NAU accepting fewer transfer credits

By JENNIFER FRANKLIN
State Press

NAU's decision to accept fewer community college credits in criminal justice studies could cause an influx of Maricopa Community College students to ASU, a Scottsdale Community College official said Wednesday.

"We're very upset about (NAU's decision), but we're very thankful that ASU opened the door even wider for our students," said Carl Russell, coordinator of the criminal justice program at SCC.

Earlier this spring, NAU's criminal justice department changed the number of credits it would accept from 18 to six — a measure students said is unjust.

"A lot of students are kind of left hanging about what to do," said Steve McCloud, a student senator at SCC.

He added that the Associated Students of SCC Senate passed a resolution condemning NAU for changing the number of transfer credits it would accept.

SCC officials said ASU will accept a total of 27 credit hours, and UofA will accept 6 hours.

John Hewitt, chairman of NAU's criminal justice department, defended his university's decision, saying that students at the community colleges should realize that they are only meant to be two-year colleges.

"They have a lot more faculty who don't have Ph.D.'s, and they really shouldn't have a lot of those courses transfer," he said.

Hewitt said he doubts that NAU's new standards will influence students to attend other universities.

"Students will still get a far better deal at NAU than at ASU," he said.

ASU justice studies advisor Jim Fieberg said he was unaware of the change in NAU's transfer requirements.

While Fieberg said he could not determine if the change would have an impact on ASU's department, he said the majority of ASU's justice studies program are transfer students.

Suspect sought in sexual abuse, exposure cases

By TEENA CHADWELL
State Press

An ASU police official said Wednesday he will ask his department to call in its special operations unit to patrol Parking Structure 3 after four ASU students fell prey to incidents involving sexual abuse and indecent exposure.

Sgt. Bill Wright, information officer for the ASU Department of Public Safety, said the same suspect is believed to be responsible for the acts.

Each incident occurred between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., and the description of the suspect is similar in each case, according to police, who said the latest incidents occurred on March 18.

That day, an ASU student said she saw a man standing near the stairwell on the third floor of the parking structure at both 3:35 p.m. and 4 p.m.

The victim said that when she returned to the structure the second time, the man unbuttoned his pants and started to follow her, and she ran to her car and locked the doors. The suspect then stood next to her window and exposed his genitals, the student reported to police.

The man was not located.

About a half hour earlier that same day, an ASU employee reported seeing a man "kind of lurking around" on the third floor when she was walking to her car, Wright said.

At first, the employee said, the man looked as if he was urinating. But he then started following her, slowing his pace as she slowed hers, and speeding up as she walked faster, according to the employee.

No actual crime occurred, but the woman said the man stood behind her car, staring, and eventually walked toward

Leaders losing attendance points in 'Day in the Life' program

By KEN BROWN
State Press

Campus leaders said Wednesday they are disappointed with the low participation in a program designed to educate state leaders about the rigors of daily student life — but have no plans to scrap the idea.

"The program itself hasn't been successful," said ASASU Campus Affairs Vice President Frank McCune. "Let's face it — the numbers aren't there."

Although more than 200 leaders have been invited to participate in the "Day in the Life of a Student" program, less than 10 have taken part since its inception in 1988.

McCune said the program's concept is "a great way to promote awareness," but added that low participation defeats its purpose.

He said student government officials must increase their efforts to lure lawmakers to campus if the program is to work.

The program, which places state officials in the shoes of students from ASU, UofA and NAU for a day, was initiated by former ASASU President John Fees.

ASASU College of Architecture Sen. Andy McGuire said "We felt that a lot of legislators didn't understand what we go through day-to-day."

Arizona Gov. Fife Symington, gubernatorial run-off candidate Terry Goddard, all Arizona Board of Regents members and the entire Arizona Legislature are among the individuals who were invited by ASASU.

Regents Andy Hurwitz, Herman Chanen, Eddie Basha and ASU President Lattie Coor have participated.

Basha, who spent a day at ASU last month, said many officials would like to participate, but do not have enough time.

"None of the regents are interested in short-changing students," Basha said, adding that he has grown closer to students since his visit. "I can't speak for the others, but there's just so many things that need to be done."

Regent Edith Auslander agreed.

"We've been trying to select a (UofA) president, the Legislature's in session, we all have jobs," she said. "It's just a matter of too much happening at once."

Auslander said the program was a "wonderful idea," adding that she hopes to be able to participate before her term ends this year.

Student leaders said they will continue the program, hoping to increase turnout by more actively recruiting individuals to bring on campus.

Afterhours bars may need permit to operate

By DAVID A. PUNDT
State Press

Tempe City Council members will examine a proposed ordinance today that would require all establishments offering afterhours to conform to the same rules, which require nightclubs to close at 6 a.m.

Nightclubs previously had been authorized by the city for the same hours — 1 a.m. to 6 a.m. — through a special zoning use permit that applied only to those establishments requesting permits after the rule was in place. Those clubs now operating without a use permit fell under a "grandfather" clause because their afterhours operations began before the change.

Officials said that under the new rules, all afterhours operations would have to apply for a standard permit and discard the individualized rules granted to them in the past.

If the proposed ordinance is accepted by the council tonight, it will go through the public hearings process and come back to council members for final approval.

"This is predominantly a procedural change," said assistant city attorney Jill Kennedy, "and there will not necessarily be a stoppage of afterhours operations."

"We'd like to solve some of the mostly administrative problems that the city and applicants are experiencing."

The suggested ordinance is a compilation of items from the state liquor licensing procedure, zoning ordinances and provisions from the Phoenix City Code.

"If the person applying for the afterhours license has a liquor license, they've already satisfied most of these requirements," Kennedy said. "We would like to go into the process being up front with the applicants — making sure that they understand what's required.

"It also will allow us to know for certain who the operators will be," she said, "and that they will be earnest in trying to keep minors out — and stop the serving of liquor afterhours in the establishment."

Tempe Vice Mayor Carol Smith said afterhours operations need to be regulated.

"Personally, I get a little nervous about becoming the afterhours capital of the Valley," she said. "We don't want to attract an element that is not there for primarily entertainment."

Smith said the new procedure would be a way for the city to really know who is running the operations.

Police haul away Yeltsin supporters

Soviet government trucks are used to form a barricade around the famed Red Square Wednesday following President Mikhail Gorbachev's decree to ban demonstrations in Moscow.

Red Square sealed off on eve of banned rally

MOSCOW (AP) — Police hauled away supporters of Boris Yeltsin and sealed off Red Square on Wednesday, the eve of a banned rally to defend the Russian republic leader from hard-liners' efforts to oust him.

Fear of violence gripped this capital of eight million residents as authorities said they would stop the rally. Helicopters hovered over the city and armored vehicles stood by at a military base not far from the Kremlin.

"Don't shoot, brothers, we are of the same blood!" the radical newspaper Kuranty said in a front-page appeal to police and soldiers.

In Washington, the Bush administration in an unusual action reminded the Soviet Union of its commitment under the Helsinki accords to allow public demonstrations.

