Empty dorms cause employee layoffs

By SHANNON LOUGHRIN
State Press

Dwindling hall occupancy rates have forced the layoffs of 19 Residence Life employees, a measure University officials called a last resort effort to cut costs.

The layoffs affected each level of Residence Life, Director Cliff Osborne said, "from the worker level to the supervisor and management positions in all areas of Residence Life.

"It was the hardest thing I've ever had to do," he said. "It was very difficult telling them — you hope you never have to do something like that."

The affected positions were chosen according to the University's Reduction in Force Policy, which included a "combination of employees' continued service and evaluations during decision making," Osborne said.

The list of laid-off employees is classified to protect the privacy of those involved.

The layoffs were a last resort cost-cutting measure to counter low hall occupancy, which has drained the Residence Life budget.

"The last thing we wanted to do was cut human resources," Associate Vice President for Student Affairs Leon Shell said. "We had fairly extensive cost-cutting measures so we wouldn't have to do this. It was our very last option."

Other cost-cutting measures had included a hiring freeze on 22 vacant positions, including a number of executive positions, cutting resident assistant positions and re-assigning current RAs to other units.

"The utility rates are going up and occupancy levels are down," Shell said. "The money we get from the halls go toward salaries and operations and without that money we're left in a tight position."

Osborne said he did not foresee any plans for additional layoffs in the future, but said the possibility does exist.

"We currently expect no layoffs after this," he said. "However, if conditions continue as they are currently projected, we may need to consider it."

"But it's not a consideration right now."

Osborne announced the reduction in two separate department meetings last week, and then addressed each employee personally.

"We had talked a lot about this possibility, so I don't really think it was a surprise," Osborne said. "The employees had ample information about this, and they handled it well."

The RIF policy, according to Shell, accords the employees a number of rights, including a minimum requirement of notice for layoffs from one to six months, depending on the number of years of service.

However, Osborne said he will extend the amount of notice, allowing those with more than three years of service to finish out the spring semester to give them time to find other jobs or positions.

The policy also states that if a position became open up to 12 months from the termination date, those employees will have priority consideration.

"We're following the RIF policy as closely and specifically as we can," Shell said. "The employees deserve empirical rights, and we owe that to them."

Osborne said he doesn't think the change will be obvious to the students.

"We hope the move will be transparent," he said. "We don't think the students will

ASASU projects fewer concerts, less revenues

By CAROL ANN HANSEN
State Press

Members of the Associated Students of ASU expect a shortfall in concert revenues that could amount to as much as $35,000 this year because of increased competition from the year-old Desert Sky Pavilion and an overall decline in concert tours.

ASASU College of Business Sen. Alex Bouzari, who heads the organization's finance committee, said the drop in concert revenue could lead to a reduction of ASASU services and employee salaries.

"This year we projected to make $50,000, and if we are lucky we'll make $15,000," Bouzari said. "So far I think we have made less than $5,000."

When ASASU helps promote a pop music concert at the University, it receives 60 percent of the event's net revenue.

Charles Bethea, the associate executive director of ASU Public Events, said the cause of the concert slump is two-fold — fewer artists are going on tour and more concert venues are available to artists.

"Our major competition right now is Desert Sky Pavilion," Bethea said. "They are taking a majority of the pop music in the Valley."

Steven Roman cannot imagine ever having to experience the stress and strain he feels during one week of final exams for an extended period of time.

"I can't see going through all of that for two months," said Roman, a sophomore chemical engineering major. "During finals I usually pull a couple all-nighters, and then I sleep 12 hours and I'm fine."

But the tension, depression and anxiety typically sustained during final exams is chronic for many ASU students, said Dr. Dale Bowen, a physician from the ASU Student Health Center.

Bowen, one of the center's 15 clinicians, said he sees about two to three students each week who suffer from chronic

ASU alum, student seek Tempe mayoral seat

This is a big election year, not just for a couple of guys in Washington, but also for a 23-year-old ASU student and 22-year-old ASU graduate who are running for public office.

At a time when most college-age people are more concerned with grades, new careers or just about anything other than politics, Al Gold, an ASU broadcast production major, and Warren Apel, who graduated from ASU last August with a degree in microbiology, have jumped into the political arena feet first by running for Tempe mayor.

Disc jockey gets down to broadcast business

By JACKIE RUTYNA
State Press

Andrea Ryan speaks rapidly, but enunciates each word with distinct clarity. It is her job to communicate with precision.

She is a disc jockey at KMXX-FM.

"I wanted to be a DJ because I love music and I know a lot of people in local bands," Ryan said.

Ryan, 24, graduated from ASU in December 1990 with a degree in broadcasting. But she said experience is more important than education in such a competitive field.

"At one point I was working at four radio stations at once," she said. "Because it's competitive, you have to have so much experience if you want to go on the air."

Ryan is applying to the College of Law at ASU.

"I've been interested in the law as it relates to journalism and broadcasting," she said. "Working in the broadcasting field will give me a great deal of experience to practice law in that area."

KMXX-FM is the first Phoenix station where Ryan has held an on-air position. Since April 1991, she has held a part-time position at the station, working on the air every Saturday and Sunday from 7 p.m. to 12 a.m.

During the week, she fills in for other announcers, produces commercials, splices tape, or any other job which needs to be done.

"I can pretty much do anything," Ryan said. "Once you are in an on-air position, they take it for granted that you know how to do everything."

Ryan describes KMXX-FM as a family station with a target audience of men and women from 25 to 45 years old.

While on the air during her weekend shifts, Ryan operates the request line, where listeners can call in to request a song or ask for information about a song or a band. She also makes announcements about activities going on in the Valley which might interest families.

Ryan said her family is proud of her having an on-air job at the station.

"My dad listens to me all the time," she said. "He likes the big band sound, but he listens to me even though he doesn't like the music."

Ryan emphasized the competitiveness of the broadcasting field and the importance of getting experience.

"My first on-air job was in Kansas City," Ryan said. "I just had to pack up my car and drive to Kansas City. I knew no one there, but I also knew that to get an on-air job in Phoenix, I had to have experience in a small town."

Ryan said many broadcasting students think that they will have jobs immediately when they graduate from school.

"If you want a job when you get out of school, get all the experience you can while you are in school," Ryan advised.

Macy's faces bankruptcy

Sales flagging, debts growing

NEW YORK (AP) — With sales flagging and debts growing, R.H. Macy & Co. Inc. was believed to be on the verge of filing for bankruptcy court protection, company suppliers and an analyst said on Sunday.

The 134-year-old retailer wouldn't say whether it planned a bankruptcy filing or was still negotiating in hopes of averting one, said company spokesman Michael Freitag.

But suppliers, who have not received their January payments from Macy's, expected the privately held department store chain would file as early as Monday for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws.

"I don't see any other option than (Chapter) 11 out there right now . . . If they could pry a judge out of his bedroom, they would do it today," Bud Konheim, president of the apparel maker Nicole Miller Ltd., said Sunday.

Walter Loeb, a retailing analyst, speculated that while Macy's appeared on the brink of Chapter 11, chairman Edward Finkelstein might be trying to patch together a last-minute rescue plan similar to one that fell through Friday.

Under that proposal, Loews Corp. Chairman Laurence Tisch, a current Macy's stockholder, would have invested another $1 billion in the company if creditors agreed to restructure their debt.

Loews said a major creditor, which The New York Times identified as Prudential Insurance Co. of America, rejected the proposal.

The retailer, burdened by $3.5 billion in debt after its 1986 leveraged buyout, was left short of cash by a disappointing Christmas. Earlier this month, the retailer said it was delaying payments to wholesalers by two weeks, until last Saturday.

