Soccer group to survey ASU for pro match

By NICOLE CARROLL
State Press

Members of the World Cup Site Selection Committee are considering Phoenix as the host for the "Superbowl of Soccer" in 1994 and will be on campus April 19 to survey Sun Devil Stadium facilities, ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris said.

"The World Cup is about as big as they come," Harris said. "For the European Community, there is probably no more important event in the world."

The World Cup is the world soccer championship that is held every four years. National professional teams must participate in zone playoffs before they reach the final match.

Harris said the 1994 World Cup would be played in June or July.

He said he did not want to lessen the importance of the selection committee meeting, but that Phoenix is not on any short list yet.

"We are not one and three," Harris said. "We are one in 70 cities around the world."

He said the upcoming meeting was just an information exchange initiated by the World Cup committee.

"We (ASU) haven't been out looking for something," Harris said. "This is driven by the community. We will do what we can to be supportive of the community effort."

Stadium Manager Tom Sadler said soccer fields are wider than football fields, but that this would not be a problem in World Cup negotiations because the Sun Devil Stadium

Talk of pizza deal grates local stores

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

Negotiations among Marriott Food Services, Pizza Hut and ASU could bring the national pizza chain to the MU, but that could also spell trouble for local merchants.

Jim Mueller, senior food service director for Marriott's retail operations, said that the agreement, once finalized, would replace the Pizza Place on the first floor of the MU with a Pizza Hut.

MU Director Floyd Land said the parties are "very close" to an agreement, and he expects the Pizza Hut to be operating in time for the first summer session.

Mueller said the arrangement would benefit students because they would be able to use their ASU meal accounts at a Pizza Hut in the MU.

A national-level working agreement was signed between Marriott and Pizza Hut last year in Washington, D.C., giving Pizza Hut the right to operate in institutions where Marriott supplies food services. Each institution must approve individually the addition of a Pizza Hut restaurant to its food services program.

The accord has enabled the national food chains to sign similar contracts with '85 or 90 other college campuses.

Runoff debate forum gets 'nasty'

Candidates for 3 executive offices spar on West Lawn

By DAN NOWICKI
State Press

Tempers flared Tuesday on West Lawn at the Associated Students executive candidates forum, as ASASU hopefuls and campaign workers traded jabs on the first day of the runoff election.

The runoff features races between presidential hopefuls Matt Ortega and Chris Stiles, campus affairs vice president candidates Morgan W. Reed and Cherie Verhines and activities vice president candidates Frank McCune and Mary Moran.

Each of the six candidates made a brief speech to the crowd of about 200 students and then answered questions from members of the audience, most of whom were in some way affiliated with a specific candidate.

ASASU Elections Coordinator Brian Boley said the hostile demeanor of the crowd and candidates "was to be expected." "God, people are nasty," Boley said. "It just goes to prove that this is the first step to the big leagues."

Ortega said he was distressed by the tone of the forum.

"I think it's unfortunate that candidates' personal lives have been brought into this process," he said. "I understand that at the state and national level, this type of campaign process is fair game, but it should not be where student government is concerned."

Stiles said he was glad another debate was held.

"I was encouraged that the elections department had scheduled the debate and gave the voters another chance to see the candidates again before the runoff," Stiles said. "It's important to know what the issues are and how the candidates stand on them."

"I'd say (the tone of the forum) was combative — combative between the obvious entourage of my opponent's supporters and myself — but I didn't take offense," Stiles said.

On Monday, Ortega was criticized by the Stiles campaign for neglecting to register to vote while at the same time campaigning for president on the importance of student voter registration.

During his Tuesday speech, Ortega told the crowd that he had just registered to vote on Monday and demanded an apology from Stiles for remarks made earlier in the forum.

Stiles replied, "I don't think I owe Matt Ortega an apology because of his failure to register as a voter."

"Perhaps he owes the student body an apology for paying lip service to the primary plank of his platform, which is the importance of voter registration and the participation of students in the elections," he said.

McCain addresses students at ASU

Senator focuses on health care, savings and loan bailout, Keating

By KRISTIE YOUNG
State Press

U.S. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., braving an unairconditioned lecture room in the MU Tuesday, told a group of students that health care is the major issue facing America today.

"The inflation of health care has gone up 12 percent," McCain said. "This status quo is totally unacceptable. Who can afford to pay?"

About 80 students attended the presentation, the first of four events sponsored by ASASU's Political Forum.

Political Forum President Charles Voinovich III apologized for the lack of cooling in the Pima Room, blaming construction in the MU, when he introduced McCain.

McCain said, "We can't recede into third world health care quality. Congress has failed to see health care problems in America. In fact, 37 million Americans are without health care insurance today."

He said the government "can't neglect its obligation to the people. We have to provide some kind of health care."

But the answer is not necessarily to be found at the federal level, McCain said.

"We should give money to local governments for health care instead of giving the money to Washington," he said.

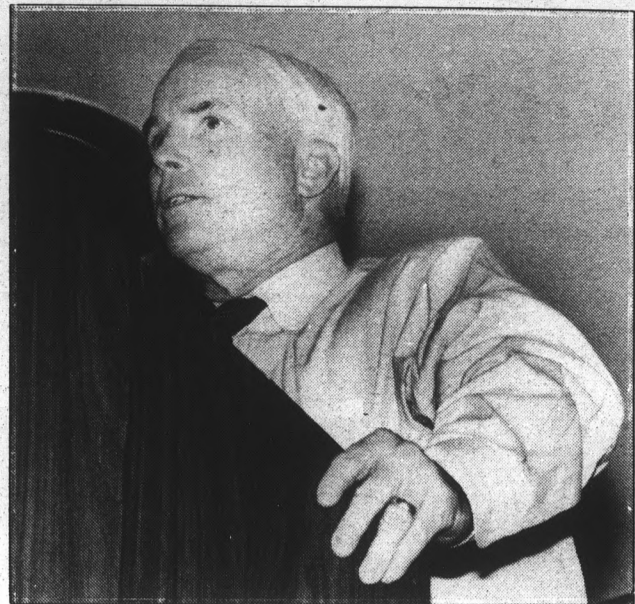

McCain also addressed issues ranging from Social Security, environmental awareness, the rise of nationalism in Eastern European countries, American Indian affairs and the so-called Keating affair.

One audience member accused McCain of "being caught in bed" with four other senators, a reference to accusations that McCain and four other lawmakers — all Democrats — sought to use their influence to aid financier Charles Keating.

The crowd snickered when McCain replied, "The last liberal I was in bed with was my wife."

McCain, along with Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., has denied trying to help Keating avoid a government takeover of his Irvine, Calif.-based Lincoln Savings and Loan.

"The Senate Ethics Committee is conducting an evaluation," McCain said. "The results will be here at the end of this month."

Lincoln is the costliest single loss in the federal government's S & L bailout. It was taken over in April 1989, and some observers predict its losses will total some $2 billion.

Currently, Keating, who is best known in Phoenix as the developer behind the lavish Phoenician Resort, is suing the federal government for wrongfully assuming control of his thrift. He has charged that Lincoln would not have racked up those losses if he had been allowed to remain in charge.

McCain pleased the crowd with his definition of a conservative Republican.

