Midyear cuts could hurt classes

BY S. TALBOTT SMITH
STATE PRESS

ASU President Lattie Coor said he is prepared to cut the number of class sections next semester if state legislators force mid-year revertsments on the University as they have eight out of the last 11 years.

"The consequences are more likely that we will be able to offer fewer sections (of classes) next semester," Coor said.

Although Coor did not know what sections might be cut, he said there is nothing left for the University to trim.

With past revertments and cuts, the University has protected academic areas, limiting cuts this year to just 4 percent.

"We are in a more precarious position this year than we have been in the past," Coor said. "The magnitude of the budget cuts we have taken has given us functionally no room to absorb additional cuts."

Coor said it is too early to predict whether the University will be subjected to revertments since they depend heavily on economic conditions in the state.

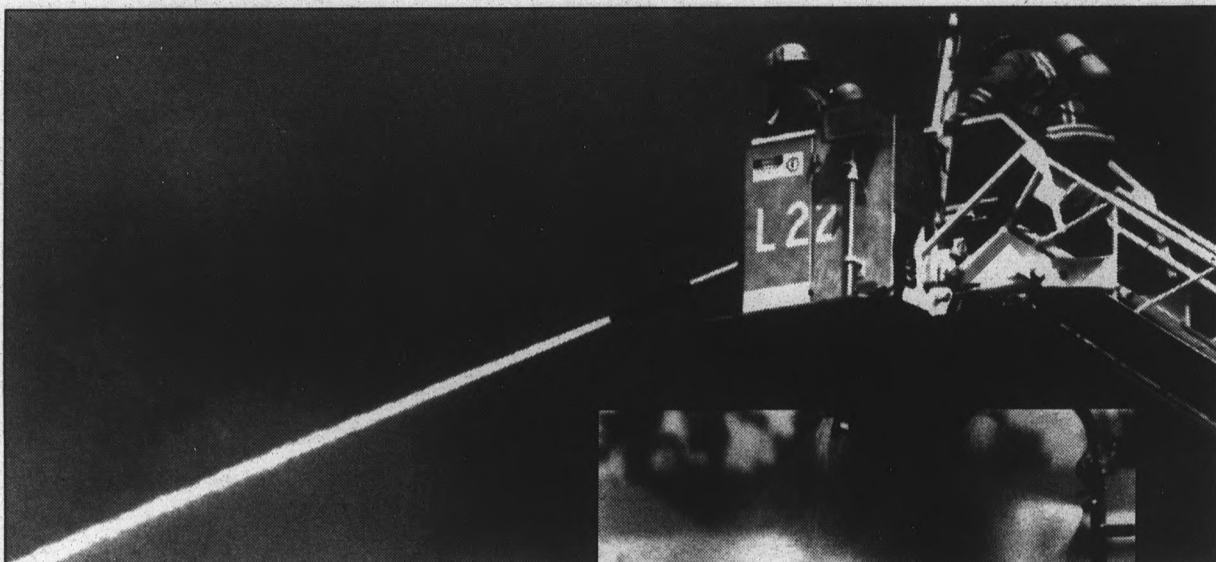

Last year, the state budget predicted about a 6 percent growth in revenues, but when the actual figure came out to 4 percent, the state had to ask for agencies like ASU to return, or "revert," money in order to keep a balanced state budget. ASU responded by laying off employees and cutting administrative and academic budgets.

Still, state officials contend that revertments are not as likely this year as they have been in the past because the state has used more conservative revenue estimates for this year's budget.

Ted Ferris, staff director of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee, said the current budget figures rely on an overall revenue growth of just over 3 percent. He added that sales tax revenues jumped an abnormal 12 percent in July, but need to average only 7 percent for overall revenue growth to hit its

McGaw stresses faculty unity

Should put 'substance' into participation

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

Now is the time for academic senators to assume greater responsibility and increase participation in issues involving the faculty, said ASU Academic Senate President Dickinson McGaw at this year's inaugural Senate meeting Monday.

"I think in the last two or three years with (ASU) President (Lattie) Coor here, we had a glasnost in terms of openness and participation," McGaw said to the nearly 100 senators in attendance. "I think we should take this opportunity to put substance into these forms with participation."

McGaw said Senate members have increasingly been serving on more campus committees. Currently, the Senate has representation on the President's Cabinet, University Finance and Budget Council and the Council of Deans. Every year the Senate is gaining more access to the positions where decisions are made, McGaw said.

"By working as a group with the Arizona Faculties Council, in talking to the Legislature, being represented on the Board of Regents and having talks with the governor's office, I think we will become a very important vehicle for faculty and academic representation," McGaw said.