As a signer of the 1975 accords, Moscow "reaffirmed the right of peaceful assembly and demonstrations," said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler. However, restrictions on the right of peaceful assembly "are sometimes necessary for public safety and other legitimate grounds," she said.

Yeltsin, the popular chairman of the Russian federation parliament, faces a possible no-confidence vote at a congress of 1,063 deputies from across the largest and most populous of the 15 Soviet republics. He made no comment Wednesday on the demonstration or the no-confidence move.

The move to oust him began last month after he accused Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev of rolling back democratic reforms and demanded his resignation.

Yeltsin's defiant supporters said Wednesday they would proceed with Thursday's rally on Manezh Square near the Kremlin, despite a three-week ban on street demonstrations imposed Monday by Gorbachev's Cabinet of Ministers.

Kurds say Saddam readying assault on Kirkuk

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — Kurdish rebels on Wednesday claimed they had seized a government-held air base and camp in northern Iraq, but said there were signs Saddam Hussein's forces were preparing for an assault on a key rebel-held city.

A statement from the Kurdistan Democratic Party said the Iraqi army was massing forces in Saddam's hometown of Tikrit to launch an attack on the northern oil city of Kirkuk, which was seized by the insurgents.

The statement, sent to The Associated Press in Nicosia, Cyprus, by telex, could not be independently confirmed.

Saddam has been struggling to quell rebellions in the north and south that flared after his defeat by the allies in the Persian Gulf war. The fighting halted with a cease-fire a month ago.

President Bush said Wednesday it was unlikely that Saddam will remain in power for long because the Iraqi people "are fed up with him."

"There's enough dissent and disorder but it appears the Iraqi citizens are trying to do something about this," he told reporters in Bethesda, Md. "We'll wait and see how it plays out, but I think we'd have to put him down as fairly doubtful at this point."

Kurdish leaders reported gains in northern Iraq — but also heavy casualties. They said guerrillas overran an Iraqi air base near Kirkuk on Tuesday and captured two Soviet-made warplanes, a MiG-21 fighter and a Soviet-made Sukhoi bomber.

The rebels also said they seized a government camp at Faardiya, on the road from Dohuk to Mosul. They said the two installations were among the last that government forces controlled in northern Iraq.

The Kurdistan Democratic Party said in a statement issued in London that the attack on the Khalid military air base was launched to stop the bombing of rebel-held areas.

The statement said more than 1,000 people were killed in the past week in air attacks on the northern cities of Kirkuk, Kefri, Dohuk, Kalar and Tuz Khormatu.

The Kurds said they feared a new threat — starvation. The only supply route now

Bush, Schwarzkopf disagree over decision to end war

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an embarrassing public flap, President Bush on Wednesday disputed Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf's claim to have urged further fighting to "reap great destruction" on Iraq's army at the time Bush ordered a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war.

Bush said all hands had been in "total agreement" that the time had come to halt but Schwarzkopf remembered it differently: "Frankly, my recommendation had been, you know, continue the march."

Schwarzkopf, the highly acclaimed architect of the allied victory over Iraq, told an interviewer that history would second-guess Bush's decision, and he said the cease-fire had opened an escape route for fleeing Iraqi forces.

The White House and Pentagon moved swiftly to challenge the general's version of events, as related to television interviewer David Frost. In a written statement, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Schwarzkopf had "raised no objection to terminating hostilities."

Further, Cheney said both Schwarzkopf and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, "were consulted and made the recommendation to me and to the president that we had achieved our military objectives and agreed that it was time to end the campaign."

Cheney's statement amounted to a resounding rebuke of Schwarzkopf, who has been rumored in line for a fifth star or the job of Army chief of staff.

"I have such high regard for Gen. Schwarzkopf that I'll let him explain what he said," Bush said, talking with reporters at the conclusion of his annual physical examination. "All I'm talking about is the facts, and Secretary Cheney put the facts out very clearly."

There was no immediate comment Wednesday from Schwarzkopf or the U. S. Central Command in Saudi Arabia.

The general's comments in the interview raised questions about Bush's judgment in terminating the hostilities when he did and thus could diminish the luster of an operation that has been perceived as a huge success for the president, driving his popularity ratings to 91 percent.

"It's just one of those Washington flaps," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, adding that Schwarzkopf was not in trouble. "Still a good man, just said the wrong thing."

"He's a great general. He did a great job. But we want to set the record straight," Fitzwater added.

In the interview, the general praised Bush's Feb. 27 decision to end the war as "very humane" and "courageous" but made clear that Schwarzkopf wanted to keep fighting.

He said Bush's decision was "one of those ones that historians are going to second-guess, you know, forever. . . . Why didn't we go for one more day versus why did we stop when we did when we had them completely routed?"

The White House said it was Schwarzkopf's upbeat assessment on the progress of the war on Feb. 27 that persuaded Bush to call it off. Both Powell and Cheney recommended the cease-fire, Fitzwater said.

"The president said, 'Fine, but what does Norm think about this?'" Powell walked over to the president's desk in the Oval Office, picked up the phone and called Schwarzkopf in Saudi Arabia . . . and asked if he thought that was feasible and appropriate, and he said 'Yes.' Powell turned around to the president and said, 'Norm says he can handle it,'" Fitzwater said.

In his interview, Schwarzkopf said he had wanted to "continue the march."

"I mean we had them in a rout and we could have continued to, you know, reap great destruction upon them. We could have completely closed the door and made it in fact a battle of annihilation."

The general said Bush's decision "did leave some escape routes open for them to get back out and I think it was a very humane decision and a very courageous decision on his part, also."

Baseball is still the greatest American pastime

Dan Nowicki
Columnist

Because my life is nothing but a continual quest to find something to do, spring break always presents a difficult dilemma for me.

Even during the school week, when I have more than a thousand things to do, I'm perennially bored and ultimately accomplish very little. With a solid week to play around with, I never know where to start so I always wind up doing nothing at all.

Knowing that a hot dog at the ballpark tastes better than steak at the Ritz (I think Humphrey Bogart said that once, or something like it), I decided to take in an Arizona Cactus League spring training game at Phoenix Municipal Stadium one day. I'll admit that the fact some friends offered me a free ticket had something to do with the decision.

On the way to the stadium I was informed that we'd be seeing the Oakland Athletics play the Milwaukee Brewers. When we got there we discovered that we'd be seeing the second-string Oakland Athletics play the second-string Milwaukee Brewers.

The public address announcer kept reminding us that the Athletics were the defending American League champs, but you wouldn't know it from the line-up. None of Oakland's big guns were anywhere to be seen, though a rumor traveling through the bleachers whispered that one of two players jogging the length of the outfield fence was none other than the controversial Rickey

Henderson himself. But who really cares? It's the atmosphere that counts.

And the people. You can't beat the crowds, so don't try it.

One older woman (past retirement age) was loudly relating an anecdote about the historic interrupted-by-an-act-of-God World Series of 1989 to a gentlemen in the row ahead of her and anyone else within earshot.

"I was right up there next to Jose Canseco when that earthquake hit," the raconteur said, all but slapping her knee as she laughed. "Boy, I never thought I'd see him so scared."

