ASASU senator quits, leaves 5 posts vacant

Four ASU colleges left waiting for full representation

BY SONDRÁ ROBERTO AND D.J. BURROUGH STATE PRESS

Associated Students of ASU Sen. Chris Conlin is expected to hand in a formal resignation from his post as College of Public Programs senator today, leaving four out of 12 colleges without full representation in student government.

With Conlin's resignation, five Senate seats from four colleges are now empty and another may be vacated soon, pending the possible resignation of College of Education Sen. Ali Wiener.

The Graduate College currently has no senators in ASASU and no college council executive officers.

Conlin, who was elected to his first term as senator last spring, said he resigned because of unexpected personal and work constraints that arose over the summer.

"I don't have the time to dedicate to the student council this year with my work schedule and school," Conlin said. "I would have liked to have finished my term, but first thing's first."

In addition to keeping a full class load and full-time work schedule, Conlin is a volunteer for the Valley Big Brother Program, all of which left him inadequate time for ASASU, he said.

Brett Thomas, Conlin's co-senator for the college, said Conlin signaled to the Public Programs' College Council last week that he intended to quit. But in a Thursday State Press editorial column concerning Senate meeting absences, Conlin said he was "definitely" going to attend the rest of the year's meetings after missing the first one.

"What I meant to say was either myself or somebody who was going to be able to do it" would attend the meetings, Conlin said.

Thomas said there are now two Senate candidates from the College of Public Programs who will be interviewed by the college council this week. The council will then appoint one candidate to replace Conlin.

The College of Education may also lose one of its two senators if Wiener chooses to resign within the next week.

ASASU Executive Vice President Jessica Klinger said Wiener is also having a time conflict with her outside job, which would cause her to be late to Senate meetings every Tuesday. Klinger said she told Wiener in order to properly represent her college she must attend meetings on time or resign her post.

Wiener could not be reached for comment Sunday, but her co-senator Roxanne Franco said Wiener has not made a decision yet. Wiener, a first-time senator, was appointed by the College of Education Council when its elected senator, Allison Davis, dropped out over the summer.

"(Wiener) was never notified she was a

Harris: University deserves better

ASU athletic department facing strict scrutiny, possible overhaul

BY GREG SEXTON STATE PRESS

A visibly angry Charles S. Harris, ASU director of athletics, said Friday at a news conference that a complete review and, if needed, overhaul of the Sun Devil athletic department will begin immediately.

Harris called the impromptu press conference after a week that saw the arrest of one Sun Devil basketball player for suspicion of sexual assault, the incarceration of another for probation violation, and the disclosure that yet one other basketball player is wanted in California on an outstanding warrant.

"These past few days have been filled with revelations regarding antisocial behavior on the part of our student athletes, which has been troubling, embarrassing (and) frustrating," Harris said. "The public has been rightly critical. There is no room for antisocial behavior on this campus. It will not be tolerated."

The past seven days have not been good for the Sun Devil basketball program, nor for ASU's athletic department. On Wednesday morning, Dwayne Fontana was arrested on suspicion of sexually assaulting a 23-year-old woman at his Tempe apartment. He was held for eight hours and released pending a complaint from the county attorney's office.

On Thursday, Jamal Faulkner was sentenced to 30 days in jail for failing to complete 100 hours of court-ordered community service and for not meeting with his probation

Computer sites axed due to budget cuts; fewer Macs available

BY SHAUN RACHAU STATE PRESS

ASU students should plan to do term papers and projects extra early this semester because it could be tough to find an open computer during the end-of-the-semester crunch.

Due primarily to budget problems, Computing and Network Consulting Services, which oversees all campus computer sites, has closed the popular Hayden Library computing site and may close two other sites by spring, reducing the number of computer sites on campus to six.

"I know that (the Hayden site) was certainly a popular site and well-utilized, but the number of keyboards there were relatively few," said Larry Conrad, acting director of Information Resources Management, of the 40 computer terminals at Hayden.

"From our budget perspective it costs as much to run a small site as a large site," he said. "The budget cuts have been so severe that we have to look at all areas of our cost effectiveness."

Conrad said the decision to close the Hayden computing site was a combination of factors: the need to cut expenses within computer services and the library's desire to convert the space into an office for the Consortium for Instructional Resources program.

Conrad said his department's budget was cut by $1.2 million this year and almost $1 million last year.

Log exhibit aims to educate

By CHRIS DRISCOLL
STATE PRESS

When President George Bush suspended endangered species protection for the northern spotted owl in favor of continued logging in the owl's only habitat, the nation's major news media called it "owls vs. jobs."

Officials with the Sierra Club, the ASU Center for Environmental Studies and a host of national forest advocates, however, hope to prove today — with the help of a giant log (see adjacent box for details) — that the issues are much more complex.

"This is not a simple issue of owls versus jobs, as the timber industry would have you believe," said Karen Wood, an Oregon conservationist escorting the giant log on a national traveling educational exhibit.

"As many as 60,000 jobs and a billion-dollar Northwest fishing industry are on the line because overlogging in our national forests is killing the streams and fish that spawn in them.

"The administration and Congress need to weigh the long-term interests of the Northwest over the short-term needs of the timber industry," Wood added.

Environmentalists are focusing on the threatened extinction of what they call "old growth" forests as a key issue in their battle to save what little remains of virgin American wilderness.

The old growth forests have never been cut, so they are examples of natural ecological systems. These natural forest systems once covered much of the United States, but now about 95 percent have been cleared away.

The remaining 5 percent harbor much plant and wildlife that exist nowhere else.

Local officials from the state chapter of the Sierra Club and ASU's Center for Environmental Studies are hoping the log exhibit will help them highlight threats to old growth forests in the Southwest as well.

"Saving our ancient forest ecosystems in the Southwest is important, too," said Rob Smith, Southwest representative of the Sierra Club.

"When we save our remaining old growth forest, we serve our rural economies based on tourism and recreation, and we pass on a great national legacy to our children. Over the long term, a healthy and diverse forest is essential for a healthy and diverse rural economy."

Smith said he and other environmentalists hope the crisis now facing virgin forests in the Northwest can be avoided in the Southwest.

"We're already seeing the danger signs," he said.

In the Northwest, he said, the northern spotted owl's status is used by scientists as a major indicator of the condition of the forest itself.

In the Southwest, the U.S. Forest Service uses the goshawk as an indicator species of the condition of native old growth forests, and goshawks are in decline.

Smith gave the yew tree of the Pacific Northwest as an example of what can be lost if the timber industry is allowed to cut sections of the old growth forests as they are now proposing in legislation pending before the U.S. Congress.

"The yew tree, whose bark can cure some types of cancer, was considered a scrub tree by the timber industry, not commercially valuable, so most were cleared away and other trees planted in their place," he said.

Now, when the bark of the yew can save lives, there aren't nearly enough trees to meet the demand.

Julie Stromberg, assistant professor in the ASU Center for Environmental Studies, said her department co-sponsored the giant log exhibit at the University because the department hopes to help people become more aware of the value of the old growth forests in the Southwest.

"People don't realize we do have extensive old growth forests in our state," she said.

Smith said one of the greatest concerns of the Sierra Club in the Southwest is that the forests are being cut down faster than they can grow back here.

There should be a longer rotation cycle between cutting in the same areas, he said. The forests are not given a chance to grow to the maturity that much of the dependent plant and animal life need to survive.

When contacted for comment, representatives from two of Arizona's largest timber-industry companies were either unavailable for comment or declined comment.

Sarajevo bomb kills 15 in attack

By JOHN POMFRET
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A howitzer shell crashed into a crowded marketplace Sunday, killing at least 15 people and wounding dozens in one of the bloodiest single attacks during the Serbs' siege of Sarajevo.

Meanwhile, fierce fighting around Gorazde forced U.N. officials to delay plans to dispatch an aid convoy. Serbs announced Saturday they were lifting their five-month siege of the city southeast of Sarajevo.

"It appears to be extremely dangerous," said Fred Eckhard, chief spokesman for U.N. operations in former Yugoslavia. He said the convoy might leave on Wednesday.

Gorazde, as the lone government holdout against Serb insurgents in eastern Bosnia-Herzegovina, has been an emotional symbol of the war that began when the majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence from Yugoslavia on Feb. 29. As many as 100,000 people have been trapped there.