Suppliers said they hadn't heard whether that they would be paid, and they didn't expect it.

Yeltsin to face challenges in visit to United States

MOSCOW (AP) — On his first trip to the United States since the death of the Soviet Union, Boris Yeltsin has a tough mission: He must reassure the West about the stability of Russia and the new commonwealth.

Russia's president must also allay concern about control of the commonwealth's vast nuclear arsenal. And he must battle negative perceptions about his personal image that never hounded former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

"This trip is intended to serve as a bridge between the old Soviet Union and the new commonwealth. Yeltsin intends to ensure the transition," adviser Alexander Grandberg said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Yeltsin last visited the United States in June, days after he became Russia's first popularly elected president.

Although he was then still the No. 2 Soviet politician behind Gorbachev, and his meeting with President Bush at the White House was considered "private," the trip was a triumph for the 60-year-old Siberian.

Starting Thursday, Yeltsin travels to Britain and the United States as a head of state with control of the former Soviet nuclear arsenal, and the leading figure in the commonwealth that replaced the Soviet Union and cost Gorbachev his job.

He will attend a summit of U.N. Security Council members in New York on Friday and meet with Bush the following day at Camp David, Md.

Yeltsin has been busy building up good will before the trip. The Russian news program "Vesti" reported he intends to make an announcement Monday on Russian tactical nuclear weapons. The Russian president told ABC News on Saturday that he intends to stop targeting U.S. cities with nuclear missiles and no longer considers the United States a potential enemy.

In Washington, White House spokesman Sean Walsh commented, "If this is the case, we welcome it and we expect the president and Yeltsin to discuss it."

Also Sunday, the Tass news agency said the first tactical nuclear weapons have been taken from Belarus to Russia for destruction as agreed by the new commonwealth.

Unified command of the nuclear arsenal under Yeltsin's control is about the only thing that leaders of the 11 former Soviet republics have agreed to since they established the commonwealth Dec. 21.

Doubts about the long-term viability of the commonwealth have dimmed some of the luster of Yeltsin's triumph in the June vote and his tenacious opposition to the attempt to overthrow Gorbachev.

Yeltsin has feuded with the leader of the second-most powerful commonwealth member — Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk — over economic reform and control of the powerful Black Sea Fleet.

Touring Russian cities this month to defend his reforms that sharply increased prices of nearly all goods, Yeltsin encountered fierce complaints from angry residents. The Russian leader in turn blamed holdover bureaucrats.

The speaker of the Russian legislature, Ruslan Khasbulatov, said Yeltsin's government should resign because of the "anarchic" way the free market reforms were implemented.

Polls show that a large majority of Russians believe they are worse off today than a year ago, and they give Yeltsin only fair to poor marks for his performance.

Shamir rules out building freeze proposed by U.S.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Sunday the United States should "forget about" a freeze on Israeli settlements. But he claimed Washington had decided to grant Israel vital housing loan guarantees that Shamir seeks for Soviet immigrants.

The dispute over settlements has been complicating Middle East peace talks. Another snag developed Sunday when a senior PLO official said the Palestinians would boycott Tuesday's round in Moscow unless the Palestinian delegation included representatives from Arab east Jerusalem and abroad.

The PLO statement threatens chances for progress at the two-day talks and will have a greater impact on the next round of Arab-Israeli direct negotiations. Only Jordan among Israel's Arab neighbors has committed to participate in the this week's multilateral talks, which will deal with regional issues such as arms control, water and the environment.

The United States said it will go forward with the multilateral talks, and Secretary of State James A. Baker III prepared late Sunday to head to Moscow.

Shamir's remarks before 300 Jewish journalists were his first reaction to Baker's reported proposal Friday that Israel stop building new homes in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to gain $10 billion in U.S. aid for resettling Jewish refugees.

"To avoid any misunderstandings," Shamir said in English, "Israel and all those people who represent Israel are not talking or not speaking about any freeze of settlements. Please forget about it."

According to sources in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity, Baker suggested that U.S. objections to the Jewish settlements might be met if Israel stopped building new homes. The offer apparently would allow Israel to complete the sizable housing units it already has begun.

Shamir did not make clear how he expected to resolve the dispute, but he later said on Israel television that he had a tentative agreement with the United States to provide loan guarantees.

There was "a decision to grant these

Roe v. Wade reconsidered

It has been 19 years since the Supreme Court handed down its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

Recently, the Supreme Court has decided it will consider a regulatory Pennsylvania law requiring women to consult with physicians regarding fetal development and abortion alternatives and to wait 24 hours before having an abortion. Another controversy has been born.

Although the pro-choice and pro-life groups are marching, many don't believe the Roe vs. Wade decision will be challenged this year, let alone reversed.

It is the idea that another more powerful, thought-provoking question could come in the near future to shake the uneasy, underlying platforms that their positions rest upon.

Much has changed since the 1973 decision — certainly the swing to a more conservative Supreme Court. The most serious change is the explosive advancement and application of technology and its threat for the future of Roe vs. Wade.

In 1973, the Supreme Court ruled that an abortion is legal until the point at which the fetus is viable outside the mother's womb — unless extenuating circumstances exist.

Viable is a tricky word.

In 1973, a fetus was viable at approximately six months. Today, as a result of new technology, a fetus is viable at about four and a half months — a 25 percent reduction that is growing larger every year.

A law is in the process of becoming obsolete because of the progress of science. This is something that should not and would not have happened had the Supreme Court passed a principled, fundamental decision rather than a technical and practical decision.

It would be a welcome sight to see the original Roe vs. Wade decision reconsidered.

America will not rest until a broad fundamental decision is handed down. It will take a total re-evaluation of Roe vs. Wade and its underlying thought to accomplish.

The Supreme Court's duty is not to assess the popular opinion and follow the hearts of Americans, but to weigh evidence on the thought underlying the principles of America.

When the Court fulfills its duty, we will see just how far the Americans have strayed from the intent and roots of America.

AL GOLD: HIS EYE ON THE PYRAMID

Bad service led to layoffs

It's emptier than Sunset Crater, the meteorite hole in Northern Arizona. It's more consuming than a black hole. It's more mysterious than the Bermuda Triangle.

It's the bank account of ASU's Residence Life, which has dwindled to shockingly low figures. Human jobs have been the most recent casualty in the latest episode of The Regrettable Recession in Residence Life.

The low occupancy rates of ASU's dorms have forced the layoffs of 19 Residence Life employees. That's in addition to the 20 residence hall positions that were never filled this year.

Grab a calculator — that's almost 40 positions. That's 40 fewer people providing students with the services they have paid for — including clean bathrooms and monitored hallways.

The layoffs were a last-resort cost-cutting measure to counter low hall occupancy, which has drained the Residence Life budget dry.

All this comes just two weeks after the Arizona Board of Regents raised ASU residence hall rates 2.35 percent.

Although no official has come right out and admitted it, it seems the unspoken culprits of the dorm demise are the students.

The mentality seems to be, If students weren't so picky and more of them lived in the dorms, we (Residence Life) wouldn't be in this predicament.

At this point, Residence Life likely has no alternative to the severe cuts it faces. However, a look into the performance history of ASU's residence hall system makes Residence Life's low occupancy rates, thus budget woes, less surprising.

The problems plaguing ASU's residence life today didn't happen overnight. It's a two-way hall.

• In August of 1990, Manzanita Hall's elevator experienced a series of breakdowns. Dorm dweller Chad Ibella said the elevator he was riding in slipped five stories and was caught momentarily between floors.