McGaw also said that this summer the Academic Senate received non-voting representation on the Board of Regents.

"This is a very important gain in faculty government,"

McGaw said. "Even though we don't have the vote, we have the power to persuade, which is the most important power of all."

The past two years, the Academic Senate has attempted to gain voting representation on the Board of Regents. Two years ago, the proposal was approved by both the House and Senate, but the governor did not sign the bill. Last year, the bill was passed by the Senate but not brought to hearing in the House.

McGaw said he believes it is the Senate's responsibility to identify and respond to the problems relating to the University. He said the issues of health insurance, faculty workload and faculty compensation are issues that trouble the faculty today.

"There is no issue that has enraged faculty more than health insurance," McGaw said. "We have changed carriers, we have changed coverages and the costs have increased."

He said he will refer the problem to the Financial Affairs Committee, which will have a subcommittee on health insurance, to investigate the matter. The committee will investigate the state's procedures by which health insurance was determined.

The committee will also hold a number of hearings that will allow members of the University community to discuss the past problems they have had with health insurance.

McGaw said that now it is up to the Senate representatives to advance the issues that determine the quality of life for faculty at ASU.

"It brings the ball back into our court," he said. "You are all senators representing people in your department. You have the responsibility to represent the interests of those people."

Student recalls effort of murder victim

BY CAROL ANN HANSEN
STATE PRESS

As police continue to investigate the baffling mass murder of a Mexican immigrant family in south Phoenix Monday, an ASU student recalled the desire of one of the victims to learn the English language.

Raquel Aldana, a senior English/Spanish major, said two years ago Librada Zubia attended the English as a Second Language classes that she instructs.

"She struggled but she was very dedicated," Aldana said. "She spoke with me about two weeks ago about getting back into the program."

But Zubia did not have a chance to resume her studies. On Saturday she and four members of her family were found slain in their secluded backyard in an impoverished neighborhood in south Phoenix.

Sgt. Keith Robinson of the Phoenix Police Department said investigators do not believe that drugs or gangs were involved in the slayings, and no weapon was recovered at the scene to indicate a murder-suicide.

Police identified the victims as Eloy Thomas Zubia, 28; his wife Librada, 30; their daughter Rocio Alicia, 9; and their son Eloy Alberto Jr., 6. The fifth victim was identified as Gabriel Hernandez, 19, who was Librada Zubia's brother.

Aldana said the deceased woman, who always brought her little boy along with her to the ESL classes, had mentioned that she was afraid of being alone in the secluded house on the southeast corner of Baseline

Insurance deadline nears

Sept. 8 ends registration for student health policies

By CHRIS DRISCOLL
STATE PRESS

VOLLEN

With the deadline to buy student health insurance only a week away, ASU health officials warned Monday that uninsured students are risking personal calamity.

"We have at least two dozen (cases) on file from just the last few months of students who couldn't get surgery and of students who end up in the hospital with huge bills because they were never able to go as an outpatient to get their tests because they had no insurance," said Dr. Laurie Vollen, director of the Student Health Center.

Dr. Joanne Hirsch, chief of medicine at the center, said she has seen many cases where students couldn't get necessary medical care because they lacked insurance.

"We are trying to tally up some statistics on how often not having insurance affects students," she said. "It's more anecdotal at this point, but we've had a lot of students that need work-ups, they need tests."

"They have, for example, chronic stomach problems, they need an upper GI (gastrointestinal) series (of tests), and they can't afford to get it done. They have no insurance. So you go ahead and do the best you can treating it, but again, you don't have a definite diagnosis."

Hirsch said she has seen students who couldn't get necessary surgery, and others who had to drop out of school and go to work full time to pay for treatment of such diseases as cancer because they didn't have health insurance.

"For the patient who is very sick, for example, the patient who needs surgery there really isn't much you can do," Hirsch said. "You can try some physical therapy but that's not free either."

Kris Timmons, a 1991 ASU graduate who now works as a journalist in the West Valley, said her lack of insurance in 1986, her freshman year, became a major problem when she was stricken with appendicitis.

"I had moved down here from Canada, I was 18, and for the first time in my life I was independent. I had never been sick a day in my life. And all of a sudden on Sept. 26, I ended up in the hospital."

She was able to get on the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System after her operation, but it only covers 24 hours retroactively, so she was stuck paying a large portion of the bill, including almost all the cost of the surgery.

She said it was then that she realized how good she had it back in Canada, where national health insurance would have paid the entire bill.

"About 20 percent of our student population probably is completely uninsured," Vollen said.

Many students think they are insured by their parents or places of work when they are not, she said. Then they get sick and discover they are not covered.

She said some students also run into trouble when they buy private insurance policies with high deductibles or other inadequacies in the coverage.