U.N. officials condemned the attack in Sarajevo. Eckhard suggested Serb forces may have fired on the market purposely.

More than 30 people were wounded when the 105mm howitzer shell exploded in the market. The casualty toll was the worst since May 28, when mortar rounds killed at least 20 people in a bread line and wounded 100.

That attack prompted the European Community to impose trade sanctions on Serbia, which it accused of supporting Serbs fighting to carve their own state from part of Bosnia. U.N. sanctions on Serbia-dominated Yugoslavia followed on May 30.

Shoes and blood cover the pavement of a Sarajevo shopping street Sunday after a howitzer attack killed 15 people and injured dozens of others. The attack came hours after Bosnian government forces reportedly retook control of most of the city of Gorazda and one day after rebel Serbs announced they were lifting their five-month siege.

Hussein vows to defy Bush 'no fly' order

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq — President Saddam Hussein vowed Sunday to resist the "no-fly" zone imposed over southern Iraq by U.S.-led allies, but offered no specific actions his government might take.

It was the first statement from Saddam about the flight ban imposed Thursday to protect Shiite Muslim rebels from air attacks by Iraq's military. The comments, read in Saddam's name on Iraqi radio, restated earlier defiant statements by Iraqi officials and news media.

In the 50-minute statement, Saddam claimed the allies were plotting to partition Iraq and the rest of the Arab world then seize control of their oil wealth. He accused Iran, which is predominately Shiite and fought a 1980-88 war with Iraq, of inciting the allies.

It was not immediately clear why Saddam did not deliver the address himself.

In Washington, a White House spokesman, Walter

HUSSEIN

Kansteiner, denied wanting to break up Iraq. He said the action was taken because Iraq violated a U.N. no-aggression resolution in its campaign to crush the Shiite rebellion that began after Saddam's defeat in the Persian Gulf War.

Despite Saddam's vow to respond to "bold aggression," Baghdad has so far made no signs of breaching the exclusion zone south of the 32nd parallel.

Senior U.S. military officers have said they do not expect Iraq to strike at allied air patrols because the situation could escalate quickly beyond Saddam's control. The allies have warned they will shoot down any Iraqi aircraft that enters the zone.

The allies established a similar "safe haven" for Iraq's Kurdish minority in the north last year after Iraqi troops crushed an uprising by the Kurds following the Gulf War.

Saddam insisted the Iraqi "leadership is determined to reject the bold aggression and confront it with all means available and on all levels." Without elaborating, he said his government "was considering the timing and options."

Senior Iraqi officials have raised the possibility of ending cooperation with U.N. weapon inspections or U.N. humanitarian efforts. U.N. officials said Sunday that a new U.N. nuclear weapons team planned to go to Baghdad on Monday, which would be the first such visit since the "no-fly" zone took effect.

The commander of U.S. military forces in the Persian Gulf said Sunday that the allies may put fewer planes into the air because the Iraqis have not challenged the southern zone.

Lt. Gen. Michael Nelson also said the allies had not seen any significant activity by Iraqi ground troops arrayed against the Shiites operating out of the vast marshes of southern Iraq.

But President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said the United States had detected "signs of preparation" for a ground offensive.

Appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," Scowcroft declined to specify how the allies might respond to such an offensive, but he seemed to hint that Bush would order a military attack.

"I don't want to speculate, but we're flying over there for a reason," Scowcroft said.

In the statement, Saddam said the exclusion zone was "designed to create the same situation they created in the north," a reference to Iraq's Kurdish region, which has declared itself autonomous.

"Any country in the region that provides facilities to the forces of aggression, will alone shoulder the responsibility toward its people and toward God and bear the consequences of such an unforgivable action," the statement said.

California legislature approves long-sought budget

By DOUG WILLIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The Legislature passed a $57 billion budget aimed at ending a stalemate that left California running on IOUs, but Gov. Pete Wilson said he can't sign the budget until all related bills are on his desk.

The state Senate passed a full slate of nearly a dozen such measures Saturday. But the more contentious and divided Assembly enacted only three of the least controversial parts of the package, deferring action on unpopular cuts until a late Sunday session.

The Republican governor, who held out for deeper education cuts to reduce the impact on local police and fire services, cautiously praised the Democratic-controlled Legislature.

"If they continue to act responsibly by passing all of the enabling legislation passed by the Senate, the state of California will have the budget that it should have had weeks ago," Wilson said.

Senate leaders urged the House to finish their job.

"The budget isn't enough. ... You have to pass the trailer bills," said Senate Democratic leader David Roberti. "The time has passed to say 'no.'"

Leaders of both parties said they doubted the delay threatened the budget agreement.

But because at least two of the bills implementing the budget were being rewritten Sunday by the Assembly, requiring additional votes Monday by the Senate, it appeared unlikely that Wilson would have all the bills he has demanded before midnight Monday.

A bill enacting one of the least popular parts of the budget agreement among Democrats, reducing welfare grants by 5.8 percent and cutting funds for health care for the poor, failed on a 42-31 Assembly vote Saturday. But Assembly Democrats said they would vote for it under certain conditions.

The state has written $2.65 billion in IOUs since July 1, when the fiscal year began. Wilson and the Legislature were at odds over how to close a nearly $11 billion budget deficit.

The final votes on the main budget bill, which legislators of both parties denounced as cruel, punishing or worse, were 33-5 in the Senate, or six more than the required two-thirds majority, and 54-23 in the Assembly, the exact required margin.

Schools, cities, counties and other local agencies are targets of cuts because local governments receive more than three-quarters of the state's funds, either in direct aid or in jointly financed programs.

The budget gap between anticipated revenues and spending was caused mostly by the recession's heavy impact on state income, sales and corporate tax revenues.

Senate ruled by apathy

When Jessica Klinger was made king of the Associated Students of ASU Senate by virtue of her executive position, she came into the job with grand plans — only to have them wither into nothing but a heap of grand delusions.

Klinger's mission as ASASU executive vice president originally was to take a body of student legislators that had been stripped of its legitimacy and rocked to its foundation by such high-profile scandals as the Hagaseth ticket scalping controversy and turn it into something that resembles respectability.

That might be possible if her senators, or charges, would show up and stop behaving like a bunch of quitters.

In the past week, one ASASU senator has resigned outright and a second resignation is possible — and at the group's inaugural meeting an embarrassing six seats were left vacant at the senate table, leaving a picture of apathy where ASASU least needs it — within its own ranks.

At a school where apathy runs as fluidly and frequently as fraternity kegs, the last thing needed is for disarray and indifference to rule those in power.

And that's not to mention the practical applications of these latest no-shows. As representatives of the student position, ASASU must be able to hold its own in the lobbying arena with such political heavyweights as university presidents, the Arizona Board of Regents and the scores of legislators who walk the halls of the state Capitol.

Members of the ruling elite at ASASU are facing a power-packed agenda in the coming months, as the ever-dramatic budgetary wrangling gets underway and the issue of tuition hikes finds its way once again to the fore.

But at the rate they're going, members of the ASASU Senate couldn't get a Domino's employee to deliver a pizza let alone get the attention and respect of someone who could materially affect the future of Arizona State University.

Pure and simple: It's a matter of integrity and credibility.

Those who don't appear to care probably don't; those who can't manage to show up to a first meeting or make it past the first week might as well stay home instead of wasting our time — and our money.

Ignorance leads to fear of culture hall

With the opening of the newly formed Umoja Hall, there are many whites who feel that this is a throwback to the "old days" of segregation.

Dan Jones, a sophomore marketing major said "If this had happened 10 or 20 years ago, black people would get really upset. Now it's the opposite and they want to be isolated."

Well I thank this young Caucasian male for telling black people how we would have felt 10 or 20 years ago, I am sure he would know.

In the meantime I encourage all of those who think that the Umoja hall is just segregation and that all the residents of the hall are exercising reverse racism, to visit the hall to see if it actually is all that you want it to be.

There are 15 black students living in the Umoja hall. If there are only 4 people living in the hall who are not black, is that the fault of the residents within the hall, or is it the fault of those who lack the courage to sign up and live in the hall to see what it is actually about?

