Soviets make 11th-hour peace bid

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — On call and on edge, U.S. and allied troops awaited the fateful "go" order Monday along the northern front. The Soviets handed Iraq a new, 11th-hour peace plan in a bid to head off an all-out ground war in the desert, but the White House said meanwhile "the war goes on."

On land and sea, preliminary sparring went on.

President Bush's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said the Soviets did not ask Bush to hold up any war action while Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal was considered in Baghdad — but just not to comment on the plan.

Earlier Monday, the White House said the best hope for forcing Iraq out of Kuwait was "conflict in the air and on the ground."

American gunners pounded Iraqi positions with artillery fire. Iraqi mines afloat in the Persian Gulf damaged two U.S. Navy warships — a billion-dollar missile cruiser and a Marine assault ship. And an American pilot went down deep inside Iraqi-held territory, to be plucked to safety by U.S. rescue helicopters.

Up on the northern sands, the troops of Desert Storm were ready to launch a broad offensive. "We are prepared to attack if necessary . . . tomorrow," said Brig. Gen. Daniel Gazeau, deputy commander of the French contingent.

The U.S. 2nd Marine Division repositioned its forces Monday to prepare for the cross-border assault, and sent reconnaissance teams beyond a 12-foot protective berm and into a no-man's-land between the opposing lines, Associated Press correspondent Denis D. Gray reported from the front.

The allies were ready, too, to defend against any Iraqi preemptive attack aimed at disrupting their plans. "Most of us believe he will try it," said Marine Col. Carl Fulford. "What option is left to him at this stage?"

He — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein — may have been given another option Monday.

His foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, met with Gorbachev in Moscow and was presented with what a Kremlin spokesman described only as a "concrete plan" for settlement of the gulf crisis, based on an end to Iraq's occupation of Kuwait.

Aziz immediately flew back to Iran, and from there he will head overland to Iraq on Tuesday. The Soviets said they expected a swift response from Saddam.

Three members of the 101st Airborne Division prepare to leap from a Blackhawk helicopter with their M-16 rifles during a training exercise in Saudi Arabia. The 101st is preparing itself for the expected ground war against the Iraqi army.

Bush and his top war advisers conferred for more than two hours after receiving details of the Soviet proposal, Fitzwater reported in Washington.

A White House statement noted that Bush promised to treat as confidential a descriptive of Gorbachev's proposal, and concluded, "Our military campaign remains on schedule."

At military headquarters in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, the U.S. command sounded ready for either a ground war or an extended all-air offensive.

"It's probably to our advantage to have the air campaign go on," said command spokesman Brig. Gen. Richard Neal, "because . . . every day our aviation elements are in the air, they're inflicting casualties."

At the command's daily news briefing, the Marine general reported that partly cloudy weather Monday cut into the Motion for cultural diversity requirement passes

By JENNIFER FRANKLIN
State Press

The ASU Faculty Senate passed a proposal Monday that will require students to take a three-hour course emphasizing cultural diversity as part of the general studies program.

The requirement likely will be instituted in fall 1992.

The proposal stated that the cultural diversity awareness area will be added to the current global and historical areas now required for general studies.

However, students whose graduation is governed by the 1987-88 to 1993-94 catalogs could choose courses to satisfy any two of the three awareness areas.

Then, if there are enough courses to fulfill the cultural diversity requirements, students under the 1994-95 catalog would be required to fulfill all three awareness area requirements.

Arlene Metha, president of the Faculty Senate, said the proposal must be approved by the Arizona Board of Regents before it can be enacted by the University.

Many universities, including UofA, have cultural diversity requirements, she said.

The proposal would not force students to take an additional class just to satisfy the requirement, said David Schwalm, chairman of the General Studies Council.

"If students are careful, they may plan their schedule to take a course to fulfill this and other requirements," Schwalm said.

Leonard Gordon, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said the awareness area would not be initiated immediately so that departments could propose courses to fulfill the requirement.

"It very well will be two years until we're sure that we have the courses," Gordon said.

Although the proposal was supported both by ASU President Lattie Coor and Associated Students of ASU President Matt Ortega, a handful of senators opposed it.

Sen. Donald Homa, Department of Psychology, said the views of the entire faculty on the matter were not represented by the Faculty Senate members.

"A faculty-wide poll should have been taken and shouldn't have passed unless 50 percent or more supported it," Homa said.

ASASU facing 'worst case scenario' due to budget woes

By ANDREW FAUGHT
State Press

Associated Students of ASU, facing what one senator called a "worst case scenario," learned Monday that they have only an estimated $29,392 to spend on the University's 32 departments this semester.

College of Law Sen. David Jordan said that for ASASU to end the year with a budget surplus, the organization needs to do some "soul searching" to determine which departments will be subject to monetary cutbacks.

ASASU departments include the bike co-op, the lecture series and the Concerts Department.

"I'm not saying ASASU is shutting down or stopping its services," Jordan said. "I am saying that this is going to hurt a little."

After nearly a week of searching for a concrete money figure, the finance committee on Monday arrived at their most accurate assessment of ASASU's financial situation, committee chairman Andy McGuire said.

McGuire, a senator from the College of Architecture, said ASASU's financial woes were created by the loss of concert revenues after last year's opening of Desert Sky Pavilion in Phoenix and were compounded by the Legislature's recent midyear budget cut.

He added that the $29,392 figure could become substantially higher if revenues are generated from activities other than concerts.

ASASU Activities Vice President Frank McCune said if the finance committee's figures hold true, he is not optimistic about ASASU's financial status.

"This is cutting it very close," he said. "A lot of departments are going to be disabled."

McCune said the only speakers ASASU likely will be able to host during the remainder of the semester will be volunteers.

McCune said he remains wary of the figures because they have been fluctuating constantly.

However, McGuire insisted the finance committee now is drawing its conclusions about ASASU's financial status from departmental financial reports instead of budget approximations.

McGuire sent memos to the executive officers and college councils Monday asking for a list of all financial obligations crucial to their programs.

"I certainly hope departments are cooperative with the

Councilman calls for cleaner restaurant air

By DAVID A. PUNDT
State Press

Tempe City Councilman Frank Plencner believes the city's anti-smoking ordinance needs to clear the air for more non-smoking employees and restaurant goers.