Sept. 8 is the last day students can buy student health insurance from Blue Cross/Blue Shield, the carrier affiliated with ASU, said Anna-Marie Shivers of the health center's insurance office.

She said the insurance costs $262 this semester and it is retroactive, covering from Aug. 16, 1992, to Jan. 15, 1993.

Hirsch said she would urge all students to avoid the potential of future problems by getting some type of health insurance now.

Navy supply ships dock at Andrew-battered Miami

ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

MIAMI — Navy ships arrived in Miami on Monday with heavy-duty relief supplies, carpenters and electricians, as the governor increased the estimate of homes ruined by Hurricane Andrew to 85,000.

The Army's long-promised tent cities began going up, free buses rolled through jammed rush-hour traffic and authorities lifted their order to boil drinking water in the northern half of Dade County.

Health fears remained as uncollected garbage rotted in the open air, mosquitoes swarmed over the soggy ground, and about 150,000 people remained without adequate shelter a week after Andrew smashed through South Florida.

Adding to the chaos on Monday, the Florida Supreme Court in Tallahassee said the results of the rest of the state's voting in Tuesday's primary cannot be sealed. The election is being delayed a week in Dade County, and some candidates hoped to keep secret any results that could affect that voting.

More than 100 tents arrived about midnight, and Monday about 450 Marines had begun setting them up at a first site in Homestead. The military didn't know when people would be able to move in, saying that would be handled by city authorities.

"We're going to build more," said Marine Capt. John Hull. "This is the first one."

He said enough tents had been brought in to house 5,000 people, including 1,500 at the Homestead site.

The USS Sierra, a destroyer tender from Charleston, S.C., carrying 15 tons of tools and a crew of 1,000, tied up at Bicentennial Park at 9:45 a.m. The USS Opportune arrived half an hour later. Two other Navy ships were expected later in the day, and a fifth was expected by today.

The ships were carrying 2,000 tons of relief supplies, including frozen, chilled and dried food, helicopters, construction vehicles, portable water tanks, generators, welding equipment, lumber, linen, heavy plastics, tools and an amphibious construction battalion of 120 people.

U.N. weapons experts arrive in Baghdad

Inspection of nuclear sites to begin today

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.N. weapons experts arrived Monday for their first inspections since the U.S.-led allies set up a southern no-fly zone to protect Iraqi Shiite Muslim rebels.

Italian team leader Maurizio Zifferero said inspection of nuclear sites would begin today. He said he did not expect fallout from the allies' quarrel with Baghdad.

Fourteen chemical experts also traveled to Iraq to join a team preparing to destroy 40,000 chemical weapons at the Muthana facility outside Baghdad, said Doug Englund, regional chief of the U.N. inspection operation in Bahrain.

U.S. and British warplanes are flying more than 100 missions a day to prevent Iraqi military and civilian aircraft from flying below the 32nd parallel.

Four French Mirage 2000 planes were flying Tuesday to Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, to join the patrols, said Gen. Vincent Lanata, chief of staff of the French air force. Other Mirages will join the patrols later, he said.

The Pentagon has given no cost assessment for its part in the mission. At a news conference Sunday, Lt. Gen. Michael A. Nelson, commander of U.S. forces in the gulf, said he didn't know how much Operation Southern Watch was costing.

Saddam Hussein issued a blistering statement over state radio and TV Sunday, urging Iraqis to prepare to resist the flight ban.

He threatened "to reject the bold aggression and confront it with all means available and on all levels." He gave no specifics.

The official Iraqi News Agency said Saddam presided over a meeting Monday of members of the military council of Iraq's ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party. It gave no details.

Travelers from Iraq arriving Monday in Amman, Jordan's capital, said the party had reopened recruiting and training centers throughout Iraq.

It appeared Saddam was mobilizing the paramilitary Popular Army that was assembled after Iraq invaded Kuwait in August 1990, and disbanded after the U.S.-led coalition drove out the Iraqi occupiers and a cease-fire was declared.

Dozens of Soviet-designed T-72 tanks were sent south from Baghdad in recent days, said the travelers, who spoke on condition of not being identified. Most were deployed in Kut, 100 miles south of Baghdad.

That suggested Saddam was boosting defenses around the capital to protect his regime, rather than building up for a ground campaign against the Shiite rebels south of the 32nd parallel.

In New York, U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said U.N. workers were placed on maximum alert after a bomb was found attached to the car of three U.N. guards after they crossed into northern Iraq on Friday.

Grenade kills 1 at Sarajevo funeral

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A grenade slammed into a funeral at a Sarajevo cemetery Monday, killing one person, while continued fighting in Gorazde kept U.N. officials from sending an aid convoy to the city.