If there is a young Caucasian male in the Umoja Hall, and his white friends won't return his phone calls, is that the fault of those who reside in Umoja Hall, or is it intolerance and ignorance on the part of his white friends?

To those who think that the formation of Umoja Hall, is the worst thing that has happened on the campus of Arizona State University in recent years, what are you so afraid of?

Are you afraid that walking past Umoja hall, a mob of angry black students will grab you off the street and lynch you?

Are you afraid that you might hear some black students in the hall enjoying a speech by Minister Louis Farrakhan?

Are you afraid that you might hear some white students in the hall listening to a speech by Minister Louis Farrakhan?

Are you afraid that you might see black and white students in Umoja Hall discussing together the political ideologies of Malcolm X, or Kwame Ture or Martin Luther King?

Are you afraid that if you step onto the hallowed ground of

ASHAHED TRICHE

Columnist

Umoja Hall, that you might see a place on the ASU's campus that is committed to exploring and discussing the experiences of black people in America and all over the earth?

Somehow I get the feeling that those who are opposed to Umoja Hall are intimidated by that last point.

To say that Umoja Hall is segregation, and reverse racism would be saying the ASU President Lattie Coor is a segregationist and a racist since he stated at the Umoja Hall opening celebration on August 23, 1992 that he would do whatever was within his power to see that the hall was a success. Is that what the anti-Umoja people are saying about the president of the University?

David Stephen and Debra Sells, both also have committed themselves to helping, in fact, it is because of the hard work of those two in the Department of Residence Life that the hall is in existence.

Dr. Art Carter, the Dean of the Department of Student Life has also said he supports the Umoja Hall and will help in any way that he can to see that it is successful.

The director of the Campus Communities program says he is aiming for 10 intellectual and cultural communities like the Umoja Hall over the next three years.

To say that Umoja Hall is segregation and reverse racism would be saying that all of these people who are behind the formation and implementation of the Umoja Hall and its programming would be segregationists and proponents of racism.

I guess those who think negatively about Umoja Hall are reading from the wrong book, or maybe they have been on the wrong campus.

The Umoja Hall is open to all, black, brown, red, yellow, dark-haired, blond-haired, dog-haired, anyone who is interested in learning a bit about the experiences of black people in America and abroad can benefit from the hall.

And if you don't want to know anymore about black people, don't go over to the hall, but at the same time, do not speak negatively of it because you choose to remain ignorant.

It is natural to fear that of which you have no knowledge. Enjoy Umoja Hall. It is here to stay — deal with it.

Quayle divorces facts from rhetoric

Sometimes it isn't easy to follow the logic of this political campaign. Especially when it comes tumbling out of Dan Quayle.

Quayle is a lawyer, although he's never really made a living at it. Since he had to use family clout just to get into a law school, it's doubtful that he would have been a modern-day Clarence Darrow. His wife is a lawyer, too.

But he doesn't seem to like lawyers. Or maybe he secretly does, but he knows that they are an easy political target.

So he regularly flails them for filing too many lawsuits and asking for too much money and somehow messing up our legal system.

Now it is true that we have a lot of litigation in America, far more than in most developed nations.

But what Quayle fails to talk about is why we have so many lawsuits.

There are corporations that sue each other. And the corporations can clutter up a courtroom for years on end. But you don't hear Quayle ranting about the corporations and their lawyers. Not if he wants to be invited to a golf outing at some private club, he doesn't.

Besides, the corporations aren't the cause of our crowded court dockets, our great glut of lawsuits.

No, the single biggest flood of lawsuits, day in and day out, week after week, year after year, are suits filed by men and women who don't want to be married to each other anymore.

Divorce. That's the single biggest source of litigation in America. What, you thought it was patent infringement?

If you are an adult, just look around at all of your friends, relatives and co-workers. Ask yourself how many of them have ever been in court, and if so, what brought them there.

There might be a personal injury case. Or maybe a traffic rap. But if you are a typical middle-class American with typical middle-class American friends, relatives and acquaintances, you know at least one, two, and probably more who have been divorced.

My guess is that at least one out of every four adults who has read this far has been divorced. And maybe more than once.

We have a high divorce rate in this country. And it would be even higher except that in recent decades young people took to living with each other before getting married. So when they split it didn't require a judge. She took the stereo, he took the TV, they flipped for the cat, and adios forever.

Now, whose fault is it that we have so many divorces? The lawyers?

MIKE ROYKO

Tribune Media Services

Of course not. Divorce lawyers don't rap on doors of strangers and say: "Hi, do you have domestic strife? If so, would you be interested in going to Splitsville? Here's my card. Call night or day."

No, what happens is, a phone rings and a voice says: "Betty, this is Janette (sob). That philandering bastard did it again and I caught him. What's the name of the guy you hired?"

Or: "Charlie, I think the magic is gone. We haven't talked in two months and I sleep on the sofa in the basement and she makes a puking sound whenever I'm in the same room. Is your cousin the lawyer still handling divorces?"

It's also the nastiest form of litigation because it can have elements of shattered hopes, faded dreams, battles over property, and the worst part: custody of children, visitation rights, and the use of kids as pawns and revenge weapons.

And in no other court proceeding — murder, included — is the truth more elusive. She says it's all his fault, he says it's all her fault, they both believe it, and in many court systems the only way the judges avoid going nuts listening to so many lies, is to send both screechers to a court-appointed shrink to sift through the woolly caterpillars between their ears.

You don't see corporate adversaries walking into courtrooms, whipping out guns and blazing away. It's almost always some distraught crazy who thought he got the shaft in a divorce.

So why doesn't Quayle say that, instead of taking cheap shots at lawyers?

Why didn't he stand up at the Republican Convention and say: "Now, let me talk about our legal system. Do you know what the real problem is? It is the millions of you, watching me on TV, who have hired lawyers to file the millions of divorce suits. And who have gone back to court time after time to demand more money or to fight over visitation rights. Or to make false charges of child abuse as a means of punishing the former spouse you now hate. It is you who are to blame."

"Yes, and you, the TV actor with the crew cut who just gave such a glowing introduction to my wife. You have been divorced three times. Shame, shame on you. And shame on us for letting you take part in this family value convention."

Sure, Quayle could have said that. Then he could have gone back to his hometown in Indiana and lost a close race for constable.

And if he had said those things, he would have been unfair because he is in no position to judge why marriages end. People make mistakes, including marriages. Most divorces are preferable to two people making each other miserable and their kids neurotic. There's not much family value in households where hate is the prevailing emotion.

So Quayle ought to cut the bunk about lawyers. Lawyers don't sue; people sue. And many of them are his supporters. I mean, come on, a three-time loser introducing his wife? And they make jokes about Woody Allen. Tsk, tsk.

ASU radio goes 24 hours

KASR has opportunity to get FM spot from midnight to 6 a.m.

By Vicki Culver
STATE PRESS

Starting today at 9 a.m., ASU's radio station KASR 680 AM will be fed into residence halls 24 hours a day.

"We want to show the University that, 'Hey, we're out here,'" said station manager Bob Gabriel. "I'm sure a lot of students will want to turn on alternative music at nights."

In the 10 years that KASR has been on the air, it has never been broadcast later than midnight. Gabriel said he and program director Mike Wolfberg decided that going 24 hours was a good idea since students generally stay up past midnight.

Brenda Brock, a senior child development major, said she is looking forward to KASR going 24 hours a day.

"There are those times at night when you just want to relax and try to find a nice station," she said.

Gabriel said going 24 hours means more people will be needed to volunteer to do deejaying and news reports at the station. However, he said he doesn't anticipate a lack of deejays judging from the nearly 50 who have already shown interest.

Last year, KASR was broadcast between 9 a.m. and midnight. Broadcasting for 24 hours will add two additional deejay slots: one from midnight to 6 a.m. and another from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. Gabriel said the latter shift will have the format of a morning show.

"We want it to be a Dave Pratt thing or a Leah Miller thing," Gabriel said. "We hope people will have fun with it." While Gabriel said he is happy to be able to serve the students in residence halls 24 hours a day, he admitted there is an ulterior motive to the extended hours: getting on the FM dial.

A new station licensed jointly by Maricopa County Community Colleges and ASU will be going on the air on 89.5 FM in early spring, said KASR adviser Fritz Leigh. Twelve hours of the station time will be allocated to ASU and 12 hours to other colleges.