• More than 10 years after the announcement that asbestos is a cancer-causing agent, Residence Life began to remove asbestos in ASU's dorms. A September 1989 issue of the State Press reported that, "The first phase of a three-year asbestos removal process in three ASU residence halls is on hold due to lack of time and manpower."

Proper heating and cooling of ASU's 10 dorms have also been an issue over the years. One example of the sporadic, at best, air conditioning system in some of ASU's dorms happened in 1989, the Palo Verde Main.

The dorm was without air conditioning for more than a week in August — while temperatures soared to more than 100 degrees. "You can't study, you can't sleep, you can't do anything," said Jennifer Guerro, who lived in the hot box.

Other complaints include long response time to maintenance requests, unkempt hallways and bathrooms, broken and outdated facilities and small, overpriced rooms.

These are but a few of the dorm dilemmas within the past three years that have affected student decisions to avoid dorm life at ASU.

No one can argue that living on campus is the most convenient option during a student's college years, but is it worth paying out the nose for inadequate shelter?

Sure, there is what has been called, "upscale housing," such as Cholla Apartments and Sonora Center, but those units cost almost as much as a monthly mortgage on a new condo.

In other words, those two glorified dorms are not accessible to most students.

Occupancy rates in Cholla and Sonora are higher than those in Irish and Hayden halls (two of the oldest dorms on campus).

This is only because students can't afford the luxury dorms and are refusing to live in the dilapidated dorms.

Residence Life officials need to realize that their current crisis is the product of years of scrimping on services to students.

Any hikes in dorm prices or decreases in staff will not save the ailing reputation of ASU's Residence Life system — the true deficit in this situation.

Democrats debate Presidential hopefuls talk positions at primary

MANCHESTER, N.H. — For Democrats seeking a presidential nominee, debates like the one here the other night are a kind of trap.

Although there were a few cheap shots and grandstand plays, the five candidates spent most of the two hours demonstrating a sophisticated grasp of complex domestic problems. It is fair to say that all five showed an ability to articulate their concerns and solutions that the notoriously inarticulate President Bush would be hard-pressed to match.

But the problem for the Democrats is that the issues on which they focused most intently — the economy, trade, tax policy, education — are unlikely to be the pivotal ones in the general election campaign next fall. This is the case not because the problems will have been solved but, instead, because Bush inevitably will attempt to make the campaign turn on sloganeering questions about "values" and "liberals" and "special interests." It happened in 1988 and there is no reason to expect anything different this time.

Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska conceded as much when he said the campaign to unseat Bush will not center on position papers and lists of issues but on the Democratic nominee's ability to show "the capacity to lead and willingness to fight."

The debate a month before the Feb. 18 primary here produced no clear winner, although a case could be made for former Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts. He showed a more forceful ability to make his case with clarity and good humor than had been true earlier. And the other candidates repeatedly paid deference to "Paul" and his ideas on the economy, in part perhaps because they have persuaded themselves his supporters here will peel off to someone else later in the campaign.

Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, the clear leader in recent polls here, demonstrated his usual self-assured skill at keeping the discussion focused on the middle class. And Kerrey, whose stump performance has been improving lately, salted his rhetoric with specifics on New Hampshire, citing the problems of a James River paper mill and his conversations about the crime problem with Manchester police.

"...all five showed an ability to articulate their concerns and solutions that the notoriously inarticulate President Bush would be hard-pressed to match."

The debate was remarkably free of acrimony, although Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, trailing in the polls, used his closing statement to attack Clinton's record in Arkansas after Clinton already had closed and had no opportunity for rebuttal. Harkin repeatedly reinforced his claim to be the "real Democrat" in the field and not, as he portrays Clinton, a closet Republican who "bought into Reaganomics" in Arkansas. Former Gov. Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown Jr. of California abandoned his earlier preoccupation with the ills of the political financing system to throw out another idea with superficial appeal — a 13 percent to 14 percent flat tax as a substitute for the present tax system.

Both the tone and content of the debate made it clear once again, if that were necessary, that the central difference between all these Democrats and President Bush is their willingness to rely on activist government as the mechanism for dealing with economic and social problems. Although none of the candidates had the time to spell out in detail his prescriptions for dealing with these issues, it would not be surprising if the Republicans were licking their chops at the prospect of another run against "big government" and "liberal spending plans."

There was nothing in the debate, however, to suggest any likely change in the shape of the Democratic campaign here. Harkin's repeated thrusts at Clinton reflected not only the Iowan's own weakness in polls right now but Clinton's stature as the acknowledged front-runner. Kerrey and Tsongas, the two candidates running just behind Clinton at the moment, each performed well enough to give their partisans encouragement — and certainly to suggest to viewer-voters here that they obviously belong in the same league with the Arkansas governor.

The televised debates have special importance this year because the preliminary campaign for the primaries has been so much shorter than usual that potential primary voters have remarkably fuzzy pictures of the candidates. A survey made for The Boston Globe last week found, for example, that four of every five potential voters are still open to persuasion.

"...Bush inevitably will attempt to make the campaign turn on sloganeering questions about values, liberals and special interests."

What these viewers saw here was a group of Democrats with both an understanding of the parlous state of the economy and, in most cases, ideas for dealing with the problem. But they probably didn't see a preview of the general election campaign.

to the editor Letters

Mulvenon's letter presents a racist misconception

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to Sean Mulvenon's letter to the editor that concerned the protest of the lack of African-American faculty at ASU.

Mulvenon attempts to argue that the protesters should be condemned for behaving in a racist manner, but he expresses his own racist views quite clearly, bringing into question the validity of his argument.

Stating that, "If we place constraints on who or what the new faculty member has to be, the best available will not be hired," Mulvenon assumes that the best available are not members of minority groups.

This assertion is unfounded. Former ASU minority faculty members have been "hired away" by institutions such as the University of California-Berkeley, the University of Nebraska and Creighton University when ASU has failed to make counter offers in order to retain these faculty members. It is unlikely that institutions of the caliber of these universities were interested in hiring less than the "best available."

Another assumption that Mulvenon makes is that these students have explored no other avenues for expressing their views. In fact, Natalie Young, vice president of the African-American Coalition, was quoted in the State Press on Jan. 22 as stating that, "It marks a year ... of us trying to negotiate with the university in terms of problems and concerns."

One thing is for certain. The demonstration was quite effective in achieving its aim. The issue has come to the forefront of campus discussion and ASU officials have agreed to address it. In addition, more students are now aware of the situation.

Although I was aware that non-European Americans are underrepresented in the faculty and student population on this campus, I was unaware that the situation was deteriorating, rather than improving. Newly heightened campus awareness is an added benefit of the demonstration. Not all have reacted to the students who demonstrated with the "contempt" that Mulvenon has. Not all buy into cliches that assert that all it takes to be treated with respect is to treat others with respect. The African-American population at ASU, as well as other minority populations, has not been treated with respect in regard to hiring and retention practices, although they have acted with what Mulvenon seems considered to be "respect" up until now.

Engineers need a sense of humor

Dear Editor:

I feel I need to respond to the letter from William Gookin and Evan Henke, which was an angry reaction to my article in the MUAB supplement last Wednesday.

Gentlemen: Far from concluding that all engineering students were "geeky," or that all creative writing students would be jobless after graduation, my article addressed the personal benefits of campus involvement.

How anybody could interpret my essay as an indictment of engineers, or geeks, or as an assertion that pocket-protectors are high fashion, is beyond me. I wonder, did you even read the article before attacking it?

In the article, the engineering major that I mentioned is a friend of mine, and I described him as such. True, I poked fun at him via the stereotypes, but no less than I poked fun at myself in the same way.

The humor was an illustration. I meant no offense. Since I was making a point which had nothing to do with either engineering or creative writing per se, I did not imagine that anyone would get hung up on such an incidental point.