"The original city (smoking) ordinance

Plencner

Ordinance revision would require stricter anti-smoking guidelines was passed three or four years ago," Plencner said. "We feel that it's time for a stricter law."

The current ordinance requires all restaurants serving more than 100 people to have a non-smoking area and to offer seating in those areas to all patrons. The new law would lower the restaurant seating number, requiring establishments with more than 25-person capacity to conform to the guidelines.

The law also requires employers to arrange for separate smoking areas if workers complain, or else mandate the place of employment as a non-smoking area.

"We would also like to put more teeth in the section of the ordinance concerning places of work," Plencner said. "I have asked the city attorney to draft language for the ordinance. When that's done, we'll take it to a committee for study and public hearings."

But Vice Mayor Carol Smith said she does not favor toughening the law.

"I can't support that kind of thing," Smith said. "We can't ban smoking everywhere. People who smoke have rights too, you know."

Meanwhile, ASU senior liberal arts major Robert Dorf said he believes the proposed law doesn't go far enough.

"I think that smoking should be totally banned in all public places, period. I don't want to smell smoke, and I don't want to be around it," Dorf said.

Senior history major Paula Hansen agreed.

"If I go into a restaurant that doesn't have a no-smoking area, I won't stay," she said. "I refuse to eat in a place like that."

Sophomore business major Kevin Smith said he also prefers to eat in restaurants that ban smoking, but he said the government should have nothing to do with it.

"I think the free market should be allowed to work," he said. "I won't eat in a restaurant that allows smoking, and if a business realizes it will make more money banning smoking, smoking will be banned."

"Government has no business telling private enterprise what to do, particularly concerning something like this."

Soviet deal raises hopes in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Baghdad's leading newspaper said Monday that peace talks in Moscow have raised "high hopes" for an end to the Gulf War, but the military said it was poised for the other possibility — a bloody ground conflict.

Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz was en route home from Moscow carrying a Soviet peace proposal which, if accepted by President Saddam Hussein, could forestall the widely expected allied ground offensive.

Aziz arrived in Tehran, Iran, where the official Islamic Republic News Agency said he was spending the night. IRNA, monitored in Cyprus, said Aziz would meet Tuesday morning with Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani before heading to Baghdad.

On his way to Moscow, Aziz had been forced to travel overland to Tehran to avoid flying through Iraqi skies, which are controlled by the U.S.-led coalition. It wasn't clear if he planned to make the reverse journey the same way.

The Iraqi news media had no immediate details on the envoy's two-day trip to Moscow, nor on the Soviet peace proposal that Aziz was to bring back to Baghdad.

However, Al-Thawra, newspaper of the ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party, said: "There are high hopes and expectations in Moscow that the Iraqi-Soviet talks will be a decisive turning point between war and peace."

The military, preparing for a turn toward a ground war, issued the latest in a series of statements predicting victory on the battlefield.

Al-Qadissiya, the Defense Ministry newspaper, said: "The army has prepared all necessary means and power to make the ground war a killing zone and a graveyard for all the invaders dispatched to the region."

A military communique broadcast by Baghdad radio warned allied troops that Iraq's "all-powerful weapons... will explode in their faces."

The radio also carried a commentary denouncing Britain, which on Sunday admitted that one of its bombs missed a targeted bridge last week and mistakenly veered off into the Iraqi town of Fallouja.

"What a lie and what a joke," said the radio, referring to the British claim that the bombing was a mistake. Iraqi officials say 130 civilians were killed in the attack.

"This false British justification exposes the behavior of the old and new imperialists," the radio said. "World public opinion is called upon to open the record of British crimes and to condemn this savage action."

A military communique released Monday morning said Iraqi forces had inflicted casualties on front-line allied troops in Saudi Arabia with a barrage of field missiles. It also reported 130 allied air raids on Iraqi troops and 25 air attacks on civilian targets in the previous 24 hours.

The military communique, read over Baghdad Radio, said Iraqi soldiers "directed a series of destructive strikes with tactical field missiles at the enemy's positions and concentrations of men and equipment inside Saudi territory."

Maryland Pro-Choice bill signed

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Gov. William Donald Schaefer signed into law Monday a bill that would protect a woman's right to abortion in the event the U.S. Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision is overturned.

The Maryland House sent the measure to the governor on a vote of 84-52, ending a round of intense lobbying and a yearlong battle.

"I think the House and Senate acted wisely," Schaefer said. "They voted their conscience."

Abortion advocates hailed the law as a major victory. Abortion foes vowed to launch a petition drive to allow voters to reject the law.

A proposed, anti-abortion "conscience amendment" to bar lawsuits against people who refuse to refer patients for an abortion was rejected by the House on a vote of 61-73.

The law already contained a provision barring such suits. It also includes a parental notification provision, but one that doctors may opt to ignore.

The Senate approved the bill Feb. 11 on a vote of 29-18. "By securing a woman's right to choose, the Maryland Legislature is taking a necessary and vital step toward safeguarding the health and lives of Maryland women," said Kate Michelman, director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

In the hours leading up to the House session, lobbyists for the Roman Catholic Church and other anti-abortion groups sought support for the amendment, which would have sent the measure back to the Senate.

"It will become the most liberal, the most extreme, abortion law in the entire 50 states," said Democratic Delegate Timothy Maloney, an anti-abortion leader. "Maryland will stand alone as being the most unregulated state in the nation regarding abortion."

The bill was at the center of a yearlong legislative fight over attempts by pro-choice legislators to write into Maryland law key elements of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which legalized abortion nationwide for the first time. The bill was launched in response to indications the high court might reverse the Roe ruling.

Both houses of the Legislature are heavily dominated by Democrats and have tended to be pro-choice on abortion in recent years. Last year, an abortion rights bill was killed by a filibuster in the Senate after the bill's supporters failed by just one vote to get a two-thirds majority to cut off debate.

The pro-choice bill grants adult women unrestricted access to abortions up to the time when a fetus is able to survive outside the womb. After that, abortions could be performed only to protect a woman's health or in cases where the fetus is deformed.

The measure also includes what both sides agree is a weak parental notification clause. It requires that at least one parent must be notified when an underage girl seeks an abortion. Doctors would be allowed to ignore the requirement if they deemed it to be in the best interests of the girl.

Pro-choice legislators described their bill as one of the most liberal abortion laws in the nation.

