Bed Rush

Design office under attack by senators

By KENNETH BROWN
State Press

Two Associated Students of ASU senators are calling for the elimination of the organization's graphic design department, claiming its employees last year overstated their productivity and wasted 87 percent of on-the-clock time.

College of Law Sen. David Jordan and College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Sen. Gary Starikoff urged fellow senators to phase out the Association Graphics and Advertising department in a report slated to be discussed at an ASASU finance committee meeting Sunday.

The AGA, a program of ASASU's Campus Affairs branch, was created to design artwork for campus groups.

"AGA for years has been a poor way of spending money," said Jordan. "(Elimination) seems to many people as being sudden, but I've watched AGA now for seven years. AGA has never served the function it's supposed to."

ASASU Vice President of Campus Affairs Cherie Verhines has voiced support for the AGA, but was unavailable for comment.

Jordan said nearly a month of research led him to believe the graphics department is out-dated, inefficient and dishonest, and that ASASU should not spend the estimated $18,000 needed to fund the department.

"We're proposing this because it's an inefficient use of ASASU funds," Starikoff said. "If anything, this proposal will cause the Senate to take a good, hard look at AGA."

According to a report distributed to all ASASU senators

Re-entry students seek return on tuition hike

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

For one ASU student, the impending Arizona Board of Regents' meeting means more than another round of tuition talks and number crunching.

The main focus of the Nov. 9 meeting — financial aid — is important to ASU management major Nina Bone for two reasons.

Their names are Stephanie and Kenny.

Bone, a single mother, was one of 36 students who spoke up for higher financial aid and lower tuition at the regents' Oct. 29 tuition hearings.

Bone, 32, is president of the Re-entry Connection — an ASU organization comprised of older adult students, most who enter the University in their junior or senior year after at least a 10-year break from the books.

Bone said she returned to school three years ago in an effort to give her children, now 3 and 11 years old, a better life.

"I didn't want to be on government assistance for the rest of my life," she said.

When Kenny turned 3 years old, Bone said she no longer qualified for state aid for her education because of an Arizona law.

But Bone said she opted to stay in school and fight a system she claimed penalizes older students who choose to return to college.

And the financial aid available to her is not adequate, she claimed.

"I pretty much know that I will be living in poverty as long as I am a student," Bone said.

Meanwhile, the regents are expected to approve the Council of Presidents' recommended $50 tuition hike for resident students and $450 for non-residents.

However, officials said financial aid still is up in the air.

The COP recommended a 4.8 percent increase — $1.2 million — in the need-based financial aid pool.

But student leaders claimed that $1.6 million is still needed to meet "remaining need" — how much students must pay for the total cost of instruction after family

Lawyers debate Phoenix's future

By ANDREW FAUGHT
State Press

The future of Phoenix was the topic of controversy and hilarity Wednesday night as two outspoken critics swapped barbs in a debate to determine the city's potential for "greatness".

More than 100 people turned out for the debate between Grady Gammage Jr., a local zoning attorney, and David Bodney, attorney for New Times Executive Editor Michael Lacey.

Lacey, who was present at the event, decided to let his attorney do the talking at the second annual Dickie Penguin Memorial Debate.

The event was characterized by outbursts of raucous laughter from the audience and the hurling of light-hearted invectives between the debaters.

Bodney, in his opening address, said people migrate to Phoenix to escape past lives and to leave civic responsibility behind. Bodney, who recently took over as New Times editor, said the masses that call Phoenix home are greed-driven and have no connection to the land.

"I call this the escape from Chicago syndrome or the last run of the old Winnebago," Bodney said. "(Phoenix residents) want golf, Bermuda grass and to be left alone."

Gammage, in his opening address, said Phoenix is in its adolescent stage, with its potential not yet realized. While admitting the city is a "wildly improbable place to live," he said it is a land of great potential.

"Our size, heritage, and climate are great opportunities," Gammage said. "We must seize this opportunity to become a great city."

Gammage cited Phoenix's low population density as another asset to the city.

"We made it affordable for the middle class to live here," he said.

Aid

contributions and financial aid.

Bone, who said financial aid fails to cover her unmet need, is not alone among adults returning to school.

According to Re-entry Connection statistics, 25 percent of ASU's population is over the age of 27 years.

She said the issue is especially pressing because many students planning to re-enter ASU are in dire financial straits before they even return to college.

Many of the women who return must sacrifice a second income, she said, and many others lose their only income when they go back to school.

"Our parents aren't paying for our education," Bone quipped. "So many of us live on budgets. When they hit us with tuition hikes year after year, we can't plan for the future."

"We would just like for them to set a five-year plan. Just let us know in advance so we could plan."

Regent Andy Hurwitz said such a plan was in place three years ago but did not work.

"When we attempted to do that, the numbers came out too high," he said, adding that the regents enacted a policy that increased the percentage of the cost of education residents paid by .5 percent each year.

"That would have produced predictable numbers," Hurwitz said, adding that students rightfully called for the abandonment of the policy.

The regents are expected to officially strike the policy before the end of the year.

Hurwitz said another option would be to increase tuition by a fixed dollar figure each year. But he said the option would be difficult, because it is impossible for regents to know what the annual growth will be for the three state universities.

Roland Bittle, vice president of the Re-entry Connection, said one of the main concerns voiced by re-entry students is the apparent disparity between the tuition hikes and the improvements in University services.

"If I had a chance to talk to the regents, I'd want the regents to tell me whether or not the services that we offer our students are up to par with the tuition hikes that we keep asking for," he said. "I mean, if we raise tuition, what increase have we had in services?"

Bittle said the fact that ASU is within the lower third nationwide in resident tuition is little consolation to older students struggling to meet ever-increasing tuition.

"We hear the dialogue that ASU is up to the national levels in tuition," he said. "But is Arizona State up to the national levels in resources?"

But financial aid is also a major concern, Bittle said.

"Financial aid, financial aid," he said. "(They need to) make some allowances."

"If they increase tuition, part of that pie needs to come to financial aid. That's probably the biggest issue. Even though they raise tuition, they don't raise financial aid enough. We'd appreciate it."

Regent Edith Auslander said she would "love" to match tuition with financial aid but did not think it was feasible.

"I just think that dollar for dollar it is not realistic," she said.

