Olson admits violation of ASASU court order

By KRIS MAYES
State Press

Associated Students of ASU Elections Coordinator Amy Olson admitted Tuesday she defied an order by the organization's Supreme Court preventing her from carrying out her duties, and said she did so at the request of an administrative official.

Olson said she was asked to complete a year-end report and "finish my job" by ASASU faculty adviser Gary Kleeman, despite having been slapped with an injunction order by the organization's Supreme Court last month for failing to remain unbiased in carrying out her election duties.

"Right now I was just finishing up my report and cleaning up my office," she said. "I was finishing my job because it needs to get done."

Calling the Supreme Court injunction "just a technicality," Olson said Kleeman realized she was the only person within ASASU capable of completing the elections coordinator's duties.

"Kleeman said to go ahead and finish up," Olson said. "He wasn't trying to hurt anybody — I don't think."

Olson was retained by Kleeman on April 3 and is being compensated for carrying out the remainder of her election duties under the auspices of working as his clerk.

ASASU College of Business Sen. Alex Bouzari, the plaintiff in the first round of charges against Olson, called for her impeachment at a Senate meeting Tuesday.

"It is a huge outrage that we are allowing this to happen," Bouzari said before introducing a resolution to impeach

Senator vows legal action against veto

By CHRIS DRISCOLL

Arizona Senate President Pete Rios, D-Dudleyville, on Tuesday said he will file special legal action in the state Supreme Court against Gov. Fife Symington's line-item veto of parts of a budget-balancing plan passed by state lawmakers.

Symington angered some lawmakers last month by rejecting parts of a plan to eliminate a $50 million deficit in Arizona's fiscal year 1992 budget.

Leaders of the Republican-controlled House of Representatives, meanwhile, announced they would support a "friendly" challenge to the governor's actions, changing the legal action into a bipartisan effort of both houses of the Legislature.

"The executive branch overreached its authority," said House Speaker Jane Hull, R-Phoenix, in a news release issued after a meeting of House Republican and Democrat leadership.

Hull said she planned to notify Symington and the Senate of

Hageseth's impeachment proceedings begin

ASASU VP charged with scalping plans

By CAROL ANN HANSEN
State Press

The Associated Students of ASU Senate on Tuesday began impeachment proceedings against Executive Vice President Christian Hageseth for allegedly abusing the powers of his office by purchasing the organization's reserved concert tickets to sell at a profit.

Hageseth will face an impeachment hearing Tuesday after ASU Public Events confiscated 48 U2 tickets from him last week.

"We're not going to tolerate abuses within this association," said ASASU Sen. Clay Haden of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences, who authored the bill setting forth the impeachment process.

The tickets in Hageseth's possession were part of a block of 100 reserved for students working within ASASU.

Hageseth said he bought the tickets from members of the organization who were not planning to attend the concert.

Hageseth said he does not believe his actions warrant impeachment, "but it appears (the Senate) needs to resolve this issue to their satisfaction."

Sen. David Stiles of the College of Education, said if allegations that Hageseth bought the tickets to sell for his own profit prove accurate, "then it's grounds for impeachment."

"If it's true, he's broken a state law and basically criminals should not be in a public office," he said.

ASASU Sen. Sanford Stokes of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences said he voted against the hearing but is glad that the rest of the Senate "can hear all of the facts."

"I felt that if senators had heard all the facts regarding the case, which I had, then they would have voted against the hearing," Stokes said. "I think Christian thought of it as the ultimate form of capitalism but what he needed to be reminded of is that he is an elected official."

Stokes said Hageseth did not carry out his intentions and therefore does not deserve to be impeached.

"If we throw everyone in jail who has bad intentions, then everyone in the whole nation would be in prison," Stokes said.

ASASU President Greg Mechem said he would not issue an opinion on Hageseth's case until the Senate makes a decision next week.

"To my knowledge no specific law has been broken by Vice President Hageseth," Mechem said. "This is where the issue of gray area and ethical behavior needs to be defined."

Mechem said it is up to the Senate to determine whether Hageseth acted improperly.

"It's another part of taking care of business — the Senate is to take care of their own," he said.

Quality-control robot wins engineer's honor

By BLAKE HERZOG
State Press

A demonstration of a robot and conveyor belt system that could produce wax objects and then check them for structural flaws recently earned a team of ASU engineering students first place in a national competition.

The 15-member squad's entry into the 1992 WESTEC CAD/CAM & Robotics Challenge, held March 23 in Los Angeles at a convention of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers (SME), earned the high honor.

According to team leader Ron Shutter, a senior manufacturing engineering technology major, the quality-control aspect of the project can be used on many other materials besides the blue wax they used in their demonstration.

"We tested all kinds of plastics. We came to the conclusion, definitely based on cost and the relieving coming out of the mold, that wax would be the best option," Shutter said.

"We definitely said that in a real company they didn't have to use wax. They can use molten metal and use this inspection. The whole idea was this inspection cell."

The project also serves as the required senior capstone project for the students, who together formed a much larger-than-average competitive team. The size presented some additional challenges for the engineers.

"It's easy to establish a rapport with one or two people real quick, and that way you can work better," said Ed Ramsauer, a senior manufacturing engineering technology major who headed up the manufacturing section of the team.

"With this large a team, it's hard to establish a rapport real quick. But then, we had to do it quick."

The two months the group spent working with a General Electric P-50 robot and an old conveyor belt yielded an automated system that could manufacture molded, diamond-shaped SME logos. The system then places the logos on the conveyor belt which transports them into the range of a camera hooked up to a computer.

The camera then takes 10 pictures of the product, which the computer then averages, using light sensors to determine whether it is flawed.

A wire arm on the side of the conveyor belt then sorts the product into the "good" or "bad" pile at the end of the conveyor belt.

Most of the team includes members of the student chapter of the SME. The students will present the project to the organization's local chapter on May 11.

The system's creators say they are making sophisticated quality-control technology more accessible to smaller manufacturers.

Team member Doug Schulz, a senior manufacturing industrial technology major, said, "You could compare this to a $30,000 project."

