ASASU presidential candidate John Stevens gives a congratulatory hug to Candy Carlson, newly-elected senator of the Public Programs college on Friday. Stevens will go head to head with Rossie Turman during a scheduled runoff election to be held Wednesday and Thursday that will decide the new ASASU president. Approximately 500 more votes were cast this year than in last year's elections, according to ASASU adviser Gary Kleeman.

Stevens, Turman to vie for post in 2nd election

BY MARK M. MACIAS
STATE PRESS

The Associated Students of ASU will hold a runoff election between presidential candidates John Stevens and Rossie Turman after the two finished three percentage points apart in last week's general election.

Andrew Leonard, ASASU elections coordinator, said a runoff election is held if a presidential candidate doesn't obtain 50 percent plus one of the vote. Stevens obtained 37 percent and Turman garnered 34 percent of the vote in the general election.

"(The runoff election) will be the same procedures as (the general election), but the runoff election will go a lot quicker because there will just be one office (on the ballot)," Leonard said.

Stevens said he feels confident that he will win the runoff since he led in the general election.

"I wanted to win in the (general election), but I understand with that many candidates, the chances for a runoff (election) is there," Stevens said. "I'm just going to focus on the positives — on what I can do for ASASU — and not try to bash anyone else."

Turman said he is counting on Tuesday's presidential forum to help him gain an edge

Director refuses to let consultant explain building

BY CHRIS DRISCOLL
STATE PRESS

ASU's director of planning and construction has refused to authorize a consultant to publicly explain findings concerning a vibration problem plaguing the Barry Goldwater Center for Science and Engineering.

Henry Mortarotti, director of planning and construction said the vibration consultant hired to study the problem should report only to University officials and that he was not hired to make recommendations.

The $25 million Goldwater Center has experienced the vibration problem since its opening in the 1992 fall semester. The vibration has interfered with scientific work and, in some cases, stopped research altogether.

"I think (Kenneth Medearis, the vibration expert) should be talking to us, and the University being the spokesman, not people going out and talking to various entities and so forth and getting different stories and whatever."

When asked on March 12 to give a "thumbnail sketch" of his findings Medearis said "I guess I'm kind of, not unwilling, but apprehensive."

Mortarotti said he thinks the vibration consultant should be talking to him only.

"If you got questions, I'll follow up on them," he said.

Medearis refused to talk other than to say that, "We've done some studies on it (the Goldwater Building vibration problems)."

However, he added that his consulting firm's findings "are really kind of contained in our reports which you could get from her (Ann Buerger, the planning and construction department project manager of the Goldwater Center)."

But Mortarotti denied on Friday that there was a report from Medearis.

"I think it's a misconception," he said. "It's not a report, it's actually readings that have been taken in the building. I talked to the project manager. The contract really was for him (Medearis) to come into the building and just take vibration readings."

On March 11, Mortarotti said Medearis was supposed to give recommendations, not simply take readings. He said how long it would take to determine the root of the problem and the solution depended on several factors.

ASU won't cash in on Super Bowl

$300,000 to pay for stadium, UAC, not supplement University budget

BY JUDD T. WILLIAMS
STATE PRESS

ASU will gain $300,000 in direct revenue from Super Bowl XXX, but that money will go back into running Sun Devil Stadium and the University Activity Center, not into the University budget, an administrator said.

"(That's) the normal rental fee (for Sun Devil Stadium)," said Brent Brown, ASU vice president for university relations. "There won't be any other (direct) money (for ASU)."

Brown said the only other money the campus community will receive will be if students gain temporary employment during the week of festivities leading up to the game.

Super Bowl XXX, which will occur Jan. 28, 1996, is expected to generate up to $200 million in revenue for the state's economy.

National Football League owners took away this year's Super Bowl from Tempe and awarded it to Pasadena, Calif., when voters failed to pass a referendum in 1991 creating a Martin Luther King Jr./Civil Rights holiday.

Voters got the chance this year to make up for the loss when they passed a similar referendum in November.

Brown has served as ASU's representative on Phoenix's Super Bowl Committee for the past 10 years, he said. He added that his involvement on the committee was driven by ASU's need to be a good partner with the community it serves.

"We are entirely supported by the community," Brown said. "To be a good corporate citizen benefits ASU."

Brown pointed out the game will be seen by about 130 million people in the United States and millions more worldwide.

Ever contemplate the life of a blade of grass?

While the cities of Tempe and Phoenix frantically prepare to spruce up for Super Bowl XXX, Don Follett, facilities coordinator for Sun Devil Stadium, will be quietly doing the same — but with the shoots and roots of the temperamental green carpeting.

