carried on Lithuanian Radio and monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London.

Gorbachev faces independence movements in several of the Soviet Union's 15 republics. Lithuania and its Baltic neighbors, Estonia and Latvia, were annexed after the Soviets took control of them under the Hitler-Stalin pact of 1940.

The Lithuanian declaration of independence "may seem to some people . . . a demand that power be handed over the very next day," Landsbergis said. "We did not expect this and did not count upon it."

Instead, Landsbergis told legislators the republic had stated "how by means of agreements and a gradual takeover of certain functions, we would consolidate our independence."

Gorbachev has said talks on independence can take place only if Lithuania renounces its declaration of March 11. He has pressured the republic to do so by sending Red Army soldiers to take over public buildings in the Lithuanian capital, Vilnius.

Lithuanians carry posters calling for freedom and independence at a rally in Vilnius Monday. Lithuania invited Soviet officials to visit Vilnius and sent a delegation to Moscow in hopes of beginning talks toward resolving a tense standoff over the Baltic republic's declaration of independence.

Refusal to take back the declaration of independence may result in "grave consequences for all of us," Gorbachev said in a statement to Lithuanians on Saturday.

In a telegram sent to Gorbachev on Monday morning, Landsbergis indicated that legislators would debate a full response, and he invited a Kremlin representative to take part in the discussion to explain Moscow's stand.

Landsbergis also sent a delegation to Moscow in the hopes of starting negotiations in the Soviet capital.

Spokesmen for the Lithuanian Supreme Council said legislator Egidius Bickauskas had gone to Moscow in hopes of meeting with Soviet leaders, and that three other people including Deputy Premier Romualdas Ozolas were following.

Iraq says would use gas against Israeli attack

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — President Saddam Hussein said for the first time Monday that Iraq has deadly binary nerve-gas weapons, and he threatened to use them on Israel if the Jewish state attacks Iraq.

Binary weapons, usually artillery shells or missile warheads, contain two relatively safe compounds that combine to produce toxic nerve gases. They are outlawed under a 1925 treaty.

Iraq is already seen as a frontrunner in a Middle Eastern drive to develop arsenals of long-range and surface-to-surface missiles. Its development of chemical weapons, and possibly nuclear arms, has raised fears of an arms race in the volatile region.

Saddam, in a speech broadcast by Baghdad Radio, denied Iraq has nuclear weapons. Concerns about this were raised last week by the interception in London of Iraqi-bound trigger devices that officials said were designed for nuclear bombs.

"I categorically deny that we have any atomic bombs," the president said at a ceremony in Baghdad, where he awarded medals to senior military officers.

Saddam claimed that during the 1980-88 war with Iran, "Iraq was offered enriched uranium and even a complete atomic bomb by people who were either American, British or Zionist agents. But Iraq turned down these offers."

He did not elaborate. Such an offer would not be in accord with Western efforts to block nuclear military technology to developing nations.

The Iraqi Foreign Ministry also said Monday that Iraq was not seeking to develop nuclear weapons.

Saddam warned the Israelis that if they try to repeat their June 1981 air strike on a French-built nuclear reactor near Baghdad, he will retaliate with chemical weapons.

"I say that if Israel dares to hit even one piece of steel on any industrial site, we will make the fire eat half of Israel," he declared.

"Let them hear, here and now, that we do possess binary chemical weapons which only the United States and Soviet Union have," he said.

In a clear reference to Israel, which is believed to be the only Middle Eastern power with nuclear weapons, Saddam said: "Those who are threatening us with nuclear bombs: We warn them that we will hit them with this binary chemical weapon."

Avi Pazner, a spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, said, "We have no aggressive intention against anyone, including Iraq."

Asked about the possibility of a pre-emptive strike, Pazner said: "We don't even want to talk about that kind of thing."

Western intelligence officials have said for some time that Iraq is developing binary and other chemical weapons at a chain of top-secret research installations.

Only the United States and Soviet Union have officially admitted having binary weapons, although some other countries were believed to possess them.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Nizar Hamdoon, undersecretary of the Iraqi Foreign Ministry, said Iraq developed the weapons before the end of the eight-year Iran-Iraq war but did not use them in that conflict.

News Brief

100 British policemen mobilized to hunt suspects after tax riot

LONDON (AP) — Authorities on Monday mobilized 100 policemen to track down suspects in a weekend anti-tax rally that erupted into a riot and one of the worst outbreaks of violence in modern-day London.

The courts took a hard line with some of the 339 people already arrested. At least 12 taken into custody during Saturday's six-hour melee at Trafalgar Square were refused bail at five London courts.

Most of the 68 people in court Monday were in their teens or 20s and gave addresses in London "squats" — illegal residences in abandoned houses or apartments. The charges ranged from arson to criminal damage and theft to threatening behavior.

Scotland Yard police headquarters said the riot over the imposition of a new tax by the Thatcher government on every adult caused hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage and injured 374 of the 2,198 police officers involved. Police said 86 civilians were injured.

Charges of blame for the violence meanwhile flew back and forth. Authorities accused anarchists, who in turn blamed police.

Inmates still on loose in England prison

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — More than 100 inmates ran loose Monday in a prison devastated by riots, but guards regained control of much of the prison and officials were in contact with the inmates still inside, authorities said.

Some prisoners hung up a flag saying "No Dead," but the government said deaths could not be ruled out in one of Britain's worst prison riots.

Authorities said 37 inmates and 12 prison guards had been injured since the riots began Sunday at the Strangeways prison, one of the most crowded jails in Britain. News media reported unconfirmed accounts of up to 12 deaths.

Prison staff regained control of four cell blocks and the kitchen Monday after scores of inmates surrendered. Rioters still held five blocks, said the Home Office, which is in charge of prisons.

Home Secretary David Waddington said some surrendering prisoners claimed a number of inmates were dead, but he said no bodies had been found.

"The general picture is of prisoners indulging in violence on other prisoners — the full consequences of which remain to be discovered," Waddington told a hushed House of Commons.

He said nine surrendering prisoners claimed to have been forcibly injected with drugs by other inmates.

Dr. Philip Randall of North Manchester General Hospital said most of the more serious injuries were caused by prisoners assaulting other prisoners.

By late afternoon, 1,458 inmates had been transferred to other prisons. Seventy-four more were awaiting transport and 114 were still loose inside the prison, the Home Office said.

"The (prison) governor has been in touch with the prisoners all day long," said Home Office spokesman Roy Payne. "There has been no confrontation, no demands and no threat."

Police with riot gear were on stand-by along with squads of armed officers.

"The riot is the worst prison disturbance this century," said a Labor Party spokesman, Barry Sheerman. "Strangeways is a ghastly place, and conditions there are very difficult for the inmates and the staff."