"It's very frustrating not knowing how to do it," Auslander said, "and knowing there are so many students living meagerly and sacrificing so much for the future of the state of Arizona."

Angry Moslems attacked and vandalized a Hindu temple in Dhaka, India on Wednesday, protesting against Hindu fundamentalists who are attempting to take over a mosque and replace it with a temple in Ayodhya.

Clash over shrine kills 24 Moslems

AYODHYA, India (AP) — Thousands of Hindu fundamentalists failed in a new attempt Wednesday to storm an ancient shrine claimed by Moslems, and at least 24 more people died in violence sparked by the dispute.

A government minister resigned to protest Prime Minister V. P. Singh's attempts to block construction of a Hindu temple on the disputed site, deepening the crisis in his beleaguered coalition.

Armed paramilitary troops blocked about 5,000 Hindus from attempting to re-enter the mosque in Ayodhya, which has been the center of a decades-old dispute between India's Hindu majority and Moslem minority.

Hindu fundamentalists broke through police cordons on Tuesday and chipped away bricks and bits of plaster from the one-story mosque, which they want to replace with a temple.

At least five Hindus were killed and 20 injured when police opened fire to throw back the rioters. At least two of the injured died Wednesday, doctors said.

Press Trust of India said at least 22 other people were killed in street battles between Hindus and Moslems in four widely separated cities.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the administration is "very distressed by the violence and loss of life and we hope that this crisis can be averted without further bloodshed."

The dispute has killed at least 170 people in the past eight days and pushed Singh's 11-month-old government to the verge of collapse. The Hindu fundamentalist Bharatiya Janata Party withdrew support from the governing coalition last month to protest government policy on the temple project.

The desertion left Singh without a majority in Parliament, but he has said he will win a vote of confidence scheduled for Nov. 7.

Singh's attempts to ride the religious and political crisis received another setback Wednesday, when the deputy minister for sports, Bhakta Charan Das, resigned to protest the police action at Ayodhya.

Das, a Hindu, accused Singh in his resignation letter of "lack of foresightedness" in tackling the crisis.

The dispute also triggered violence in neighboring Bangladesh, an Islamic nation, where Moslem mobs attacked temples and Hindu shops and homes after hearing of the situation in Ayodhya. Authorities clamped curfews in the capital Dhaka and the port city of Chittagong to curb rioting.

In Ayodhya, volunteers of the fundamentalist World Hindu Council said they would make another attempt to storm the mosque on Thursday. Officials said they had information that hundreds of Hindus would try to enter the town at night.

Bush fed up with Crisis, says U.S. not close to war

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush declared Wednesday "I have had it" with Iraq's mistreatment of American hostages but said the United States has not moved closer to war.

He also said he was willing to wait longer for economic sanctions to hurt Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Bush expressed disappointment that the sanctions have not had more impact on Saddam. "I know some of our partners thought that the economic pressure by now would have come close to compelling him to withdraw," he said. "I've not had a view on that."

The president also voiced unhappiness that representatives of other countries are traveling to Baghdad to deal with Saddam on hostages and the gulf crisis.

"Every time somebody sends an emissary, that gives Saddam Hussein a little bit of hope that there might be some way that he can stop short of doing what he must do — get out of Kuwait unconditionally, free these people that are being held against their will and have the legitimate government restored," Bush said.

The president did not single out any country, but officials from the Soviet Union, France and Britain have visited Iraq recently.

The president used two news conferences and a political speech to turn up the verbal heat on Iraq. It was the third consecutive day of blistering attack by Bush against Saddam.

Bush heatedly rejected suggestions that he was trying to divert attention from the budget debacle that sent his poll ratings into a nose dive just before important congressional elections.

"I don't think any decent, honorable person would ever suggest anything of that nature," Bush said, adding that he was offended by the suggestion.

With 250,000 American troops poised for conflict in the gulf, Congress is pressing Bush to allow more time for sanctions to work.

Administration officials said Bush's saber-rattling was intended to signal Saddam that the United States is not bluffing and to call attention to the plight of American hostages.

In particular, Bush deplored the conditions endured by American diplomats in Kuwait, where Iraqi forces have cut off water, power and food to the U. S. Embassy.

"Our people inside are being starved by a brutal dictator," Bush said. "And do you think I'm concerned about it? You're darn right I am."

"And what am I going to do about it? Let's just wait and see. Because I have had it with that kind of treatment of Americans."

Bush said he did not know how long the diplomats could hold out before they might be forced to withdraw. He said that if Iraq blocked a resupply effort, "it would be directly contravening a mandate from the United Nations and we would view that very seriously."

Speaking about the U. N. sanctions, Bush said they had not been "totally effective."

He said, "I am prepared at this juncture to wait to see if economic sanctions will work at this juncture."

SAT to undergo revisions, reduce test coach reliance

BOSTON (AP) — College Board trustees announced Wednesday the most sweeping changes ever in the Scholastic Aptitude Test, adding some math questions that aren't multiple choice and introducing optional essay questions.

Board officials rejected suggestions that charges of cultural bias prompted the revisions in the test used heavily in deciding who gets into what college.

The new Scholastic Aptitude Test, called SAT-I, will be introduced in the spring 1994, said College Board President Donald M. Stewart.

In the language section, emphasis on reading comprehension will be increased. Students will be allowed to use calculators in the math section.

The revisions are aimed in part at reducing students' reliance on test coaches, Stewart said at the board's annual meeting.

Critics have long charged that the SAT — the most widely used college entrance exam — was biased, particularly against women and minorities.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," Stewart said. "The SAT has been in almost continual evolution. It has never been set in concrete . . .

"The new SAT will combine the high, academically demanding standards of the current tests with revisions that increase their educational relevance and quality for all college-bound students."

The old SAT had 85 verbal and 60 math questions. The SAT-I will have 75-85 verbal and 55-60 math questions.

The new math questions requiring students to produce an answer rather than choose one from a list will make up about 20 percent of the math section.

The changes also include the introduction of the optional SAT-II, an expansion of the achievement tests that some schools presently give in addition to the SAT to help gain admission to some colleges.

SAT-II will include a written essay section, language proficiency tests for native speakers of Japanese and Chinese, and proficiency tests for non-native English speakers.

Observers had predicted the essay would be included in the main SAT. But Gregory Anrig, president of the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N. J., which administers the test, said field trials showed an essay would make the exam too long.