Approximately $3,000 was spent to complete the project.

Schulz said he thought the team's organization contributed to its ultimate success.

"It impressed the judges in California when they opened up our book and saw timelines, charts, things like that," he said. "They made a lot of comments about it."

Shutter cited less material reasons for their success.

"It's really funny because I definitely believe that God had his hand in this," he said.

Yeltsin regains control over Black Sea fleet

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin on Tuesday seized the initiative from his critics by speeding up creation of Russia's army, reasserting control over the Black Sea fleet, and warning of "chaos" if parliament reduced his powers.

His tough talk was aimed both at countering Ukraine's claims to the Black Sea armada and neutralizing the challenge to his authority by former Communists in parliament.

But it was certain to raise tensions in the Commonwealth of Independent States, which has been divided by bickering between Russia and Ukraine over the fleet of more than 300 warships.

"This decree on the Black Sea fleet will give Yeltsin the votes of 'patriots' in the Congress," said presidential adviser Galina Starovoitova, referring to hard-liners.

"But it's a step toward the Yugoslavization of relations between Ukraine and Russia," she said.

The moves once again demonstrated the bold side of Yeltsin, 61, who came back from political troubles in 1989, and rose to lead the country following the demise of his rival Mikhail Gorbachev.

His decree asserting Russian control over the former Soviet fleet was made in response to an order Monday by Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk, who claimed the fleet for Ukraine.

The competing Ukrainian and Russian orders had no immediate military effect, because the fleet remained under the control of Yevgeny Shaposhnikov, commander of the commonwealth's joint armed forces.

Both leaders' rhetoric appeared designed to appease growing militancy in their respective parliaments, as well as to serve them in complex negotiations over former Soviet property.

Although Shaposhnikov read Yeltsin's decree to Congress, Vice President Alexander Rutskoi told reporters that he, Shaposhnikov and Yeltsin had initialed but not signed it. That underscored the symbolic nature of the dispute.

In another effort to appease hard-liners, Yeltsin said all former Soviet troops in "Germany, Poland, the Baltics, Mongolia and in the Caucasus and (other former Soviet) republics" will be placed under Russia's control.

He said the army would be cut by 700,000 troops, to under 1.5 million but did not set a date for the army's creation.

"Russia took a long time to decide to form its own army, hoping until the last moment to preserve the single commonwealth army. We did not manage to do that, however," Yeltsin said.

The moves come amid a movement in the 1,046-member Congress of People's Deputies to hold a vote of no-confidence in his government. Many lawmakers also want to adopt a constitution that would eliminate his authority to issue economic decrees.

Gas pipeline blast in Texas kills 1; flattens buildings

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — An explosion packing the power of an earthquake ripped open an underground gas pipeline Tuesday, killing one person, flattening nearby mobile homes, and shaking buildings more than 140 miles away.

Cars were thrown from nearby roads. Leaves were ripped from trees whose trunks were blackened. Livestock lay dead in fields. At least 16 people were injured, said Mike Cox, Department of Public Safety spokesman.

"It looks like a tornado came through except there was a path of fire," said Ron Haussecker, emergency management coordinator for Washington County.

Hours after the blast, a plume of flame more than 30 feet high still spewed from the ruptured pipeline.

"We haven't decided yet how to shut it off," said Haussecker. "We're just sitting there."

"It looks like a tornado that was on fire," Cox said.

Workers had detected leaking gas in the area before the blast, a company executive said.

Authorities suspect gas collected in a low-lying ravine and was ignited by a passing vehicle or possibly by a pilot light in a nearby home.

The pipeline carried liquefied propane gas, often called LP gas, said Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Laureen Chernow.

The explosion occurred in a rural area seven miles south of this eastern Texas town of 12,000. It rattled homes and buildings as far away as Galveston, more than 90 miles away, and Vidor, 140 miles away.

It registered 3.5 to 4.0 on the Richter scale, or as strong as an earthquake that could cause slight to moderate damage, Rice University in Houston reported.

"It is amazing the devastation that you can see within a two-to three-mile area," said Washington County Judge Dorothy Morgan.

"I know there are probably about 50 homes that have been destroyed or have some type of damage," she said.

The only death was that of a 6-year-old boy who was blown out of a flattened mobile home, authorities said. Rescuers sought damaged homes in the area for more victims but found none.

"We had windows shaking, pictures falling off the wall. Our phones and electricity went out immediately," said Andrea Allen, who lives nearby.

"It was worse than any earthquake I've ever been through," she said. "I used to live in California, and the sound ... it was like intensified thunder that just kept going and going and shaking at the same time."

The Bee, New York Times, Newsday capture Pulitzers

NEW YORK (AP) — The Pulitzer Prizes in journalism were awarded Tuesday for reporting on subjects ranging from the Sierras to the subway, a desert war to the demise of a coup. The Sacramento Bee, The New York Times and Newsday each won two awards.

The Associated Press won the spot news photography award for the second straight year. The 1992 prize was awarded to the AP for photos of the attempted coup in Russia and the collapse of the Communist regime.

"I didn't even know that a citizen of the former Soviet Union could win the prize!" photographer Boris Yurchenko, who turned 55 Tuesday, said in Moscow.

"It's an honor to win this for the AP, but it's also a fitting tribute to a staff that has had to endure untold difficulties and hardships month after month," Vin Alabiso, the AP's executive photo editor, said in New York.

Pulitzers in the arts also were awarded Tuesday, the 76th year for the prizes, given by Columbia University under a trust set up by the will of Publisher Joseph Pulitzer.

Jane Smiley won the fiction prize for "A Thousand Acres." "The Kentucky Cycle," by Robert Schenkkan, won for drama, and "Maus," by Art Spiegelman, was given a special award.

The Pulitzer in biography went to Lewis B. Puller Jr. for "Fortunate Son: The Healing of a Vietnam Vet." Puller is the son of Chesty Puller, the most decorated Marine in U.S. Marine Corps history.

Other journalism prizes were given for reporting on topics that included police misconduct, battered women and animal research.

The Sacramento Bee won its first Pulitzers since 1935, for public service and beat reporting.

