Key to funding lies in unity, panel says

By KEVIN SHEH
State Press

University factions must be unified to effectively lobby the new Arizona Legislature, a panel of experts told more than 30 students Saturday.

"If you pull together all of the different groups in the University (that) have agenda items in common, so that you're reinforcing each other, I think that's very effective," said Rep. Bev Hermon, R-Tempe.

The new Legislature will convene in January.

Meanwhile, some experts expect legislators to be less than receptive to University requests for additional funding.

University leaders could be faced with a tough task in selling lawmakers with new programs this session, said Greg Fahey, a legislative lobbyist for UofA.

He said the Legislature, for the first time in nearly a decade, is split. The Democrats hold the majority in the Senate, while the Republicans retain the edge in the House.

This rift, coupled with the sad state of Arizona's economy, will make this an explosive session, Fahey said.

"If you like the smell of napalm in the air in the morning, come to the Legislature this session," he said. "It will be very good theater."

He said Arizona's sagging economy has created a mood among legislators and their constituents which is not conducive to vast spending and taxes.

The university system could face more than $21 million in midyear budget cuts in January because of Gov. Rose Mofford's announced $108 million budget shortfall.

The Arizona Board of Regents is expected to announce its cut at its Dec. 14 meeting.

Fahey said the state's shortfall will cause many lawmakers to think twice before

Students not immune to domestic violence

By TEENA CHADWELL
State Press

An ASU student in her early 20s recently stumbled into the Tempe police station naked.

Earlier that evening, she said she had been in bed sleeping naked when her boyfriend came home. He was livid because he arrived home earlier and she was gone, said Tempe Sgt. Al Taylor, adding that the drunk boyfriend picked the woman up and threw her out the front door onto the concrete.

This local example is an indication of the domestic violence that occurs throughout the nation.

In fact, 2 to 4 million women nationally are battered by their husbands or partners each year, according to officials at Autumn House, a Mesa women's shelter.

Taylor said he believes people should wait for the right time to discuss potentially volatile topics.

"When the emotions get up there, common sense goes out the window," he said.

But there are hints of this destructive and violent behavior in men, said the director of a local shelter for abused women.

Theresa Grates, director of My Sister's Place, said extreme jealousy,

Slain rabbi remembered as explosive, a 'liar'

By AARON LEVY
State Press

The assassination of a Jewish leader usually sparks waves of reaction among followers, but on the ASU campus, no one rallied for the cause of Rabbi Meir Kahane.

Kahane was assassinated on Nov. 5 in New York. The internationally known rabbi, also an explosive orator, was gunned down by a 34-year-old Arab after a lecture he gave to 60 of his supporters.

Danny Ben-Gigi, a former Israeli journalist now teaching Hebrew at ASU, said he was around for one of Kahane's visits to ASU and has his own opinion of the famous rabbi.

On Jan. 22, 1986, Ben-Gigi scuffled with the rabbi during a speech he gave in the Valley. An issue of the State Press ran a story detailing Kahane's speech and his claims that there are no moderate Jews — only "Jewish fools" who are "guilt-ridden and cowardly."

The article detailed the series of events that led to the ASU professor's ejection from the speech along with two students.

"Danny Ben-Gigi attempted to question Kahane several times during his speech," the story said. "Kahane told Ben-Gigi to wait until the speech was over. When interrupted for the third time, Kahane, red in the face, dashed from his podium and attempted to grab Ben-Gigi."

"I was protesting what he was saying — basically his regular philosophy," Ben-Gigi said in a recent interview. "And I protested that he is disturbing Arabs. I protested his views that (Arabs) had to be thrown out and removed from their homes, and I simply didn't think — and I still don't think — that there is any violent solution to the situation (in Israel)."

Ben-Gigi said Kahane jumped from the podium to attack him.

"He came in a threatening manner to attack me," Ben-Gigi said. "He left the stage, pushed the people, pushed the seats and came to literally attack me. When he was very close, I tried to defend myself against his physical attack, and then I was pulled out (of the speech)."

Rabbi Barton Lee, president of the Hillel Jewish Center at ASU, keeps a file as thick as a textbook, with clips and other mementos of his run-ins with Kahane during the past decade.

Kahane

"He spoke here and mesmerized the audience," Lee said. "It was a very stimulating performance and it took me a week to unravel this artful presentation of a demagogue."

Lee said Kahane took facts that weren't related, making conclusions that seemed good and appealed to the emotions. But Lee said when he began to think the rabbi's reasoning through rationally, the logic was not there.

Lee commented on Kahane's death, saying that nobody applauds the assassination, but it doesn't change the man from what he was.

In 1987, Kahane came to Phoenix and announced that Hillel would not allow him to speak, which according to Lee was a lie. But many of Kahane's followers were agitated because Lee publicly called the rabbi a liar.

"He lied about the way he was treated here and he made slanderous remarks about Hillel campus programming throughout the country," Lee said. "He just simply, out-and-out lied."

A few years later, Lee said some of Kahane's followers posted flyers around campus saying the rabbi would speak at Hillel during a time another program was scheduled.

Jury to decide outcome of student's lawsuit

By DIANE SANTORICO
State Press

A jury is expected to hand down a verdict either today or Tuesday in a case involving an ASU student who has charged Arizona highway employees with negligence in a 1987 snow-bound incident.

Steve Lamar, defense attorney in the case, delivered his closing arguments Thursday, claiming state workers were not negligent when they failed to search a snow-covered road for motorists before closing it for the winter.

Two years ago, Jami Goldman, a 22-year-old junior public programs major, and her friend Lisa Barzano, 21, were stranded on Highway 273 in Arizona's White Mountains for 10 days.

Goldman lost both legs to frostbite in the incident and was fitted with prosthetic limbs.

Red Nelson, the state employee responsible for maintaining Highway 273,

Verdict to be handed down this week for 2 women stranded in mountains testified earlier in the trial that he was doing his job by closing the road after it had snowed for several days.

But Goldman's lawyer, Richard Plattner, claimed the state was responsible for the road's maintenance and safety, and is asking the state to pay $5 million to $5.5 million in damages.

Tyrrell Taber, Barzano's attorney, said he hopes for a settlement of $2 million, adding that while Barzano did not lose any limbs to frostbite, she received some damage to the tissue in her toes.

In defending the state, Lamar said Mike Estes — who eventually found the girls on Jan. 2, 1988 — testified earlier that he saw the girls' red Chevy Blazer the day before the road closed. He added that he returned home without checking for the vehicle because the possibility of someone in the snowy area was unbelievable.

The defense attorney used this testimony to show the state acted reasonably in assuming that no one was on the highway.

Lamar also addressed the fact that the girls admitted smoking marijuana before they became lost.

"The girls didn't walk out, they decided to stay," he said in an interview after the closing arguments. "(Maybe) they would have taken care of themselves if they were not under the influence."

He said the girls left the truck's inside dome light on and used all the gas, preventing them from utilizing the vehicle's heater. In addition, they failed to put the vehicle in 4-wheel drive, Lamar added.

Lamar, however, told the jury they should not base their decision on sympathy, but solely on the facts.

"Our system works if the people from the community decide the case when presented with the evidence," he said. "Hopefully they will decide with their minds, and we hope the jury intellectually believes the plaintiffs were partially at fault."

According to Lamar's secretary, Teri Franks, the defense also argued that Goldman and Barzano did not have any safety equipment with them.

"Lamar pointed out that the girls did not pack anything useful, like a shovel, but they did pack a bong," she said. "He doesn't want to come down hard on the girls, but is this really the state's fault?"

Last week, prosecuting attorneys urged jurors to look into their hearts when deciding the case.

U.S. prepares for January gulf talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James Baker assured Iraq on Sunday the United States will not attack that nation if Saddam Hussein withdraws his troops from Kuwait and frees the Western hostages.

Baker, who is preparing to visit Iraq before Jan. 15 for talks on the gulf crisis, made the promise to Hussein, the Iraqi president, while insisting there will be no negotiating on the substance of the U. N. resolutions calling for Iraq to get out of Kuwait.

An Iraqi official, hinting that a resolution was possible to the increasingly tense international standoff over Kuwait, said his country was willing to discuss "all the issues."

Previously, Hussein has claimed that Kuwait had been annexed as a new province of Iraq.

As he left Washington Sunday evening for Brazile, President Bush declined to respond directly to reporters' questions about details of pending talks. "I'm very pleased with the way it's going, but we'll see," was his only response.

If Hussein meets the U. N. conditions — withdrawal from Kuwait, freedom for hostages and the restoration of Kuwait's legitimate government — then there can be discussions of Iraqi grievances against Kuwait, Baker said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" program.

He said talks should be between Kuwait and Iraq, which claims Kuwait is siphoning oil from an oil field along their common border. Iraq also contends it was denied a viable port on the Persian Gulf when Kuwait was created in 1961.

Moreover, Baker said the United States would not launch an attack against Iraq to drive Hussein from power if the U. N.

conditions are met.

"There's never been any suggestion that force would be used if the U. N. resolutions were fully complied with," Baker said.

"That would give some assurance, it seems to me, that if he complied with the resolutions, his reward for that would not be a military attack by the United States," Baker said.

Iraq on Saturday said it was willing to receive Baker as long as the talks were tied with a resolution of Israel's occupation of Arab lands. But Baker rejected that demand.

Baker called the issues "two entirely different questions and we're not here to link them."