The regents' lullaby

ASA's dreaming can result in student nightmare

Dan Nowicki
Opinion Editor

It's hard to keep a straight face while listening to the Arizona Students Association discuss their strategic assault against the Arizona Board of Regents during this latest round in the war versus rising tuition costs.

ASU's three ASA representatives — Associated Students of ASU President Matt Ortega, ASASU State Relations Director Rob Miller and Assistant State Relations Director Maren Lee — all exemplify the stereotypical collegiate politico, each astride their very own high-horse and each as politically naive as the day is long.

Ortega, who is equal parts pomposity and hot air and 100 percent pure junior politician, is the archetypical campus blowhard.

As anyone who has ever been in the position of asking Ortega a straight question can attest, his responses generally consist of regurgitation of the original question, a general restatement of the issue at hand plus a dash of meaningless political rhetoric. No answers here.

Although Ortega openly disdains the use of "destructive" activist techniques — burning effigies, taking over buildings and the like — and is very vocal in his support of what he has called "pro-active demonstrations," he is hard pressed to come up with any tangible ideas or plans.

He prefers to kiss-up to everyone. Many people have commented on the effectiveness of his Ronald Reaganish communication qualities. Unfortunately, Ortega seems to have believed them and flaunts his "presidential charisma" in a manner that is almost insulting. It'll take more than a smile and a handshake to keep tuition increases reasonable.

Miller, on the other hand, is a talker second only to Ortega himself. He operates in an over-anxious, almost neurotic fashion, tip-toeing around as if he's terrified someone might accidentally blurt out an unkind comment to the almighty regents and cause the ASA proposal to collapse like a house of cards.

His jumpy demeanor and stressed-out attitude indicate that, maybe, he's in over his head.

Our student representatives have been tranquilized by the soothing sounds of the regents' lullaby, the same one we've heard time and time again. By the time they are rudely awakened from their somnambulist state, it's going to be too late and the regents will have won again.

The regents will sit through ASA's song-and-dance number. They will pretend they're listening. They will applaud.

And then they'll go right ahead and do whatever they were going to do anyway. They always do.

In student government, names change and memories fade fast. There's little continuity from one administration to the next. But if there is one constant, if there's one thing you can bet your last 10 cents on, it's the fact that the regents are never going to view students as anything other than students.

It happens time and time again. Each year a new contingent of peewee politicians convinces itself that it's on the "inside track" with the regents; the students are certain they're the ones the regents are going to finally take seriously.

And each year the students look like dopes.

Ortega and Miller seem hellbent on following in those footsteps.

Surely the ASA gang can remember back to last spring when last year's ASA reps — ASASU President Paul Larson and State Relations officers Shannon Sellers, Jonathan Kierman and Wayne Lokensky — felt sure they could reason with the regents if they "played the system." As it turned out, the system played them and Arizona students are still reeling from the massive tuition bomb that their friends, the regents, dropped on them last February.

Instead of experimenting with new, innovative approaches to the tuition dilemma, Ortega and Miller seem to be tripping over each other in order to play the kissing game.

By all indications, the regents are looking at a relatively low tuition increase this year, due mostly to the fact that the reverberations from last spring's huge tuition hike are still being felt. If the number is small, it will be because that's how much the regents intended to raise it all along. It won't be because of Ortega's smooch-up campaign.

Sometimes one doesn't know if he should laugh or cry at ASA's buffoonery. But it shouldn't be tolerated.

Students are being inadequately represented at the regent tuition hearings. Ortega and Miller are living in a fantasy world that neither the Board of Regents nor the student body believes in.

It's time they woke up.

Constitutional shortcuts Politicians find ways to subvert our Constitution

Joseph Sobran
Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — Relax, everyone. The U. S. Constitution poses no serious threat to our form of government.

Item: We may soon be at war in the Persian Gulf, and it's far likelier we will have a war than we will have a declaration of war, as the Constitution prescribes. Some congressmen are explaining that to exercise their right and duty of deciding formally that the nation is at war would "tie the president's hands."

Pardon me, but that's sort of the whole idea, isn't it? To restrain the government by apportioning power and responsibility? It's time the buck stopped on Capitol Hill, instead of being passed to the White House, the judiciary and the bureaucracies. The war clearly isn't going to start until the U. S. government wants to start it. If ever there was full opportunity to deliberate and debate whether to engage in hostilities, it's now. Congress has no excuse for dodging.

Item: Congress has passed a so-called "civil rights" act that would, in fact, have diminished our rights. The president vetoed it, but only because the Democrats wouldn't compromise on its extreme provisions. He was willing to accept the presumption of guilt the bill would have established against employers accused of racial discrimination. It not only went far beyond anything the Constitution empowers the federal government to do; it would have countermanded one of the most basic safeguards of our legal tradition by putting the burden of proof on defendants.

Instead of challenging the bill on principle, Mr. Bush gave it moral legitimacy, then refused to sign it for marginal reasons. This gave his opponents the moral high ground from which to attack him as an enemy of civil rights. Classic Republican ineptitude. Mr. Bush interrupted his recent string of setbacks with a Pyrric victory. Eight years as Ronald Reagan's understudy has taught him nothing.

Item: Congress and the White House have agreed on a budget that will cost the nation about a trillion and a third next year. It seems like only yesterday that we passed the trillion mark; our generation may live to see the quadrillions.

Even with a bloated military budget, only about a fifth of this money will be spent for purposes authorized by the Constitution. The bulk of it will go for entitlements, transfer payments, the redistribution of wealth — whatever you want to call the myriad ways in which the modern state contrives to let some people live off the earnings of others.

We customarily speak of "the U. S. economy," but, in fact, the United States now has two economies: The trade economy and the tax economy.

The trade economy is the realm most of us earn our bread in: The arena of freely exchanged goods and services. That is where wealth is produced. The tax economy produces nothing. It's completely parasitic on the trade economy, and saps it.

Before the income tax and the welfare state, there was no tax economy. Taxes paid only for minimal government services and amounted to only a small fraction of the nation's total economic activity. But now the tax economy has begun to rival the trade economy in size and, even more important, in political power.