There was no clear indication what caused the rioting. It began during Sunday morning service in the prison chapel, when inmates grabbed keys from guards and used them to gain access to large areas of the facility.

The inmates started fires, and at one point it was feared the 19th century Victorian prison would burn down.

"If you imagine a bomb dropped in World War II in a built-up area, that's what it looks like," said John Bartell, chairman of the Prison Officers' Association, on Monday. "They've ripped off landing rails, wire netting and doors. Anything that can be damaged has been damaged. . . . They have burned down a number of buildings."

He said the prison management was warned that "there would be a serious disturbance this weekend," and he

ASASU elections today

When students go to the polls today and Wednesday, they will be selecting the handful of students who will lead ASU student government for the next 12 months. These leaders will need the organizational skills to manage a budget of about $750,000, as well as the vision and perseverance to lobby both the Legislature and the Arizona Board of Regents on students' behalf.

This year's failure at the tuition hearings — in contrast to the previous year's record — clearly points to the opportunities held by a strong student government and the dangers of a weak one. Thus, the fight for reasonable tuition, better and more programming and higher quality education all begin today — with your vote.

In addition to the candidates in question, there are two petitions on the ballot this year — Petitions Five and Six.

Petition Five, which concerns the "Sun Devil Spark" yearbook, is broken into two parts. One part asks, "Should the yearbook program be maintained on campus?" The answer to this is obviously yes. At a school with very little tradition, a yearbook is a great link to the past.

The second question is a little more difficult. It asks if students support the installation of a mandatory $1 fee during registration in order to support the yearbook. Students should ponder this question with one fact in mind: It is a virtual certainty that without the subsidy, one slow year of book sales would doom the yearbook and end the tradition at ASU.

Senate Petition Six is a resolution asking for student support for affordable child care on campus. It is difficult to imagine any cogent argument against this idea. The University community contains many older re-entry students, as well as traditional students with children, and it is vital that ASU serves this part of the student body with affordable child care.

The following is the list of candidates we feel will best serve the needs of students.

Activities Vice President: Clearly, candidate Frank McCune has done his homework on ASASU Activities. The 20-year-old is capable of fielding questions on any area of the Activities office — and has prepared a detailed description of the events he wishes to develop, including an ASU music festival, a continuing parade of interesting national speakers and the traditional Homecoming activities.

McCune is prepared and competent, but he doesn't play politics or lose sight of what the activities vice president is supposed to do — promote campus events that are fun for students.

Campus Affairs Vice President: Throughout the ASASU campaign, Morgan Reed has demonstrated that he has the enthusiasm and drive necessary to add life to the Campus Affairs office. Reed seeks to improve and fine-tune the vital services provided by Campus Affairs — such as the Safety Escort Service and the Bike Co-op — without disrupting their already proven track record. And his expressed intolerance for red tape and what he terms "redundancy" within the office should spur him to streamline and instill efficiency within the Campus Affairs structure.

Perhaps most importantly, Reed, 21, recognizes the importance of promoting the Campus Affairs services — a sometimes neglected task. If students don't know the services are there, they might as well not be.

Executive Vice President: Until a few days ago, Jeanette Wiedemeier was the only candidate in the running for the exec. VP post. Perhaps that is the reason she has failed to delineate clearly her stand on issues. Nevertheless, she has experience as assistant to Mike Pressendo, this year's vice president, and she should be able to assume the duties of the office with relative ease.

President: Students have been fortunate to have observed a strong field of qualified candidates make a run for the ASASU presidency during the past two weeks. Most have strong platforms, solid backgrounds and well-articulated reasons for desiring the top student government job at what is now the nation's fifth largest university.

But one candidate, Chris Stiles, stands out in the crowd.

Stiles has served students ably for two years as an ASASU senator from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Throughout his term, he has been recognized by both his peers and his constituents as one of the most effective and conscientious members of the Senate. As chairman of the Senate Government Operations Committee, he has had a hand in many pieces of important legislation and has been a vocal student advocate.

But it was during the February tuition protest/sit-in that Chris Stiles came to the fore.

Frustrated by tuition hikes levied by the Board of Regents, Stiles led a diverse group of angry students in a lengthy, exhausting protest that attracted statewide media attention and prompted the Arizona Legislature to consider freezing tuition at its current level — and set up a good foundation for future talks with legislators and regents, as well.

Most importantly, his ability to unify students from all walks of campus life in the pursuit of one common goal — a better, reasonably-priced education for us all — bodes well for his role as leader of the student body.

Stiles, 22, represents a break with the traditional ASASU politics of the past. He promises to bring new blood into the ASASU system — students who have been uninvolved with political activities during most of their University careers are the backbone of the Stiles constituency.

These students have seen, through the recent protest, the effects that organized, cohesive action can bring. And they are ready to provide an infusion of enthusiasm and new ideas into student government.

The Stiles platform is centered on issues that directly affect students. Improving the quality of education by hard and thorough research and negotiation — with protesting as a last-resort option — is a primary plank. And the Stiles goal of registering student voters could provide the needed political muscle necessary for students to make headway where the real decisions involving higher education are made in the state — at the Capitol.

Developing a campuswide recycling plan — with proceeds to be cycled back into student financial aid — trying to ensure an equitable campus alcohol policy and working to encourage free enterprise and a wider variety of food services in the MU are all Stiles issues that have captured the student interest and imagination.

Simply put, Stiles is calm and mature enough to work on an intelligent level with legislators, regents and administrators, yet aggressive enough to battle for student interests. He is enough of a "regular" student to be in touch with our needs, but enough of an "insider" to have the connections necessary to make a real difference.

He is, as his campaign literature asserts, an "uncommon candidate."

And he would make an excellent ASASU president.

Stiles not as committed as he claims

Editor:

All of the following information is a matter of public record:

Under the leadership of Chris Stiles, the Government Operations Committee of ASASU produced only one piece of legislation, Senate Bill 96. It dealt with the membership of the Supreme Court. It is common knowledge that Chris has a record of showing up late or not at all to the committee meetings.

The following senators are members of the Government Operations Committee: Chris Stiles (chair), Anne Bourchardt, Diane Eddy, (fall semester only), Mary Moran, David Auerbach (spring only), and Daniela Conklin.

Chris Stiles is also a member of the Executive Committee of ASASU. He has only attended 12 of the 21 meetings he was elected to represent the Senate in. Chris was absent from the following Executive Committee meetings: June 1, (E); June 29, (?); July 11, (E); July 20, (?); Aug. 3, (A); Sept. 21, (E); Oct. 12, (E); and Feb. 1, (A). ("A" is an absence, "E" is excused absence and "?" is unknown.)