Bee reporter Tom Knudson was honored for "The Sierra in Peril," an examination of environmental threats and damage to the Sierra Nevada. Knudson won the national reporting Pulitzer in 1985 while at The Des Moines Register.

Deborah Blum won the beat reporting prize for "The Monkey Wars," a series exploring the complex ethical and moral questions surrounding primate research.

"It was a big gamble, this series," Blum said. "It was one of those things you start and have no idea where it's going to go."

Anna Quindlen of The New York Times won the commentary prize for columns on personal and political topics.

"A lot of the columns that were part of my entry were about abortion, Anita Hill's testimony before the judiciary committee, about motherhood," Quindlen said. "I hope we won't call them women's issues anymore," she said. "I hope we will call them Pulitzer issues."

Howell Raines, the Times' Washington bureau chief, won in feature writing for "Grady's Gift," an account of the childhood friendship between the writer, who is white, and Grady Hutchinson, his family's black housekeeper in Birmingham, Ala.

The story appeared in The New York Times Magazine. "The article is really a homage to Grady as my teacher and to my parents for running a home that did not teach racism even though we lived in the most segregated city in America," said Raines, 49.

Student voices

to the editor Letters

New hall benefits blacks

Dear Editor:

The mission and philosophy of Residence Life is to build community in the context of individual student success. The African-American Culture Community is designed to provide a living environment for anyone who is interested in the African-American experience/culture/community.

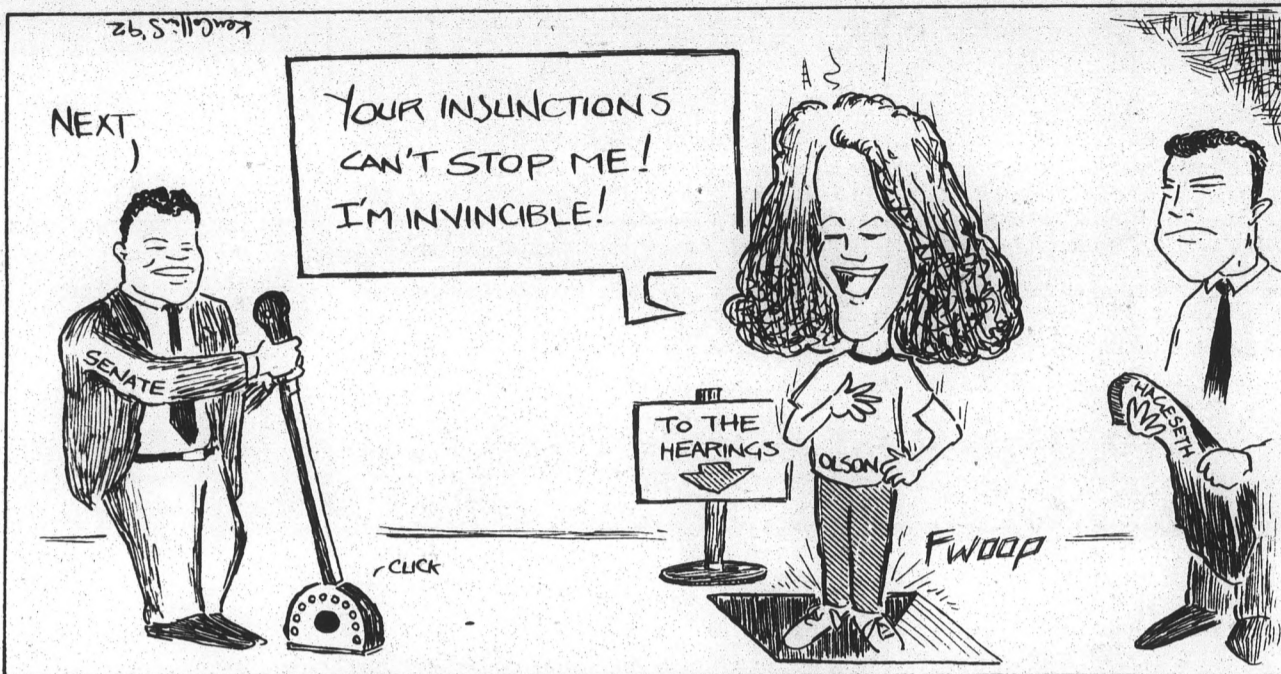

Several concerns have surfaced regarding this community. Let's look at some of these issues: 1) It promotes segregation. ASU is a predominantly white institution. Currently only 2.3 percent of the student population identifies itself as African-American. A student's living environment is only one aspect of that student's college experience. It would be impossible for "black" students to totally segregate themselves and be a part of the ASU experience. 2) White students will be uncomfortable in that community. First off, all students have been notified that this community is going to happen. They can choose not to live there (just like anyone has the right to live there). It is good to be concerned about student comfort, but the perception of the African-American student is that this concern is one-way. ASU does not send out "warning" letters to black students telling them that they are moving into a community whose residents are culturally different. 3) Separate communities are wrong. We are all equal. Prejudice, discrimination and racism are a reality at ASU both overtly and covertly. This community will provide a place on campus where African-American students can feel culturally safe from perceived campus/community racism. This system of cultural "safeness" has been built in for white male students since this country was founded and never questioned. 4) Minority students will not be educated on African-American culture because all the black students will be living in their own hall. First, all black students will not choose to live in this community. This community will give the University community a group of students united under the purpose of diversity/cultural education. This is a tremendous programming resource for the campus and residence hall community.

An African-American Culture Hall is a new experiment/idea for ASU. This concept has been very successful at universities such as Stanford and Cornell as well as others. Questioning this idea is good and healthy. What we have being created is a community based on common goals, interests and purpose. Before you make judgments on its specific validity, ask yourself about some of the communities that have existed for years on this campus.

Fraternities house groups of individuals united under common goals, interests and purpose. Sorority floors do the same. We also have housing based on only physical characteristics — you must be female to live in Palo Verde East. Before you say to yourself, "That's different," look beyond the surface criticisms of an African-American Culture Community. Look at the multitude of issues and the realities of campus culture. The reality of issues may not be all that different than Greek communities and single-sex halls. The goal of student services is to create environments in which all students can be successful at ASU.