Although the station is currently being considered as a classical/jazz format, KASR employees hope to make a pitch to the new station's program director, who is expected to be hired in coming months. They will ask for KASR to occupy ASU's portion of the daily broadcast, midnight to 6 a.m., to allow students other than those in residence halls to hear the campus station.

"What the students at KASR are looking for is time on the station, and I am certainly encouraging them to propose it," Leigh said. "It's the only foreseeable FM outlet for anything run off this campus."

Gabriel said although the new station will not be run by students, he feels it should still serve students, adding that more college students listen to college-format than classical-format music.

"ASU is going to be running this station with money generated by the students, yet so far there has been no student involvement," Gabriel said, adding that he and Wolfberg hope to take part in the hiring process of a program manager for the new station. "We don't want to take it over, we just want to be a part of it."

DPS official: Cuts should not hurt service

Department operations absorb 5.9% decrease to soften blow

By CAROL ANN HANSEN
STATE PRESS

Although ASU's Department of Public Safety has been hit with its share of budget cuts, a DPS official said Friday that budgetary woes will not affect the number or quality of policing services provided to the ASU community.

"As far as the public is concerned, they should not notice a (decrease) in service," said Lanny Standridge, acting associate director for ASU DPS, who stressed that the majority of the department's budget cuts were absorbed in operations.

"We had to take our share of budget cuts like everyone else," he said. "We know the administration had to make some very hard choices."

According to the vice president's office for administrative services, which oversees ASU DPS, the department's budget was reduced by 5.9 percent this summer.

Susan Malaga, assistant vice president for ASU administrative services, said her office tried to protect the DPS budget when it made budget cuts in July.

Malaga said all of administrative services' budgets took an average cut of 8 percent, but the department of public safety took only a 5.9 percent cut.

"We tried to spare DPS as much as possible," she said. "All of administrative services recognized the importance of their life safety responsibilities to the campus community."

Malaga said DPS took the following steps to help combat the budget cuts:

- The leases on two unmarked police cruisers, which were used for investigative and administrative purposes, were terminated.
- Student worker positions were eliminated.
- Two patrol vehicles were put in storage to lower maintenance costs.

• A vacant management position was eliminated and the responsibilities were shifted to a senior personnel position.

• A health and safety position was converted to part time. Standridge said the staff's salaries, with a few exceptions, were kept intact.

The department offset its reduction in patrol cars by increasing the number of officers patrolling on bicycles and on foot, Standridge said.

"The officers understand our circumstances," he said. "They have worked diligently to continue providing the highest level of services."

Standridge said he hopes the state's budget condition will soon improve so that DPS can further enhance its law enforcement and security programs.

"Any cuts in the public safety arena gives us some cause for concern," he said. "But we can endure this as part of an overall team effort."

Tempe creates review board for events

By DAN ZEIGER
STATE PRESS

Tempe has established a review committee designed to evaluate event applications for organizations wishing to acquire city sponsorship, a move that was made to relieve that burden from the City Council.

The Council last week unanimously approved the formation of the Tempe Sponsorship Review Board — just in time for it to begin the process of assessing applications for several events, including one from ASU.

"The City Council has been handling a number of requests for event sponsorship throughout the year," said Tempe management assistant Laura Kafetz, who prepared the plan to establish the committee. "We thought they were spending an inordinate amount of time on it, time that could be spent with other matters."

In the past, an organization wanting the city to sponsor an event filed a request with the City Council, and it was placed on the agenda for discussion, much like any other piece of legislation.

Tempe Vice Mayor Neil Giuliano said that not only did he and other councilmembers feel constantly inundated by sponsorship requests, he felt that the body was not able to make the most complete evaluations of groups vying for the city's support.

"What usually happened with these requests is that (the City Council) didn't get all of the information until the meeting," Giuliano said. "It's hard to make a decision to sponsor like that in such a short time. What (the committee) will do is set up a process where there'll be more time for an evaluation."

In the future, only appeals of review committee decisions will come before the City Council.

One of the events seeking sponsorship is the ASU Theater For Youth Festival, an entertainment celebration scheduled for May 1993 and staged by the ASU theater department. But theater department chairwoman Lin Wright said she will also seek private sponsorship for the festival.

The festival will feature theater groups, musicians and other entertainers from around the United States and other countries, and Wright also said that more than 9,000 children are expected to take part as well.

"I don't think that (the sponsorship committee) is tooled up to deal with an event of this size, but we're in the process of applying to it as well," Wright said.

The sponsorship review committee will comprise eight members, representing various Tempe-based organizations such as the Mill Avenue Merchants Association, Tempe Chamber of Commerce, Tempe Arts Commission and Tempe Sports Authority.

Councilman Joseph Lewis will represent the City Council, which has appropriated about $22,000 of its 1992-93 budget for the review committee.

than $13,000 in phone calls. All but Faulkner fulfilled the community service.

Then on Friday, it was learned that Marcell Capers, a junior college transfer from California, is wanted in that state for failing to pay a fine and serve jail time after he pleaded guilty to a petty-theft charge earlier this year.

Harris found it prudent to call a press conference and discuss what the department is doing about the rash of alleged criminal activity.

"We will always be sensitive to the rights of individuals and review each case on an individual basis," Harris said. "But the tolerance of antisocial behavior (does) not fit in this community.

"I expect, personally, to be affiliated with the kind of program that aspires to meet and exceed exemplary standards at every turn. The people, who will in the long run be a part of this program, must meet those kinds of standards."

Harris said he has called a meeting today with the entire head coaching staff "to review any and all of these issues."

Harris also said he will ask Milton Schroeder, chairman of the Intercollegiate Athletic Board, to join the athletic department to review every aspect of the relationship with student athletes. This will include recruitment, identification, advising and counseling.

"It's clear we have problems," Harris said. "No, I do not stand before you with all the answers, but I know there are many concerned and capable people who are willing to join with me in resolving the issues before us."

Harris pointed out that when he came to ASU eight years ago the Sun Devil athletic program "faced an equally troubling set of issues concerning infractions," and now, he said, "we face a new challenge."

"Without question from this day forward, my first priority (will be) issues of behavior, antisocial behavior and responsibility of the young men and women who represent this University," Harris said.

"This community deserves better, this University deserves better and the fine men and women who represent this University through the years deserve far better.

"This is not a great day for Arizona State University — this is another distraction. But for a great institution to achieve the goals and expectations it must have, we must be prepared to accept the distractions, (to) be candid about them, to work to rise above them to take us to the level that this institution can and should be.

"That is my goal. That is my first priority."

senator," Franco said, defending Wiener's absence from the inaugural Senate meeting last Tuesday.

"I feel sorry for (first-time) senators. They have no idea what's going on," said Franco, who is serving her first term as senator but has been previously involved with ASASU.

"We at ASASU are trying our best to get the bugs out and we hope (people) can be patient with us," she said.

Students of colleges with unfilled Senate seats should be concerned about their lack of representation in student government, Klinger said.

"We want to present as many sides of issues as we can, and when you have so many (senators) missing it's hard to hear new ideas," she said.

In addition to the vacant Senate seats in the Graduate College and College of Public Programs, both the College of Fine Arts and the College of Nursing are one senator short.

Rebecca Jones, college council coordinator, said the Senate seats ought to be filled by next Tuesday after meetings with the councils.

Early semester Senate resignations stem from a lack of "pre-information" that would warn senators just how time-consuming ASASU responsibilities are, Jones said.

"We bring in a lot of (first-time) senators who were in student government in high school," Jones said. "Student government in high school is a joke. They (senators) think the same thing: 'I can put this on my resume, meet new friends.' But they don't realize it really is a big responsibility."

A REPORT ON PUBLIC SAFETY AT ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

Corrected copy 8-18-92. Supersedes previous undated printing.

I. INTRODUCTION

This statement provides information to the campus community regarding public safety at ASU, highlighting ASU's strong commitment to crime awareness and campus security. Copies of referenced policies are available in many university offices, including the Department of Public Safety at the ASU Main and West Campuses ('ASU DPS'), the Office of Student Life, Undergraduate Admissions, the Department of Human Resources and the ASU Libraries. ASU currently has a variety of policies and procedures relating to campus security, and it expressly reserves the right to modify them or to adopt additional policies or procedures at any time without notice. All members of the campus community are encouraged to take responsibility for maintaining a secure campus environment by participating in crime prevention programs and by reporting all suspected criminal actions and emergencies.

