Regents to set tuition in November

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

Student leaders said they are encouraged by the Arizona Board of Regents announcement that tuition likely would be set in November but still entertain concerns over tuition hikes and financial aid.

"That's good news," Associated Students of ASU President Matt Ortega said Friday after learning of the regents' plan to set tuition on Nov. 9. "Hope they stick with it. I like that kind of planning."

But Ortega warned that students should not become complacent.

"Students need to be aware. Too many times these things have flip-flopped," Ortega said. "We need to keep pressing that they keep to the timetable."

Student leaders have been lobbying for tuition to be set in November, claiming that last year's tuition hikes were due, in part, to the fact that tuition was not set until February. Last year, because the Legislature had no firm idea of what the universities' income would be, the Joint Legislative Budget Committee plugged in its own figures.

Many student leaders feel the state Legislature, not the regents, projected what the tuition income would be for the universities.

Regents Executive Director Molly Broad announced the tuition timetable Friday at the regents' monthly meeting.

Broad said the Council of Presidents, after generating a recommendation at tomorrow's meeting, will submit their tuition and financial aid formulas to the Resources Committee.

The Resources Committee then will generate a formal recommendation for full regents' consideration at the Oct. 18 meeting in Tucson.

Broad said the public hearing on tuition, where students and student leaders will be afforded the opportunity to voice their views on the proposal, will be Oct. 29, with tuition to be set Nov. 9.

Ortega said student leaders would not formulate tuition numbers just yet.

"We should not get involved in number crunching," he said, adding that he told the Council of Presidents he did not want to "get caught up with formulas."

"We just want a reasonable tuition scenario with reasonable financial aid," he said. "Higher education in Arizona is perceived by many middle class and disadvantaged people as not affordable."

Ortega said that how Arizona compared with other states tuition-wise is irrelevant.

"I don't give a damn what people in Michigan pay. The question is what people in Arizona perceive," he added.

Meanwhile, students must stay involved, he said.

"Students need to make a voice," Ortega said, adding that as the tuition-setting process accelerates, students need to keep abreast of the developments and protest if necessary.

ASU President Lattie Coor said the tuition issue will be the prime focus of tomorrow's COP meeting.

"We need to bring closure to (tuition)," Coor said.

Coor said the COP will explore the major concerns raised by the students, such as the rate students would pay for their education and the different financial aid proposals on the table.

The council would then work to "perfect" a tuition and financial aid recommendation

Regents OK budget figures for campuses

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

FLAGSTAFF — ASU officials said they are satisfied with the Arizona Board of Regents' dollar figures for the University's main and west campus operating budgets despite the board's decision to shave 5 percent off ASU's original request.

The regents will ask the Legislature for $292 million for the main campus and $42 million for ASU West.

ASU originally asked the Resources Committee for $310 million to operate the main campus and $42.6 million to run the west campus.

Last weekend, the budget requests from the three state universities were divided into four priority groups. The regents unanimously dropped the fourth priority group — totaling $48.4 million — from the three universities' requests before forwarding it to Gov. Rose Mofford's office.

"I agree with the decision to submit the requests through item three (priority group)," ASU President Lattie Coor said. "We have to be realistic as to the revenue potential of the state."

But Coor said the University already sliced its budget before it was submitted to the board's Resources Committee.

Regents Executive Director Molly Broad applauded the new plan.

"It's been carefully developed," she said.

The complete systemwide request totals $821.6 million — a 20 percent increase over this year's base.

Last year, the regents forwarded ASU's request of $228 million for the main campus and $33 million for ASU West. The Legislature allocated the University $187.6 million and $28.8 million.

This year's request now will be forwarded to the Executive Budget Office within the governor's office.

After reviewing the request, the EBO will give its university budget proposal, along with the regents' recommendation, to the Joint Legislative Budget Committee and the full Legislature for review.

Then, the JLBC will generate its own numbers, and the lawmakers will decide how much the university system will receive.

Regent Andy Hurwitz said realistically, the universities probably will not get the amount the regents are asking for.

"If we get a 10 percent increase, it won't be bad," he said.

However, Hurwitz said even with the financial woes the

Dr. Michael Campion, a Valley ophthalmologist, examines Ariane Dias Padilla Friday at a weekend clinic in Puerto Penasco, Mexico. Two doctors and a medical team volunteered to spend last weekend in Puerto Penasco, offering help, free-of-charge, to local residents.

Mexican clinic offers new hope

A 5-year-old girl walked hesitantly into a crowded room of American "medicos" in Puerto Penasco, Mexico, wearing blue lace socks folded over soiled hiking boots. She peered around the clinic with brown eyes partially hidden behind thick, dark-rimmed glasses.

Ariane Dias Padilla has been cross-eyed since birth. Her mother brought her to a weekend clinic to be treated by a volunteer team of ophthalmologists from Arizona.

Susan Thomas, an ASU nursing student, arranged for two doctors and a medical team to spend last weekend in Mexico, offering help, free-of-charge, to Puerto Penasco residents.

"(The people there) almost have no hope," Thomas said. "It was a miracle getting (the medical team) together (for the clinics)."

Thomas, 35, made her first trip south of the border with her husband, Michael, in March 1989, and, since then, has hauled "a busload" of medical supplies to Mexico almost every month.

The money for the supplies comes from a Mesa church and private contributions amassed by Michael Thomas, who raised $7,000 after the couple's first trip to Puerto Penasco.

Last weekend's clinic was headed by Valley ophthalmologists, Dr. Michael Campion and Dr. Gary Hall. Examinations were held Friday, surgeries were done on Saturday and post-op was completed on Sunday.

After examining Ariane, Campion said her eyes could be fixed with surgery but was concerned she would not be able to lie still for the 30-minute surgery if her eyes were numbed under a local anesthetic.

Campion, who had not planned on fully anesthetizing anyone, worked with Mexican doctor, Ruiz Gracida, to

Governor's debate focuses on environment

By JEFF CONCORS
State Press

Republican gubernatorial candidate J. Fife Symington questioned former Phoenix Mayor Terry Goddard's policies on toxic waste Friday, while the Democrat vowed to halt dumping and punish those who illegally dispose dangerous chemicals.

"We are creating Love Canals all over the state," Goddard said. "Arizona is bringing in tons of toxics into the state and I want to stop it."

More than 150 people filled the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors Auditorium to hear the candidates address environmental issues affecting Arizona in a debate sponsored by the Arizona Lung Association. Candidates were questioned by local environmental reporters, while KTAR's Pat McMahon mediated the event, which was aired live on the talk radio station.

Symington attacked Goddard's past environmental track record, claiming Goddard spent six years and $100,000 of Phoenix money dumping waste in riverbeds.

The former Phoenix mayor did not comment on the allegation, but said there should be tough enforcement and penalties for people who commit "environmental crimes" such as illegal dumping.

Both candidates said they opposed Proposition 202, which would allow companies to expand landfills.

Symington said he was "personally uncomfortable" with it, while Goddard said proponents of 202 were trying to get it passed "disguised as a recycling bill."

On the issue of air pollution, Symington said he wants to make Arizona a "testbed" for new energy technologies.

"We are a car society," Symington said, adding that he does not feel mass transit will ever be fully successful in the Valley.

Symington said he wants to look at the possibilities of alternative fuels such as electricity and the recycling of freon.

"Let's see what works," Symington said. "And I encourage industry to come to Arizona to help out."

Goddard said he is pushing mass transit as a solution to the "brown cloud" of pollution hovering over the Valley.

"Too many people drive too much," he said. "We need to find a way to get more people to where they are going without having more cars."

Goddard said he encourages carpooling adding that 80 percent of the Valley's air pollution comes from automobiles.

While Goddard restated his support for the defeated Val Trans proposition, Symington said it failed because voters "realized it was a financial black hole."

Both candidates said they were opposed to a bottle return bill and state mandated recycling.

Goddard said he wants to leave recycling up to individual municipalities, while Symington invited private industry to help.

Today

The Today section is a daily calendar of events happening at ASU that is presented as a service to the University community. Any campus club or organization can submit entries for publication to the State Press, located in the basement of Matthews Center, Room 15. Entries must be legible, are subject to editing for content, space and clarity, and will not be taken over the phone. Due to space restrictions, the State Press cannot guarantee publication. Deadline for the entries is 1 p.m. the previous business day.

Meetings

- Alcoholics Anonymous will have an open meeting at noon at the Newman Center on College Avenue and University Drive.
- MUAB Film Committee will meet at 3:30 p.m. in the MU

Gila Room to decide spring movies. New members welcome.

- Psi Chi will meet at 5:30 p.m. in the Psychology Building Room 205. Everyone welcome.

- Women Students will meet at noon at the Women's Student Center.

- Biomedical Engineering Society will meet at 3:40 p.m. in ERC 593.

- University Fencers' Club will meet at the Student Recreation Complex Gym C. Beginners encouraged to attend.

- Honors Journal is accepting student submissions for its spring publication in McClintock Hall Room 112 B.

- MUAB Film Committee will show "A Streetcar Named Desire" in the MU Cinema free.

Mobilization

Israel not offering invitation to U.N.

JERUSALEM (AP) — The government decided Sunday against cooperating with a U. N. team investigating the shooting deaths of 19 Palestinians by Israeli police, and said the delegation should stay away from Israel.

The ministers also delivered a slap to the United States by announcing plans to build apartments for immigrants in the occupied eastern sector of Jerusalem. The U. S. government has linked a $400 million loan guarantee to Israel's agreement to avoid settling immigrants there.

"We have read the Security Council's decision ... and it is completely unacceptable," a Cabinet communique said. "As a result Israel will not receive the delegation of the U. N. Secretary-General."

Israel television said the Cabinet decision came despite a personal appeal to Foreign Minister David Levy from U. S. Secretary of State James Baker, who said the U. N. visit would make it easier to direct world attention "to the struggle against Saddam Hussein."

Radio stations said right-wing Housing Minister Ariel Sharon proposed the investigators be barred from Israel, but Sharon's spokesman, Nimrod Granit, denied that.

Israeli officials, however, made it clear that they expect the three-man mission to stay away.

"This is not an invitation to come; it's an invitation not to come," said Deputy Foreign Minister Benyamin Netanyahu.

"There is a limit to absurdity ... It isn't customary to break down the door," Netanyahu said on Israel television. "It is not acceptable between countries and not between international organizations."

Police opened fire last Monday on Palestinians during a riot on the hallowed Temple Mount, sacred to both Moslems and Jews. The Moslems call it Haram-es-Sharif.

The riot began when Palestinians threw rocks onto worshippers praying below at the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site. Police first used tear gas and rubber bullets, then live ammunition.