Because the condition of the stadium's field recently came under criticism, questions have arisen as to whether

Bennett's involvement in parking dispute to be referred to departments

By Mike McGonnell
State Press

Charges will not be filed against ASU basketball player Mario Bennett for his involvement in a parking dispute last week, but the incident will be referred to Student Life and the Athletic Department.

Late Friday, ASU police released a detailed report of last Wednesday's parking lot incident in which Bennett left Parking Structure 1 without paying and "cussed-out" the lot's attendant.

Bennett, who admitted his involvement, later paid the parking fee and promised to apologize to the attendant.

According to the report, police were called to Parking Structure 1 to respond to a suspect who had left the lot without paying and "cussed-out" the parking attendant.

The attendant, senior liberal arts major Tammy Thibodeau, told the responding officer that a man she knew as Mario Bennett "just ran the barricade without paying for parking."

Thibodeau stated that when she came on duty at 6:40 p.m. Wednesday, she noticed Bennett pulling his white Ford into the lot.

At around 9:05 p.m., Bennett pulled up to the gate arm and told Thibodeau that he had lost his ticket. Thibodeau tried to explain that he would have to pay $5 for a lost ticket.

Instead of paying the charge, the report stated that Bennett began swearing at Thibodeau. Bennett told police that "several times before he has not had to pay" for parking in the structure.

The attendant ordered Bennett to back up so other cars waiting to leave the structure could get out. When another car went out under the gate arm, Bennett exited right behind it.

Bennett's license plate was traced and police called him, asking him to come down to the on-campus Department of Public Safety station to discuss the altercation.

At the station, Bennett told police that he tried to explain to Thibodeau that he didn't have to pay for parking before, and that he didn't have any money at the time. Bennett said she didn't listen to his story and called him a "liar."

Bennett admitted to police that he was upset by Thibodeau asking him to pay and that he did use foul language. He said he sped off from the lot because he had no money.

At the station, Bennett said he would pay for the parking and apologize to Thibodeau for the verbal assault. Parking Services did not wish to press charges.

The incident was referred to Student Life and Athletic Liaison Officer Jill DeMichele. DeMichele could not be reached for comment Sunday.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents over the weekend:

- A female employee had two signal light assemblies stolen from her vehicle while it was parked in Parking Structure 4. Loss is $150.

- A couple was approached on the east side of the Student Recreation Complex while engaged in sexual activity on the ground. The couple was warned of trespass and public sexual indecency and then left the area.

- Two people not affiliated with the University were questioned by police at Cady Mall Fountain when their dogs got into a fight. The two were advised of regulations regarding leashing of dogs.

- A male employee reported two smoke detectors stolen from the third floor of Manzanita Hall. Loss is $350.

Tempe police reported the following incidents over the weekend:

- A man entered the Valley National Bank, 1744 E. Southern Ave., and demanded money from the tellers while he displayed a blue steel revolver. He robbed four different tellers and got $914.75. The man walked away from the bank in "a casual fashion" and was last seen in front of Mega Foods. Police believe this is the same individual who robbed the bank a couple of weeks ago.

- A Mesa man was arrested at his apartment for embezzlement from Microage Computers, 525 W. Alameda Drive. After experiencing many instances of internal theft, the company learned that their warehouse shipping supervisor had been shipping computer equipment to his apartment via Federal Express for the past few years. The man admitted to stealing several Apple Lap-Top computers, a Macintosh computer, a fax machine, printers and a disk drive. All the merchandise was recovered from the man's apartment.

Navy prepared to place women in front-line combat jobs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Navy wants to put women in all its front-line combat jobs — as fighter pilots, submariners and warship crew members — within the next four years, officials said.

In a tradition-breaking plan ready for action by Defense Secretary Les Aspin, the Navy suggests allowing women to serve on six classes of combat support ships within the next several months. It would also allow them to enter training for more advanced combat jobs, some of which take years to earn.

The sweeping plan is designed to repair the Navy's battered image in the wake of the Tailhook sex abuse scandal. It would also put the service in the forefront of revising attitudes toward women in the military.

The plan would also make it difficult for the military to bar any other group — such as homosexuals — from combat jobs, as some have proposed.

"The plan is to increase the role of women in the Navy. ... it is something the Navy would very much like to have happen," said a senior Pentagon official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Adm. Frank Kelso Jr., the Navy's top admiral, has approved the plan, the official said.

At present, women are barred from flying combat aircraft and serving on major warships, including aircraft carriers, destroyers, cruisers and submarines.

However, they do serve on 64 of the Navy's 453 vessels — primarily supply ships, such as oilers or submarine tenders, or repair and salvage vessels.

Allowing women in the Navy's premier combat slots means they could seek out and destroy enemies as F/A-18 fighter pilots, for example, or as nuclear missile launchers on Trident submarines.