This is my personal perspective and in no way have I been "authorized" to speak on behalf of the ASU administration and/or Residence Life.

ASASU SPRING CLEANING

Coverage of blacks biased

Dear Editor:

We have never been more offended by an article than the travesty that appeared last Friday titled, "The Disappearing Black Man?" The ASU NAACP chapter could have written an article more even-handedly. Diversity magazine, for example, was reported to be a conservative college magazine. Diversity is "a critical journal of race and culture" with a black editor. None of that was mentioned, naturally. The article hardly touched upon the fact there is no proof of a conspiracy and completely ignored opposing arguments.

The State Press practically is begging for a racial backlash to occur as a result of this incident. If an article about a far fetched black conspiracy against whites had been printed, there would most likely be a tremendous response to "white racists' fears of blacks" or something of the like. However, since the roles are reversed, the State Press will probably received plaudits about "honestly addressing the situation" and "calling attention to white racism and the need for more sensitivity."

Whites have been unfairly attacked. But rather than making this a black/white issue, we need to call attention to what the writer editorialized in a supposedly objective new article: "The lack of funds, teachers, and a culturally sensitive curriculum in inner-city schools." Washington, D.C. is predominantly minority, spends among the most on its students for education, and is trying to be a leader of the revisionist history movement, yet we all know how students there turn out.

Education must be based on traditional values, because until we stress good behavior and unity, our problems will not be solved. Turning to a code-word such as "mental-slavery" just tries to place the blame on whites for problems the black community has not yet solved for itself. Maybe radical blacks such as Keith Pegues should revisit "Boyz N the Hood," which stresses the need for strong families and an anti-drug/alcohol message.

The only thing left to wonder about is why the article was even printed. The article certainly won't solve any problems, and appeared to give credence to a conspiracy theory no rational individual could possibly believe. We hope the campus simply ignores the mindless message given in the article and works on true equality, rather than wasting efforts on undeserved requital.

Seating segregated at ASU

Dear Editor:

Recently, there was a sneak preview of the movie "Thunderheart" shown at Neeb Hall. This event was put on by the ASASU Special Events Committee. This film was one of many films that are shown as sneak previews at this venue and attended by many ASU students. However, this particular film was not seen by over 200 people who could not get in because all of the seats were full, apparently because the number of tickets distributed far exceeded the seating available.

When I asked an ASASU Special Events representative about the lack of seating, she told me that all the seats were taken except for the ones that were reserved for a Native American group, who were apparently admitted without tickets or even waiting in line.

The fact is that several rows of seats are held and given to exclusive minority groups at many ASASU Special Events sneak previews. Whether this policy of racial preference is carried out under the name of "cultural diversity" or a means of ASASU soliciting political favors from these minority groups, I feel that it is inappropriate for an ASU-sponsored activity. Since the money that supports ASASU comes from all taxpayers and students equally, the program should provide equal access to all students, and not special privileges for certain groups. Even though this campus supports segregated residence halls, I believe society is past the era of segregated seating in movie theaters.

  - A woman not affiliated with the University had a blue fanny pack stolen from her vehicle, which was parked at the Dash Inn. Value of the pack and its contents is estimated at $1,000.
  - Two men not affiliated with the University were approached after an officer saw them urinating at Mill Avenue and 10th Street.
  - Three female students were victims of indecent exposure in separate incidents that occurred at Lot 51 and Lot 59.
- Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:
- An ASU senior had his car stereo stolen at gunpoint by four men in a parking lot at 1300 S. Sunset Drive, just west of The Vine tavern. The student approached his car and surprised the men as they were in the process of removing his stereo. One of the men, described as Hispanic, 5-foot-8, 150 pounds, wearing a white T-shirt and blue jeans, pointed a black semiautomatic handgun at him and told him he would be shot if he tried to stop them. Two other men, both Hispanic, 5-foot-8, 150 pounds, one wearing a white T-shirt, blue jeans and a white baseball cap turned backwards, the other wearing a red shirt, dark pants and a black baseball cap, continued the theft. A fourth man, described as white with long blond hair, stood guard near a dumpster. The suspects drove their car through the Wendy's parking lot, but the car was described differently by the victim and the witnesses.

- A Gumby's Pizza employee was robbed of $200 in cash, two pizzas and some cans of Pepsi as he was making a delivery at 1201 S. McClintock Drive. The suspect, a black man, 6 feet tall, medium build and wearing an "X" baseball cap, fled in an unknown direction.

- BizMart, 917 E. Broadway Road, was burglarized after the air conditioner on the roof was separated from the duct work. Stolen was an Apple Macintosh computer and disk drives, valued at $6,999, and a monitor valued at $429.

- A 55-year-old woman's 1965 Buick Wildcat was damaged after a wad of gum was stuffed into the keyhole of the trunk. Damage is estimated at $50.

Wife of Mesa police officer sentenced

MESA (AP) — Laurie Elliget, the wife of a former Mesa police officer, was sentenced Tuesday to six months in prison and three years probation for child abuse in the sex case involving her husband and two teen-agers.

Elliget's husband, former Mesa police officer Richard Elliget, was sentenced in January to 14 years in prison for sexual exploitation of a 16-year-old female relative and one count of facilitation to commit sexual conduct with a 13-year-old boy.

Laurie Elliget entered into a plea agreement in March, admitting that she failed to stop a photo session involving the girl and her husband.

Police took no action against the Elligets before the girl told relatives about the abuse.

Laurie Elliget is to begin serving her sentence Oct. 1.

ASU counselor concerned show will hype hypnosis

By MARGO GILLMAN
State Press

A hypnotist will attempt to dazzle ASU students tonight with a series of hypnotic demonstrations, but one University official said he is concerned that the entertainment will only promote stereotypes of the clinical hypnotic industry.

Bob Zubia, a counselor from the ASU division of Counseling and Consultation, said such hypnotic performances have a tendency "to give serious and useful applications a bad name."

