ASU basketball player Dwayne Fontana was charged with sexually assaulting a female acquaintance. Fontana, a junior, is still serving probation from the credit card scandal that stung Coach Bill Frieder's team last year.

Dwayne Fontana, an ASU junior on the men's basketball team, was arrested and charged with sexual assault after he allegedly raped a woman at his Tempe apartment early Wednesday morning.

Sgt. Al Taylor, spokesman for the Tempe police, said Fontana was arrested at his apartment at 2030 E. Broadway Road at approximately 4 a.m. Wednesday after police received a call from the alleged victim, who said Fontana had sexually assaulted her earlier that morning.

The two were in the bedroom at Fontana's apartment Wednesday morning when he allegedly went to the bathroom and returned wearing nothing but a condom. It was then that he allegedly raped the victim.

"He was booked into our jail on charges of sexual assault," Taylor said. "He was later released pending a complaint."

Fontana and the victim have apparently known each other for more than a year, but no sexual relations were involved,

Taylor said.

Taylor said the police department will send a report to the attorney general's office. It will then review the case and determine if it meets the criteria for charges to be filed.

Fontana, 19, a starting forward on the 1991-92 Sun Devil basketball team, was suspended from the squad pending litigation.

"What the Athletic Department has done is suspended him immediately and indefinitely from the team," said Scott Dupree, assistant Sports Information director for Sun Devil athletics.

Dupree said that Fontana will remain suspended until the legal process is finished, at which time a reevaluation will take place regarding his status with the Athletic Department.

ASU basketball coach Bill Frieder could not be reached for comment. However, Dupree said the decision to suspend Fontana came "jointly from ASU Director of Athletics Charles S. Harris and Coach Frieder."

Taylor said he doesn't know whether the alleged victim is an ASU student but said she is older than Fontana. He said she was born in 1969.

Fontana's arrest continues a trend that dates back to early last summer. Since then, 10 Sun Devil student athletes have

Mecham launches bid to capture Senate seat

Ex-governor plugs problem-solving agenda at rally

BY VICKI CULVER
STATE PRESS

Claiming to have some answers to the problems of the national debt, prisoners of war "abandoned" by their country and the lack of jobs in America, impeached Gov. Evan Mecham announced Wednesday in a rally at Mesa Centennial Hall that he is entering the race for Republican John McCain's U.S. Senate seat.

"I am more concerned for the people of this nation than I ever have been before," Mecham told the crowd of approximately 350 supporters, members of the media and curious citizens.

"I made this decision because it's the only chance we have to solve the government's problems and forge a new agenda."

Mecham was soliciting money and signatures, two necessities to his getting on the ballot as an independent, following the rally. He will have to collect more than 10,500 signatures from registered voters in the 10 days following the Sept. 8 primary.

Mecham said although he was "reluctant" to accept the Draft Mecham Committee's offer to back him as a candidate for the Senate, he could not pass up an opportunity to "return the power to the people."

However, Mecham's campaign slogan,

"Mecham for the People," did not sit well late Wednesday with members of the black community who say Mecham is an "embarrassment" to the people of the state.

"As a black woman, I definitely do not see that he is for all the people," said Erica Wade, a junior ASU student who is a member of the ASU chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the African American Coalition.

"He has shown us before that he has nothing to offer black people. I do think it would be an embarrassment for us to put him back in an office."

Mecham told the rally audience that McCain has "done us a lot of damage," and that Arizonans can't afford to keep him in office anymore. He said numerous times that McCain is a senator because he loves Washington, D.C., while Mecham said he is running because he loves Arizona.

He also condemned McCain's policies in dealing with American prisoners of war. Although McCain is a former POW, Mecham said he looks the other way when told of American soldiers left behind after the end of a war.

Textile department faces elimination by fall of 1993

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

Despite efforts to avoid slashing academic programs, ASU administrators have targeted the entire department of textiles and clothing for elimination, indicating that academics are not immune to the University-wide budget cuts.

Approximately 150 textile and clothing majors will be forced to finish their academic work in three semesters if the proposed cut is approved by ASU's Academic Senate. Additionally, the move would result in two of the program's instructor positions being eliminated after the 1993 fall semester.

Additional cuts could be made in the broadcasting and engineering departments in what ASU President Lattie Coor calls reductions in small programs.

"We have chosen a path that has not led to major reductions of large programs," Coor said. "Whether there will be additional cuts in subsequent years is part of what the University Planning and Budget Committee will face."

Before any cuts are made they must be approved by the Academic Senate.

"Although it has not gone through the (Academic) Senate, the probability is high that (the textile program) will be cut," said Kathleen Church, assistant vice president of Academic Programs.

In April, the textiles and clothing department was asked to plan a phase-out period for the program, according to Julie Zylla, an instructor in the department who will be let go next year if the cuts go through.

"It's a good question what I will be doing without a job," Zylla said. "There are openings in textiles and clothing across the country, but I'm not really in a position where I would like to move."

The demand for teaching in textiles and clothing is not strong at the community college level, Zylla said. She also is considering retraining in the profession or taking a different approach toward textiles and clothing in the private sector.

The phase-out program will allow students currently enrolled to complete their textiles and clothing course work. The program is currently not accepting new students.

"If the students still have academic work to complete, we

2 ASU students stranded 2 hours in raging waters

By CAROL ANN HANSEN
STATE PRESS

While the Maricopa County Sheriff's Department continued its search for a 19-year-old Guns N' Roses fan who was swept away in the Gila River, two ASU students considered themselves lucky after surviving a dangerous attempt to swim the swollen river.

Jonas A. Jolly of Glendale disappeared at 3 a.m. when he tried to bypass a five-hour traffic jam leaving the Guns N' Roses concert at Phoenix International Raceway.

Jay Ellison, public information officer for the Maricopa County Sheriff's Department, said posses aided by helicopters from three Valley television stations will continue the search Thursday morning.

Before the concert, Candice Swanson, an ASU communications junior, said she and her best friend, ASU student Diane Lane, also attempted to avoid traffic by unsuccessfully forging the same river.

Swanson said she and Lane clung desperately to a tree in the middle of the river before Maricopa County Sheriff's Department deputies came to their aid.

"We were crying. It was terrible," she said. "We were screaming for help, but no one could hear us because Metallica was playing."

Swanson and Lane were stuck in the crook of a tree for more than two hours before sheriff helicopters pulled them out of the surging river.

After the rescue, the two women managed to make it to the Guns N' Roses performance, but because of traffic did not get home until 9 a.m. Wednesday.

"It was the most unorganized social event I have ever seen," she said. "You couldn't get to the concert and you couldn't get home from the concert."

Swanson said she would not be surprised if concerts were no longer held at PIR.

According to Ellison, water released into the Gila River forced the closure of two of the four roads leading to the raceway, causing a traffic jam that at times stretched six miles.

Dave Hoffman, an ASU junior management major who attended last night's concert, said it took him more than four hours to get into the venue.

"It was ridiculous," he said. "We got there at 6:45 and got in at 11:15."

Hoffman said he and his friends left in the middle of the Guns N' Roses performance in order to beat the huge crowd and were out in just an hour.

Dan Eli, a junior business student who described the traffic around the raceway as "horrendous," said before the show he was stuck in traffic for two hours before he gave up and walked the remaining one-hour trek to the venue.

Eli said that he missed Metallica's opening performance and that he would "definitely not" attend another concert at PIR.

"The concert itself was good, but it wasn't worth the wait in traffic and the $30 ticket," Eli said.

Concert promoter Danny Zelisko, president of Evening Star Productions, said concertgoers got "more than their money's worth" at Tuesday's concert.

"The bottom line is that the show started at 5:30 and the doors opened at 3," he said. "The show went off without a hitch."

According to Zelisko, more than half the audience was inside the raceway when Metallica took the stage.

"I am really sorry that people got caught up in traffic trouble," he said. "But there is not much you can do when the big guy decides to dump five or six inches of water and the rocket scientist up at the Salt River Project decides to let all of it into the river."

Zelisko said the flood crippled access to the raceway even though 126 traffic control officers were hired to direct cars.

"I find it deplorable that these people (the traffic control officers) couldn't get the people in there faster," he said.