"Well, I guess we were all pretty shaken," she modestly added.

Her listener seemed to be enjoying the story, but he could have been faking. He'd probably heard it before.

I don't know how many thousands of fans attended the third game of the 1989 World Series in San Francisco, but I think I've met them all. I always end up sitting next to them in the stands.

As much as I love Major League Baseball (and, heck, I love it a lot), I can't help but feel a certain degree of paranoia while hanging around in the bleachers.

In fact, I am a nervous wreck.

One of my main sources of apprehension results from a deep-rooted fear, probably imagined, of being struck on the head by a foul ball. For this reason I make it a point to arrive at the ballpark at least a healthy hour early, in order to ensure a seat in the bleachers behind one of the many alert-looking youngsters who always bring their ball gloves to the game with them.

Now don't get the idea that I can't hold my own in a grandstand full of Little Leaguers, lazy businessmen and assorted senior citizens. During my grammar school days, I was something of a celebrity in right field, and I don't think it's an idle boast when I say that I could shag flies with the best of them.

No, my phobia grows from the periods of drowsiness that begin to occur in the later innings — a direct result of imbibing alcohol all day in the sun-soaked bleachers. I'm afraid that I'll awake from one of these happy dazes in a hospital bed with a baseball's stitching pattern permanently impressed on my scalp.

I try to make it a point to doze with one eye open.

At $2.50 per can of beer, it takes a wealthy man to get good and drunk at the ballpark. For this reason, the 20-ouncer, at a mere $3 a cup, is the better deal for anyone on a reporter's salary or less (of course, this basically just leaves the bums who snuck in under the fence, and they usually bring their own nose-paint anyway).

And, no, wiseguy, I wasn't driving.

Miraculously, I managed to survive all nine innings of my ballpark adventure without getting konked on the cranium, though I did get sunburned a little on the back of the neck. If I recall correctly, I think the Brewers won by a run or two.

All in all I had a great time, and I'd go through the ritual every day if I could.

I didn't even mind the red neck because, when you think about it, that's an awfully small price to pay to participate in The Great American Pastime.

Post-war excitement less than fun for some

Mike Royko

Mayor Daley says Chicago's parade to honor the gulf war troops will be the biggest in the city's history. If so, fine. Everybody loves a good parade.

And there will be big parades in other cities, more joyous family reunion scenes at airports and the grand finale on the 4th of July when President Bush leads the nation in a massive celebration.

But watching all of this, I have to wonder how veterans of other wars are reacting.

Actually, I'm really not wondering. I'm sure many or most veterans are enjoying the patriotic surge. But some that I've talked to are bemused or puzzled.

As Harry, a Chicagoan nudging 60, said: "I had to laugh at something I saw on TV. There were these reservists who just got back. And there were people all over them at the airport.

"They interviewed one guy about how he felt, and talked about how great it was to be back and what an experience it had been. It turned out he had been there about three months and was some kind of a welder at an air base.

"I'm not taking anything away from guys like him. He did what he was told to do, and that's what it's about. But I had to think about what it was like when I got back. I was an infantryman in Korea and that was the Chinese army up there and they were one hell of an army and I saw them up close. I froze my ass off for a whole winter and a lot of guys in my outfit were killed. I was just lucky it wasn't me.

"So when I got back, I went home and my mother cried. My father shook my hand. Then I went to the neighborhood bar, and the guys I knew asked me how it went. I told them I was alive, so it went OK. That was the last time anybody mentioned it. Maybe it's the TV. It wasn't all over the place in those days."

Roger is 67 and lives in a suburb. "I spent my 21st birthday as a POW. I was caught right in the middle of the Battle of the Bulge. I'm not proud to have been a POW. I suffered some and I know a lot of my buddies did too. And they beat the hell out of me too. I lost 50 pounds. I was bloody from lice. Our guys marched for 10 days with no shoes on because the Germans took our shoes.

"But I'm no hero. You want to talk heroes, let's talk about the guys from Bataan. Or those English guys at Dunkirk. Those guys were heroes.

"A lot of this, to me it's like propaganda to get America to feel like Rambo. I think a lot of veterans feel this way, and we're not afraid to talk. That's why I don't want you to use my name. We sound like sour grapes. So we can't say anything. I don't like this. Everybody feels good, everybody feels euphoria. Is that what we killed all those people for?"

"Oh yea, when I got home. They mustered me out when I got off the ship. Then I went home. It was no big deal."

There were some grand parades after World War II, but most of the GIs weren't in them. They got off slow troop ships, went to a military base, received their discharge papers and took a train or a bus to their hometowns.

I remember the arrival of one of my relatives, the family hero. A paratrooper, he spent almost two years in the Pacific fighting on one island after another. He was in a foxhole with his closest buddy, the best man at his wedding, when his friend took a Japanese bullet in the head.

The day he came back, his young wife and the rest of the family gathered at a tiny flat his wife had rented on Lincoln near Montrose. There was some beer, tears and sandwiches. Then everybody went home and left the young couple alone.

A week later he took a job scrubbing the outside of streetcars until something better turned up.

And to this day, he doesn't talk about his own wartime experiences or, for that matter, about wars in general. The last time he mentioned war, I think he said: "They're stupid."

Many of the politicians who are organizing the festivities say they will not only be honoring the gulf war victors, but also the veterans of other wars.

I suppose that's a nice gesture, and many veterans will appreciate it. But there will be others who will ask to be excused. No offense meant, of course, but they had their own wars, and they have their own memories.

Court ruling separates safety and discrimination

Ellen Goodman
Washington Post Writer's Group

BOSTON — Johnson Controls didn't have a mommy track. What they had was something different. It was a Maybe, Could-be, Might-Someday-Be-A-Mommy track.

The company had a policy that assumed every fertile woman was a pregnancy waiting to happen. They banned these women from working in jobs with high exposure to lead on the grounds that some unborn — indeed unconceived — children might eventually suffer damage.

Johnson called this a "fetal-protection policy." So have many other companies. But it is not too cynical in these lawsuit-phobic days to call it a "company-protection policy."

In either case, the Supreme Court came up with another name for this policy. They called it sex discrimination and said it's illegal.

With rare unanimity, the court ruled (March 20) that Johnson can't ban every fertile woman — from menses to menopause — because of fear of health risks or lawsuits. They said that federal laws against sex discrimination clearly prohibit an employer from barring women from hazardous jobs.

To have lost this landmark case would have been disastrous for the millions of women who work in any remotely hazardous workplace, whether with lead or computer chips, in hospitals or even airplanes. As Justice Harry Blackmun wrote, "Concern for a woman's existing or potential offspring historically has been the excuse for denying women equal-employment opportunities."

But if the Johnson Controls case closes one chapter of history, it doesn't by any means close the book. In the wake of this decision, women have shored up their right to equal treatment in the workplace. We still haven't decided what that equal treatment should look like.

Remember when women set their eyes on the prize of equality? The target of the early laws against sex discrimination was the double standard. Many assumed that the single standard-bearer was male. Equality would arrive in all its golden glory when women were treated exactly like men.