I fully recognize that civil engineers "build the quality of life," and I thank you wholeheartedly. However, in my original article, I also praised the value of a sense of humor. After you finish bettering the quality of life, consider getting one.

Irish Hall should not be closed

Dear Editor:

On January 23, after touring Irish Hall B, President Lattie Coor stated that two issues had to be weighed, the inefficiency of maintenance versus the age of the dorm.

This announcement followed at the heels of a tour and presentation conducted by hall President Donald Jeffers. Subsequently, Mr. Coor told the onlooking residents, fellow administrators, student government representatives, as well as State Press reporter Shannon Loughrin, that Irish Hall B would have to be closed for renovations.

What I propose to you and the readers is that Mr. Coor and his administration are clouding the issue and that the closing of Irish Hall will simply be used as a scapegoat in the ensuing economic crunch that this University is facing.

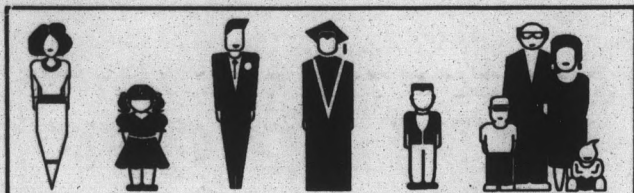

Why should Irish Hall B, a milestone of tradition, join the ranks of Sahuaro, Irish C, Palo Verde, and several floors of Best A in the A. S. U. residence hall graveyard. I am not a financial wizard, but there is something wrong with a school that closes this much housing.

It seems as though instead of making campus housing more attractive to increase the number of residents, they are closing halls and raising the rent for existing residents.

Neither my peers nor I intended to dig a grave for Irish Hall by having President Coor inspect the premises. All we wanted was a few simple dorm amenities like a community refrigerator and study lounge. Perhaps opaque windows in our bathroom to obscure the glares of outside volleyball players and sun worshippers would be nice and someone to fix our heaters and air conditioners within a few days rather than the standard few months.

ASASU readies for recycling

By CAROL ANN HANSEN
State Press

A fledgling department of Associated Students of ASU is sowing the seeds for a future recycling program they hope will involve ASU's entire community.

ASASU's Recycling Department, which was officially approved last semester, is collaborating with ASU Surplus Property in an effort to expand and increase student involvement in the University's current recycling program.

Sarah Sciotto and Gary Starikoff, co-directors of the department, said the department assists the University's recycling efforts as well as serving as an information bureau for students.

"In the last couple months things have really been getting off the ground," Starikoff said. "We are official, we are here and we are here for the future."

ASU Surplus Property's in-house recycling facility currently handles paper, aluminum cans, cardboard, wooden pallets and scrap metal.

Sherrie Spaseff, surplus coordinator of ASU's Surplus Property, said her department just recently started recycling aluminum cans and is in "the expansion process."

But the picture has not always been so optimistic for Spaseff's program.

In March of last year Surplus Property's recycling program was forced to pare down its operations due to slashed University funding. Officials later reinstated funding for the project when the cutbacks were met with widespread criticism.

Spaseff said that ASASU and Surplus Property are continuously exchanging ideas.

"They have a lot of connections with other universities and they give us a lot of input on what they think can be done," Spaseff said.

Sciotto attended the National Recycling Congress two years ago and met with coordinators of "some of the most comprehensive university recycling programs in the nation."

Sciotto said that they receive information from universities such as the University of Colorado at Boulder, which has a 100 percent student-run recycling program.

ASASU's Recycling Department is in the process of producing about 20,000 fold-out informational brochures on recycling, planning an Earth Day celebration and increasing the amount and visibility of recycling bins on campus.

"I would like to see those bright-blue ugly plastic things sitting on the malls," Sciotto said. "If they aren't visible, people aren't going to use them."

Sciotto and Starikoff said student involvement is the key to expanding ASU's current recycling program.

"I think that the program will never evolve to become anything more than it is now unless students push for it," Sciotto said.

"We need students to take it in their own hands, go out and do their own research and come up to us and say, 'Hey look, I think this is what will make a difference.'"

Symington to ask regents to admit Sonoran students with in-state fees

HERMOSILLO, Sonora (AP) — Gov. Fife Symington says he will ask the Arizona Board of Regents to recognize students from Sonora as being eligible to pay in-state tuition at the state's three largest universities.

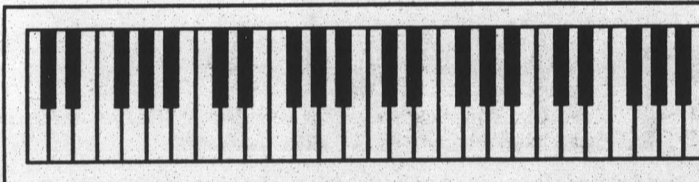

Symington made the announcement Saturday at the end of a three-day conference of the Arizona-Sonora Commission here.

If the program is approved, Arizona residents will also be encouraged to enroll in Sonoran universities or take part in student exchange programs.

Jose Velasco, director of the Arizona half of the commission, said the educational interchange will foster increased commercial and cultural ties between the two states.

Resident students now pay $1,528 a year at the University of Arizona, Arizona State University and Northern Arizona University. Non-residents pay $6,934 at the UofA and ASU, and $6,810 at NAU.

Macy's

"No one's rushing in Monday morning looking for a check to be hand-delivered," Arie Kopelman, president of Chanel Inc., said of Macy's suppliers.

Macy's cash shortage comes at a critical time as spring fashions are being shipped to retailers across the country. If suppliers do not ship their goods, the company stands to lose even more in sales.

A Chapter 11 filing guarantees vendors payment on future shipments, so they could resume sending merchandise to Macy stores.

Konheim was hoping for a filing, saying: "We're all itchy to ship Macy's."

Chapter 11 would impose court supervision on Macy's business, allowing the company to reorganize its finances without retribution from creditors who have not been paid.

If Macy does ask for Chapter 11 protection, a filing would come just as its competitors, Federated Department Stores Inc. and Allied Stores Corp., prepare to emerge from bankruptcy reorganization.

Settlements

guarantees," Shamir said. "We haven't yet gone into details about how it would be implemented, and that we leave to the future."

There was no immediate U. S. reaction to his comment. Before the settlements got tied up with the loan guarantee issue, the United States repeatedly asked Israel to stop building new Jewish settlements as a gesture toward the U.S.-sponsored peace talks.

In Tunisia, meanwhile, Yasser Abd-Rabbo, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization's information department and a close aide of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, said it was "inopportune" for Palestinians to take part in the Moscow talks.

A committee of Palestinian delegates has already recommended a boycott of the talks because of a lack of progress in earlier bilateral negotiations in Washington and the exclusion of the PLO from this week's talks.

Israel refuses to negotiate directly with the PLO, which it considers a terrorist organization, while most Palestinians consider the group their representative. Israel also refuses to negotiate with Palestinian representatives from east Jerusalem, which it annexed after the 1967 war.

In other developments Sunday:

•Jewish farmers crossed into Jordan for the first time to erect tents to dramatize demands for more government aid. Israeli soldiers and police, also crossing the border, evicted them within minutes.

•The bodies of four young Palestinians were found in the occupied West Bank, and a PLO "enforcement squad" announced it killed them as suspected collaborators with Israel, Arab reports said. Since the start of the uprising in December 1987, 491 Palestinians have been killed by fellow Arabs for suspected collaboration or "morals" crimes such as prostitution and drug dealing.

Bush address to stress 'America working'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's State of the Union address will lay out a program to "get America back working again," his chief of staff said Sunday as he defended a controversial proposal to eliminate the luxury tax on yachts.