The U. N. Security Council passed a resolution last week setting a Jan. 15 deadline for the use of force against Iraq if no Saddam doesn't withdraw from Kuwait, and Baker, along with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, on Sunday elaborated on Bush's efforts to find a peaceful solution to the crisis.

Aside from offering to send Baker to Baghdad, Bush said Friday he would ask Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to come to Washington next week for talks on the gulf.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas suggested Sunday that congressional leaders also go to Iraq to show support for Bush's efforts.

Baker said officials were discussing arrangements for the Baghdad and Washington meetings, "assuming that the meetings are going to take place."

Bush's diplomatic gesture followed a week of hearings on Capitol Hill during which several former high-ranking military

German elections dominated, won by conservatives

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's center-right coalition on Sunday easily won the first free all-German elections since 1932, buoyed by his popularity as the man who crafted swift unification.

The balloting capped a breathtaking transformation that began with a revolt last year against East Germany's Communist government and led to the merging of East and West Germany on Oct. 3.

East Germany's former ruling Communist Party, now called the Party for Democratic Socialism, won some seats in the new German Parliament, but lost much of the support it had earlier this year.

In perhaps the biggest surprise, the Greens environmental party of former West Germany, Europe's best-known ecology movement, lost all their seats. Only the Greens' sister party in eastern Germany won seats in the new parliament.

A jubilant Kohl was greeted at his Christian Democrat party headquarters by a throng of well-wishers.

"This is a day of great joy," he told them. "This is a great success and something to be proud of."

At the headquarters of the rival Social Democrats, the scene was somber. "We have lost the election," Kohl's rival Oskar Lafontaine told his supporters.

According to forecasts based on partial returns from most election districts, Kohl's coalition was expected to win 55 percent of the vote, compared to about 34 percent for the Social Democrats. The projections, broadcast on television, have been highly accurate in the past.

Official results were not expected until Monday.

Berlin, divided until just over a year ago by the Wall, held its own united elections. Social Democrat Mayor Walter Momper lost to his predecessor, conservative Eberhard Diepgen of Kohl's party.

The ARD television network said Kohl's Christian Democrats and their Bavarian sister party, the Christian Social Union, increased their parliamentary seats from 305 to about 316. It said the Social Democrats, who had 226 seats before the vote, captured about 240.

ARD based its forecasts on a poll of 453 of 477 election districts.

Along with Kohl, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher was among the big victors. ARD said Genscher's Free Democrats, Kohl's junior coalition partner, would increase their representation from 57 to 79 seats in the 656-seat Parliament.

The poor showing of the Greens was one of the biggest election surprises. ARD said the Greens lost all but about eight of their 48 parliamentary seats. In the former West Germany, they garnered only about 4.8 percent of the national vote, ARD said, less than the 5 percent needed for parliamentary representation. That means the Greens' main leaders will be excluded from Parliament.

The Greens' sister branch in former East Germany won about 6 percent of the vote, said ARD. Under one-time special election laws, small parties in former East Germany can enter Parliament by chalking up at least 5 percent on their home turf.

In West Germany's 1987 federal elections, the Greens won 8.3 percent.

Lafontaine blamed his Social Democrats' loss on Kohl's ability to capitalize on the tumultuous events that began with East Germany's peaceful revolution in October 1989 and led to unification.

"There were official events which gave the stage to the government and gave the opposition difficulties in articulating its program," he said.

American group sends food to Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — "To the Soviet people from the people of the United States — with love," read the banners on 40 tons of donated food and medical supplies that arrived in Moscow Sunday.

It was the first of many shipments planned by the Connecticut-based aid organization, AmeriCares, to help relieve Soviet citizens faced with barren grocery shelves and severe shortages of imported medicines.

Soviet television showed soldiers and students unloading cartons of medical supplies from the Southern Air Transport cargo plane.

Dr. Vasily Drozdov, head of the Republican Children's Clinic, said the medicine, for children under the age of 3, arrived at his hospital late Sunday.

The Soviet Union's chronic shortages of food and medicine have worsened dramatically this winter. Consumers must wait in long lines — often for as long as three hours — for basics such as butter. Sometimes, pushing and shoving breaks out over a scarce item.

The shortages are caused in part by the country's transition from a centralized planning system to a free market, which has not yet taken hold. The centralized distribution system is breaking down in anticipation of changes.

A shortage of foreign currency that forced a cut in imports earlier this year has also caused shortages, although President Mikhail Gorbachev has now won promises of billions of dollars of new credits and aid from abroad.

In addition, the country doesn't have enough rail cars or refrigerated trucks to transport food from the fields to markets, nor are there sufficient storage facilities. Theft and diversion to the black market is rampant.

Thus, despite normal levels of food production and a spectacular grain crop, food is not reaching consumers at the usual subsidized prices.

Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov gave a televised address after the evening news Sunday, calling on people to work together to overcome the food crisis.

"Everyone is pulling in different directions," he said, referring to individual republics and regions that are refusing to sell their food to other districts.

Soviet television said AmeriCares plans to send 450 tons of food and medicine. AmeriCares representative Ty Cordova said he would stay and supervise up to the last shipment to ensure the supplies are not lost in the black market — or in the constant breakdowns of the Soviet cargo transport system.

Drozdov said his clinic so far had received only medicine, and no food. "We don't really need food at the moment. Nutrition at the clinic is all right," he said.

Doctors from the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota and Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City traveled with the AmeriCares staffers and will discuss further supply needs with Soviet medical specialists.

AmeriCares representatives in the United States said an 80,000-pound shipment of food and medical supplies was to be given to the clinic and two orphanages in Moscow. Another 250,000 pounds of supplies is scheduled to be sent to the Soviet Union on Dec. 26, a spokesman for AmeriCares said Saturday.

Rent-A-Cop

If U.S. is going to be a cop, it should charge a fee

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Syndicate

Many Americans, concerned about the Middle East situation, have been asking: "Why should this country try to be the world's policeman?"

There's been no satisfactory answer to that question. Depending on who you believe, we're doing it because we don't like naked aggression, or even fully clothed aggression; or we're doing it because of oil; or we're doing it because we want to prevent Israel from blowing Bagdad away.

Whatever the reasons, we do appear to have become the world's policeman. We've been at it for much of this century, with mixed results: World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Granada, Panama, and now in the desert.

So maybe the question should be: "If we are going to be the world's policeman, why don't we do it on a business basis and show a profit?"

Within this country, the private-security industry has boomed in recent years. Businesses, communities and individuals now hire rent-a-cops to protect their property and persons. The security agencies provide a full range of police services and send a monthly bill.

Since that's what we're now doing as a country, maybe we should follow the example of the security industry.

President Bush has been hopping around the world, trying to round up support for a military adventure against Iraq. He hasn't found much enthusiasm, so that could mean we've been taking the wrong approach all along.

Maybe it would be better if Bush walked into the offices of these timid heads of state and said:

"Good afternoon, Sheik Babbadabbado, I'm George Bush, and I represent U. S. Worldwide Security Inc. I'd like to explain our full range of services to you."

"Ah, yes, Mr. Bush, but I have my own in-house security coverage and we've found that adequate."

"I understand. But are you covered against massive naked aggression, fully garbed aggression or invasion by power-mad tyrants?"

"Well, no, but I don't anticipate such problems."

"Ha-ha, nobody anticipates such problems, Sheik Babbadabbado, but they do have a way of happening. Let's face it, it's a jungle out there. Studies have shown that the naked aggression rate among power-mad tyrants is rising and will do so indefinitely. One can't afford to take chances, can one?"

"You may be right. So what can you do for me?"

"As I said, we have a full range of services. Professionally licensed Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force, plus a part-time manpower pool of reserve personnel who can be called in for special events. And we offer the very latest in state-of-the-art, anti-tyrant technology."

"Missiles?"

"You name it, we've got it. Little ones, big ones. Everything from your basic heat seekers to full-scale ICBMs. We can guarantee the most boom for your buck or your money back."

"Submarines?"

"The very latest in nuclear-powered. And so quiet that they can be in your swimming pool without you knowing it. Here, glance at this brochure and you'll get an idea of what we have to offer."

"Yes, very impressive. Everything from supersonic bombers to fully armed choppers."

"Well, sheik, we didn't get to be the biggest and the best by playing with slingshots."

"I see here that you also offer intelligence services?"

"One of our specialties. We've got round-the-clock spy satellite service. Not to brag, but right now I could punch up my computer here and in minutes have a closeup photo of what your wife is doing at this very moment."

"What about my mistress?"

"No problem. It's all part of the basic package. Now, I'm sure you know what it would cost you to put up your own spy satellite. If you've priced it out, you know that it would be far most cost-effective to use our service."

"How long does it take to install your system?"

"Our technicians are the best, and it can be done in almost no time. You'll have this key pad. When you go to bed at night, you punch the 'Border Secure' button. That means that if any power-mad tyrant crosses your borders, it alerts our main dispatch office in the Pentagon and our security forces are dispatched to apprehend the perpetrators."

"What's the cost?"

"It depends on the client's size and needs. In your case, it would be about $1 billion a month, payable on the first."

"I can live with that. But one other question. What happens if I aspire to become a power-mad tyrant and to engage in naked aggression against a neighbor?"

"That would depend on whether your neighbor and intended victim is also a client of ours."

"And if he is?"

"I'm sure we can work something out. Business is business."