Congress has passed legislation to repeal the ban on women in certain Air Force aircraft and to allow women to fly Navy aircraft. However, the law does not require the armed services to change their policies.

Aspin has signaled that he's ready to approve placing women in some combat slots. Because of the new law, Aspin could simply sign a directive to the services, telling them to move on the issue.

"The Navy believes it must have the sign-off of the secretary before it can move forward on this," said a senior Navy officer, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

President Clinton has yet to name a Navy secretary.

The Navy's push for addressing the role of women in the service gained momentum under a former Navy assistant secretary for manpower, Barbara Spyridon Pope. She headed a panel set up after the 1991 Tailhook convention, where more than two dozen women — half of them naval officers — reported being groped and fondled by Navy and Marine Corp aviators.

Mrs. Pope's committee recommended that all Naval combat jobs be opened to women, a position backed by then-Navy Secretary Sean O'Keefe.

"I believe we should expand the role of women in combat in all the armed forces, including permitting women to fly combat missions, as well as serve in all naval vessels," O'Keefe said in address to the midshipmen of the Naval Academy in January. O'Keefe also backed requiring women to register for the draft "on an identical sociological basis as men."

However, the issue was put aside for the new administration's own Navy secretary.

A 'new democratic partnership'

Clinton extends $1.6 billion in aid toward Russians

ASSOCIATED PRESS

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — President Clinton cemented a "new democratic partnership" with Boris Yeltsin on Sunday, extending $1.6 billion in aid and pledging a review of Cold War restrictions that inhibit trade and other ties between the United States and Russia.

Yeltsin pronounced himself "fully satisfied" with the results of a weekend summit that stressed economics rather than the thorny arms control issues of the past.

The two men seemed to get along well, striding side-by-side into the summit-ending news conference and shaking hands cordially afterwards. "We're both people's presidents," said Clinton. "We have a lot in common in that regard."

The president said he and congressional leaders had already agreed to make a thorough review of Cold War restrictions that apply to Russia "even though it is now a democratic state" and lift as many as possible.

Clinton lavishly praised Yeltsin and said it was the "high duty of all the world's democracies" to assist Russian reforms "in their new hour of challenge."

He said the $1.6 billion in U.S. aid would provide "immediate and tangible results for the Russian people," and benefit Americans as well. The package includes direct grants and credits for the purchase of food and other goods.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin shakes hands with President Clinton during Sunday's summit meeting in Vancouver, British Columbia.

"We will expand exchanges between American farmers, business people, students and others with expertise working directly with the Russian people," he said.

Clinton said there would be a special effort to invest in Russia's oil and gas industries, an effort overseen by Vice President Al Gore.

The summit gave Yeltsin a sizable package of U.S. aid — though far less than Russia needs — before an April 25 referendum that will determine if Yeltsin's power and program have the support of the Russian people. His critics were sure to deride him as too beholden to Washington.

Clinton emphasized that the U.S. aid package — $1.6 billion in grants and credits — was only a first step. "We will not stand on the sidelines," he said.

The package was swollen by $700 million for grain sales to Moscow under extraordinarily easy terms, a boon both for Russia families and the American farmers who will send their crops to Moscow.

Yeltsin said flatly that Clinton had agreed to end the so-called Jackson-Vanik legislation that denies favorable trade terms to Russia as long as Moscow places restrictions on emigration.

But Clinton indicated discussions weren't that far along. He said he and congressional leaders had recently agreed to compile a list of "every one of the Cold War and other legislation restrictions that are still being applied to Russia, even though it is now a democratic state." He said they would "make as many changes as possible."

Clinton said Yeltsin had assured him there were no longer any individuals in Russia who were being blocked from leaving.

Sharing a podium that bore the Stars and Stripes and the Russian tricolor, the two men seemed eager to leave the Cold War behind. Clinton issued a remarkable public statement of regret that an American submarine had collided with a Russian sub in the Barents Sea several days earlier. Yeltsin said he was "now finalizing" a schedule for removal of the last Russian troops from Cuba.

Clinton said that for 45 years the two countries "pursued a deadly confrontation in nuclear arms. Now we can pursue a safe and steady cooperation."

Said Yeltsin, "We are struggling against Communism."

Clinton said he had asked America's allies "to come forth with their own individual initiatives" to aid Russia, and that he and Yeltsin had discussed a coordinated effort by the world's seven industrialized nations to help Russia stabilize its economy and its currency.

Yeltsin invited Clinton to visit Russia, a trip the president said last week he would like to make — assuming Russian reforms survive the April 25 popular referendum.

The referendum will presumably clarify the political situation in Russia, where Yeltsin last week narrowly survived an impeachment attempt by the legislature and has been maneuvering against former Communist foes to preserve his power.