Chris' Senate attendance record indicates that he was late or absent from six of the 13 Senate general sessions in his most recent term. Chris was not present at the first role call on the following dates: Nov. 7, Nov. 21, Dec. 5, Feb. 27, March 13 and March 27.

According to ASASU Bylaws, Title IV, Article 1, 1.3, three unexcused absences are grounds for expulsion.

Yearbook is more than pictures

Editor:

More people are realizing their value in today's political systems. On each ballot, beside the names of the candidates, are other questions. One of the questions will be a petition for a $1 fee which would help fund the "Sun Devil Spark" yearbook program.

Some of you may be planning to vote "no" to this petition. I also would not have even considered voting "yes" had I not collected some information that made me more receptive to the idea.

I always thought that a yearbook had pictures of students and organizations and little else. In the "Sun Devil Spark," however, there is more to offer than pictures with cute little captions. The "Spark" has a section covering important events such as the opening of the Berlin Wall, and we all know that today's events are part of tomorrow's history. There is also some information about organizations. But most importantly, the book is like a bit of publicity for ASU. While that might not be important for some of you, think about this: How valuable are the degrees from well-known schools like Stanford as compared to here? If ASU was more well known, could it have an effect on our validity as potentially qualified lawyers, doctors, accountants and teachers?

Maybe the "Spark" yearbook isn't a tradition now, but there are no traditions that began as old traditions, and we have to start somewhere. If you would like to help start a tradition, vote "yes."

Tuition protest: Personal agenda

Editor:

Ever since the student protest last month, one presidential candidate has received favorable coverage from the State Press. My question is: What has this candidate done to prove he is worthy for office? He refers to himself as the uncommon candidate, and he talks about people, not posters. He goes on to state that he has an agenda, not a resume. Students of ASU, listen carefully to what he is saying and see through the emotional rhetoric. Don't allow your emotional buttons to be pushed without thinking. When he says he has an agenda, believe him because it is a personal agenda, not a record of accomplishment. That is why he has no resume to hand out. He initiated the student protest as a campaign stunt to get elected. When people have to resort to name-calling, stealing flags and political stunts to get elected to office then they are not worthy of representing you and me.

ASU students wake up and see this election for what it is. Who do you want to represent you? A person who has a personal agenda, a person who has no record of accomplishment to stand on, a person who encourages students to break the law by stealing, a person who is insensitive to cultural issues, a person so out of touch with the issues he will have to be hand-fed by the administration or a person who gives lip service and hot air to students? We need results, not a year of ineffective leadership.

Don't allow yourself to be manipulated by the "love relationship" between this candidate and the State Press. I say "love relationship" because the State Press has never criticized or questioned the worthiness of this candidate. And thus, the State Press itself should lose credibility if it endorses this candidate.

It's students who make the difference on this campus; students who elect who they want to represent them. Too much is at stake, don't allow yourself to be manipulated.

Sweden

Europe's socialist paradise seems to be lost

Cody Shearer
North American Syndicate

WASHINGTON — With all the hoopla surrounding the sudden collapse of the socialist bloc in Eastern Europe, and the defeat of the arrogant Sandinista leadership in Nicaragua, few have noticed similarly newsworthy cracks in Sweden's social democracy. After more than 50 years in existence, Sweden's mix of socialism and capitalism is in crisis.

At the center of Sweden's problems is an unhealthy economy. Low economic growth, excessive wage demands and too much state spending have pushed the nation's economy into a ditch. Inflation is expected to reach 9 percent this year, the trade deficit has doubled and industrial unrest is becoming more common.

To a degree, all of these setbacks are related to the dominant role that Sweden's government has played in the economy. Almost 60 percent of the country's gross domestic product goes to state spending. A third of the labor force works in the heavily unionized public service sector. Since unemployment is virtually non-existent, private industry finds itself engaged in fierce competition for labor, driving up wages and creating deep envy in the public sector. Meanwhile, Sweden's workers put in less time on the job and have the highest absenteeism rates in Western Europe.

No doubt, there are some serious lessons for bleeding heart liberals in Sweden's headaches. The issue in question involves human nature. You see, Sweden's system of government is based on a need for "trygghet," which means a feeling of security. The nation's economy has been structured in favor of "people's home," in which workers are highly taxed in return for guaranteed employment and universal welfare, including free education, health care, pensions and holidays. While the state takes care of the people, private industry has been allowed to flourish.

Under this model, wage increases are reached by a consensus between employers, the government and union leaders. This system has worked beautifully for the better part of 50 years — until too many Swedes began abusing the welfare system, and thereby decreasing production.

According to the Swedish system, a sick worker need only call up the local social security office and read his insurance number to an operator. He need not tell his employer or even expect to have his pay cut. And, believe it or not, no one checks to see if a worker is really sick. Thus, it's not surprising that Sweden's workers take up to a month a year in sick leave. With such a made-to-cheat system in place, how could one expect anything but increased worker absenteeism and dwindling profits?

Another outrageous freebie involves help for the disabled and pensioners. Such people in Sweden are given free taxi rides, paid for by the government, to go shopping. In a recent highly publicized case in Stockholm, a slightly handicapped woman was given four domestic airplane tickets, courtesy of the government, to visit her daughter. Befitting a welfare state, the woman's husband was also handed free tickets to accompany her on their trip. There was even a car waiting to pick them up on arrival.

Such an elaborate waste in public expenditures has begun to infuriate some Swedes, who pay the highest taxes in the world. Of course, few Swedes minded such generosity when the country's economy was booming. But with citizens now waiting for medical operations and school children suffering from a shortage of textbooks and qualified teachers, people are beginning to discuss cutbacks.

The choice now before Sweden is between less state spending and an accelerated economic decline. Will the blond-haired crowd to the north wake up to the limitations of the human character? Or will they defend compassion to the hilt and opt for economic decline?

Senator Paul Simon, D-Ill., has introduced legislation that would prevent employers from monitoring their employees' phone calls, a practice that is now allowed by a loophole in federal privacy laws. Simon's Privacy for Consumers and Workers Act would mandate that employers provide written notice of monitoring phone conversations and notify consumers and workers during monitoring. It would require an audible tone or visual sign to let workers and consumers know when monitoring is taking place. Simon's office says the measure would apply to all companies and governments with significant electronic communications, without restricting law enforcement activities.

Eastern European intelligence officers have new targets these days. With the demise of the Cold War, they've redoubled their efforts to obtain Western industrial know-how and technology. The emphasis has switched completely from military to industrial concerns.

Revelations by former KGB agent Victor Ivanovich Sheymov that the Soviet secret service plotted to assassinate Pope John Paul II have revived a bitter feud inside the U.S. intelligence community. As much publicity as Sheymov attracted with his comments about the Pope, few noticed his other allegations: The KGB had considered breaking the legs of Rudolf Nureyev, the ballet dancer, for making anti-Soviet statements; the KGB was behind the death of President Zia of Pakistan, who perished in an air crash in 1988; and lastly, the KGB had tried to infiltrate spies among Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel.