That never seemed like a wholly attractive option. Some women who saw how their male counterparts lived divided into two camps. One said, if that's equality, I'll pass. The other held onto the ideal of equality, but began to frame it as part of their vision of a different life for both men and women.

This has been at the crux of the argument between those who settle for mommy tracks and those who want parenting trails, between those who would opt for maternity leave and those who hold out for family leave.

The Johnson Controls story is part of this debate. Women who work with lead can indeed endanger a fetus. But so can men. Johnson tried to turn questions of the workplace into questions of gender. Their mommy-to-be-track created sex discrimination without solving the problem of fetal damage.

The court in turn resolved the issue of inequality but not of safety. They ruled that women have the equal right to decide, whether or not they want equal work at equally hazardous jobs and even whether some want to equally risk damaging their fetuses. Talk about your dubious rights.

Justice Blackmun wrote, "Decisions about the welfare of future children must be left to the parents who conceive, bear, support and raise them rather than to the employers who hire those parents." That's fine as far as it goes, but does it mean that bosses can be irresponsible as long as they are equally irresponsible to all workers and their offspring?

"This decision denies employers the right to make corrections that are at best half a loaf," says Phyllis Segal, president of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund. But she adds, "if we are to value healthy offspring and deal with workplace safety, we need a whole loaf."

The Supreme Court wiped the ancient, stale crust of sex discrimination off the table. The case had not only threatened women's rights, but as often happens, it had clouded the real issue of the dangerous workplace.

The question moves now from the courts to workers, employers, legislators and regulators. What will this equal workplace look like? Safe or hazardous? Men and women both share a stake in the outcome.

Faculty rejects discrimination

Editor:

I would like to praise the ASU Faculty Senate for their decision to pass a resolution in favor of ROTC scholarships for homosexual men and women here at ASU. In a time of eroding civil rights and considering the seemingly intolerant political atmosphere here in Arizona, positive steps like these show that members of the faculty do not want and will not tolerate discriminatory measures against any group of individuals at ASU.

Unfortunately, the statements by the senator for department of military science, Major Edward Kronholm, reveal why a resolution like this is necessary.

He says "scholarships are not given to students who say they are homosexual because the U. S. military does not allow homosexuals to enlist."

Well, Major Kronholm, homosexuals do enlist in the army, although they may check the "I'm not a homosexual" box on their forms. Many gays and lesbians serve in our armed forces, in fact many are over in Saudi Arabia right now. The military has no way to root out every gay or lesbian soldier. It is impossible to discern who is or isn't homosexual based on their appearance, speech patterns or zodiac sign. Soldiers who have been kicked out because their sexual preferences have been discovered are often highly decorated and respected individuals; the fact that they are homosexual had nothing to do with their performance.

Major Kronholm's main objection is that members of the military from "many socio-economic backgrounds" do not condone homosexuality. This particularly weak excuse was used in the past to justify the exclusion of African-Americans, Japanese-Americans and women from the armed forces. I expect that even today you would find members of certain "socio-economic backgrounds" who would prefer that these groups not serve in the military.

What are these socio-economic groups? People who make more than $13,000 but less than $14,000? People who like heavy metal music and hate disco? People of a certain skin color? Why should undefinable groups have the power to determine military policy?

Kronholm states that homosexuals could not retain the respect of those they command. Well, I suspect that members of many socio-economic groups who happen to be lesbian or gay feel the same about Kronholm.

Borrowed time

Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to and in agreement with Renee N. Devoley's letter on Feb. 22. I, too, am frustrated with the meter situation as well as the general parking situation at ASU. Unlike Ms. Devoley, I am a regular parking meter user on campus. Because many part-time students such as myself cannot afford the high prices of a parking permit, the choices are extremely limited.

Parking at the free two-hour parking spaces scattered around campus would be ideal. However, because of their scarcity, it is often difficult to find one of these "prime" spots. Parking at one of the shopping centers near campus (such as the Cornerstone) is another option available to students. Unfortunately, these centers are often inconveniently far from classes.

The possibility of being towed is an additional problem.

As a last resort, students without parking permits are often forced to use the meters around campus. This would be fine if the time limit on the meters was longer than 30 to 50 minutes.

Because of this time limit, students who choose to attend class from start to finish are often stuck with a $10 ticket when they get out. Coincidentally, these tickets are often being written just as the student gets to his or her car. These tickets can quickly add up! As Ms. Devoley suggests, the time limit on the meters needs to be increased to at least 80 minutes. Only then can the situation be rectified.

Funding fouled up

Editor:

Where does our money go? Continued tuition increases, housing fees, recreation fees, studio fees, parking fees, etc. have been returned to us, as mentioned in the headlines daily, in the forms of budget cuts, funding problems, course cutbacks and instructor lay-offs. One headline, published in the March 13 issue of the State Press, stuck out like a sore thumb: "Public art project gets go-ahead..."

This headline sticks out as sorely as the costly artwork that is blessing the lawn of Hayden Library (I'm referring to the solar panels on poles).

Don't get me wrong; I enjoy art and the beauty it brings to public spaces, but what good will it do if there are no students to appreciate it?

I resent seeing artwork scattered around a university that doesn't have the money to support an educational system for the 40,000 plus students that it takes money from. I am aware of asinine fund appropriations that require funds to be spent annually on specific items (i.e. artwork) or the money is taken from ASU. I am also angered by the overspending that this institution takes part in. Many students (and faculty) give up the luxuries of entertainment and art to be a part of this University. It doesn't look good when our sacrifices appear in the form of $60,000 art projects and course cutbacks.

Leadership consultant discusses metaphors, racism

By JUDI TANCOS
State Press

A gift; a market; a body; up and down; a journey; art. These metaphors, all used to describe life, also effect how we look at the problems of racism and sexism, a well-known leadership consultant said Wednesday.

"These terms (racism and sexism) — people use them so easily, and they mean so many different things to so many different people," said Robert Terry, director of the Reflective Leadership Center and senior fellow of the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

About 100 ASU students showed up to listen to Terry's comments on "Racism, Sexism and Leadership." The event was sponsored by the Campus Environment Team, Sigma Chi fraternity, Associated Students of ASU, the University Relations Department and the Management Development Advisory Committee.

"How you frame (the problem) determines the way you want to solve it," said the blue-eyed man, whose white beard and wire-rimmed glasses made him resemble Santa Claus.

Terry urged students to look at different ways of framing the problems of racism and sexism "so we can come together."

"It's going into the unknown that requires courage because we don't have the answers, and we're not even really sure what the questions are," Terry said, posing a question that all leaders will face: "What's going on?"

ASU is in the market metaphor, Terry said, adding that this will do "zilch" for actively recruiting diversity.

Looking at life as a market equates everything to a trade, causing racism and sexism to undermine the marketplace, he said.

"What is prejudice? It's lying, and discrimination keeps you out of the marketplace," Terry said, adding that the solution would be the Equal Rights Amendment, which would move big government out of the marketplace.