Tens of millions of voters now get their income from the federal government, some as employees, but more as recipients of "benefits" for which they do nothing but vote. This means they vote bearing a conflict of interest: They can cast their ballots for candidates who have promised them cash out of the pockets of their fellow citizens in the trade economy.

The tax economy has no constitutional footing. The framers of the Constitution understood a trade economy, and they wrote law to enable it to flourish. Neither the original Constitution nor subsequent amendments authorized the sorts of federal programs that have more recently created the tax economy, which has become the daily business of the national government.

We Americans talk about our Constitution incessantly. But the truth is that we have become inured to extra-constitutional government, in which constitutional imperatives have been reduced to options, and constitutional barriers are ignored.

Supreme Court to hear abortion consultation case

Ellen Goodman
Washington Post
Writers Group

NEW YORK — This is the South Bronx, where reporters come to write about drugs and dropouts, about AIDS and abuse. Photographers come here to take pictures of blocks that make Lebanon look like a decorator's showplace.

But one flight above the street, past the lounge where teenage girls are seated around formica tables reading, talking, collaborating on a questionnaire in an old magazine, there is a haven from the street's statistics of hopelessness. It's a place called in the South Bronx called The Hub.

To some people, The Hub is a model of what its organizer, Planned Parenthood, calls "a center for change." It was built on the belief that family planning is less a matter of pill-pushing than of life-building. The programs that combine health services with education, job training with family counseling, are meant to give teenagers a reason to plan, a sense of life's possibilities.

But to others, The Hub is a target, because it also provides abortions for this community. And though few protesters dare carry their pickets to this tough territory, the center is not immune from the struggles over rights.

On Tuesday, Oct. 30, Irving Rust, the courtly, Harlem-raised doctor who works on the third floor, will travel to Washington and take his seat at a Supreme Court hearing. He will listen to the arguments on the case that bears his name. And the man who once thought of teaching history will indeed be making history.

Rust vs Sullivan will test just how many freedoms can be lost to those who claim the fetus as their cause. This time an abortion case is not about the right to decide or the right to privacy. It's about the right to free speech.

In 1987, the Reagan administration wrote a set of regulations for Title X's federally funded family-planning clinics. Money for performing abortions had been banned much earlier, but these regulations went further. They banned talking about abortion.

The government told the doctors what they could not say. "Title X projects may not provide counseling concerning the use of abortion ... or provide referral for abortion.

And the government told doctors what they had to say. If a woman asked about abortion, they were to answer: "The project does not consider abortion an appropriate method of family planning." The only referrals they could make were for prenatal care by those "who do not perform abortions."

To pro-lifers, these regulations were just another way to shut off any one group that supported abortion rights. But for the doctors and counselors who challenged this law and have kept it at legal bay, it is nothing less than a "gag rule."

Dr. Rust tries to explain what it would mean for a doctor to withhold legal information from his patient. Imagine, he says, that a woman comes in who has hypertension, diabetes, sickle-cell anemia, someone whose health is at risk from pregnancy. "How," he asks, "can you just close your mouth and stay quiet and say nothing to a patient?"

He struggles with another medical analogy. "If a woman came in with cancer of the ovary and there were three methods of treatment, could I tell her the government says that chemotherapy is the treatment no matter what I think?"

Marking his words carefully, he concludes, "I will NOT TELL a woman."

What is at stake for this blighted neighborhood is $450,000 in Title X money — one-fourth of The Hub's budget — for pap smears and counseling as well as contraceptives for the community's only health center. What is at stake across the country is the health care for 5 million poor women. But what is also at stake is what most of us take for granted: the free and honest flow of information and help, the relationship of trust between doctor and patient.

"The words of a doctor to her patient, of the lawyer to her client and of the professor to her public-university students are most assuredly the speech of private citizens," argues the brief for Dr. rust and Planned Parenthood.

But if taking funds from the government means you must take the party line from the government, then doctors will be little more than bureaucrats. If the government becomes a medical ventriloquist, then a doctor is only "the voice of America."

Funny isn't it — did you ever notice how rights are connected to each other? The right to privacy, the right to speech. Attack one and pretty soon, another is gone. The same people who want to let government take over the decisions about our private lives would also let government put a firm hand over the doctor's mouth.

"I call this the escape from Chicago syndrome or the last run of the old Winnebago. (Phoenix) residents want golf, Bermuda grass and to be left alone."

Tension simmered in Ayodhya on Wednesday after four of the victims of Tuesday's police firing were cremated. The body of the fifth victim, a Hindu priest, was immersed in a river, according to Hindu custom.

The Ayodhya dispute has festered for decades, with Hindus claiming the 460-year-old mosque was built over the birthplace of Lord Rama, one of the most worshipped Hindu gods.

Moslems say it is impossible to pinpoint the birthplace of Rama and that they will not accept the destruction of the mosque.

The dispute stoked the already tense relations between Hindus, who make up 82 percent of India's 880 million people, and Moslems, who comprise 12 percent of the population.

It turned ugly last year, when the World Hindu Council announced plans to take over the site by force. At least 900 people were killed last year in Hindu-Moslem violence caused by the announcement.

The issue came to a head Tuesday, the day deemed auspicious by Hindu priests to begin the construction. The World Hindu Council claimed a victory because its supporters succeeded in breaching the police cordons around the shrine.

The government says no serious damage has been done to the mosque and that it will repel any further attempts to storm the site.

Singh has provoked sharp criticism in the press for his handling of the situation. At least two newspapers Wednesday accused him of vacillating on the dispute, which they said contributed to the crisis.

The Bombay-based newspaper, Free Press Journal, said: "The magnitude of damage that this one man has done to the country . . . cannot be assessed in terms of the number of people killed or maimed. The poses of anguish and remorse that he now strikes are so phony that few in this country would be taken in by them."

and executive officers, the AGA last year provided only 576 hours of work for the 3438 hours it was paid for. In addition, the report states that despite AGA's claims of having completed 69 jobs last year, it finished only 43 — seven of which had to be re-done.

AGA Director Sandra Bailey denied the allegations, calling the report vague and inaccurate.

"They're making a lot of assumptions about what this program is set up to do," she said. "(The report) is a broad generalization. I have facts."

Keith Lierman, art director for the AGA, chuckled and shook his head as he read the report but admitted there may have been problems in the past.

"I don't believe in being dead weight," he said. "It's been really bad in the past, but this (report) is really unclear."