Clinton left no doubt about his hopes for the outcome of that struggle. In the first few moments at the microphone, he referred to the "heroic deeds of Boris Yeltsin and the Russian people" in launching their reform efforts and defending them since.

Martin Luther King remembered 25 years after death

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Twenty-five years after the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s words were silenced by an assassin's bullet, civil rights leaders reminded a racially charged nation Sunday that King dreamed of a land where children will not be judged by the color of their skin.

In the past year, racial tensions have erupted into violence in Los Angeles, Las Vegas, San Francisco, Seattle, Atlanta and New York.

"It seems sometimes that we take two steps forward and three back," said Elisa Gilham, 63, a trustee at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, where King was a co-pastor.

King was shot April 4, 1968 at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tenn., where he was staying while in town to organize a sanitation workers' strike. James Earl Ray is serving a 99-year prison sentence for the killing.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who was with King at the Lorraine, urged congregants at the All Saints Episcopal Church in Pasadena, Calif., on Sunday, to "not just be spectators and witnesses to violence, but find a way to do something about it."

Just 10 miles away in Los Angeles, a federal trial is under way in the beating of black motorist Rodney King. When four white officers were acquitted of similar charges after a state trial last year the deadly Los Angeles riots followed.

Also on the Los Angeles court docket this month is the trial of three black men accused of beating white trucker Reginald Denny during the riots.

But Jackson said: "We cannot put our destinies in the hands of 12 jurors and debating lawyers."

Jackson planned to hopscotch the country promoting minority rights, winding up in Baltimore in time for a protest at Monday's opening day of the major league baseball season. The national pastime has come under renewed allegations of prejudice since the revelations that resulted in a one-year suspension of Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott.

At the National Civil Rights Museum, built at the site of the Lorraine Motel, people stopped on their way to an afternoon concert at the Mason Temple, where King gave his last speech.

"The soul of our people died when he died," said Tony Jackson, 19, of Atlanta. "The fight continued but not with the same spirit. I don't know if we'll ever be able to capture it again."

On Aug. 28, 1963, King told marchers in Washington, D.C., of his hopes for the future.

"I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character," he said.

But a poll published Sunday found 52 percent of black respondents believe race relations in the United States are the same or worse than they were in 1968. Forty-five percent thought things had improved. Among whites, 42 percent felt things were the same or worse and 54 percent felt things were better.

Sixty-six percent of blacks and 55 percent of whites said race relations were generally bad, while 27 percent of blacks and 38 percent of whites felt race relations were good.

The New York Times-CBS News poll of 1,368 adults was taken March 28-31 and had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points for whites and 6 percentage points for blacks, since fewer blacks were interviewed.

Malcolm X's widow, Betty Shabazz, is one who believes things have gotten better. She told WCBS-TV in New York on Sunday that she has seen "the beginning of a process of healing" since the assassinations of her husband in 1965 and King in 1968.

"I don't think it is appropriate or proper for individuals to constantly say that we have not made progress," Shabazz told WCBS-TV's "Sunday Edition."

At another tribute to King on Sunday, children in New York City were asked to commemorate his call for nonviolence by turning in their toy guns at a rally near the United Nations.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, was not involved in Sunday's various public tributes. She has said she prefers to commemorate her late husband's birthday, Jan. 15, 1929, instead of his death.

ASASU's second chance

Two of the most important days of the year are coming up for the Associated Students of ASU — the presidential runoff elections. In the election last week, roughly 5 percent of the campus voted, and voter turnout for the runoff should be similar.

Despite this, the presidential candidates, John Stevens and Rossie Turman, will be refining their positions in what will hopefully be an outdoor confrontation on Tuesday on West Lawn.

In spite of ASASU's previous assertions — that the campus population is apathetic and that the State Press is of ultimate importance in informing these lost souls about the election — ASASU's polls showed some surprising results. The current figures come from a report compiled by Elections Coordinator Andrew Leonard.

Last year, responding to the question on the ballot titled: "How did you hear about the elections?" voters indicated that they had "heard" about the election primarily through the State Press. "Flyers or posters" was the second most popular response. Only 2,645 students voted.

This year, voters answering the same question listed the State Press as one of their lesser reasons for voting, while the candidates' flyers and posters became the top reason. 3,104 students voted.