"It's a philosophy I share with (President) Bush," he said. "There is a role for government to play. This role should be minimal and confined as much as possible."

McCain said attempts should be made to make the government be as "unintrusive as possible."

Libya aids in 3 Beirut hostages' release

Former Belgian hostage Fernand Houtekins, 43, left, holds his daughter Sophie-Liberte, 2, as they arrive with Sophie's mother, French citizen Jacqueline Valente, at a military airport in suburban Paris Tuesday night.

PARIS (AP) — The Libyan-backed Palestinian group headed by Abu Nidal freed a French woman, a Belgian man and their young daughter Tuesday after holding them for nearly 2½ years.

The three arrived to the cheers of a crowd of relatives and French officials at a military airport outside Paris late Tuesday after a five-hour flight from Beirut. They had been dropped off at the French Embassy in the morning by masked gunmen who arrived in cars with drawn curtains.

Jacqueline Valente, 32, Fernand Houtekins, 43, and their 2-year-old daughter Sophie-Liberte, born in captivity, made no public statements though the couple smiled as they got off the plane. They were taken to a military hospital to spend their first night in freedom after 882 days of captivity.

Abu Nidal's group announced Nov. 8, 1987, it had seized the hostages from the French yacht Silco in the Mediterranean, off the Gaza Strip. It accused them of collaborating with Israel's Mossad intelligence agency. Friends said the group was on a holiday cruise.

The French government thanked Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi for his role in the release and said relations with Libya would improve. Gadhafi last week called for the release of hostages as a humanitarian gesture.

President Bush, in Toronto, said he didn't know enough about the release to say whether Gadhafi deserves any credit.

"We've got some major differences with Libya that continue to exist, but look, who am I to argue in this case if someone can help free one hostage? ... Give that person credit," Bush said.

The hostages, released by the Fatah-Revolutionary Council, used an executive jet in Beirut provided by the French government to fly to Villacoublay near Paris. Valente was the first to disembark, followed by Houtekins, holding their daughter in his arms. All appeared healthy.

The Fatah-Revolutionary Council has been blamed for scores of terrorist acts, including the December 1985 attacks on Rome and Vienna airports that killed more than 20 people.

Because the hostages were believed to have been held in Libya, the case is considered unrelated to the 18 Westerners, including eight Americans, held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem factions.

However, Fatah spokesman Walid Khaled denied assertions that the hostages had been held in Libya. Speaking at a news conference in Beirut, he said the hostages had been kept in Lebanon.

The State Department welcomed the release and called for freeing of other captives.

However, U.S. officials in Washington were critical of France's warm words for Gadhafi. The officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said France and other countries should press Libya to expel Abu Nidal and his group and stop alleged efforts to make chemical weapons.

"France is being nicer to Libya than we think they should be," said one U.S. official.

The release came a month after France returned to Libya three French-made Mirage jet fighters that had been in France for repairs since 1986. The return of the planes was blocked by an embargo imposed when Libya and France backed opposing sides during the civil war in Chad.

In December, Libya, pressing for delivery of the aircraft, closed its ports to French ships.

Gadhafi said Tuesday that Abu Nidal's group was "distancing" itself from its terrorist reputation by releasing the hostages, Libya's official news agency JANA reported.

Last week, Gadhafi urged the release of hostages in the Middle East as a gesture for Ramadan, the Islamic holy month. He singled out Valente.

Walesa says he will run for president

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was quoted Tuesday as saying he will run for president in the next election.

The report by the government news agency PAP could not immediately be confirmed with Walesa or his spokesman. Aides and colleagues of the Solidarity leader have long been saying he is considering a presidential bid.

Jaroslav Kaczynski, a close associate of Walesa's and editor of the Solidarity Weekly newspaper, said the leader's comments to PAP should only be "understood as a general declaration, not connected with present events."

"I confirm," PAP quoted Walesa as saying when asked if he would run for president. "We have many wise and valuable people in government, holding various posts. However, one must speed up the pace of reforms and destroy the old arrangements."

President Wojciech Jaruzelski, the general and former Communist Party leader elected by Parliament in July, officially is to serve a six-year term until 1995.

However, there is widespread belief that the next presidential election will be moved up as part of an overhaul of the Polish Constitution.

The most likely time for elections appears to be spring 1991, when Poland would be marking the 200th anniversary of its first written constitution.

Nothing in his remarks on PAP indicated when Walesa thought the election might be, and Kaczynski suggested the leader was not talking about an immediate presidential campaign.

"Nobody is talking about the date for elections or about starting any procedures," he said. "He just states the certain fact" that he will run when Jaruzelski leaves offices.

"This should be understood as a general declaration, not connected with current events," Kaczynski added.

Kaczynski said Walesa is committed to winning re-election as Solidarity's chairman next week, when the union holds its first national congress in nine years.

"I will run in the election and you know that when I run I want to win," Walesa told the Solidarity Executive Commission on Tuesday in Gdansk. "And I count on your support."

Walesa is expected to be challenged by union members who feel Solidarity has strayed from its ideals of 1980, putting politics ahead of trade-union goals like defending workers' interests. A long-time Walesa critic, Marian Jurczyk of Szczecin, has formed a rival faction called Solidarity '80.

Jaruzelski was elected president at a time when Poland was the only East bloc country to have a legal opposition and to be making such bold moves toward democracy.

Responsibility shared in airline tragedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — An accident that sucked nine United passengers out of a Boeing jumbo jet over the Pacific Ocean resulted from failures by the airline, manufacturer and FAA to correct problems in cargo doors on 747 airliners, federal investigators said Tuesday.

The National Transportation Safety Board voted 3-0 to accept the results of a more than 13-month investigation despite the fact a key piece of evidence in the Feb. 24, 1989, incident remains three miles under water: Flight 811's cargo door.

The NTSB said United failed to properly inspect the door after its electrical system failed in December 1988 and mechanics had to operate it manually. The door had been operated electrically since then, however.

Boeing and the Federal Aviation Administration were cited for failing to order timely corrective measures after another cargo door partially popped open on a 1987 Pan American jet flying from London to New York. That plane returned safely to London.

On Flight 811, the door ripped off at 22,000 feet. A piece of the fuselage was ripped off and the passengers and their seats were sucked out through the hole in the plane.

The plane, en route to New Zealand, returned to Honolulu. Five other passengers were seriously hurt and 33 had minor injuries. The plane carried a crew of 18 and 337 passengers.

United spokesman Robert Dowdy said the airline had complied with all FAA requirements except in one instance. That occurred after six words mandating an inspection were left out of an FAA regulation when it was copied into the company's system, he said.

Dowdy said that despite the oversight, the door had undergone three inspections since the December 1988 problem was corrected.

Arsonist sought as U. S. expert notes fire hit same ship in 1988

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police searched files of known arsonists Tuesday and explored the black shell of the ferry Scandinavian Star for clues to the fire that killed about 200 people — two years after there was a blaze on board the same vessel.

Investigators in Sweden's west coast port of Lysekil said entire decks were burned of everything combustible, and it may be impossible to pinpoint physical evidence on how the weekend fire began.

In Oslo, Norwegian police who took charge of the case said they were looking for one or more arsonists, but added that the firebug could have been among the victims of the flames that engulfed the 10,500-ton ship en route from Norway to Denmark.