Hypnotist and comedian John Sacco, 28, said he will "put people under" during the event to introduce various phenomena to students and help them find ways to use these experiences in daily life.

But Zubia said the act likely will frighten students away from ever seeking hypnotic counseling treatment.

"I am against any type of (hypnotic) performance, and I think any respectable counselor will agree with me," he said. "These performances are nonsense more than anything else."

Zubia said hypnosis is a helpful tool for people who are trying to learn how to control pain, minimize their blood flow, and change behavioral habits such as smoking and overeating.

"But (students) will see this fellow ridiculing people up there in a hypnotic trance, singing and acting foolish and making the audience laugh," he said. "And they'll remember what they've seen."

Zubia said he often has trouble persuading clients to undergo clinical hypnosis because they've seen it portrayed in a misused or abused manner.

"They misunderstand it and think I'll put them under my control and make them cackle like a chicken," he said. "It takes forever to convince people to use it as a therapeutic measure."

Sacco, who majored in psychology at Boston College and currently studies medical hypnosis applications at Harvard University, said he respects the criticism his part-time hobby receives.

"I had a lot of problems trying to decide how everyone could go away wanting to look into (hypnosis) further," he said. "My stance is, 'Let's all have fun together and learn something' — so I'll demonstrate hypnosis and point out ways they can use it in their lives."

Sonya Marchant, a 22-year-old senior geography major, said she would never undergo hypnosis for entertainment or clinical purposes because "once you open your mind up to hypnosis, you don't have as much control over it."

But subjects are not controlled by the hypnotist, Zubia said.

People in a trance do not lose control and do things they would not normally do, he said. "Some people tend to lose their inhibitions because they like to be laughed at and appreciated — those are usually the people who volunteer — they are predisposed to do those things."

Aaron Gilbert, a 20-year-old sophomore elementary education major, said although he enjoys watching hypnotic performances, he thinks the technique is "fake."

"It's just a show so people can make money and commercialize it," Gilbert said.

Some people may pretend to be affected by hypnosis, Zubia said. But performance hypnotists are trained to spot people who will most likely fall under the trance.

"Stage hypnotists are very clever — they know a lot about human nature," he said, explaining that hypnotists usually target volunteers who have vacant and unexpectant facial expressions. "They will avoid people that are going to resist them and make them look like fools."

ASU King Day group formed

By SONDRA ROBERTO
State Press

Victory Together, a statewide group supporting a paid state holiday to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., is now an official student organization at ASU.

Mathew Capalby, a sophomore political science major, is spearheading the 15-member ASU chapter, which was approved by Student Life on Tuesday.

"I've always been an admirer and a proponent of Dr. King and his work — what he stood for for human civil rights and individuals," Capalby said.

The holiday "is a great opportunity for us all to honor such a man that stood for the very ideals on which our country was founded," he added.

Capalby, who is from Kingman, Ariz., said he expects the group's membership to increase significantly in the next few weeks. The organization plans to meet on campus twice a month.

Victory Together was formed as a statewide organization in January 1991, after Arizona voters narrowly defeated two King holiday referendums on the November 1990 ballot, said group spokesman Art Mobley.

"We have had a lot of response from the college community in general," Mobley said. "Younger people are more supportive of this issue as a rule."

He said Victory Together's initial goal is to ensure that the November 1992 ballot has only one King day proposal.

The holiday issue appeared on the 1990 ballot as two separate proposals and created voter confusion and split support, according to polls taken after the election.

The holiday issue will appear again on November's ballot, but as one referendum only.

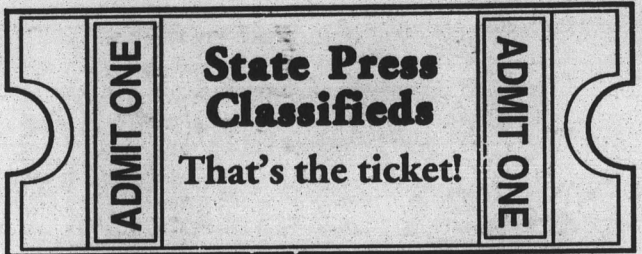

"This time we have one clear choice — there won't be voter confusion over two ballot initiatives," Capalby said.

"And there won't be the issue of economic blackmail," he added, referring to economic sanctions imposed on Arizona and the loss of the 1993 Super Bowl in Tempe due to the lack of a paid state holiday.

Capalby said he has contacted the agent of the rock group U2, which will play at the ASU Activity Center on April 10. The band's agent said lead singer Bono will call for the holiday during the concert.

Natalie Young, chair of the African-American Coalition, said she is pleased that Victory Together has come to ASU but added it is a "shame" that Arizona still has not resolved the issue.

"I'm sure the coalition will be more than happy to work with Victory Together," she said. "It's just a matter of actually connecting with them."

Olson

Olson at the meeting. "It (Kleeman's hiring of Olson) was a decision made in which students were not consulted."

Bouzari claimed that Olson was "being paid to do nothing" by Kleeman, and that she was willfully disobeying the Supreme Court's mandate.

"At this point it's a question of justice," Bouzari said. "They cannot let this thing happen."

ASASU President Greg Mechem said he was unaware that Olson had obtained another position within ASASU and said the matter "warrants further serious investigation."

"I am concerned with the attitudes of people and the perceptions of untouchability," Mechem said, vowing to pursue the latest allegation against Olson to the "factual end."

Kleeman could not be reached for comment, but ASU Dean of Student Life Art Carter, who was present at the meeting, said the latest charges against Olson came as a surprise.

"I really can't comment on it because I want to look into it tomorrow," he said.

The Senate voted to hear the impeachment charges brought by Bouzari at a later date. The hearing likely will be set tomorrow or later this week, according to engineering Sen. Sanford Stokes, who chaired the Senate meeting in the absence of Senate President Christian Hageseth.

The controversy swelled later Tuesday night when College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Sen. Kate Lawrence unsuccessfully introduced a bill on behalf of the Senate Government Operations Committee that would have requested the Supreme Court to modify its injunction of Olson to allow her to complete the year-end report.