ASASU Activities Vice President Frank McCune, a voting member of the Senate, said he will suspend judgment until he hears arguments from both sides.

Debate

When asked by a member of the audience the precise definition of a great city, Gammage stopped to consider the inquiry.

"It's sort of like pornography, you know it when you see it," he said.

Bodney, who admitted his own claims were somewhat cynical, said he considered Phoenix's "happy mediocrity" a blessing.

"(Gammage) is the man who would turn the desert into a great American city like Los Angeles and New York," he quipped. "Do I want to live in a city like New York where I could buy anything? Could I trust myself?"

Gammage admitted Phoenix is a "city by choice," dependent on technology to compensate for the lack of a harbor or natural resources like other American cities.

"Phoenix is the most recent realization of the American dream," Gammage said.

Bodney sharply criticized Gammage's "chamber of commerce mentality" he uses to sell people on Phoenix.

"You can be content behind your walls with your barbecue ablaze," Bodney said. "People don't want to pay the price for greatness."

ASU police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- A male ASU student said he received an obscene telephone call from an unknown male.
- An ASU student, who was riding a bicycle, collided with a vehicle. The student suffered head injuries, but he refused treatment.
- A male ASU employee reported observing a man exposing himself on the east side of the University Activity Center.
- A rubber ball was stolen from inside a Microsoft mouse in the Engineering Building. Estimated loss is $10.
- A window at Manzanita Residence Hall was damaged by a golf ball. Estimated damage is $300.
- Two side windows were broken out of an ASU student's vehicle while it was parked in Parking Structure five. Estimated damage is $140.

- A black Magnum bicycle, valued at $100, was stolen from bicycle racks near the Architecture Building.
  - A blue Giant Acapulco bicycle, valued at $220, was stolen from the bicycle rack on the north side of the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.
  - A silver Schwinn bicycle, valued at $150, was stolen from the bike racks on the west side of Palo Verde East Residence Hall.
  - A yellow Takara bicycle valued at $125 was stolen from the bike racks near Ocotillo Residence Hall.
- Tempe police reported the following incident Wednesday:
- An armed robbery occurred at La Quinta Inn, 911 S. 48th St., when two suspects followed a married couple into their hotel room. The suspects pointed handguns at both victims and demanded money. One suspect pointed his gun at the male victim's chest and pulled the trigger, but the gun jammed, and both subjects struggled over the gun.

A third suspect then hit the female victim over the head, and she suffered a laceration.

The three suspects were able to steal cash and property from the victims before fleeing the scene.

One suspect is an 18- to-20-year-old black male, 5-foot-8, 140 pounds. He was last seen wearing a blue windbreaker and carrying a .25 caliber black automatic handgun.

The second suspect is an 18- to-20-year-old black male, 6-foot, 160 pounds. He was last seen wearing a blue jacket and carrying a .38 caliber revolver.

There is no description of the third suspect.

Phone bank to provide voter information

By JENNIFER FRANKLIN
State Press

Students suffering from election day distress, pondering the propositions or considering the candidates, can call ASU State Relations for help.

Robert Peteuil, Get Out to Vote campaign coordinator, said State Relations will man a phone bank on Nov. 6 to answer questions regarding the general election.

"We will have stuff all over campus advertising the election," he said.

Posters will cover the campus and a banner will adorn Orange Mall. In addition, students can expect to find the words, "Get out to vote," on campus blackboards, Peteuil said.

Maren Lee, associate director of State Relations, said the campaign is an effort to educate voters.

"Our efforts have not only been directed toward voter registration, but to voter education," Lee said.

State Relations registered 4,300 students to vote in the "Students Are Voting Everywhere in 1990" campaign.

"This campaign is a takeoff of the SAVE '90," she said. "Now we're trying to educate those voters. We are doing everything we can to get information to the students about the issues."

Lee said State Relations will not endorse any of the candidates.

"We will tell them where the candidates stand on the issues, but we just want students to make the choice themselves," she said.

Some of the election issues that affect students have been the Martin Luther King Jr. paid holiday and the Arizona Financial Aid Trust Fund, Lee said.

Proposition 301 would establish a paid King Day instead of a paid Columbus Day, while Proposition 302 would keep both holidays.

Larry L'Heureux, executive director of the Arizona Students' Association, said the group of representatives from each of the state universities is campaigning for an increase in the financial aid trust fund.

"It would mean that half of the fund is invested and the other half is awarded to students immediately," he said.

Under the fund, proposed initially in 1988, students would be charged a fee that would be matched by the state Legislature, L'Heureux said.

"Essentially it would be an investment of two or three dollars, but 20 years from now that investment would mean a lot of money," he said.

Lee said students at UofA and NAU are also gearing up for election day.

"There has really been a statewide student effort to get the information to students," she said.

An organizer for the United States Student Association said students have become especially active for this election.

"It's a very exciting time right now," Mary Beth Maxwell said. "There are issues nationwide that have really sparked the attention and interest of students."

Expert to air views on economics at teleconference

By JEFF CONCORS
State Press

One of the world's premier economic analysts will discuss the state of world economics at a nationwide teleconference today.

Peter Drucker's speech is being sponsored by the ASU College of Business' Center for Office Automation Research, a management technology research facility.

The conference, which will be shown at academic and business establishments around the country, will be provided by the Security Pacific Automation Company and will be aired locally at the Kachina Ballroom at Tempe's Westcourt in the Buttes.

It is scheduled to start at 9:15 a.m. and end at 1:15 p.m.

"We're expecting more than 100 people," said Chad Madden, public relations director for the College of Business. "Peter Drucker is one of the premier economic gurus of the past 30 or 40 years."

Drucker, who will speak via satellite from San Francisco, will address trade concerns dealing with the new European Community that goes into effect in 1992 as well as the closing of Eastern Europe's outdated "smokestack" industries.

"He will talk a lot about the Eastern economy," Madden said, adding that Drucker gained experience in European economics when he worked as an economist for an international banking house and a group of European banks.

Madden said Drucker will touch on how the modern corporation will adapt to the changing international marketplace.

Tom Keller, director of COAR and an ASU professor of management, said COAR will try to present similar programs in the future.

In addition to being a professor of social science and management, Drucker is an editorial columnist for The Wall Street Journal. He is also the author of several management strategy books including the best-selling New Realities.