"Only Connecticut has passed a pro-choice bill since Webster," said Delegate Samuel I. Rosenberg, D-Baltimore, referring to a U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1989 that allowed states to restrict access to abortions.

Bomb explodes in London after caller warns of blast

LONDON (AP) — A bomb exploded at Victoria station during morning rush hour Monday, 45 minutes after a caller claiming to represent the IRA warned of bombs at all of London's main railway stations, police said. One man was killed and 40 people were injured.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility, but blamed the carnage on authorities who decided not to close stations.

"All future warnings should be acted upon," said a statement from the IRA.

The explosion at Victoria station came less than three hours after a bomb exploded at Paddington station, another the main rail gateway to western England and Wales. Only a dozen employees were on duty, and no one was injured.

The Victoria explosion at 7:46 a.m. sent screaming commuters running from the terminal, some trailing blood across the concourse. Rail traffic to and from London was halted for hours.

"The cynical decision of senior security personnel not to evacuate railway stations named in secondary warnings, even three hours after the warning device had exploded at Paddington in the early hours of this morning was directly responsible for the casualties at Victoria," the IRA statement said.

The incidents were the first attacks on a British rail station credited by the IRA in 15 years.

The warning was delivered by a man with an Irish accent who said: "We are the Irish Republican Army. Bombs to go off at all mainline stations in 45 minutes," said Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist chief, Cmdr. George Churchill-

Coleman. Churchill-Coleman said the call was only one of a number of threats following the Paddington explosion, and that the others "transpired either to be false or malicious."

Iain McGregor, deputy chief constable of the British Transport Police, said his department gets about six bomb threats a day.

Churchill-Coleman said the warning was passed to the British Transport Police, who already were searching all the main railway terminals when the blast at Victoria occurred.

The bomb, which was hidden in a trash can on the concourse, "was quite deliberately intended to maim and kill," he said.

British Rail Chairman Robert Reid said it is not unusual for police to keep rail stations open after a bomb warning.

"Let's face it, as soon as you have an incident, your telephone lines are choked with hoax calls. Since these two incidents we've had hoax calls all the way up the line," Reid said in an interview on British Broadcasting Corp. radio.

British Rail closed all mainline stations in London after the bombings, suspending service that carries 500,000 people into the capital every day.

Several hours after the Victoria blast, Heathrow airport, Britain's busiest, was evacuated briefly Monday after police received a vague bomb threat, an airport spokeswoman said. Police searched and found nothing.

The blast at Victoria killed a man in his 30s and injured at least 40 people, Churchill-Coleman said.

Matthew Cyprus, 22, who lost part of his right foot, described the explosion from his hospital bed.

"There was a big blinding light, a wall of fire, followed by a noise which came toward me and then I fell over onto the floor," he told reporters.

Jeremy Rose, who was buying a ticket at the time of the explosion, said he saw a man "with half his face missing. It was like he had gone through a car windshield at 100 mph."

Bus driver Jaynti Patel described a young girl running away from the blast. "Then her legs just gave out and she collapsed on the floor. She was trembling. She was shaking so bad," he said.

Patel said he also saw a man, his shirt and jacket covered in blood, lying on the floor as emergency workers aided him.

Monday's explosions came 11 days after the IRA fired three mortar bombs at government offices, including one at the prime minister's official residence.

The overwhelmingly Roman Catholic IRA, which is fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland and link the Protestant-dominated province with the Irish Republic, last attacked a non-government establishment in London on July 20.

In that attack, a bomb blew a hole in the wall of the Stock Exchange. No one was injured.

There had been no bombings at railway stations since an incident at Cannon Street station in 1976. Victoria was one of three stations hit during an intensive IRA bombing campaign in 1973.

Paddington Station is the main terminal for trains from the west. Victoria, near Buckingham Palace, is the main gateway to the south, Gatwick Airport and European destinations.

Unfinished business

Cultural classrooms a positive movement for ASU's future

Michelle Roberts
Opinion Editor

Those idiots in Cholla residence hall (the ones who taped the disgusting racist flier on their dorm room door) are probably stupored to see the action their little "joke" has sparked.

However, it's important to remember that the "minority work application" is not the sole root of the current controversy.

The degrading flier was merely an isolated example of the racism that exists on ASU's campus (and across the entire United States). Most of the time racism is more subtle, but it is constantly present — whether in the form of graffiti on the side of Hayden Library or racial comments mumbled beneath someone's breath in passing.

As dirty and sickening as the Cholla "joke" was, ironically some good is coming out of the whole situation.

Yesterday the "flier-controversy" persuaded the ASU Faculty Senate to adopt a multicultural awareness component to undergraduate requirements.

The new Faculty Senate decision will require that students enroll in a three-hour course to fulfill a cultural diversity awareness section as part of their general studies requirements.

The proposal states that, "In order to promote awareness and appreciation of cultural diversity in the United States among ASU students, we propose that the current General Studies requirements can be amended to include an additional awareness area — like Historical Awareness and Global Awareness — titled Awareness of Cultural Diversity in the United States."

As with all general requirements put on students, this one will probably ignite a few complaints from students who think this will be another blow-off class that will not benefit them in their programs of study.

It's easy for non-minority students to be lulled into a false sense of "everyone has got it as good as I do" and "the Civil Rights Movement was resolved 20 years ago."

Unfortunately, it takes fliers like the one posted on the Cholla door to give non-minorities a dose of reality — blatant racism still exists.

While it is important not to "label" all white students racists because of a few bad apples, one thing should be of great concern to us all — the future.

The new required courses will focus primarily on: contributions or experiences of a single ethnic or gender group (literature, music, history, art, science, etc.); comparative studies that explore the diverse cultural contributions; and exploring the nature of the interactions between and among different ethnic and gender groups.

These classes should not be aimed solely at "sensitizing" white students but encourage celebration of all ethnic backgrounds.

Students may ask, "How will spending time in 'Jazz in America' or 'Indians of the Southwest' benefit me personally if I am a finance major?"

The answer to that question is simple.

Before we can adequately deal with any field of study, we must have respect for each other, regardless of race. Any orientation with other cultures is bound to eventually create better understanding among all ethnic backgrounds.

An added box at the bottom of curriculum checklists will mean a positive change for the future.

In addition to students learning more about diverse cultures, faculty and staff should also be introduced to different ethnic backgrounds in the form of workshops.