In Belgrade, nationalist deputies in Serbia's federal parliament demanded a no-confidence vote against the government of Yugoslav Premier Milan Panic. In their strongest challenge to Panic yet, they accused him of overstepping his authority at last week's London peace conference.

And the U.N. Human Rights Commission's special envoy to former Yugoslavia submitted a damning report in Geneva that blamed Serb forces for the worst human rights violations in the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The report, by former Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, urged the creation of an international commission to investigate war crimes.

The attack at Sarajevo's Lions Cemetery was the second in a month on mourners burying their dead there. In early August, an elderly woman was seriously wounded while burying her baby granddaughter, killed when a children's convoy was fired on.

The grenade Monday morning hit during a soldier's funeral. One person was killed and three injured.

Waiting 'till they hatch

The governor's office is promising that it will take no money away from ASU come December.

ASU officials are skeptical and with good reason.

For eight out of the last eleven years, mid-year revertments in the budget have forced scrambling between semesters to soften the blow, usually ending up in the elimination of services and benefits to students.

Sure those hurt, but the University was able to take the pain and go on.

Then last year budget cuts and revertments hit people where they work.

One hundred and sixty-two classified staff and administrators were laid off, according to a report to the Academic Senate by its president, Dickinson McGaw.

A revertment this year would mean cuts in ASU's only sacred cow.

ASU President Lattie Coor said that there was nothing more to cut except classes if the state asks for funds back in December.

Classes for which students would have already signed up and paid.

Classes students would have expected to use to graduate.

Classes that would not be there for the spring 1993 term.

No doubt contingency plans are in the works in preparation for the revertment.

Plans to implement the results of anymore budget cuts.

Fewer class sections.

More students in each class section.

More pressure on the faculty to instruct the increasing number of students in each class section.

Less personal contact.

Less critical thinking in favor of rote memory.

Less of a chance in generating interest and drive from students in a class.

Less learning.

State officials say revenue projections have been overly optimistic and this year's budget is based more soundly and firmly in reality.

Of course while income projections have been inflated, ASU has had to deflate its planned needs, which have led to very realistic consequences — especially to those who are now former ASU employees.

Gov. Fife Symington has said time and time again that education is one of his top priorities.

When the belt tightens this year, Symington has a chance to put his money where the students are.

Arizona can't fall for this 3 times

It seems like deja vu.

A man with vague solutions to the nation's problems and the promise that he will be in touch with and serve "the people" is drafted reluctantly into a political race.

A man who is prone to making offensive comments to crowds of mixed races is put forth as a candidate by mostly older, conservative whites.

When Evan Mecham was governor of this state, he was a national joke.

He hit the network news time and time again with quotes defending the use of the word "pickaninny" to describe black children.

He was a sitting target for Phil Donahue, who probably spent the morning of the show giggling in anticipation of being let loose on this inept politician.

He sat on the hot seat of "Nightline" as Ted Koppel grilled him on his rescinding of a Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

His impeachment hearings were highly publicized and kept national focus on Arizona as we suffered through the scandals and mistakes of Rose Mofford, Charles Keating, Dennis DeConcini, John McCain and, most recently, the Department of Corrections in its handling of Danny Ray Horning's escape.

But even while the nation was chuckling about the state, a national version of Mecham sprung forth.

The similarities between H. Ross Perot, who still claims 1 percent of the popular vote in opinion polls, and Mecham are too eerie to ignore no matter how soothing it may be to do so.

"I am more concerned for the people of this nation than I ever have been before."

"I made this decision because it's the only chance we have to solve the government's problems and forge a new agenda."

Those comments were made by Mecham during his Wednesday speech announcing his U.S. Senate candidacy, but they sound as if they could have easily been lifted from Perot's speech when he announced he was no longer an unofficial candidate.

Both men are against Bush's interventionist foreign policy. "A United Nations declaration is no substitute and does not supersede the Constitution," said Mecham, calling the Gulf War an illegal act by Bush.

Perot said of the war, "It was not an effective operation." He also constantly berated Bush not giving sanctions more time to work. "Who does the dirty fighting? The sons and daughters of ordinary people do."

Speaking of people, Perot got in hot water while speaking to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, when he said economic hard times affect "you people" and "your people" first.

And just like Mecham after the "pickaninny" incident, Perot had no idea why his remarks were offensive.

But even through all of Perot's gaffs and miscues, he had a strong base of support until he dropped out, and even afterward.

And even with all his miscues, car bumpers still boasted "Ev was right" stickers after he was impeached.

Perot blinded the nation by offering a lot of rhetoric calculated to ignite passion.