Nelson Mandela will attend his first high-decibel rock concert on April 16, when he travels to Wembley Stadium to participate in a five-hour testimonial in his honor. Stars who've already committed themselves to the show, which will be broadcast to more than 60 countries, include Tracy Chapman, Peter Gabriel, Neil Young, and possibly Bruce Springsteen, Prince and Madonna.

'Spark' deserves no subsidy

Editor:

I am responding to Jonathon M. Kierman's call for a "Yes" vote on Petition Five. Mr. Kierman writes, "As the candidates for ASASU fill our heads with rhetoric of what they want to accomplish, one of the things that transcends most campaigns is a vow to instill a sense of pride in the students." Pardon me while I dry my eyes.

If Mr. Kierman thinks that some 20-pound door-stopper filled with 800 pages of greek life is going to give you pride, then, by all means, buy one. But don't ask me to ease your cost.

Supply and demand, my friend. If there is a demand for the "Spark," let it live, and if there is none, it dies.

I am getting worn out and broke on the "spread the cost" philosophy that ASU is adopting, i.e. the rec center and now the "Spark."

It seems to me, if one wants to lower the cost of the "Spark" and ensure it will be around in the future, then tell the powers that be to stop spending money on disgusting neon green signs and put the funds towards the printing of your "piece of pride" at ASU.

Israel goes free while Arabs pay for same crime

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — Iraq's attempted theft of krypton, useful as nuclear triggering devices, is not unique. Four years ago, Israel was reported to be obtaining krypton illegally through a California company. Unlike the Iraqi operation, it wasn't front-page news in most of the country and was barely mentioned by network news.

Israel has long since become a nuclear power, though the fact has never been officially acknowledged. If the full story is ever told, a key figure will be an avowed opponent of nuclear proliferation: President Lyndon Johnson.

More than any other president, Johnson forged the lopsided "alliance" between the United States and Israel — a dangerous liaison that has secured the United States only Arab enmity and Israeli ingratitude.

Thanks to his biographer Robert Caro, the full truth of Johnson's ingrained deviousness and mendacity is finally becoming a matter of record. But the last of Mr. Caro's projected four volumes, which will cover Johnson's presidency, won't appear for several years. When it does, it should give full attention to two episodes in Johnson's furtive pro-Israel policy.

One is Johnson's suppression of intelligence reports that Israel had smuggled enriched uranium and classified nuclear-related documents from the United States. According to the FBI and the Atomic Energy Commission, a Pennsylvania-based American firm was the conduit of the theft. In concealing this from the public, Johnson may have been an accessory to treason.

The other episode was less grave in its potential consequences but, in a way, more shocking. Johnson apparently ordered the cover-up of the 1967 Israeli attack on an unarmed American intelligence ship, the USS Liberty. Israeli forces killed 34 American sailors and wounded 171 others.

Israel has always insisted that the attack was a mistake, that in the heat of the Six-Day War, the Liberty was confused with an Egyptian vessel. The survivors have always insisted that this is impossible. They contend that the Israelis must have known just what they were doing.

The attack occurred in broad daylight. The Liberty was clearly marked and flew a large American flag. The survivors say Israeli reconnaissance planes approached the ship before the attack and were overheard reporting to headquarters that the Liberty was an American ship. They say the Israelis jammed the Liberty's radio signals for help, which they could not have done without somehow knowing the frequencies American ships used for that purpose.

The survivors also say the Israelis ignored the ship's frantic signals identifying itself as an American ship. The attack continued for nearly an hour. An Israeli gunboat, after torpedoing the Liberty's hull, drew close enough to machine-gun its inflatable life rafts — which it could hardly have done without noticing that they were firing on Americans.

Israel's conduct was bad enough. Captain James Ennes, who saw 34 of his men killed that day, says two Israelis involved have offered to testify that the attack was no mistake.

What is really shocking is the official American conduct. The incident was dismissed after a hasty four-day inquiry. Neither the survivors nor the two Israelis have ever been invited to testify. Contrast this with the eight-month inquiry that followed the 1987 Iraqi attack on the USS Stark. Even the Liberty's log report was altered by higher-ups, without consulting the eyewitnesses.

Worst of all, rescue planes from the aircraft carrier Saratoga, responding to the Liberty's pleas for help, were mysteriously called back while the Liberty was still under fire. "That act," says Captain Ennes, "probably cost 25 additional American lives."

Though several of his top aides insisted that the attack must have been intentional, Johnson quickly accepted the Israeli excuses and buried the affair. Never has an American president so brazenly sacrificed American interests to a foreign power.

But why did he do it? That's the mystery. The solution might tell us a good deal about how American politics really works.

Ortiz also listed Board of Regents accountability and minority students' needs as among his biggest concerns. Candidates for executive vice president are Jeanette Wiedemeier and write-in hopeful Tanya Holmes.

Holmes stressed qualifications over campaign duration in her two-minute speech, citing her past experience as founder and president of the ASU chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and as spokesperson for Students Against Racism. Holmes entered the race Friday.

"I think the key point is to get students involved through the college councils," she said.

Wiedemeier, who presently works as administrative assistant to current Executive Vice President Mike Pressendo, also listed ASU's college council system as one of her main priorities.

"In regard to the college council system, my work has been somewhat twofold: Because the executive vice president is responsible for supervising the college council system, I've worked with the coordinators," she said. "I've been there when they needed help. I've given them assistance and encouragement."

Morgan W. Reed and Cherie Verhines are candidates for campus affairs vice president.

Reed's speech relied heavily on specific goals that he hopes to accomplish if elected campus affairs vice president, including coordinating the MU information desk with Off-Campus Student Affairs, expanding the Bicycle Co-op, encouraging Safety Escort to utilize tandem bicycles and increasing the number of minority mentors in the Student Orientation Service.

Verhines touted her experience, telling the crowd that she has worked in three of the nine departments in Campus Affairs.

She has worked as director of the "Course Source," a handbook describing popular classes at ASU; a mentor with Student Orientation Services; a member of the Safety Escort Service and the Campus Affairs Coordination Council.