The U. N. Security Council voted Friday to condemn Israel, and to send a delegation to investigate. In a rare gesture, the United States joined in the censure of its ally.

Israel's Cabinet, at its regular weekly session Sunday, said it saw no reason for the United Nations to intervene when it had ignored worse incidents in other countries.

Netanyahu said: "When hundreds of worshippers were massacred in Mecca they did nothing. When hundreds of worshippers were massacred at the Golden Temple in India they did nothing."

In a later meeting of a committee on immigration, Sharon announced plans to build 5,000 apartments a year in eight neighborhoods, six of them in east Jerusalem, said Ida Ben-Shitreet, spokeswoman for the Immigrant Absorption Ministry.

She insisted the housing decision had been planned before the U. N. resolution.

"This wasn't done to flex muscles. There is no doubt we must increase immigration to Jerusalem," Ben-Shitreet said.

But the radio said Sharon told reporters after the meeting: "Jerusalem as the capital of the Jewish people is stronger than any security council decision."

Clash among anti-Iraq coalition may end unanimity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two months after the United States recruited some unlikely partners to stand against Iraq, experts are asking whether the group can withstand the diverse views of its members.

The clash between the United States and its allies over a United Nations' resolution condemning Israel and Friday's assassination of an Egyptian leader highlight the possible risks to the international coalition.

From its largest shareholders, the United States and Britain, to its smallest participants, Norway and Denmark, the anti-Iraq grouping has achieved an unparalleled degree of unanimity.

Its stated goal, in defense of which members have deployed military forces and stopped trade with Iraq, is to oust President Saddam Hussein from Kuwait and stop him from attacking other oil-rich neighbors.

The first major test of the cohesion came last week when Yemen, an Iraqi ally, introduced a resolution condemning Israel for killing 19 Palestinians after Jewish worshippers were attacked in Jerusalem.

In an attempt to placate its Arab coalition allies, the United States broke with precedent and agreed to condemn Israel. But it also wanted the U. N. resolution to criticize the Palestinian violence, and rejected language calling for U. N. measures to protect Palestinians under Israeli occupation.

That put President Bush at odds with Egypt, Syria and other Arab members of the anti-Iraq coalition, as well as with his European partners, including France.

"It's terribly important for Bush to succeed on this if he's going to retain credibility as the head of the coalition," said Robert Hunter, a former presidential aide who's now an analyst at the private Center for Strategic and International Studies.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu said Sunday that there had been discussions about seeking further U. N. sanctions against Iraq.

"There are some concerns ... about the terrible things that have been done in Kuwait — the dismantling of a population, the atrocities that have taken place there," Sununu said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Bush, he said, "feels strongly that (Iraq) ought to receive international condemnation" on those matters.

Saddam has from the start tried to drive a wedge between the United States and the Arabs by portraying himself as the protector of Palestinians and other downtrodden Arabs in a class struggle against wealthy Americans and their "expansionist" ally, Israel.

Alcoholism in USSR serious, recovery attempts ineffective

MOSCOW (AP) — "There is a saying: 'Have a glass of vodka in the morning, and you'll be free all day long,'" said Viktor, who led a recent meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous in Moscow.

More than 20 million Soviet citizens regularly take that advice, and the problem seems to be growing worse.

Prosecutors say alcohol contributed to 70 percent of the city's violent crimes last year.

While Viktor told two dozen recovering alcoholics of the motto that sustained his 26 years of drinking, Sasha swayed in his chair, obviously drunk. It was Sasha's first meeting, and no one was sure whether he would return.

At the meeting's tearful conclusion, speakers told of broken marriages, lost jobs and the struggle to stay sober.

Alcoholics Anonymous, an American program, enjoys some success after three years in Moscow and has the grudging respect of authorities, but the overall war on alcoholism in the Soviet Union is going badly.

"There's enough work here to last three lifetimes," said Jeb Byrd, a psychotherapist with the Caron Foundation of Pennsylvania. His non-profit organization has a clinic in Moscow that combines AA methods with outpatient counseling.

Alcohol abuse is increasing; the number of heavy drinkers is estimated at 20 to 25 million in a total population of about 290 million.

At Truck Garage No. 21 in southeastern Moscow, supervisor Sergei Borisov said he had to fire 120 people for drunkenness between 1985 and 1988, or 20 percent of his workers. The garage is a dispatching point for bread trucks.

Drunks stagger across Moscow's broad streets at night or panhandle in parks during the day. Some pool resources for a bottle and drink it on a street bench or in a "stolovaya," a sort of stand-up cafeteria.

Many end up in drunk tanks or overcrowded, ineffective treatment clinics.

In March, President Mikhail Gorbachev admitted the anti-drinking campaign he started five years ago, under which alcohol production was drastically reduced, had not worked. Treatment and rehabilitation programs are acknowledged failures.

BOOS & BRAVOS

Bravo to the Arizona Board of Regents for taking the higher ground and supporting a paid state holiday honoring slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr. in addition to Columbus Day. The regents, who made their announcement Friday, joined approximately 30 other community leaders, including ASU President Lattie Coor (who also gets a coveted bravo), who have voiced their support for the MLK day. Hopefully, Arizona voters will do the same on Nov. 6.

Bravo to the members of the Associated Students of ASU Senate who voted in favor of a resolution that opposed the Intercollegiate Athletic Board's proposal to grant student athletes special preregistration privileges. It's good to know that the majority of our student representatives still believe academics should precede athletics and that all students should have equal opportunities during preregistration.

On the other hand, a bellowing boo goes out to those five senators who voted against the measure, especially College of Education Sen. Adrian Fontes, the opposition ringleader, who supports athlete priority ostensibly because "these are students who have been singled out for their performance and abilities." Likewise, Fontes' earthy comment during last week's senate session that "I want to see us kick UofA's ass sometime before I graduate" was childish and unprofessional. Such a statement may be unoffensive when made in an informal setting, but it's just plain embarrassing when spoken by a student representative in a senatorial context.

Boo to the continuing parking hassles for students trying to use campus facilities during Phoenix Cardinal home games at Sun Devil Stadium. It's a given that there will be some degree of traffic insanity no matter what is done, but Parking Services doesn't seem to put even the minimum amount of effort into improving the situation. There's no doubt as to what is Parking Services' main priority — it begins with a "$".

Bravo to the well-deserved and long overdue pay hike granted to ASU classified staff members by Arizona lawmakers last week in response to a study that illustrated gross pay inequities at the University. While this pay increase is a step in the right direction, it's still too little and the University's well-publicized "brain drain" — the seduction of ASU's "best and the brightest" by better paying schools around the country — is likely to continue.

LETTERS

Rape is not amusing

Editor:

I try to leave letters to the editor for the students. However, a letter that appeared today (Oct. 12) appeared to me to be so offensive, insensitive and immature that I am forced to respond. This letter was responding to an earlier letter written by Roberta Gibbons, and was signed by Thurston Hanson.

Strange that two people would receive a totally different impression when they read a letter. Ms. Gibbons (and I do not know the lady) used clinical terms, not four letter words, to respond to a situation that appeared, from my impression of her letter, to have both frightened and offended her. Hanson's response ridiculed both her offense and her fear.

Women do not find the idea of rape amusing. But to give these young men the benefit of the doubt (to use an apropos old cliché), I find an occasional story that says that women fantasize rape. However, I note that when that statement is made, the story is always written by a man. And, as Hanson says, they learned their behavior from their fathers. Stereotypes are always learned, but as people develop they should seek the truth. If they were the size of a 13-year-old girl and a strong, muscular man forced them, maybe they could begin to understand women's concerns. Some women have whistled and made obscene remarks — sometimes it takes tit for tat to make others realize how degraded, repulsive behavior makes them feel.

Hanson downgrades the incident Gibbons reports as a macho thing to do. This reminds me of 10-year-old boys who think saying the "f" word is extremely funny and clever. Hanson said that college guys think this is funny. Sorry, pal, the word should be college children. When are they going to grow up?

Gladys Bennett
Staff

Letter writer missed point

Editor:

This is directed toward Thurston Hanson, sophomore (definition, Webster's: one who is opinionated, though immature). Well, where do I begin? Mr. Hanson, I think you missed Ms. Gibbons' point. Let me tell you what it was.

It did not have anything to do with the First Amendment right to free speech, which I uphold wholeheartedly. It had to do with this macho attitude that you glorify and condone and claim is a behavioral trait passed down by your father (?!). It had to do with this macho attitude that men use to justify the objectification of women. It had to do with this macho attitude that men use to justify embarrassing, belittling, whistling at, beating, molesting, raping, terrifying, degrading, and destroying women. Is that really funny, Mr. Hanson? Do you really think that a T-shirt depicting the rape of another being is something to be taken lightly and to be considered just another joke?

I have a suggestion for you, Mr. Hanson, as you had a silly suggestion for Ms. Gibbons (namely, a "shirt patrol"). Spend an evening at CASA (Center Against Sexual Assault). Spend an evening, if possible, on a police patrol and experience a domestic violence call. Then look a woman in the face and tell her if you found any of it funny.

In with the out crowd "Nerd" tops hipsters in nightclub legal conflict

Cody Shearer
North American Syndicate

WASHINGTON — The most important institution in America for young adults is probably the "in" local nightclub. You see once a given establishment has been recognized as the socially correct place to be seen, people will do anything, and I mean nearly anything, to get in.

The problem with chic clubs is that not everyone can be admitted when they want, if at all. Accordingly, a system prevails in which a haughty doorman, generally a beefy college football player, is hired by management to act as the ultimate God as to who is or who is not admitted. Since the days of Studio 54, the trend-setting 1970's Manhattan disco, the doorman has reserved a critical spot for himself in our socially conscious world.

For those of us who observed the Studio 54 scene in New York City, the degree to which customers would grovel to win favor with a doorman was downright pathetic. This journalist watched money, drugs and fallen bra straps pass through the fingers of some doormen as they admitted customers from dozens of eager supplicants, all screaming behind some velvet rope.

While one can sympathize with the socially insecure as to why it's important for them to be seen at a hot new night club, I have little patience for the unfriendly behavior of many doormen. More often than not, they act with the kindness of a refugee camp director who has just decided to let you starve to death.

It is hard to believe that it has taken 15 years for someone to challenge the undemocratic, almost fascist nature that nightclubs impose when admitting the beautiful people to their environs. But in egalitarian California last week, this selective practice took it on the chin. Kenneth Lipton, 32, a self-appointed champion of the unglamorous took his problems with this social system to court.