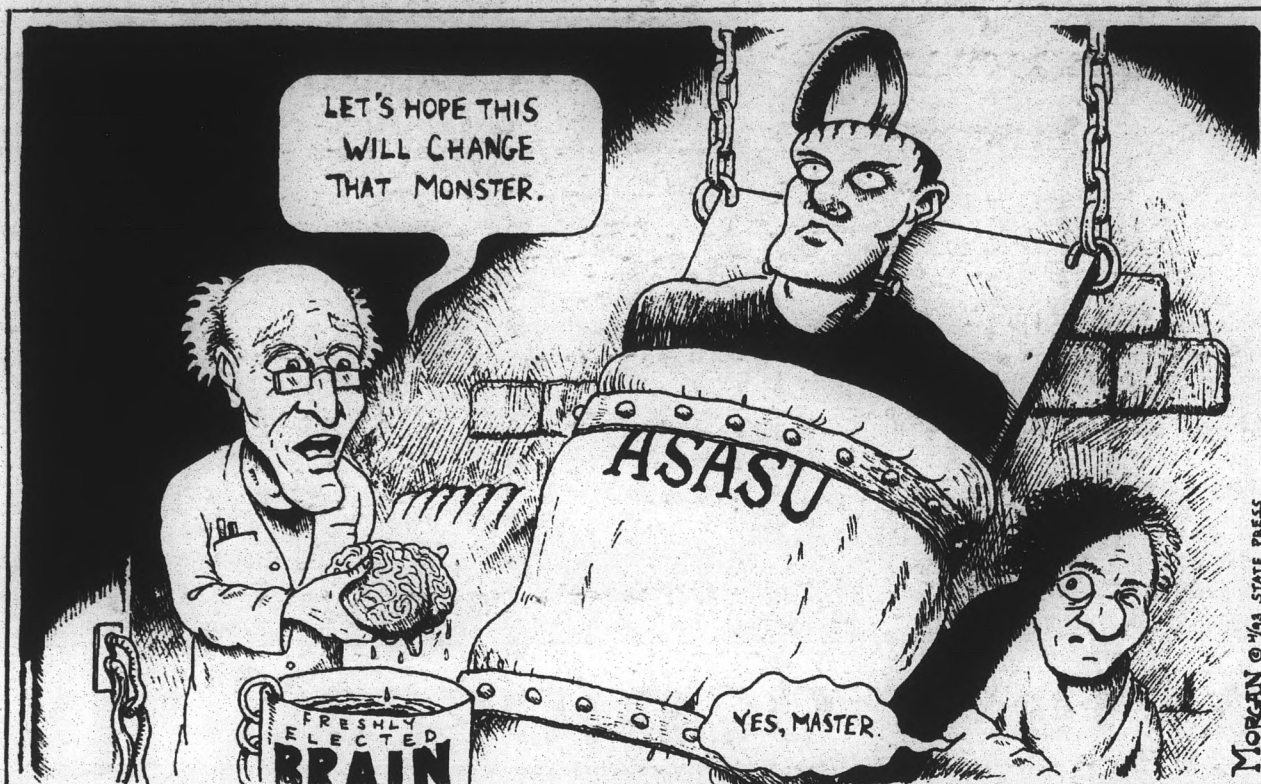

While this suggests that there is only a small percentage of the campus population that is interested in ASASU, a little over 5 percent in each case, it also indicates that the candidates' efforts play the greatest part in influencing those results. Their signs and handshaking on the malls are what's continuing to bring people in to vote.

Some other facts that should interest the candidates are that 37 percent of the voters are members of fraternities or sororities, something for candidates to consider when they wonder who is really interested in ASASU. It's largely the Greek population.

Further, 63 percent of the voters live off campus. For years we've heard that it's impossible to motivate students to get involved because ASU is a commuter campus. At least for the segment of the campus population that votes, this assumption is not true. For the time that these students are on campus, they are actively aware of campus events.

These results should suggest some modes of action for both candidates and ASASU in general. Students are influenced by what they see happening on campus. They are interested in the candidates and organizations that greet them on the mall.

With these facts in mind, candidates and organizers of the election should continue to focus on forums and individual contact as their primary strategy. When the time comes that these candidates become officers of ASASU who demonstrate by their deeds that they can make things happen, then this newspaper will again take up full coverage of an organization gone terribly awry.

Programs prime poor for poverty

When the worried talk is about schools, the answers are always money and new programs. The politicians talk about the money, where it will come from and how it will be spread around. The educational experts talk about programs and how they will be implemented. Where would they be without programs to implement?

When the worried talk is about crime, the answers are always stricter gun control laws and, of course, the implementation of a vast array of new drug programs.

When the worried talk is about troubled families, the answers are new federal social service programs. Even now the White House is talking about new multibillion-dollar "family preservation" programs that will send out hordes of social workers to bring broken families together. Assuming, of course, that these programs are properly implemented.

And now that we have a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress, there will be a blizzard of new programs. If there is anything that Democrats believe in, it is that for every problem, there should be a federal program. But there is something missing in the talk about the problems and the programs that are intended to solve these problems.