II. CAMPUS LAW ENFORCEMENT

A. Peace Officers.

Officers of ASU DPS are peace officers of the State of Arizona empowered by state law with the same authority as any other state, county or municipal peace officer. (A.R.S. 1-215 (23))

B. Mutual Aid.

By agreement, the authority of officers of ASU DPS has been extended into the jurisdiction or territory of other law enforcement agencies in the area including the cities of Tempe, Scottsdale, Phoenix, Paradise Valley and Mesa, and Maricopa County either when assistance is requested by the other agency or when a situation or circumstance apparently requires immediate law enforcement, action which the ASU DPS officer would otherwise be authorized to take.

III. REPORTING OF CRIMINAL ACTIVITY

A. Report of Criminal Actions and Emergencies to Police.

1. ASU encourages students, employees and others to report all criminal actions and emergencies. To report criminal offenses, fires, medical or other emergencies to the Police Division of ASU DPS, callers can use emergency call boxes located throughout campus. These boxes are yellow with a blue light. The Police Division can also be reached by calling 965-3456 on the Main Campus and 543-3456 on the West Campus from either a commercial or campus telephone. Dialing 9-1-1 on a campus phone will also contact the Police Division. These calls are answered 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year. (Department of Public Safety Policies and Procedures Manual ("DPS-PPM") 101-01, DPS-PPM 101-02, DPS-PPM 203-02, DPS-PPM 203-03, DPS-PPM 203-04, DPS-PPM 203-05)

2. ASU DPS has established a "Campus Watch" program to assist any size group, however loosely organized, in taking the initiative to be alert to anything that may threaten the security of others on campus and to report suspicious activities to ASU DPS.

3. ASU DPS has initiated a campus Crime Zero program to provide a 24-hour hotline (965-TIPS) to receive reports of criminal or suspicious activity. Hotline callers may remain anonymous.

4. ASU DPS has established a full-time Crime Prevention Unit (965-2396 on the Main Campus and 543-3451 on the West Campus) in its Staff and Auxiliary Services Division to plan, coordinate and implement crime prevention presentations and services.

5. ASU DPS and the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs have developed procedures to instruct the Campus community on methods for handling disruptive individuals on campus. (STA 104-02)

B. ASU Response to Reports of Criminal Activity and Emergencies.

1. An ASU DPS peace officer will respond to reports of criminal activity on campus or on University property made to ASU DPS. The Tempe City Fire Department responds to reports of fire or medical emergencies on the Main Campus. The Phoenix Fire Department responds to reports from the West Campus. (DPS-PPM 101-01, DPS-PPM 101-02, DPS-PPM 101-06)

2. ASU also responds administratively if a reported criminal offense involves an ASU student or employee as either a victim or an alleged offender. ASU students and employees are subject to applicable ASU and Arizona Board of Regents conduct policies and disciplinary procedures. Sanctions may include suspension or expulsion for student offenders and termination of employment for employee offenders. (ABOR 5-301 to 5-404 (Student Code of Conduct), STA 104-01 (Student Code of Conduct))

3. ASU provides emergency medical treatment, counseling and relocation assistance to victims. ASU has developed a detailed protocol to provide appropriate assistance to victims of sexual assault. (STA 1002)

IV. CRIME AWARENESS AND PREVENTION

A. Programs to Inform Students and Employees About Campus Security and to Encourage Individual Responsibility for Security and Crime Prevention.

1. The ASU DPS Crime Prevention Unit conducts programs throughout the year to inform students and employees of security policies, procedures and practices. Additional crime prevention presentations are available upon request.

2. Residence Life sponsors and conducts safety and security programs in the residence halls throughout the year.

3. Timely reports are made available through ASU's News Bureau and the student newspaper, the State Press, advising students and employees of any known continuing threat to the security of the campus.

4. The Associated Students of Arizona State University sponsors a night escort service (965-1516) to accommodate the personal safety needs of students on the Main Campus. Police Aides and Officers provide the same service at ASU West. The safety escort service is an organized, professionally run program to provide safer movement across campus for students, faculty and staff. The service operates from 7:00 pm to midnight from any campus building to any on-campus location. ASU DPS performs background checks on all escort personnel. Escorts wear identifiable shirts, carry two-way radios and have Campus Security identification badges.

5. The Daily Police Log records all activity reported to ASU DPS and is available to the media and the public.

6. Upon request by an ASU department head, ASU DPS will conduct Crime Prevention Surveys of buildings and grounds including key control, proper lighting, shrubbery maintenance and security for alarms, doors, windows and skylights. (DPS-PPM 201-03)

7. ASU DPS will assist individuals in labeling personal property to deter theft and to aid in the recovery of stolen property through the Operation Identification Program. (DPS-PPM 201-01)

8. Access to student educational records is protected under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act ("FERPA"). Directory information such as a student's name, local and permanent address and phone number may not be released to anyone without the student's consent. If a student does not wish this directory information to be released, he or she must complete a form at the Registrar's Office Records information window or at a Registrar's site. To prevent publication of this information in the annual ASU Directory, these forms must be completed before the end of the third week of the fall semester. (STA 105-01 (Release of Student Information))

9. Access to and release of employee records are also governed by written policies. An employee who wishes to limit published directory information should contact the Human Resources Records Division. (SPP 1103, ACD 811.)

B. Security of and Access to ASU Facilities.

1. Under Arizona state law, any person who knowingly makes, duplicates, possesses or uses keys to University premises without authorization from ASU DPS is guilty of a misdemeanor. Additionally, the person responsible is subject to administrative discipline by ASU. (A.R.S. 13-3715) ASU DPS has authority for issuing keys, maintaining records and auditing to ensure compliance with the University's key control policy. All losses of ASU keys are to be reported to ASU DPS.

2. Residents are expected to comply with all residence hall and visitation policies, to use available security locks and are expected not to prop locked doors open or to allow entrance to non-residents and uninvited guests. Each hall desk is staffed with trained and experienced staff members. Information about security at individual residence halls is available through ASU's office of Residence Life. (STA 703-01 (Behavioral Guidelines for Students in Residence), STA 703-02 (Entering Student Rooms), STA 703-03 (Residence Hall Handbook Regulations))

3. Arizona State University provides a security design and construction document review during the planning and construction of all new facilities. (DPS-PPM 201-04)

4. All ASU students and employees are issued ASU identification cards and are encouraged to carry the cards while on campus. (SPP 308, STA 602-14)

5. ASU provides increased monitoring of those areas of the campus that house hazardous substances, student records and dangerous instruments, and other areas requiring heightened security.

C. Alcohol and Drug Policies.

Detailed information regarding the possession, use and distribution of drugs and alcohol is set forth in ASU's Drug-Free Schools and Campuses Act Statements, which is printed in the class schedule. Student Consumption of Alcohol and Alcohol Advertising, Sponsorship and Promotions are addressed in STA 106-03 and STA 106-04. ASU's policy regarding Permits to Serve Alcohol Beverages is set forth in DPS-PPM 202-02.

D. Report of Potential Threats to Campus Community.

ASU DPS promptly reports to the campus community serious security and safety conditions which are considered to be a particular threat to students and employees. The most serious conditions reported to the Department or to local police agencies are published in the State Press, "Crime Alert" and "Safety Tip" posters on display throughout the campus or are included in public presentation by officers and administrators to faculty, staff and students.

E. Weapons on Campus.

Possession or storage of weapons on campus, on University property or at a University sponsored activity is prohibited, except in limited circumstances as noted below. Possession, use or storage of weapons on on-campus student housing is also prohibited. Very limited exceptions to the prohibition of weapons on campus allow weapons to be maintained by certified law enforcement officers and authorized money escort or courier personnel and United States military personnel whose activities or assignments require the carrying of firearms. The use and possession of non-operational or model weapons that have the appearance of actual weapons or firearms are also subject to the approval of ASU DPS. Participants or attendees at public events or special events held on campus or at University facilities may be required to submit to security checks as a condition of entry at the discretion of ASU DPS. (DPS 201-05, ABOR 5-303.3)

Computers

Some students who use the computer sites for homework and class assignments are worried that the elimination of any sites will cause an overload of users during times of high demand.