HOOFDDORP, Netherlands (AP) — A Dutch computer firm is packing its software diskettes in popcorn — hold the salt and oil — to replace the foam nuggets that used to cushion its product.

Corblan International said Wednesday it made the switch because of concerns that polystyrene foam is damaging the environment.

The replacement "costs us about 40 percent more, but at least the popcorn is biodegradable," Corblan director Hans Coreen said.

The popcorn being used contains no salt or cooking oil, because that could damage the delicate computer programs sold on Corblan's diskettes. Even so, it's edible, Coreen said.

"I would suggest sprinkling some salt, sugar and oil on it first so that it tastes better," Coreen said.

Mills to take center stage with OSU's Tuaolo

By PAUL CORO
State Press

ASU's home game with Oregon State Saturday night marks a tall obstacle in freshman center Toby Mills' track to success.

Is it because the 7 p.m. game will mark only the second start of this 19-year-old's promising career? Somewhat, but not really.

Could it be that Mills is testing an injury, has family coming into town or has waited all his life to play the Beavers? Not even close.

Maybe it is that Esera Tuaolo guy. "Yeah, it's him," Mills said, alluding to the Oregon State nose tackle. "I pretty much know his history. You really have to prepare for him."

Although Mills will get support from the guards, the burden of controlling the Beavers' premier player falls on the stocky shoulders of the 6-foot-3, 268-pound true freshmen.

Staring inches away from Mills' face mask Saturday, Tuaolo will test Mills' youth with his long list of preseason accolades, which include a first-team all-America selection by NFL Draft Report and a Lombardi Award nomination. With his size and stature, a freshman can be overwhelmed.

"You really can't let anybody intimidate you," Mills said. "You've got to respect him though. If you let him intimidate you, he has already won half the battle."

In ASU's offensive line, Mills is the one gaining a quick advantage. As one of Sun Devil coach Larry Marmie's prime candidates of the latest recruiting class to play this season, Mills was quick to impress his coaches at Camp Tontozona.

However, with starting center Paul DeBono's health improving going into the season, Mills was penciled in for the redshirt list.

As ASU's injury list expanded, Mills climbed up the depth chart. With backup Jim Watson's knee dislocation, Mills made his collegiate debut Oct. 13 against Cal at home.

Add DeBono's pinched nerve in his back and Mills found himself handling the first snap of last week's USC game.

"For some reason, I was a lot more nervous (starting)," said Mills, who claims he has always played better when he has the jitters. "To me, that's a good sign."

After a rough second game in Oregon, where Mills said he had several breakdowns, he received a big boost from the Trojan game, in which he played every snap.

"Like everybody, he had a mistake or two," Marmie said. "He got better over the last week, which is what we're looking for."

While he credits the entire offensive line with taking him in and treating him with respect, Mills said the game action has helped him along more than anything.

"Just getting that playing time is the key to it all," Mills said. "Your adrenaline is pumping. Your adrenaline very rarely pumps on the practice field."

Looking back, Mills said the first half of this season has not been wasted because he did not play and is not redshirting.

"There's no way I could have done it right from the beginning," Mills said. "My goal was to see playing time at least by my redshirt freshman year."

So it is safe to say Mills is pleased with his progress. But he is not the only one. Marmie said he is not concerned with the Mills-Tuaolo matchup that plays a major role in ASU's hopes of snapping its five-game losing streak.

"I know Toby Mills will do everything he can and give every ounce he has," Marmie said. "When a kid does that, I can live with it."

Crunch time is here for the ASU volleyball team and its quest for a NCAA tournament bid.

The Sun Devils (14-12 overall, 5-8 Pac-10), are also looking for revenge as they head into their final homestand of the season tonight at 7:30 against Oregon (14-9, 5-7). ASU will meet Oregon State (18-7, 7-5) Friday to round out its schedule at the University Activity Center.

The Sun Devils were swept by the Ducks and Beavers earlier this year in Oregon.

"There's no question that both teams are very strong and we're going to have to play some very good volleyball," Coach Patti Snyder said. "But they're going to have to play some very good volleyball to beat us."

"I expect to see a really high caliber of volleyball this weekend."

ASU's immediate concerns center on UO, which has been saddled with three key injuries recently and has dropped four of its last five matches.

Duck coach Gerry Gregory, who insists they are not in a slump, chose not to name two of the injured players because they will accompany the team this weekend and may see action tonight.

Gregory did say, however, that sophomore middle blocker Jennifer McGinnis is out for the season with a broken ankle.

"The injuries have probably been a huge factor (in our recent losses)," Gregory said. "It's really tough to have continuity in training when you don't have the people there on a regular basis."

UO does not have one single player who stands out, but junior middle blocker Mindee Adams is the most consistent player on the squad, according to Gregory.

"She is the type of player a coaching staff can appreciate," Gregory said.

Statistically, junior middle blocker Dawn Charroin leads the team in kills, averaging 3.89 per game and digs with a 3.41 average.

Snyder said the Ducks, who boast a young team with no seniors, have a good chemistry on the floor.

"Their offense is much faster than last year," Snyder said. "Their ball control is much better too."

Snyder said UO will set the ball low and force the Sun Devil blockers to commit early so the Ducks can hit around the block.

It was ASU's adept blocking the last time these two teams met that most concerns Gregory about tonight's contest.

"Debbie Penney was considerably better as a middle blocker than we thought she would be," Gregory said. "I don't think we realized how good Debbie Penney is in the middle."

Penney, a junior middle blocker, only had three block assists during the last UO match but she tallied a team-high 17 kills.

"She's doing a better job reading the setter," Snyder said. "Although she still needs to work on it."

"That's the one part of her game where she needs to make the most improvement. I'm satisfied with every other aspect of her game though."

Snyder said she is hoping Penney and senior middle blocker Tina Berg will be able to step up and make the crucial blocks.

Although Berg continues to lead the Sun Devils in blocks with a 1.9 average, she has slipped to No. 2 behind UCLA's Marissa Hatchett in the Pac-10.

Outside hitters junior Mindy Gowell and senior Kelly Plaisted continue to dominate the top two spots in the conference in digs per game with averages of 4.51 and 4.01, respectively.

After her performance last weekend, Plaisted moved into fourth place on the ASU career digs list with 1,053.