Existing problems did not originate in this generation, and it will take more than just student attempts for positive change. As a University that obviously wants to make these changes, it cannot depend solely on the students. Everyone must be involved — passing this resolution for the students was the administration's first step. Requiring workshops for staff and faculty should be the second step.

The Civil Rights Movement didn't end 20 years ago — the work is not yet finished. Now is the time to wrap it up. This can't begin with riots and protests, but should begin enjoyably within ASU's classrooms.

Teacher getting results with cultural focusing in English classes

Editor,

I hope that all elements of the campus community will celebrate with me the Faculty Senate's passage of a measure that will phase in a multicultural awareness component to the undergraduate breadth requirement. Michele Buczkowski's letter to the State Press yesterday reminded me that we should avoid suggesting that such courses are aimed exclusively at Anglo-American students who need "sensitizing." Such a misimpression risks polarizing students and preventing them from fully embracing the new requirement.

I stated in my previous letter to the State Press that ignorance is the root of at least some hostile racial stereotyping, but I certainly don't mean to suggest that such ignorance is the exclusive province of any group. I suspect that members of all ethnic groups could benefit greatly by learning more about the culture and history of other groups.

As one of many examples, at the Cholla Hall meeting on Wednesday night, a black student agreed with me that we both had much to learn about and from Native American culture. This student was one of the most knowledgeable and articulate persons in the room, and neither of us would consider ourselves to be "ignorant" in a general sense. Yet we both recognized a gap in our education and experiences.

Those who naturally rebel at any mandatory programming might take some comfort in the following open letter from a teaching assistant sent to various University officials last fall. It reminds us that even some of life's experiences that are compulsory turn out to be pleasurable and educational.

September 16, 1990

Open letter from Elizabeth McNeil, Teaching Assistant, Dept. of English, First Year Composition

I am writing in regards to teaching with a multicultural focus in English 102 here at ASU. I am just starting my second year as a TA in the first-year composition department and Dave Schwalm suggested I let you know something of my experiences teaching 102 around multicultural topics.

I had my students last spring work with the general topic "Native Americans of Arizona." With all the resources in the ASU library and within the Phoenix area and greater Arizona, this topic allowed students to go deeper into Native American culture, contemporary problems, etc. The best thing that happened for my students, though, occurred when some of Dr. Lynn Nelson's Native American English 101 and 102 students got together with my classes and shared pieces of personal writing. Some of my students — white, black, chicano — had been afraid of this encounter. But when I had them write a personal response to the "sharing," I got back much more than I had expected. The following is an excerpt from a white male history and political science major who told me angrily at the beginning of the semester that the topic "Native Americans" had no bearing on his area of study or on his life.

The thing that struck me was the poetry and the poise. Every one of the writers had it both in their writing and in the way they held themselves. In response to Dr. Nelson's writing and his classes' presentation, several things "caught my eye" and made me think AND feel.

In every occurrence I heard poetry describing either their relatives or their land, which seemed as important a relative as a grandmother ... all of their works stood alone as artistic prose. This freshman English class knew something different than any other section. They knew how to write from the heart. Maybe it's their Indian heritage or maybe it's their instructor or perhaps a little bit of both. Whatever it is, it was beautiful.

I certainly agree with Nelson that we need to pay more attention to the environment, and we need to change the way we educate people ... I find this message a refreshing change. A classic liberal education is worth more to the world than the MBA-Mercedes-millions formula used here at ASU. I think he loses credibility being on the faculty here. I do hope he believes what he says and is working for it.

Music. That's what Dr. Nelson's class and himself have in their writing. Maybe you'd rather say it's poetry. But through this experience I've caught a glimpse of the Indian view of the world. I just wish all freshman English classes would allow the heart to show through.

About nine students had said (anonymously) they didn't like the topic at the beginning of the semester (one even hated it, said he/she was prejudiced, had had a bad experience). But by the end of the semester, judging from the feedback I got by that point, some light of compassion had at least dawned on these people. Those who were already compassionate carried away knowledge inside a new perspective which may well work even on an empathetic level in their future business/service careers, as well as their personal lives.

This summer I taught 102 under the general topic "Slavery," meaning the enslavement of black people in the United States. The reactions from this class were also remarkable. Because students were so pushed for time, I did not, at the end of the course, ask for personal feedback regarding the choice of topic or what the students felt they had gained personally from the course. But the unsolicited responses I did get from some of the students were thank you's for having offered them the opportunity to open their eyes to a part of U. S. history that had been to them, before this class, more or less a nebulous blank. I received some excellent final papers, and all along the quality of the research, the depth to which — from the very beginning of class — the students were eager to go, was exciting. And we talked all through the semester about how history often projects itself negatively and unconsciously into the present day, and we discussed what we could do about that.

This semester I am employing the general topic "Native Americans," opening up beyond the Arizona limitation (which worked well, and was of immediate geographic and social importance). I had students already coming up to me the second day of class excited about researching, for instance, the trouble the Mohawk people are having in Canada right now, and another student interested in finding out more about how encroachment upon native peoples in the South American rain forests is affecting these peoples' lives. I really like my students. Even though they rarely seem to open up to each other, say how much they feel for others, how compassionate they inherently are and how deeply what they learn affects them. This is "uncool," after all — I read it in their personal responses and am moved by what I read, by them, and by how much "education" can really mean for us all.

Racism by-product of prejudice

Editor:

I am writing in response to Vernard Bonner's little lesson on racism which appeared in Friday's edition of the State Press. I hope everyone got to read it because it was an excellent example of educated ignorance.

I don't disagree with his point that racism is institutionalized in this country; indeed it is. Nor do I argue when he states that "some white (students') sensibilities are not offended" by the recent racial incident on campus. I do, however, contest his proposition that racism is "Euro-centric," an "expected behavior" of white people. The message projected by Mr. Bonner's assertions is unproductive to say the least. The stereotyping he uses in his letter is no more acceptable than the derogatory poster that appeared in Cholla Apartments.

Racism is simply (and I use that term loosely, there's nothing simple about it) a by-product of an inherent human trait, prejudice. Prejudice is our fear of that which we don't understand. It serves as a natural defense mechanism in an unfamiliar environment. Unfortunately, humans haven't been able to consistently keep it in check. Racism then becomes the mutated extension of prejudice, the result of not conscientiously addressing our uneasiness with unfamiliar stimuli. So racism isn't some commodity that some people lacking in "color" have cornered the market in; it is something we must all deal with consciously.