Allan Pollock, spokesman for the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board, said Tuesday in Washington that the vessel's owners failed to respond to any of the board's recommendations after a non-fatal March 15, 1988, engine-room fire on the Scandinavian Star off Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula.

Gorbachev says no presidential rule in Lithuania — for now

MOSCOW (AP) — One day after issuing a harsh new warning to Lithuanian separatists, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev backed off the tough line Tuesday by declaring he does not yet see a need to impose presidential rule.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, responding to the severe tone of Monday's declaration by the Kremlin, sent a telegram to Gorbachev saying he feared that "ultra-rightist imperial forces are compelling you to take a wrong step: to continue the wrongs of the 1940s in the Baltics."

"In the name of peace, justice and concord on earth, do not do this," he wrote.

He was referring to the Soviet occupation and forced annexation of the three Baltic republics — Lithuania, Estonia, and Latvia — in 1940.

Last day of elections

The candidates who are up for election today and tomorrow have made the runoff election because a significant portion of the student body believes they would make a good officer in ASASU. Thus, there are no grossly unqualified candidates left. However, this week's campaigning has further clarified the issues and unclutter the political landscape. The net result is that voters are left with three simple choices for executive office. The following is a list of the candidates that we feel will best serve the needs of students.

Activities vice president: The best choice is Frank McCune who has done his homework on ASASU activities. The 20-year-old is capable of fielding questions on any area of the Activities office — and has prepared a detailed description of the event he wishes to develop, including an ASU music festival, a continuing parade of interesting national speakers and the traditional homecoming activities. McCune is prepared and qualified and won't lose sight of the main function of the activities vice president — to promote campus events that are fun for students.

Campus Affairs vice president: Falling under the heading of "once in a while you've got to change your mind," is candidate Cherie Verhines. Before the ASASU general election last week, the name of Verhines' opponent appeared in this space. Since that time, however, she has aggressively defined her position on the issues — while her opponent has all but disappeared from the scene.

Verhines has now given specifics on her plans for Campus Affairs — and they are ambitious. She aims to develop a commercially-sponsored dial-a-ride program for students who indulge in one too many drinks at campus area watering holes, provide a book exchange list for all of us who are tired of paying inflated prices for textbooks and improve retention of new students through intensified orientation methods.

Verhines has benefited from a tough campaign. She is confident and prepared. And she would be a solid choice for Campus Affairs vice president.

President: It is fortunate that this year both of the candidates in the run-off election for ASASU president are qualified for the job. However, Chris Stiles stands out as the most qualified candidate. He has served the students well for the past two years as a senator from the college of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Stiles qualification for the job become most apparent during the recent tuition protest/sit-in at the Student Services Building.

Frustrated by tuition hikes levied by the Board of Regents, Stiles led a diverse group of angry students in a lengthy, exhausting protest that attracted statewide media attention and prompted the Arizona Legislature to consider freezing tuition at its current level — and set up a good foundation for future talks with legislators and regents, as well.

Stiles four campaign themes, improving the quality of education, registering students to vote, eliminating campus monopolies and ensuring an equitable alcohol policy are all ideas that have captured the imagination of students campus-wide. Chris Stiles has the ideas the imagination and the drive to make and excellent president of ASASU.

Letters

Choose substance not flash

Editor:

I begin with congratulations to the two remaining ASASU presidential hopefuls, Matt Ortega and Chris Stiles. Both have offered informative hard fought campaigns. Yet, the time has come to examine the men and their campaigns.

Mr. Stiles has chosen to run the radical race. First of all, it seems quite convenient that the current preparations for Earth Day '90 fall in line with Chris' scheme for environmental liberation on campus. However benevolent his campuswide recycling plan may indeed be, the Senate of ASASU has already enacted a similar program. Chris, where were you when the plan was being implemented? Second, the call for "alcohol equity" may ring a pleasing note in the ears of students, but does the plan really benefit us? I think not!

Furthermore, the idea for an ASU FM radio station has been looked into and was decided that the costs would most likely outweigh the benefits. Finally, the question of the integrity of Mr. Stiles and his staff remains. The superficial skeletons that the Stiles group pulled from the closet of Mr. Ortega seems to say that Chris is willing to delve into the personal lives of fellow candidates just to win this election. This lack of ethics and introduction of dirty politics into the ASASU campaigns says to me that Chris Stiles is thinking for the good of his future resume rather than for the good of the students of Arizona State University. I thank Mr. Stiles for his interestingly run campaign as well as his nifty happy hour coupons, yet I do not feel Chris Stiles possesses an honest concern for the overall well-being of this University and its inhabitants.

No editorial quotas please!

Editor:

Though I've been tempted to respond to content in the State Press many times, Sonya Thompson's letter (April 6) has finally inspired me to actually do so. I was outraged by Ms. Thompson's charge that the State Press is guilty of ethnic bias simply because it failed to endorse a minority candidate. According to her letter, the newspaper "has shown gross insensitivity in its selection of an all white political slate." In addition to such an abomination, she further claims the paper is "produced by Anglo-students for the interests of only Anglo-students." Such charges are totally misguided and without foundation.

Time and time again the paper has provided fair and adequate coverage of racial situations on campus, refusing to jump on anybody's bandwagon. Last year's unfortunate incident on new row and the recent ASASU elections are no exception.

Come on, Ms. Thompson, are you really concerned with sincere journalism, or do you just want to encourage editorial quotas? I don't know about you, but I think honest, independent decision-making, rather than journalistic affirmative action, is the only way to "do the right thing."

'Anglo' angle on labels

Editor:

On a point lightly touched upon in Brian Tassinari's article of Monday, April 9, I would like to voice my extreme displeasure with the term "Anglo" used in reference to Caucasians.

Firstly, like many white people in this country, I am a U. S. citizen. I am an American, not an Anglo, and rather proud of this fact.

Secondly, while minorities seek to realize cultural diversity, and rightly so, the act of referring to Caucasians as "Anglos" is contradictory and insensitive. The term "Anglo" is offensive because it does not duly recognize an individual's ethnic heritage, which, for many Caucasians, is not an Anglo-Saxon background.

Please, if racial distinctions must be made at all, either use the term "white" or "Caucasian." Any other term is not only thoughtless and rude, but insulting and disparaging.

And lastly, neither this paper, nor any respectable publication, would print any demeaning terms to refer to any race, religion or nationality. Hence, I do not understand why the editors of this paper condone and legitimize the term "Anglo," when used in a disparaging manner, by allowing it to be printed on the pages of the State Press.

Israel able to suppress free speech in America

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — People sometimes ask me why I'm so critical of Israel, as if I should be devoting more of my attention to Sri Lanka, or perhaps Zaire. But the question is always a little nervous, as it wouldn't be if I were writing equally often about Sri Lanka or Zaire.

I could understand this curiosity if some other small, remote country were one of the world's four or five military powers; if it received a quarter of our foreign aid; if it were constantly on our front pages; and if its sympathizers regularly occupied much of the op-ed space of The New York Times and other major newspapers. But there is only one country of which these things are true, and that is Israel.

Nobody thinks it's odd that there should be 20 columnists who are apologists for Israel; but apparently it is unfathomable that there should be one or two who are critical of Israel.