"But the bottom line is that it was all caused by a flood."

According to Zelisko, his company was not consulted by SRP officials, and he found out about the flooded river late Monday night, after he had invested more than $100,000 in the event.

"It severely hampered our business," he said. "Salt River Project certainly didn't keep us in mind."

Teri Morris, a spokeswoman for SRP, said the unseasonable amount of rain dumped by Hurricane Lester forced the utility company to release 18,000 cubic feet of water per second into the normally dry riverbed.

"If we hadn't released the water, the dams would have overtopped and caused structural damage and possible flooding," she said. "There was no way we could have prevented it."

Andrew now a storm, but still pelting coast

BY ROBERT DVORCHAK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW IBERIA, La. — Hurricane Andrew carved its way through plantation country Wednesday with its now-familiar cruelty, throwing tornadoes like darts at a 100-mile-wide target and pumping torrents of rain at storm-weary Louisianians.

"The destruction from this storm goes beyond anything we have known in recent years," said President Bush, who flew into the heart of the area to inspect the damage, as he did in Florida. The president met with evacuees at a sports arena in Lafayette.

Andrew was downgraded to a tropical storm early Wednesday afternoon after its winds dropped below the hurricane threshold of 74 mph. It continued to drench Louisiana with heavy rain, but it appeared that its worst was done. By evening the storm was centered near Natchez, Miss.

The hurricane's 54-hour U.S. rampage, the most expensive natural disaster ever in the country, left an estimated 180,000 homeless in Florida — a refugee population greater than the city of Orlando. About 600,000 homes and businesses remained without electricity late Wednesday.

Drinkable water, unspoiled food and medical relief remained critical priorities in ravaged neighborhoods south of Miami. Search teams continued to explore wreckage for bodies.

One death was reported in Louisiana, a 63-year-old tornado victim from LaPlace found in rubble Wednesday. Another death was reported in the Bahamas, where three other people died when the storm hit Sunday. That raised the overall toll to 20 dead.

Preliminary estimates in Florida's Dade County alone put the damage at $15 billion to $20 billion, although it will likely take time for those figures to be verified.

There were no comparable figures available for Louisiana. But as widespread as the damage appeared there, authorities noted that it could have been worse. The storm had spun itself out a bit and weakened before crossing the coastline. And it spared the state's largest city, New Orleans.

All around the low-lying south-central part of the state, houses were ravaged, trailer homes were turned upside down, majestic oak trees in front of antebellum mansions were toppled and several gas leaks were reported.

Dozens were injured and at least 322,000 lost electric power. Seven people from a sinking tugboat were plucked from a cauldron of Mississippi River waters; another seven were rescued from a 70-foot Vietnamese fishing boat that ran aground in the Gulf of Mexico.

A dozen barges broke loose from an Exxon refinery and were corralled by the Coast Guard, but a search continued for a mobile offshore drilling rig, the Zapata Saratoga, that disappeared 110 miles south of New Orleans. The rig had been evacuated and its well plugged to prevent pollution.

The Coast Guard also was investigating an oil slick at the mouth of the Mississippi River and five other minor spills and leaks.

The hurricane came ashore in St. Mary Parish early Wednesday, heading north up the Atchafalaya Basin and pounding cities and towns on all sides:

Hurricane Andrew at a glance

Hurricane Andrew moved through southern Louisiana Wednesday morning, giving the bayou country the sort of hammering that south Florida received Monday.

Louisiana: Andrew largely spared New Orleans, at the southeast edge of the state, but was moving northward and westward Wednesday through Cajun country in the south-central part of the state. At least one tornado, a common side effect of hurricanes, struck 20 miles west of New Orleans.

One death and at least 30 injuries due to the tornado were reported.

Florida: Andrew pounded its way across the southern tip of Florida on Monday morning. Worst damage was just south of Miami.

Bahamas: Four deaths were confirmed after the hurricane hit Sunday. The worst damage was on the island of Eleutheral; Nassau, the capital, was relatively unscathed.

- Morgan City, where the mayor requested National Guard troops and urged residents to stay away for several days;
- Berwick, where water rose knee-deep;
- Franklin, where a wind gauge registered 140 mph, then blew away;
- Jeanerette, where state police reported looting;
- Lafayette, where a suburban building was pushed onto railroad tracks;

— Baton Rouge, where a huge rooftop air conditioner was thrown 30 feet off the state insurance building.

Czechoslovakian federation to dissolve

BY ONDREJ HEJMA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRNO, Czechoslovakia — The leaders of the Czech and Slovak republics agreed late Wednesday to dissolve the Czechoslovak federation on Jan. 1.

The announcement was made after eight hours of talks between Czech Premier Vaclav Klaus and his Slovak counterpart Vladimir Meciar.

"On January 1, there will be two republics, two states," said Meciar.

"I am sure we shall be able to form better relations with Slovakia than we have now," said Klaus.

The two leaders, who agreed in principle to break up the 74-year-old federation in June, said they had agreed on the timetable but that much further consultation was needed to complete the country's peaceful dissolution.

The split must be approved by three-fifths of the 300-member federal parliament in Prague. Opposition is likely from the strong left-wing faction, but Klaus has said he is sure the agreement will pass.

Czechoslovakia was founded in the ashes of the Austro-Hungarian empire after World War I. Irreconcilable disputes have developed over the pace and scope of economic reforms since the ouster of the Communists in 1989.

Five million of Czechoslovakia's 15 million people live in Slovakia, the country's smaller eastern third. Unemployment has soared in Slovakia, while most residents of the wealthier Czech republic are anxious to complete the switch to a market economy.

The talks in Brno, capital of the Moravia region of the Czech republic, 110 miles east of Prague, were the sixth in the series held by the leaders.

Klaus and Meciar said that during September they will submit to parliament two constitutional laws, one dissolving the federation and the other dividing its powers and goods.

Under the timetable set Wednesday, the two sides will work out a package of treaties in October, leaving November and December to iron out any remaining problems.

World leaders condemn Serbia during peace talks

BY DUSAN STOJANOVIC
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — World leaders condemned Serbia on Wednesday for the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina and warned at an international peace conference that the aggressors face economic isolation and prosecution for war crimes.

Despite the harsh words that dominated the opening day of the conference, a senior U.S. State Department official said he saw progress.

One positive sign, he said, was the stated willingness of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic to allow U.N. observers along the border between Serbia and Bosnia. Serbs are reported to have run arms across the frontier.

As his forces unleashed heavy attacks against Sarajevo and other parts of Bosnia, the leader of Bosnian Serbs defiantly declared that the former Yugoslav republic "doesn't exist anymore." But Radovan Karadzic, who briefly walked out of the talks, offered to give up some Serb-held territory to win a peace settlement.

Acting Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger warned of a "spectacularly bleak future" for Serbs if they did not end their sieges of Sarajevo and other cities held by Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

Dobrica Cosic, the federal Yugoslav president, promised to press the Bosnian Serbs to give up some of the land they hold, but charged that the international media has "satanized" the Serbs in order to make them the "scapegoats of the projected new world order."

Opening the largest international conference so far on the Balkan crisis, British Prime Minister John Major called for guarantees for the delivery of humanitarian aid to Bosnia, a halt to human rights abuses and respect for existing borders.

"In this room are the people who can stop this war, end the bloodshed, reach a lasting settlement. I don't believe that world opinion will readily forgive anyone who impedes that work over the next couple of days and beyond," Major said.

Frustration with the Serbs for a war that has claimed more than 8,000 lives and created 1.2 million refugees dominated the first session of the conference, which drew officials from the United Nations, two dozen countries, the six former Yugoslav republics and humanitarian and defense organizations.

Add Fontana to the list

It's getting old.
ASU athletes seem to be spending more time getting fingerprinted than running laps.
Aggravated assault, burglary, fraudulent use of a credit card, sexual abuse and alleged sexual assault — all committed by 10 athletes collectively over the past year.
Stadium hawkers should start peddling their programs in front of police stations — "Get your programs! You can't tell your felons without a program!"
ASU's athletes seem to live at a different level of reality. Free tuition. Free books. Free room and board. Free meals. Free money.
In return, athletes are asked to perform well academically while maintaining a grueling training, conditioning and competing schedule.
On top of that, they are also expected to carry themselves with some manner of decorum.
Director of ASU Athletics Charles Harris said, "We have to do a better job of helping all our athletes understand that they are held to a higher standard."
No kidding.
Tempe police said Dwayne Fontana early Wednesday morning asked a woman he had known for about a year to come up to his apartment to talk, then "while they were talking he got up, went to the bathroom and returned wearing nothing but a condom."