Affirmative action is the solution for those who view life as an interdependent body, while others favor taking responsibility for the "shadow side of ourselves" that fuels racism and liberating the "downs" from the oppression of the "ups."

"The University has got to be diverse," Terry said, referring to education as an "organized bumping" along through the journey of life.

"If you only bump up against your kind, then you never learn anything," he added.

Terry said fear turns a good metaphor into a bad metaphor and urged students to find solutions at ASU that would benefit everyone.

"(Fear diminishes) if we can see that we all benefit," he said.

Payphone for deaf students available April 2

By DIANE SANTORICO
State Press

ASU will be the first Arizona university to install a payphone specifically designed for deaf and hearing impaired students.

The Telecommunications Device for the Deaf will be installed on April 2 in the lobby of Matthews Center, said Tedde Scharf, associate director for Disabled Student Resources.

She said the TDD phone, which U.S. West Communications is installing, will allow deaf, hearing impaired and speech impaired students to communicate by typing their message on a key pad and reading the display.

The keyboard will be housed in a metal drawer underneath the telephone. The phone, which costs users the same as a conventional payphone, will be accessible by wheelchair.

If the receiver of the message is not at a phone equipped with a TDD device, the message will be communicated through an operator-assisted relay device, Scharf said.

"For the deaf students it is the only device they can use, and it gives them privacy," Scharf added.

There is a portable TDD device available for students in the MU. But the device must be checked out and then hooked up to an available payphone, Scharf said.

Gary Jordan, a U.S. West account executive, said they were happy to provide the service.

"We are pleased to be able to help benefit a portion of the ASU population that hasn't been helped before," said Jordan.

Telephone Services Manager Rose Snow said one of her employees noticed one of the several TDD phones at Sky Harbor airport and realized ASU could benefit from them.

Telephone Services and U.S. West Communications approached Disabled Student Resources with the idea.

If the phone gets significant use — 20 TDD phone calls a month for two consecutive months — a second phone will be installed in the MU, Scharf said.

Jordan said he does not think there will ever be more than two TDD phones on campus because of the high costs of installing the units — about $3,000 per unit — and the amount of calls.

"The number of calls probably wouldn't warrant more than two (TDD phones)," he said.

T.J. Soko/State Press

ASU is planning to install pay phones designed for deaf and hearing impaired students April 2.

Scharf said there are about 40 deaf, hearing impaired and speech impaired students that would benefit from the service.

To ensure enforcement of the ban, the Cabinet put police under the control of the Interior Ministry, taking away the authority of the democratically elected Moscow City Council, which had approved the rally.

"Our officers will act in compliance with the law, and marchers will be stopped," Deputy Police Chief Lev Belyanovsky told reporters.

Police and soldiers began enforcing the ban by cordoning off Red Square and shooing away pedestrians from Manezh Square, site of the Czar's equestrian school before the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

In a scene reminiscent of the treatment of dissidents before Gorbachev's perestroika reforms, riot police with rubber truncheons hauled away a handful of protesters outside City Council headquarters who carried signs saying "Yeltsin Is Our Hope."

When an elderly woman resisted, a burly officer twisted her arm behind her back and forced her into a yellow police bus.

Throughout the day, helicopters circled the city, which is usually closed to air traffic.

Twenty-four armored personnel carriers were at a military base in Moscow's Dobrininskaya region, about three miles south of the Kremlin.

District has always been a big feeder to our program," he said.

In addition to student efforts in persuading NAU to change its new standards, Russell said a Maricopa Community College official sent a formal complaint to the dean of instruction at NAU.

"We'll just have to wait to see if it can accomplish anything," he added.

Before NAU's new transfer requirements, most SCC criminal justice students opted for the university, Russell said.

"Now we will encourage our students to attend ASU because it has the best to offer us," he said.

About 375 students are enrolled in criminal justices classes at SCC, with 226 majoring in the department.

"The shock of it is that what we do here best fits the program at NAU, but ASU has accepted our program and they haven't,"

Russell said.

However, he said the entire community college district likely will encourage its students to attend ASU.

"I know that (SCC) will basically be a feeder school to ASU," he said.

Russell questioned the statewide process of articulation — how universities and community colleges decide what classes will transfer each year.

"It really could be an underlying problem, and it certainly causes a lot grief to the students," he said.

ASU officials defended the articulation process.

Fieberg said the process is reviewed annually to ensure classes at the community colleges meet the standards for university programs.

"Articulation should be well thought out and then implemented. That kind of change on a yearly basis can be disruptive," he said.

open is over the short Syrian border, they said.

In southern Iraq, where Saddam's forces have largely succeeded in putting down rebellions by Shiite Moslems, hunger was causing desperation among thousands of refugees fleeing into allied-controlled areas.

In the Iraqi border town of Safwan, food riots broke out Wednesday as Saudi Arabian food trucks arrived.

"We tried to be organized, but the people are just too hungry," said Maj. Youssef Ali Albouri of the Saudi military. "They see the food and they go crazy."

No serious injuries were reported in the rioting.

At the United Nations, a new Security Council resolution would hold Iraq liable for the environmental havoc caused by tactics such as dumping millions of gallons of oil in the Persian Gulf and setting Kuwait's oil wells alight.

The permanent members of the Security Council — the United States, Britain, France, China and Soviet Union — met in private to refine their checklist of conditions the Baghdad government must meet before a permanent cease-fire is approved.

Under the measure, Iraq would have to let U.N. experts destroy its chemical, biological and nuclear weapons and would still face an arms embargo.

A vote by the full Security Council is expected next week.

Meanwhile, tensions grew between Iran and Iraq. The official Iraqi News Agency said Wednesday that Iraq had demanded the return of a helicopter gunship that had made an emergency landing on Monday in Iran.

Also, Iran's U.N. ambassador, Kamal Kharrazi, rejected Iraqi claims that Iranian soldiers had crossed into Iraq and fired on Iraqi soldiers, apparently in support of Iraqi Shiite rebels.

The Iranian comments came in a letter to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar. The Iraqi accusation was made in a letter to the secretary-general a day earlier.

In Iraq, as Saddam struggled to regain control, Baghdad radio reported he had sworn in a new Cabinet and told the ministers they had six months to prove themselves in their posts.

In the broadcast, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, Saddam was quoted as telling the ministers on Tuesday that "a difficult period" lay ahead.

The new ministers were appointed Saturday in a shakeup the United States said was largely cosmetic.

In another development, the Bush administration sought to dampen suggestions that there had been disagreement among top administration and military leaders about the cease-fire.

Desert Storm commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf was quoted as saying in a television interview that at the time President Bush moved to halt the fighting, he had recommended pursuing the fleeing Iraqi forces.

But Defense Secretary Dick Cheney issued a statement saying that Schwarzkopf had raised "no objection" to ending the war against Iraq then.

Finally, Bush said there was no difference "between any of us" on the conduct of the Persian Gulf war.

two other cars to watch her. Finally, the woman said the individual went down to a lower level.

Another student said a man exposed himself in front of her on March 11 while she was in Parking Structure 3.