But there's another reason that is both personal and professional. Israel has a very powerful lobby in this country, with a highly accomplished propaganda corps. And that lobby is not content with making the case for Israel and putting fear into nearly all the politicians in Washington, who are supposed to be representing the interest of the United States. It also tries to shut up opposition in the free press.

I have felt its pressure. So have Rowland Evans and Robert Novak. So has Patrick Buchanan. And so have a great many other newspaper editors.

We still hear of the fear engendered by Joe McCarthy. But people talked freely about that fear even at the height of McCarthy's career. I believe that someday historians will look back with far more wonder about the quieter and more paralyzing fear engendered in our own era by domestic Zionist power. The press was never afraid of McCarthy; it is very much afraid of Israel's American sympathizers.

One result is that the news we get from Israel is heavily self-censored and bowdlerized. The average American thinks of Israel as a "democratic" country whose domestic troubles are due to unruly Arabs. Not one American Christian in a hundred realizes that if he lived in Israel, he would be the victim of official discrimination — forced, like the Soviet

"IT SAYS HERE THAT NO MATTER HOW BADLY HE BEHAVES, ONE MUST NEVER DAMAGE HIS DELICATE EGO WITH EVEN GENTLE REBUKE. ONE SHOULD MERELY SAY, 'TSK! TSK!'"

Jew, to carry an identification card effectively stigmatizing him.

For those who want fuller news from Israel, I recommend The Washington Report on Middle East Affairs, an excellent monthly magazine now endangered by its large deficit. (Subscriptions are $15. The address is P.O. Box 53062, Washington, D.C. 20009.)

If Israeli propaganda were true, there would be no need to quash or intimidate critics. The very act of trying to silence opposition is a kind of confession in itself. Ring Lardner said it well: "Shut up," he explained.

Is there no case to be made for Israel? Of course there is. At times I have made it myself. I would make it again — if Israel had not become a threat to freedom of speech and ethical debate in this country.

But when you risk injury to your career in the United States by defending the interests of the United States, something is seriously wrong. A proper parallel is not with Joe McCarthy, who at least was trying to uphold America's position, but with the publishing industry in New York during the 1930s, when a book critical of the Soviet Union stood scant chance of seeing print.

Suppression is a good tactic but a bad strategy. In the long run, the truth has a way of seeping through. No matter how many clever excuses you make for a Yitzhak Shamir, it's not a terribly good idea to have Americans identifying Israel with Yitzhak Shamir. Israel was much better off when Americans identified Israel with Abba Eban — now in political exile for his moderation.

And it isn't wise, in the long run, to make Americans afraid in their own country, to speak their minds about a foreign country. They will eventually resent the colossal impudence of it. And the country on whose behalf the suppression was enacted will bear the consequences.

Mechem votes for Stiles

Editor:

Dear people who don't want to hear any more crap.

I would like to say a few words about the upcoming run-off election today. One, if you don't vote, you don't count. This is not personal interpretation, it is the way it is.

In the world of ASASU politics, everyone has been saying one thing and doing another. By definition, a politician is usually not trusted. This leaves us with a choice. We can vote for the candidate who we trust the most, or we can choose not to vote at all.

Unfortunately, the second choice, that of apathy, has led us to to current crisis. In my opinion, and with complete honesty, I will vote for the candidates that will protect my wallet as much as my right to a quality education. People who say, "Money is no object," really mean: "It's the money." Vote for the candidates who will save you the most money. It's yours in the first place.

The candidates started out by being downright friendly, but now they are cutting each other up to no end. We, as voters, need to sift through his mud and make a decent decision based on the facts.

I have spent much time thinking about what I am going to say next. As a former presidential candidate, I ran for election by myself for one reason: I would not have anyone to blame if I were to screw up, and I would not have to kiss up to anyone after I was in. I will not change that prerogative.

I do not care about who is endorsing whom. I do not give a darn about who is in whom's "camp." However, I will make it a matter of public record who I am voting for. Chris Stiles did not ask for my support; I like a man who stands on his own two feet, so I am voting for Chris. I am sure that he stands the best chance of not letting us down because we will boot him out if he does and he knows that.

I do not care about the bad things that people have said in the past. I am concerned with today and ready for tomorrow. So is Chris. Over the course of the general election, it seems that I came to be known as a man who does not give any crap nor take any. I call 'em like I see 'em. Chris has no choice when it comes to us. He will do his best and I trust him by voting for him.

Bonner, Holmes voting for Ortega

Editor:

After careful deliberations over the presidential candidates, we feel that Matt Ortega will best represent and work for the needs of all ASU students. In the past, Matt Ortega has demonstrated charismatic leadership with results that we believe separate him from his present competitor. Our choice is Matt Ortega for ASASU president.

Stiles for president

Editor:

In our past experiences with various campus clubs, we ran into many people who took great pleasure in erecting walls in our paths. Then we met Chris Stiles. He seemed to take great pleasure in helping to lower those walls.

As future senators from the colleges of Fine Arts and Liberal Arts and Sciences, respectively, we feel the current situation at ASU is a little different from years past. We are at a point where active student involvement will make a difference. Chris Stiles is the person who will unite ASU and make that difference. He is the only presidential candidate who has the unique capability to unify and motivate those students who are usually alienated or disenfranchised by the current system.

We are proud to endorse Chris Stiles for president.

With him at the helm, ASASU has great potential.

"BROCCOLI AGAIN?!"

ASASU Senate sends election code bills to committee

By DAN NOWICKI
State Press

Two Associated Students of ASU Senate bills that would amend the election code in the ASASU bylaws were routed to the Government Operations Committee upon first reading at Tuesday night's general Senate session.

Also, Senate resolutions that would support the banning of all California table grapes from campus and encourage members of the ASU community to participate in a fast commemorating last year's Chinese student protest both passed by wide margins.

Senate Bill 118, introduced by College of Architecture Sen. Andrew McGuire, calls for the adoption of Associated Students Policy 609 which states that all ASASU officials, equipment, facilities and office supplies will remain neutral during the ASASU campaign season, into the official election code.

Senate Bill 119, also introduced by McGuire, would penalize any candidate found in violation of the neutrality policy 10 penalty points. The accumulation of 20 penalty points results in forfeiture of the election.

On April 4, ASASU President Paul Larson charged then-presidential candidate Tami Willingham with improperly accessing ASASU facilities for campaign purposes. Larson could not file a formal complaint against Willingham because the neutrality policy is not part of the official election code in the ASASU bylaws.

However, McGuire said Larson's allegation had little to do with prompting his legislation.

"It probably wouldn't have come up otherwise, but I'm not concerned about what happened (this year)," McGuire said. "I don't think that's an issue."

"What I'm worried about is possibly, in the next year, abuse of this (policy) could happen in the future if . . . the penalties aren't there, if they are not enforceable."

Senate Resolution 16, introduced by Gloria Ruiz, which states that the ASASU Senate supports the banning of California table grapes served on campus in protest to the widespread use of pesticides, passed by a vote of 10-3.

Ruiz said she was very happy it was passed.

"It's a human rights issue," Ruiz said. "I was in California this past weekend, and the (pesticide-spraying) airplanes were overhead and our cousin made us rush to our van because they're dangerous. Pesticides are dangerous."