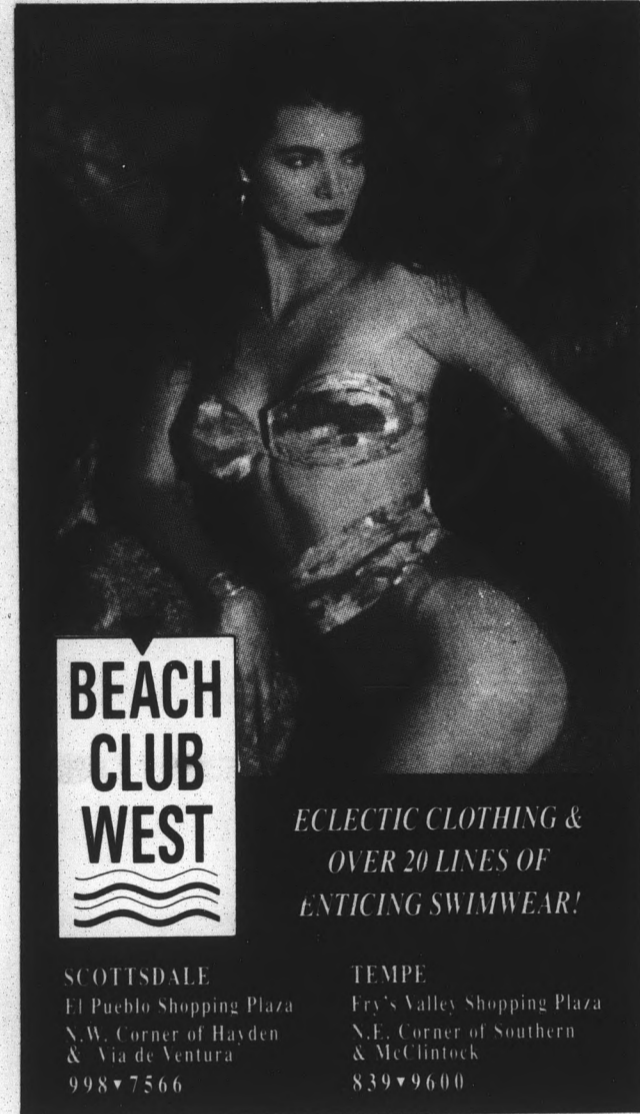

Vernard Bonner, Frank McClune and Mary Moran are the hopefuls for the position of activities vice president.

Bonner said he felt most strongly about the issues of Homecoming and the Multi-Cultural Awareness Board, an organization with the goal of promoting understanding and harmony among the various ethnic groups on campus.

"If you noticed this past year we had Homecoming, but our Homecoming was pink and black," Bonner said. "We go to Arizona State University, folks; our colors are maroon and gold and those are the only colors we should have."

"I feel that MCAB shouldn't be a part of the activities vice president position," he continued. "I feel that the various ethnic groups here on campus are willing, able and capable of leading themselves in all issues."

McCune spent most of his speech explaining the meaning of his campaign motto, "programming with purpose."

"'Programming with purpose' is about reaching the most students and providing activities for them to interact in," he said. "It's about having fun."

McCune said he would attempt to include the entire ASU population in Homecoming activities and increase corporate sponsorship of ASU events.

Moran said that although the Activities office has been good in the past, it can still get better.

"Lecture Series, Concert Series, Political Union and Special Events need to improve in two fundamental areas," Moran said.

She said the two areas were in making a concerted effort to approach and persuade quality entertainers and lecturers to come to ASU and to provide more effective publicity for the events that are scheduled.

Moran said she hopes to reimplement the procedure of playing tape-recorded advertising messages on student trams on campus.

During the forum, many of the candidates had trouble limiting themselves to the time allotted.

"These guys are all going to make great politicians in the future," Scott said. "They all like to talk a lot."

Following the candidates' statements, questions were fielded from members of the audience.

One student asked activities vice president hopeful and Students Against Racism President Vernard Bonner about a comment he made to Julian Sanders, the driving force behind the petition drive to bring the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday before Arizona voters, during a Feb. 22 campus lecture.

Bonner said to Sanders: "You are one of the most ignorant and stupid men I have ever seen in my life. You being born has no use to humanity whatsoever. You should have been born a cow; maybe we could have eaten you then."

When criticized for his comments, Bonner told the crowd: "Mr. Sanders insulted me several times, he insulted my people . . . I disagree with Mr. Sanders. I think Mr. Sanders is a disgrace to Arizona."

More campaign fireworks sparked when ASASU State Relations Director Shannon Sellers, irked by a comment made earlier by Willingham, who said that State Relations filing "is completely messed up," asked the presidential hopeful about her look into the files.

"I was wondering if, while going through that filing system, you read an equity study which claimed that they are currently closing the gap between the inequities that exist between ASU and UofA?" Sellers asked Willingham.

Willingham has said that if elected she will work to abolish the inequity between the two state universities.

Willingham said she was "glad (Sellers) asked that question."

"I've worked at State Relations . . . the organization is lacking," Willingham said. "That's my point."

ASASU Elections Director Brian Boley said Monday's forum went better than the one held Friday, which was plagued with bad weather and mechanical difficulties.

"All the glitches were worked out this time," Boley said. "Claren Scott was terrific. She kept it under control."

Child care question to go to ASU voters

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

Students' thoughts on campus child care will be one of two resolutions posed to voters during the next two days of elections, and initiators of Petition Six say ASU does not reach the needs of students with families.

"There is a need for additional child care on campus," said Gloria Ruiz, initiator of the petition.

There are currently two child care facilities on campus, one in the Psychology Building and a second across from the Architecture Building. But these do not meet the needs of the 4,000 students who need to place their children in a program to attend the University, Ruiz said.

ASU charges $390 a month for each child attending campus child care.

Nina Bone, president of the Re-entry Connection, spoke at Monday's Associated Students of ASU candidates' forum and said, "ASU is only able to accommodate 200 children and that doesn't start to accommodate the need."

Groups team up on child care needs

By KRISTIE YOUNG
State Press

Campus and community groups are organizing an effort to "blanket the campus with balloons showing the growing need and concern for child care at ASU" April 9, a supporter said.

University Career Women, ASU Child Care Resources and the Tempe Children's Center have all teamed up to form a child care awareness booth on Cady Mall.

"The booth will help to heighten awareness of child care needs at ASU," said Carol Balk, an affiliate of all three organizations. "Visibility is what we are striving for."

Representatives from each sponsoring organization will monitor the booth and give out free balloons to students, faculty and staff. Each balloon will represent a child in need of child care and will be personalized with that child's name.

"By displaying the balloons, the number of children affected by child care in the ASU community will be recognized," Balk said.

The booth will be open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday. Child care information and legislative child care bills will be available for students to analyze and sign.

Balk said the child care situation at ASU needs to be revamped.

"Opening a child care center is very costly," she said. "But the University can do things that would ease the tension a little."

Balk said the University should implement a payroll tax plan that would allow employees of ASU to take out child care fees before taxes.

Other issues Balk claims the University needs to address are care for sick children, after-school and summer programs for children and child care for evening students.