Last May, Lipton, a lawyer from one of Los Angeles' many suburbs, found himself the victim of humiliation. Dressed in brown denim slacks and a blue short-sleeved shirt, Lipton was forced to stand outside the Mayan club, a fashionable downtown nightspot, for 90 minutes while the doorman admitted other jacketless characters, the instant they drove up in their stretch limousines.

Lipton, and his two companions, one of whom even sported the hip male accoutrements of an earring and pony tail, left in disgust, unable to taste the delights of the Mayan's re-created Guatemalan temple. But the group did not depart before the doorman informed Lipton he wasn't dressed appropriately. When Lipton told the doorman there was no posted dress code, it was explained to him that he was never getting in.

Last week, Lipton, who has been dubbed the "nerd" by FM radio disc jockeys in Los Angeles, took the owner of the Mayan to court, claiming $1,000 in damages for the club's discrimination against his appearance.

Club owner Sammy Chao told small claims court Commissioner Diana M. Wheatly that the reason the doorman didn't let Lipton in was because he thought he'd recognized him as someone who'd "lipped off before. Chances are, if you are abusive in the front, you will be abusive inside after you drink," explained Chao.

Searching for a better excuse, Chao offered another, equally lame alibi for his doorman's behavior. The reason customers don't simply line up for admission on a first come first served basis at establishments like his, he said, was because such a system does not give the doorman enough time to observe their behavior. Who is Chao kidding? Did he think his doorman had a doctorate in psychology? Most nightclub doormen I've met have enough trouble reciting their club's address by midnight.

Lipton, who made his claim before Commissioner Wheatly on the basis of California's Unruh Civil Rights Act, which was passed in 1959 to battle discrimination in business establishments, was a happy and wealthier man last week. The Commissioner found that the Mayan had violated state law against discrimination by refusing Lipton and his friends entry on the basis of their appearance, even though the club had no dress code.

While Lipton does not believe that his victory will cause other clubs to adopt more open admission policies, he hopes other people who've been discriminated against at other clubs will sue too. "The whole point of this is to get the people not allowed in these clubs to go and file these suits," he said. "My judgment simply shows that it can be done."

The problem with chic nightclubs like the Mayan, is that their admission policies are terribly unfair because no one has any idea what the criteria are for getting in or being excluded.

I am told by friends in Los Angeles that Kenneth Lipton is now offering free legal advice to any other slighted nerds in suing clubs where they think they've been discriminated against.

Meanwhile, my New Yorker friends are laughing at the entire incident because they say dressing in nerdy clothes and acting like a creep is what's so popular in Manhattan. According to them, Californians will never catch up.

This may be true but the real downside to this case is that one is reminded how cruel humans can be to one another when it comes to not accepting others, particularly those who might be different, in a social setting. It seems that no matter how many times man is told to be polite and hospitable, he finds a way to circumvent it.

What a crude, disrespectful cartoon by Ford ("I guess somebody lost a contact?," Oct. 10) showing two people kneeling in what is apparently Moslem prayer... SHAME! Sick humor!

This kind of cartoon perpetuates religious bigotry, and I am ashamed of Ford, and the State Press.

Cartoon complaints

Editor:

The Oct. 1 "Campus Evangelist" cartoon misses the point. The problem is not what the Campus Ministers do on their "off time." The real problem is what everyone does on his/her "off time." Everyone knows how to say the right thing but not do it; therefore, the society is the manifestation of the contradicted individual. Simply because one may hold a public position does not mean that he/she may be exempt from this basic struggle. Quite to the contrary, many times it is public officials who seem to struggle the most. The private lives of JFK and MLK typify this dilemma.

The cartoon you published portrays campus ministers as sinister hypocrites, which is severely misleading. Not only that, it seeks to tear down worthwhile institutions and sincere people who love God. What, pray tell, will the enlightened one of the State Press offer in exchange? Perhaps the Dictatorship of Public Opinion through the single party State Press. Or, something truly novel, anarchy at its best.

No mature suggestions offered

Editor:

On Sept. 10, the State Press ran an editorial written by Kris Timmons. The headline read, "Maturity on both sides key to equal access." Ms. Timmons' story, in my opinion, fails to offer any mature "suggestions" for handling the controversial issue of women reporters in locker rooms.

The issue, said Ms. Timmons, is equal access. Equal access is not the issue. In 1978, Judge Constance Baker Motley ruled "that all reporters, regardless of sex should have equal access to athletes even if such access included the locker room."

In her article, Ms. Timmons stated, "If coaches want to keep women out of the locker room, that's fine." This is not fine! Coaches aren't hired to tailor the law for the benefit of their players, as Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wyche learned.

The issue, as I see it, has to do with respecting the privacy of athletes and respecting the job of the journalist.

Referring to the sexual harassment charge brought by Lisa Olson of the Boston Herald against New England Patriot Zeke Mowat, Ms. Timmons offered this advice to Olson: "She should have just blown the verbal abuse off and stuck to the reason she entered the locker room — to gather information pertinent to her story, not create another." I find this remark by Ms. Timmons, who is a female sportswriter herself, to be disappointing at the least. The incident is under investigation and Zeke Mowat hasn't been found guilty of anything, but if what Ms. Olson says is true, I can at least respect her for not wanting to put up with the kind of disrespectful remarks that you can't even print in the newspaper. And if the alleged sexual harassment did occur, and Zeke Mowat is guilty, then Ms. Timmons is sadly condemning the victim here.

It's also worthy to note another interesting statement made by Ms. Timmons in her article. "I may be a woman, but I'm a journalist first." Ms. Olson, albeit, is a woman first, and a journalist second. Ms. Olson claims she was sexually harassed, and it appears to me that she had enough respect for herself to apply some of her moral and ethical values to the situation.

I must give credit where credit is due however. I agree with Ms. Timmons' remark that "locker rooms are where all of the athletes celebrate their victories and ponder their losses." Unfortunately a "media room" has the potential of taking these moments away from the audience.

The Lisa Olson/Zeke Mowatt incident was probably not the first to take place, nor will it be the last. The NFL is going to have to work out the logistics of the equal access law, so that athletes and journalists are happy.

In a 1979 New York Times article Melissa Ludtke Lincoln, the Sports Illustrated reporter who initiated the suit against baseball's ban of women reporters from locker rooms in 1977, had this to say: "When the time comes that we no longer read or hear about women in any locker room, and instead turn our attention to reading their stories and listening to their accounts of the game, then we will have reached the goal that I set out for in 1977."

'Family Fiesta' focused on future economics

By ANDREW FAUGHT
State Press

The next generation will face a world that is economically and culturally different from today, parents of ASU students learned Saturday.

The lecture titled, "When your student is your age," was one aspect of this year's "Family Fiesta," designed to acclimate parents with the campus and showcase the University's facilities.

ASU President Lattie Coor introduced the panel of four professors to about 150 parents and students and stressed the importance of families.

Stephen Happel, an associate professor of economics, had his own ideas of where the economics profession will be in 20 to 30 years.

"Microeconomic theory will move into areas of crime, education and areas that have typically been the problems of sociologists and educators," he said.

Happel, the director of the College of Business Honors Program, defended free market principles and said the next 10 years are vital to the economy.

"The next decade is going to be one of the great boon times in the U. S. because of demographics," he said. "If we butcher them, we'll hear that the government needs to play a larger role in the economy."

Happel said the disagreement at the macroeconomic level will revolve around how much government intervention and planning is necessary.

John Meunier, dean of ASU's College of Architecture and Environmental Design said the United States has the responsibility to promote cultural change.

"Cultural diversity is something we're learning to appreciate," he said.

Meunier projected that the Valley will have a population between four and five million people in 2025, adding there will be a "more finely-tuned environment."

"Maybe we'll be using mass transportation," said Happel, who is a member of the Royal Institute of British Architects.

"These are ideas that most Americans don't like."

He added that it's important to teach people to be resourceful human beings for the 21st century.

"We're going to be living in an incredibly rich society but hopefully investing in today's environment," Happel said. "The future is either half empty or half full."

Elsie Moore, an associate professor of education, said the future will be "very different when students who are now 18 are 40 plus."

"How do we educate American children?" Moore asked. "We must educate them for change."

She said people today need to be problem solvers and work effectively with others in complex situations.

"Today there is a world economy, and it will be important to be proficient in at least two languages," Moore said.

People will also be "re-careering," she said, because of personal ideas and changed goals.

"This seems to be the trend," she said. "Careers aren't just about money, but satisfaction."

Vernon Sater, a professor of chemical engineering, said educators should be teaching their students how to learn since technology is constantly advancing.

"We cannot teach technology today and expect it to stay," he said. "We can teach the fundamentals."

Sater added that computers have come from the days when they were simply "number crunchers" to today where they play an important role in the communication process.

"All of these topics require the ability to keep learning," Sater said.

New group for disabled seeks to minimize barriers

By DIANE SANTORICO
State Press

Members of the newly formed Disabled Students Organization held their first meeting Friday in an effort to tackle the obstacles blocking building access for many disabled students at ASU.

Jennus Burton, associate vice president for business affairs, told the group she has spent the last three weeks combing the campus looking at several barriers that have restricted sight impaired students and students in wheelchairs.

Burton expressed concern about access around Gammage Auditorium, particularly the Galvin Playhouse, adding that there are 23 areas for possible curb cuts around the building to increase accessibility.

"There are about 23 locations where you cannot physically, in a wheelchair, go from the sidewalk to the street without falling off," Burton said.

Burton said he will send a list of such problem areas to administrators at Disabled Student Resources to get recommendations on what areas are the most important before taking action to remove the barriers.

The organizers of Friday's meeting said they would like to see DSO become an official University group with funding from the Associated Students of ASU.

Jim Hemauer, a senior education major and program coordinator for DSO, said the organization's budget is only about $100 right now, with most of the money coming from fund raisers.

Janelle Bentz, the social and recreation director of the organization, said physical barriers on campus are only one limitation disabled students face.

The senior public programs major said she plans to involve disabled students in recreational and community activities.

"I want to bring the fun into it (the organization)," she said. "What I really want is for disabled students to be able to go into the community and to get involved."

Bentz said she has a few ideas in mind and is anticipating support when the organization gets under way.

Michelle Swartz, a senior recreation major, said she has initiated a peer support group she hopes will be a dependable service for all disabled students on campus.

"There are over 700 disabled students (on campus)," she said. "There are so many ways of making school so much easier by getting to know each other and helping each other out."

Swartz said she believes students who actively participate in the support group later will be the leaders of future groups.

DSO's next meeting will be held Friday Oct. 19 at 11:45 a.m. in the lobby of the Matthews Center.

State substance abuse programs implemented

By JENNIFER FRANKLIN
State Press

The ASU College of Extended Education and three state agencies have implemented a program that would curb drug and alcohol abuse in Arizona communities.