Senate Resolution 18, which was introduced by the University Affairs Committee, encourages all members of the ASU community — students, faculty, administration and staff — to participate in a fast from sunset on May 12 to sunset on May 13 to mark the anniversary of the Chinese student hunger strike in Tiananmen Square and expresses support for the process of non-violent dialog in China and Tibet.

The measure was passed unanimously.

the State Press will be on the stands when you get to campus.

Harris said that although Phoenix does not have a prominent coalition of soccer fans, if the Valley was chosen to host the event, sports buffs from around the world would flock to Arizona and sell out the available 75,000 seats.

Sadler said every event held in the stadium benefits the University. Currently ASU retains a $1.50 surcharge on every ticket sold, he said.

This amount increases by 10 cents every year, and that by 1994, ASU would retain $2.20 on every ticket.

Sadler said this money is used for payments on the stadium construction bond, which are approximately $600,000 per year, and for athletic department programs and scholarships.

Discovery, space telescope launch scrubbed

By HOBART ROWLAND
State Press

The hopeful anticipation of three ASU astronomers turned into minor disappointment early Tuesday, when the space shuttle Discovery's scheduled launch was delayed indefinitely due to problems with an auxiliary power unit.

David Burstein, Rogier Windhorst and Sumner Starrfield hoped that by today, the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope would be floating a few hundred miles above the earth in the shuttle's bay.

But the launch, already seven years behind schedule due to technical problems and mishaps, was scrapped four minutes before lift-off. According to The Associated Press, National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said the flight could be delayed anywhere from one to two weeks. A more precise launch time will be determined later today, the news service reported.

The three ASU astronomers were granted time from NASA to use the orbiting telescope for studies involving stars, novas and distant galaxies.

About 30 students and interested onlookers joined the astronomers at ASU's Bateman Physical Sciences Center at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday to view the launch.

The scientists took the delay in stride.

"We are disappointed, of course," Windhorst said shortly after he heard the news of the scrubbed take-off. "But it's better to be safe than sorry."

Windhorst added that the University will keep in close contact with Washington, D. C., to "see what's going on."

Burstein, who was allotted five hours of actual observation time for the first of his two studies focusing on hot stars in nearby galaxies, said the delay won't effect his project.

"Another week won't make much of a difference," he said.

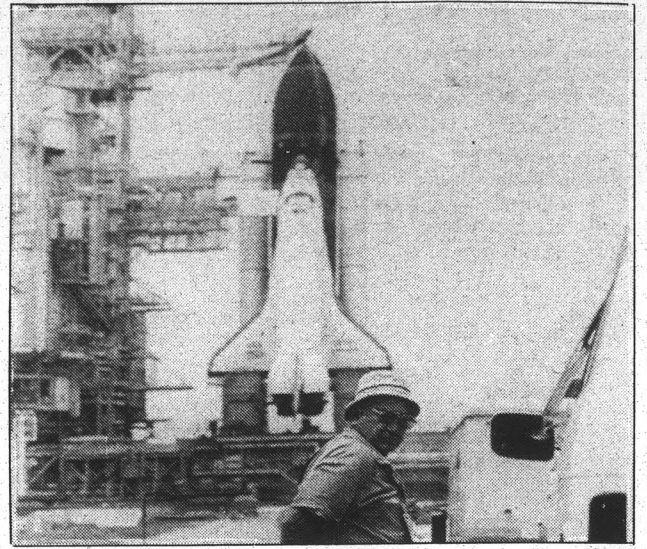

After the news came over the 15-foot by 15-foot video screen set up for the event, Burstein and the others opted to make the best of the situation by showing a video and slide presentation on the HST. Most in the audience stayed for the presentation.

Burstein emphasized that the HST will provide astronomers with the first real opportunity to detect planets around stars. These formations, he said, are undetectable with a conventional ground telescope.

"We don't know what we'll find," he admitted. "If we knew, then we wouldn't have built the telescope."

The letdown in Arizona was shared with the hundreds of astronomers who had gathered at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida to watch the launch.

About 150 relatives of Edwin P. Hubble, the astronomer for whom the telescope was named, headed for a pool party after learning of the delay, The Associated Press reported.

Pizza

"It's shown a lot of success," Mueller said.

Land agreed, saying the Pizza Hut agreement "has been very well received" at other campuses.

But some local merchants expressed concerns about the potential agreement.

Shawn Michael, manager of Papa Jay's Pizza in Tempe, said agreements like the one proposed by Marriott could signal the end for many local businesses.

"I'm going out of business," Michael said. "The local guy doesn't have a chance."

He said that if students were able to utilize their meal accounts at a Pizza Hut, most local merchants wouldn't be able to match the convenience and would lose student customers.

But, Michael said, there is little local merchants can do.

"You can't take on big business — it takes $10,000 to bring them to court. We don't have the funds."

But Land lauded the possible agreement, saying that, "if anything, it's a more positive arrangement."

"Pizza Hut would bring us consistency of product," Land said. "It would offer (students) a different variety of product."

But Frank Taurisano, owner of Sammy-B's in Tempe, said he disagrees.

"It's not good for a campus to have (a monopoly)," he said. "The public suffers."

Taurisano said that his efforts to open an outlet at Phoenix' Sky Harbor Airport were frustrated by Marriott, which also holds a food services contract there.

"It's tough to deal with a big conglomerate," he said.

But Taurisano said he recognizes the University's position, and he could understand the reasons for the move.

"On a certain level, you can't blame them — it's safer for the University," Taurisano said, adding that while a Pizza Hut would hurt sales at Sammy-B's, he did not expect to go out of business.

"I guess in the end, the best place will always win out," he said. "If Pizza Hut doesn't do the job, maybe they'll be out of there."

Monica Gomez, manager of Oregano's Pizza in Tempe, said the agreement, if reached, would definitely hinder business.

"It wouldn't be fair to the merchants in the area," Gomez said.

Land disagreed, saying the University makes every effort to be fair.

"ASU — more than any Arizona university — is in compliance with the Private Enterprise Bill," Land said, referring to a bill that gives private businesses the opportunity to compete.

He said that the process ASU goes through to secure a service on campus — involving public bids and open hearings — is a "long, drawn-out process." But it is necessary to ensure that the fairness law is followed, he said.

"It's what we have to do," Land said. Mueller said Marriott employees would be retained to work in the MU Pizza Hut.

"They'd train us and we'd pay the franchising fee," he said. "They'll have auditors to ensure (Pizza Hut's) specifications are met."

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A thief broke into the Marriott satellite stand on Cady and Tyler malls and stole $100 in equipment. The thief cut two locks and entered through the eastside window.
- A male ASU student was arrested after running away from officers on campus. He was caught and cited for using a fake ID.
- A student reported receiving harassing telephone calls in the Physical Science Building by a male caller.

Tempe Police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A 46-year-old man was arrested after he allegedly tried to steal a car at 11 a.m. in the 1800 block of East University Drive. Police noticed him when the car alarm went off after the man accidentally triggered it.
- A 24-year-old man was arrested after he allegedly threw a glass picture at his girlfriend, cutting the left side of her neck. The incident occurred during a fight between the couple. The man was charged with aggravated assault.

•An 18-year-old man was arrested and charged with indecent exposure after two women allegedly saw him urinating in a bush in the 1000 block of East Apache Drive. He was also charged with assault after he slapped one of the women.