"These issues are just as important as building another child care center," she said. "Even if they do build another center, no matter how big it is, it won't be big enough to accommodate the hundreds of children needing it."

The ASU Child Study Lab and the Child Development Lab are currently the only facilities on campus used for child care.

"They are open to the public, but for a steep fee," Balk said. "One center even has a two-year waiting list."

Balk said the booth is in celebration of "The Week of the Young Child," an annual event sponsored by the Valley of the Sun Association for the Education of Young Children.

"The week of April 7 through April 13 is a celebration of families," said Balk. "Its purpose is to stress the importance of early childhood education." She said the theme of this year's celebration is "Quality Child Care: Good Beginnings Never End."

Students to vote on $1 subsidy for yearbook on ASASU ballot

By TENNY TATUSIAN
State Press

Students will vote today on a measure that is asking $1 from all students to support the "Sun Devil Spark" yearbook, and during a forum Monday, a supporter of the proposal called it a method of preserving ASU tradition, while an opponent said it "just doesn't sound good."

"ASU is lacking a tradition compared to campuses across the country," said Frank Fender, business manager of the yearbook.

Jerry Ellison, an opponent of Resolution 5, argued that "it would be nice if we could legislate all our social problems away."

"When you vote on this issue you're not voting on whether you should pay a dollar ... you're voting on whether you think other people should have to pay," Ellison added.

The "Spark" was introduced in 1986 after a 14-year hiatus. Prior to the gap, the yearbook, which was begun in 1913, was called the Sahuaro.

Fender

Ellison

Fender said students who do not purchase the yearbook should still vote yes on the resolution because the "Spark" is a tool that promotes the University.

"There is a direct impact on the net worth of students' degrees and having the yearbook," Fender said, adding that ASU needs the "Spark" to make the University "a smaller place."

Ellison argued, however, that there is no correlation between a yearbook and a better university.

"What does subsidizing the yearbook have to do with academic excellence?" Ellison said.

Yearbook supporters are concerned that when ASU registration transfers to telephones, students will not get a chance to purchase the "Spark."

ASU students currently can order the yearbook by checking a box on the registration form.

The yearbook published by the UofA, which has been published for the past 80 consecutive years, lost $5,000 the first year the University switched to telephone registration in 1987 and lost $24,000 the following year. It is expected to lose $46,000 this year.

The yearbook costs students $35, but with the $1 subsidy, the price is expected to drop to about $19.

The "Spark" costs $17 per book to publish and earns Student Publications $100,000 from sales annually. The rest of the $170,000 budget comes from miscellaneous income, advertising and a University grant of $15,000.

All present ASASU officials and campaign hopefuls came out in support of this measure.

Bundy lawyer to speak at ASU

Jim Coleman, the attorney who defended serial killer Ted Bundy, will speak today on "the difficulty of representing defendants in death penalty cases and some of the imperfections of the system that become apparent in that kind of litigation."

Coleman's speech, which is free and open to the public, will be held at noon in the College of Law, Great Hall.

students in January 1978.

It is also believed that he killed several women in Washington state and Utah — crimes that he admitted committing hours before his execution.

"I took the case in 1986, and (Bundy) had already been convicted and sentenced to death at the time. We didn't even really know what the case was all about. We just knew a man in Florida was sentenced to die, and he didn't have a lawyer."

Spring brings outbreak of allergies to ASU

By SONJA LEWIS
State Press

It's spring, and there's more than just love in the air. Pollens, spores and the frequent call of "gesundheit" all become commonplace on campus every year about this time.

Geneva Woodards, a nurse at the ASU allergy clinic in the Student Health Center, said the orange and olive trees and mulberry bushes at ASU stimulate allergies, and the revival of seasonal grasses can add to the irritation.

"The pollen count right now is really high," Woodards said. "If (students) have symptoms such as a runny nose and itchy eyes, it could be allergies."

"It doesn't sound like much, but once you have it for a long time, it can get really bothersome."

Woodards said the allergy clinic treats about 50 people a day by administering allergy shots. She said the most complaints this year have been about orange tree blossoms.

Shots given by the clinic cost $1.50, provided students bring their own prescriptions. This can be a real advantage for students, Woodards said, since "most doctors don't recommend they give their own shots, and in a doctor's office, it can cost $20."

Dawn Shelton, a pharmacist at Osco Drug in Tempe, said that for people with less severe problems, she recommends Drixoral and Dimetap for relief.

"You only have to take two of them a day and they have both a decongestant and an antihistamine," she said.

Although some non-prescription allergy medications can cause drowsiness, Shelton said being sleepy might be better than going to the doctor for a prescription.

"I would recommend students try to handle it themselves unless it's over a prolonged period of time," she said. "Getting allergy tested is really expensive."

Riot

accused the Home Office of criminal negligence for leaving only five guards to supervise 300 men in the chapel.

Home Office minister David Mellor called the allegation ridiculous.

The riot highlighted Britain's much-criticized prison system. With a prison population of 47,000, Britain has the highest number of inmates per capita in Western Europe.

Red-brick Strangeways prison, built in 1868 to hold 970 men, contained 1,648 prisoners Sunday. It is a local jail and contains inmates of all categories, from extremely dangerous to low risk, the Home Office said.

Roy Hattersley, the opposition Labor Party's deputy leader, said that at Strangeways, 82 one-man cells were crammed with three prisoners, and 96 single cells housed two inmates each. The inmates were confined to these cells for all but 11 hours a week and were allowed one shower and one change of clothing each week.

"If you treat men like animals, we ought not to be surprised if they behave like animals," Hattersley said.

Groups of rioting prisoners sat on the shattered roof of a 100-foot-high prison building in the cold rain Monday, occasionally hurling roof tiles into the yard below.

Some inmates wore masks. Others wore prison officers' shirts, apparently looted during the riot. What at first looked like a body tossed onto the roof turned out to be a dummy.

Waddington said the government had been trying to improve conditions and overcrowding in prisons but conceded that Strangeways "leaves much to be desired." He said it was a cruel irony that negotiations had just been completed to buy land for a major redevelopment of the prison.

SARGENT, Neb. (AP) — The Chokecherry Jam-boree Pit Spitting Contest is months away, but the defending champions are already boasting.

"We challenge everyone who thinks they have enough pucker-power to beat us to try," said Janie Weverka, womens division champ from last year's first contest. "But everyone who tries had better be prepared because we're tough."

"My mother told me that young ladies don't spit," Weverka said. "But she is on the sidelines encouraging me now. If I would have listened to her, I'd never ended up as a world champion!"

This year's contest is planned for the Custer County community's Chokecherry Jam-boree July 21 and 22.

"We're proud of our title," said Jerry Davenport, men's division champion. "It takes a certain amount of finesse and lots of determination to get that tiny chokecherry pit airborne."