He offered to give power back to the people, but his campaign made the argument that maybe the people aren't ready for power.

Now that the former governor wants to try his hand at legislation, Mecham is offering the same brand of populist rhetoric while attacking incumbent John McCain.

McCain doesn't care about reports of prisoners of war still trapped in Vietnam, doesn't care about the federal deficit and doesn't care about taxpayers' dollars being used in foreign aid programs, according to Mecham.

Although some serious consideration should be given to McCain losing his job after this term, Mecham's re-entry pretty much cements the incumbent's return to office.

Democratic candidates Claire Sargent and Truman Spangrud are going to have to vie for media coverage with the outspoken former used car salesman with the bad toupee.

Voters, struck with anti-incumbent fever and hungry for a change, will resign themselves to reinstate McCain, rather than risk splitting the vote and landing Mecham in D.C.

And that's assuming they are made aware of Sargent and Spangrud before November.

It's safe to say Arizonans have learned their lesson, but if by some fluke Mecham gets his turn on Capitol Hill, the rest of the country should be a little more understanding of how a population could be so blind.

Industrial fire sparks evacuation

By CAROL ANN HANSEN
STATE PRESS

A four-alarm blaze in a south Phoenix industrial plant forced the evacuation of more than 1,000 people from neighboring schools and businesses Monday afternoon.

Phoenix Fire Department spokesman Doug Tucker said the fire began at Quality Printed Circuits, 1831 S. Central Ave., at around 11:26 a.m. When firefighters arrived on the scene, they ordered the closure of nearby streets and the evacuation of homes and businesses within a half mile of the area.

Tucker said firefighters feared that the smoke from the fire contained hazardous chemicals because the plant, which manufactures computer circuit boards, has stores of lead and cyanide.

Among those who evacuated the scene were plant workers, area residents, employees of nearby businesses and children attending two area schools. Tucker said no injuries were reported.

Phoenix firefighters stand by in case thier help is needed again.

People were allowed to return to the area after 16 engine companies and an allied hazardous waste team extinguished the blaze around 2 p.m.

Tucker said the source of the fire was an electrical short in the air-scrubbing system located in the plant's attic.

The fire caused an estimated $2.5 million in damage.

White flies infest campus

By Vicki Culver
STATE PRESS

The other day when Carolyn Fruth stepped outside her house she wondered how it could be snowing while the temperature was 100 degrees.

Then she looked closer at the white particles drifting around her and found that they were not snowflakes at all, but rather, little white flies swarming in the air by the thousand.

"When I was laying out in the sun, they all stuck to me," said Fruth, who noticed that the insects were particularly thick while she was on Hayden Lawn for a Valley National Bank promotion Monday.

The insects, called white flies, feed off plant sap. They are harmless to humans and animals, said Stan Faeth, professor of zoology and specialist in insect ecology at ASU.

Faeth said the insects, which make an appearance every year at this time due to the humidity and rain, are at their peak this week, adding that people can look forward to seeing their decline within two weeks as they start to die off.

"(They are here) because of late summer rains as well as a proliferation in vegetation," Faeth said. "They will go away eventually.

Until then, just scrape them off your cheek and tolerate them."

The most harmful aspect of white flies is the eating damage they could do to vegetation, Faeth said. To keep them off household and outdoor plants, he suggested squirting the foliage with water frequently.

They could also pose a problem if they were to get into someone's eye, possibly causing infection if the insects are not removed," Faeth added.

"Any kind of organic material in the eye can be irritating," he said. "The best advice is if it gets in your eye, get it out and if it still causes a problem, go to a doctor."

ASU sophomore history major Chris Jaap said his biggest concern is the number of white flies he is taking into his system.

"I am trying to hold my breath as I walk from one end of the campus to the other," Jaap said. "I have sort of a paranoia of inhaling them."

However, Faeth said inhaling white flies does not pose any sort of health threat to individuals.

"If people swallow a few, it's not going to bother them," he said. "In fact, they are probably very high in nutrition."

Regents add 2 requests to cover past cuts

BY NATALIE YOUNG
STATE PRESS

In an effort to bridge the gap between the previous years' lack of funding and next year's additional spending needs, the Arizona Board of Regents has added two funding requests to the fiscal year 1993-94 budget proposal.

The board and the state's three university presidents agreed to include a 5 percent increase on top of the continuing service base budget, and another 3.9 percent increase to fund a critical issues component. When the two additional requests are added to the CSB for fiscal year 1993-94, it would mean a 15.1 percent increase over the this year's base.

According to the board, the increases are needed to compensate for previous years' budget cuts and is necessary to protect the current status of the three universities. While the state may consider the increases in the budget impossible to fund, the boardmembers said they feel it is important to mention the areas that would go unfunded if only the bare minimum request was granted.