But Mr. Bonner's statement doesn't completely lack in merit. There is a point to be made about the social climate in this country and how we should deal with it. There is little room for denial that America is a society geared towards Caucasians. This ethnic slant is lost on most whites because its effects don't seem that unnatural. It's a little like having a strong southern accent; "y'all come back now" doesn't seem peculiar when you've been saying and hearing it your whole life. But racism is much more dangerous than a slight verbal inflection, and it's important that we all work toward establishing a comprehensive and educated policy to eradicate it instead of using it as a vehicle to slight an entire cross-section of individuals.

To assert that white-on-black (and other minorities) oppression is the most prevalent form of racism today is very likely true — unfortunate but irreversible historical passage has left us where we are today. But to say that whites are inherently and internally more racist than others is neither comprehensive or productive. If we don't attack this problem rationally, we will eventually end up trading one form of racism for another.

In his final published statements, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. stated that we should "not ask what is our neighbor's color but whether he is a brother in the pursuit of racial justice."

He was speaking to all of us, Mr. Bonner.

A soldier's letter

Editor:

I writing to express my views on the Persian Gulf war. My opinion is not that of a typical 22-year-old student back in the states, but rather that of a U.S. Army soldier serving in Saudi Arabia.

I have been a student at Arizona State University for one and a half years and was called to active duty on Dec. 7, 1990, as a member of the National Guard's 259th Eng. Co (CS) of Phoenix, Ariz.

I see protests as a very positive part of America's growth. Protesting is a right that we have attained over the short history of the United States. Within my short lifespan, I've seen protest be the catalyst of public action. It urges people to gather, unite and to move forward with a purpose. Civil rights, the ERA and environmental issues are just a few movements that have brought about a positive change in the lives of all Americans.

The right to protest is one that must be justified by the individual. If a person is protesting the Persian Gulf war, I feel that he or she must be able to answer the question: "Why am I protesting and are my reasons justified?" I certainly have no right to say whether you are right or wrong. I obviously have no say in whether or not a person should protest.

However, I do feel strongly that before anyone takes a position, they must consider the reality of the situation.

The United States is a nation that defends human rights and reacts when national and world interests are at stake.

Many say this is an unnecessary war being fought for oil. Well, friends, it's time to open our eyes and realize that this war's basic issues may stem from oil — but national and international interests are certainly also at stake.

The true reason for international support of this war is that if Saddam Hussein gains control of the world's oil reserves, he could single-handedly control the world's oil market. Anyone in their right mind realizes that Saddam would eventually manipulate the world market and gain incredible power — this power would lead to the future expansion of his tyranny.

If a person does not see the injustice that has been brought upon the Kuwaiti people, then they have no right to protest.

"All we are saying is 'give peace a chance'" is a slogan that no one can justify saying. I realize no one wants war. Do you think I savor the opportunity to be here? I have loved ones both at home and at school that I wish I could be with.

I am here because the United States and the rest of the world sees the implications of Saddam's actions. You do not negotiate with a "Saddam." The world has been manipulated by supporting Saddam in the Iran-Iraq war and now the world is paying for it. Saddam has been faced with a unified coalition of world powers and he continues to hold strong. He would sooner choose to be the martyr of the Arab world than to give in to the "infidels of the world." To make concessions would be to continue the manipulation process and we'd inevitably have to deal with Saddam in the future.

Saddam has been given all the opportunities in the world, yet he's chosen to fight. Peace has been given a chance.

I would like to add that many protesters believe that they are making a stand against the government by showing their strength by numbers and slogans. Personally I see what true effects the protesters have had. I was gathered with a bunch of fellow soldiers while we watched and listened to American protesters.

If they only knew what adverse effect they have on the morale of soldiers. Soldiers are men and women fighting for a cause — a cause that will allow Americans to continue to protest.

Once this is all over, friends will reappear on the streets back home. All I ask is for those protesters to stand face to face and tell that soldier how he or she stood up for a cause. Then, the protester should have to justify that cause to the soldier. If the protester can do this, then maybe he or she was protesting for a just reason.

Keep in mind that protesters are the propaganda that moves Saddam forward. They've become a weapon.

Once again protesters should ask themselves: "For what cause do I protest? Is it for the soldiers, peace, or for some other reason? The answer "soldiers or peace" (under these circumstances) doesn't cut it in my eyes.

I would like to thank the many supporters of the soldiers. Not only family and loved ones, but the many war veterans and activists who have chosen to support the soldiers instead of tearing them down. I'm looking forward to returning to ASU.

From the members of the 259th Eng. Co (CS), we send all of our love to those back home and promise to be home as soon as possible. SPC Phil Marquez and I would like to send out a warm hello to everyone in Center Complex and our love to Lynndsey and Dubie.

MLK day benefits all, professor says

By JUDI TANCOS
State Press

Arizona should have a paid holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. because the specific issues King advocated apply to everyone, not just blacks, said Dennis Dickerson, a history professor at Williams College in Massachusetts.

"It (King Day) is not a black holiday. It helps to affirm what our nation is all about," Dickerson said during a speech on MLK's role in shaping American history and culture.

About 30 students and community members listened Monday as Dickerson argued King's importance in American history and in the African-American population.

Dickerson said King was the first significant leader of a social movement to use the church as a way to bring about fundamental and transitional changes.

"King said, 'I'm leading this movement not because it's fair but because it's right,'" he said.

In addition Dickerson said that because King derived his leadership from the black people, blacks decided that he spoke for the majority of their people.

"It means an independence of thought. It implies that you cannot be bought off," Dickerson said, referring to the legitimacy of King's leadership.

"It was not the words of Washington and Jefferson that were repeated in Tiananmen Square and East Europe," Dickerson said, stressing the importance of King Day.

The Rev. Bernard Jackson, director of the Educational Opportunities Program at ASU, agreed that Arizona will eventually have a King holiday.

"People will see in King's life that there is a dynamic there . . . that will carry us forward in the time to come," Jackson said.

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents Monday:

•A man was found sleeping on the ground near Old Main. He told police he had attended a "major party" and was taking a nap because he was too drunk to drive home.

•A male and a female parked at the ASU Research Park claimed they were talking. Police warned them about trespassing and loitering.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Monday:

•A 53-year-old man attempted to commit suicide by firing one round from a rifle. He was not injured, but his family had him transported to St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment. The man reportedly is despondent because he has a cancerous tumor.