"Anybody can get a cherry pit to travel several feet, but it takes special know-how to get any distance with a chokecherry pit," he said.

Davenport took the title last year with a spit of 33 feet, 5 inches. His closest competitor hit 31 feet.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see it bettered this year because last year, we were spitting into the wind," Davenport said.

Rebels run away with NCAA title

Duke falls 103-73

By The Associated Press

DENVER — The NCAA's ultimate Rebel won its biggest prize.

UNLV ended the tournament of thrills and close finishes with the largest margin of victory in a championship game, a 103-73 win over Duke on Monday night.

Jerry Tarkanian, the coach who fought the NCAA in the courts for the past 15 years, guided UNLV to its first national title and Duke continued as the school with the most frustrating of postseason records.

The Runnin' Rebels became the first team to score more than 100 points in the championship game. They are also the first preseason No. 1 to win the title since North Carolina in 1982 and the first Western team since UCLA won in 1975.

They did it with the style they have made famous — tenacious man-to-man defense — as they rattled Duke, a team known for its savvy and poise.

"Our team was overmatched today," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "They are more athletic than we are. They never let down. They're better than we are, especially when they're playing like that. We lost to the best team in the country playing at their best."

And they were at their best from the start.

"I told the kids it was going to come down to the last shot of the game and I just hope that we take it," Tarkanian said.

But it was never really close. UNLV scored the first points and never trailed.

The Rebels literally stole the title from Duke, which was making its eighth Final Four appearance. The Blue Devils went home again without a trophy, extending the longest streak of Final Four futility.

UNLV broke the tournament record for steals in a game with 16, eclipsing the mark set by Duke in the 1986 championship game and matched by Oklahoma in the 1988 title game.

The Rebels also set a record for most points scored in a tournament with 571, just better than their regular-season average of 92.3.

Until Monday night, the largest margin of victory in an NCAA championship game was 23 points, when UCLA beat North Carolina 78-55 in 1968. And, until Monday night, the most points scored in the title game was 98 by UCLA against none other than Duke in 1964.

For Tarkanian, who looks pained even when his team wins, getting the trophy capped a long battle with the NCAA, which in 1977 ordered the school to suspend him for violations. Tarkanian went to court for an injunction and the case eventually reached the Supreme Court, which ruled in favor of the NCAA but said only UNLV could discipline him.

But no court could stop the Rebels on Monday night.

"You can call us bad. You can call us thugs. You can call us hoodlums. But at the end of that, please, call us national champions, too," said Larry Johnson, UNLV's top scorer and rebounder this season.

UNLV managed a 10-point lead just 7:26 into the game as the Rebels forced Duke into turnover after turnover, mostly by simply stealing the ball.

They scored the first points of the game, and never trailed.

Duke, which averaged 17.2 turnovers per game this season, had 14 at halftime and 10 of those were on steals by the Rebels.

The first 10-point lead came on a sequence of four UNLV steals in four consecutive possessions — the last was by Stacey Augmon, who took the ball from Phil Henderson near midcourt and sailed in for a dunk. That made it 21-11.

The lead extended to 41-25 with 3:46 left in the half as UNLV contested every pass made by Duke. The Rebels had 16 points off turnovers in the first half as they took a 47-35 halftime lead.

Duke got within 10 points, 57-47, with 16:24 to play, but the larcenous crew from just off The Strip went to it again.

The Rebels went on an 18-0 run to put the game away and it was Augmon and Anderson Hunt, the Final Four's Most Outstanding Player, who took turns putting the Blue Devils away.

Hunt scored 12 points in the run, starting it with a side jumper while Johnson scored on a drive for a 61-47 lead. Augmon stole the ball on three straight possessions and he found Hunt each time to end the break.

Augmon whipped a crosscourt pass to Hunt for a three-pointer. He found Hunt again with a pass for a layup and then fed Hunt again after taking the ball from Henderson at his own foul line.

Hunt ended it with a three-pointer to make it 75-47 with 13:18 to play.

Hunt led UNLV with 29 points on 12-of-16 shooting, while Johnson finished with 22 and 11.

Henderson led Duke with 21 points.

It seemed there was little Duke could do against the pressure. Even when UNLV went into a 1-1-3 zone, the Blue Devils continued to have trouble getting the ball inside to Christian Laettner and Alaa Abdelnaby, the big men who carried them to their third straight Final Four and fourth in five seasons.

Blue Devils continue to struggle at Final Four

By The Associated Press

DENVER — Forget this business about 13 being an unlucky number. Eighteen's the one that keeps haunting Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski.

The Blue Devils blew an 18-point lead in losing to Seton Hall in the semifinals of last year's NCAA tournament.

In Monday night's national championship game, UNLV used an 18-0 second-half run to bury Duke 103-73.

It was another chapter in the postseason frustrations of Krzyzewski, who is the winningest coach in Duke history and has taken the Blue Devils to the Final Four in four of the last five years. Each time, they have failed to get the big prize.

It also ended the college careers of Duke seniors Phil Henderson, Alaa Abdelnaby and Robert Brickey, who made three appearances in the Final Four.

Duke's undoing Monday was a combination of turnovers, lack of outside shooting and too much of UNLV's Larry Johnson and Anderson Hunt.

The Blue Devils' woes enabled UNLV to become the first team in NCAA championship game history to score 100 points and to win by the largest margin in the history of the title contest.

"Our team was overmatched today," Krzyzewski said. "They are more athletic than we are. They never let down. They're better than we are, especially when they're playing like that. We lost to the best team in the country playing at their best."

Duke, which had not turned the ball over more than 25 times in a game this season, had 14 in the first half and trailed 47-35.

The Blue Devils also were unable to get any balance in their offense in the opening half, when they made just two shots from outside 15 feet. Duke missed all four attempts from three-point range in the period.

Duke's shooting woes enabled the Runnin' Rebels to collapse inside, making it more difficult for the Blue Devils to get good shots down low.

Duke trailed 57-47 with 16:24 to play, when the Runnin' Rebels put together the decisive surge. Hunt scored 12 of his 29 points as UNLV stretched the advantage to 75-47 at the 13:18 mark.

The Blue Devils did not make a three-pointer until Henderson hit one from the right wing with 4:18 to play. His basket cut UNLV's lead to 93-64.

Johnson was one of the prime reasons Duke had to earn its points inside. The 6-foot-7, 250-pound junior forward had 22 points and 11 rebounds. Nine of those came on the defensive end as he helped the Rebels repeatedly limit Duke to one shot per possession.

Musburger ends 22-year career, thanks colleagues

By The Associated Press

DENVER — Brent Musburger, let go by CBS on Sunday, finished his career with the network Monday by thanking his co-workers.