Regents President Andy Hurwitz said it's hard to predict just what will happen if the universities continue to go unfunded, but "the absence will lead to a continuing brain drain of faculty."

ASU President Lattie Coor has prioritized the areas that would receive the additional funding if the state is generous in appropriations to the University.

Topping Coor's list for funding are the unopened buildings on campus including the Computer Commons, the life science addition and certain floors of the Barry Goldwater Center for Science and Engineering. Also high on his list is funding to fill staff vacancies. Both of these priority funding areas will be requested as a part of the continuing services base portion of the total budget proposal.

In addition to the CSB portion of the budget, Coor has outlined a set of funding requests that fall under the category of critical issues:

- a faculty and staff salary increase of 4 percent (in addition to any increase that may be automatically granted by the state).
- an increase in the number of classes in undergraduate education core instruction.

- completion of the next phase of engineering excellence.
- an increase in the number of high-demand upper division courses that are needed for graduation.
- additional sections for research and economic development.

- an increase in cultural diversity program funding.
- acquisition of ASU III.
- $3.9 million for final payment to equalize funding between ASU and the University of Arizona.

Coor admitted that the chances of receiving the total budget request are slim, but he says he has "a profound hope that, given the responsibility that ASU has to education, we will be able to manage without deleting student programs."

Coor also expressed the need for the ASU community to understand that the budget crisis is not the end of the road and that there are other options to explore to solidify the necessary funding.

Budget Cuts

projected figure of 3 percent.

Ferris said there is "a long way to go" before the state can determine if the sales tax revenue increases are indicative of a trend. Sales taxes make up 40 percent of state revenue, he said.

He also said budget shortfalls in the past have ranged from $50 million to $150 million, the largest shortfall occurring last year. He noted the state budget has allowed only $10 million to cover any shortfalls this year.

Gov. Fife Symington's press secretary, Doug Cole, said past revertsments have been the fault of "too optimistic" revenue predictions from the JLBC. Cole said the budget this year relies on more conservative figures supplied by Symington's office.

Ferris said there are "a hundred other reasons" besides revenue predictions that cause mid-year revertsments.

"There are factors that are out of our control," he said.

District 27 Republican State Rep. Gary Richardson also said past revenue predictions have been too optimistic.

"There needs to be truth in forecasting," he said. "The budget for the year we're in now is a much more sensible and much more truthful budget than what we've had before."

"We have to use more believable numbers. They're much more accurate than last year."

The University will have to wait until sometime in December to find out whether revertsments will be necessary again this year. In the meantime, students wait for the class sections to fall.

Business and marketing junior Lisa Bronick said she is already frustrated with the few available sections of classes she needs. Just this semester Bronick said she was shut out of a math class she needed.

"They're taking our education away from us," she said. "If there are cuts in the number of sections, I would oppose it totally, even outside of the business college."

Bronick added that if sections are dropped and it inhibits her degree goals, she would consider attending another school to finish her education.

As a way to save money for state programs, such as education, Richardson said he favors incarcerating drunk drivers in tents.

"If those tents were good enough for the people in Desert Storm in Saudi Arabia where it's also hot, by golly, it's good enough for the people who can't learn to drive without drinking. We ought to think more of our students than we think of drunk drivers."

"We need to draw the line in the sand and say, 'This is it folks. We need to put our priorities in education.'"

Road and Seventh Street.

"I have no idea what happened," Aldana said. "All I know is that all of the neighbors are shocked."

Aldana said she thinks the mass slaying "looks like a professional job."

Robinson said police have not found the murder weapon and have no suspects in the slayings.

Robinson said because of the intricacy of the case, his department is not releasing many details on the murders. The Maricopa County Medical Examiner's office, which performed autopsies on the bodies Sunday, would not release any information.

Defense begins in AzScam trial

PHOENIX (AP) — Former state Sen. Carolyn Walker began her defense in the AzScam case Monday with witnesses portraying Walker as a compassionate lawmaker who may have been victimized by a vague campaign-finance law.

On Tuesday, the defense will attack the prosecution's case by calling the state's witness — police undercover operative Joseph Stedino. "That's going to take a while," said defense attorney Rick Miller.

Of seven sitting state legislators charged in the political corruption sting, Walker, a Phoenix Democrat, is the only one to fight the case in court.

She's charged with nine felonies, including bribery and conspiracy, for taking money from Stedino, who posed as a crooked lobbyist for gambling and other interests and passed out thousands of dollars in cash.