"If they close down a couple of sites, that means I will have less places to go to and more people will be using them," said Michael Tress, a computer information systems senior. "I will be competing to use them during peak hours."

Tress said because he is a CIS major, most of his time is spent in the site doing homework. "I don't have a computer at home, so I have to use the computers here," he said.

But Bill Faranda, a doctoral student in marketing, said the closing of Hayden site or any other will not hinder his academic work.

"It probably will not affect me because I do not use any of the word processing programs," Faranda said.

Faranda said he uses the IBM system computers, less popular than the Macintosh computers, and usually doesn't have to wait to get on one.

Conrad said that he understands the difficulty students face when services are decreased, but that budget constraints and a need for better use of space made the closure a must.

"The library approached us with the idea that there might be a better use for the space at Hayden Library because it is a very small site," Conrad said. "We understand that it is an emotional (problem) for people."

DUI laws may face review

PHOENIX — The chairman of the state Judiciary Committee says it may be time to review Arizona's drunken-driving laws in the wake of recent traffic accidents that killed two young girls.

"If they're not working, we need to address that," state Sen. Chuck Blanchard, D-Phoenix, said Saturday. "The sad reality is, however, that no matter how much we do, no matter how many laws are passed, we're going to have individuals who continue with irresponsible behavior."

On Aug. 7, a used-car salesman who had numerous arrests for drunken driving ran a stop sign and caused a three-car accident that killed 5-year-old Maria Parra, Phoenix police said.

Authorities said Mark Thomas Brohl was driving on a suspended and revoked license at the time of the accident and told police he had been drinking most of the afternoon.

Brohl, 34, is in a Maricopa County jail charged with one count of manslaughter, seven counts of endangerment and six counts of aggravated assault stemming from the accident.

Police said records showed that Brohl had been convicted of driving under the influence at least nine times in Arizona, Colorado and California.

At Blanchard's request, Maricopa County Attorney Richard Romley is preparing a report on the Brohl case that may contain some suggestions on improving the system.

Meanwhile, a 3-year-old girl who was struck by a suspected drunken driver Thursday died Saturday at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center.

Paola Rachel Zelaya was being pushed in a stroller by her mother when she was struck as they crossed a street, police said.

Family slain in south Phoenix

Random killing stumps police; drugs, gangs don't seem likely

PHOENIX — Five people — apparently a Mexican immigrant family with two young children and a third unrelated child — were found gunned down in their junk-strewn yard and police Sunday were at a loss to explain the killings.

Detectives don't believe drugs or gangs were involved in the Saturday slayings, and there was no weapon on the scene to indicate a murder-suicide, Sgt. Kevin Robinson, a police spokesman, said Sunday.

"We're hoping to get lucky," Robinson said. "Normally you see something like this and people say drugs or gangs. There's no indication of anything like that."

Officers summoned to the poor neighborhood Saturday afternoon by a family friend found the bodies strewn about a dirt lot next to the home. There were a man and woman, two boys under age 18 and a girl of elementary school age, said Robinson, refusing to be more specific.

He said it wasn't clear when they were killed and declined to discuss the type of weapon apparently used. Autopsies were scheduled Sunday.

The home is in south Phoenix, generally considered a high-crime area, but Robinson said the specific neighborhood isn't particularly notorious for gangs or drug sales.

Neighbor Marta Vaquero identified the victims as Eloy Subia, his wife Librada, their daughter Alicia, 9, and their son Eloy Jr., 5. She did not know the fifth victim.

"They came from my area of Chihuahua," the Mexican immigrant told The Arizona Republic. "They've been to parties at our house, and we also visited them regularly."

"They were very good people," she said.

Robinson didn't dispute the identification, but said he couldn't release names until relatives had been notified.

As police technicians worked the scene Sunday, one neighbor said he'd heard shots early Saturday morning.

Dennis Pueppke said he and a friend were sitting outside their apartments about a block north when they heard seven shots from what sounded like a small-caliber gun. He thought it was about 4 a.m. but was unsure of the exact time.

"There were three spaced shots. Then four right in a row," Pueppke said. "It didn't sound like no big gun."

Robinson warned against attaching too much importance to gunshots: "Unfortunately, you hear them all the time."

Clinton unveils first TV ad

BY KAREN BALL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton on Sunday released his debut ad in the fall race, a spot that pushes his 12 years of "battling the odds" in Arkansas and pledges to create 8 million new jobs.

The 60-second advertisement, which will begin airing Monday in several targeted states, seeks to counter Republican attacks on Clinton's record in Arkansas. It also boasts various achievements in job growth, income rates and moving poor people from welfare to work.

Aside from the unveiling of Clinton's new ad, the Campaign '92 rhetoric was confined mostly to the television studio as Vice President Dan Quayle and Clinton's runningmate, Sen. Al Gore, argued over taxes.

Quayle continued a familiar Republican refrain, claiming that Clinton "is for raising taxes." Gore returned the fire, renewing Democratic accusations that the Republicans are distorting Clinton's record.

President Bush spent the day at his secluded Maryland mountaintop retreat where he attended chapel services and continued to keep track of hurricane recovery efforts in Florida and Louisiana.

Clinton's aides refused to say exactly which states were targeted for airing the candidate's first ad, saying they didn't want to tip the Republicans' hand in advance.

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director, defended the timing of putting the ads out the last week of August.

"You still watch TV at the beach," Stephanopoulos said, adding that the ad hit on Clinton's Arkansas record to counter Republicans who continue to "cast aspersions" on it.

The ad uses footage of flag-waving crowds found along the routes of Clinton-Gore bus tours, and urges viewers to join up.

"People are ready," says the ad. "They've had enough ... Enough of a government that just doesn't work," the ad says, promising that Clinton would take the country in a "new direction." "Those making over $200,000 a year have to pay more. The rest of us get a break," the commercial says, providing viewers with an address for obtaining a copy of Clinton's economic plan.

Stephanopoulos said the 8 million new jobs that would be created over four years — a new figure for the campaign — comes from government predictions of how much new employment would come from defense conversion, investment credits for businesses and investment in roads, bridges and other projects.

Clinton, in a brief chat with reporters after he attended church services in Little Rock, Ark., said he wasn't worried that the GOP charges would stick. He said that Bush and former President Reagan "presided over the biggest increase in domestic spending in peacetime history."

The Democratic nominee said Bush and Quayle knew that charges that he had raised taxes 128 times were untrue.

"Like they said, they know it's not true, but they do it because they think it works," Clinton told reporters. He said his state is in the bottom five of what percentage of income residents pay in taxes.

"This is not a high tax state. It's a low tax state. Why do you think people come down here to retire?" he asked.

PARIS (AP) - Brigitte Bardot has sued several European magazines for publishing intimate pictures of her that were taken during a Mediterranean cruise, her lawyer said Friday.

The retired actress, who spends most of the year at her secluded estate in Saint-Tropez, was photographed with a male friend lounging on board the yacht of Jean-Marie Le Pen, the leader of France's extreme right National Front party. Le Pen appears in one of the pictures.

Miss Bardot's lawyer, Gilles Dreyfus, said the former sex symbol-turned-animal rights crusader, instructed him to sue the magazines, including the French tabloid Voici, for $50,000 in damages.

Miss Bardot, who turns 58 in September, rarely appears in public, devoting her energy to raising funds for the animal foundation that bears her name.

Powers steps down as QB, eyes Ohio State; Rauer will be backup

Shocks Sun Devil football with announcement on Friday, gets AD's permission to be released

BY BRIAN CHARLES
STATE PRESS

ASU's backup quarterback Bret Powers quit the ASU football team on Friday and is seeking to use his talent elsewhere.

He is looking at Ohio State.

Powers, a 6-foot-5-inch, 220-pounder who started eight games last season, sat down with football coach Bruce Snyder on Friday, informed him of his decision and requested a release from ASU Director of Athletics Charles S. Harris so he could transfer schools.

Powers, who lost out the starting position to redshirt freshman Garrick McGee, said that the main reason for his decision was the fact that his playing time would be minimal this year.