The 19-year-old basketball player was released after being booked on the felony charge.

This is Fontana's second felony charge. Last summer he missed six games on suspension after being charged with fraud for putting $13,474 worth of unauthorized calls on an Athletic Department credit card.

Fontana got out of a felony conviction by pleading guilty, paying a fine and being placed on two-year probation.

If found guilty this time, he won't be treated with kid gloves.

Raythan Smith goes on trial a week from Monday on his aggravated assault charge.

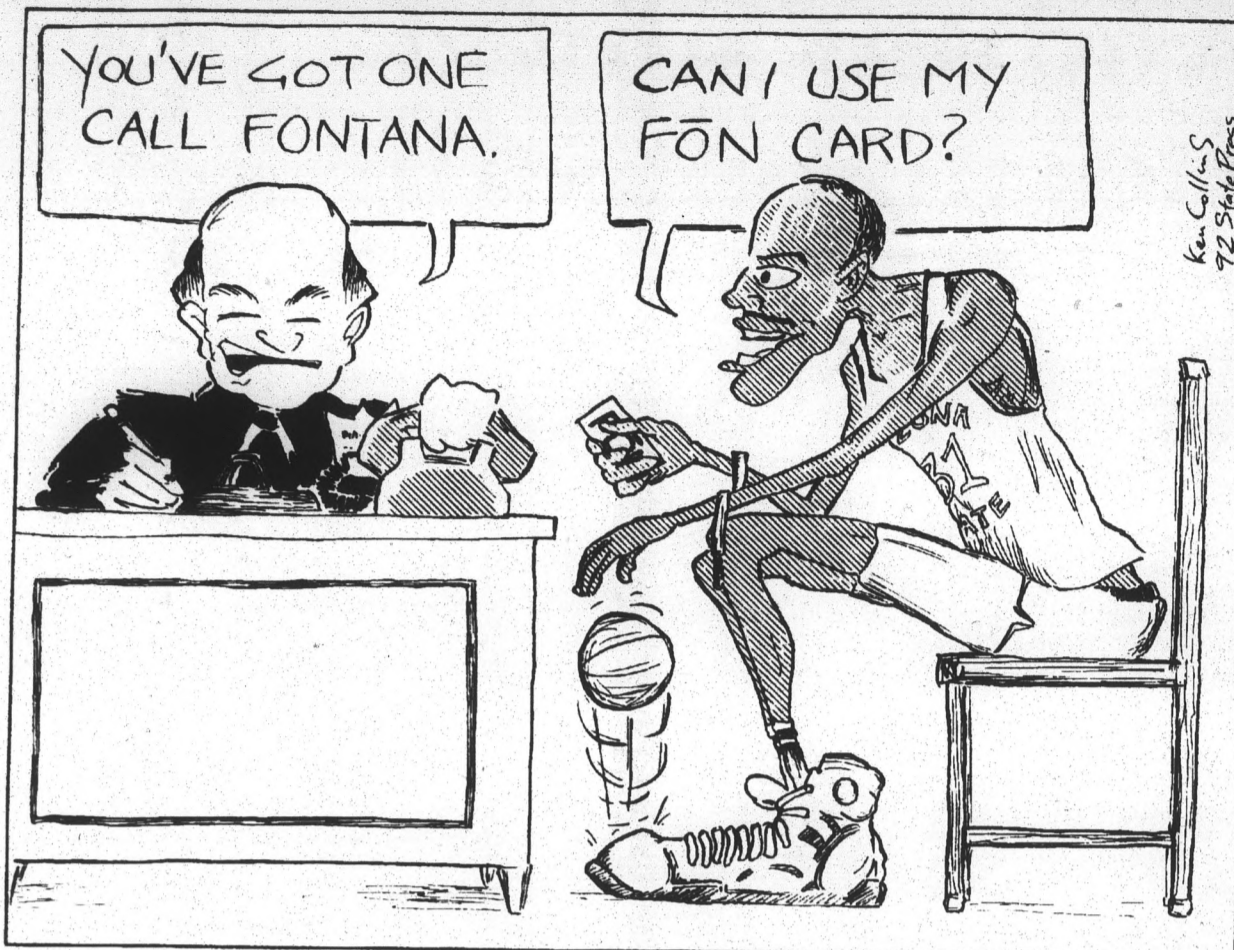

Besides Smith and Fontana, each ASU athlete arrested and charged with a crime has been let back on his team. Needless to say, none of them have served any time for their actions.

Judges are obviously looking at the crimes for what they are: stupid, young kids doing stupid, young things.

A shopping spree at Superstition Springs, stealing roses from a flower shop on Valentine's Day and chatty long-distance calls do not qualify for "America's Most Wanted."

But shootings and rapes do.
The criminal justice system will prove, with Smith and Fontana, that all are treated equally under the law.

With his power to remove the individuals from the Athletic Department, it's up to Harris to prove that he really wants his athletes to have respect for the law.

The 'Greening' of America begins

Democracy in America?

In 1980, 27 percent of the voting-age population elected Ronald Reagan. In 1988, the same percentage of voters elected George Bush to office. Usually, no more than half the eligible voters bother to cast a vote in elections.

This trend reflects the exclusion people feel from the political system. It is not apathy but frustration and anger that lead people to withhold their votes and their consent during elections. The monopoly politics of the Republican and Democratic parties limit the democratic process and hinder discussion about issues. The Ross Perot phenomenon showed the dissatisfaction with Clinton and Bush and the desire to move beyond bipartisan politics.

This summer — before the Republican convention and after the Democratic convention — there was the Green alternative. People dissatisfied with both parties met in Minneapolis to talk the politics of change. Greens Gathering '92, a four-day conference held at Augsburg College in Minneapolis, was organized by the Greens/Green Party USA. The gathering involved a two-day workshop and a two-day convention of delegates; more than 250 people from 33 states and Puerto Rico participated in activities. The gathering provided the opportunity for social and political activists to meet, to share and to learn.

The Greens/Green Party USA offers a political home to those working for social justice, democracy, peace and ecology. The G/GPUSA has adopted 10 key values: ecological wisdom, grassroots democracy, social justice, non-violence, decentralization, community-based economics, feminism, respect for diversity, personal and global responsibility and future focus/sustainability. Greens link social, political and environmental issues.

Greens articulate the interconnection between social injustice and environmental degradation. The disappearance of the rain forests has meant the extinction of tribes that inhabit the land being cleared. Nuclear waste dumps, uranium mining, and nuclear testing are most likely to be on Indian land — land that is cheap and convenient for the government to exploit. Toxic waste sites are usually placed in poorer communities with fewer resources to fight the placement. Corporate and government interests make decisions with little or no accountability to the people who will suffer from their decisions. The centralized control of wealth and resources encourages the exploitation of people and planet.

Greens call for new ways of structuring society based on the ethics of equality and justice. Greens assign human interaction and environmental well-being a higher value than the short-term profit of a few.

The Greens/Green Party USA provides a formal, national, organizational structure while upholding the principles of democracy and decentralization. The highest decision-making body of the G/GPUSA is the Green Congress. It is composed of delegates from Green locals around the country. At least 75 percent agreement is necessary for decisions to be approved. Two Green councils meet twice during the year to oversee the implementation of policy decisions made at the Congress. Affiliated Green locals exist in nearly every state, excluding Wyoming, Oklahoma and the Dakotas. Five states have Green parties with ballot status: Arizona, California, Hawaii, Alaska and New Mexico. Utah and Wisconsin are currently pursuing ballot status.

The Greens/GPUSA provides the opportunity to educate people about issues, to supply the tools of social transformation and to offer an alternative to bipartisan politics. The Greens challenge the traditional political process by defining alternative ways to live, to interact and to govern.