After two close October matches in Oregon, Snyder said the home-court advantage could be the decisive factor for the Sun Devils.

Mickelson helps U.S. golf team to 2nd place in New Zealand

By KRIS TIMMONS
State Press

It was Wednesday, Oct. 24 in Tempe and ASU students were anxiously looking forward to picking up the latest New Times.

However, it was Thursday, Oct. 25 in Christchurch, New Zealand, and two-time defending NCAA champion Phil Mickelson was teeing off in the first round of the World Amateur Golf Championship.

Thirty-five countries were represented in the Championship by teams of four golfers. Mickelson and teammates David Duval, a student from Georgia Tech; David Eger, director of the PGA Tour; and Alan Doyle, a driving range owner, represented the United States in the two-week event.

A final round of 71 for Mickelson pushed the United States to a second-place finish behind first-place Sweden.

"We (the U. S. team) were in third place and I was the last golfer on the course in the last round," Mickelson said. "I had to sink a 40-footer (for second place). I made it so at least I ended the tournament on a good note."

Although Mickelson scored the low rounds for the final 36 holes, he was not pleased with his overall performance.

"It was fun but I didn't play well," Mickelson said. "We didn't win and we were expected to win."

"It was tough on school because I missed two weeks. The teachers have been pretty good about it though."

The three lowest scores from each of the three rounds went into calculating the final team scores. There were no individual distinctions.

Mickelson was chosen by the USGA to represent the United States in the Championship and although it would seem his

U. S. Amateur victory in August probably had something to do with his selection, he said he was informed that he was a member of the team before the Amateur.

Mickelson said the course was not "overly difficult," but added that the conditions were different than he was used to. "The greens were rock hard," he said. "It was just a different agriculture. It was an older style course."

In addition to different course conditions, Mickelson had to adjust to different weather conditions.

"It didn't rain at all but it was overcast and cold, kind of like how Phoenix is in the winter," Mickelson said.

Mickelson said he is ready to compete again for the Sun Devils.

"I definitely wanted to go," he said. "It was an experience you can't replace. I have no regrets, but it was a vacation more or less. I enjoy college golf just as much."

Gambino in draw at Volvo; hoops scrimmage tonight

From staff reports

ASU sophomore Chris Gambino won a pair of matches Wednesday at the Volvo All-America Qualifying Tournament in Athens, Ga., to advance to the 32-player main singles draw.

Gambino, in just his second Sun Devil appearance, defeated Duke's Jan Rubell, 6-3, 6-4, before downing Bryan Nelson of Wisconsin, 7-5, 6-4. He opens action in singles play versus Jose-Luis Noriega of the University of San Diego, the tournament's fourth-seed Thursday.

Also slated for action Thursday is ASU's All-American doubles tandem of Brian Gyetko and Dave Lomicky. The Sun Devil duo, seeded sixth in the tournament, face Tennessee's Fabio Silberber and Tim Jessup, who are ranked 12th nationally.

Lomicky was ousted in the second round of qualifying by Silberberg, who won in straight sets, 6-4, 7-5. Lomicky beat Mark Booras of West Virginia in the first round, 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

The 1990-91 ASU basketball team will hold an intrasquad scrimmage at 7 tonight at Scottsdale Saguaro High School.

The game will highlight the Sun Devils' highly-touted recruiting class of guard Lynn Collins, center Robert Conlisk, forward Ian Dale, forward Jamal Faulkner, guard Dwayne Fontana and guard Stevin Smith.

ASU's only returning starters from last season are center Isaac Austin and guard Brian Camper. Former starting guard Tarance Wheeler also returns to the court this year after sitting out last season with a knee injury.

The Sun Devils' other returnees are guard Matt Anderson, forward Marlon Jones and center Emory Lewis.

Admission is $3.

Mills

Tuaolo, who had two sacks last week against UCLA, will provide a stiff test for Mills' pass-blocking ability, which Mills admits is the weak link in his game.

At his high school in Henderson, Texas, Mills spent most of his time either blocking for the run or the short passing game. His experience in drop-back protection was nil.

"I really had to learn how to do it when I got here," Mills said. "The pass blocking is not bad. After the USC game, I gained a lot more confidence in pass blocking."

While he was not protecting the state's

No. 1 offense, Mills spent many of his adolescent days as a ranchhand, which he would follow in the night with lifting weights. The rural life built up his strength, but it also lent Mills to a strong culture shock upon his arrival at ASU this fall.

Mills had never been outside Texas prior to his first semester in Tempe. But all along, Mills, whose father played football at Rice, felt ASU was his future school. In the process, Mills snubbed a plethora of universities from his home state.

"This is the place for me," Mills said. "I love it even more."

Suns head NBA season openers

(AP) — Will Japan be the Land of the Rising Phoenix Suns?

In the first regular-season games ever played outside North America by a major professional sports league, the Suns and the Utah Jazz open the NBA season with games on Friday and Saturday nights at Tokyo's Metropolitan Gymnasium.

Teams from the NBA, NFL, NHL and major league baseball previously have participated in tournament and exhibition games overseas, but never before have the games actually counted in the standings.

"We have observed a tremendous growth of interest in basketball and the NBA in Japan, and we are delighted to be able to bring these games directly to the Japanese fans," NBA commissioner David Stern said.

To get his team acclimated to the 16-hour time difference, Phoenix coach Fitzsimmons held practice at 3 a.m. both Monday and Tuesday before flying to Japan.

"I want to make sure this team is sharp," Fitzsimmons said. "If we happen to get beat by a very good Utah team, I don't want anybody saying it was because of a tough trip."

In other openers Friday night, it will be Orlando at Atlanta, Cleveland at Boston, New York at Charlotte, New Jersey at Indiana, Washington at Miami, Milwaukee at Detroit, Philadelphia at Chicago, Dallas at Minnesota, Golden State at Denver, Sacramento at the Los Angeles Clippers and Houston at Portland.

The Los Angeles Lakers open Saturday at San Antonio while Houston is at Seattle to start the SuperSonics' season.

The Suns, who became the first Western Conference team since 1986 to defeat the Los Angeles Lakers in the playoffs, won 54 games last season and finished 7-1 in the preseason.

"We've improved the last two years and we want to improve some more this year," Fitzsimmons said. "Once you reach a certain plateau, though, I find it's harder to get improvement."