The new Arizona Prevention Resource Center is designed to help community leaders, teachers, law enforcement officials, volunteers and other members of the community wipe out the abuses in their hometowns.

The coordinated efforts of the Governor's Office on Drug Policy, the Arizona Department of Education, the Department of Health Services and ASU will help aid communities in their battle, said Gail Chadwick, the center's director, adding that a collaborated effort is vital.

"We know that the problem is not just a school problem or a community problem," she said. "People have to pull together and figure out how they can be more effective."

Chadwick

Chadwick said the main purpose of the center will be to act as a clearinghouse of information for the various prevention agencies in the state.

Jack Moortel, director of the Governor's Office of Drug Policy, said there has been a need for the center for a long time.

"In this office alone, we get hundreds of phone calls from people requesting information," he said, adding that his office does not have the capacity to serve all of the needs of the state.

Beginning Oct. 29, the center's staff and members of the state health and education departments will conduct seminars around Arizona to train the people spearheading efforts in their own communities.

In addition to providing training and information, the center will provide technical assistance to organizations to help them in the planning and implementation of substance abuse programs.

Once the center becomes established it will have an information data bank as well as an evaluation system, Chadwick said, adding that most of the services will be provided for free.

Alan Brown, director of planning and development for the ASU College of Extended Education, said the program will focus on numerous prevention aspects.

"I think there's a lot of emphasis on prevention devices like prenatal care," he said, adding that the most publicized efforts are those that would deter pregnant women from passing crack addictions on to their newborns.

In addition, Brown said there is a tremendous problem nationwide with elderly prescription drug abuse.

"Part of the problem is pharmacists and medical doctors over-prescribe the medication, and the other part of the problem is simply that the elderly abuse it on their own," he said.

Brown said the center will set up a database around the state to monitor substance abuse-related hospital admissions, domestic violence calls by police, and suicides.

He added that the success of the prevention center will be evident when communities statewide report fewer instances of substance abuse, fewer people starting to use drugs and less advancement of users to more serious drugs.

Trial touch-tone telephone registration to take off

By LAURALYN BEATTIE
State Press

Registration could be a phone call away for many students next semester if a new touch-tone telephone system's pilot program proves successful.

"This system should make registration much easier," said Jo Ann Hennington, associate dean of the College of Business and a member of the project's advisory committee. "We're hoping that this will help alleviate lines and make the process smoother for everyone."

The pilot program will be launched Nov. 26 for sophomores and juniors in the College of Business, and two more phases will follow into the 1991-92 school year, said Lou Ann Denny, ASU's associate registrar.

Denny said the pilot program was necessary to work out the system's bugs, adding that the project has been in the works since August 1989.

"I don't want students to become irritated because the program is only available to a small group," she said. "We just want to do this right. We're really anxious to have it work out well for all students."

The first phase, which will service about 1,000 to 2,000 business students, connects callers to regular registration, drop/add, enforcement of academic loads, procedures for billing and fee payments, touch-tone review of schedules and financial aid information.

In addition, students will be able to use the phone to buy yearbooks, purchase health insurance and audit grades through the project, which will continue through Dec. 13.

If the first phase goes as planned, phases two and three will incorporate expansions in the program, Denny said, adding that phase two will encompass a larger pilot group that has not been determined yet.

Denny said the second phase will include a mandatory advising system allowing students to speak with their adviser over the phone and receive approval by computer.

Students seem to be supportive of the new system.

"I really only see pros with the program," said David Laneback, a sophomore business major.

Angela Webel, who is also a business major, was pleased with the phone registration idea.

"It'll be a lot quicker," she said. "Students won't have to take time out of our schedule to go register."

Tuition

for the Resources Committee, he said.

At the COP meeting Friday morning in Flagstaff — attended by Broad, Arizona Students Association Executive Director Larry L'Heureux, the three student body presidents and the three university presidents — student leaders stated their case on tuition.

"I felt confident at today's meeting. I felt we communicated our views well," Ortega said. "It was good to get outside of the task force and to talk to the Council of Presidents directly."

A task force, comprised of student leaders, administrators and financial aid experts from the three state universities, disbanded Thursday still sharply divided on a cost of education formula and a financial aid plan.

The group was formed earlier this year by the COP to investigate tuition issues. The COP will now take issue with the items decided by the task force.

The cost of education formula is a device used by the regents to determine tuition. In this formula, budget information — including cost of instruction, student services and institutional support — is divided by the number of full-time students.

Ortega said he did not support any tuition hike. But he said any increase levied on students must be reasonable, adding that he considered a two-digit increase reasonable.

Ortega said it also was critical that any hike be matched dollar for dollar with financial aid.

The ASASU president said he was encouraged by the COP agreement that tuition should not be perceived by the Legislature as a revenue generator.

"Tuition should not be thought of as a revenue generating vehicle," he said. "It's just a method of offsetting the cost of education."

Student Regent Danny Siciliano said the dialogue between the students and the COP has been good so far.

"There can always be room for improvement," Siciliano said. "The students and the Council of Presidents have been making efforts."

Siciliano said the university presidents will be meeting with each student body president on an individual basis prior to tomorrow's COP meeting.

Clinic

arrange for the operation.

Thomas said the relationship between the clinic and the Mexican doctors is building.

"We don't want to step on anyone's toes," she said.

Thomas said the gratitude of the patients is overwhelming, adding that they come dressed in their best clothing, as if going to a wedding.

One woman, who had minor surgery, served homemade tortillas to the medical staff, she added.

The eyes of Ordonez Lopez, a 76-year-old man, were covered with thick white cataracts.

When asked to read an eye chart, Lopez told an interpreter that he did not know his letters. Melissa Pemberton, a medical assistant, raised her hand and told him to count.

Covering one of his eyes, she held up three fingers from five feet away and asked Lopez how many fingers he could see.

"Dos," he said, not able to clearly see her fingers.

Campion then examined Lopez, diagnosing him as permanently blind in one eye and nearly blind in the other as a result of untreated glaucoma.

After the examination, the frail, elderly man stood meekly against a wall, clutching a straw hat in his hands while he watched the medical team discuss his case.

Campion decided to operate on Lopez Saturday afternoon to salvage the remaining eye.

The interpreter explained this to Lopez, and as the man left, he stopped to thank every person in the busy examining room.

While the team treated only 19 patients Friday morning, word quickly spread around town, and the volunteers ended up examining 26 patients in the afternoon.

Some patients left the hospital dejected after being told their eye problems were inoperable.

A 23-year-old man hoped that a doctor could repair his eye, yellowed from a thick scar, after he pierced it with a fishhook 12 years earlier.

"A non-salvageable eye, unfortunately," Campion said. A 9-year-old girl sliced her cornea with a thorn when she was three years old.

Campion said there was no point in operating, because she had adjusted years ago to the decrease in eyesight. But if she ever damaged her other eye, Campion said, it would be worth the risk associated with surgery.

The operations began at 8 a.m. Saturday, and Ariane was the first in line.

The surgery appeared to go well, but everyone seemed tense until she came to from the anesthesia.

"It's like a baby being born when they take that first breath of air," a teary-eyed Thomas said as Ariane began to stir.

The little girl, who did not speak English, showed her appreciation with a smile.

Regents support King and Columbus holidays

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

FLAGSTAFF — The Arizona Board of Regents joined numerous state and university organizations Friday when they endorsed a ballot measure that would establish a paid Martin Luther King Jr. holiday while retaining Columbus Day.

"Dr. King's vision of a fair and just society includes a commitment to provide quality educational opportunities for all members of our community," said Molly Broad, regents executive director, reading from the resolution. "On Nov. 6, 1990, our community is presented with a singular opportunity to demonstrate its collective support and celebration of these ideals."

The announcement came at the regents' monthly meeting. The Arizona university system has observed a paid holiday honoring King since January 1988.

In September 1989, the Legislature voted to establish a paid King holiday in place of Columbus Day.

This spring, however, lawmakers repealed the law and voted to establish a King holiday in addition to Columbus Day.

But petitioners moved to let the people decide and placed the entire matter on the Nov. 6 ballot.

Should voters pass Proposition 302, a paid King holiday would be established on the third Monday in January and Columbus Day would be observed on the second Monday in October.

But if voters choose Proposition 301, a King paid holiday would be established instead of Columbus day.

Should a majority of citizens vote "no" on both propositions, there would be no paid King holiday.

The national government, 47 other states and 21 Arizona cities now observe a paid Martin Luther King Day holiday.

Regent Andy Hurwitz said it was important for Arizona to adopt the holiday as well.

"It is critical to education in this state," he said. "It is critical in achieving the (universities') goal for diversity."

"It's just the right thing to do."

Student regent Danny Siciliano agreed there is a tie between a King day and higher education, adding that he personally supported the motion.

"It's just the right thing to do."

— Andy Hurwitz

"King gave all groups of people opportunity," he said. "Higher education represents the offering of opportunity."

Campus provost search to resume this month

FLAGSTAFF — Student leaders said ASU President Lattie Coor's announcement Friday that a search for a campus provost will resume by the end of the month is critical.

Coor told the Arizona Board of Regents at their monthly meeting that he would generate a plan to redefine the role of the ASU administration by the end of the week.

He added that he then would resume the search for provost — a search Coor suspended in June in an effort to "redefine the organization of ASU for the next decade."

"That's good," Associated Students of ASU President Matt Ortega said. "But set it tomorrow — that would be better. A delay like (this) will affect the quality of the provost."

The provost is the chief academic officer at ASU and has an operating budget of $100 million. All deans and several offices, including the Budget Office and Institutional Analysis, report directly to the provost.

Last month, Coor invited to campus three major university presidents and one former president to provide insight on administrative reorganization.

"They rendered good advice as to the best way to organize the administration," he told the regents. "I will be drawing up recommendations and will open the provost search by the end of the month."

The provost post was vacated in February when Richard Peck left ASU to assume the presidency at the University of New Mexico.

Four deanships on campus also have been vacated. Permanent deans are needed in the education and business colleges, the School of Social Work and University Libraries.

Student leaders have maintained that Coor's failure to fill the provost position will affect the dean searches.

A national search to fill the provostship after Peck's departure identified four finalists.

The finalists were Thomas George, dean of the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics at the State University of New York at Buffalo; C. Roland Haden, current ASU dean of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences; Naomi Lynn, dean of the College of Public and Urban Affairs at Georgia State University; and Judith Stiehm, provost and vice president of academic affairs at Florida International University.

Coor has declined to solidify the status of the candidates, maintaining that the position had to be defined before it was possible to tell if a new search would be conducted.