ASASU: Show up or ship out

The Associated Students of ASU Senate got off to a surprisingly pathetic start Tuesday night after six of the organization's 19 senators failed to attend its inaugural session.

After declining revenue forced University officials to slash $140,800 from ASASU's budget, it appears that some of ASU's elected student representatives have decided it is not worth their while to oversee how the remainder — $664,200 of students' tuition money — is spent. Considering that nearly $10,000 was allocated in one night, the lack of interest should infuriate some students.

Sens. Michelle Jenkins and Christine Naderer, both from the College of Social Work, failed to attend, leaving their constituents completely unrepresented. Likewise, the Nursing College's only senator, Jeannette Fernando, was a no-show. Other absent senators include Ali Wiener, College of Education; John Stevens, who slipped out sometime after the initial roll-call; and Chris Conlin, who said that he had gotten out of a previous commitment only to be foiled by "last minute" car trouble the night of the meeting. From the chuckles of others recounting the circumstances, it appears that not even Conlin's colleagues on the third floor MU believe the story. But at least Conlin was available for comment. None of the other senators could be reached Tuesday afternoon. Conlin, after recounting his car woes, said he has vowed to "definitely" attend the rest of this year's Senate meetings.

It is not unreasonable to expect student representatives to actually show up to their Senate sessions, where virtually all of ASASU's decisions take place. When students are giving up more than a half million dollars in what is for some an already tight financial situation, ASASU leaders should provide the courtesy of at least appearing to care. If that isn't enough, the senators should keep in mind that they are automatically kicked out of office after three unexcused absences, a lesson last year's College of Engineering and Applied Sciences Sen. Stanford Stokes — who nearly faced the same fate — learned all too well. Seven senators are already a third of the way to learning it themselves.

Students in underrepresented colleges, particularly the College of Nursing and the College of Social Work, should demand a refund for the money ASASU was allowed to spend without their consent Tuesday and pressure their college council to impeach the senators who didn't attend.

Last year's Senate may have been filled with controversy, inflated egos and elitism, but it was a body that performed its constitutional obligation to attend its own sessions. Fortunately, it is not too late for student government to pull its act together and finish the job the senators promised last spring.

Conlin has vowed to attend. The remaining five senators would be wise to follow.

Letters to the editor

It's starting again

Editor:

School starts and once again we start up where we left off. At the end of the spring semester, articles were flying back and forth in the State Press regarding race relations and how they are perceived within the respective black as well as white camps.

Ashahad Triche wrote an article on how HE saw the Los Angeles riots. Then, low and behold, out of the woodwork comes Mr. Max Linderman, a history major who should revise his major because, obviously, he does not know, let alone understand, Africans in Amerikkka and their collective history.

When a people has exhausted all other means of peaceful protest to achieve their ends and the legal system fails to establish and deliver equal punishment to all, then you have a loss of hope as well as trust, thus leading to events like the Los Angeles riots.

Perhaps, Mr. Linderman, you have read these lines before: "That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends (life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness) it is the Right of the People to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new Government, laying its foundation on such principles in organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness."

Anytime you want to broaden your historical perspective, Mr. Linderman, come find me and we can talk.

Headline hoseheads

Editor:

We would like to point out a major oversight in the Aug. 25 issue of the State Press. The headline proclaimed that a recent British study had suggested that gymnasts were developing lifelong injuries. However, upon reading the article, we discovered that the research was conducted at a university in Vancouver, British Columbia. Since British Columbia is a province in Canada, we felt the need to make you aware of the fact that Canada has been a separate country for 125 years. In fact, in 1867 the British North America Act was signed declaring Canada independent from Great Britain. Therefore, it would only be logical that a research project conducted in Canada would be called a Canadian study, eh?! Thank you for correcting this oversight and acknowledging this research as a product of Canada.

Skewed priorities close computer site

Editor:

I was on my way to the Hayden Library computer site to write a comment concerning Republican code word usage, the language which the current administration is using to delineate the "haves" from the "have-nots." Unfortunately, that site has been closed. Possibly the most popular facility on the entire campus closed so that a group which goes by the name, "Consortium for Instructional Innovation" could have the space.

I am not one to draw imaginary parallels, but ... clearly, Arizona State University considers research more valuable than students, and I am furious. Money talks at higher educational facilities and similarly in the mind of our leading politician.

The "Education President" (Mr. Read My Lips) has not followed through on his commitment to education and the cutbacks have been passed along. Now the students who most need the services will not be able to have a valuable facility available for their use. Will ASU soon require students to purchase their own computers to attend classes here? Admittedly, smaller budgets require tough decision-making. I hope I am not alone in my call for a look at priorities! President Coor, I must ask, are students more important or is research more important?

'I wish I had a dollar'

Editor:

Like Ashahad Triche in his column of Aug. 26, I, too, have a few "I wish I had a dollar" comments.

I wish I had a dollar for every time I have heard a commentator's justification for gangs and the violence they support and commit. Most of us understand the sociological and political circumstances that have contributed to the unrest nationwide and particularly in California. However, it needs to be remembered that these gangs are far from political activists or even effective leaders in the movement for much needed social reform. They are dangerous, angry men with better weaponry than the police. It is society's responsibility to deal effectively with the gang problem and the social ills that have partially helped it grow — not to simply excuse it.

I wish I had a dollar for every time I have heard a self-appointed spokesman for the black community turn every issue that comes up into one of race relations. Not everything is traceable to a black-white issue.

Finally, I wish I had a dollar for every time I have heard a young black man refer to a young Caucasian man as a "white boy." I suspect that if the reverse were true, it would be offensive to all sensitive ears and would not be tolerated.

So, I pose the question to you, Mr. Triche: Why the double standard?

All concerts not created equal

Editor:

I thank you for questioning the Phoenix City Council's decision to cancel the rap concert and not the GN'R concert. However, you forgot to explore other aspects. First, the GN'R concert was moved from Sun Devil Stadium to Phoenix International Raceway for better crowd and noise control. Phoenix Municipal Stadium is in the middle of a residential area and not a 30-minute drive from the middle capital. So, there is a difference. Maybe the City Council should have moved, not cancelled, the concert instead. Mr. Triche, next time you think the Phoenix City Council makes a hypocritical decision, you should consider all aspects and not just a few of them. Thank you.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

•An ASU employee reported that an answering machine and a tool box containing hand tools were stolen from Physical Education East. Estimated loss is $500.

•A men's red bicycle was stolen from the ASU grounds office where it was secured with a U-lock. Estimated loss is $25.

•A man unaffiliated with the University was reported standing in the lobby of the Aquatic Center asking to be let in to swim. Police advised him of trespassing and ordered him to leave the area.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

•A man was arrested for sexually assaulting a woman in the parking lot of Studebakers at 725 S. Rural Road. The victim said the assault occurred in the front seat of the suspect's truck after she agreed to follow him to his truck. The woman managed to run inside and call the police, who arrived on the scene before the suspect could gather his companions and leave the bar.

•An ASU student was arrested for trespassing when he was found crouched beneath a woman's bedroom window peering in through a crooked slat in the blinds at 1201 S. McClintock Drive.

•A Phoenix man was arrested for shoplifting a 12-pack of beer at the Circle K at 2115 S. McClintock Drive earlier this summer. When the clerk advised him that he was being videotaped, the suspect replied, "I guess the cops will have to find me." They did.

•The Exxon service station at 3303 S. Rural Road was robbed of approximately $1,400 by thieves who gained access by stacking old tires and climbing through an evaporative cooler duct on the roof. Once inside, the intruders had to pry off a metal panel leading to the business office.

•A juvenile was arrested at the Tower Records at 821 S. Mill Ave. when security guards observed him attempting to conceal two cassette tapes in his pants. While security guards detained the suspect, the boy's companion, who was not carrying a weapon, threatened to shoot the security guard.

•In two separate incidents, two men reported that their clothing had been stolen from a laundry room located in the Quadrangles apartment complex located at 1255 E. University Drive.

A Mesa man was fatally wounded Wednesday night by police when he brandished a gun at his house on the 500 block of West Emerald. The shooting followed six hours of negotiations between the distraught man and police, who were attempting to serve him a search warrant.