Powers also stated that he has decided to transfer now in order to have time to apply at another school in time for classes.

"He felt that it was in his best interests to find someplace else to play football and go to school," Snyder said. "He is a bright and mature kid. I've admired him from day one and I wish him well in the future."

Powers has talked to OSU and, if all goes well, will enroll there next week.

Powers said that since Ohio has a senior quarterback and a redshirt freshman, he thinks his chances to play and compete are good, even though McGee, ASU's quarterback, is a redshirt freshman.

McGee was just as surprised as everyone else, stating that Powers gave no indication he was leaving the team after Thursday's practice.

"He was giving me advice about things to do like he always does," McGee said. "I'll really miss him, that's for sure."

"He's got the Pac-10 experience. He's been everywhere I'm getting ready to go."

McGee also said that he became close to Powers and understands the reason for his decision.

With Powers' decision, the Sun Devils are currently without a quarterback who has experience in a starter role; McGee now will have even more pressure on him as he faces the defending national champion No. 2 Washington in Sun Devil Stadium Saturday night.

In addition, backup quarterback Troy Rauer, who just last week was moved from QB to outside linebacker, was immediately moved back to his original position by Snyder.

If Powers is given the opportunity to transfer, he would have to sit this season out, but would be eligible for the 1993 season. Powers has already used his redshirt year, so he would have only one year at OSU.

Sun Devil Notes

ASU held another intersquad scrimmage Friday night, attempting to simulate "game day" as much as possible. The squads practiced the coin toss, and even went to the locker room at halftime.

McGee had a strong night at quarterback, as he threw for 146 yards and two touchdowns, ending the night at 10 for 17.

Tailback Mario Bates seems to have come off his injury, rushing for 93 yards on 12 carries and three touchdowns, while Jerone Davison rambled for 70 yards on 11 carries.

Split end Eric Guliford, recovering from an impacted wisdom tooth, also seems unaffected, catching three balls for 85 yards and one touchdown.

Snyder plans on using Rauer much more in the coming week in preparation for the Huskies, and will focus on working out a few kinks in the Sun Devil offensive attack.

Contributing to this article was the Associated Press.

Bret Powers, a junior quarterback, quit the football team on Friday. Powers, who started eight games for the Sun Devils last season, was chosen to be the back-up QB under redshirt freshman Garrick McGee.

ASU basketball woes continue

Capers suspended, has warrant

BY GREG SEXTON
STATE PRESS

If things continue as they have been for the past seven days, then the ASU men's basketball team might have to start Sparky, the Sun Devil mascot, as a small forward.

He probably can't shoot, and he's definitely 5-foot-nothing, but at least he'll be there. On Friday, yet another player was suspended from the team. This time it was Marcell Capers who bit the hardwood.

It was learned that Capers, a junior guard on the ASU hoops squad, is wanted in California after he failed to pay a fine and serve a stint in jail for pleading guilty on a petty-theft charge earlier this year.

Capers was suspended from games and practice for the 1992 fall academic semester, ASU Director of Athletics Charles S. Harris announced Friday.

"Marcell Capers' suspension is consistent with the way we will deal with conduct problems in our men's basketball program," Harris said.

With the suspension of Capers, it makes it the fourth Sun Devil that will not be on the team this fall. On Aug. 24, it was announced that Mario Bennett will miss 10 to 12 months after undergoing reconstructive knee surgery. Then, on Wednesday morning, Dwayne

ASU split end Eric Guliford crosses the goal-line in a inter-squad scrimmage held Friday night in Sun Devil Stadium.

TURN TO CAPERS, PAGE 18

Capers

Fontana was arrested on suspicion of allegedly sexually assaulting a 23-year-old woman at his Tempe apartment. The third domino fell when Jamal Faulkner was sentenced to 30 days in jail for failing to complete his court-ordered community service and for not meeting with his probation officer at the designated times.

Faulkner had completed his community service after the deadline, and his case will be reviewed this week. Faulkner was one of four basketball players who were charged with fraud for allegedly using an unauthorized University credit card to charge more than $13,000 in calls last fall.

Finally, the latest caper uncovered was the Capers incident. Capers, a juco transfer from the College of the Sequoias who enrolled at ASU last week, will have his situation reviewed by Harris on Dec. 9, the last day for fall classes at ASU. Until that time, however, he will not be allowed to practice with the team or participate in games.

"By Dec. 9, we expect Marcell to have his legal problems resolved," Harris said, "and I expect that his academic performance and his social behavior will be exemplary. If it is not, then he will face the consequences."

It was the right message for men's basketball coach Bill Frieder, who had a rocky road this past week, but he said he's prepared to make it clear that this is not the kind of behavior that will be tolerated in his program.

"If this is what it takes for my players to get the message, then this is the way it will be," Frieder said. "I'm aware that we have a problem, and this is how we deal with it."

At a news conference Friday, an angry Harris said this week has been rough "and this is not where we want to be," but Harris assured that the athletic program will be evaluated from top to bottom and then it will be determined when and if any changes will be made.

"The public has been rightly critical," Harris said. "There is no room for anti-social behavior on this campus. It will not be tolerated."

Basketball Note: James Bacon, a 6-foot-8 forward from Long Beach City College, has enrolled at ASU and will play for the Sun Devils this year, head coach Bill Frieder announced Saturday.

Bacon is a sophomore in terms of eligibility. Last year, he averaged 16 points and 10 rebounds per game at Long Beach C.C., where he played for one year and earned his AA degree this summer. He is a native of Los Angeles and a 1990 graduate of Dorsey High School.

"James is an important addition to our team," Frieder said. "That's especially true in light of Mario Bennett's (knee) injury. Obviously, we don't have a lot of depth inside, but he should give us a big lift in that area. I hope that he'll be able to step in and help right away."

Bret Powers quit the ASU football team Friday.

REACHING FOR THE STARS

ASU volleyball star Helfrich has goal of winning NCAAs

BY STEPHEN DEMORATZ
 STATE PRESS

Great things are expected this season from the the ASU women's volleyball team, and leading the team from the setter position is team captain Jennifer Helfrich.

Helfrich, a senior, leads the No. 24 Sun Devils both on and off the court by setting an example of what a true student athlete should be.

She is graduating with honors this May with an accounting degree, while maintaining a nearly perfect 3.98 GPA.

In the past two years, Helfrich has been a first team All-conference academic selection, and she was also named academic All-district and All-Pac-10 in 1990.

She plans to take the Certified Public Accounting exam in May, and hopefully work for one of the big-six national accounting firms after graduation.

"Volleyball is a lot like life," Helfrich said, "in that I have to depend upon myself.

"It (volleyball) is also like a microcosm of the business world," she said. "I have learned how to react and get along with other people who are different than me."

Helfrich has achieved two of her goals by earning the starting position at setter and being named team captain. Her goals for the '92 season are for the Sun Devils to finish in the top three of the Pac-10 and to advance past the first round of the NCAA tournament.

ASU is ranked sixth in the Pac-10, and the squad finished 20th nationally last year, but were not given an NCAA tournament berth.

Serving, setting and defensive blocking are what she considers the strengths of her game. And her stats show it. Helfrich was second on the team with 24 serving aces, and had a season high 31 sets against Pepperdine University.

"Jennifer is a self-made volleyball player," praises coach Patti Snyder.

Helfrich said the ingredients that are needed to be a successful volleyball player are discipline, strength, self-motivation and the desire to accomplish goals.

"Jennifer had a great spring," said Snyder, "and she really improved her sets to all areas of the court."

Helfrich said some of the highlights of her career were the sweeping of the two-game series last year against the UofA and the five-set loss to UCLA, the nation's top team, last year.

When away from the gym and the books, she enjoys to bike, water ski and play sand volleyball. She said she also is soon-to-be engaged after graduation.

Tuesday, Helfrich will join her teammates in opening the 1992 season by playing an exhibition volleyball game against an alumni team.

"It will be fun to play against the players that I have read about, and to play against old teammates," she said.

Darryl Webb/State Press
 ASU senior volleyball player Jennifer Helfrich will be leading the Sun Devil squad this season. Helfrich had 24 aces and in a single game she had 34 sets last season. The accounting major said her goal is to go the NCAAs.