"I think the biggest thing we got from preseason is that we all now realize we should win the Pacific Division," All-Star guard Kevin Johnson said. "We got off to slow starts the last two years."

The Jazz, winners of 55 games last season, added high-scoring guard Jeff Malone to a lineup that already included two All-Stars, Karl Malone and John Stockton.

Malone was a first-team All-NBA selection with a 31.0 average last season and Stockton led the league in assists, becoming the first player with 1,000 assists in three consecutive seasons.

• Eastern Conference •

Detroit is hoping to become the first team in 24 years — when Boston won the last of eight straight league titles — to win three championships in a row.

The Pistons struggled because of injuries in training camp, but everyone was back for their final preseason game, a 113-104 victory over Houston. All-Star guard Isiah Thomas and a supporting cast that includes defensive aces Joe Dumars and Dennis Rodman, figure to be pressed in the Central Division by the Chicago Bulls and Michael Jordan.

"We match them in the first unit . . ." Chicago coach Phil Jackson said while conceding Detroit's great depth.

While the Pistons have virtually the same team, the Bulls made some moves, adding guard Dennis Hopson and forward Cliff Levingston.

The Pistons are heavy favorites, but don't hand out the title just yet.

"Can we sustain what we've done for three years?" Coach

Chuck Daly asked. "We have to stay injury free . . ."

The Atlantic Division — where defending champion Philadelphia, Boston and New York figure to slug it out — looks more competitive.

The 76ers are led by Charles Barkley, whose averages of 25.2 points and 11.5 rebounds per game and 148 steals for the season make him one of the best forwards ever to play the game. He had off-season surgery on an arthritic shoulder.

Philadelphia has emerging star Hersey Hawkins in its backcourt and tough guy Rick Mahorn up front. The 76ers also added shot-blocking Manute Bol.

The big question in Boston is how much longer can the big three of 33-year-old Larry Bird, Kevin McHale (32) and Robert Parish (37) continue to defy age. The Celtics also are trying to adjust to new coach Chris Ford.

Patrick Ewing, who averaged 28.6 points, 10.9 rebounds and 4.0 blocks last season, could be the game's best center. But the Knicks made no off-season moves to give him more help.

• Western Conference •

Portland, a loser in five games to Detroit in the finals, hopes to get off to a good start in the tough Pacific Division.

"We'd like to take advantage of the schedule," said Coach Rick Adelman, whose team plays 10 of its first 13 games at home. "It's not going to be easy. There are some very good teams coming in here."

Among them are Detroit, New York, Chicago, San Antonio and Phoenix.

Led by guard Clyde Drexler, who averaged 26.4 points in the Finals loss to Detroit, Portland is an imposing team. Forward Buck Williams is one of the outstanding rebounders of his era and guard Terry Porter an outstanding playmaker and scorer.

It will be strange to see the Lakers without Coach of the Decade Pat Riley, under whom they won four league titles. Mike Dunleavy is his replacement on the bench.

The Lakers added Sam Perkins and Terry Teagle to the likes of Magic Johnson and James Worthy. Los Angeles, which took the Pacific title last season, figures to battle Portland and Phoenix to the wire.

Sacramento (23-59 last season) probably won't be a factor, but the Kings should be interesting with four first-round draft picks. Two of them, Lionel Simmons and Travis Mays, may start.

Defending champion San Antonio and Utah figure to wage war in the Midwest Division, but Denver's offense and lack of defense could result in some records. Former Lakers coach Paul Westhead has come aboard from Loyola Marymount.

NBA coaches are wondering who would be the first team to score 200 points in a game. It's a good bet the Nuggets will be involved.

"We should be up in the 150s and above in most games," Westhead said. "Obviously, on some days the opposition will be right up there with us."

The record for one game is 186 points in triple overtime. In regulation, it is 173.

San Antonio, imposing with center David Robinson and forward Terry Cummings, certainly is a team to be reckoned with. But coach Larry Brown doesn't necessarily see the Midwest race as a two-team affair.

"Everyone assumes that because we won 56 games and we're a young team that we'll be better," he said. "But so many teams have improved that it doesn't mean we'll have as much success."

Your Individual Horoscope

Frances Drake

IF YOUR BUSINESS WOULD LIKE TO SPONSOR THE HOROSCOPES, PLEASE CALL 965-6555.

FOR FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1990

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Judgment is shrewd regarding financial interests today and you'll be making important career progress as well. There is, however, a tendency to be extravagant when pleasure seeking.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Care is needed in contractual matters. Be aware of those who would take advantage. Good news comes from an adviser. You'll spend freely on the home now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A certain measure of secrecy may be necessary today. Don't confide in those who talk too much. You'll have new ideas now concerning investments.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Singles will meet with romantic introductions today. It's a good time to get together with your friends. You have insights about a child now. Watch nighttime extravagance.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) It seems like a game of one-upmanship with a relative today. Original ideas bring you to the attention of higher-ups. However, don't let pride get out of hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You're capable of serious and in-depth thinking today. Try not, however, to be fixed in your ideas. Travel and recreational interests are also happily highlighted now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Beware of shrewd operators in financial transactions today. Dealings with bankers about home improvement loans and mortgages are favored. Tonight you tend to overspend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Mentally you're sharp today, but be careful not to be overly critical in your judgments. You're on the same wavelength with a close tie and you'll have good times together now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You'll want to save some time today for mental work. New chances for financial gain arise in business now. Evening hours guard against over-indulgence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) A friend confides in you. This is a day when you'll attract romance and attention from others. Going out for good times is a plus tonight if you don't overspend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) There'll be some wheeling and dealing in business today. You'll be dispensing with some unfinished tasks at home. Fulfill commitments to others.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Try to keep out of ideological disputes today. Get-togethers with friends afford you pleasure now. Details on the job need extra attention. Watch dietary indiscretions tonight.

YOU BORN TODAY are creative and imaginative. You work well in partnership and can succeed in business. Financial and emotional security are both important to you. Sometimes you're found in business allied to the arts. You have a fine intuition which you should learn to listen to. You are naturally sympathetic and would make a good physician. More often, though, you choose a creative career. Birthdate of: Ann Rutherford, actress; Marie Antoinette, French queen; and Daniel Boone, frontiersman.