•A 34-year-old man was arrested after he allegedly yelled obscenities to police officers. Police warned the man before arresting him, but he continued shouting and attracted a crowd. He was charged with disorderly conduct.

Stiles said the fact that Ortega has now registered still "doesn't change the fact that what he tells students to do and what he does himself are two different things."

Tim Berry, Moran's campaign manager, grilled McCune on three separate occasions concerning an alleged deal made between McCune and Vernard Bonner, the president of Students Against Racism and a former activities candidate. Both Berry and Moran alleged that Bonner approached each candidate and offered his support for the candidate who would promise to allocate two activities director positions exclusively for minority students and support the creation of a new ASASU executive position — vice president of Cultural Affairs.

"I was approached on Friday and told that to get support from Bonner, other minority leaders and what Bonner called the minority community, in order to win with those votes, there was something that I had to do," Moran said.

"I would have to hand over two of the directorships out of the seven in the Activities office to Vernard and his friends," she said.

"That puts the average student at a great disadvantage," she added. "Kickbacks and dirty campaigning are not the way a student should run an election."

However, McCune denied making any promises to Bonner in exchange for his endorsement.

"Vernard came to me with a concern, and an executive officer has two responsibilities: As Activities vice president, it is my responsibility to coordinate programming, and as an executive officer, it is my responsibility to represent the needs and research the ideas (of the students)," McCune said.

"I acted in that capacity and I talked about the concern with Vernard, but no deal (was made)," he added. "I've spoken to a hundred groups and every group presents you with an idea."

"Vernard presented me with an idea and that's it."

Ortega said he discussed similar matters with Bonner and other students.

"I was spoken to by concerned individuals who happened to be minorities about the representation of under-represented individuals in Associated Students," Ortega said.

"They asked for some positions, yeah," Ortega continued. "I said I will recruit qualified individuals because I do not believe in ethnic tokenism, and I do not allow people to interact with me within a cultural stereotype."

Ortega said he left his meeting with Bonner without agreeing to any "special deal."

He also said the prospect of a new executive vice president post was pitched to him at the meeting.

"I support the potential creation of a VP for Cultural Diversity because this goes along with (ASU) President (Lattie) Coor's agenda," Ortega said. "Although I support this, I believe that students should receive a very clear rationale for its creation."

Stiles said he also had a similar experience with Bonner.

"He approached me with the idea that if I would promise in writing to provide two minority positions, then the impression Vernard gave me would be that he would be happy to arrange as much minority support as he could mobilize," Stiles said. "And I told him I didn't feel I needed an incentive such as that to provide jobs for minorities in my administration, and I told him it was something I would do with or without his support."

Bonner admitted that he talked to the candidates.

"My concern with the candidates was whether they were interested in diversifying their staff and making their office representative of all students at ASU," Bonner said. "That was my concern and that was my only concern."

"I didn't necessarily approach them; a lot of candidates called me and asked for my endorsement," he continued. "So it wasn't like I was shopping around for deals or anything like that."

The polls will close at 9 tonight. Election winners will be announced Thursday at 5 p.m. in front of the MU.

The Usual Suspects

Fox lifts ban on reviewers

Twentieth Century Fox has lifted its ban against critics Roger Ebert and Gene Siskel, who gave harsh reviews of a recent Fox film.

The studio said three weeks ago that Ebert and Siskel would be barred indefinitely from preview screenings after both critics said on a television talk show that the comedy "Nuns on the Run" wasn't funny.

But Siskel called Fox shortly before a Monday screening of another Fox film and asked if he was still unwelcome.

It was the first Fox screening here since "Nuns on the Run."

The ban was over, a company spokesman said, and Siskel went to the show. Ebert didn't know about the lifting of the ban and was out of town.

"I'm happy the ban is lifted," Ebert said. "I feel vindicated. In the future I will continue to review Fox films in the same evenhanded way I have in the past."

"The only thing I'm disappointed about is that I had predicted the ban would last only one film and Roger had predicted it would last none," Siskel said. "Roger was right and he's going to be hard to deal with when he gets home."

The two appear on "At the Movies," a syndicated half-hour television show.

Hope (Mel Harris) on set with her TV baby while the real one waits at home.

Harris conveniently pregnant for show

"Thirtysomething" actress Mel Harris and her husband Cotter Smith of "Equal Justice" are the parents of a 7-pound, 13-ounce girl.

Harris, who plays a yuppie mom and wife on ABC's show emulating the baby boom generation, gave birth to her second child April 3.

During her pregnancy, Harris's character, Hope, was also pregnant. When she returns to the show, she will have two children, said her manager, Molly Madden.

"Mel worked right up to practically the last point and she should be back soon," Madden said.

Harris has one son from a previous marriage. She and her husband of two years live in Sherman Oaks.

Alexis product of nature

Model Kim Alexis says she's unretouched by human hands, and she intends to stay that way.

The 29-year-old blonde said in the May issue of Redbook magazine that she's adamantly opposed to plastic surgery, although many of her modeling cohorts have undergone body-enhancing surgery.

"I'm probably the only model in New York who hasn't had breast implants," Alexis said, adding that the idea of a facelift makes her particularly queasy.

"Yuck! The idea of someone chiseling into my face — I just don't believe in it," she said. "I don't think I'll ever want a facelift. . . . Besides, wrinkles do add character."

Bands, comedians unite for cause

Students organize benefit concert

By ROBYN PINKSTON
State Press

Local bands, comedians and celebrities will be donating their talents to the National Coalition Against Censorship by performing at a benefit concert Thursday night at After the Gold Rush, thanks to two enterprising ASU students.

"I have been receiving literature from NCAC for years," said Gayle Kelemen, ASU sociology major and co-promoter of the show. Kelemen was never able to contribute to the cause financially because of a restricted student budget.

Kelemen and Rick Kuyper, an ASU accounting major, decided to contribute to the NCAC by organizing a benefit concert. "The idea came to me about two months ago," Kelemen said. "I'm heavy into music, and so is Rick, and we both know a lot about the local music scene."

Although Jan Brewer's controversial bill proposing labels for albums with questionable lyrics is dead, the fight to protect First Amendment rights is still alive through NCAC. According to Kelemen the NCAC's concerns about protecting the First Amendment rights extend to education, labor and civil rights.

"I feel strongly against censorship," Kelemen said. "Music is words with music behind it and that is a form of expression. If you censor that, you censor what you think."

Kelemen said that After the Gold Rush agreed readily to the idea of a benefit concert although one club approached about doing the show found the issue too political. Participating bands are all donating their time. "All the bands we have feel strongly for the cause," she said. "They're not getting paid."

Zia Records donated the ticket expenses, and Caanlin, a local recording company, is donating T-shirts. All proceeds from ticket and T-shirt sales will go to NCAC, except for paying the sound person. Kelemen and Kuyper donated all publicity costs, including flyers promoting the show.

At a press conference last week, several participating band members joined the concert's coordinators in promoting the show as well as NCAC's cause.

"It seems like a giant step backwards in a land that has been called 'the land of the free,'" said Val Serrano, the show's stage manager. "It's a parent's right to raise a child up to 18 years old. I would not want my child to listen to some rap albums, but it's my responsibility to say why," Serrano said.