"Since the only job left was to write a year-end report and since that report was necessary to next year's election, we would like the Supreme Court to modify its injunction," Lawrence said. "The only people hurt by this are the students."

Council poses downtown management plan

By D.J. BURROUGH

State Press

Tempe is hoping to prod downtown business owners into organizing a management corporation that would assume some of the city's responsibility for the everyday operations of the downtown area.

"Its purpose would be to uniformly manage private property and concerns of businesses within the downtown on a day-to-day basis," said Dave Fackler, Tempe's deputy community development director in a report to the City Council.

The group would manage privately owned property regarding matters of security, parking operations, maintenance, entertainment and promotion.

The City Council would approve funding for such a group's first year of operation to aid in its development, Fackler said.

Fackler called the private-area management corporation "much-needed" and the "most important part" of the city's Downtown Tempe Management Plan.

The long-awaited plan focuses on the overall management of downtown Tempe and is divided into three sections: public area management, private area management and events coordination and permitting.

"It is hoped that the formation of a downtown management corporation or group would allow all downtown matters to be routed through the group for management purposes in coordination with the city's public-area management team," Fackler said.

He said the formation of the group would give a "single voice" to the downtown businesses when dealing with the city. The lack of a single body has hindered coordination of events in the past, he said.

Councilwoman Barbara Sherman said the creation of a citizen management group would help improve the city's ability to manage the area by creating an "open forum."

"I think that's exactly what is needed right now," she said.

Councilwoman Pat Hatton said she supports the creation of such a group.

"We are moving in the right direction," she said. "I will be interested in the input."

Hatton said the city shouldn't abdicate too much downtown management responsibility to a citizen group.

"We can't give up more than we should," she said. "We must always have a strong hand in the direction. We do have to answer to the city as a whole."

Frank MaGuire, executive director of the Mill Avenue Merchant's Association, said he supports the idea, but added that similar plans among city business owners have failed in the past.

"Hopefully, it would eliminate some problems," he said. "I think some of the (merchants) would welcome someone who could do it on a more full-time basis. Right now it is done on a piecemeal basis. As a problem arises, it is taken care of rather than planning for it."

John Egan, owner of McDuffy's Bar in downtown Tempe, is spearheading a drive to form a management group for the downtown area. Egan said he thought that downtown business owners would support the idea of the non-profit organization, but that the current drive was still in the early stages of development.

"It's really to everybody's benefit," he said. "With this kind of an overall concept, you're trying to create a little vision for guiding Tempe for the next few years."

● JERUSALEM (AP) — Was he just horsing around? No one is quite sure what moved the royal Jordanian polo pony to bolt from King Hussein's palace Tuesday and swim to the Israeli resort town of Eilat.

But his arrival provoked a diplomatic stir — and a few good-natured exchanges.

Tourists in Eilat watched in amazement as the saddled gray horse galloped into the sea at the neighboring Jordanian port of Aqaba and swam several hundred yards to Israel.

Israeli police initially feared the worst and checked to see if the horse was booby-trapped or carrying a bomb. It wasn't.

A palace official in Amman, the Jordanian capital, confirmed that a horse belonging to King Hussein's brother, Crown Prince Hassan, had escaped from the royal compound at Aqaba.

"One of the polo ponies of Crown Prince Hassan has thrown its groom and swam west to Eilat," the official said.

King Hussein himself laughed at the reports, telling The Associated Press in Amman it was "too late for April Fool's Day."

The horse was examined by Eilat's municipal veterinarian, Yaacov Zavrin, who termed it sound except for "a small wound on his leg, which perhaps he knocked while jumping."

He added: "He doesn't look very royal to me."

Contrary to initial reports, Zavrin said, the horse was not a stallion but a gelding.

Israeli officials were in a quandary about what to do with the animal. For the time being, it was taken to a quarantined area near Eilat. Deputy police superintendent Michel Eidan said it was being taken care of and was "eating whatever horses eat."

Eidan added: "We are waiting for directives on what to do with the horse."

Israeli government officials weren't sure. The Foreign Ministry referred calls to the military government in the occupied West Bank, which referred calls to the army, which said it was checking with Eilat police.

"They certainly can't let it swim home," said Yonna Avni, who runs the dude ranch Vered Hagalil in Israel's northern Galilee.

Although Israel and Jordan are technically in a state of war, there have been informal and third-party contacts between the countries for years.

Jordan, for example, has returned Israeli teen-agers who sneaked into the kingdom to visit the ancient city of Petra. And Israel has quietly handed back Jordanian civilians who strayed across the frontier.

Both nations are participating in the U.S.-backed Middle East peace talks.

● WASHINGTON (AP) — If you thought the Gulf War was high-tech, consider these forecasts for warfare in the 21st century: Robots swarming the battlefield firing armor-piercing bullets, and human soldiers with "smart helmets" that allow them to "see" through clouds and over hills.

Biologically derived aerosols could be used to disable tank engines and advances in bioproduction could enable field units to make their own food, fuel and explosives using raw materials as simple as air, water, decomposing vegetation and sunlight.

"Warfare fought with computers and unmanned systems may become at once more common and more threatening," the 301-page study said. The authors cautioned that these advances may eventually make warfare more likely, if less deadly.

"The publics of advanced nations may find war more acceptable if the number of casualties can be kept low," they wrote.

ASU right where it wants to be at halfway point

Brock's team in 1st place in Six-Pac standings

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

Although the ASU baseball team has a reputation as a perennial winner, the Sun Devils finished the opening half of the Six-Pac season in a position few thought they would be in at the beginning of the year — first place.

ASU coach Jim Brock and his club began the season with a team he said was in transition — facing the departure of big hitters Mike Kelly and Jim Austin, the task of rebuilding the pitching staff and the lack of a bona fide superstar in the lineup.

But as the Sun Devils take a break from conference play with an exhibition against the Phoenix Firebirds at 7 tonight at Scottsdale Stadium, it is safe to say that they have — so far — done more than what was expected of them in the preseason.