Educational crisis Some drastic changes are needed in our schools

Cody Shearer
North American Syndicate

WASHINGTON — Most Americans probably didn't know it, but November was "Child Safety and Protection Month" — a special period set aside during which local PTA's (Parent Teacher Associations) sponsor educational programs for parents, students and community members about accident prevention for children.

As with most issues in education today, the current education establishment prefers to ignore more beefy subjects. Though child and youth safety concerns are important, what about teachers who are being attacked by students? The United Federation of Teachers reports that during the 1989-90 school year there were 3,386 assaults against teachers in New York City alone, that's a 26 percent increase over the previous school year. Most of these violent actions involved robberies and sex offenses.

Similar increases have occurred against teachers in other big cities too.

What's so incredible about such an unacceptable fact of life is that so few of the injured parties bother to protest. Teachers and students in this country must realize that if they don't risk expressing their opinions, educational conditions are going to continue to deteriorate. It's that simple. Either one risks speaking out against an injustice or they become part of the problem.

More often than not, when students and teachers do protest they get results. Two thousand students and professors at Kansas State University recently opposed a proposal that would have cut most of the programs in two of that institution's divisions and they won. The problem is getting students and faculty to protest. One need only look to the leadership offered by 100,000 French high school students who marched in Paris a few weeks ago and won a guarantee from President Francois Mitterand, for real inspiration.

It's not as if the current education establishment doesn't need shaking up. National Endowment for the Humanities chairman Lynn Cheney issued a critical report last week that blasted higher education. She said teacher preparation courses were "worthless" and most textbooks were "boring." This is pretty strong language from a member of the establishment.

In order to improve American education, Cheney suggests that teachers forget about most of their nonsensical education courses — how to have a discussion in class, etc. — and learn their subjects through experience such as attending a Shakespeare festival. States, she says, should also encourage alternative teacher certification because, as everyone knows, it is possible to become a superior teacher without participating in any formal program.

Some of Cheney's other recommendations include adopting livelier textbooks and requiring college professors to emphasize teaching more than research.

Of course, the central problem with American education is that the current approach of regurgitating information in rote fashion is totally out of step with the times. We need a new educational order that gets students to focus on solving problems, thinking creatively and learning through doing rather than sitting passively and daydreaming in class while teachers lecture. Research has proven that students remember more from what they do than what they hear. Every time such a novel, active approach takes place in or outside the classroom, students benefit.

A case in point can be found in the Young Entrepreneurs Club at Wenonah High School in Birmingham, Ala. At this high risk inner-city school, students learn and care by marketing products and reaping profits. Students there are using welding skills to make barbecue pits out of barrels and laundry bags in home economic rooms, among other activities.

Clearly, what's needed in this country is a radical restructuring of America's schools so that teachers and parents alike have a greater autonomy in educational decisions. And as Cheney points out, there must be new instructional materials and methods to allow for more creative and in-depth learning. If we don't stop assessing students by their ability to memorize facts, and encourage reason and problem-solving skills, we're going to continue producing a thoughtless, inactive, uncaring group of graduates who'll be unable to survive in a highly competitive international marketplace.

Politicians at fault

Editor:

I would like to comment directly to Richard Racy concerning his letter regarding the Martin Luther King holiday (Nov. 16).

First of all, I believe your letter has some merit. However, your bold rhetorical attack on the character of MLK is totally out of line. To describe a person as a "profligate whoremonger, liar, cheat and moral hypocrite" is a cruel judgment that is without support. One can state an opinion without slandering another in order to be recognized. Why did you feel it necessary to debase this man to a level of scum in order to get your point across? Do you have so little confidence and self-worth that you must drag another man's name through the streets of verbal slander in order to be heard?

A gentleman could have written the same letter without resorting to slander. What is your problem?

I did not vote in the last election. However, I am now sorry that I did not. Foolishly enough, I assumed this holiday would be voted in by the majority, if for no other reason than that of moral decency. The civil rights issue was settled a decade ago. However, it is people like you who unfortunately remind us that racial hatred is still alive and thriving.

The Super Bowl issue, which clouds this whole fiasco, is absurd. Unfortunately, Arizona, particularly metropolitan Phoenix, relies heavily upon its tourist and convention trade for much of its revenue. It is the politicians who are to blame for this unfortunate state of affairs. They all knew the ramifications involved if the MLK holiday was not voted in. If the economy of the state of Arizona was such an important issue, why didn't the candidates spend more time canvassing for votes in favor of this holiday. Were they afraid it would cost them the election? Well, what goes around, comes around, and now neither of them have been elected. And by the time one of them is, it will be too late.

There is nothing that can be done to rectify what has transpired. It will be a long time before the state of Arizona will be left off the hook for not voting in favor of the Martin Luther King paid holiday. The backlash both politically and economically is yet to come. No man is an island, and the people of Arizona better take a long look in the mirror of humanity and recognize the fact that civil rights is a reality. People are learning to live in racial peace. However, we have just received a reminder that there are still uneducated, bigoted citizens molding the destiny of a single state.

Others had faults, too

Editor:

After reading Joseph Sobran's editorial column in the Nov. 15 edition of the State Press, I realized that ingrained bigotry is not just a problem of the "undereducated" but rather, crosses all boundaries, becoming obvious in even the most seemingly unlikely candidates. Despite Mr. Sobran's presumably high educational status, his own bias is reflected so immensely, that it seems he cannot observe the irony in his questioning of the worthiness of a Martin Luther King holiday, and his unquestioning acceptance of likewise other

"great men" of our past, who we have almost unanimously chosen to honor. If one examines practically any of the "saintlike" founding fathers of our past, rumored flaws would come to surface just as surely as they have for Dr. King. We honor Christopher Columbus though there are rumors that accuse him of immoral sexual behavior as well as his alleged death from syphilis. Whether these rumors can be discredited or validated are of little importance to me as I realize that it is not the man himself that our society should be honoring, but his accomplishments. And then there's

President Lincoln. True, he is credited with passing the Emancipation Proclamation, but there are varied accounts given of his belief in blacks being innately inferior to whites. Of course, there's also "good ol' George," whom we all know "never told a lie." History suggests his personal belief in blacks' inferiority, namely by his adamant opposition to black men becoming soldiers. But I don't seem to recall any intense amounts of opposition to honoring these "great" men. Oh, but in their cases we're not to take into consideration these allegations of their personal flaws. I see now. It's their accomplishments only that we are to consider, right? Sounds fair to me.

It's finally becoming obvious to me that many in our society simply do not regard the furthering of civil rights for those previously denied these rights as anything to celebrate. In fact, many appear utterly terrified and threatened by the very thought. With such deeply ingrained racism being exhibited in Joseph Sobran's editorial, I realized my wait shall be lengthy for the day that I can say "with liberty and justice for all" and really mean it.

When Kahane came to the door, Lee said he told him another Hillel program was going on, and he would not be allowed to interrupt it.

"He said, 'If you have me arrested, think of all the publicity it would give me.' My response to him was that I wouldn't be intimidated by a Nazi, I wouldn't be intimidated by an anti-Semite, I wouldn't be intimidated by a fanatic Arab who wanted to interrupt a program here at Hillel, and I'm not going to be intimidated by another Jew," Lee said.

Kahane eventually was arrested. Lee said Kahane had a terrible hatred for those who disagreed with him.

"The experiences that I had with him, to me, revealed the incredible power of his personality and the essential wickedness of his personality," Lee said. "He was one of the few wicked people I ever met."

Ben-Gigi said he resents the actions of extremist groups — both Israeli and Palestinian — and extremist leaders like Kahane.

"We protest this kind of way of reaching an end," he said, "While Jewish extremists such as Kahane are in danger, it's not the same case with the Arabs, however, it's the opposite — their moderates are in danger, not because of (Israelis), but because they are assassinating their own moderates."

Ben-Gigi said Isam Sirtauie, one of the most prominent Palestinian leaders, was assassinated by his own people because he called for moderation in relations with Israel.

"It's a tough position to be a moderate Arab right now because the voice and the action of the extremists are prevailing," he said.

As for the death of Kahane, Ben-Gigi said it's hard to say if many Israelis shed tears over his assassination, but he said many feel resentful of the violent act.

"We do feel that the value of human life is paramount to any person, and this is not a way to set a political end," he said.

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents over the weekend:

- While trying to apprehend a trespasser at Sun Devil Stadium, a police officer damaged the front bumper of her patrol vehicle when she hit a wooden box containing events programs. Estimated damage is $75.
- Four males not affiliated with ASU were found sleeping on the west side of the University Activity Center and told police they were waiting to buy tickets to "Poison." They were told to leave the area.
- Two ASU students were involved in a car accident on the southwest side of Parking Structure Four located on Lemon Street. Estimated damage is $100.
- An unknown person threw rocks at the campus directory on Gammage Parkway. Estimated damage is $2,000.
- The side window of an ASU student's vehicle was shattered while it was parked in the south lot at the Community Services Building. Estimated damage is $200.
- Two males not affiliated with ASU were arrested, cited and released after allegedly fighting in Tempe Center.
- The glass from two fire extinguisher cases were broken on the 10th floor of Manzanita Residence Hall, causing the activation of the dorm's alarm. Estimated damage is $100.
- Police received reports of two males trying to open dorm room doors on the 13th floor of Manzanita Residence Hall. Police talked to one of the suspects and warned him about trespassing, but the other suspect fled the area.