Two other ASU students reported they were sexually abused in the parking structure on Jan. 17 and Feb. 13. During the first incident, the victim said she was grabbed by the arm and the buttocks after the suspect asked the time. The victim freed herself and the suspect ran away.

During the second incident, the suspect reportedly approached the victim from behind, fondled her and pressed his body against the victim. The victim said she became angry and the suspect fled.

Wright said it is unusual for a suspect to move from a severe crime such as sexual abuse to indecent exposure, a misdemeanor. He warned the man could be dangerous.

Meanwhile, an ASU tram driver said some students now are afraid to use the structure and are parking in Lot 40. The driver asked not to be identified.

The description provided by the victims indicates the suspect could be the same person.

He is described as a white male, 23- to 26-years-old, with light brown to sandy blond collar-length hair, 5-foot-8 to 5-foot-10, 150 pounds. The individual has worn glasses with either prescription or dark lenses in four of the five incidents.

One victim said the suspect had a narrow chin, a tapered jawline with acne and light-colored eyes.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Mickey Potato, a spud resembling Mickey Mouse, is headed for Walt Disney World to be displayed with other natural oddities that look like the rodent.

Michelle Lachance bought a 10-pound bag of potatoes Feb. 24 and found one that bore a resemblance to Mickey.

"Even my 2-year-old said 'That's Mickey Mouse,'" said Mrs. Lachance.

She and her husband, Joe, have sold the potato to Disney for an undisclosed sum, and their three children will get a box of gifts.

The potato is under wraps, literally, having been sealed in plastic by the Demma Fruit Co. It is in the Lachance refrigerator, awaiting departure.

"It's my understanding the Disney people will have it permanently waxed," said Mrs. Lachance.

John Dreyer, spokesman for Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., said the potato's resting place most likely will be in Mickey Starland.

"Last summer, we bought a cow in Minnesota that has an emblem of Mickey Mouse on her side. We got a lot of publicity on that. It was just unusual," he said.

"Then a farmer in Iowa had two pigs with the same mark.

"Since then people are sending us pictures of dogs, cats, horses, you name it, and now the potato. It's an interesting phenomenon and our guests get a big kick out of it. So, where it makes sense and we find the right match, we've begun collecting the natural occurrences that look like Mickey."

ASU to face crucial series with USC

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

Do not anticipate a repeat of the Friday Night Fights when the ASU baseball team hosts USC for a three-game series this week.

But now is when the Sun Devils must begin a battle to get back near the top of the Six-Pac and stay in contention for postseason play.

While most of the pregame attention has centered around the wild donnybrook between the two teams last season, ASU coach Jim Brock said that he hopes tonight's tilt at Packard Stadium at 7 p.m. can signal a new beginning for his team.

"I haven't been 100 percent pleased with what has happened to this point of the season," Brock said. "It's been hard to say any evaluation because we have played a tough schedule and will continue to the rest of the year. But there are areas where we need to make improvement to be a good college baseball team."

With last year's melee almost forgotten, Brock said he does not expect the bitter feelings to return this weekend. The Sun Devils and Trojans engaged a brawl at Packard that caused a 40-minute delay and ended with 10 players being ejected and campus and Tempe police called to the scene.

"I'm really not concerned about something like that happening than in any other game," Brock said. "As a team, we can't lose the perspective of what we have to do. I think both coaches will do their best to avoid a conflict. I don't see it to be a factor since most of the people involved are no longer here."

ASU event coordinator Kurt Klingerman said that he planned on employing the normal eight T-shirt security personnel and four police officers for the games, but added that he would discuss the situation with Brock and adjustments might be made.

The main concern for No. 18 ASU (21-16 overall, 5-7 Six-Pac) is the chance to sneak back into the top two of the conference.

Irwin Daugherty/State Press

ASU infielders Bill Dunn (left) and Kurt Ehmann (right) are just two of the players who the Sun Devils will need big performances from when they meet the red-hot USC Trojans tonight through Saturday at Packard Stadium.

Although USC (26-8-1, 11-1) is ranked second in the nation and appears out of reach for the league lead, the Sun Devils have a shot at catching runner-up Stanford (17-7, 4-3).

But it has been said time and again that for ASU to leave any impact on the Six-Pac race, it must have more consistency from the pitching staff. The lack of depth among the Sun Devil arms has resulted in the blowing of big leads and rising of the team ERA to 6.13, the highest since 1986.

Brock and his coaching staff continue to experiment in hopes of finding a successful combination as reliever Scott Dodd will replace freshman Doug Newstrom in the starting rotation. Dodd will occupy the third spot and is expected to start Saturday.

Sean Rees (5-2, 5.42 ERA) will be on the mound tonight and is looking to avoid the bad luck that has plagued him at various times this season.

The latest episode occurred last Friday in Tucson when Rees, the Six-Pac's strikeout leader at 83, had to leave the game with a finger blister while leading UofA 8-2 in the sixth inning but failed to win when the bullpen could not hold the lead.

Rees will need to extract the most out of his efforts tonight as the Trojans feature a lineup similar to that of Stanford, a team that has given ASU fits during the last two seasons. Like the Cardinal, USC has two big hitters and consistency down the lineup.

Trojan skipper Mike Gillespie has sung the praises of right fielder Mark Smith, who has emerged as a candidate for National Player of the Year by batting .397 and leading the Six-Pac in home runs (13) and RBI (53).

The offense is not limited at Troy as third baseman Jeff Cirillo (.377, 3 HR, 23 RBI) and second baseman Brett Jenkins (.365, 3 HR, 27 RBI) are also among the top-10 hitters in the Six-Pac.

"We're really familiar with people like Smith and Jenkins, the guys who have been playing there for more than two years now," Brock said. "It seems as those guys have been carrying the team almost all season. I don't think either team will be surprised with what they see when things get started."

The biggest surprise at USC this season has been the sudden development of its pitching, which has been rock solid despite entering the year with little experience. The Trojans lead the Six-Pac by a considerable margin with their 3.64 team ERA.

Kent Donnelly (4-0, 3.76 ERA) is the best starter, but the highlight for USC has been its stellar help out of the bullpen from Phil Kendall (6-0, 2.55 ERA) and Eric Hughes (4-0, 2.59 ERA, three saves).

Men's swimmers head to NCAA Championship

By DARREN URBAN
State Press

ASU men's swim coach Ron Johnson has repeatedly emphasized throughout the season that the 1990-91 Sun Devils are the strongest team ever at ASU.

Now the Sun Devils will see if they are the best in the nation, traveling to Austin, Texas, for the NCAA Championship today through Saturday.

"I think we should have a good NCAA," Johnson said. "There is no reason we shouldn't have our best finish ever in the NCAAs."

ASU, who finished the regular season with a 9-1 record, suffered their only loss of the season to No. 2 USC in November. The No. 5 Sun Devils had their biggest win of the year at Mona Plummer Aquatic Complex Feb. 2, beating

Johnson

Stanford 124-119 in the last race of the meet, ASU's first win over the Cardinal in seven years.

Despite the success of the year, Johnson is reluctant to make any predictions for a national championship.