In any case, Ortega said students need to have a say in the search.

"If they re-interview the three candidates, there should be student involvement," he said.

Coor agreed, saying there would be student involvement in any provost search.

— Kevin Sheh

Budget

state is experiencing, it was important not to underfund the university system.

Student Regent Danny Siciliano agreed, adding that even in lean times, the universities must be adequately provided for.

"It is responsible to include group three," he said. "We should (tell the Legislature) the place to invest funds — even in a tight year — is higher education."

UofA President Henry Koffler also agreed.

"It is essential we recognize that we are not likely to receive our goal," he said. "But we must convince the Legislature that the best investment the state can make is in our institutions."

Steve Jordan, financial analyst for the regents, said the existing formula is no longer able to sufficiently fund the university system.

"In the past, (regent) budgets have been driven by enrollment growth formulas," he said. "The enrollment growth formula is not able to adequately (fund universities)."

The enrollment growth formula — the device now used by officials to determine state university funding — utilizes enrollment figures to determine university funding.

Jordan said this year's budget was divided into four priority groupings.

"The first grouping consists of the programs (which are) unique to each particular university," Jordan told the regents, adding that cost study equity, enrollment growth and new facilities make up this group.

The second group, Jordan said, is comprised of the components necessary for the operation of the universities.

He added that salary market equity adjustments for faculty were included in this priority grouping.

"The three presidents expressed the importance of the ability to recruit and retain faculty," he said.

The third priority grouping included program changes for the three universities and support for ASU West, Jordan said.

The fourth group, officials said, consists of items important to the institutions that may not be realistic considering the state of Arizona's economy.

"It's not that they're not important," Jordan said, "But you've got to draw the line somewhere."

ASU Budget Director Alan Carroll said he was not surprised by the regents' decision to reduce the universities' budgets.

Carroll said he hopes the state offices, when reviewing the documents, look at the universities' role in research and economic development more than their slowing growth.

"I would hope they look at the universities' requests in terms of what the universities mean to the state more than (the universities') growth," Carroll said. "They need to keep that in mind when they review the (budgets)."

ASU's solar car emerges victorious in Japan

By KENNETH BROWN
State Press

At 35 mph, the cars circling the small testing track weren't exactly from Days of Thunder.

But to ASU engineering professor Byard Wood and his team of students, a victory at last week's solar-vehicle competition in Kobe, Japan, was enough to make even Tom Cruise envious.

The competition took place Oct. 10 in order to showcase recent solar technology and promote renewable energy. ASU's vehicle was one of 14 competing vehicles from around the world.

Wood and his team captured the first-place prize for University-made solar cars, a climax to more than a year of waiting, 13,000 hours of unpaid work, and $40,000 of research and materials.

"You can't really put words to it," said teammate Glenn Varty. "You just stand there, grin ear-to-ear, and enjoy it."

Asahi, a Japanese solar technology company, sponsored both ASU and Colorado State University in what made up the only American team at the competition.

Although the contest did not focus exclusively on speed, tense moments came as ASU's car was almost disqualified because of wheel trouble when it turned a corner.

According to Varty, driver Susan Myhajlenko's radio went out, just as she ominously said, "Something's wrong — its skidding."

"I hadn't really figured what had gone wrong until I looked at the tire," Myhajlenko said. "I was really concentrating heavily."

Thanks to fast action on the part of team members, the vehicle was able to get back into the race five minutes later.

"It was a roller coaster, emotionally," Varty said. "It was just up and down continuously."

Wood had previously raced the car over the summer, but it finished in a disappointing 30th place. He said the team has since made significant changes in the design, including a quick-release mechanism that allowed the crew to change the car's damaged wheel.

"You're keeping your fingers crossed through the whole thing," Wood said. "I'm very pleased that we did so well."

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents over the weekend:

- A man ejected from Sun Devil Stadium for alcohol possession during Saturday's football game was treated by paramedics for cuts to his buttocks after a liquor bottle broke in his shorts.
- Another fan was ejected from Sun Devil Stadium for disorderly conduct after he threw ice at an officer.
- In addition, a juvenile threw a football into the stands and struck a female patron in the head.
- Also during the game, an individual selling T-shirts was warned of trespassing and told to leave the stadium.
- Two students were arrested for theft in Lot 51 after removing five license plates worth $125. Police recovered the stolen property.

- An intoxicated man was found unconscious in Tempe Center. Police asked him to leave the premises.
- An ASU student and five people not affiliated with the University were warned of alcohol violations and trespassing in the rear parking lot of the Community Services Building.
- An intoxicated man not affiliated with ASU was found unconscious on the south side of the Classroom Office Building. He was told to leave campus.
- The fire alarm on the eighth floor of Cholla Apartments A-B Wing was activated after residents sprayed the chemical contents of a fire extinguisher. Officers and Tempe Fire Department responded but were unable to reset the alarm. Physical Plant officials were called to clean the detectors.

Someone entered a storage room at Packard Stadium and removed an antenna and cable belonging to Creative Communications, Inc.

Tempe police reported the following incident over the weekend:

- A man entered 7-11, 830 W. Broadway Road, and took a bottle of soda and some candy to the register. He drew a weapon and demanded money. The suspect pocketed the cash and fled the store on foot in an unknown direction. Police have no leads in the case.

Israel

Opposition politicians, meanwhile, questioned the Cabinet boycott of the United Nations.

Haim Ramon, head of the opposition Labor Party's parliament faction, said the U. N. mission could not be prevented from coming and should be allowed into Israel at a non-diplomatic level.

"I wouldn't play angry with the whole world. I would accept the delegation at a low level, to meet with police officers," Ramon told Israel television.

Levy said the U. N. investigation would violate Israel's sovereignty over Jerusalem and pave the way for stationing U. N. forces in the city.

The Temple Mount is in Arab east Jerusalem, which Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East War and later annexed.

Israel maintains its police were provoked by the barrage of stones onto Jews at the Western Wall, also known as the Wailing Wall.

An Israeli human rights group on Sunday accused police of indiscriminate shooting and "criminal negligence" in the bloodshed.

The group, Betselem, said the government has attempted to "hide the facts, mislead the public . . . and evade responsibility" in the shootings.

The Arab League has called a meeting in Tunis to discuss the killings, and Egypt announced Sunday it would attend, the Middle East News Agency said. That could be significant because the Arab League has been split between countries that support Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and those who oppose him.

Egypt has led Arab opposition to Iraq, while the PLO has supported Baghdad.

Arab diplomatic sources in Tunis said the other Arab League members who would attend the meeting included Iraq, Jordan, Sudan, Yemen, Algeria, Tunisia, Mauritania and Morocco.

Henry & June

An exploration of the life of author Henry Miller

By JON WALZ

State Press

"I'm here as a plenipotentiary from a realm of free spirits. I'm here to create a fever and a ferment." — Henry Miller, "Tropic of Cancer"

It is said that you can never know a person without knowing his work, and you can never know a man's work without knowing the man.

Novelist Henry Miller, the subject of Philip Kaufman's Henry and June, may be one of the world's most misunderstood and most controversial writers. His pallet of work has ranged from essays on art and culture to novels and books about travel and sexual intrigue.

Although praised by his peers, his raw and unrelenting style of writing has caused the general public to virtually ignore his work. In fact, until 1964 the sale of his work was illegal in the state of Illinois.

Henry Miller was born on Dec. 26, 1891 in New York City. He dropped out of college there and decided to write part-time while working in his father's tailoring shop. In 1923, Miller met June Edith Smith, a dancer in a dime-hall club in Manhattan. Miller paid his dime to dance with this woman. "She demands illusions as other women demand jewels," he wrote in "Tropic of Cancer". They were married soon thereafter.

In the early 1930's, Henry and June traveled to France together to find inspiration for his novels. Henry ended up staying in France for almost 10 years, and wrote some of his best works there including "Aller Retour to New York", "Black Spring" and "Tropic of Cancer" — a book T. S. Elliot called "very remarkable, with passages of writing in it as good as any I've seen for a long time."

Henry and June picks up in 1931, as the couple is taken in by Hugo and Anais Nin. Hugo and Anais are elated to have such a "great" American writer staying with them. Anais, a writer in her own right, has an almost unquenchable obsession for Henry because his work, like hers, concentrates heavily on the sexual aspects of life. To Henry, "Sex is natural, like birth and death," and is the purest expression of love and need. His marriage to June is based solely upon animal lust, not love, and drove him, through his work, to investigate and discover "love".

June does not stay in France for long, but she is there long enough to attract Anais to her own sexual prowess. June is a minor character in the film as far as screen time is concerned, but her presence her most prominent quality.

Anais has such great respect for Henry that she will do anything for him, and his loss of June to America forced Anais to take her place. Anais feels literally tied to him, and confesses in her diary that she feels unfaithful to Henry when she is making love with her husband.

Anyway, Anais and Henry have sex almost constantly, and engage in sexual mind-games in between. They both realize that June was the catalyst for their new-is always imminent. Anais' lustful desire for June grows very quickly, allowing June to realize that Anais is a mere sexual puppet for Henry and herself. June's own use of a puppet throughout the picture makes the connection very clear.

After June leaves France for NYC, Anais and Henry engage in a long menage a trois. Anais slowly evolves into the likeness of June. Her sexual drive is heightened and her amorousness becomes found sexual openness, and they both decide to write books about her. The film is based upon Anais' book "Henry and June", the uncut version that was released in 1986. Henry's book about June "Tropic of Cancer" has a large presence in the picture, mostly on a detail level.

Unfortunately, the film does not fully explain Miller's drive for sexual control of the women around him. We are led to believe that he, as well as his work, revolved around sex and sex revolved around his work, but it is presented in a way that is so matter-of-fact that the intrigue that was Henry Miller is lost in the sex.

The sex is not exploitative in the least, and some wonderfully creative editing by Vivien Hillgrove, William S. Scharf and Dede Allen makes most of the sex seem ancillary to other related happenings.

Henry and June comes off as 9 1/2 weeks as seen through the camera of Ingmar Bergman. The cinematography by the great Phillippe Rousselot is morbidly dark and grainy and is very similar in style to Sven Nykvist's stunning camerawork on Kaufman's last film The Unbearable Lightness of Being. The performance by Maria De Medeiros, as Anais, is the only performance worth nothing for its high quality. She is the only actor of the bunch who gave her character range and motion, and is the only character who really grew.

Henry, as played by Fred Ward, is hopelessly miscast as a DeNiro does Bogart does Henry Miller. Uma Thurman, who is now typecast into madam roles, is not on the screen long enough to do much with her June character.