•A yellow, orange and red Motiv Sonora bicycle, valued at $600, was stolen from the bicycle racks at the ASU Student Recreation Center.

•A red Alpine bicycle, valued at $450, was stolen from the west side of the Student Recreation Center.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Friday:

•An attempted armed robbery occurred at Security Pacific Bank, 1705 E. Broadway Rd., when a suspect placed a gun against the head of a 19-year-old man using the ATM machine and asked him how much money he could withdraw.

The victim stalled the suspect and obtained a can of Mace from his car, which he sprayed on the suspect. The suspect ran a short distance, and, as the victim drove by the suspect, the suspect fired a round of bullets into the driver's door of the victim's vehicle and fled the scene.

The suspect is an 18- to-19-year-old black male, 5-foot-5 to 6-foot tall, thin. He was last seen wearing jeans, an orange or tan T-shirt and a baseball cap.

•A 25-year-old ASU student was in her bedroom when her roommate saw someone crouching down underneath the window and peering inside. The roommate, also a University student, said he yelled at the suspect and chased him around the house. The suspect fled the area.

The suspect is a 6-foot-3 black male, in his 20s, with short black hair. He was last seen wearing a blue sweatsuit.

Three new ways to survive college.

With Apple's introduction of three new Macintosh* computers, meeting the challenges of college life just got a whole lot easier. Because now, everybody can afford a Macintosh.

The Macintosh Classic is our most affordable model, yet it comes with everything you need—including a hard disk drive. The Macintosh LC combines color capabilities with affordability. And the Macintosh IIfx is perfect for students who need a computer with extra power and expandability.

No matter which Macintosh you choose, you'll have a computer that lightens your work load without giving you another tough subject to learn. Every Macintosh computer is easy to set up and even easier to master. And when you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. That's because thousands of available programs all work in the same, consistent manner. You can even share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to Apple's versatile SuperDrive™, which reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple® II floppy disks.

See the new Macintosh computers for yourself, and find out how surviving college just got a whole lot easier.

ASU United Way meets fundraising goal

By KRIS MAYES
State Press

A late surge in donations enabled ASU United Way volunteers to overcome Arizona's blackening economy and meet their $195,000 goal in the annual fundraising drive.

"All year long we were worried about not making our goal," said Steve Patterson, campus coordinator of the campaign that began in September and concluded last week. "We're really overwhelmed by the response of the ASU community."

With donations still trickling in, ASU's total is expected to reach $200,000, officials said.

Derek Yaeger, communications coordinator of the Valley of the Sun United Way, said ASU's contribution was $8,000 more than the entire Tempe area contribution.

"The effort by ASU has been terrific, and that's evident in that they're going to exceed the amount of money we had hoped they would raise," Yaeger said.

The United Way organizes and distributes philanthropic donations from the community to over 200 local social agencies.

Yaeger's organization, which supervises all metropolitan United Way funds, has amassed over $18 million this year.

Approximately 200 faculty and staff volunteers took part in the "Catch the Caring Spirit" fundraising drive at ASU.

According to Patterson, everyone from "plumbers and air-conditioning mechanics to the president of the University" was involved in the project, which garnered 2,350 pledges and cash donations.

The volunteers, who "carried with them the message of the United Way," were responsible for the success of ASU's campaign, he said.

Although ASU students were not volunteers in this year's fundraiser, Patterson said the students participated in the "Bed Races," a recent Homecoming activity that benefited the United Way.

The publicity from the campaign will help educate the student body about the United Way program, he said.

College council to collect funds for children's club

By LAURALYN BEATTIE
State Press

The giving season has arrived, and members of one ASU organization have dug deep into their pockets to scrape up enough time to raise funds.

"Basically we wanted to help the community and give students an opportunity to be more involved," said Mike Evans, vice president of the Liberal Arts and Science College Council. "Most of us don't have much time right now because of finals, but we can each take a minute to donate a few dollars.

"This from a bunch of us can add up to a few thousand which will really help the needy kids."

Members of the organization will man a table in front of the Social Science Building from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day this week to raise money for the Tempe Boys and Girls Club.

"We'll also have big bottles out there to collect spare change," said Andrew Krals, the college council's publicity director said.

Evans said that as well as collecting money from ASU students, the group plans to approach members of local businesses for charitable donations.

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences council has set a $1000 goal — $600 from businesses and $400 from ASU students, said Chris Gunnare, the group's activities vice president.

"We'll see how much they are able to raise, and then we'll come up with something that the club can use," said Terry Roverts, executive director of the council. "We've got a wish list a mile long."

The Tempe club's necessity list includes pool tables, books for the tutoring program, games, basketballs, basketball uniforms, dance uniforms and computers.

"We're always looking for donations to help out our kids,"

Roberts said. "We run into a lot of road blocks trying to find donations to keep up the quality of our services."

Donna Daulton, the Tempe Boys and Girls Club marketing director, said the program "provides a place for children to come when they would otherwise be out on the street."

Krals said the college council has taken up this cause for two reasons.

"First, of course, we're doing it for charity and secondly, we want to get the word out that we (the college council) are here," he said. "In the past, CLAS has been a ghost group and people didn't know it existed. For the past few years, 30 to 40 clubs have been operating without representation. We want people to know that that has changed."

Evans said next semester the council plans to sponsor a gubernatorial debate between Terry Goddard and J. Fife Symington. In addition, it is considering a "speaker's corner" so students can voice their opinions.

Gulf

officers urged the administration to show restraint and give economic sanctions against Iraq more time to work. The hearings resume Monday with testimony by the administration.

But Baker said there was an "excellent chance" Saddam would withdraw from Kuwait once he understands the depth of opposition to him.

A U.S.-led multinational force has arrayed more than 350,000 troops against Saddam in the Persian Gulf. U.S. forces, now numbering more than 240,000, are expected to swell to around 400,000 by next month.

Abdul Amir Anbari, the Iraqi ambassador to the United Nations, was asked if his country was prepared to talk about withdrawing from Kuwait.

"We would be willing to talk about all the issues that exist in the region," he said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" program.

"Our president made it quite clear . . . that there is no exception and we make no reservation and no condition," he said when pressed on the issue.

Some American officials have questioned whether the Middle East will ever be safe as long as Hussein remains in power, possesses chemical weapons and is encouraging a nuclear program.

Cheney, on ABC, said the "overall focus" of U.S. policy is "the long-term proposition if Saddam Hussein is not stopped. It's the prospect of having a man who has acquired an enormous force," he said.

In August, Bush said "some countries around the world" hope Hussein would be overthrown by his own people. And he has said that Iraq's nuclear program is a threat.

While the United States remains concerned about Hussein's weapons, Baker said "We would have to find a way to address those issues" in the aftermath of a resolution of the Kuwaiti crisis.

The three U.S. officials raised doubts about the sanctions against Iraq, which Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has encouraged.

"I want to see sanctions work," Kennedy said on NBC. "They are effective . . . I believe we can avoid war and I believe it is important we do avoid war."

Elections

Germany last voted freely as one nation in November 1932. Two months later, Hitler was named chancellor and soon drove through laws depriving non-Nazis of their seats in parliament. Hitler's designs triggered World War II, which laid waste to Europe and carved two ideologically opposed German nations out of one.

Kohl automatically became the leader of all Germany when the two states merged on Oct. 3.

Even as Germans looked to a united future, the election was shadowed by a reminder of a dark past. Officials were seeking entry to a Soviet military hospital near Berlin to arrest former East German leader Erich Honecker.

Honecker, 78, is accused of personally issuing shoot-to-kill orders to prevent people from fleeing the Communist state he ruled with an iron hand for 18 years before being swept from power in October 1989. A warrant for his arrest was issued on Friday.

The polling institute Infas, basing its forecasts on early vote counts, gave Kohl's conservative Christian Democrats and their Bavarian sister party, the Christian Social Union, 43.5 percent of the vote. Kohl's junior coalition partner, the centrist Free Democrats, were expected to win about 10.9 percent, Infas said.

The parties have already said they would form a new coalition if Kohl won.

authorizing any additional spending. Because of the aversion to spending, it may be difficult for agencies, such as the universities, to meet their legislative agendas, he said.

Agencies still could secure funding for necessary projects, he said, adding that when lawmakers see the negative effects massive budget cuts have on different governmental programs, their attitude on spending might change.

"The people who are much against it now," Fahey said, "are still going to feel a little differently when general rhetoric is translated into specific pain on agencies, who then passes specific pain on to constituencies through either layoffs or slack services."

The Arizona Students' Association has asked Hermon, along with members of the Arizona Board of Regents, faculty leaders, legislators and lobbyists, to discuss methods leaders from the three state universities can use to achieve their legislative agendas.

"The whole concept of last year's lobbying efforts (was) really counterproductive," said State Relations Director Rob Miller, an ASA delegate. "There was little or no cooperation between ASA and (other University special interests)."

The lack of cooperation prevented the three state universities from realizing their legislative agendas, he added.

ASA Executive Director Larry L'Heureux agreed, adding that students, by supporting faculty goals, would indirectly boost undergraduate education.

"If we can work together and complement each other, we'll be much better off," he said.

Abuse

possessiveness and anger aimed at inanimate objects all are warning signs women should watch for in the men they date.

"Does he want to know where you were, and who you were with?" Grates said, adding that this behavior can signify a potential batterer.

ASU students are not immune to the violence, Grates said. "We've had ASU students and MCC (Mesa Community College) students here," she said.