"I don't want to put any pressure on the guys," Johnson said. "It's going to come down to whose on their game. Whoever is best at the meet will take the championship."

The Sun Devils will be sending one of their largest contingents ever to Texas with 16 men, including 11 individual qualifiers.

Leading ASU will be senior Troy Dalbey, who Johnson has called "the most important swimmer in college today." Dalbey, who is petitioning the NCAA for another year of eligibility, will challenge for the 50- and 100-meter freestyle titles.

The Sun Devils are coming off a fourth-place finish at the Pac-10 Championship, but the squad was not at full strength because of the upcoming national meet.

"It was the first time we were able to have guys looking past the Pacs to the NCAAs," Johnson said.

Johnson said there would be about 50 to 60 schools represented this weekend, with half of them having some shot at the title.

"There are 20 to 25 real good teams," Johnson said. "Of course, all of the Pac-10 schools will be in there."

The favorites for the championship remain perennial power and top-ranked Texas and Michigan, along with the Trojans and the Cardinal.

Johnson said his squad has slowed its practice pace down in preparation for Austin.

"The workouts have become easier," Johnson said. "From here on until meet time, it is reduce quantity and improving quality."

Rites of spring: Sun Devils to begin practice

By PAUL CORO
State Press

The ASU football team commences its spring football practice today with 16 starters returning from last season's 4-7 team that finished eighth in the Pac-10.

By NCAA regulations, the Sun Devils' spring practice time has been trimmed from 20 to 15 days, meaning the number of practices in full pads will go down to 10 sessions. Today's practice begins at 3:30 on the ASU practice field off Rural Road and Fifth Street.

Spring practices continue through April 17 with the annual Spring Game April 13 at 10 a.m. at the practice field.

With less time to lay down the foundation in the spring, receivers coach Don Bocchi said little will change.

"We'll still try to accentuate and teach the more fundamental things," Bocchi said. "That's what spring football is for."

"Maybe if there's anything, you'll try to do more of your insertion of plays in the days that you're wearing shorts and see what they're looking like in pants."

Fourth-year head coach Larry Marmie will have a squad this season that returns nine starters on defense, seven on offense and one kicker.

Even more, Marmie gets back 34 of the 44 ASU players who finished last year's injury-riddled season on the two-deep roster, including second-team All-Pac-10 cornerback Phillip Sparks, who will be a senior, and three all-Pac honorable mentions in junior-to-be split end Eric Guliford, senior-to-be outside linebacker Darren Woodson and junior-to-be placekicker Mike Richey. Kelvin Fisher (fullback), Shane Collins (defensive tackle) and Mike Ritter (strong tackle) will also be seniors.

ASU comes into spring practice with 11 injuries that keep key Sun Devils out. Heading into his final season, quarterback Kurt Lasher is hurt most by his injury, a broken thumb on his throwing hand. Lasher, the backup signal-caller, was expected to challenge sophomore-to-be Bret Powers for the starting job.

The injury will allow senior-to-be Bobby Valdez more time as he continues to get stronger on his road back from surgery on his throwing elbow during the 1989 season.

Other key injuries have Collins, Gavin Hill, Israel Stanley, Kevin Galbreath and Arnold Laws on the shelf temporarily while Scott Woodford's football career may be over.

Fresh faces in camp will include all seven of ASU's newest junior college transfers and Moses Tauteoli, a linebacker who transferred from the University of Utah.

"Spring ball is there for the young players to see what they can do," Bocchi said. "The guys from the scout team, now is their time to stand up. I don't feel like we're a veteran team."

Some of the voids left by seniors are being filled by senior-to-be Tim Kirby at quick tackle, junior-to-be Bob Brasher while Adam Brass, Kendall Rhyne and Michael Williams will all be vying for the open safety slots. With David Tisdell's transfer, freshman Justin Dragoo will likely get a good look at inside linebacker.

The "major experiment" of ASU's spring practices will have senior-to-be Tim Landers, who played every defensive line position last season, moving to the offensive line.

Senior quarterback Kurt Lasher's chances of winning the starting job next season are falling as he will miss spring practice with a broken thumb on his throwing hand.

Softball to meet Wildcats in Tuscon

By LORENZO SIERRA Jr.

State Press

The ASU softball team opens Pac-10 play today against in-state rival UofA in a battle for bragging rights.

The 10th-ranked Sun Devils head into the game in Tucson on a one-game losing streak as do the third-ranked Wildcats. ASU (28-9) and UofA (34-5) are the only two teams in the conference that have not played any league games.

Even though coaches downplay the significance of the rivalry, saying they prepare the same for every team, there is a little more attention paid to be able to say their team is the best along I-10.

"It's like any other sport," UofA coach Mike Candrea said. "You get the bragging rights and all that goes along with it."

Candrea said the rivalry automatically hits the players. "There's something built into it (games against ASU)," Candrea said. "It makes the kids play harder than they normally would."

Although assistant coach Kym Varner is in her first year as a Sun Devil coach, she knew of the intense rivalry long before she arrived in Tempe.

"It doesn't take a great deal of time to see how important the rivalry is," Varner said. "I am familiar with it. It's not a surprise to me that the two schools would be strong rivals on the field of play. Every school has an archrival."

The doubleheader starts at 1 p.m. and the Wildcats have Debby Day listed as the tentative starter for game one.

Day (17-2) has thrown 10 shutouts this season and has a 0.21 ERA. A second-game starter has not been named, but chances are it will either be Susie Parra (9-1) or Julie Jones (8-2).

ASU has not yet determined who the starting pitchers will be. Currently, Dawn Wood leads the team in victories with a 9-3 record. Karey James (5-1) has the team's best ERA at 0.22. Terri Carnicelli (7-2) and Amber Tintzman (5-2) round out the starting rotation.

Even though the two teams have not met, they have participated in the same tournaments and have had time to scout each other thoroughly.

"I wouldn't say (Day) is one of the top pitchers in the nation," Varner said. "We just have to be patient. She pitches outside of the strike zone to get hitters to swing at bad pitches."

Overall, Varner said this Wildcat squad is not much different than any other.

"They're a typical UofA team with great speed," Varner said. "We have to keep their leadoff hitters off the bases."

The Wildcats have 65 stolen bases this year compared to ASU's 35.

Likewise, UofA has had a chance to spy the Devils throughout the season.

"I think they're really solid," Candrea said. "We're prepared for battle. We have a lot of respect for them."

At the plate, the Wildcats are led by Julie Standerling's .356 batting average. For ASU, Rachel Brown leads the way with a .383 batting average.

At the last meeting, UofA won two of three games in the NCAA regional tournament.

"They gave us a real dogfight," Candrea said.

Mickelson enjoys returning to compete with ASU

By AMY SLADE

State Press

Contrary to popular belief, a college tournament is a lot more fun than playing on the PGA tour, at least, according to ASU junior Phil Mickelson.