She was expelled from the state Senate after being charged with taking close to $26,000 in bribes from Stedino. Her case is being tried with former bail bondsman Ronald Tapp, whose attorney will present his case following Walker's. Walker has maintained that the money taken from Stedino was a gift and shouldn't be considered a bribe because she supported legalized gambling.

Testifying for the defense, Amy Wainright, a former lawyer for Senate Democrats, said Walker approached her in 1988 about drafting two bills that would legalize gambling in a section of Bullhead City and allow slot machines for charities.

"She said she had a way to solve the state budget deficit," Wainright testified. "(She said) we are going to legalize casino gambling. Her concern was that tax dollars were going across the border to Nevada." Wainright said Walker was excited about the idea.

"She told me this was the way of the future," Wainright said. "This was going to be the financial solution, and she was going to be the person taking credit for saving all these programs."

"Wainright said Walker's legislation was resurrected in 1989 and 1990 in some form, but it never got to the floor for a vote. She said Walker also was instrumental in pushing laws on domestic violence and rape, as well as a holiday for Martin Luther King Jr.

Also testifying for the defense was former state Rep. Bill Stephens. Stephens, an attorney, said that Walker sought his advice on how to properly deal with a "substantial amount" of money Stedino had given her.

CAPE MAY, N.J. (AP) — You've heard the one about selling seashells down at the seashore.

In this New Jersey coastal town, a favorite summertime sport is clamshell chucking, where the object of the game is to lob a clamshell into a hole 25.5 feet away.

About 90 people tossed shells Sunday at the 47th Annual Clamshell Pitching Championships, held by the Clamshell Pitching Club of Cape May.

"This is a game we play all summer long on the beaches," said club president Rich Reinhart. "It's a great sport. We throw for awhile, go into the water, look for other shells and watch the girls."

The first person to acquire 21 points by getting the shell into the hole wins.

The club handed out men's, women's, men's doubles and women's doubles titles, but Reinhart said the mixed doubles championships will be finished Monday. Play had to be halted Sunday because the tide came in.

ASU swimmers return from Olympics without gold, but full of fond Barcelona memories

BY LISA I. KRANZ
STATE PRESS

While many of us caught the 1992 summer Olympics on television this summer and watched the world's best athletes gather in Barcelona, seven men on ASU's swim team were there living the dream and achieving the goal.

The Sun Devil swimmers don't even mind that no medals were captured. They said they are rich just from the experience and feel honored to have represented their home countries of Brazil, New Zealand and France.

"To the general public," said ASU men's swimming coach Ron Johnson, "if you don't win a medal it hasn't been a success for you.

"But just to make it to the Olympics and be one of the select few is the most fabulous experience. It's an amazingly energetic deal," he said.

"(To make it to the Olympics) there's a lot of sacrifice," said junior backstroker David Holderbach, who competed for the French team. "But it's worth it."

For the Brazilian team, ASU was well-represented with what Johnson calls his "Brazilian Connection."

Sun Devils Eduardo Piccinini, Renato Ramalho, Emmanuel Nascimento and Christiano Michelena were four of just nine swimmers competing for Brazil.

"All the Brazilians swam quite well at the games," Johnson said. "Both Michelena and Nascimento made finals in two relays and swam their lifetime best times."

Additionally, Johnson said Piccinini swam his lifetime best in both the 100- and 200-meter butterfly, and made the consolation finals in the 200 fly.

"Renalto equalled his best time in the 400 individual medley. We're very proud of all those guys," he added.

A glimpse at the competitors' schedule showed preliminaries in the morning from which the top eight swimmers advanced to the "A" final, all eligible for the gold, silver or bronze. The next best eight went to the "B" finals to place between ninth and sixteenth.

"It was a great meet for me," Piccinini said. "I was very happy. It was my first Olympics and I think I did pretty good," the freshman Piccinini said. He dropped three seconds off his best time in the men's 200-meter butterfly.

Ramalho would have made the finals meet in the men's 200 individual medley had he reached the wall two seconds faster. Nascimento took sixth and seventh place respectively, when he swam the men's 4 X 100- and 4 X 200-meter relays for Brazil, and was 23rd in the men's 100-meter freestyle.

"Overall, I had a great meet," Nascimento said.

Holderbach and New Zealand's Simon Percy were not as happy with their finishes. Holderbach said there were plenty of reasons why his best finish turned out to be 22nd place, "but I need to take a step back and try to learn from that," he said.

Percy attributes a "disappointing" 29th finish to not

ASU offense: 'A touch of violence'

Sun Devil offense line loaded and ready to go

BY BRIAN CHARLES
STATE PRESS

When training began last spring for the Sun Devils, there was no doubt that the biggest question mark was the offensive line.

With the graduation of three starters and the installation of a completely new system, it was clear that ASU coach Bruce Snyder and his staff had their work cut out for them.