It is what I call the "Who, me?" factor. As in, "It is your responsibility," followed by, "Who, me?"

Start with the schools. The problem isn't money. We spend vast sums on schools. Nor is it a lack of programs. We have more educational programs than can be implemented in the next 100 years.

Where there are problem schools, the biggest source of the problem is the parent. The kind of parent who, when told that she or he is responsible for her or his children, says: "Who, me?"

Show me the worst school districts in Chicago, Detroit, New York, Los Angeles, and I will show you parents who should not be raising a Chia Pet, much less a child.

These are the places where the illegitimacy rates are jaw-dropping, where ignorance and illiteracy are handed down from generation to generation like family heirlooms.

What kind of program do we implement to persuade some dense teen-age girl that she should not couple with some street-swagger boyfriend? What program, if implemented, will make the young man understand that if he fathers children, it is his responsibility to live with those children and try to support them?

"Who, me?" they will answer with amazement. Isn't that what the school is for? Or the social workers? Isn't there a program that does it?

The same applies to crime. Strict gun laws will make only a tiny dent in that problem. Thickheaded as the gun lobby can be, they are right about one thing: The gangbangers, grocer-killers and drug dealers aren't deterred by registration or cooling-off laws. They don't shop at sporting marts with the skeet-shooting crowd. Their gun suppliers deal out of car trunks or abandoned buildings.

And we can trace the rise in violent crime to the same source of the school ailments. The parts of the cities that produce the illegitimate illiterates are giving us the greatest number of trigger-happy young felons. You don't have to know how to parse a sentence, much less read one, to point a gun at a convenience store clerk or deliver a load of crack.

So now we are going to get a Family Preservation Act and more programs for social workers to implement.

But what we need as much as a Family Preservation Act is a Family Prevention Act. There's not much point in trying to preserve families that weren't families in the first place. If you go to a Family Court in a big city, what you see is some stupefied young woman, her physically or mentally abused kids and a slackjawed boyfriend sitting in a back row. Since when has that been a family? And what is there to preserve? If the kids survive the abuse and neglect, they'll be the next generation of social misfits and menaces.

And when they are told that they are responsible for their own actions and for those of their children, they will look blank and say: "Who, me?"

If President Clinton intends to create public works jobs, then I suggest he do it this way: Round up the young fathers who breed and walk away. Give them a choice: Work and use the paycheck to support your family or go to jail.

If he wants to reform welfare, then apply the same standards we do in our fishing and hunting laws. There is a limit. And what would be wrong with telling a woman: "Two is your limit and you have reached it. Any more than that, you support them yourselves."

Is that hard-hearted and insensitive? Maybe. But for several decades, we have been good-hearted, bleeding-hearted and ultrasensitive. And what has it given us? The highest rates of illegitimacy, illiteracy, homicide and chronic dependency of any developed country.

Letters to the editor

Victim of violent attack made his message clear

Editor:

I am writing to you in regard to the headline coverage of "Forum addresses concerns about attack" on March 31. I was quoted as saying, "I think this incident is not important anymore. It was a single incident."

I think I must have been misunderstood because neither did I make such statement nor did I imply anything that was even close to the statement. What I said and meant was that we should go beyond this incident and search for solutions to prevent such incidents and the manner of handling of the incident from happening in the future.

First of all, this incident, whether it is single or not, is certainly important to me. In my face, as a result of the operation after the attack, some pieces of metal will forever remain. The incident will remain in me as personal experience witnessing the evils that man can do. On the other hand, what will also remain in my memory forever is the care, support and help that so many people gave me so unreservedly after what had happened to me.

At this moment we don't know if the incident is a hate crime or not. I would not be surprised if it is. Neither in such context nor in the context of crimes we have heard recently around ASU was the incident which happened to me single.

Some people are confused because of how I was quoted. I feel it is important for me and State Press to have it clarified.

Pro-choice stance allows abortions to continue

Editor:

A wide-spread myth in America today is that of free choice and guaranteed rights. This myth is apparently rooted in the idea that people can do whatever they "choose" to do regardless of how it affects others. The comfort of the individual takes precedence over the welfare of the community as a whole.

This myth has expressed itself in the laws of our country and is most evident in the law granting women the right to abort their offspring. Many who support this law deem themselves "pro-choice" and not pro-abortion; while those opposed to abortion are labeled "pro-life."

To be pro-choice is to assert that one is free to perform a given action or make a given choice. In this case the action or choice is abortion. Therefore those who support the law, whether they would abort their own offspring or not, are pro-abortion. One cannot be pro-choice but not pro-abortion.