"I find it strange that in other parts of the world they are fighting tooth and nail for their freedom, and here people just lay down their rights," Kuyper said.

Several band members responded to the idea of having their lyrics censored.

Jim Seagraves of Rip 'N Tear thinks the burden of censorship should be on the parents. "Anyone over 18 can go to war and fight for their country, but they can't listen to what they want," he said.

"I believe it starts in the home," said Patrick Van Zannon of Housequake. "The kids would have to have a problem in the first place to be affected by the music."

Bands performing will include Risque, Rip 'N Tear, Housquake, Shadowtalk and Dead Hot Workshop. Comedians Aaron Gnirk, Ron Moray, Tommy Dean, Sam Piazza and Mitch Akin will also take part in the show. Mary "The Bone Mama" McCann, a DJ at the radio station KUKQ, will be reading poetry.

The show is tomorrow night at 7:30 at After the Gold Rush. Tickets are $5 in advance at Zia Records or $6 at the door.

State Press reporter Sonja Lewis contributed to this report.

Good ads, thin plot in Moore's 'Crazy People'

By KRAMER WETZEL

State Press

Working in the advertising business can drive a person to the brink of insanity. Work must be creative and catchy, and done on a tight schedule. Emory Leeson (Dudley Moore) is your typical stressed ad executive in "Crazy People."

But Emory breaks with reality — at least reality as it is defined by the advertising agency. Their motto is, as Emory points out, "We lie for a living." Emory is plagued with writer's block, but when the block lets loose, he comes up with a whole slew of new campaigns — ones that tell the truth.

Poor Emory is shipped off to the sanitarium for a little rest and relaxation. He's got to get back on track. Like many other films, however, the crazy people aren't so crazy. The real crazies live in the outside world.

By some mistake, Emory's honest ads run instead of the usual lies. The ads are an instant success. Imagine — truth in advertising? How about a cigarette ad that read something like "Pulmonary cancer? Maybe. Great flavor? Always!" Get the picture? Real, honest advertising.

Due to the success of the ads, Emory is heralded as the latest, greatest advertising success, except he doesn't want to leave the funny farm now. Madison Avenue comes to him, and a bunch of looney tunes and fruitcakes start cranking out ad copy — honest ad copy.

An ostensible plot line involves some cheap sentimentality with Kathy (Daryl Hannah) and Emroy. Skip the plot on this part. This is a mere ploy to give the story some extra bulk. The cheap shots about life inside the sanitarium aren't worth it. The commercials, and their overpowering parody of themselves, are what really make this film good.

Most of the ads are a little too risqué for print.

There are no real revelations, nothing happens in the character development department, and the storyline isn't really that interesting.

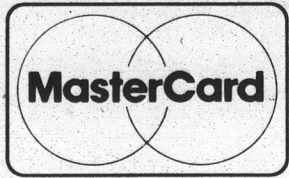

Understandably, some of the real Madison Avenue firms are upset with this film. Honesty is the best policy, though. For sheer enjoyment and possibly the best look at what advertising should be like, see this film. The ad copy on some of those things make one really wonder what advertising is doing to our brains.

Imagine, honest advertising, wouldn't that be a joke?

Dwarf muscles carry load

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Some residents are happy, others grumpy about Dopey's rise to the top at the new Walt Disney Co. headquarters in Burbank, Calif.

Disney officials on Monday unveiled giant statues of the Seven Dwarfs, made to look as if they are holding up the roof of the five-story building.

Happy, Grumpy, Sleepy, Sneezzy, Dopey, Bashful and Doc each stand 19 feet tall. They'd been kept under wraps for more than three months.

Within hours, tourists began stopping to take pictures of the dwarfs, who starred with Snow White in the 1937 animated classic.

"We have Stone Mountain but these are cuter," said Diane Ward, 28, a Georgia native who stopped to look with her 12-year-old nephew as they made their way to visit the NBC Studios.

Some gazers were a bit puzzled. "How can you call it a dwarf if it's 20 feet tall?" asked Randy Garhan, 41, as he sat in the Pago Pago Club across the street.

Disney employees were enthusiastic.

"What other company could do that?" said Glen Means, 42, who works in the molding shop. "I think it's outstanding." Others were less animated by it all.

"The Seven Dwarfs seem to be the only ones amused about this architectural nightmare," said Michael Scandiffio, a board member of the Burbank Rancho Homeowners Association. "The building is too massive, it's an overbearing presence on surrounding neighbors."

The Seven Dwarfs appear to be holding up the new Walt Disney headquarters.

GLENVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — At Lee and Terri Frederick's place, room guests enjoy old-fashioned home cooking and are greeted at breakfast with a friendly, "Good morning."

They can watch television, play table tennis in the recreation room, use the telephone and entertain visitors in the family's garage.

But don't pack your bags for a weekend in the mountains. The Fredericks' place is the Gilmer County Jail, one of the nation's last "mom and pop" jails.

The jail owes more to Mayberry than to Attica or Alcatraz.

While inmates eat Terri's pasta, pizza and meat dishes in their upstairs cells, the Fredericks are eating the same fare downstairs.

"I just make extra for the guys upstairs," Mrs. Frederick said.

Every other Thursday, the couple pulls their 1986 Chrysler out of their garage and sets up folding chairs so inmates can entertain visitors.

The Frederick's house rules are posted in the jail's recreation room:

"Golden Rules: If you open it, close it. If you take it out, lock it up. If it will brighten someone's day, SAY IT!"

The Fredericks live with their two sons, Joey, 6, and Lynn, 2, in a three-bedroom brick house whose upstairs cells have housed the county's criminals for 50 years.

The two-story building, built of flesh-colored brick, sits atop a hill, sandwiched between the county courthouse and a Glenville State College dormitory.

The rest of the neighborhood is made up of modest single-family homes that look much like the Frederick house, except for the bars on the windows.

Lemon finds success as ASU's No. 2 golfer

By KRIS TIMMONS
State Press

Three years ago, ASU Head Coach Steve Loy said Jim Lemon had no chance to play for the Sun Devils.

Today, Lemon's 72.46 stroke average makes him the second best golfer on the ASU squad — second only to defending NCAA champion Phil Mickelson (71.79).

Prior to playing for the Sun Devils, Lemon's career spanned two years at Scottsdale Community College where he finished fourth in the 1989 NJCAA championship and eighth in 1988. Lemon also earned second-team and first-team All-America honors in 1988 and 1989, respectively.

"I never felt I played as well as I could have at SCC," Lemon said.

The 21-year-old finance major first began golfing on a family vacation in Hawaii just after his 16th birthday. Upon returning to the mainland, Lemon started golfing on weekends and took a job on a golf course.

Although Lemon opted not to play in high school, he decided that he did want to play in college. After high school graduation, Lemon said he expressed an interest in ASU but Loy said that he did not have enough talent to compete for the Sun Devils.

But his game improved and Loy began recruiting him.

"I got a lot better over my two years at SCC," Lemon said, adding that he did not have any reservations about joining the ASU squad after the initial rejection from Loy.

At the Fresno State Classic last weekend, Lemon recorded another top-10 finish by tying for eighth at four-over-par.