He was suspected of molesting his two young daughters.

Officers entered the house about 10 p.m. using tear gas, at which time the man raised his gun and fired three to four shots toward the officers. The officers returned the suspect's fire, instantly killing him.

Anniversary of women's vote celebrated

By KATE DEELY
STATE PRESS

Seventy-two years ago yesterday, the 19th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution was ratified, giving every female American citizen over 18 the right to vote.

In celebration of the anniversary, Aug. 26 was declared Women's Equality Day across the nation, and ASU had its own remembrance ceremony.

State politicians, University professors and students, both male and female, gathered on the Student Services Building lawn Wednesday afternoon to commemorate women's rights.

Despite the program's emphasis on active political involvement, only a small crowd showed up to listen.

"Voting is the one act that has spearheaded the way for many other rights," said Kate Lehman, an ASU political science instructor and Democratic candidate for the state House of Representatives in District 16.

Lehman said it is very important for people, especially women, to realize that these rights should not be taken for granted. She added that it is a contradiction that so many people don't vote but at the same time hold strong opinions on issues and want change.

State Sen. Karan English, D-Flagstaff, presented a speech that was delivered all over the nation yesterday at other campuses and organizations. The speech, titled "We Can Do It!" highlighted the history of women's suffrage and the women who played a part in women's rights issues.

English is one of the few Arizona women candidates running for the U.S. Congress. She is competing in the newly created District 6, which includes parts of northeast and central east Arizona.

"We were given the tools by some very prominent women in the last 150 years and we should use these tools," English said.

One of the women English was referring to is Arizona Rep. Polly Rosenbaum, who was a special guest at yesterday's celebration.

"I have voted in every election except one when I was out of the state, and I felt like I created a mortal sin," Rosenbaum said.

Rosenbaum has been in the Arizona Legislature since 1949, and according to Rita Mae Kelly, chairwoman of the justice studies department, "was a feminist before we ever had the word."

Betsy George, a junior biomedical engineering major who attended the rally, said she "thought it was an important celebration of the day."

She said it is inspiring to see women such as Rosenbaum get involved and become accomplished within the political arena.

But Camille Cordero, a senior political science major, said she was disappointed by the small turnout at the event because many people are not aware of women's history.

Upon closing the ceremony, Lehman advised everyone to "attempt to match your voting record to that of Polly Rosenbaum's."

Wellness program debuts on Manzanita's 12th floor

By Chris Driscoll
State Press

When Chuck Hyde played varsity football at La Cueva High School back in Albuquerque, he always kept himself in good shape.

When he came to Arizona to attend ASU as a criminal justice freshman, he wanted to remain fit, so he said he was ready and willing to join a "wellness program" that debuted this semester on the 12th floor of Manzanita residence hall.

"It's going to help me a lot," said Hyde, as he showed off the new exercise equipment Manzanita's 12th floor got as part of the agreement to be the first group on campus in the new program. "I thought it would get me going with the right foot forward."

Tammy Summers, assistant director of the Student Recreation Center in charge of programming and marketing, said the Manzanita wellness program was initiated by Residence Life with the participation of the SRC's Wellness Center and the Student Health Center.

The students sign an agreement not to have drugs, alcohol or tobacco on the floor, Summers said.

The program aims at achieving all-around health, Hyde said.

"It's a culmination of eating better, exercise, taking care of the body and mind," he added. "It's taking care of your whole self."

One of the resident assistants on the 12th floor of Manzanita, Tracy Dudman, a geography senior, said the idea is not new, although it is new at ASU.

The University of Wisconsin was the first school to try the concept and now many others are beginning similar efforts.

She said the entire population of the 12th floor — 56 students — has signed the agreement.

"Most students on the floor work out at least three times a week or they play in some organized sport," Dudman said.

The residents have the option of working out at the SRC or in Manzanita's 12th-floor exercise room, which is equipped with stair-stepping machines, stationary cycles and a rowing machine.

Manzanita Hall residents take advantage of the convenience of their 12th-floor exercise room.

"The purpose is not to say you can't go out and have a drink with friends," Dudman said of the no drug, alcohol and tobacco pledge, "but to make this a substance-free floor."

Summers said she would assume that a student would have to move from the floor if the agreement were broken.

There are many benefits to students who join, Summers said. There is a wellness resource library on their floor with books, pamphlets and videos on health and exercise, as well as a VCR.

Each student on the floor has a key to the exercise room.

Incoming students will be given a health assessment by the SRC.

ASU voters register with ease

By S. TALBOTT SMITH
STATE PRESS

Voter 2000 organizers and volunteers have registered about 1,000 ASU students to vote in November's general election and expect to have 2,000 registered to vote by Friday.

On the average, Voter 2000 has registered about 375 people daily at its booth on Cady Mall since Monday.

Caesar Tima, a sophomore majoring in international relations, organized the successful registration drive with financial support from Regent Eddie Basha and two Tempe businesses. Tima is receiving volunteer help in manning and setting up the booth from the Sigma Kappa sorority, College Republicans, Associated Students of ASU, Zeta Beta Tau fraternity and the Arizona League of Women Voters.

Tima said he is affiliated with the College Republicans, but he added that the Voter 2000 registration drive is non-partisan.

"This is a non-partisan, non-profit effort" to get students to register, he said.

Tima organized Voter 2000 to help erase ASU's "apathetic image." He said his efforts are statewide and will include Northern Arizona University and the University of Arizona in the next few weeks. He hopes to register 2,000 voters at the other universities as well.

The Arizona Student Association, a statewide student government association, is also participating in Tima's drive to register students to vote.

ASA has its own registration drive every year, called Students Are Voting Everywhere, or SAVE '92, but for the time being the group has joined Tima under the Voter 2000 name.

"Little by little, our efforts became one," Tima said. "We have a pretty solid relationship (with ASA)."

ASA's goal with the SAVE '92 effort is to register 15,000 students at ASU, and 10,000 at NAU and UofA before the Oct. 5 registration deadline. SAVE '92 goals were set by each individual school's ASA officers.

"It was busy today," ASA Task Force Director Jennifer Meyer said of student interest in the voter registration drive. "The people who are registering here are very happy that we have made it more convenient for them to register."

"That's the whole point. Students can register here and it's easy."

Tima is also working in cooperation with the Maricopa County recorder's office in Voter 2000's effort to get students registered.

"I'm pleased they've given us the opportunity to participate, and that they came in and talked to us so that what they are doing will work in concert with us," Maricopa County Recorder Helen Purcell said.

Purcell added that the new absentee ballot rule, now called "early" balloting, will get more people to vote. Ballots will be mailed to voters 33 days before the election and can be turned in or mailed to the recorder's office anytime up until the election.

"Anytime you put a roadblock in a person's way for either registering or voting, they're going to take the easy way out."

She cited the new Kids Voting program in recent elections as an example of how incentives can get people to vote. She said that program increased turnout by 10 to 15 percent. Kids Voting gets children involved in the process by allowing them to place mock ballots at polling places, but they must bring a parent who is registered to vote.

Recent changes to voting rules by the state now allow any registered voters to use the early balloting system. Formerly, a reason had to be given for voting with an absentee ballot, such as physical disability.

Mecham

David Berman, a professor of political science at ASU, said he feels there is no chance Mecham will hurt incumbent McCain's chances for re-election.

"I don't think McCain's very worried," Berman said. "McCain seems to have a sizeable lead. (Mecham) probably will get 15, not more than 20, percent of the votes."

During his two-hour rally in Mesa, however, Mecham referred to himself as the relief this state needs to represent itself in the Senate. The 68-year-old former Glendale car dealer and newspaper publisher outlined his six major points of interest, claiming his top priority to be that of the $4 billion national debt.

"The only thing that's going to stop the federal government from going broke is to balance the budget real soon," Mecham said. "We need to reduce the (debt) to $200 billion by next year and to zero by the year after that."

He then offered a thinly detailed plan to balance that budget. He said the solution is to have every member of the federal government justify every dollar spent.

The re-establishment of the United State's Constitution — something he said has been ignored by "buck passers" in Congress — as the governing control of the nation, was his second major point of interest, Mecham said.