With spring training and Camp Tontozona here and gone, Snyder has had a look at the line and the questions stemming from it. This probably figured into his decision to start redshirt frosh Garrick McGee at quarterback.

If there was one section of the squad whose positions were up for grabs, it was in the offensive line.

With the new system, athletes with the ability to run and pass block, as well as open holes for the running backs had to step up immediately.

"Without a doubt, pass-blocking and offensive line work are the hardest skills," Snyder said. "That is the main reason why we spend so much time on it. We are not quite where we want to be yet, but we are getting close."

Nevertheless, the starting offensive line will be expected to perform immediately. Looking to lead the line will be junior center Toby Mills, an All-Pac-10 honorable mention last year.

Mills, 6-foot-3, 270 pounds, has started every game since the seventh game of his freshman year. He uses his quickness and power to excel in both run and pass blocking.

"(Offensive line coach) Cozzetto is carrying out Snyder's philosophies, teaching us how to come off the ball with a 'touch of violence,'" Mills said. "That has made it a lot more exciting and fun."

Hopefully, revamping the line with some energy will be enough to kickstart the line into gear, as the Sun Devils will be hoping to open up their running and passing attack.

"We would like to be able to run the ball whenever we want to, as many times as we want to," Mills added. "But we also want to enjoy running it at the same time."

The only other starter joining Mills on the line will be senior Craig Ritter, who will most likely start at right guard.

At 6-4, 275, Ritter hopes to use his size and toughness in repelling any defensive lineman trying to get by, and his versatility allows him to play several positions on the line.

"We have a goal as a group and that goal is consistency," Ritter said. "Getting consistency and being able to dominate the line of scrimmage are the only two things we want to worry about."

Just like the skeptics, Ritter knows that he and the rest of his line are under scrutiny, and knows they have to develop the right attitude to win.

Ritter said something that Snyder established during the spring was getting out of the huddle, getting up to the ball and getting off the ball quickly.

"We know that we have to be a good run-blocking team before we can do anything else," Ritter added.

With Mills and Ritter anchoring the squad, the rest of the linemen hope to secure a solid foundation as well.

Competing for the right tackle spot is 6-7, 297, Jeff Kysar, whose biggest asset is his strength. Kysar, only a sophomore, was one of the outstanding recruits of the 1990 class.

Competing for the other tackle spot is Demario Vaughn, also a sophomore.

Vaughn is another tree-trunk along the offensive line, standing at 6-5, 280. Vaughn has had an excellent spring and has used the building up his arm strength. He broke his arm months before the games, and said that affected his training.

Every one of the swimmers agreed with Piccinini when he said that the Olympics are just like any other swim meet.

"The major difference is it's the Olympics," Piccinini said.

Johnson agreed. "The collegiate meet is real, real high-powered. And these guys have had so much experience internationally that they're used to the big meets and don't get psyched out by pressure."

However, Percy said it was hard not to get overwhelmed by the whole experience.

"You can get overanxious, just freak out and it can become a problem," he said. "Even if you're not swimming one of the six days, you have lots of nervous energy."

Percy noted many swimmers who had the potential to take the gold, did not because of their not-so-great morning performance, leaving them no realistic chance in the afternoon.

"To win the Olympics, everything has to go right," he said.

Asked what it takes to make the magical games, this is some of what ASU's seven swimmers answered:

"Train hard, set no limits."

"A lot of dedication."

"A lot of sacrifice in terms of family, girlfriend, not going out."

All agree it's worth it, however.

Meanwhile, back at the pool in Tempe, Johnson says the group is ready and enthusiastic about swimming in the near future for ASU.

"I think we may be the only team in the country to have six returning Olympians on the team," he said. "That's pretty exciting. I know the younger ones like Piccinini and Holderbach are looking forward to 1996."

practice drills to secure him a spot somewhere in the rotation.

Behind Vaughn is junior Eric Harvey, a junior college transfer from Pasadena City College. At 6-8, 320, Harvey definitely matches up with the rest of the linemen.

The last lineman is also a juco transfer. Farrington "Taco" Togiati, who played at San Francisco City, looks like the starter at left guard. Togiati has surprisingly quick speed for a 6-2, 330-pound guard, and hopes to make a name for himself early in the Pac-10.

Togiati has heard lots of praise from his coaches, who like his on-field personality, and could end up being the missing link in ASU's offensive line.

Fortunately, the Sun Devils do have some depth, although experience is lacking. In order for the offensive line to be productive, they are going to have to have the fighting spirit that Ritter talks about on every down.

"I'd like to think that we're going to a bowl game," Mills said "That's what we are shooting for."