Lemon, who recorded his first victory as a Sun Devil with a tie for medalist honors at the Morris Williams Intercollegiate in Austin, Texas, three weeks ago, is only looking toward the future.

"We will definitely win our next chances," he said, "and I really like our chances for winning the national title."

Loy said he likes what he is seeing from the junior transfer.

"He seems to be getting better every week," Loy said. "He is one of the best players in the country and you can always count on him to be there for the team."

The Mesa native said his ball striking is the best part of his game but he makes an effort to work on the weaker parts of his game every day.

"Next year my goal is to make the All-American first team," Lemon said. "I would also like to win two, three or four tournaments next season."

Lemon's collegiate eligibility runs out following the 1990-91 season and he said that he will probably forego graduation to join the PGA Tour. There are eight former Sun Devils currently on the tour including 1983 NCAA champ Jim Carter, who attended the same high school (Mesa) as Lemon.

"If I could, I'd like to be out there and stay on tour for the rest of my life," Lemon said.

ASU senior golfer Amy Fruhwirth fired a round of 74 Tuesday to move into a fifth-place tie with teammate Missy Farr at five-over-par after the second round of the Lady Sun Devil Invitational.

Golfers take 17-shot lead

Burton shoots course record, leads tourney

By KRIS TIMMONS
State Press

In the second round of play at the Lady Sun Devil Invitational Tuesday, freshman Brandie Burton took a three-shot lead with the tournament's only sub-70 round while second-ranked ASU increased its advantage to an impressive 17 strokes.

Burton, who set a course record with a three-under-par round of 69, is one of four Sun Devils going into today's final round in the top-10. Members of ASU's "A" squad are scheduled to tee off in eight-minute intervals beginning today at 9:44 a.m.

Burton made the turn at three-under-par and despite a double-bogey on the 16th hole, she managed to hold at three-under for the round. She has a two-round score of five-under-par.

Oklahoma State's Carolyn McKenzie, who was tied with Burton for first place after one round of play, shot 74 for the second round and slipped back into third place at even par.

Tulsa's Kelly Robbins moved into second place with rounds of 72 and 70.

Sun Devil Head Coach Linda Vollstedt said that although Burton was "a little erratic on her drives," she had a good, solid round and has confidence that she can continue her dominance.

"I think she'll go out tomorrow and want to shoot in the 60s again," Vollstedt said.

"She'll fight really hard. She has a great attitude."

Burton said that even though her scores for the two rounds have reflected consistent play, she felt that she played better in the second round.

"I played solid and I was more confident (in the second round)," Burton said. "I was just running out of gas (at the 16th hole)."

ASU has a commanding 17-stroke lead over second place UofA while top-ranked Tulsa is 23 strokes back of the Sun Devils in third place.

Consistent play from seniors Missy Farr and Amy Fruhwirth has contributed to the lead. Farr and Fruhwirth both shot 74 for the day and are tied for fifth place at five-over-par.

"This has been a great team effort," Vollstedt said. "Amy and Missy should be in the top-10 and Lynne (Mikulas) is playing well."

Mikulas is tied for ninth with the Wildcats' Paige Gilbert and San Jose State's Tracy Hanson at seven-over-par.

Freshman Tricia Konz rounds out the "A" squad tied for 35th at 14-over-par.

Sophomore Julie Shephard had the ASU "B" squad's low round with a 79.

Burton said she is confident about today's final round.

"We're all playing well and it's looking good," she said.

7th-ranked womens tennis hosts Utah

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

After suffering a four-match losing streak on the road, ASU womens tennis Head Coach Sheila McInerney said the Sun Devils are ready for a victory as they take on the University of Utah today at 1:30 p.m. at Whiteman Tennis Center.

The fact that ASU is ranked seventh while the Utes are ranked 21st makes a victory for the Sun Devils look promising, McInerney said.

"They are not going to be as strong as the top-10 teams that we play," she said. "But we have to be prepared for a good match."

However, McInerney said rankings can be deceiving and feels Utah is a strong team despite its position.

"We have to be prepared to play everybody," she said. "There are so many good teams and good players that you don't want to overlook anybody."

ASU's Karen Bergan said she is expecting today's match to be just as competitive a battle as the team's past four matches have been.

"We always have competitive matches with them," she said. "I think they will be comparable to the teams we have been playing."

Last season, the Sun Devils defeated the Utes in an away match. Since then, Utah has lost its top player. McInerney said she does not feel this will affect Utah because of the depth in the rest of the lineup.

Today's match will be followed by Friday's and Monday's home matches against No. 13 Tennessee and No. 15 San Diego. McInerney said the players are looking forward to having home-court advantage after their long away-match stretch.

"They should be three good home matches to close out the season," she said. "Needless to say, the kids look forward to playing at home."

Already this season, the Sun Devils have competed in 25 matches. McInerney said it is the time of year when players tire out, but feels her team has enough depth to compensate for any fatigue it may show.

"We have enough depth that if we get tired, we can rotate the players around and the pressure is off," she said. "If you are relying on one or two players, it puts the pressure on those players. I think it gives our kids confidence knowing that on any given day any of the kids can win."

Bergan said she and the team are a little bit fatigued after being on the road, but feels playing at home will be a good rest for the Sun Devils.

"I think everyone is a little bit tired — it's inevitable when you travel," she said. "But the next three weeks are at home and it will be a good chance to get ready for Nationals."

Last weekend, ASU lost to Texas 5-4, bringing its record to 16-9. McInerney said she was proud of the Sun Devils for the way they played and the way they handled pressure from a rowdy Texas crowd.

"I was proud of them for keeping their poise," she said. "I felt like that was a very competitive match and I hope that can carry over into the last part of our season and into Nationals."

ATLANTA — Illinois quarterback Jeff George, one of three dozen juniors entering the NFL draft, is the likely No. 1 choice of the Atlanta Falcons, who have the first pick in the April 22 draft.

"We've been in regular touch with the Falcons this week, and Jeff's excited about the prospect of playing in Atlanta," his agent, Leigh Steinberg, said.

George said Tuesday that he would "love to play" for the Falcons.

"Being a quarterback, you want to be wanted," he said in a telephone interview. "If Atlanta wants me . . . I'd love to go."

The Phoenix Cardinals will wear red pants next season for the first time since 1960, the NFL team announced Tuesday. Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill said the players will wear white jerseys with the red pants for most home games with red jerseys and white pants for most road games.

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. — Steffi Graf felt fine and played even better Tuesday when she ended a two-month layoff from tennis with an impressive debut in the Bausch & Lomb Championships.

The world's top-ranked player, sidelined since Feb. 6 with a broken thumb, needed only 45 minutes to beat Petra Langrova 6-1, 6-0 in a second-round match.

She said her right thumb, broken in a skiing accident in Switzerland, was not a problem and predicted the time she spent away from the tour will help — mentally and physically — in the long run.

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts owner Robert Irsay said Tuesday he is in no hurry to trade running back Eric Dickerson.

"What will it take?" Irsay said. "I'm not going to answer hypothetical questions. If a team is interested, they need to make an offer, we'll review it and then say yes or no."

"There has been nothing offered at all. And that's where it stands."

Dickerson has threatened to retire rather than play for the Colts next season. He and his agent have scheduled a meeting to discuss a television analyst's job with Turner Broadcasting Systems.