"In my calculations, at least 80 percent of the actions of the federal government are outside of the restrictions of the Constitution," said the former state senator, who has been involved in local politics since the 1960s.

Mecham pinpointed constitutional violations by governmental leaders dating as far back as the start of the century.

The threat of America at war was Mecham's third issue outlined Wednesday. He said the nation should only respond to a threat of national security and even then war should not be allowed until approved by Congress.

"A United Nations declaration is no substitute and does not supercede the Constitution," he said, citing five wars that have been illegally fought.

Farther down Mecham's agenda was the unemployment rate across the United States. He said government should stop interfering in private enterprise and let the market create the jobs the country needs.

Mecham's fifth concern was that of American taxpayers having their tax money "shipped overseas and given to whomever, regardless of how the American people feel about it."

Lastly, Mecham said he is for a trade policy that treats imports the same way exports are treated, keeping prices affordable on imports everywhere and "fostering a good will with all nations."

trust that it will be in the supporting areas, such as general sciences or business," said Assistant Professor Kathleen Peters.

Peters has been teaching textiles and clothing at ASU for the past 25 years and will switch to teaching family studies classes next year after the program is cut.

Both Zylla and Peters are confused about why the University is cutting the program.

"It is inappropriate to take the major out of the curriculum considering we have 150 majors and we are a self-sustaining program financially," Peters said.

She also said textiles and clothing is the predominant major in the College of Family Resources and Human Development and the department also has developed business internships in the community.

Zylla said her impression is that the textile and clothing department is seen as a non-traditional area for the College of Liberal Arts. When there are programs targeted for elimination, she said the administration looks at non-traditional programs first.

"We just don't seem to fit the liberal arts picture," she said.

Coor said the 4 percent budget decrease the administration asked each academic unit to take could result in additional cuts in the broadcasting and engineering departments.

The administration has proposed that three classes from the engineering curriculum and the television production emphasis of the broadcasting curriculum be phased out in the next two years.

been arrested with charges including burglary, credit card fraud and sexual assault.

Fontana, a 6-foot-4, 202-pound, 1990 graduate of Riordan High School in San Francisco, Calif., is still serving two years probation stemming from the credit card scandal that rocked the basketball program last November.

Fontana and three other members of the team, Stevin Smith, Lynn Collins and Jamal Faulkner, pleaded guilty to fraudulent use of a credit card. The four used, and apparently allowed girlfriends and others to use, an unauthorized credit card and charged more than $13,000 in phone calls.

In the 1991-92 season, Fontana averaged 7.2 points and 4 rebounds per game.

Harris was out of his office until Friday, but in an earlier interview regarding the trend involving ASU athletes and criminal behavior, Harris said that he is concerned about the problem and is doing everything he can to stop it.

"We spend lots of time with them," Harris said. "I think the idea of having people face the consequences of the things they do is just the right kind of thing to have happen."

Harris added that the Athletic Department conducts counseling sessions with the athletes to lay down what kind of behavior is expected from them while they are at ASU.

"We work with them to make them aware," Harris said.

"We let them know that there are things that we will take away.

"And then you keep your fingers crossed."

Senate hears sex therapy expert

PHOENIX (AP) — An expert on sex therapy told a state Senate panel Wednesday that a controversial device that measures arousal in boys and men gives valuable information, but should be used with caution.

The hearing of the ad-hoc Committee on Children's Psychological Treatment was called following media reports on a program for sex offenders at Phoenix Memorial Hospital in which the device was used to measure arousal in boys as young as 10. The program, which was disbanded last week, also had teen-agers sniff ammonia while listening to their fantasies in a form of aversion therapy.

Judith Becker, director of the University of Arizona sexual-medicine clinic in Tucson, said she was unfamiliar with the program at Phoenix Memorial, and testified only about sex therapy strategy in general.

Becker said the device, called a penile plethysmograph, can aid treatment by helping therapists determine what arouses offenders. But since teen-agers can suppress arousal, the device is only useful when the subject is a willing participant in the therapy, she said.

In the case at the heart of the controversy, the ring-like device that fits around the penis was used on a boy under the custody of Child Protective Services.

"We don't have a means of assessment that is 100 percent perfect, but these are the best that we have," Becker said.

The hearing was called by state Sen. Stan Furman, D-Phoenix. In addition to Becker, there was testimony from state officials on how various agencies deal with teen-age sex offenders.

Officials from Phoenix Memorial are scheduled to testify at a second hearing Sept. 2.

The hospital canceled the program last week. Officials defended its methods but said the reports about the program had made it unlikely there would be enough referrals to keep it going.

"The issue of juvenile sex offenders hasn't gone away just because that particular program has ceased operation," said Furman. He said the committee would study whether "corrective legislation" is needed.

America West gets additional financing

PHOENIX (AP) — America West Airlines' President Michael Conway said Wednesday an additional $10 million had been added to the interim financing package America West needs to keep flying while it reorganizes.

The $10 million loan by Ansett Worldwide Aviation Services increases the financing package to $60 million, $53 million in loans.

Australian-based Ansett leases 11 planes to America West and owns 17 percent of its stock, a spokesman for the Phoenix-based carrier said.

Conway disclosed the additional loan while testifying during a U.S. Bankruptcy Court hearing on the company's request for permission to take on up to $60 million in added debt.

Judge Robert G. Mooreman, who is presiding over the company's Chapter 11 reorganization case, took the request under advisement but promised to rule soon on whether to give it tentative approval.

After several aircraft providers and other parties in the bankruptcy case objected to aspects of the company's request, he scheduled a Sept. 9 hearing to hear additional arguments.

Martin J. Whalen, America West general counsel, said later that the company would try to schedule closing of the financing package for Sept. 10, the day after the next hearing.

Besides the $53 million in loans, the package includes $7 million in ticket prepurchases and airport rent deferrals. The loans include $35 million from GPA Leasing, an Irish aircraft leasing company, $1 million from the state and $7 million from various Phoenix businesses, including $250,000 each from the Phoenix Suns and Phoenix Cardinals sports franchises.

Conway testified that America West needs the money because of losses sustained during fare wars earlier this year. "Those cuts in concerts took a devastating toll on the industry," he said.

If the interim financing is not approved, he said, "the likely result would be that the company would be unable to operate in the near term."

ASU running backs get ready to rumble

Sun Devil backfield loaded with talent

BY BRIAN CHARLES
STATE PRESS

When Sun Devil junior tailback George Montgomery talks about the newly remodeled ASU backfield, he sums it up in one word.

Intensity.

"In this new offense, you have to give it all you got on every snap there is no tenacity," Montgomery said.

And with the new wide-open, blitzkrieg style that coach Bruce Snyder has installed, it hopefully will prove profitable for the 1992 Sun Devils.

In only a few months, Snyder and his staff have stressed the importance of running the football, and have made it clear they intend to do it with authority.

"We believe that when you can run the ball, you can defeat people," said Hue Jackson, ASU running back coach. "You can beat people by throwing the ball, but we want to defeat people. We are going to take pride in running the football at ASU."

The Sun Devils are fortunate to have several different athletes vying for the job. Unlike the quarterback situation that was resolved two weeks ago, the starting running back position is still up for grabs.

"We don't have a starter right now," Jackson said. "They have to earn the right to play in this backfield."

Contending for the starting spot will be three returning players. Montgomery, senior Jerone Davison, and sophomore Mario Bates.