Samuel Skinner, who replaced John Sununu as the president's top aide late last year, said Bush's Tuesday night address and the budget he sends Congress on Wednesday will try to overcome an unexpected "wall of resistance" that's keeping the economy from reviving.

"The No. 1 issue is jobs and the economy. That is what we are going to be dealing with," Skinner said on ABC's This Week with David Brinkley.

The president's package, much of which has already been revealed, will propose a middle class tax break in the form of an increase in the personal exemption for families and up to $5,000 as a tax credit for first-time homebuyers.

It will also propose up to $50 billion in additional cuts in defense spending over the next five years, increased incentives for business investment and a 90-day moratorium on many new government regulations.

The election-year budget also has a host of increased spending measures in such popular areas as environmental cleanup, Head Start, space exploration and creation of new parks and recreation areas.

Officials confirmed that the Bush budget will propose eliminating a 10 percent tax on yachts costing more than $100,000. Some congressional sources said they expect the administration will also propose repealing a similar luxury tax on the purchase of airplanes.

The luxury tax, passed in 1990 as part of an effort to control huge budget deficits, also covers purchases of jewelry, furs and expensive automobiles.

Skinner defended the proposed repeal of the tax on yachts against criticism that it was a tax break for the rich. He said the tax — which was supposed to raise $145 million over five years — had cost thousands of jobs in the boat-building industry while generating little revenue for the government.

"What we've got to do is get America back working again. We've got to get government off America's back. And if that means a tax destroys an industry, we ought to look at it again," Skinner said.

The administration's economic growth package has been attacked both by liberal Democrats and conservatives in Bush's own Republican Party as being too timid to provide the confidence-boosting jolt a sick economy needs.

Some Republicans worry that the administration's two-month buildup for the speech has raised expectations so high that the actual program will be disappointing.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said Sunday that he viewed Tuesday's speech as Bush's "political Super Bowl."

"He's got to come across as somebody who cares about the average American out there, somebody out of work, somebody out on the farm, somebody with no health insurance. He's got to reach out to those people," Dole said on CBS' Face the Nation.

But Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, who appeared with Dole, let it be known that Bush's economic proposals won't pass Congress unscathed.

Shuttle astronauts participate in pre-game, miss Super Bowl

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts demonstrated a coin toss in weightlessness before millions of earthbound football fans during the Super Bowl pre-game show Sunday.

Astronaut Roberta Bondar held the coin in her right hand as she flipped herself in cartwheels 187 miles above Earth. She released the coin and it floated away. The crew said it appeared to be heads.

"As you can see in zero-g, the coin never comes down, so we'll just have to defer the coin toss to the official pre-game ceremony," said shuttle commander Ronald Grabe, who sported a Washington Redskins cap.

Pilot Steven Oswald said during the CBS broadcast that the crew had hoped the Houston Oilers would have been in the Super Bowl.

"But it looks like you've got a couple of great teams that are going to go at it and we're just sorry that we don't have a way of receiving the game up here," said Oswald, who wore a Buffalo Bills cap. "Besides that, NASA is keeping us real busy today."

The astronauts immediately returned to their orbital research work after the brief appearance via NASA television.

Earlier, the astronauts dimmed the shuttle lights to conserve energy. NASA is considering extending the weeklong research mission by a day to collect extra science data.

"We'd be more than happy to stay up," Grabe told ground controllers.

The crew of six men and one woman has used less electricity and water than expected. If the trend continues, NASA said it would keep the shuttle up until Thursday. Scientists on the ground were being polled to see if any experiments might suffer from an extra day in orbit, said mission manager Robert McBryer.

ASU sororities
give time, talent
to Phoenix Open

By BLAKE HERZOG
State Press

For the fourth year in a row, ASU sorority members donated their time and talents to the Phoenix Open golf tournament, freeing up money to be given to charity in the process.

Delta Gamma and Kappa Alpha Theta sorority members have worked at the tournament, which is held at the PGA golf course in northern Scottsdale, since 1988, and they were joined by the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority in 1989.

The sorority members worked at the Open to its conclusion on Sunday, and they were joined by members of ASU fraternities, who carried score signs on the weekend.

Kari Pollock, a senior child development major and member of Alpha Gamma Delta said, “It’s pretty important — it’s not just a thing where we’re sitting out here and eating all day.”

Until Sunday, the Greek women’s main job was “hole reporting,” or keeping score at each hole on the course and reporting the results to the scoring center via computer.

During the weekend they also displayed signs at the holes which allow the spectators to see the score.

Nearly all the members of the sororities participated in the tournament, and the ASU chapters earn a portion of the philanthropic point goals set by the Panhellenic Council and the Inter-Fraternity Council.

The chapters hold many other charitable functions during the year, but Pollock feels that donating time is also important.

“When you look back at what the word ‘philanthropic’ means, it’s ‘community service’ and not necessarily charity work, and this is just the other side of the coin. We’re donating our time and our persons to do something,” she said.

“And it is for a good cause in the long run,” Pollock added. “We’re not raising money for the charities, but by us volunteering, we’re raising money for the PGA tour to donate to charity.”

Mara Bartel, a junior family resources and human development major and foundation chairman of Delta Gamma, said, “Everyone’s so willing to go up and help out, because it’s so much fun. It’s not like something you dread going to — we absolutely love doing it.”

Pollock also emphasized that working at the event did not necessarily take away from academic time.

“We encourage girls to go to class, and most of the work is on the weekend.”

The sorority members work in conjunction with the Thunderbirds, a 55-year-old Scottsdale-based volunteer organization that has worked at the Open since the club and the tournament started in the same year.

Mike Clark, a Thunderbird and this year’s chairman of scoring and communications, said the Greeks “want to be involved because they can get Panhellenic hours, it’s a great place to be out in the sun and watch one of the premier golf events in the United States, and I think they appreciate it.”

“It’s a totally different aspect on golf,” said Lori Lundin, a junior theater major and Alpha Gamma Delta member. “I used to think, ‘Oh, it’s so boring. It’s like watching paint dry.’ But now I’ve been out here all day and it’s been so much fun.”

Still, others were not as impressed with the game.

Senior Michelle Daniels of Alpha Gamma Delta said, “It’s interesting seeing the competition and seeing how everything works, because it’s so intricate behind the scenes.”

Censors incense cheerleaders

By LISA I. KRANZ
State Press

Members of the ASU cheerleading squad are fuming about an alleged attempt to subvert televised coverage of their activities at athletic events.

"Sometimes during football or basketball games they (television cameras) might flash to the cheerleaders — but they flash more of the crowd, and that's not fair," said ASU cheerleader Sara Taylor.

The cheerleaders' anger was first spurred on by an anonymous letter forwarded by University of North Carolina cheerleaders that detailed how networks tell camera operators to select shots of anything but cheerleaders during sports events.

The letter criticizes the policy of cheerleader censorship, calling coverage of the spirit squads a "willful and deceitful strategy of telecasting very brief and/or obscure shots of cheerleaders at an athletic event so as to create the illusion they are given an equitable amount of broadcast time, when in fact they are not."

When the ASU-USC basketball game was televised, ASU cheerleaders got less than 25 seconds of air time during the two-hour telecast.

But Kevin Browne, a senior business major, said, "I probably browse the crowd instead unless the cheerleaders are really the main focus point."

"They're not an important asset, nor the reason I go to the games," he added.

The letter also claims that camera operators are told the back of a helmet is preferable to a cheerleader, and "reaction shots" of key players, even if their faces cannot be seen, should always be selected instead.

Local television station KTSP-TV, Channel 10, says it chooses to show what the audience wants to see — which is not always the cheer squad.