Compiled by State Press reporter Teena Chadwell.

ASU DPS released the following crime watch bulletin:

•On Jan. 17 and Feb. 13, two females were assaulted in Parking Structure 3 by a male suspect. During the first incident, the victim was grabbed by the arm after the suspect asked the time. The victim was able to free herself at which time the suspect ran away down the southwest stairwell. During the second incident, the suspect approached from behind, fondled the victim and pressed his body against the victim. The victim became angry and the suspect fled, again by way of the southwest stairwell.

The descriptions provided by the victims indicate that the suspect may be the same in both incidents. The suspect is described as a white male, 23 to 25 years old, light brown to blonde collar-length hair, 5-foot-8, 150 pounds and has worn black plastic or wire-rimmed glasses.

ASU DPS is asking the community to take extra caution in this area. Both assaults occurred between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Homa said he conducted a survey in his department and found that there was little support for the proposal.

One problem with the proposal is that it would require students to take non-academic courses, he said.

"Students will be asked to study the feelings of different cultural groups, and quite honestly, those are a dime a dozen — certainly not academic," he said.

But Charles Calleros, chairman of the Campus Environment Team, said the proposal would require courses he thinks are "quite academic in nature."

"Exploring other (perspectives) helps us to prepare for work, society, government and many aspects of our lives," Calleros said.

Three types of courses would fulfill the requirement.

•Courses focusing primarily on the contributions or experiences of a single ethnic or gender group.

•Courses treating the experience of more than one ethnic group comparatively.

•Courses exploring the nature of interactions between and among different ethnic and gender groups.

finance committee," McGuire said. "This has been arduous, to say the least."

ASASU President Matt Ortega said the organization must avoid deficit spending and said cuts in student worker hours may be needed to attain financial security.

"I'd take a cut if necessary," Ortega said. "It may not sit well with a lot of people, but we need to take any steps possible not to be spending in the red."

Reversions derived from campus clubs and organizations also could help pad the current spending base within ASASU, McGuire said. He added this would probably only generate $5,000.

If a club or organization has not used its allotted money within a specified period of time, it is subject to have it reverted, according to ASASU funding measures.

"I don't know how we're going to do this, but we're going to do it," Jordan said.

number of Desert Storm air sorties, reducing them to 2,400 in 24 hours, down from the usual 2,600 or 2,800 of recent days.

Almost 1,000 missions were flown against the Republican Guard and other Iraqi units in Kuwait and southern Iraq, where air strikes are "softening up" the dug-in defenses in advance of a U.S.-led ground assault.

A recent change in air tactics was giving American warplanes greater success against Iraqi armor and other targets, a U.S. military source said.

"We're not experiencing too many misses. We're really having a field day taking out his tanks and artillery," the source said, without elaborating on the new techniques.

The lost plane was an Air Force F-16 fighter whose pilot bailed out 40 miles inside Iraqi-held territory, Neal said. The spokesman did not specify whether the plane went down in Iraq or Kuwait, and said it was not immediately known whether the jet was shot down or had a mechanical problem.

Air Force helicopters, protected by warplanes, made a dash into "Indian country," and lifted the airman out the desert, Neal said. "They did a superb job and there was one happy camper of a pilot," he said.

Monday's marine-mine explosions, the first time U.S.

vessels have struck Iraqi mines in the war, came as dozens of warships crowded farther north in the gulf in preparation for a possible U.S. Marine amphibious landing.

A news-pool dispatch from the USS Tripoli said sleeping crewmen were jarred awake by a mine blast at 4:30 a.m. as the helicopter assault ship led a minesweeping operation off the Kuwaiti coast.

The explosion ripped a 16-by-20-foot hole in the forward starboard hull, 10 feet below the waterline, and flooded several compartments, the report said.

About three hours later, the USS Princeton, a 1-year-old, $1 billion Aegis missile cruiser, struck another mine about 10 miles away, Neal reported.

Because that blast damaged one of the Princeton's propeller screws, the high-tech ship was operating at 50-percent power, Neal said.

Four sailors on the Tripoli and three on the Princeton were slightly injured, Neal said. He said both ships remained "fully mission-capable."

The pool report said the Tripoli sat dead in the water after the explosion, while work crews struggled to shore up the hole and pump out compartments on three decks. The Tripoli normally carries up to 2,000 combat-ready Marines, but military officials indicated it might not have had a full complement on board.

Andy looked up in horror. Right in front of Sally, a worm was emerging from his forehead — and he felt himself turning even redder.

Weird Wire

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Among the thousands of retired people who seek the southern sunshine each winter, some have more reason than others to escape the cold.

They are the retirees who head to Sanpipers Holiday Park and spend the season mostly in the nude behind its 10-foot-high corrugated-metal fence.

"It's nice to get up in the morning and not have to worry about finding your pants," said Mel, a 67-year-old retired farmer from Ottawa, Canada.

He and his 68-year-old wife, Evelyn, reclined nude by the swimming pool on a warm December afternoon. They and other nudists preferred to use only their first names, to preserve their privacy.

Mel and Evelyn referred to the outside as the "textile" world, which they have tried to escape as much as possible since they became nudists in 1979.

"We found when we were in textile parks, people were very possessive and crotchety," Mel said. "We found people easier to get along with at nudist parks." "And no tan lines," a woman across the pool added.

A 75-year-old man by the pool was naked, but his 66-year-old wife wore clothes.

"I'm not a nudist," she said, adding that she accompanies him to nudist parks because they both enjoy the atmosphere.

Nudists consistently say they choose the lifestyle because they consider shedding their clothing the key to true relaxation. Many nudist retirees spend warmer months in nudist parks farther north.

Klimchock picks tennis for her love

By DARREN URBAN
State Press

ASU tennis player Luann Klimchock came to a crossroads of sorts early in her athletic career.

"I basically played every sport imaginable up until the age of 10," the 20-year-old junior said. "I had to make a choice about what sport I wanted to play because Mom was tired of carpooling everywhere."

Klimchock, who attended Corona del Sol High School in Tempe, started playing in local tournaments when she was 11 and experienced early success.

"I picked it up really quickly," Klimchock said. "I won a few and I enjoyed it. I liked getting all the trophies."