Henry and June is America's first film to receive the "NC-17" rating, but it is quite tame. The sex sequences are shot with an incredible amount of care and restraint, and will probably only offend the religious fundamentalists who think that all sex is "bad". The sequences that depict lesbianism probably threw the film in the "NC-17" category, but think about this: last week, the Italian Film Commission approved Henry and June for 12-year olds.

The picture is worth checking out for its literary value alone. The picture carries on much too long in several places, and could have been cut by a few minutes here and there. But Philip Kaufman fought to have this film seen exactly like it is now, thus the rating. The picture will be most rewarding to those who experience it without any preconceived notions about Henry Miller, or for that matter "NC-17".

'Destiny's future looks grim

By JON WALZ
State Press

In the wonderful world of movies there are always three presumptions you can always make and always be correct about.

First, any film directed by Francis Ford Coppola will go over budget and over schedule; second, Jack Nicholson will walk off virtually every movie set he is working on because of salary problems; and third, any film featuring a cast member from Saturday Night Live will downright suck.

It's really been Hollywood's running joke, "If no one else wants the part, give it to someone from SNL..." OK, I'll admit that Ghostbusters was alright, but if you consider the hundreds of hours of other trash featuring SNL members, you'll begin to wonder who has been spraying the cuckoo dust around the producers and directors of those films.

Mr. Destiny is the latest foray in the doomed world of SNL personnel — but this time we get two, count 'em two, washed up, unfunny, I-deserve-to-be-slapped-around-a-lot SNL cast members: James "I'm leeching off my brother's name" Belushi and John "I'm an actor, yea... that's the ticket" Lovitz.

The film is directed by James Orr, the creator of such complete mega-bombs as Breaking All the Rules and They Still Call Me Bruce. It's hard to take a director seriously who obviously does not even take his own work seriously.

Belushi stars as Larry Burrows, a guy who realizes that his life stated going to hell when he struck out in a baseball game 20 years earlier. It's the standard story — bottom of the ninth, bases loaded, 3-2, and his team is down by three.

If he hits the ball he's a hero, if he misses he's an outcast. Since his life has gone to pot, he constantly wonders what his life would now be like if he hit that fastball 20 years ago.

He meets Mike (Michael Caine), a local bartender/magician. Mike uses his powers to send Belushi to a world created after he hit the homerun and sent his team to the winner's circle. Belushi is thrown into a new life with a new wife. He is now the president of a multi-national corporation and lives in a plush suburban mansion... just like in Belushi's film of two months ago, Taking Care of Business.

He lives, works and does the party scene, but realizes rather quickly that his new life stinks too. He locates Mike again and forces Mike to take him back to his real life. But not before the OMV (obligatory music video, the tell-tale sign of a director with no creativity) where Belushi and the rest of the cast dance around to a song that is blasted over the soundtrack. All of which leads to the most disappointing ending since Pretty Woman.

The first quarter or so of Mr. Destiny is really wonderful in its use of flashback and film noir narration, and appeared to be an exception to the SNL rule. The rest of the film dropped like a lead ball, which by the way, hit me right on the head. Ouch.

Mr. Destiny is trying desperately to cash in on the feel-good love story craze of the past year. It will probably be successful due to the proclivity of the American public for films that allow them to keep their brains in the deep-freeze at home. ★★

Williams' classic revived at MU Cinema for free

By JON WALZ
State Press

As part of its ongoing (for this semester, anyway) series "Monday Night At the Movies", the MU Cinema will be sponsoring an absolutely free showing of Marlon Brando's fantastic breakthrough film, A Streetcar Named Desire tonight at 7 p.m.

The film is based on Tennessee Williams' Pulitzer Prize winning stage play of the same name. Marlon Brando stars as Stanley Kowalski, a streetwise kid whose desirability makes him a lightning-rod for amorous women. Brando's performance in this role is legendary, and so incredible that actors of today still try to live up to the performance standards that Brando laid down in this film.

As the plot rolls on, Stanley's sexually disturbed sister-in-law, Blanche du Bois (Vivien Leigh), pays a visit to Stanley and his wife, and ends up becoming quite lustful for Stanley. His wife tries to ignore it, but eventually gets fed up and kicks him out, leading to the most classic one-word scream in movie history: Stanley's scream of "Stellaaaaaaa..."

This film ushered in the era of the "method actor" and the style of free-form "method acting". In fact, Brando literally invented this style of performance in his role of Stanley. Previous to 1951, acting essentially involved the simple following of the instructions given by the director. The director meticulously planned each shot, each movement of the actor and allowed little or no flexibility.

In Streetcar, director Elia Kazan gave Brando carte blanche as far as Brando's performance went. Kazan just turned the cameras on and let Brando do his thing. Much of what happened — within the context of the storyline — was improvised. Brando's acting is so natural and so fluid that it is easy to recognize the fact that Brando really was Stanley during filming. The picture won five Academy Awards in 1951, and remains one of America's most loved films.

The only problem we are faced with is not the fault of the film that is, well, perfect. The presentation of films at the MU Cinema in recent times has ranged from "bad" to "downright sucks". Caveat emptor must be expressed, because any one of the following has a good chance of happening during Streetcar: 1) little or no sound; 2) won't start on time; 3) projector will break down; or 4) projector will be thrown out of focus, and no one will notice for 5-10 minutes. I have been told that repairs are on the way. Let's wait and see. Hopefully the presentation will not completely destroy the sheer intensity and power of this film. Show up and see what happens, because it may make it through without a hitch. It's like playing cinematic roulette.

On a related note, the MU Cinema will be canceling its free Monday night screenings come this spring semester. Attendance has been relatively good throughout, but the scape-goat of "budget constraints" has been cited for the cancellation. Any program of this nature that is showing such wonderful films is, without a doubt, in the best interest of ASU as well as the community in general. It deserves to be expanded, not canceled.

Anyone interested in saving the program can call Daniel Miller, Chairman of the MUAB Film Committee (965-MUAB) and show support for the continued showings of great films like A Streetcar Named Desire (10/15), Psycho (10/29) and Casablanca (12/7) for next semester.

A Streetcar Named Desire will be showing for free tonight in the MU Cinema.

PIQUA, Ohio (AP) — Wearing underwear — and nothing else — in public is becoming a proud tradition in this western Ohio town's annual "Made in Piqua" parade.

This weekend's two-day Great Outdoor Underwear Festival was the community's third.

Patricia Cunningham Flesh, grand marshal of Sunday's festival parade, said underwear has been good to her family and the community. She is the widow of Alfred Flesh, whose father, Leo, founded the Atlas Underwear Co.

Flesh, 83, considers it a duty to her community and the family name to take part in the parade.

"Where else would you put underwear but on flesh?" she said.

The hour-long parade each year includes about 100 units — at least one of which touts the virtues of underwear.

Organizers cautioned that the parade is a family affair. Risque lingerie is not welcome.

"It gets bigger and better each year. And it's an idea crazy enough to work," said Doug Stilwell, a downtown merchant and president of the Piqua Downtown Association.

Items and antiques relating to Piqua's industrial past — which includes having been home to 14 underwear makers since 1886 — were on display at the Piqua Historical Museum.

Devils lose to Cal despite comeback

By PAUL CORO
State Press

The ASU football team has been slipping down a hole for the past two weeks that has swallowed players and kept them clinging to ground level.

On Saturday, the fading Sun Devils met California at Sun Devil Stadium and dug that hole to new depths as they allowed an average Golden Bear team apply the shovel with a 31-3 third-quarter advantage.

In its previous two losses to Missouri and Washington, ASU trailed by two touchdowns entering the fourth quarter and did not respond. But Saturday, the Sun Devils, led by tailback Leonard Russell and quarterback Bret Powers, made a stirring comeback that put them in a position to win.

After driving 63 yards, ASU, down 31-24, found itself at the Cal 17 with under two minutes remaining. Powers, a redshirt freshman who replaced Kurt Lasher in the game, dropped back to pass under heavy pressure and as he dodged one Bear defender, he fumbled the ball and Cal recovered.

Kerplunk! The Sun Devils (2-3 overall, 0-2 Pac-10) just found the bottom of the hole. They are under .500 for the first time in Coach Larry Marmie's three-year regime and in a last-place tie in the Pac-10.

However, with the way ASU responded Saturday, an upbeat attitude has grown out of the loss to Cal (4-2, 2-1).

"I have a positive outlook," senior strong tackle Mike Ritter said. "I think we're back on track. We're going to play some good football."

"I'm very, very proud of the way our players fought back from a big deficit late in the ball game," Marmie said. "It says a lot about their character and what they want to do. Certainly, it's not a football team that has given up, folded their tent or anything of that nature."

"But there's no substitute for winning." Those chances looked dismal in the first half as ASU punter Brad Williams, who had another great performance with a 46-yard average, had twice as many punts as the Sun Devils did points.

After a scoreless first quarter, Marmie flip-flopped Lasher and Powers while Bear quarterback Mike Pawlawski was backing up 112 second-quarter yards.

Cal's first score, a 10-yard Pawlawski pass to Sean Dawkins, was set up by tailback Anthony Wallace, who pummelled the middle of ASU's defense for 136 yards in the game.

Wallace's "W-W Attack" accomplice, Russell White, took a sweep in from 10 yards when Sun Devil cornerback Eric Crawford missed an open tackle and the Bear lead increased to 14-0.

On Powers' second replacement of Lasher, Russell had two sensational open-field runs for 30 and 23 yards that led to Mike Richey's 29-yard field goal, which cut Cal's lead to 14-3 with 1:19 left in the half.

ASU quarterback Bret Powers scrambles away from Cal nose guard John Belli in the third quarter of the Bears' 31-24 win Saturday.

In the middle of a 12-pass completion streak, Pawlawski drove his team for another touchdown. With 16 seconds remaining, he hit White on a quick slant for a 17-yard score that gave the Bears a 21-3

Russell 'resurges' offense with touchdown run

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

After most of the ASU faithful had abandoned Sun Devil Stadium during the second half of California's 31-24 victory Saturday, the home team staged a futile but furious rally sparked by tailback Leonard Russell.

A Leonard Russell who admitted he was quite bored.

"I got tired of just sitting around," Russell said. "Somebody had to step up and do something. I figured with the position I was in that it was a great position for me to come in and step up to do everything I can when I get the ball in my hands."

With original starter George Montgomery still on the sidelines with shin splints, Russell ceased his indifference and put together his best game this season, rushing 25 times for 186 yards and two touchdowns. The numbers were the most for a Sun Devil back since Darryl Harris compiled 190 yards on 36 carries against Oregon State in 1987.

When Russell was held to three yards on eight carries last week against Washington, the Huskies were able to penetrate the line of scrimmage and get to ASU's backs before they could get started.