"You can't evaluate a ballclub until after it has played its last game, but I think potential is there," Brock said. "There are

Sun Devil women go through their familiar pattern

ASU gets another 5-4 win, this time over SDSU

By BRIAN CHARLES
State Press

Some people count sheep in their sleep, but the members of the seventh-ranked ASU women's tennis team probably see the figures 5-4 in their sleep — because that is usually the final score of their matches.

Tuesday was no different, as the Sun Devils squeaked out another 5-4 victory at the hands of 15th-ranked San Diego State thanks to key singles play.

ASU was led by Krista Amend, who is currently ranked 36th in singles. The senior met 53rd-ranked Eva Olivarez in the top singles spot. Amend, who had been injured, returned to her old form, beating Olivarez in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3.

ASU also got a boost from freshman Kori Davidson, who is winding down the season on almost the best note possible. She has completely turned her game around since the beginning of the season and could be a cornerstone for ASU in the future.

The 47th-ranked Davidson faced Sue Hawke in the second slot, defeating her easily, 6-2, 6-2.

"I really think that the preparation from earlier in the season is showing up in my play," Davidson said.

ASU also got victories from freshman Joelle Schad and junior Dawn Martin.

Schad, who seems to have regained her prowess after an injury last fall, moved past

Susheel Gulati for a 6-3, 6-2 win.

Martin continues to contribute from the bottom of the singles roster, as she turned in a victory over Paige Hammond 6-3, 6-1. Martin has now won her last six singles matches and helped to solidify the lower half of the Sun Devil lineup.

ASU's only singles losses were by sophomore Merdith Geiger, who lost to Nicole Storto 6-3, 6-3, and senior Luann Klimchok, who was unable to move past Tanya Lauer, falling 6-2, 6-4.

With a 4-2 lead, it was again on the shoulders of the doubles tandems to guide ASU to victory.

And ASU clinched the triumph with another quick win by the tandem of Klimchok and Davidson, who have been terrorizing the courts since the two players teamed up. Klimchok and Davidson have won 11 of the 12 matches they have competed in this season.

"I think one of the main reasons why we are successful is that Luann and I go out to have fun and try not to over-focus on our upcoming match," Davidson added. "We are feeling really good going into the end of the season."

The tandem, which has won the majority of its matches in the third slot, beat Lauer and Hammond easily, 6-2, 6-2.

Bennett man of hour at basketball team awards

By DARREN URBAN
State Press

ASU freshman Mario Bennett, who became the Sun Devils' go-to guy in the second half of the season, took the top two postseason honors at the ASU basketball awards banquet Tuesday night.

Bennett took home both the Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year awards in the ceremony held at the Pointe Hilton Resort at South Mountain, after averaging 12.5 points and 6.8 rebounds per game in his first season in Tempe.

"We've got to put some weight on him and get him to be intense for 40 minutes," ASU coach Bill Frieder said. "But he's a crowd favorite, gave us a lot of good basketball this year and improved tremendously from beginning to end."

The 6-foot-9 forward, after a slow start, established his presence in the Pac-10 over the second half of the season. The Denton, Texas, native averaged 18.1 points and 7.7 rebounds during the last 15 games and set Sun Devil freshman records in both blocked shots and rebounding average. He earned Freshman All-America honors from both All-Star Sports (1st team) and Basketball Times (3rd team) and was named to the Pac-10's All-Freshman squad.

The Coaches' Award, given to the player who best displays the qualities of work ethic, hustle and leadership, went to junior center Lester Neal. The Sun Devils' unofficial captain led ASU in rebounding with 7.5 per game, despite needing surgery on his wrists and ankles.

"You're not going to see his name in the paper a lot," Sun Devil assistant coach George McQuarn said. "But he's the consummate team player, and I don't think any player can be more deserving of this award."

The Most Improved Player Award went to both sophomore guard Stevin Smith and sophomore forward Dwayne Fontana. Smith averaged 12.3 points a game and led the conference in steals. Smith also finished among the top 20 in the nation in free-throw percentage, knocking down 87.4 percent.

Fontana, after sitting for long stretches early in the year, finished with a flourish, averaging 11.4 points and 6.4 boards in the final six games. The San Francisco native averaged 7.2 points a game for the season in sharing a part of the Most Improved honor for the second straight year.

The Bill Frieder Buzzer-Beater Award went to sophomore forward Jamal Faulkner, who nailed a 3-pointer as time ran out to beat New Mexico 71-69 Dec. 7 in Albuquerque.

Senior awards were presented to Lynn Collins and Jim Nelson. Collins finished his ASU career No. 4 on the all-time assist list with 333. Nelson was a two-time winner on the evening, as the one-time walk-on and Spanish major collected the Academic Award as well.

56 games in the season, and they get more important as the season goes on. The question is how much we'll improve and how we'll handle those tough situations.

"With the year a little more than halfway over, (the answer) is still out there."

The Sun Devils (24-12, 9-6 Six-Pac) were ranked 19th in the preseason top 25 poll by Baseball America, but the same publication picked them to finish fourth in the league. That illustrates not only the Sun Devils ability to rise above expectations, but also the overall strength of the Six-Pac.

The conference has long been regarded as one of the toughest in the country — and this year is no exception, as each of the six league teams has been in the top 25 at one time or another. Common sense dictates that the feat usually means the pursuit for the Six-Pac title is going to be a frantic one.

"This conference race seems like the biggest dogfight since I've been here," USC coach Mike Gillespie said. "The Six-Pac championship and any (NCAA tournament) spots are going to be very much up for grabs."

Unlike last season, when USC ran away and hid with the league title, the league has a pennant chase. The six clubs are within three games of each other in the standings.

ASU is in first, with UofA a half game back with a conference record of 7-5. UCLA is in third place, 1½ games back at 7-7, while Southern Cal and Stanford are tied for fourth, two games back at 7-8.

California appeared as if it would be the dormant team early in the season, but the Golden Bears swept Stanford this past weekend to improve their league mark to 5-8, three games back of the Sun Devils.