But Amelia Elling, the volunteer coordinator for the Center Against Sexual Assaults in Tempe, said women must be aware there is no real, single warning sign that points out potential woman-beaters.

Elling agreed that the victim and the abuser both have certain characteristics, such as being traditionally oriented.

"When the man is possessive or jealous of her talking to another man, she kind of likes that," she said. "It makes her feel good."

If a woman waits to bring matters up when her spouse or boyfriend is in a good mood, then "something is a little bit wrong with that situation," Elling said.

Two weeks ago, a 33-year-old ASU student filed a police report after being assaulted by her live-in boyfriend during an argument. The incident occurred after she gathered items to leave the apartment for the evening and her boyfriend pushed her in the chest. She did not file charges.

The FBI reports that while 40 percent of all women who are murdered are killed by partners, only 10 percent of men are murdered by their partners.

Grates said that if a woman is slapped by her boyfriend or spouse, the situation must be taken seriously, and the woman must realize they are not responsible for that action.

A Message to President Bush:

NO WAR FOR OIL IN THE MIDDLE EAST

We urge you to reverse the U.S. military buildup in the Persian Gulf and Saudi Arabia. The United States should support international non-military negotiated efforts to resolve the conflicts in the Middle East. While we join you in condemning Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, an escalation of the military conflict will only lead to great human suffering.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

Revive with VIVARIN.

Hidden deep in downtown Mesa is a 'no gimmicks, no nothin', straight-in-your-face blues band' that's about to break out of obscurity. Listen in on a set and find out why the Bailey boys are really

Blues Brothers

By RANDY HAWKINS
State Press

"Play some Marshall Tucker," one of Lil' Peckers' cowpoke-type patrons yelled at the top of his lungs.

"Yeah," added the man's pal. "Tucker."

As drunk as the two were, their requests sounded like "pla shummm Mrzshlll Tkkrr." Both men must have spent some time in the sun recently — their necks were as red as all get out.

The Bailey Bros. conferred among themselves for a moment, then, in answer to the fans' requests, launched into Bo Diddley's "Road Runner," followed by Howlin' Wolf's "Highway 49."

The two men, although a bit confused that their requests had fallen upon deaf ears, started getting into the bluesy jam, and even asked some of the overly made up cowchicks in attendance to dance.

The Bailey Bros. have an irresistibly powerful sound. When asked to describe the band, Nick Bailey, the 22-year-old bass player who's usually quiet, calls the Bailey Bros. a "straight-in-your-face blues band."

"I don't stray from (the blues) that much," said the business-like guitarist/vocalist Russ Bailey, Nick's 25-year-old brother.

Thirty-two-year-old drummer Craig Johnson, the oldest and most vocal member of the group, added that the band has "no gimmicks, no nothin'."

These statements are immediately obvious upon seeing the band. The Bailey Bros. play every Monday and Tuesday at a Mesa bar, Lil' Peckers, where the front door sticks, the parking lot is muddy, and the decor consists mainly of neon beer signs in the shape of musical instruments.

But the band's sound gets "straight-in-your-face" the second you walk in the door. The Bailey Bros., in full swing, hit you like a ton of bricks. Forget about talking if you're in a joint these guys play; they set their amps at 11 and let the music do the talking. "We've been known to play all night," grins Johnson.

The Bailey Bros. got their start in New York, about five hours north of New York City. Back in April 1988 when they started, the Bailey Bros. really were the "Bailey brothers." A third brother, Livingston "Stoney" Bailey, played on drums for six months. When he left the band, Johnson was recruited to fill in.

The band played in New York and Vermont for about two years, mostly at clubs and "a lot of private parties," Russ said. They even had a one-hour concert broadcast on the local PBS station.

But New York and the Bailey Bros. were an ill-fated match. In August, Russ packed up and moved to sunny Arizona. The rest of the band followed shortly, and soon secured their Lil' Peckers gig and a manager, Bob Cavalier.

Explanations about why the band relocated vary depending on who you ask. Russ said the motivation of the band was "to get away from the cold." He added that the Arizona music scene is much more centralized than back home, where the band routinely traveled 150 miles for a gig.

But Cavalier said that Russ came out here to be with his girlfriend, who moved here to attend ASU, and the band just kind of followed him.

Both stories have the ring of truth. After hearing about the time the band's bus broke down last winter in the 30-below weather, the Bailey Bros. were probably looking for a change of scene, and Russ' girlfriend provided them with the perfect opportunity.

Now that they're in Arizona, the band has been working on "trying to drum up some people," Russ said. If their East-Mesa gig at Lil' Peckers is out of your way, feel free to check them out at the Vine Dec. 28 and 29, from 9 p.m. to closing. If you'll be out of town for the holidays, don't worry. They'll be coming to the MU for a Thursday lunchtime show sometime in January.

"It's been going real well since we've been here," Russ said.

"We've already got a following, kind of," Johnson added.

The band is drawing crowds not only at Lil' Peckers, but also at rehearsals at Russ' home. "We go outside and people are hanging out," Russ said. He added that it's okay if they're loud, because the "neighbors are deaf."

Whether that happened before or after the band started practicing there, no one knows for sure.

In the future, Russ said he wants to see the band "make records."

Johnson said he wants the band to "sell records." Nick wants to "buy an RV."

The band's repertoire consists mainly of cover versions of classic blues songs, but the band does have about 12 songs of their own, with 10 more in the works. But the Bailey Bros. don't have a tape out, and they probably won't have one for a while.

"We're not gonna go out and make our own album," explained Russ optimistically. "We'll wait and let someone else do it for us."

There's something quaint about any band that has such a wide-eyed view of the record industry. The band prints up a play list and an equipment list for their press releases and their publicity package consists of a black-and-white snapshot.

In a world of digital sampling, over-eager marketing, and rampant commercialism, Johnson is more than happy to sum up the band's attitude.

"We don't do backflips (and) we don't lipsync."

Costner excels as star and director of 'Dances With Wolves'

By JON WALZ
State Press

Kevin Costner has created an impossible film.

Impossible in that even the concept of an epic-length, subtitled western to be produced in the 1990's, would not have even made it through the presentation stages at most Hollywood studios.

Impossible, in that a studio allowing a big-name star to do a project that could be termed "non-commercial" and "un-bankable," is very risky not only to the reputation of the studio, but also to the reputation of the star.

"Dances With Wolves" is directed by, co-produced by and stars Kevin Costner. Orion Pictures conceivably took a big gamble in allowing Costner a free hand in developing and presenting this very personal film. It is a gamble that has paid off in the largest and most magnificent way possible. Perhaps not since "Citizen Kane" has such a masterpiece been produced by a first-time auteur.

Costner stars as Lt. John J. Dunbar. He is in the midst of the Civil War, fighting in Tennessee. After an uncommon act of valor, where he virtually gives himself up as a Christ-like martyr (a theme prevalent to the entire work), he is given the opportunity to transfer to any post he desires. He goes west to the plains and frontiers — his dream since childhood has been to see the West before it is gone.

Dunbar arrives at Fort Sedgewick in South Dakota, only to find it abandoned. He makes the best of the situation and ends up spending most of his time writing in his journal and cleaning up the fort. One afternoon a Native American pays a visit to the camp to steal Dunbar's horse. Dunbar knew the rumors about the "wrath" of the Native Americans, but disregarded those rumors as the mystic grandeur of his surroundings engulfed his soul.

Out of curiosity, and perhaps out of boredom, he decides to pay a visit to his native neighbors nearby. He hopes to make them realize that, although he is white, his presence at the fort is one of peace. After a few false starts, he makes head-way in attempting to communicate with them. Slowly a reciprocity evolves.

Dunbar's fascination with this Native American culture draws him further and further in, until he is literally adopted by the culture and given a name: "Dances With Wolves" — a name given because of Dunbar's friendship with a wild wolf called "Two Socks."

The accuracy and the effort given to recreate the look of the time is awe-inspiring. The natives' true Lakota language is used at all times by the native actors and is subtitled into English. The costumes and adornment are wonderful recreations of authentic period Native American garb.

Kevin Costner pointed out that, "The steps I've taken in this movie — to get the Native Americans in an environment that looks authentic for the era, to give them the best costumes I could based on research, to give them lines to speak that make them sound like real people, to put them in situations that anybody can relate to — fulfills the obligation any filmmaker has when he enters into a world . . . to give it as much honesty as he can."

The film probably could have been titled "Dunbar of South Dakota", in reference to the thematic similarities between it and David Lean's "Lawrence of Arabia."

Unfortunately, in "Dances With Wolves," unlike "Lawrence," Costner tries to single-handedly make apologies for the misconceptions Americans have concerning the Native American cultures — past and present — and attempts to counter-balance those images using negative projection.

In the last half of the film, the tables are turned on the "traditional" western-film genre. The whites are presented as the rude, vulgar, irrational tyrants and the natives as the cultured, rational, civilized beings. Although you may not buy into it right away, in hindsight, the message becomes very poignant.

Films as big as "Dances With Wolves" typically live or die on the virtues of the direction. Costner never stumbles over his self-induced tasks and allows much freedom and lightness to enter the milieu of the film. He avoids focusing the film on himself primarily, and allows the natives' culture to be the prominent focus.

Dean Semler's cinematography is beyond fault and is most impressive during the numerous pan shots to the horizon over the plains. It is especially awe-inspiring during the infamous buffalo hunt scene, where he literally placed cameras in the path of the stampede. These images are some of the most impressive to be captured on film in awhile.