Even so, Klimchock took a year off in high school to "do other things," but realized that tennis was too much to give up.

"It was probably during that year that (tennis) seemed most important to me," Klimchock said. "I watched several college matches and it seemed fun."

Klimchock was recruited by some Eastern schools following a stellar 32-0 prep record, but chose to walk on at ASU instead because of Coach Sheila McInerney.

"I liked Sheila," Klimchock said. "Since I grew up here, I saw the teams she had and I knew it was a program that was developing . . . you can get away from tennis and relate to her on another level, which I think is important."

Entering ASU during the spring of 1989 (she graduated a semester early at Corona), Klimchock immediately saw playing time as a Sun Devil because of the team's injuries. She finished 1989 at 9-6 in singles and 16-7 in doubles and followed with 16-3 and 11-3 marks last season.

Despite the relatively quick success at ASU, Klimchock said she is not surprised at her record.

"I've always been one who believes if you work hard it'll pay off in the end," the business administration major said. "I'm a very hard worker."

McInerney said she was impressed with Klimchock's progress.

"She's really worked hard," McInerney said. "She came as a walk-on and wanted to play for ASU, and she's done it."

McInerney added that Klimchock's room for improvement now is more mental than physical.

"She has improved her game tremendously since she got here," McInerney said. "Now it's a matter of mental preparation. In some ways, she wants to win too badly and she thinks too much on the court."

Although her drive to improve encompasses recognition as well, Klimchock said, she is a realist on a team that includes talents like senior Kristi Jonkosky and junior Krista Amend. "Sure you'd like to be top dog and the one everybody sees," Klimchock said, "but that's just not going to happen."

Klimchock is the only southpaw on the squad and said her being left-handed is an advantage on the court.

"A lot of people don't face lefties," Klimchock said. "It puts a different spin on the ball. The only time I ever faced a lefty, I hated it."

"It's definitely an advantage," McInerney said. "She's got a big lefty forehand. We've tried to build her game around coming around and hitting the big forehand. Plus, her opponents are used to hitting to a right-handed player's backhand and it is (Klimchock's) forehand."

Klimchock said she is unsure at this point what her plans are after her college playing days are over.

"I'll see how my game progresses," she said. "Maybe I'll play a couple of pro tournaments and I might go to graduate school."

Klimchock currently plays the fourth slot in the seventh-ranked Sun Devils' lineup, who have started the season 6-2 and are contending for its first-ever NCAA title.

"We feel we can accomplish being (number) one," Klimchock said. "That's a big priority. We just really stress getting better and just having a good time."

Included in ASU's six victories was a win over long-time nemesis USC, which had defeated the Sun Devils 21 out of 22 times.

"It was very important (to beat the Trojans)," Klimchock said. "We lost to Duke (Feb. 2), who were ranked one spot below us. We didn't lose confidence . . . but (the USC win) shows us where we really are."

Brock still pleased as Sun Devils prepare for GCU

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

An embarrassing blowout defeat can often be hard to take, but someone with the experience of ASU baseball coach Jim Brock can accept the Sun Devils' 16-1 setback to Texas Sunday for exactly what it was — one loss.

Ehmann

After the game, the 20th-year coach met with the press in his Packard Stadium office and had no problem discussing his team's bright spots at this juncture in the season.

And why not? After all, ASU (10-5) handed the Longhorns their worst defeat in Coach Cliff Gustafson's 24 years at Austin with an 18-4 victory Saturday and did take two of the three games in the weekend series.

The Sun Devils also retain their No. 3 ranking as they visit Grand Canyon for the first of three meetings with the Antelopes this season tonight at 7 at Brazell Field in Phoenix.

"I see a lot of plusses," Brock said. "We have a lot of fringe players who can be very important to us and we've been very impressed with them. So I'm encouraged by that, along with the fact that we really didn't play that poorly on defense in the series."

Brock especially praised shortstop Kurt Ehmann, who has exceeded almost everyone's expectations with his play so far. Concerns were raised about his hitting earlier in the year, but Ehmann is batting .357 with 11 RBI, including the game-winner in the ninth inning of ASU's 4-3 win over UT Friday.

The junior college transfer's talent has been most useful on defense, where he has displayed excellent range and committed only one error in 68 opportunities this season.

"I couldn't be more pleased with Ehmann," Brock said. "All he does — his whole manner and everything else — I just flat-out love. It's amazing he's picked up everything so fast, but he's a quick learner and his approach and attitude toward the game are great. He's just a hell of a shortstop."

The Sun Devils received an added lift from outfielder Scott Samuels, who has stepped in for the injured Tommy Adams and gone 6-for-15 with three RBI in the four games he has started.

Samuels, a sophomore biology major who walked on at ASU after one season at West Valley (Calif.) College, had his best effort against the Longhorns Saturday by going 3-for-6 with an RBI.

"Samuels is a guy who has come out of nowhere," Brock said. "It's hard to imagine him staying as sharp as he has been, but it makes you feel good because you know he's such a talent. Maybe you'd think it was someone about him being hot for just a weekend, but this is possibly something that could last."

Brock's biggest concern is the lack of depth in his pitching staff, something made brutally apparent in Sunday's loss. UT knocked starter Tony Pena out of the game in the third inning and the Sun Devils issued 15 walks, which tied the school record set against UCLA in 1987.

Gary Tatterson is expected to start against GCU, who is fresh off a 10-8 victory against New Mexico State Sunday. Tatterson has clearly been the most consistent performer on the staff this season, as the senior is 2-0 with a 1.15 ERA and only nine walks in 31½ innings.

Brock said he hopes to remove Tatterson after about six innings — should he last that long — in order to rest him for this weekend's Six-Pac opener against No. 2 Stanford.

Ankle injury leaves ASU wrestling with less 'Miller time'

By LORENZO SIERRA Jr.
State Press

For the ASU wrestling team, "Miller time" has become "hold-your-breath-and-wait time."

The Sun Devils' Ray Miller, a 158 pound All-American, may be forced to miss the Pac-10 Championship this weekend in Palo Alto, Calif., due to a sprained ankle he suffered in Sunday's dual meet loss to Cal State-Bakersfield.

Miller, a sophomore, was injured after he and opponent Brian Malavar were declared out of bounds with 1:57 left in the first period. Miller stayed on the mat and the team called an injury time out. Miller continued in the match, but was limping badly.