"Let's put it this way: The only shots cameramen use of cheerleaders is to open up an event and to show enthusiasm," said Jeff Lake, weekend sports producer for KTSP-TV, the local CBS affiliate. "We shoot what we think people want to see."

The cheerleaders say the camera is more likely to be trained on sideline player-coach huddles even when cheerleaders are performing.

Sun Devil squad member Jeff Soto said, "When the coach is talking, how exciting is that? I myself would watch the cheerleaders during the time-outs. When the team is playing, that's the time to watch the players."

"The fans want us to perform," said varsity captain Laura Shapiro. "They say, 'Go out there and dance.' It's an important part of the game to get the crowd going and motivated."

The controversy is a question of recognition and respect.

Shapiro said, "I don't think we're viewed as an athletic sport at all," adding that ASU's athletic department does not recognize its cheerleaders.

"Yet we get treated like the other athletes," she said. "We have to take physicals, maintain certain GPA and do drug testing."

But unlike the other athletes, the cheerleaders do not get scholarships, free books or registration privileges.

The squad also does not get as much money in its budget. While the varsity received new uniforms, the junior varsity got hand-me-downs.

And ASU cheerleaders have not been sent to competition-oriented camp for the last four years.

As a result, the squad is prevented from sharpening its skills and getting experience or recognition.

Scott Beaudoin, a senior cheer member, added the team does not have the budget to get a coach.

"We just have someone who tells us what goes on in the administration. We're pretty much on our own at practices."

Beaudoin said the lack of respect for ASU cheer members was best demonstrated in last Wednesday's UofA vs. ASU basketball game.

During the game, a UofA fan ran down and grabbed Sparky's pitchfork and proceeded to run to centercourt, do a dance and break it over his head.

Beaudoin said the incident probably wouldn't have happened if a lot more ASU students had attended.

'78 murder case gets new lead

PHOENIX (AP) — State prosecutors say they hope to seek an indictment within 60 days in connection with the unsolved 1978 murder of actor Bob Crane.

Maricopa County Attorney Richard Romley said new evidence has been found implicating John Carpenter, a 62-year-old electronics salesman who has long been considered a prime suspect but never arrested in the case.

The prosecutors will not say what the new evidence is, however.

Gary Fleischman, the Los Angeles-based lawyer for Carpenter, questions whether the evidence amounts to anything.

Crane, who played the wisecracking Col. Robert Hogan in the 1960s television comedy series Hogan's Heroes, was found dead on June 29, 1978, in his apartment in Scottsdale, where he was appearing in a play.

Police said the 49-year-old actor's skull had been crushed and an electrical cord was tied around his neck.

The only thing missing from his room was an album of sexually explicit photographs of women, according to police.

Barry Vassall, a Scottsdale police detective, said he developed the new information over the past two years along with Jim Raines, a former Phoenix police detective who works as a county attorney's investigator.

"Raines and I just took this case apart," Vassall said. "We just worked it from the ground up, as if it was a new homicide."

Deputy County Attorney Myrna Parker said she will try for an indictment in 30 to 60 days.

But Fleischman said his client has been wrongly suspected by investigators from the beginning.

"They haven't looked beyond the ends of their noses," he said. "I'm only afraid they'll indict him (Carpenter) just to do something. They've been barking up the wrong tree for 14 years."

Carpenter, who granted an interview to The Arizona Republic last week for the first time since the slaying, said he and his wife have suffered from news-media harassment because police have labeled him a suspect.

"To me, it's very difficult to look at my neighbors after an article or a news broadcast is on the air," Carpenter said. "I always hope their television set is broken."

Investigators have said Carpenter was seen arguing with Crane at a Scottsdale nightclub days before the killing.

Carpenter flew back to California the day Crane's body was found, police said.

A blood smear found on the passenger door of Carpenter's rental car matched Crane's Type B blood, but police determined the sample was too small to be used as evidence.

Charles Hyder, the county prosecutor at the time, declined to prosecute Carpenter because of a lack of physical evidence. His successor, Tom Collins, reviewed the case in 1981 and also declined to prosecute.

Romley, who replaced Collins in January 1989, said the new evidence resulted from work on the Crane case by a special review board he appointed when he took office.

The special panel, made up of 15 prosecutors and investigators, interviewed witnesses in the Crane case and studied old evidence in an attempt to solve the 14-year-old murder.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Local legend has it that the small white cottage shaded under oak trees at Snee Farm was the 18th-century home of Charles Pinckney, an early American statesman who signed the U. S. Constitution.

So much for local legend. Historians, using X-rays to examine nails holding together the cottage beams, concluded it probably was built in the 1820s, after Pinckney sold the property.

The exact construction date is uncertain. But it's certain that Pinckney — lawmaker, governor, congressman and diplomat — never slept there.

"The house is still important because it is an excellent example of a tidewater cottage," said John Tucker, a local superintendent for the National Parks Service which owns the farm.

"The site has not diminished at all in its importance." Two years ago, donors paid $2 million for the two-story house and surrounding 25 acres in Mount Pleasant, about 10 miles north of Charleston, and gave it to the Park Service. The assumption was that the house was Pinckney's.

When his family bought the property in 1754, it included a house. But it may have fallen into disuse or was destroyed by a hurricane in 1811, Tucker said.

Records show Pinckney sold the property in 1815 to pay off debts.

Pitching, defense biggest improvements for ASU baseball

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

The ASU baseball team might begin the new season with substantially less currency in its coffers than last year, but darned if Jim Brock isn't going to try to make sure that whatever spare change there will be well spent.

While the Sun Devils boasted what was called a "Million-Dollar Outfield" and a wealth of talent at other positions a year ago, their 1992 edition consists of players who are not as recognizable but who have the chance to make solid contributions this season.

"We're a ballclub in transition," said Brock, who enters his 21st season as ASU coach, only 23 victories shy of the 1,000th win of his coaching career. "There are a lot of changes we have to make, but we figure pitching and defense will be more solid. And we can be a good offensive club sometime down the road."

The big names from last year — Kelly, Austin, Adams and Rees — have been replaced by those of slightly lesser magnitude but who are established as viable performers — Stevenson, Ehmann, Newstrom and Samuels.

So could this scenario be reminiscent of 1988, when a cast of players well-known only in the Valley — propelled by perhaps Brock's best-ever job of coaching — won 60 games and advanced to the championship game of the College World Series?

While Brock can't guarantee the same success, he said that the lack of a bona fide superstar forces the Sun Devils, coming off a 6-0 victory in the ASU-Alumni game on Saturday, to strive for balance throughout the lineup.

"I like that about us," Brock said. "I think we're far better balanced (than last year). This team will have to respond as a club, and I think it will be easier to do without

Sun Devils play without resolve against Oregon

McHugh upset at lack of effort

By GREG SEXTON
State Press

McHugh

Sitting slumped in her chair, it was obvious ASU women's basketball coach Maura McHugh was not pleased. In fact you might say she was quite irate.

McHugh was angered at the Sun Devils' lackadaisical effort against Oregon in a 78-72 loss Saturday night at the University Activity Center.

"We did not come out with any intensity," she said. "We did not play hard. We did not play defense like we are capable of doing, and we shot as poorly as we could."

McHugh's team, which shot 27 of 73 (37 percent) from the field, also converted only 14 of 33 free throws in the game.

"We just missed some easy, easy shots," McHugh said. "Basically, it was just a total lack of concentration."

ASU (11-4, 2-3 Pac-10) led the game early, but the Ducks dominated the rest of the game.