The film is aided by the extra-wide Cinemascope format, which allows for almost 30 percent more image than a standard format film.

"Dances With Wolves" is an uncompromised work of creative genius. Costner has done the world of film a favor by sharing his talent and vision.

"Where are we going?"
 "Crazy." "Oh."

Wanna-be writers get ready, big-time editors are visiting

By AARON LEVY
 State Press

Attention all psuedo writers, poets, playwrights, screenwriters, scientists, mathematicians, leisure studies majors — just everybody: You need to get your literary booties over to the Nursing Building, Room 101 tonight at 7:30 to listen to two nationally recognized writers, teachers and editors.

Robley Wilson from North American Review and Christopher Merrill, poetry editor of Peregrine Smith Books, will speak informally about publication of creative work in the United States.

Merrill is the author of two collections of poetry, "Workbook," and "Fevers and Tides." He edits the Peregrine Smith Poetry Series, which publishes two books of poetry each year, and he is a contributing editor to "Tyonoyi," a literary journal. Merrill is also the director of the Santa Fe Writers' Conference and the Taos Conference on Writing and the Natural World.

Wilson, on the other hand, teaches literature and creative writing at the University of Northern Iowa and has been editing The North American Review, a 75-year-old publication, since 1969.

"We're heavily into fiction, but we also do poetry and non-fiction," Wilson said. "We do a lot of fiction because I'm a fiction writer and I prefer it."

Wilson has been a rather busy writer. He is the author of four short story collections — "Terrible Kisses," "The Pleasures of Manhood," "Living Alone" and "Dancing for Men." His novel "The Victim's Daughter" will be published in 1991.

Wilson has also had a slew of poems appear in various publications and his first full-length book of poems, "Kingdoms of the Ordinary," received the 1986 Agnes Lynch Starrett prize.

Meanwhile, Wilson edits one of the most widely read creative writing publications in the nation. The publication receives 5,000 submissions a year, but only prints 35.

"You don't have to read them very far sometimes," Wilson said when asked whether he actually read 5,000 stories a year.

Wilson also teaches creative writing at the University in a workshop arena and said teaching is just a matter of encouraging the good stuff and trying to be kind about the bad.

"I have only one word for young writers and I've been saying it for years — patience," Wilson said. "There's nothing worse than wanting to be published too soon or thinking that publication is a big deal that some writers think it is. I think it's more important to be slow and steady than to be a flash."

Wilson quips that the only reason it's important to be slow and steady is because he's slow and steady and getting to be an old man, but if he were in his 20s he would have the complete opposite outlook of impatience and aggressiveness.

"I think you need time to mature, to find your voice, and your subject," he said more seriously. "And you need time to live."

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Two sweethearts have married after mending a disagreement that kept them apart for almost 70 years.

Charles Jones and Thelma Colvin dated as teenagers in the 1920's, but a spat at a street party in Springfield ended their romance — temporarily.

Jones broke off a two-year relationship with Colvin after seeing her strolling with another man, despite her protests of innocence.

When they met again last fall, both widowed, the dispute no longer mattered. They got married Thursday in Decatur's Macon County Courthouse.

"I still think she was seeing that other guy," Jones, 84, joked.

His bride, 85, insisted she wasn't.

"I just happened to meet a chum I had known in school while I was out that evening," she said. "There was nothing in it, but Charles didn't believe me."

ASU hits downside with tight loss to Drake

ASU center Isaac Austin loses control of the ball in the Sun Devils' 94-93 loss to Drake Saturday.

By PAUL CORO
State Press

ASU basketball coach Bill Frieder warned you there would be days like Saturday.

But he did not say that one of the lowpoints in his youth-laden squad's "ups and downs" would come against a team like Drake, who is predicted to finish ninth in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Frieder's Sun Devils (3-1) learned their lesson Saturday night in front of 6,560 at the University Activity Center as the Bulldogs (1-1) caught them napping and pulled off a 94-93 shocker at the buzzer.

"We didn't do anything right from start to finish," Frieder said.

Actually, ASU did not do much wrong at the end as guard Lynn Collins stripped the ball from Drake's Mark Prylow on a 3-point try with four seconds left. Collins then lost his hold on the ball and Bulldog freshman guard Travis Mays sunk a 22-foot supershot as the buzzer sounded.

"It's our fault because we put them in the position to do that," Frieder said. "It's a tough loss, but that's how kids learn."

One "kid" who was noticeably absent and missed down the stretch was freshman forward Jamal Faulkner. After ignoring Frieder during a dead ball, Faulkner was benched for the final 15 minutes of the game with the Sun Devils leading, 63-52.

"I don't know what Jamal's problem was," Frieder said. "He didn't come sit by me so I didn't put him back in."

In the next five minutes, Drake trimmed the lead to two with a 16-7 run. And from the time Faulkner left until there was 5:23 remaining in the game, ASU went without a field goal and allowed the Bulldogs to take the lead.

"We didn't capitalize on a lot of mistakes that their team made and therefore we lost against a team we should have beat," Sun Devil guard Tarence Wheeler said.

Drake, who is without two of its starters because of a three-game NCAA suspension, outrebounded ASU, 46-36, despite not having a man over 6-foot-8. Sun Devil center Isaac Austin, with a decided size advantage, scored 12 on just eight field goal attempts. Austin did come one away from his career-high 14 rebounds.

"I felt we should have got the ball inside more, but that's for the coaches to decide," Austin said.

"I think we started varying our offense, taking it upon ourselves instead of thinking about the team."

In several fast-break situations Saturday, ASU broke down in transition by either pulling up for a long shot or forcing a bad shot by not passing in man-advantage situations. Much of the Sun Devils' problems stemmed from the Bulldogs' second-half press.

"(The press) took away what we had to do offensively," Frieder said. "We had a lot of problems finishing the play. Time after time, we should have a basket or three points and we end up getting one."

ASU shot just 36 percent in the second half, including 27 percent from 3-point range, as its shot selection deteriorated with its lead.

"We played like a bad JV squad on the college level," Faulkner said. "Selfishness cost us that game."

"The offense didn't flow correctly. We don't have one superstar. Everybody's got to play together."

Like last Saturday when they scraped out a win against SMU after upsetting Kansas earlier in the week, the Sun Devils came with a second-night lackluster performance again after trouncing NAU Saturday.

"I was disappointed," Frieder said. "I think we're mentally tired."

Houston says sayonara to Devils

TOKYO (AP) — Houston's David Klingler passed for a record 716 yards and seven touchdowns, including a 95-yarder, to lead the 11th-ranked Houston Cougars to a 62-45 victory over ASU at the Tokyo Dome Saturday.

Klingler then did the unexpected, blaming his gaudy totals on some high-quality opposition provided by the Sun Devils.

"I don't like close games. I'd like to just go out there and get it over with quickly, but they forced us to keep scoring," Klingler said after the 4 hour, 10-minute scoring fest.

An estimated 40,000 mostly Japanese spectators were delighted with plenty of their favorite thing in American football — long passes — and a hint of a fourth-quarter comeback by ASU.

Houston finished the season at 10-1, and ASU at 4-7.

Klingler's 716 passing yards surpassed the record of 690 set by Matt Vogler of Texas Christian in a 56-35 loss to Houston on Nov. 3. Klingler, not one to be outdone on the scoreboard or stat sheet, had 563 yards that day, then the ninth-highest total ever.

The performance left Klingler with 5,140 passing yards for the season, 271 more than Brigham Young's Ty Detmer, whose last game of the season is the Holiday Bowl against Texas A&M on Dec. 29.

Klingler, who already held the NCAA record for most touchdown passes in a game with 11 against Eastern Washington on Nov. 17, also broke the NCAA mark for scoring tosses in a season with 54. Jim McMahon of Brigham Young held the old mark with 47 in 1980.

Klingler iced the victory over the Sun Devils with a 95-yard scoring play to Emmanuel Hazard with 1:32 left.

"That was a big, big time play. That's as good as you'll see in the NFL," Houston coach John Jenkins said.

Houston was leading 55-45 at the time, after two fourth-quarter touchdowns by ASU and the only interception against Klingler, by Philippi Sparks on the ASU 10 with 3:10 left to play.

"We never felt like we were out of it. We kept playing hard and we felt that we could score just like they could," said ASU's Kelvin Fisher, who scored twice, on a 4-yard run and a 19-yard pass from Justin.

Leonard Russell also helped keep the game from turning into a rout, rushing for 129 yards, including scoring runs of 42, 13 and 16 yards. Russell's longest run came as the Sun Devils gambled on a 4th-and-one play that set the stage for the wide open affair. He also caught a 16-yard scoring pass from Justin.

The ASU quarterback finished the day with 33 completions in 63 tries for 474 yards with one interception.

ASU coach Larry Marmie wasn't happy with his team's showing.

"We gave up big plays. Some people were out of position, and some credit goes to their execution."

Women's basketball overcomes sluggish start for 3rd victory

By KRIS TIMMONS
State Press

Followers of the ASU women's basketball team, who walked in late to Saturday's game at the University Activity Center, must have been somewhat surprised to see that the Sun Devils were down, 4-0, to the University of San Diego less than two minutes into the game.

But they probably didn't think it would last long, thinking it was just a matter of the Sun Devils getting back on track and running away from the Toreros.

They were wrong.