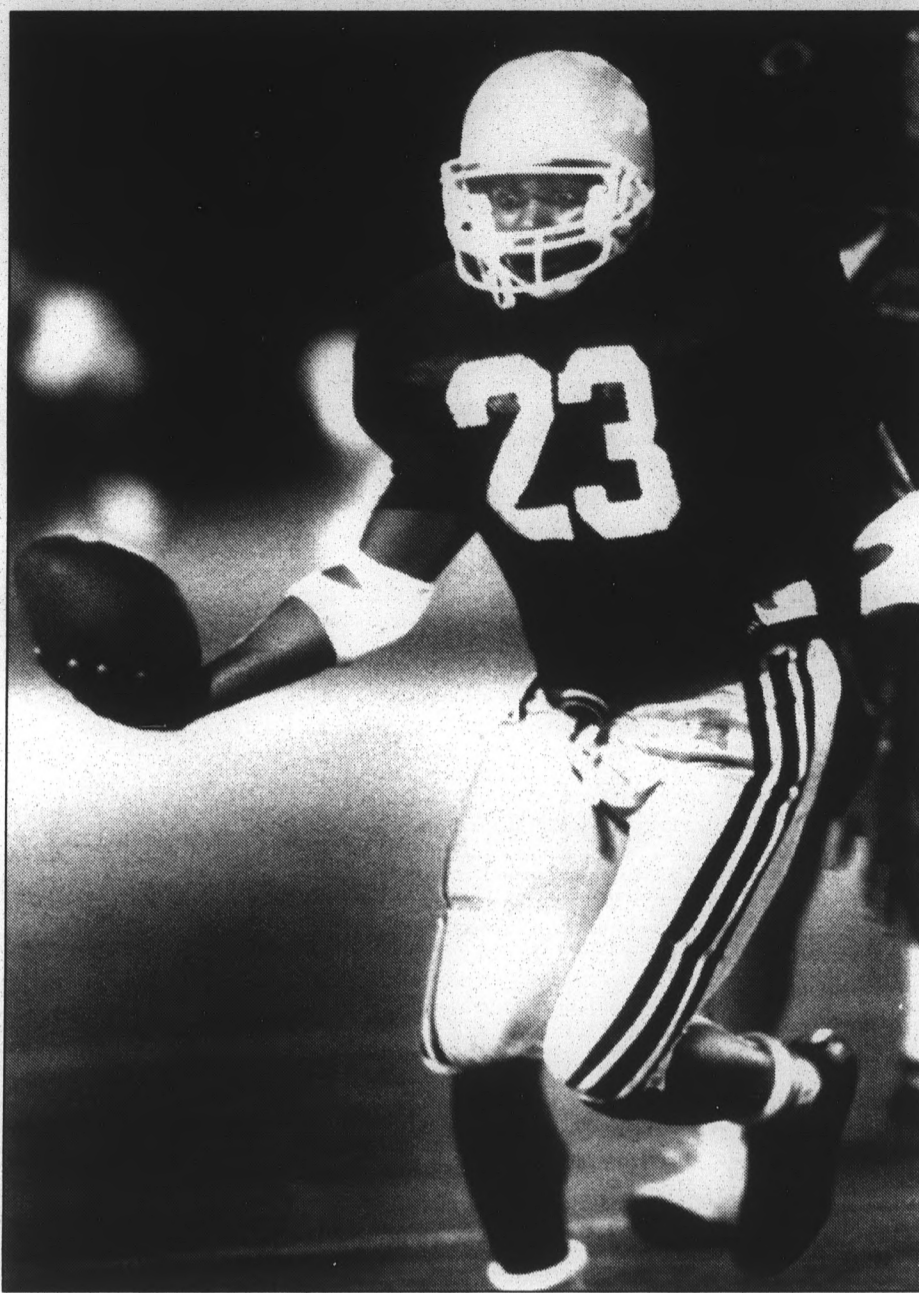

Montgomery, who is already being heralded as one of the top backs in the Pac-10, is an excellent open-field runner. He started in six games last year, compiling a 4.2 yards per carry average and three touchdowns. Combining his speed and awareness with his 6-foot-2, 210-pound frame, Montgomery also looks to be a threat coming out of the backfield for receptions.

In the old coach Larry Marmie system, catching passes was a rarity for Montgomery, who only caught three. But now in the new offense, he looks to display some of his other talents.

"This new attack-oriented offense is really exciting and I think everyone will be ready to play on every down," Montgomery said. "At 6-foot-1-inch tall and 235 pounds, Jerone Davison has surprising speed for a big frame and, at the rate he is going, might end up surprising some in the Pac-10. Davison put on a nice display of running during the intersquad scrimmage held last Sunday at ASU."

Davison is known for his powerful leg drive and has now combined that with speed to produce effective slicing and cutting. In addition, Davison has also developed the ability to find the hole in the defensive line, something that was also present during the scrimmage.

Rounding out the field is the sophomore Bates, who gained notice as a freshman and was the key ingredient to last year's emotional, streak-ending victory over

Life for incoming freshmen can be tough, lonely and scary. There is always a degree of uncertainty as to the direction they may want to go.

But being a lost soul in a faraway land is not an accurate description of freshman golfer Emilee Klein. She has a mission.

She is one of two highly recruited golfers who will join the Sun Devil team under Coach Linda Vollstedt.

Klein is the No. 1-ranked junior golfer in the country and she was also the 1991 USGA junior champion.

A disturbing trend continues

15 months: 10 Sun Devil athletes arrested for various infractions

BY DAN ZEIGER
STATE PRESS

The arrest of an ASU basketball player on sexual assault charges has resulted in University officials suggesting that student athletes need to be made more cognizant that they are constantly under the microscope — whether they like it or not.

"You go to The Vine (Tavern), The Dash (Inn) or any other of those places and you see anonymous folks do absolutely idiotic things to themselves and each other," ASU Director of Athletics Charles Harris said. "We have to do a better job of helping all athletes understand that they are held to a higher standard."

But ASU Dean of Student Life Art Carter said that, right or wrong, student athletes need to be aware that their actions come under more scrutiny than the average student.

"I think that the specter of high visibility among students does carry the responsibility of conducting oneself as a good citizen," Carter said. "I don't think it's unreasonable that they — in the spirit of being good citizens — follow the code of conduct and other laws."

Over the last 15 months, 10 Sun Devil athletes have gotten in trouble with the law, with the latest incident occurring early Wednesday morning, when ASU forward Dwayne Fontana was arrested and charged with sexual assault.

Fontana's problems become more complicated due to the fact that he is still serving probation stemming from fraudulent use of a University telephone credit card. Last November, he, four teammates and their friends used the card and charged more than $13,000 in long-distance phone calls.

The rash of Sun Devil athletes brushing with the law began last summer, when basketball player Ian Dale was arrested and charged with sexual abuse and assault. He was placed on probation because of the arrest.

Since then, the number has reached disturbing proportions: • In November, Fontana and teammates Lynn Collins, Jamal Faulkner and Stevin Smith admitted to fraudulent use of a University telephone credit card. The four received game suspensions and were ordered to pay restitution and perform community service.

In April, they were sentenced to two years probation and

Connors joins senior league

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Connors will compete next year in a new tennis circuit for players 35 years of age and older.

"They all want to play. It's a great way to get all the guys I grew up with back into the sport and back playing again," Connors said Tuesday in New York where he is preparing for next week's U.S. Open.

Besides Connors, who has committed to play all five to seven events during the inaugural season of the Champions Tour, others who have indicated interest in playing include Bjorn Borg, Vitas Gerulaitis, Guillermo Vilas, Jose Luis Clerc, John Lloyd, Roscoe Tanner, Dick Stockton and Johan Kriek.

"A lot of the guys have been out of tennis 8, 9, 10 years," Connors said. "Borg is one of them. They can still play."

Connors has won 109 singles titles, more than any other male player in history, including two Wimbledon, five U.S. Opens and one Australian Open. He also spent 159 consecutive weeks ranked as the No. 1 player in the world, the longest uninterrupted hold on this position in the history of men's tennis.

Connors said he will continue to play the regular ATP Tour, although it will be a "cutback schedule."

"I'm going to have to get in shape to play with those guys," said Gerulaitis. "I think it would work. They'd find a way to market it."

"It's a lot different from golf just because physically it's not as demanding playing golf. And they make it a lot easier to play golf. Those courses, they're almost playing off women's tee."

"There's no way to shorten the tennis court or make the ball lighter. But while these guys are young enough, you still can put on a really good competitive match of our group of guys. And once we lay down the first four or five years, then I think it will perpetuate."

The Champions Tour will be owned and managed by Net Assets Inc., a new company which will be headquartered in Washington, D.C. Connors will serve as president of the new company, while Ray Benton, former president and chief operating officer of ProServ Inc., will be chairman and chief executive officer.

his sentence before he is eligible for parole. His trial begins on Monday.

• In April, football player Eric Guliford pleaded no contest to charges of criminal damage after a U-Haul truck he rented was used by a friend to stage an accident in order to collect insurance money.