Fifty-four seconds later, the Sun Devils called a second injury time out for Miller. While Miller sat on the mat, ASU coach Bobby Douglas shook his head at Miller and said "it's over."

"I wanted to keep on going, but coach made a wise decision," Miller said. "It hurt. I couldn't stand on it and twist. I tried the best I could."

For Miller, this injury marks the third time he has fallen lame during a home match.

"Maybe it's a jinx," he said. "I don't understand why I keep getting hurt."

According to team physician Larry Rivero, Miller's sprain falls in the moderate range. According to Miller, it was the ligaments, and not the bones, that took most of the punishment.

Rivero, along with the rest of the staff, is hoping to have Miller back for the Pac-10 Championship.

"We're going to see if we can devise something to get him into the Pac-10s," Rivero said. "But we're not going to jeopardize his health."

Douglas' evaluation of the situation leans towards the down side.

"It doesn't look very optimistic," Douglas said.

To qualify for the NCAA Championship March 14-16, Miller needs to compete at the Pac-10 tournament. If Miller's ankle is not 100 percent, he can still make the national tournament in a wild-card situation.

In another scenario, Miller needs only one win in the tournament to receive a bid from the NCAA to compete for a national title. Last year Miller placed fifth nationally.

Miller knows he might have to wrestle injured, but it does not phase him.

"I'll just have to get tough," he said.

If Miller receives a wild-card bid, he will have nearly three weeks to recover.

"It's (time between tournaments) going to give me a chance to get on my feet," Miller said. "I'm really optimistic."

Track gets mixed results at Reno

By MARTY MURPHY
State Press

The ASU track team was hoping the right numbers would come up in Reno, Nev., this weekend.

That was and was not the case in the Wolf Pack Invitational.

ASU had gone to Reno primarily to qualify the women's 4x400-meter relay team and a few other athletes in individual events for the NCAA Indoor Championship.

The women fell short in their 4x400 bid, registering a 3:42.40, but they needed a 3:41.85 to automatically qualify for the NCAAs, according to Sun Devil coach Tom Jones.

"The women set a provisional mark, but they didn't get the time they needed," Jones said. "We wanted the women to qualify, so that Maicel (Malone) could run more at the NCs."

Jones was referring to the fact that the ASU junior is currently qualified in the 55-meter hurdles, 200-meter dash, 400-meter run and is a member of a qualified 4x400 relay team. Jones wants to qualify a relay team without Malone that could make the finals once it arrives at the NCAA Championship. If that team makes the finals, then Malone could run on it after running her other events during the relay team's preliminary heats.

Malone, for her part, ran a 51.90 in an open 400-meter race, the fastest time ever recorded by a collegiate in that event and easily under the 54.15 needed for automatic qualification.

Along with the 4x400 women's team, there was also 4x400 men's team that was succeeded in qualifying. The team of senior Ed Lovelace, freshman Michael Sulcer, senior Robert Rucker and junior Thomas Koech posted a time of 3:11.63 and an automatic berth in the NCAAs.

In the women's open 800 meters, ASU's freshman Sharette Garcia put up a 2:12.6, just ahead of senior Toinette Holmes, who had a 2:14.10.

Erik Walbot, a junior transfer from Phoenix College, finished second in the men's 800 meters with a time of 1:53.7.

The women did well in 55-meter hurdles, where LaShawn Simmons finished first at 7.8. Lisa Hale placed second with a 7.9 and Tesra Bester was fourth with a 8.1. They needed 7.74s for automatic NCAA qualification.

Those same three women finished one, three and four in the long jump. Simmons jumped 19-7, Bester went 19-2 and Hale leaped 19-0.

"We just wanted to qualify some people," Jones said. "I was really pleased with the girls' performances."

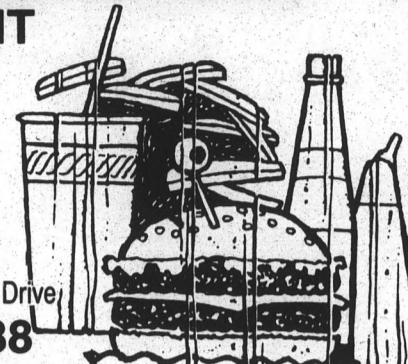

Jones said he did not care about the final scores because the point of going to Reno was to compete on the fast, 195-meter banked track and run quality times.

IF YOUR BUSINESS WOULD LIKE TO SPONSOR THE HOROSCOPES, PLEASE CALL 965-6555.

FOR WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1991

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)  Innovative thinking will bring you success in business today. Though it should be a period of good income, a difference could arise with another over a money concern.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)  You're inspired in your thinking now and may be drawn to a new intellectual or metaphysical interest. With partners there's a need for compromise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)  You may be reformulating some of your plans in connection with long range financial interests today. On the job you could feel stymied about one project.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)  Social prospects improve considerably today. Singles enjoy romantic introductions and couples have happy times visiting with friends. An outburst of temperament is possible tonight.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)  A chance to do something different from your usual routine arises in business today. Organizational skills are tops now. Family matters preoccupy you tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)  You'll be planning an unusual entertainment for the children now. Meetings with advisers are favored. Creativity is a plus. Someone you deal with tonight is opinionated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)  You'll be making positive changes at home base today. Dealings with bankers, real estate people and insurance agents are favored. Avoid monetary disputes tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)  It's a day when you'll be able to read between the lines successfully. Partnership interests are highlighted, but try not to be self-insistent after dark.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)  You'll come up with new ways to improve income and status now. However, you could meet up with some resistance to one of your ideas in the late p.m. Timing is important today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)  The unusual in the way of entertainment will appeal to you now. Romance is a plus today, but a friend is either manipulative or shows signs of jealousy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)  Getting things done around the house will be one of your priorities for today. Quiet pursuits and family pastimes bring you joy. Someone in authority seems bossy.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) You'll be making some new friends today. A talk you hear now could be inspirational. Group endeavors are favored. Tonight could bring a contest of wills.

YOU BORN TODAY are empathetic with a strong sense of service. You work well in partnership and have a strong need for financial and emotional security. You may be somewhat high-strung, however, and need to be careful that your temperament doesn't get in the way of your overall progress. Law, religion, and government service are some of the fields which will bring you fulfillment. Birthdate of Roy Cohn, lawyer; Mary Garden, opera singer; and Amanda Blake, actress.