The scenario was different on Saturday, as Russell said the play of the offensive line was one of the biggest reasons for the running success. Russell was able to find holes in Cal's front seven and enter the secondary, where he is almost unstoppable in one-on-one situations.

"I think some of the runs were just a matter of getting to the line of scrimmage faster and getting to the secondary, where I broke a lot of tackles," Russell said. "Last week, I really didn't see the secondary because I was stopped at the line."

With five minutes remaining in the third quarter, the Sun Devils were trailing Cal, 31-3, and appeared to be on their way to a loss. ASU changed quarterbacks three times and had converted only two of 10 third-down situations.

Finally in good scoring position following a 43-yard pass from Bret Powers to tight end Ryan McReynolds and a 13-yard run by Kelvin Fisher, the Sun Devils faced a second and 10 at the Cal 11.

After taking the handoff from Powers, Russell carried over right guard and was met by Bear linebacker Jerrott Willard. In a perfect illustration of the elusive power that ASU longs to see more of, Russell changed direction and spun away from Willard, then overpowered linebacker Castle Redmond and raced untouched to the end zone.

Russell's touchdown was the beginning of a resurgence in ASU's effort. From that point on, the Sun Devils were a totally different team.

"I think it was just a matter of establishing the offense," Russell said. "They started doing some things defensively that hindered us a little bit at the start. We had to come in the second half and look at some of the things they were doing and make the adjustments."

ASU cut the margin to 31-17 and took possession at the Cal 21 with 5:26 left in the game following an interception. On the next play, Russell sprinted over left tackle and into the clear for another score.

Just before crossing the goal line, Russell held the ball out in front of Bear defensive back Darryl Brown, which drew a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty for taunting.

"At that point, I think my emotions took over," Russell said. "I was excited and I wanted to do that little extra to get the team pumped up. Whatever it took, that's what I wanted to do. Now that I look back on it, it was a stupid thing to do, but it was just emotion."

Late in the fourth quarter, Russell helped put the Sun Devils in a position to possibly tie the score. From the ASU 27 with three minutes remaining, Russell brought the Sun Devils inside Cal territory with a 19-yard run to the right side and a 10-yard gain on a screen pass. But three plays later, Powers committed the fatal fumble to thwart the comeback.

Russell's two best efforts this season have come in ASU losses. In a 30-9 loss at Missouri on Sept. 29, he compiled 92 yards on 17 carries.

"It's really frustrating," Russell said. "If I could trade in all the things I did for a win, I would. Winning the game is what we go out there and practice for every day and when you perform like I did and still lose, it isn't as sweet as it would have been if we won."

Netters fall to UCLA, beat USC

By GREG ZELE
State Press

It was a rollercoaster weekend for the ASU volleyball team as it blew a monumental upset on the heels of a huge victory.

Saturday, UCLA (17-1 overall, 9-0 Pac-10) proved it deserves its No. 1 ranking as it staged an impressive come-from-behind victory over the Sun Devils (11-10, 3-6). On Friday, ASU topped USC (7-8, 4-5) in five games.

"I'm really happy with the split," Coach Patti Snyder said. "I'm proud of the kids' effort."

Saturday was nearly a rerun of the Sun Devils' loss to UCLA last year. ASU jumped out to a stunning two-game advantage before dropping the next three in front of a season-high crowd of 2,713 fans.

The first game found ASU and UCLA locked in a 6-6 tie before junior outside hitter Debbie Penney recorded an impressive kill to give the Sun Devils a side out. Penney then scored a service ace to make the score 7-6.

Instead of capitalizing on the momentum Penney created, parity returned and ASU soon found itself on the verge of defeat at 13-14. The Sun Devils rallied to win the game, 16-14, by holding the Bruins to only 10 kills on 48 attempts.

The second game saw the Sun Devils explode to an early 6-1 lead. After a time out, UCLA cut the lead to 6-3 before ASU gained a side out.

The Sun Devils scored four straight behind Gowell's brilliant serving. UCLA cut the lead to 14-13, but ASU won in the end, 15-13, as a huge upset loomed on the horizon.

Game three began with a stunned Bruin team desperately in need of a win. The Sun Devils saw an early two-point lead evaporate and found themselves mired in a point-trading contest with UCLA, who captured the lead for good at 7-6 and won, 15-10.

In the fourth game, ASU and UCLA traded seven side outs before the Bruins finally scored. The game then became a one-sided debacle as UCLA coasted to an easy 15-2 victory.

With the match tied at 2-2, the Sun Devils got off to a running start in game five with a 4-0 lead. After a time out, UCLA scored three unanswered points to cut the margin to one.

The game got away from ASU when the Bruins put together an eight-point run, giving them an 11-6 edge.

Cross country teams place 4th, 3rd in meet

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

Although neither of the ASU cross country teams finished first in their Invitational at Karsten Golf Course Friday, the Sun Devils' outlook still looks as promising as before the race.

The ASU women's team failed to claim a title for the first time this season, but placed fourth with 89 points. No. 18 Baylor finished first with 47, No. 12 Kansas State was second with 51 and NAIA champion Adams State was third with 80.

The Sun Devil men finished third in a competitive field with 90 points. NAIA champion Adams State was first with 36 points and Houston finished second with 39. The women's team boasted another solid performance by sophomore Trish Huffmaster, who finished third in the 5,000-meter race with a career-best time of 17 minutes, 48.89 seconds.

Huffmaster's effort is even more impressive, considering who finished ahead of her. KSU's Janet Haskins and Baylor's Lisa Stone are the nation's two best collegiate 10,000-meter runners.

"I really had no idea who I was running against," Huffmaster said. "This is the first year I've run cross country seriously. In the past, I've used it to prepare for track. But we have a tight group and we try to run as well as we can."

In the Sun Devils' three meets this season, Huffmaster has been the team's most consistent performer. She has improved her times at each race, placing fourth at the UTEP Invitational with a time of 19:33 and 10th at the UC-Riverside Invitational with an effort of 18:24.

"I don't think I'd say that I'm surprised with this season," Huffmaster said. "I always know that if I wanted to try cross country that I would have potential, but there's a lot of good runners out there."

The ASU women turned in another balanced attack as all six Sun Devil runners placed in the top 40.

Kelly Cordell was consistent again, placing 13th with a time of 18:16.28. Freshman Kristen Wellman continued to impress by finishing 20th at 18:27.29. Michele Sosnowski, who placed 23rd at 18:36.74, and Shannon McKay, who finished 30th at 18:44.2, were ASU's other scorers.

"In workouts, we're all in a group and we keep each other going," Huffmaster said. "We're all friends who help each other out, pick each other up when we slow down. They ream me and I ream them and I guess that's how we get better."

Considering the circumstances, the Sun Devil men may have turned in their best performance of the season Friday. While ASU could count on strong efforts from Kendall Fink, Tony Hernandez and Mike Frick, the fourth and fifth spots were team concerns prior to the meet.

But David Harkin, fourth at 25:49.95, and Troy McKay, fifth at 25:51.96, complemented the performance of the top three and gave the Sun Devils an added cushion over fourth-place New Mexico.

Fink turned in the team's best effort, finishing fifth in the 8,000-meter race with a time of 24:41.77. The senior controlled his pace at the start and came on strong at the end, edging NMU's Mike Williamson by two seconds.

"I didn't have the greatest strategy the last couple of races," Fink said. "I'd start out with the leaders and end up getting reeled in. I was going to go my own pace this time, not too hard, and gradually move up in the pack. It worked well."

ASU-Cal

halftime advantage.

On the fourth play of the second half, ASU was saved when it was ruled that Wallace fumbled into the end zone on a 35-yard carry. The Sun Devils took over at the 1, but could not drive and Cal capitalized on good field position with Robbie Keen's 43-yard field goal to take a 24-3 lead.

Four players later, Joel Dickson picked off Powers at the line, which gave the Bears the ball at the ASU 38 and led to White's 4-yard touchdown run that pumped the margin to 31-3.

"There was a sense of urgency to score some points, not that we were going to lose," Powers said.

On the next possession, Powers hit tight end Ryan McReynolds on a broken play that went for 43 yards to the Cal 24. After fullback Kelvin Fisher's 13-yard draw, Russell spun off a Bear defender for an 11-yard touchdown to trim the lead to 31-10.

After free safety Nathan LaDuke's interception, the Sun Devils nearly hit it big on the next play when split end Derrick Hart, a high school quarterback, took a reverse and threw a strike to flanker Kevin Snyder, who dropped the ball at the 2.

ASU regained possession later when cornerback Kevin Preston-Curvey picked off Pawlawski to the Cal 32.

"We started mixing up our defenses and putting more pressure on (Pawlawski)," Preston-Curvey said. "We saw he wasn't that good at looking off receivers."

Fisher's 4-yard delay run made the score 31-17, two minutes into the fourth quarter.

With 5:26 remaining in the game, Pawlawski's third straight attempt went for an interception. This one was stolen by strong safety Michael Williams, who made an 18-yard return to the Bear 21.

Five seconds and 21 yards later, Russell took a great block from McReynolds and scampered into the end zone to put ASU within a touchdown.

Despite receiving a 15-yard boost because of Russell's touchdown taunting, Cal went out on downs and the Sun Devils took over at their own 20.

The drive began with a Fisher 7-yard run and Russell's 19-yard sweep off flanker Vic Cahoon's block. Russell side-stepped two Bears for a 10-yard reception to the Cal 44. On a fly, Powers' aerial to Hart at the 5 was barely broken up, but a holding penalty moved ASU to the 34. On the money, Powers connected with Snyder on the sideline for a 17-yard play before he committed the momentum-ending fumble, the Sun Devils' first turnover of the game, on the next play.

"That drive is what you practice and you put yourself in that situation over and over," said Powers, who was seven of 18 for 99 yards. "It just ended on a bad note. I don't even know what happened. I just felt the pressure and tried to get out."

Powers' performance could have been sufficient enough to merit his first collegiate start next week at Oregon. However, Marmie has not committed.

"I can't say I made the most of it," Powers said. "I would have like to come out a winner."

The Sun Devils managed only two more points in the contest as the Bruins turned on their defense and stole the game, 15-9.

"I'm pissed that we didn't win in three," Snyder said. "I think (ASU) relaxed a little bit more after winning the first two."

Senior middle blocker Tina Berg shouldered much of the weight on defense with one solo block and seven assists.

"I think there was a breakdown in communication," Berg said. "We really wanted it bad, but I felt personally like I ran out of steam."

The USC match began with the fired up Sun Devils capitalizing on sloppy Trojan play to build a 7-0 lead.