As far as the Sun Devils' individual play, there were not many bright spots. But junior point guard Ryneldi Becenti had 15 points and twelve assists. Senior Shannon Gridley also had 15 points and grabbed six rebounds.

McHugh said there was no excuse for missing easy shots, adding that in a physical game, the referees seemed to be missing what was occurring.

"They were calling a lot of ticky-tacky stuff," she said. "I felt they needed to look what was going on and see why there are people falling all over the floor, because they are not tripping. But it was not the refs' fault — I mean, they didn't miss their easy layups."

The Sun Devils started the second half with intensity, as Gridley grabbed an offensive rebound and scored, bringing ASU close at 43-33. In the next eight minutes, Gridley went on a tear by scoring 11 points.

"I think Shannon came out ready to play," McHugh said. "But with our style of play, we need a total team effort from start to finish."

McHugh said even though the Sun Devils are coming off Thursday's win over Oregon State, that's no excuse for a lack of quickness and effort.

"There is no excuse," she said. "If they're tired, then I guess they need some Geritol."

The Sun Devils return to action with a two-game road trip to the Bay area, as they will face California on Thursday and Stanford on Saturday.

Women stage comeback in victory over Wildcats

By GREG SEXTON
State Press

After a convincing 171-112 win over No. 8 UCLA on Saturday, ASU men's swimming coach Ron Johnson said the victory was one of his best.

"In my 17 years, it was one of the most dominant team efforts we have ever had," Johnson said. "I am surprised we won so easily because they are strong in every event. To win and be so dominant in almost every single event, I never would have predicted that."

The Sun Devils posted wins in every matchup except for the 50-meter freestyle and the 100m breaststroke, as ASU grabbed 11 of the 13 events held in the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

Swimmers who took double wins included newcomer Eduardo Piccinini, who took the 100- and 200m butterfly; senior Emmanuel Nacimiento, who won both the 100- and 200m freestyle; and sophomore David Holderbach, who grabbed the 200m breaststroke and the 1,000m freestyle.

Also playing a key role in the victory was

Hurt Brinkman sets record as ASU takes 2nd

Freshman soaring to top of Sun Devil gymnastics

By MICHAEL FLORES
State Press

In just two meets in the collegiate ranks, Tina Brinkman has helped the ASU women's gymnastics team raise its performance to a higher level. The 18-year-old from Sun Prairie, Wis., has shown poise and composure not usually associated with a freshman.

On Friday, Brinkman posted a school record 39.15 in the all-around to take top honors at the Husky Classic in Seattle. Her score eclipsed the previous ASU-best of 38.90, set by Karli Urban in a meet versus UofA in 1989.

No. 7 ASU's team score of 192.10, also a school best, was good enough for second in the four-way invitational, behind No. 4 Oregon State (192.50), and well ahead of Boise State (183.70) and host Washington (167.15).

ASU coach John Spini was again pleased with his team's performance.

"We hit 22 out of 24 routines," Spini said. "The difference was on the vault, where we had two falls."

What amazed Spini about Brinkman's performance was that she had been slowed by a sore back and went into Seattle expecting to compete in only two events.

'Nervous' Sun Devils clobber Pacific

No. 9 women's tennis opens with 8-1 victory

By BRIAN CHARLES
State Press

The ASU women's tennis team opened up regular-season play this past weekend with a crushing 8-1 win over the University of the Pacific at the Western Reserve Tennis Center.

The ninth-ranked Sun Devils (1-0) were a little unsure of how they would perform, since many players had not gotten a chance to play over the Christmas break. But coach Sheila McInerney said that she knew that the team would be able to bring it together.

"It was obvious that we were a little nervous at first," McInerney said. "But once we got going, everybody was able to play very well. We knew that (Pacific) would be good competition, especially since they already had one game under their belt (the Tigers lost to UofA on Friday), but everyone did fine, especially our doubles."

From the beginning of the match, singles was able to dictate the pace for the day.

Led by senior Krista Amend, ASU's No. 1 singles player and currently ranked 15th in the nation, the Sun Devils turned in a dominating performance by winning five of six singles matches.

"The play of our singles definitely played a big role in the match," sophomore Meredith Geiger said. "It takes the pressure off you in doubles. You go into it with the same intensity and dedication, but it's good to know that you already have the match won before the doubles competition."

Amend beat Tracee Lee 6-3, 0-6, 6-2. Excellent efforts were also turned in by Geiger, who topped Kimberly Chang 6-0, 6-3, and senior Luann Klimchok, who defeated Tisha Lee 6-1, 6-0.

Though the Sun Devils set the tone for the match in singles, a solid performance was turned in by each of the three doubles teams, who didn't give up a single set.

The No. 1 Sun Devil tandem, Geiger and Klimchok, easily handled Pacific's Tracee Lee and Chang 6-2, 6-1. An outstanding performance was also turned in by the team of junior Pam Cioffi and Amend, who blasted Tisha Lee and Leslie O'Keefe 6-2, 6-0. The third tandem, consisting of junior Dawn Martin and freshman Kara Schertzer were 6-2, 6-4 winners against Kanani Galolo and Kim Uyema.

The Sun Devils seemed unaffected by the long drought caused by the break. Though McInerney was undecided who would fill her doubles teams coming into the meet, it looks as if she might have an idea as to what tandems she will be going with.

The Sun Devils return to action on Tuesday, Feb. 4, when they travel to Grand Canyon University.

Struggling ASU unable to hang on versus No. 2 Iowa State

By MICHAEL FLORES
State Press

The ASU wrestling team continued its struggle in dual-meet play Friday, losing to Iowa State 27-16 at the University Activity Center.

The 10th-ranked Sun Devils led the second-ranked Cyclones 14-10 after six matches, but couldn't hold on through the final four.

However, fans saw a more spirited ASU team than they did during the Sun Devils' previous loss to Oklahoma State. This lack of intensity was a problem Coach Bobby Douglas said needed to be corrected for the team to improve.

With Douglas off tending to his duties as U. S. Olympic freestyle coach, the Sun Devils (2-4) were left under the supervision of assistant coaches Melvin Douglas and Thom Ortiz.

"Everybody took it upon themselves to win their match," wrestler Ray Miller said. "We need to show more personal pride, and team success will follow."

Miller, who is ranked fourth in the nation at 158 pounds, certainly did his part. He scored just 12 seconds into his match against Kirk Wellman and never let up, defeating Wellman 26-12 to up his season record to 17-4-1.

The teams were tied 10-10 going into Miller's match. That contest and the next three matches featured Cyclone wrestlers ranked in the top 10 in their respective weight classes.

Junior All-American Shawn Charles returned for the Sun Devils at 126 pounds and made it look easy in defeating Sean Wilson 14-4.

"The hand didn't bother me at all," Charles said, referring to the broken hand which kept him out for the past month.

The third-ranked Charles moved to 12-1 for the season and said afterward: "I'm back."

In a more closely contested match, ASU's fourth-ranked Marco Sanchez (134 pounds) edged sixth-ranked Mike Moreno 3-1 to go to 13-2 for the season.

Cyclone wrestlers dominated the heavier weight classes, winning by default at 167 pounds, and by falls at 177 pounds and 190 pounds.

By the time fourth-ranked Sun Devil Mike Anderson stepped on to the mat for his heavyweight match against sixth-ranked Jamie Cutler, the Sun Devils were out of it.

The two wrestled to a 1-1 draw, moving Anderson to 18-2-1 for the season.

"The main difference was that (Iowa State) never quit," Miller said. "They just kept fighting, even when they were losing. That's what some of our guys need to start doing."

sophomore Simon Percy, who won the 200m individual medley.

"I think we would have been very difficult for any team to beat," Johnson said. "This was an exceptionally good win for us."