"We've seen some good play, especially pitching, week in and week out," UofA coach Jerry Kindall said. "It seems as if all of the teams have it. To see what Cal did to Stanford is very surprising — no, it is not surprising because Cal plays hard. Every team in this league plays hard."

Which brings things back to ASU, which has overcome its lack of a superstar by striving for balance throughout the lineup. The Sun Devils have done so, as their .321 team batting average is second best in the conference.

Brock said he has been pleased with the leadership roles that seniors such as shortstop Kurt Ehmann (.354, 24 RBI), catchers Jim Henderson (.367, 22 RBI) and Dave Robson (.296, 19 RBI) and pitcher Jeff Matranga (7-2, 3.48 ERA) have taken.

Their efforts, along with those of veteran outfielders Todd Steverson (.305, 7 HR, 30 RBI) and Scott Samuels (.307, 10 HR, 35 RBI) and first baseman Doug Newstrom (.308, 5 HR, 27 RBI) have made things easier on the younger players, according to Brock.

"I'm pleased with the makeup and approach of this ballclub," Brock said. "It has been a fine group to deal with. The older players have done their jobs and acted like they should, and the younger ones have caught on to it. I think that makes it a very close-knit team."

The most notable first-year performances have been from third baseman Antone Williamson (.338, 28 RBI), first baseman Todd Cady (.252, 21 RBI) and right fielder Jacob Cruz (.341, 9 RBI), who have all been in the starting lineup.

Which is just fine with Brock.

"If Michigan can (nearly) win the national (basketball) title with their five fabulous freshmen, then I will be content with keeping three freshmen in our lineup," Brock said.

A problem for the Sun Devils last season was that they never found a solid starting pitching rotation. But Matranga, Newstrom (6-2, 3.58 ERA) and Sean Lowe (6-2, 3.98 ERA) have been successful so far this year, although Brock said he might start using Newstrom in relief.

match, the attention in the stands then focused on the No. 1 court, as the 29th-ranked duo of Geiger and junior Pam Cioffi were facing the fourth-ranked SDSU tandem of Hawke and Storto.

ASU started sluggishly, losing the first set 7-5, but that seemed to be the wake-up call. When Geiger and Cioffi used the entire court to wear Hawke and Storto down, the SDSU tandem started to struggle with its serves. ASU took the second set 7-5.

Three-set matches seem to be becoming routine for Geiger and Cioffi, and this one was just as grueling as the rest have been. It started with ASU jumping to a quick 2-0 lead in the third, but the Aztec combination stormed back.

SDSU then turned up the heat, and ASU was unable to find the off switch, losing 6-4 in the third.

The final doubles tandems also saw some extra innings, as Amend and Schad faced Olivarez and Gulati in a match that went almost 2½ hours.

ASU looked very good in the first set, sparked by an emotional Amend, and took it 7-5. Then SDSU found a way to keep Schad on the baseline and work the ball past Amend, and took the second 7-5. The last set looked as if both teams were very tired, and saw SDSU squeeze it out 6-4.

ASU's final home match is at 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Whiteman, where the Sun Devils will hook up with unranked Loyola Marymount. It will also mark the final home appearance for seniors Amend and Klimchok.

Blue Devils get hero's welcome

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Two-time NCAA champion Duke, welcomed home Tuesday by thousands of screaming fans, wasted no time in hinting at the possibility of a third championship.

"I'm probably stupid for saying this, but I wonder where a third one might go," Coach Mike Krzyzewski said, referring to the championship banners.

Thousands of fans shouting "We're No. 1" greeted Krzyzewski and the team as they returned to the Duke campus Tuesday.

Krzyzewski told the crowd he would prefer a new version of the chant: "We're No. 1 twice."

Duke defeated Michigan 71-51 Monday night to become the first team in 19 years to win back-to-back NCAA championships.

Guard Bobby Hurley also suggested a third championship isn't unthinkable.

"The best thing about winning back-to-back for me is that I'll be back one more time," he said.

The players carried their trophy and the net they cut down after the game to Tuesday's celebration in Cameron Indoor Stadium.

The celebration in Cameron followed a party after the game Monday night that Duke public safety officials said was worse than the one last year because the party continued for six hours.

Duke Public Safety Corp. David Nicholson said at least four people were arrested and dozens were injured.

Four of the injured had second- and third-degree burns from horseplay at bonfires, he said. One person suffered alcohol poisoning and five had head cuts from beer bottles that were thrown.

Also, Durham police said they arrested at least 20 people on charges ranging from assault to drunken driving to arson for several unauthorized bonfires.

Chancellor Keith Brodie greeted the team and described its accomplishments before Krzyzewski took the podium for a 25-minute speech.

The coach said he was concerned that his team, ranked No. 1 all season and with a 34-2 record, might become a little impassive.

"For these guys to focus so well and win against Indiana and then still beat Michigan is one of the most incredible things we've done," he said.

Senior co-captain Brian Davis, who played Monday with a high ankle sprain, told the fans: "This has been the best team to be around."

He advised Duke students to cherish the moment.

"This isn't normal. I would hope that next year . . . I hope you would give the same kind of support because you never know what can happen," he said.

When someone in the crowd yelled a derogatory statement about arch-rival North Carolina, Krzyzewski admonished him, saying he would be happy if Duke were the only team mentioned during the celebration.

The sea of students dressed in blue and white waved banners, chanted and cheered, and a band played "We Are the Champions" as they awaited the team's arrival.

At one point, the crowd chanted: "Dean's got one and Mike's got two," a reference to coach Dean Smith of North Carolina, which won the NCAA championship in 1982.

Graduate student Greg Miracle said he watched the game, celebrated at a bonfire afterward and watched the game twice more on video before going to bed at 6 a.m.

"The only reason that I went to bed is that I had to get some sleep so that I could come back here again," he said.

Burroughs Wellcome attorney Barry Pea, 34, skipped work and picked his children up early at school to attend the Cameron celebration.

"I told the people at work that if Duke wins I'm not going in today," he said.

Christopher Stagler, a senior from Miami, said he didn't like basketball before he came to Duke. "Now I'm a die-hard fan. It's inevitable that Duke turns you into a Cameron crazy."