ASU rolled on to a 14-1 advantage and finally converted on its fifth try at game point to win, 15-3.

USC turned the table on the Sun Devils in game two as it jumped ahead, 6-2. ASU then mounted a comeback, falling short at 4-7.

USC scored four straight and went on to take the game, 15-6.

Going into game three with the match tied, the Trojans jumped out to a two-point lead before the Sun Devils made a five-point run.

USC cut the lead to one, but ASU gained a side out on a freshman outside hitter Nancy Christian's driving kill.

The Sun Devils took advantage of the opportunity to score six straight behind the serving of junior defensive specialist Tricia Jolliff and went on to win, 15-7.

The Trojans cruised to an easy 15-4 victory in game four despite Snyder's time out with USC leading, 11-4.

Neither team gained a decisive advantage in game five until, with USC up 8-7, Jolliff turned on her serving to engineer a five-point ASU run. At 11-8, Jolliff gave the Sun Devils a spark with a big service ace that led to their 15-11 win.

"We just needed something to get the momentum going," Jolliff said.

PERSONALS

ARE YOU a student? Is it your birthday? Bring your valid college ID to the State Press classified department in the south basement of Matthews Center and you can wish yourself or someone else a happy day with a free 15-word personal ad! Happy Birthday!!!

ASASU CONCERTS thanks Sigma Kappa, Tri Sig, Sigma Nu Pledges, Chi Omega, and the TKE's for their help with the Modern English Product Showcase!

AWESOME AIESECER, I looked at the moon and the stars and knew it was your day. Wishing you the loveliest birthday from the bottom of my heart. With love caring and affection. Black and Decker.

AXO HAPPY Founders Day! Love, the Alpha Phis.

CHRIS: YOU Like '50's music, right? Well meet me in the new MU programming lounge at 11:40-1:30. It's a free event as part of MUAB Special Events committee's '50's day. We can call 965-MUAB to find out more. -Leslie

GET PERSONAL

DELTA RILEY, (aka Blondie, Moolie and Honey): Ella wants to wish us a happy one plus six. Beware! Monkeys hate BooBoo and Yogi! Love, Bean.

DG PLEDGE Presents!!! If you don't go you won't know!

GAMMA PHI Amy: only one more day.

GDI HOLLY, thanks for helping me out. It was better than perfect. Love ya, Greg.

HEY COLLEGE students! Did you know that personal ads are only $1.40 per day for 15 words? What a great (and cheap) way to let that special someone know just how special they really are!

JULIET— I'D pay a kings ransom, to undue to words. Not the ones I've spoken, just the ones you've heard.— I was trying to clear the arena, of everyone but you. Because you were the first to write me, and from that second I knew— that some how, some way, our romance should live. That was the meaning of my poem, and the rose I promised to give.—Please come back, revive our romance, with moonlit champagne and a toast. "To our never ending fairy tale!" I miss you daily, my Juliet ghost.—Romeo.

JUSTIN—NIGHT SWIMS, USC shirts, and band-aids. Leave 25 cents by the toilet, I'm gonna miss you. Love, the girl from LaVerne, Carrie!

KA'S STEVE and Dave: thanks for the scavenger hunt! You guys are awesome! And where was that shooting star! Jenny and Bronwyn.

KERITH, WELCOME. Not only in thought but body too... About time! I love you.—Spanky

LARA/MICHELE— FOOTLOOSE dancing, burping contests, guys, my music, and U-haul services. I'll miss you guys, Carrie.

MS L Casey: One more day to enjoy your teen years, so enjoy! Love Ya! Me.

PAT: MUAB Special Events committee is showing that great movie about the '50's Grease in the MU Cinema for free! Let's go together- Kelly.

PSE PM Gerard, good luck on big test, I'm rooting for you! Your big sib.

SIGMA NU: It needs to be said that the views expressed by our President do not represent the feelings of the majority of the house. Alpha Phi.

SIGMA PI Bryan, hope your 24th B-day was great! You're a real stud. Love, Party-pup.

SIGMA PI: re-directed growth may be accurate, but a better brotherhood is being lived. Good things come to those who work at getting better.

STUCE, I love you more than anything, happy 21st and take care. Thinking of you always. Love forever, Beetle.

STUDENTS- Do you want to know how to spot Elvis? Call 965-6822.

THANK YOU to Sigma Kappa, Tri Sig, Sigma Nu Pledges, Chi Omega, and the TKE's for your help with the Modern English Product Showcase!

THE STATE Press wishes Sigma Pi Bryan a Happy 24th Birthday!!

PERSONALS

TO ARBUCKLE: I will use small words so you'll understand. Your attempt at sarcasm turned out to be bland. Your humor's like bile (oh I'm sorry, Bile's like urine) and it seems you spend your time on Van Buren, Romeo, Juliet to be romantic they try. Captain Arbuckle seems insecure. Why? —Trig.

TO ROB D! It takes only a moment to fall for someone, but often an entire lifetime is not long enough to forget! Miss ya! Susan.

TRI-SIGMA NIECE Holly Sunshine- thanks for brightening up my day! You are an awesome sister.

TRI SIG- thanks for your encouragement! Looking forward to an awesome semester! The men of ZBT.

FOR TUESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1990

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
A setback or delay in business could dampen your spirits somewhat now. However, you'll find partners very supportive today. The accent is on cooperative efforts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
Artistic interests may bring you more satisfaction than business at present. An adviser's lack of support disheartens you, but rise above limiting thoughts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
You may be concerned about an intimate matter and may not yet be ready to talk about it. Extra expenses may come through dependents. Tonight, you may be restless.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
You have good ideas today, especially about domestic interests. However, a close tie may be self-preoccupied and too busy to give you much in the way of feedback.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
Problems related to work could get you discouraged today. You have a green light, though, where creative interests are concerned. Plans may be changed tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Though judgment is good today about financial interests, you may be faced with extra expenditures. Someone's request for help comes at an inconvenient time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Though you're excited about your ideas, you don't have the best day for getting them across to others. A family member especially is preoccupied with his or her problems.

TYPING/WORD PROCESSING

TYPING/WORD PROCESSING. $1/page. Laser printing included. You deliver and pick up. Alma School Road/Baseline. Jan, 897-1744.

WORD PROCESSING, secretarial services. 23 years experience. Student discounts. Southwest corner, Miller and Chaparral. 994-8145.

WORD PROCESSING, reasonable rates. Fast, dependable, accurate. Term papers, business letters, mail outs, etc. 839-7527.

INSTRUCTION

IMPROVE GRADES. High-speed reading, 3-20 times faster. Learn more. Better comprehension/recall. Message, 420-1202.

TUTORS

DISSERTATIONS/THESES. Ex-college English professor with doctorate in education, statistical software, laser printer. Will provide support services you need from start to finish. Not cheap, but good. 483-8722.

PRIVATE TUTOR needed to help with ENG102 and MAT119. Rate negotiable. Evenings/weekends. Please call Dina, 350-0427, leave message.

MISCELLANEOUS

SELF HYPNOSIS for learning. Learn faster, retain longer. Release stress of study/exams. EGS, 497-0333.

WASHER/DRYER RENTALS. $40 month for students. Guaranteed. Chaudoin's, 969-3204.

IF YOUR BUSINESS WOULD LIKE TO SPONSOR THE HOROSCOPES, PLEASE CALL 965-6555.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
Use leisure time constructively. You may have an inclination to dwell on problems now. Opt for creative interests and hobbies rather than too much worrying.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
You'll receive a lovely invitation, but concern about a financial matter may dampen your interest in social life at present. Feelings of inhibition are possible now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
Try to keep ego out of business dealings. Right now you're inclined not to give too much weight to the opinions of others. Self-concern impedes progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
This is not the day to keep things to yourself. Rather than bear the problems of the world on your own shoulders, open up and solicit the support of others.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
It's not a good time either to lend or borrow money. The problems of others may cut into the time you need to accomplish your own objectives in life.

YOU BORN TODAY have good insights into society and its problems. Law, writing, and humanitarian interests may appeal to you. You often serve the group in some advisory capacity and would make a fine counselor. You have artistic and literary talents and should be able to successfully commercialize these abilities. You're both intellectual and practical, but are also inclined to reminiscence. Birthdate of: Angela Lansbury, actress; William O. Douglas, jurist; and Eugene O'Neill, playwright.

Cardinals post victory at home over Dallas

By GREG ZELE
State Press

The Phoenix Cardinals could have easily crushed the Dallas Cowboys Sunday, but they apparently wanted to make the game interesting before they won, 20-3.

Phoenix could have been up 21-0 at halftime but it blew several big opportunities to put the ball in the paint and instead had to settle for a 10-0 advantage at the half.

"We truly needed this win," Coach Joe Bugel said. "It's the start of a whole new season for us now."

The Cardinals (2-3) got off to a flying start when free safety Lonnie Young recovered an Emmitt Smith fumble on the Cowboys' opening drive. The Dallas (2-4) turnover gave Phoenix the ball at its own 47.

Nine plays later, rookie running back Anthony Thompson scored on a 1-yard run to give Phoenix a 7-0 lead 5:26 into the game.

On the Cardinals' next possession, rookie running back Johnny Johnson, who rushed for 120 yards in the game, failed to get into the end zone on three tries from the 1. Phoenix came away empty-handed.

Johnson's performance marks the first time a Cardinal has rushed for a 100 yards in a game since Earl Ferrell got 110 on Oct. 30, 1988, at Dallas.

The Cardinals blew two more touchdown opportunities in the half. The first came when Johnson lost a fumble on the Dallas 2. The second missed opportunity occurred when Phoenix had a first down on the Dallas 14.

Quarterback Timm Rosenbach overthrew a wide-open Ernie Jones in the end zone and the Cardinals had to settle for a field goal.

The 28-yard Al Del Greco boot gave Phoenix a 10-0 edge at 6:21 in the second quarter.

The Cowboys' lone score came at 1:53 into the second half after they recovered a second Johnson fumble on the Phoenix 26. Dallas managed only seven yards on three plays and had to settle for a 37-yard field goal from Ken Willis.

Del Greco hit a 28-yard field goal on the first play of the fourth quarter to give the Cardinals a 13-3 lead.

Johnson sealed the victory for Phoenix with an 8-yard touchdown run with 6:11 left in the game.

Defensively, the Cardinals shut down Dallas in every facet of the game.

Bugel unveiled his new "backer" defense that held the Cowboys to just 85 yards of offense in the entire game. The defense, a variation of a 3-4, sacked Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman four times for 27 yards and hurried his throws innumerable times.

Aikman was nine for 25 for only 61 yards and had two passes picked off.

"This was our finest game on defense," Bugel said.