The question of when human life begins is essential to the issue, because of the acceptance of the idea that once human life begins it cannot be destroyed by any person. The question has been answered over and over again by biologists, fetologists and other physicians and favors an end to abortion. Even those physicians unopposed to the current abortion laws will say, without question, that human life begins at conception.

That is, once the sperm penetrates the egg human life has begun. The process of uniquely human development with a unique genetic plan begins and continues until death.

To assert that a choice will be lost if abortion is outlawed is synonymous to the loss of choice incurred by making robbery, child abuse and rape illegal.

Student disappointed by negative campaigning

Editor:

My purpose in writing is to express my displeasure with the campaign tactics of Associated Students of ASU Presidential candidate Rossie Turman during the recent election.

Until recently, I regarded Mr. Turman with a great deal of respect. He was running an honest campaign based on his ability to deal effectively with the issues which we face as students.

However, all of that changed. As I strolled passed the fountain on Cady Mall, I was handed a leaflet which bore Mr. Turman's name and platform on one side and a series of slanderous remarks directed at his opponents on the other.

Quite frankly, I was appalled. This man has the audacity to stand before us and claim that he possesses the competence and character to effectively represent the students of ASU as their student body president, while at the same time, his code of ethics allows him to denounce his opponents with no remorse.

Is Mr. Turman so afraid of losing this election that he will lower himself to this? Obviously so.

My question then is what is he trying to hide? Is his own record of achievement so poor that he must berate his opponent's to make it look more appealing? Is his own character so inferior that the only way to improve it is to trounce that of his competition?

I say yes to both questions. How does Mr. Turman expect the students to believe that he has the backbone to stand up to the Arizona State Legislature and move them to make higher education a priority, while he does not even possess the integrity to run an honest and clean campaign?

Through his mudslinging and name calling, Mr. Turman has shown the students of ASU his true colors. He is not the honest and respectable gentleman anxious to serve his fellow students as he claims. On the contrary, he is a deceitful politician who relies on impressive rhetoric and empty promises to win his office, similar to Kate Lawrence.

We were all fooled by her and can not afford to make the same mistake again. It is time to fill the offices of our student government with people who are committed to serving the needs of the students without embarrassing them with unethical behavior. Mr. Turman's actions are just that type. I am pleased that we were able to see his true intentions before we were forced to endure another year of ineffective leadership.

Until I saw these flyers, I had considered voting for Rossie Turman for ASASU President; but I can not trust a man who would employ such deceitful tactics to win the support of his peers.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT...

Maybe he could get a scholarship

Notorious prison escapee Danny Ray Horning's lawyers are attempting to sway jurors into believing that Horning was a member the ASU athletic department and is not under the jurisdiction of the courts. According to the lawyers, Horning was training for an extended triathlon when he eluded authorities last year and should be turned over to the ASU athletic department for punishment.

What elections?

The Associated Students of ASU proved that embarrassing government scandals are the best way to get students involved. After last semester's discouraging record involving a squashed student initiative and two impeachments, ASASU received a higher voter turnout than the year before. Next year, ASASU is considering the possibility of public beheadings and a coup to spark further student interest.

What conflict?

Gov. Fife Symington will probably never see the conflict of interest involved in accepting contributions from the investment firm of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes. Both parties were interested in money, and neither, it appears, were particularly interested in the state — except as the supplier of the money. Someone should remind the governor that he's supposed to be on our side.

QUOTE/UNQUOTE

"I feel there's been a steady drumbeat of criticism directed at me and my administration, which I think attempts to impugn character."

— Gov. Fife Symington, criticizing the media for accusing him of accepting $8,600 in contributions from employees of companies who do business with the state.

"We like to see what we can do to encourage the kind of business development Governor Symington is doing here."

— Jim Feltham, an executive for Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, who solicited the funds in question for Governor Symington. Two weeks before the contributions were made, Rauscher earned $700,000 by refinancing $130 million in state securities.

"Gambino, Gamschmino."

— Al Certo, denying mob involvement in boxing before a Senate Subcommittee hearing.

"That theory is ridiculous, and the only thing I can think of more ridiculous than that is that Vernon Howell is the Lamb of God, when all he is a cheap thug who interprets the Bible through the barrel of a gun."

— Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms spokesman David Troy, denying the possibility that bureau agents were killed by friendly fire.

THE GREAT INVOCATION
From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the wills of men -
The purpose which the Master knows and serves.

From the centre we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

Some test prep services seem to have an almost fanatical fondness for audio tapes. If you miss a class, they hand you a tape. Need extra help? More tapes! Heck, they even train their teachers with the darn things.

At The Princeton Review, we believe that teachers are better than tapes. A well-trained teacher will answer your questions, focus on your problem areas, and even smile on occasion. That's why our students receive FREE Extra-Help...with their teachers, not tapes.