Musburger waited until the final moments of CBS's broadcast of UNLV's 103-73 victory over Duke before saying farewell.

"As you know," he said, "this was my last assignment with CBS after 22 years with the television network, radio network and the stations. And I had an opportunity to work with the greatest directors, producers, technicians in the world. Not to mention analysts, like my good friend Billy Packer. Billy, we have shared some great memories."

Musburger then put his arm around Packer.

"Brent, we saw a great champion here tonight," said Packer, the former Wake Forest coach-turned-announcer. "It's been an honor for all of us to work with a great champion of broadcasting."

Musburger, in his sixth season as CBS's lead broadcaster for the NCAA tournament, then delivered his final signoff for CBS.

"Folks, I've had the best seat in the house. Thanks for sharing it. I'll see you down the road."

He threw it back to host Jim Nantz, a possible replacement for Musburger on "The NFL Today."

"Brent," Nantz said, "I just want to add thanks for tonight, thanks for everything. We're all going to miss you. And we certainly wish you the best."

After the broadcast was over, fans at McNichols Arena shouted encouragement.

"You're a pro, baby," one yelled.

"You're the best," another shouted.

Musburger raised an arm to the crowd and gave a "No. 1" sign with his index finger extended. He gave a thumbs-up and shook hands with Packer and much of the crew.

Baseball climbs to top of poll

By SETH SULKA
State Press

The ASU baseball team, riding the highs of a 14-game winning streak, found itself in an unfamiliar position in Monday's national rankings — No. 1.

Although the Sun Devils (30-9 overall, 8-5 Pac-10 Southern Division) have been well acquainted with the polls having been ranked in the nation's top 10 by at least one ranking system since April 18, 1988, the No. 1 spot has been a stranger to ASU since May 1988.

The Sun Devils were one of four teams from the Six-Pac to be ranked in the top 10. Stanford dropped to No. 3 while USC and UCLA moved up to No. 4 and No. 9, respectively.

During its winning streak, ASU has swept series from California, Arizona, Hawaii, Cal Poly Pomona and Florida State.

Along with the No. 1 ranking in Baseball America, two ASU players received honors with Sean Rees and Mike Kelly being named Six-Pac Pitcher and Player of the Week, respectively.

For Rees, it marked the fourth consecutive week that he has received the award. To say that Rees, a sophomore left hander from San Diego, Calif., has been in total command of his game over the past four weeks would be an understatement.

In his last four games, Rees has posted a 4-0 mark while compiling a 0.75 ERA. Also during that stretch, Rees pitched four complete games striking out 55 batters while giving up only 12 hits and eight walks.

With a league-leading 120 strikeouts, Rees is on pace to break Walt Peterson's 27 year old Pac-10 single-season record of 172 strikeouts.

Kelly, a preseason All-America selection, has been equally impressive during his last four games. Kelly has hit at a .529 clip while collecting four homers and 11 RBI, raising his numbers on the season to .368, 12 home runs and a league-leading 50 RBI. His 12 homers are two better than his total output from last season.

Track's Tolbert honored

ASU sprinter Lynda Tolbert was named the Pac-10's female track athlete of the week, conference commissioner Thomas C. Hanson announced Monday.

"I found out when (ASU Sports Information Director) Rich Wanninger came out on the track with a piece of paper and said 'Look at this,'" Tolbert said. "I said, 'That's great.'"

Tolbert's selection came on the heels of a fine performance in the ASU Track Invitational on Saturday at Sun Angel Stadium. The senior, who is ranked fifth in the world in the 100-meter hurdles, easily won that event with a time of 13.37 seconds. She also finished second in the 100 meters with a time of 11.93 and was a member of the four-by-400-meter relay team, which finished second with a time of 47.10.

"It feels good," Tolbert said. "I'm very happy with it. I think that I have run really well so far this year."

Tolbert also won the NCAA 55-meter hurdle title last month, adding to her 1988 100-meter title and 1989 National No. 1 ranking.

Golfer's dream not too Farr away

Farr hopes for June date with tour

By KRIS TIMMONS
State Press

Since the age of 13, ASU senior Missy Farr has dreamed of the LPGA Tour.

In June, that dream should become a reality as she winds up her collegiate career as a Sun Devil and turns professional.

"I've thought about (the tour) since I was 13, but I decided this year that after years of competitive golf, I had to give it a shot," Farr said. "I'm graduating in May, and I'll turn pro in June."

Farr, coming off a third-place finish at the Rainbow Wahine Invitational in Hawaii on March 30, said she is peaking at the right time.

"It was the second highest finish of my college career and my second top-five finish of the season," she said. "And we still have three big tournaments coming up."

Sun Devil Head Coach Linda Vollstedt said Farr has what it takes to be successful on the tour.

"She's willing to work harder than anybody else," Vollstedt said. "When I was recruiting her, I saw a big heart and a lot of determination in her. She never lets anybody say they can't do something. She's the spark plug of the team."

Farr, who began golfing at age 7, said her interest in the sport was sparked by an attempt to spend more time with her father.

"My father was a weekend golfer with a 20 handicap," Farr said, "and my sister and I didn't get to see him much. So my sister started following him around the golf course when she was 8, and then I got into it a year later."

"When we started, it was just for fun."

But the fun turned into hard work for Farr when she decided she wanted to play collegiate golf.

"My parents were always encouraging," Missy said. "When I started getting better, I decided I wanted to play college golf and that is when you have to get serious about it."

Farr's sister, Heather, a former ASU All-America and fifth-year LPGA Tour member has left a tough act to follow for her younger sibling.

Missy said she always treated her sister's success as a learning experience.

"Heather always pushed me without knowing it," Farr said. "Her career has always kept me motivated to keep up with her. She has been inspiring."

Farr

Although competition between the sisters was rare, Heather earned the state title and Missy took third place when both Farris were students at Phoenix' Xavier High School in 1981.

Missy said her career at Xavier helped prepare her for her college career.

"Xavier was known for a good program and has earned 10 state titles in a row," she said. "My high school team was the best in the state, and I had a great coach."

The Phoenix native said she always had a soft spot for ASU.

"My sister had attended ASU, and I always pulled for her and for ASU," Missy said. "And ASU has one of the top programs in the nation. I really like our coach too. She gives us freedom and treats us like adults."

Farr said playing in college was much different than high school.

"Playing college golf is interesting because in high school, you don't play as a team," Farr said. "In college, you learn to accept people for who they are. It was a good lesson in life."

"Having a sister in the LPGA has its disadvantages. I tend to put more pressure on myself. I've had to be more realistic and play my own game. But the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages."

The 22-year-old will receive her degree in organizational communications and said that if the Pro Tour does not work out, she would still like to pursue a career involving golf.