The alumni match will feature the '92 team and the alumnae team with former Sun Devils Mindey Gowell and Debbie Penney. It will begin Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the University Activity Center, and there is no charge for admission.

Sir Charles talks: Lays down the Barkley law

PHOENIX — Unlike some U.S. teammates, Charles Barkley of the Phoenix Suns left the Olympics feeling rejuvenated.

"I would be really disappointed if I don't have a great season, because my expectations of myself are really high," Barkley told reporters Friday.

Barkley, who demanded to be traded by Philadelphia after a 35-victory season which left him feeling "in a funk," said he was excited by a chance to play with a ballhandler like Kevin Johnson of the Suns.

"I think I'm going to help him, and I think he's going to help me, because he's a true point guard. And like I said, I haven't played with one since Maurice Cheeks," Barkley said.

Cheeks' last season with the 76ers was 1988-89.

Barkley, in Phoenix to buy a house, also said he wasn't worried by polls which indicate Arizona voters again may be ready to reject a paid holiday honoring Martin Luther King.

Barkley reiterated that his two favorite black heroes are Malcolm X and King.

The issue failed in 1990 but is back on the ballot, and pollsters have said that respondents most likely to vote appear ready to defeat it again.

Barkley said it wouldn't change his liking for Arizona even if it were rejected again.

"You've got rednecks in Philadelphia and you've got rednecks in Arizona," he said. "I'm from Alabama, and I don't think Arizona is comparable to the South."

Michael Jordan of Chicago said this week that he didn't feel like attending training camp after a summer of training, practice games and the eight games in Barcelona.

But Barkley said playing with the Dream

Team helped him learn to love playing again.

"It gave me a new perspective," the outspoken player said. "The game is still fun. It's not that important, but it is fun."

Barkley said he could sympathize with Jordan. He said he wouldn't ask first-year coach Paul Westphal to let him out of training camp, but might try to beg out of two-a-day practices.

The 6-foot-6, 250-pound Barkley averaged 23.3 points and 11.6 rebounds per game during his eight years in Philadelphia.

He also led the Olympic team in scoring average (18.0), field-goal percentage and 3-point percentage. But he said he didn't expect any problems blending in with former All-Stars Johnson and Tom Chambers, or Dan Majerle, who made the West's honor team this year.

"That ego stuff is so overrated. If you all want to accomplish the same goal, you're going to get along with anybody," Barkley said.

Barkley, who played at more than 300 pounds during his freshman year at Auburn, said the best bonus from his Olympic experience might be the fact that he returned in playing shape.

His formula for losing weight includes two hard and fast rules — avoid alcohol and never eat after 7 p.m., he said.

Barkley said his message for Suns rookie Oliver Miller was to obey the two rules and grit his teeth during two crises — the start of any diet, and again after three to four weeks, when the body's ability to lose weight seems to bottom out.

Miller, a 6-8 center from Arkansas listed at 275 pounds, weighed 313 when he reported to the Suns after the draft and has been unable to avoid foot injuries because of his weight.

Syracuse builds for title

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Talk of Heisman trophies and national championships has returned to Syracuse.

But standing in the Orangemen's way is a grueling schedule that ends at home with defending national champion Miami. That's sobered expectations some, but done little to dim confidence in the Carrier Dome.

"If we come out of this, there's no question where Syracuse football will stand," said senior tailback David Walker, one of 15 starters returning from last year's 10-2 squad.

"This is the way I want to go out — playing against the best teams in the country, proving that you belong with the elite names of college football. We wouldn't want it any other way," said Walker, a co-captain.

Syracuse has been building, quietly, for national title contention for years. The Orangemen's 46-12-3 record, including 4-0-1 in bowl games, is the seventh-best in the nation over the past five seasons.

Syracuse, which won its only national title in 1959 behind the school's only Heisman winner, Ernie Davis, ended last season ranked No. 11 and starts this year at No. 10.

"It's good to be talked about as a top 10 team because those are the teams that win national championships," said junior quarterback Marvin Graves, who is returning for his third season as a starter. "But our situation has changed."

"We are no longer the hunter. We're the hunted. We have to stay consistent because everybody is going to be looking to beat us."

The Orangemen open Sept. 5 at East Carolina, which upset Syracuse 23-20 in the Carrier Dome last year en route to an 11-1 season and No. 9 ranking.

Syracuse then plays back-to-back home games with Texas and Ohio State. Syracuse also will play at Louisville on Oct. 3 and then finishes the season with games against the other seven Big East teams, climaxing with the Nov. 21 showdown against Miami.

With Graves, Walker, Qadry Ismail and Shelby Hill, Syracuse has proven big-play offensive stars. But the question is whether a retooled offensive line can give them the room to operate.

"Our front line is our biggest concern," coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "We have the fewest number of offensive linemen with any sort of experience that we have had in recent years."

Syracuse lost starting tackles Andrew Dees and John Capachione, as well as part-time starting guard John Nilsen, to graduation.

All-Big East guard Terrence Wisdom (6-foot-4, 296 pounds) is a solid returner, but where he plays depends on how the rest of the line shapes up. John Reagan (6-4, 275) returns at center and Jerry Sharpe (6-2, 289), a part-time starter in 1991, should hold down one guard spot.

But the other two starting jobs are up in the air. As the preseason ended, converted defensive tackle James Spencer (6-6, 274) and former tight end Melvin Tuten (6-6, 272) had moved ahead of veteran offensive linemen Chuck Bull and Kyle Adams.

Walker, who rushed for 969 yards and seven touchdowns last year, is the workhorse in the Syracuse running game. Junior Terry Richardson has breakaway abilities and averaged 4.2 yards per carry spelling Walker. Fullbacks Al Wooten, Brian Picucci and Marcus Lee all averaged around 4 yards per rush.

Doug Womack, who spelled Graves effectively last season as a rushing specialist, is expected to see action in both the offensive and defensive backfields.

Syracuse's passing game is styled around Graves, who is ranked among its all-time leaders in every passing category after playing just 21 games. Graves played through nagging injuries last season to complete 59.3 percent of his passes for 1,912 yards and 10 touchdowns.

Ismail leads one of the top receiving corps in college football.

Last year, the "Missile" moved out of the shadow of his famous brother, Raghieb "Rocket" Ismail, totaling 1,384 all-purpose yards and seven touchdowns. An All-America hurdler and sprinter in track, Ismail is being touted by the school as a candidate for the Heisman Trophy.

For Monday, August 31, 1992

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
Intuition brings you new career ideas, but it is not the best time to share them with others. You need to watch your sweet tooth now. Don't overindulge.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
Social life can be very worthwhile today. Don't waste precious moments with people whom you really don't care for. Be discriminating. Use time wisely.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
You are more attentive now about what needs to be done around the house than a family member's feelings. Remember to be considerate of others.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Be sure to capitalize on creative inspirations, which may evaporate unless you take note of them. Leisure hours are best spent with close ties.
LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
You cannot be faulted for those nice things you buy for the home. The pursuit of pleasure could lead to needless extravagance now. Watch your pennies.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Social life is very much to your liking, but a family member could feel left out in the cold. A special work may be needed. Creativity is a plus for you.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Try not to inadvertently reveal another's confidences. A small talk situation could be somewhat awkward. Enjoy time with family members tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
You will make a good impression just by being yourself. Don't feel the need to gild the lily. Group activities are favored today. Romance is favorable tonight.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Continue research on a career project. Make sure that others are truly interested before spouting forth on a subject. Know your audience. Don't be boastful.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
Your convictions are strong, but you need tact in expressing them. Try not to hurt someone's feelings today and avoid disputes about politics and religion.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
It may be hard to say no, especially when a monetary request is unreasonable. Safeguard your own financial security. Don't go out on a limb.
PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
It is not a good day for making important business progress. Accent leisure interests and enjoy relationships with close ties. Partnership matters are favored.
YOU BORN TODAY are good at promoting yourself and your ideas. You have more salesmanship abilities than the typical member of your sign. You work best when inspired and often are charismatic. At times, you can be fixed in your viewpoints and may need to learn to see the other fellow's point of view. Though you can succeed in business, you are usually happier in an artistic or professional career. Birthdate of: Roy Wilkins, civil rights leader; Shirley Booth, actress; and Raymond Massey, actor.