• Last month, football players Grady Benton and Derrick Land were arrested and charged with theft and fraudulent use of a credit card. The two allegedly tried to purchase merchandise at a Mesa shopping mall with a credit card that an ASU student had reported stolen earlier in the day.

Benton and Land were suspended for the Sun Devils' opening game against Washington on Sept. 5.

ASU Assistant Sports Information Director Scott Dupree said that all Sun Devil athletes receive counseling shortly after they arrive on campus. The counseling includes an introduction to the University Code of Conduct and seminars with officials from Student Life and the ASU DPS.

Carter said he went to Jill DeMichele, ASU assistant athletic director of Academic Services, to ask if Student Life could give student athletes additional counseling during the next 4-5 weeks.

"The University makes a concerted effort with the athletic department to make the kids aware of what's available to them," Carter said. "At the same time, they should be expected to comply with the rules. And the issue is one of letting them know about them."

But Harris is quick to point out that most Sun Devil athletes do stay out of trouble.

"I think it's important for people to understand that we have more than 550 athletes (at ASU), and of those, (10) have UofA.

Having only started one game last year, Bates still managed to finish second on the team in rushing.

Bates put together a 4.4 yards per carry average, the best on the squad, and looks to improve on that mark in the more aggressive Snyder regime.

Despite having a sore ankle throughout most of the summer, Bates has been practicing full speed with the team.

Also eyeing a spot in Snyder's backfield will be veteran Kevin Galbreath, and recently converted back Derrick Land.

Galbreath, a senior, has also looked good in practice and could be another asset in the running back core.

As for Land, who was switched to running back only on Tuesday, it will be a return to the position he started at.

"I played it in high school, so the switch won't be too bad," the sophomore said. "It will take some time to learn the plays, but this system isn't too difficult (to learn)."

Land, who also has experience on special teams, is a versatile player and looks to fit in anywhere that he may be needed.

Providing the blocking for the running backs will fall in the hands of Parnell Charles and Gino Valpredo.

Charles, a redshirt sophomore, is good at getting out of the backfield quick. He looks to replace Kelvin Fisher, who graduated last year.

Valpredo, a senior, has been noted for his consistency and should be able to produce in that very critical offensive back position.

Despite last season's marks and this summer's success, Jackson thinks the backfield core still has a way to go.

"I think we got the basics laid down at (Tontozona)," Jackson said, "but right now we need to practice a whole lot better, and a whole lot harder."

Klein comes to Tempe via Studio City, Calif., with a devotion to a sport she said "consumes me."

Dedication has led her to practice day after day, year after year, even on Christmas.

"Me and my Dad opened our presents in the morning (last Christmas) then went to play golf in the afternoon," Klein said.

It appears nothing will keep this 5-foot-4 fireball from competing on the course.

Klein explained that a rainy day during her first week in Tempe prevented her from one of her daily practices. And that didn't sit well with her.

Unable to practice, Klein admits she was somewhat frustrated having to spend the day "cooped up" in her dorm room, listening to the falling rain.

Finally, a roommate took her to a local mall, but even that didn't make her forget about her game.

"That day wasn't as bad as I thought it would be," Klein admitted. "Still, I didn't particularly enjoy hanging out at the mall for about seven hours," she said, adding she would have played in the rain if ASU's Karsten Golf Course hadn't been closed.

Despite a constant devotion to her game, Klein still finds time for enjoying college life and having fun with her roommates.

Klein said she is adjusting to college life nicely and does not feel homesick. But her parents are a different story. Her mother Randee is taking her absence with some difficulty.

"Right before my mom left (for home) she turned around to look at me and she started to cry," Klein said sadly.

Klein said keeping focused on her golf game helps her deal with being away from the comforts of home.

"I am constantly thinking golf," she said.

KING OF BEERS.

Fay Vincent saga nears showdown

NEW YORK (AP) — Can Fay Vincent be fired? The commissioner says he can't, but Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf says he can.

"Every lawyer that I have spoken to has concluded that a commissioner can be removed from office," Reinsdorf said Tuesday. "But let's deal with that if we get to that point. We haven't gotten to that point yet."

Reinsdorf said he hasn't made up his mind about whether he would like to force Vincent out, but did say he was one of the seven owners in the American League who requested the meeting, to be held next Thursday at Rosemont, Ill.

AL president Bobby Brown and National League president Bill White called the special session on Monday after Vincent refused to.

"I hope we have a frank and open discussion of our problems and the commissioner's performance," Reinsdorf said. "I'm not going in with any preconceived ideas. I know what I feel, but I want to hear what other people think. It's my hope we come out with a clear consensus."

Vincent's opponents say 18-20 owners oppose the commissioner, but his supporters say the anti-Vincent faction is only 10-12.

The Major League Agreement, the contract that governs baseball, does not have a procedure for firing a commissioner and says his powers may not be diminished during his term. Vincent last week said he would resist efforts against him and remain in power "until such time as the highest court of this land tells me otherwise."

Reinsdorf said he hoped Vincent would attend next week's meeting, which will take place a week before the regular quarterly gathering, scheduled for St. Louis.

"I was very distressed by the fact of the commissioner's unwillingness to talk," Reinsdorf said. "I can't imagine what harm ever comes from people getting together and talking. I think it's in the commissioner's best interest for him to attend and for anybody who believes he had done a good job to attend so both sides can be presented."

Vincent had no comment Tuesday, but other baseball officials said he wasn't likely to go to the session. After receiving the initial request for the meeting on Aug. 17, Vincent wrote the league presidents "the purpose for which you request a meeting is unlawful and contrary to the Major League Agreement. Therefore, your request is denied."

Vincent will make his final decision after consulting with Brendan V. Sullivan Jr., the new lawyer for the commissioner's office.

For Thursday, August 27, 1992

ARIES
(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)

Friends play an all important role in your life today. You need to guard against self-indulgence and spreading your energies too thin. Slow down.

TAURUS
(Apr. 20 to May 20)

Your main focus is on career interests now. Behind-the-scenes moves are best for you. You may owe someone a favor. Social life could lead to excess tonight.

GEMINI
(May 21 to June 20)

Don't promise more than you can deliver at work. You will soon be making plans to visit friends at a distance. Accent partnership interests after dark.

CANCER
(June 21 to July 22)

You may have a tendency to let things slide as the day begins. Later, improved concentration leads to work gains. Attend to joint financial interests.

LEO
(July 23 to Aug. 22)

You may be unenthusiastic about joining a partner at a social event. A taste for luxury could prove extravagant now.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)

You have a lot to do now and my find yourself working overtime to accomplish your objectives. Don't let spending for the home get out of hand.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)

This is the perfect day for furthering heart interests or the enjoyment of hobbies. The only danger now is that you could be tardy with work obligations.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

It is time to get our house in order. Attend to necessary shopping and household repairs, but don't be talked into getting something you really don't need.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

Make those important phone calls today as you shine in the area of communications. Creative work and local travel are highlighted. Social plans soar now.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)

Many of the purchases you make now are worthwhile, but the costs involved will add up to a tidy sum unless you are prudent. A friendship may be tested now.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)

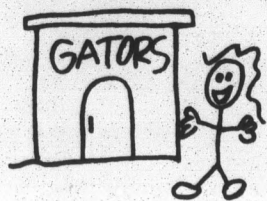

You radiate with personality today. A higher-up may be somewhat difficult to deal with now. Overall, things go your way.

PISCES
(Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)

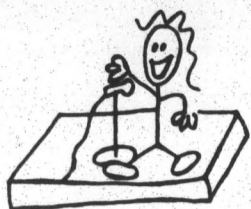

You could lay the charm on a bit thick now in business. You will make better progress by working quietly from a behind-the-scenes vantage point. Celebrate tonight.

YOU BORN TODAY enjoy challenges and thrive well in crises' situations. You have a philosophical and critical bent. You have leaderships qualities but some of your beliefs may be unorthodox. You do not like to be told what to do. You would make a fine teacher and often are blessed with writing ability. Birthdate of: Lyndon B. Johnson, politician; Theodore Dreiser, writer; and Tuesday Weld, actress.