"I was excited to play with my teammates, plus it's more fun," said Mickelson, who swept individual honors at the Sun Devils' tournaments in Texas last week, shooting three-round scores of 12-under-par 204 and 9-under 207. Because of his recent entries in PGA tour events, it was the first time since November that Mickelson had been in the lineup for ASU.

"It's more fun, or should I say more relaxing, to play when your teammates are rooting for you instead of everyone being competitive and trying to beat you," Mickelson said, adding that trips are always more fun with friends than by yourself.

The defending NCAA champion, who has already won three collegiate tournaments in the 1990-91 season, shot a final-round three-under-par 68 on the par-72 course to lead the Sun Devils to a strong second-place finish at the Morris Williams Intercollegiate Golf Tournament in Austin on Tuesday.

"You can't win them all," Mickelson said about ASU's finish. "Everyone didn't play their absolute best, but those things happen. We just have to work harder and prepare for these last couple tournaments."

"That's when they really start to count."

The Sun Devils have just two tournaments, including their lone home appearance at Karsten Golf Course on April 5-6, before competing in the Pac-10 Championship. Soon after that, the NCAA West Regionals and NCAA Championship begin.

Third-ranked Oklahoma State, who placed all five of its golfers among the top 22 positions, captured a 14-stroke advantage over ASU.

Mickelson finished three shots better than OSU's Kevin Wentworth at nine-under 207, including an eagle on the ninth and 13th holes, but said that the purpose of these tournaments are not just a matter of winning.

"It's a matter of shooting good shots because my ultimate goal is to be able to shoot scores that will be competitive on the tour," Mickelson said. "Eventually, that's what is going to have to happen."

Even after winning two straight college tournaments and speculation that he might turn professional and head for the PGA tour, Mickelson would not comment on when that might be and said he is perfectly happy at ASU.

"Playing on the tour requires more than just playing good golf," Mickelson said. "Right now, I'm learning how to handle other affairs (school)."

Overall, the tournament had a lot of strong players, Mickelson said, including five players, two from ASU, that finished the event under par.

Sun Devil junior Scott Sullivan finished in fifth, posting a two-under score of 214 after shooting a 68 in the first round.

The competition, played at the Hills of Lakeway golf course, had Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas rounding out the top five with scores of 878, 882 and 885, respectively.

Other ASU golfers included junior Brett Dean (231), sophomore Keith Sbarbaro (232), senior Jim Lemon (233) and senior Dave Cunningham (237).

Badminton wins another NCAA title

By MARTY MURPHY
State Press

The shuttlecocks were flying last week in Hayward, Calif., as the ASU badminton team shelled their opponents en route to another national championship.

ASU has won nine consecutive men's and mixed doubles titles and has also collected eight successive women's crowns.

The Sun Devils were led by two-time all-American Tom Reidy, who won the singles, doubles and mixed doubles for the second consecutive year.

Reidy, a sophomore, teamed with sophomore Martin Flores to defeat Marc Padre and Asok Boopathy, both ASU teammates, in the finals, 15-9, 5-13. The match was stopped due to severe cramps suffered by Boopathy in the second set.

Reidy combined with Jenny Chan to defeat the Sun Devil team of Padre and Stacey Murty in the mixed doubles finals by a score of 15-5, 15-8.

In the singles finals, Reidy defeated Boopathy in an all-ASU championship by a score of 15-9, 15-3.

Fourth-year coach Guy Chadwick had this to say about his star performer.

"He repeated as triple champion this year, as he should have," Chadwick said. "He played real well, he dominated everyone."

Boopathy reached the finals by upsetting Padre 15-6, 15-7, in the semifinals. Padre had been seeded higher than Boopathy going into the match.

"That's the best I've seen Asok play in several months," Chadwick said. "It was a little bit of an upset. Marc has had the upper hand recently."

Reidy was not the only Sun Devil to dominate, Chan a junior, won the women's singles and doubles to go along with the mixed title she had already won.

Chan, seeded No. 1, defeated second-seeded teammate Andrea Andersson 12-9, 11-5 to capture the singles title.

Chan and Andersson were on the same side as they combined for a 15-7, 15-7, doubles victory over freshman Jennifer Whyte and the sophomore Murty.

ASU dominated the 23-team field. All of the Sun Devils reached at least the quarterfinal rounds. Not one of the seven ASU women lost to a member of another team. On the men's side, three of the five Sun Devils reached the semi-finals.

Chadwick characterized this as one of the least difficult tournaments for his squad.

"This was not our most difficult tournament because we are playing against college restricted players," Chadwick said. "Whereas mostly we play in open tournaments that have immature players."

"It is our most important tournament and it is the one that gives the University the credit."

The Sun Devils will take nine members of their squad to Colorado Springs, Colo., for the U. S. National Championship. Only players who have resided in the U. S. for at least one year are eligible to compete in that tournament.

Cardinal takes NIT, beats OU

NEW YORK (AP) — Kenny Ammann scored 22 points, including five 3-pointers, as Stanford survived a 15-0 Oklahoma run following the ejection of Sooners coach Billy Tubbs to win its first National Invitation Tournament with a 78-72 victory Wednesday night.

Oklahoma opened its biggest lead of the game, 46-37, early in the second half, but Stanford rallied with a 23-10 spree to move ahead 60-56. Deshon Wingate, held to one point in the first half, had 10 points and Ammann eight during the spurt, including two 3-pointers.

The Sooners pulled to 70-67 on two free throws by Brent Price with 1:40 left, but Stanford clinched the victory by making eight of 12 free throws down the stretch.

Andrew Vlahov scored 14 points, while Wingate and John Patrick each had 13 for Stanford (20-13). Price scored 26 points and Bryan Sallier 24 for Oklahoma (20-15), but their teammates combined for only 22.

Adam Keefe, Stanford's leading scorer with a 21.8 average, finished with 12 points but had only two in the final 29 minutes. Keefe, who scored 24 points in the Cardinal's semifinal victory over Massachusetts, was named MVP of the tournament.

The victory made Stanford the 13th school to win the NIT and the NCAA basketball championship. The Cardinal won the NCAA title in 1942.

The first half was a wild affair that ended with Oklahoma leading 39-35 and Tubbs in the locker room.

He was ejected for arguing with the referees with 4:38 left in the half and the score tied at 26. Tubbs was angry because he thought the referees failed to call a walking violation on Keefe before he passed to Vlahov, who was then fouled while going for a layup.

After referee Mickey Crowley gave Tubbs a technical, the coach continued to argue and was ejected by referee Pete Pavia.

After Vlahov made his two free throws, Patrick sank all four free throws resulting from the two technical fouls on Tubbs. Stanford retained possession and Ammann quickly hit a 3-pointer, giving the Cardinal nine points in nine seconds and a 35-26 lead with 4:27 remaining left in the half.

But with assistant Mike Anderson running the team, Oklahoma struck back with a 13-0 run to close the half, with Price getting the last nine points on two baskets, a 3-pointer and a pair of free throws. The Sooners extended their run to 15-0 by scoring the first basket of the second half, then opened a 9-point lead before Stanford rallied.

Shaun Vandiver scored 34 points as Colorado beat Massachusetts 98-91 in the third-place game.