The ASU women were also in action Saturday, posting a 135-106 win over UofA. It was not a blowout like the men had, as the Sun Devils came from behind for the victory.

Freshman Becky Hackiewicz won the 1,000 freestyle and grabbed second in the 500m freestyle. Junior Betsi Hugh also fared well in winning the 200 individual, with sophomore Ana Azevedo and freshman Kelly Leamam also taking two first places.

Hill said his team was not playing with 100 percent due to illness and injury, but they came together and competed hard.

"I think the bottom line is that the girls have a lot of pride," Hill said. "They just did not want to lose at home."

The ASU women divers won the 1-meter dive, but UofA won the 3-meter. The Sun Devil men lost both diving competitions to UCLA.

The ASU men also beat NAU 198-98 on Friday.

balance beam."

Brinkman said her first two events went so well that she decided to go for a high score in the all-around.

"It all happened so fast," Brinkman said. "I didn't even really have time to practice for the other events. I just went out and did it."

Brinkman made her biggest impact in the floor exercise. Her 9.95 in that event is also a school record, bettering Urban's 9.90.

"The crowd went wild for Tina after that," Spini said.

She also won the vault, tying a school-best

9.85 set last year at the Pac-10 Championship by then-freshman Christine Belotti.

Brinkman was surprised to learn Sunday that she had broken the school all-around mark.

"I didn't know that," she said. "It feels pretty good."

She said she also feels good about her and the team's performance at this point in the season.

"I'm just going out and trying to have fun," Brinkman said. "All this (individual success) has been unexpected."

Baseball

a Mike Kelly, a true superstar. We have guys who have a chance to go up. It's a team concept, and I feel good about that."

ASU, ranked 19th in the nation by Baseball America and 21st by Collegiate Baseball, should improve on what was the most troublesome facet of its disappointing 35-27 mark last year — pitching.

The Sun Devils earned a reputation as a knockout puncher with a glass jaw in 1991, featuring formidable offensive weapons but hampered by the penchant for giving up runs as well. ASU's 5.84 earned run average was its worst in five years.

Part of the reason for that figure was that the Sun Devils were never able to put together a mainstay starting rotation, a problem Brock thinks he can alleviate this season, which opens on Saturday against Texas Tech at Packard Stadium.

The starting rotation comprises sophomore Doug Newstrom, who was 10-2 with a 5.43 ERA last year, senior Jeff Matranga, a transfer from U.S. International, and junior Sean Lowe, also a newcomer.

Newstrom, who was 4-1 with a 2.04 ERA in his last four starts, is expected to be the ace of the staff. But the biggest boost might be from Matranga, an experienced Division I performer who transferred to ASU when USIU dropped athletics last spring.

"(Matranga) is a consummate college pitcher," Brock said. "We have only one guy back in Newstrom, but when you take somebody else — who we'll need with Newstrom against the teams we have to beat — who won't be overwhelmed against (the Six-Pac), you know you'll have two legitimate starters."

In the bullpen, Brock plans to go with returning junior Mike Fenton as the setup man, sophomore Brent Smith as long relief specialist, and junior college transfer Kevin Rawitzer as the closer.

"I'm really pleased with them," Brock said. "I thought going in that we would feel good about the pitching. If you break it down, we have a chance to go with five or six guys that we can use in certain situations. And I guess you could say I'm about as confident with our No. 6 guy as I could be right now."

The improvement among the pitching staff should also relieve pressure on the Sun

Devil lineup, which has the potential to be productive but will not be as explosive as last season. Only 38 home runs were hit last year by returning players, half of them by outfielders Todd Steverson and Scott Samuels.

"I don't think we're going to have the same kind of home run punch as with a (Jim) Austin or a Kelly," Brock said. "We have a chance to make a lot of contact, but I don't think we can be able to dominate with our bats early in the season — although I hope I'm wrong."

But ASU received good news when Brock said that Steverson and Samuels have made satisfactory academic progress after being benched for poor grades during the fall semester. Steverson has rejoined the lineup, while Samuels returns when the Sun Devils face California-Riverside on Feb. 5.

Steverson, a preseason second-team All-American who hit .289 with 10 homers and 50 RBIs last year, is in center field while junior college transfer Brian Lootens plays left until Samuels comes back. Battling for the right field position are freshman Jacob Cruz and senior transfer Brett Weinberger.

In the infield, Brock was extremely happy when shortstop Kurt Ehmman chose to return for his senior year instead of signing an offer from the California Angels. Ehmman, whose .331 average in 1991 makes him the leading returning ASU hitter, is a preseason third-team All-American.

But the rest of the infield is inexperienced. There are new — but heralded — starters at the corners, with freshmen Antone Williamson at third base and Todd Cady at first base. Baseball America projects Williamson as the best freshman in the country, and Cady would have been a sure first- or second-round pick had he not made clear his ASU intentions.

At second base, sophomore Bill Dunn and senior Mike Scialo are battling for the spot that they both split time at last season, and the catching duties are between seniors Dave Robson and Jim Henderson.

"Defense is the other part (of the team) that I feel very good about," Brock said. "If we can score runs — and I feel we have the chance to — that's well and good. But as young as we are, I see some (pitchers) that might be able to come in here and be able to dominate our hitters. So, defense will be a key."

For Tuesday, January 28, 1992

ARIES

(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
You are quite aggressive today and must be careful not to ride roughshod over the feelings of others. Career gains come now through intuition and creativity.

TAURUS

(Apr. 20 to May 20)
You will have to deal with sensitive types on the job today. Don't let a minor matter escalate into a resentment. Evening hours are perfect for leisure and romance.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20)
A more realistic approach is needed in romance. An eye for luxury could cause you to overspend. Home-based activities are favored over outside entertainment tonight.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 22)
A family member may need special consideration now. It is best not to bring work problems home from the office. Partnership rapport is excellent though tonight.

LEO

(July 23 to Aug. 22)
The wrong tone of voice could upset the apple cart in dealings with others. Accent tact and diplomacy. Special luck comes now to those engaged in artistic work.

VIRGO

(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
A small thing, like who picks up the lunch tab, could cause hurt feelings now. Try not to get upset about financial concerns. Romance is highlighted tonight.

LIBRA

(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Try not to let a minor concern escalate into a war of words with a close tie. Others may tend to be pushy. You will enjoy creative and domestic interests after dark.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
Morning hours could find you nursing a real or imagined slight. Don't let temperament undermine productivity on the job. You will meet someone interesting tonight.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Money could come in and go right out today unless you are careful. You will be pleased with today's developments on the job. Pleasure pursuits may be costly.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
Plans for a trip should fall nicely into place. You may be fascinated by a new interest today. Diplomacy is needed on the job and with family members right now.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
You will talk up a storm now, but try to see the other fellow's point of view. Friction could arise over ideological matters. Money matters should improve.

PISCES

(Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
You and a loving tie get along in many ways today, but you may disagree about a money matter now. Social life is favored tonight. Welcome new friendships.

YOU BORN TODAY are both idealistic and practical, but sometimes have difficulty reconciling these qualities. You are usually found in an intellectual or artistic career rather than business. At times, you can be fixed in your ideas, yet you are also inventive. You are capable of artistic achievements that are ahead of the times. You may be especially drawn to music, drama and art. Birthdate of: Artur Rubinstein, pianist; Colette, writer; and Alan Alda, actor.

perceive any immediate change from the service areas. The service levels will be maintained."

Support groups and counseling have been offered to the employees by Human Resources and a workshop will be held next week to help them learn job-finding skills.

"The people in Residence Life are almost like a family," Osborne said. "I think the employees handled the information in superb form. They're super people."