The Sun Devils just seemed to sink further and further into the ground as the Toreros eventually built up a 16-7 lead after nine minutes.

"We didn't expect to be down," ASU coach Maura McHugh said. "We came out really cold and not shooting well. Mentally, we just weren't as sharp as we needed to be."

But the Sun Devils (3-0) did battle back and won the game, 76-68.

"It was ugly, but we were just happy to get the W," ASU junior guard Michele Cherry said.

After the slow start, things started to go the Sun Devils'

Volleyball season ends with 2 losses at WIVC

By GREG ZELE
State Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The season ended abruptly for the ASU volleyball team Friday and then it ended again.

The Sun Devils were given every opportunity to reach the finals in the Women's Invitational Volleyball Championship, but when push came to shove ASU came up empty-handed twice.

After losing to Loyola Marymount in five games in the morning, ASU appeared to be out of contention for a berth into the WIVC championship round.

William and Mary came through in the clutch, however, and breathed new life into the Sun Devils' hopes when it upset the Lions, who were undefeated in the tourney, just prior to ASU's contest against Memphis State.

This last-minute reprieve from the gallows set up a scenario where a Sun Devil victory would have put them in a tie with LMU and forced a one-game playoff.

ASU squandered a golden opportunity when, up 14-12 in game four against the Tigers, the Sun Devils blew match point and let MSU score four straight to take the game and force a crucial fifth game.

The Tigers proved to be too tough for ASU down the stretch and won the deciding game, 15-7.

ASU and MSU split the first two games of the match with the Tigers taking an early 15-8 advantage before the Sun Devils battled back to tie the match with a 15-3 victory in the second game.

ASU coach Patti Snyder declined to be interviewed immediately following the loss and members of the team were unavailable for comment.

Earlier Friday, ASU dropped a heartbreaker to LMU, 15-13, 12-15, 15-11, 12-15 and 10-15.

The Sun Devils began the match against the Lions full of confidence, quickly building a 12-2 lead in game one. With the game clearly in hand at 14-6, ASU let the Lions back into the game by blowing game point five times before prevailing.

In game two, the Sun Devils watched their 7-2 edge evaporate before their eyes as LMU's digging defense refused to yield.

"We were a much better offensive team, but they were much better on defense," Snyder said.

With the match even at one game apiece, the third game saw the Lions jump out to a 4-0 advantage before ASU fought back to tie the score with its fourth point coming on a massive block by senior middle blocker Tina Berg.

Berg, who recorded four solo blocks and five assists, had a big game teaming up with senior outside hitter Kelly Plaisted and sophomore middle blocker Amy Nelson for several key blocks.

The seldom-used Nelson came off the bench and was instrumental to the Sun Devil victory in game three.

"I can get into the flow of the game on the bench so

Ice Devils crushed by UofA Women's hoops for 3rd, 4th time this season

By DARREN URBAN
State Press

One needs only to look at the difference in uniforms between the ASU hockey club and its rivals from the UofA to see the Ice Cats' superiority.

While the Ice Devils' attire looks good enough for a club, it does not compare to UofA's professional outfits. And neither does ASU's play, as the Ice Cats proved Saturday in a 10-3 victory, their fourth blowout in four games versus the Ice Devils this season.

"It seems like we give up a couple goals and get down," said Coach Jim Manguso. "It takes awhile for us to get back into the game."

After losing Friday by a 13-4 count, ASU (7-4) controlled the first 10 minutes of the game, forcing constant pressure on the UofA net.

"We came out with some intensity," junior goalie Matt Malec said. "We were trying to stir it up."

Senior forward Brian Smith had a breakaway attempt at 10:13, but his shot was stopped, and the Ice Cats took over.

UofA forward Dan Olberg knocked a backhand pass Malec at 11:05 to begin the scoring, and the Ice Cats (6-0) exploded for a 5-0 lead after the first period, despite outshooting ASU by only one, 11-10.

UofA methodically controlled the second period, adding two scores before ASU was able to put a puck into the net. Junior forward John Giblin, the recipient of solid passing, scored at 5:23 to pull the Ice Devils to 7-1.

Despite the goal, the puck was held by the Ice Cats for a majority of the period, save for a few rushes by junior forward Abel Moreno. UofA finished the period with a 9-1 lead, outshooting ASU 23-9.

The third period was anti-climactic, as the Ice Cats ran down the clock with their stickhandling, in addition to getting 21 shots to ASU's nine. The Ice Devils added the last goals, Giblin with a breakaway at 9:19, and junior forward Drew Spesard converted with 1:08 left for the 10-3 final.

"It hurts just because it's UofA," Malec said. "Even though they are better, you feel the same way."

Senior forward Jay Giacalone said the loss could help the Ice Devils in their quest for an invitation to the hockey club championship tournament.

"In a way it's good for us to take a beating," Giacalone said. "As a growing program, it gets us to dig deeper."

The game was relatively clean and penalty-free, although sophomore defenseman Jason Muzychenko and UofA's Larue Mayo were ejected for fighting with 4:15 left in the game.

"We play the way UofA plays it," Manguso said. "We're not going to go out and scrap with them unless they want to."

"The game was unexpectedly clean," Giacalone said.

way. USD was called on a backcourt violation, a five-second inbound pass violation and a blocking foul which enabled ASU to cut the lead to four.

The Toreros came back to life after the ASU rally and increased their lead to 10 at the 6:46 mark of the first half.

McHugh then called a key timeout to get the Sun Devils back on track. ASU went on a 7-0 run and cut the USD lead to one by halftime.

"We needed to pick up the intensity," Cherry said. "We weren't playing as well as we could have."

McHugh said the timeout and the subsequent Sun Devil rally were key points in the game.

"That was our game plan," McHugh said. "We needed to play that way to keep the intensity up. We could have easily folded."

when I come off I'm ready to go," said Nelson, who recorded three kills and three block assists in three games.

After enjoying a four-point edge for much of game four, ASU blew a 12-8 lead late in the game as LMU went on a seven-point tear to win and force a fifth game.

The Sun Devils traded points with the Lions for much of the rally-scored game until, with the score tied 9-9, ASU allowed LMU five straight points and fell behind for good.

"I'm very disappointed that when the

We did everything in the book to help them win."

ASU started out the second half strong, taking a one-point lead at the 18:15 mark. The Sun Devils never fell behind again as the Toreros could only muster enough points to tie ASU at 63 with 4:34 left in the game.

"This is going to help us," McHugh said. "We needed a game like this. We haven't played anyone close yet."

McHugh said fouls were the main reason USD was able to take a commanding lead over the Sun Devils. ASU racked up a total of 28 fouls, which resulted in 21 Torero free throw points.

Cherry was the Sun Devils' leading scorer and rebounder with 17 points and 15 boards. Sophomores Jovonne Smith and Lisa Salsman both contributed 16 points to the win.

game was on the line at 9-9, we let three balls drop in that were probably easy digs," Snyder said. "You're never going to win a game by being tentative."

Junior outside hitter Mindy Gowell, who led the team in kills with 18 and digs with 19, was uncharacteristically at a loss for words after the loss.

"It's hard to feel too good about (my performance) because we lost," Gowell said.

Friday's losses give the Sun Devils a 19-16 record for the 1990 campaign.

THE STUDENTS of ASU mourn the loss of Tracey Geringer, a promising architectural student, who passed away in an automobile accident Thanksgiving Day. Tracey resided at Best Hall and was a member of the Event Staff at Sun Devil Stadium while also working part-time at Marriott Hotels. Tracey was a wonderful, loving person and will be missed by all whose lives she touched. Survivors include her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Geringer, brother Tom and sister Mary, Tom Martineau, and many close friends, including Fivel. Tracey was born in Ohio on May 21, 1965. Donations may be made in memory of Tracey to the Therese A. Geringer Memorial Fund c/o Bank of America, 701 West Glendale, Phoenix, Arizona 85021. A memorial service will be held Saturday, December 8 at 10am in Danforth Chapel on the ASU campus.

IF YOUR BUSINESS WOULD LIKE TO SPONSOR THE HOROSCOPES, PLEASE CALL 965-6555.

FOR TUESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1990

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Care is needed in speech today. Avoid flippant or sarcastic remarks. Delays about a career matter could get you down. Things are quite stable at home. TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You just can't seem to get a straight answer. Dealing with red tape could be a problem now. A partner remains your best confidante. Togetherness is a plus. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll bring a career matter to a successful conclusion now, but either there are delays regarding money due you or extra expenses in connection with another. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You may feel at cross purposes with a close tie now. Others are preoccupied with their own affairs and are not especially attentive. Go to a movie or curl up with a good book. LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You just seem to have too much to do now to get time for yourself today. Problems in connection with work could concern you now. Home matters are a plus. VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Problems in connection with children or romance could dull your appetite for socializing at present. Still, attendance at a group function will prove stimulating. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try not to be short-tempered with a relative today. Home responsibilities may weigh on you now, but you'll resolve a career matter to your satisfaction before nightfall. Copyright 1990 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

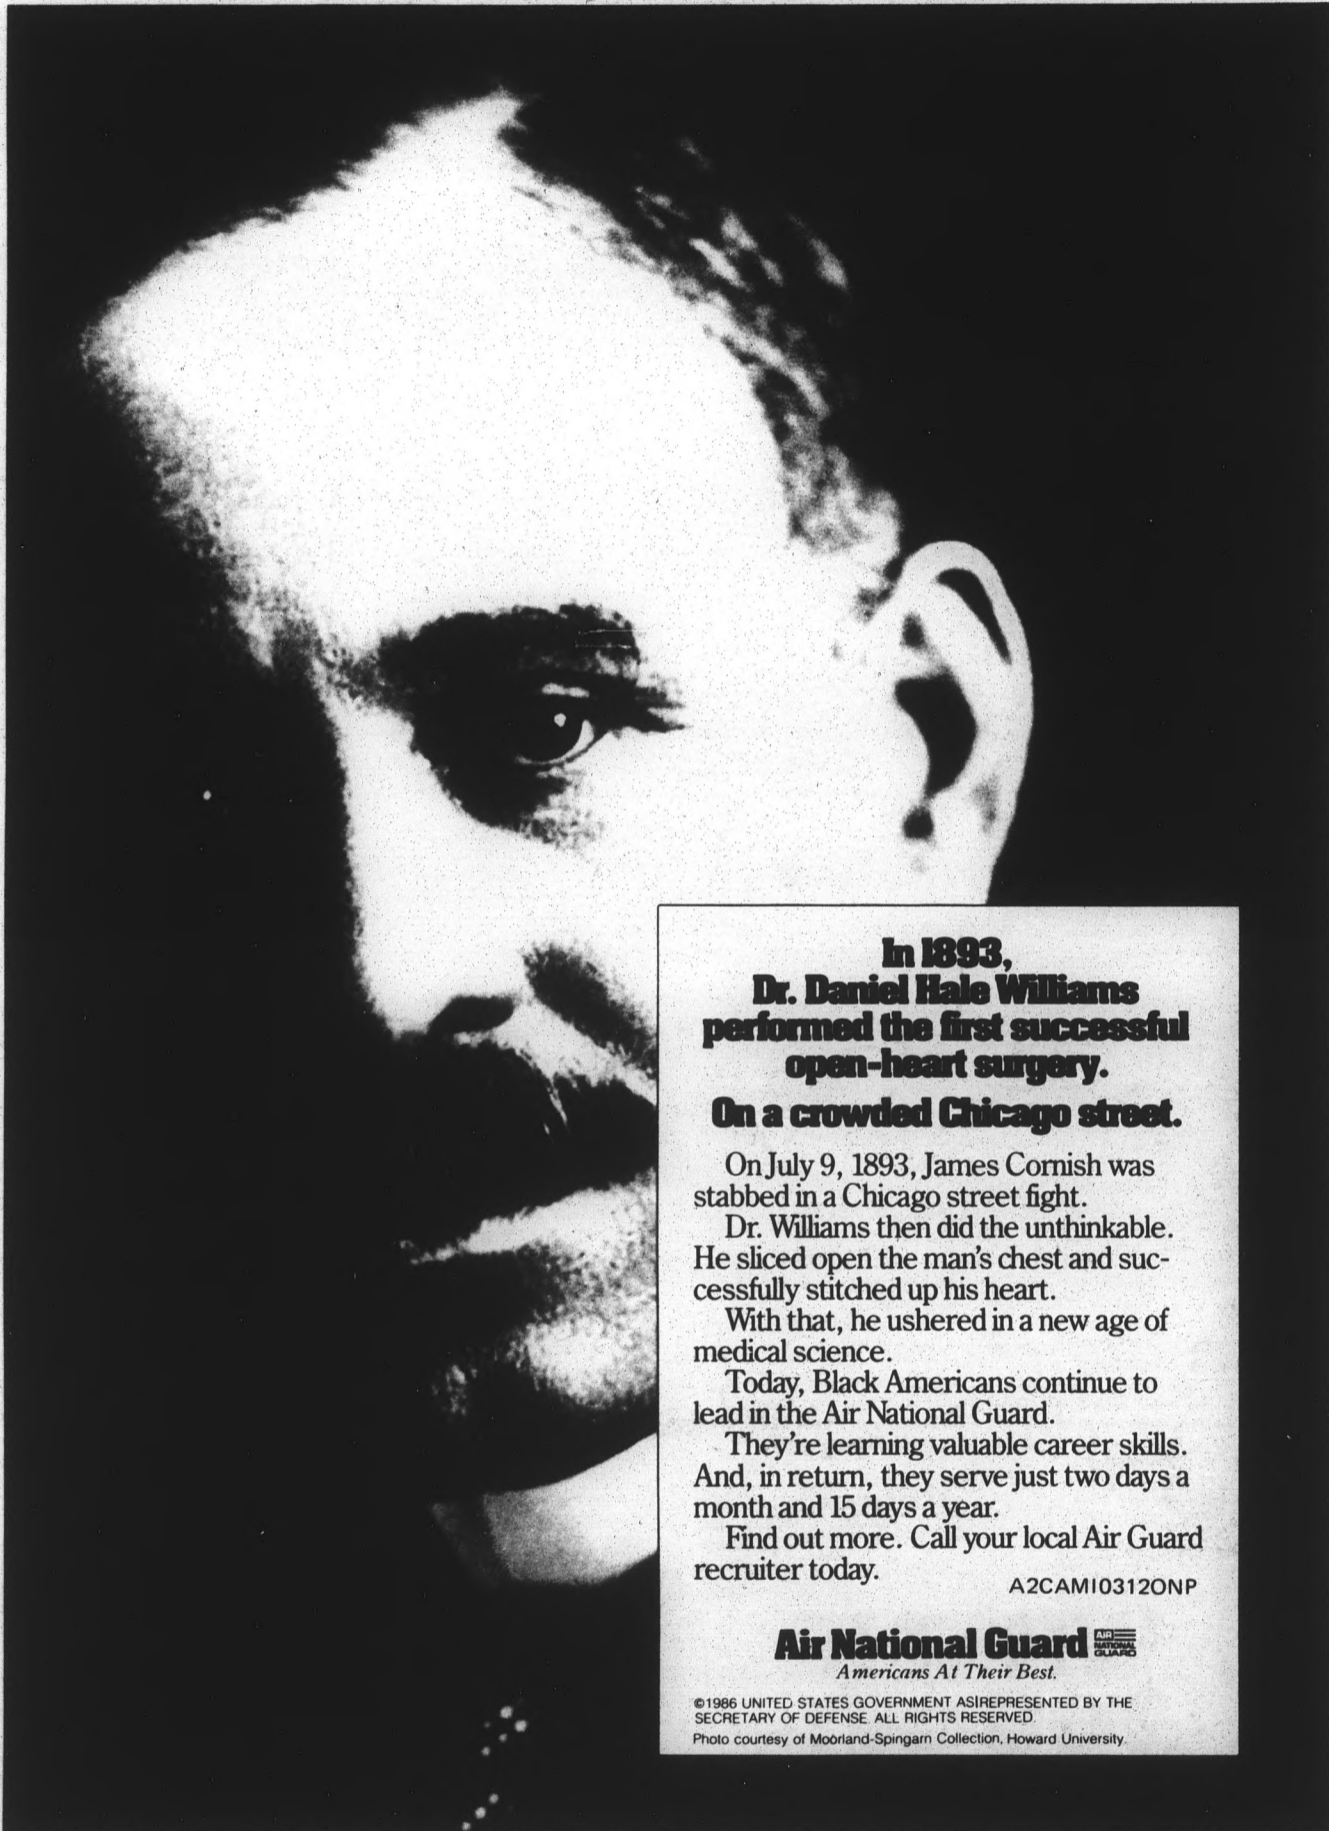

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Morning hours guard against hasty decision-making in dealing with financial interests. It's not a good day for getting feedback for your ideas. Continue working on a creative project. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It's best to be closed-mouthed about your financial affairs today. Be careful of those who would take advantage of you in money matters. Quiet pursuits are best. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Extra care is needed with details on the job. You could be rushing things unnecessarily. You seem to get along with friends well now, but may be insensitive with a close tie. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) There may be some edginess in romance today. Success is with you with one business venture now, but some other projects now may remain on hold for the time being. PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Be discriminating about which social invitations you accept now. You could easily become irritated with one friend today. Children are a source of happiness. YOU BORN TODAY have a decided introspective side to your nature. You're a hard worker and a good student. Periodically, you need time by yourself to feel your best. You can succeed in business and are likely to fit in well to the corporate structure. Sometime you settle for less than you're capable of. Keep your aspirations high. Birthdate of: Thomas Carlyle, writer; Gregory (Pappy) Boyington, war ace; and Deanna Durbin, actress.

WHAT IF YOU GET REALLY SICK?

The Student Health Center's got you covered for most health problems. But what about serious illness or injury that requires off campus service? Without additional insurance coverage, you could be facing financial hardship—or worse—if you risk going unprotected. So right now, look into Preferred Care for Students. It helps cover what Student Health doesn't. And it's priced right! Be sure to sign up for the Spring semester before you leave for the holidays. For details on coverages and exclusions, contact the Student Health Center at 965-2411.

You just can't do any better.

In 1893,
Dr. Daniel Hale Williams performed the first successful open-heart surgery.
On a crowded Chicago street.

On July 9, 1893, James Cornish was stabbed in a Chicago street fight. Dr. Williams then did the unthinkable. He sliced open the man's chest and successfully stitched up his heart.

With that, he ushered in a new age of medical science.

Today, Black Americans continue to lead in the Air National Guard. They're learning valuable career skills. And, in return, they serve just two days a month and 15 days a year.