"How quickly we can get the equipment manufacturers back into the building and make adjustments (to the air-conditioning units), and then (Medearis) may want to do some other corrective work to see if that will take some of the vibration work out also," he said. "(Medearis will) make some recommendations, but I don't expect anything for at least the next two weeks."

"I don't know what Ann (Buerger) told you because she's probably a little closer, and so she knows more than I do."

Buerger failed to return phone calls Friday, but three weeks ago she said preliminary findings of the vibration consultant are that the primary problem is a flaw in the structural design.

"The structural spans are too long and that's what the primary cause is," she said. "We're experiencing the problems because of the imbalance of the mechanical systems (the four air conditioning units)."

which may be used as a recruiting tool, bringing more money in the long term.

"I think they'll (viewers) see a nice view of the campus," he said. "It might get them to come to ASU."

Brown has charged ASU Community Relations Director Neil Giuliano with heading a special committee to look into cutting any disruption to the campus community during the week before the Super Bowl.

The NFL will be responsible for controlling the area around the stadium during the 10 days before the game, which is around the same time spring semester will begin, Brown said.

Giuliano could not be reached for comment Sunday. ASU Academic Senate President Dick McGaw said he does not think the game and the festivities surrounding it will interrupt the teaching and learning process on the campus.

"The way the athletic program has been pretty much isolated to the north end of the campus — separate from the academic end of campus; I don't see it as being very disruptive," McGaw said.

against Stevens.

"It will help me in the runoff if the weather holds and the forum is outside," Turman said. "I think when the student body gets an opportunity to do a contrast and comparison between me and Senator Stevens, they will quickly recognize that if they want ASASU to change, it's not going to be done by Senator Stevens."

"It will be at (noon), but we're just not sure if it will be out on the West Lawn or in the MU," Leonard said. "A lot of the major functions on the mall are over and aren't occurring this week, so it shouldn't be a problem (scheduling the forum outside)."

In other ASASU contests, Kurt Wilhelm defeated Tom Howell by 7 percent for the ASASU Campus Affairs vice presidency.

Chad Wolett beat Viola Fuentes for Activities vice president, taking 46 percent of the vote to Fuentes' 39 percent.

Caesar Tima, who ran unopposed, took 76 percent of the vote for Executive vice president.

The 1993-94 ASASU senators are Andrew Blong and Jason Rupp for the College of Architecture; Justin Lane and Sean Ebner for the College of Business; and David Yang and Bonnie Nemeth for the Engineering College.

Joan Dowden and Jerry Chandler are senators for the College of Fine Arts; Thomas Roessler and Scott Mathews for the Graduate College; Suma Mathai and John Malik for the Honors College; Cami Byrd and Michelle Margolies for the College of Law; Gena LaPresto and Michael Willis for the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The College of Public Programs senators are Candy Carlson and Jenny Weaver. The College of Social Work senator is Mark Wendell, leaving one seat vacant.

The College of Education elected one senator, Gregory Jones, with write-in votes. A second seat will be appointed by the College of Education Council.

The College of Nursing councils will appoint two senators and the College of Social Work will appoint one from its college council.

The runoff election will be Wednesday and Thursday. The MU and Student Recreation Complex voting booths will be open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. All other voting booths will close at 4 p.m.

it will be in good shape for the big game.

Heavy winter rains and a strenuous schedule of events all year forced groundskeepers to cover the turf's bare patches with sand in the open-air stadium. The field's poor condition was shown to the entire nation during the televised Fiesta Bowl on New Year's Day.

Television commentators called it an oversized "sandbox" because much of the grass had been trampled by the end of the regular season.

It's empty now, but in January 1996, the stadium will be filled to capacity. With lessons learned, Follett said the field will meet the challenge.

"We have a good game plan for going about it," Follett said. "The field will be ready."

"First, a good stand of grass must be established, then we'll need to keep the bermuda grass fooled into thinking it's still summer, so it will stay green," Follett said.

He said the hardest part of the process will be maintaining the grass until game day, but he will try "all the tricks of the trade to do it."

"As it is, the staff is always working overtime; the Super Bowl will just add to it," Follett said.

The University recently spent $3 million renovating the field to meet with National Football League requirements in expectation of the 1993 Super Bowl.

The bulk of the money went to Cohen Contracting Inc. and CMX Group Construction Inc. to widen and lower the field, rather than to improve its condition.

Follett said the University had to use bond money then or they would be forced to give it up.

"Now, we have no money and are expected to do more with less," Follett said.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — With her appealing long eyelashes, goofy smile and large nostrils, Pumsy the Dragon — in the right hands — helps children feel good about themselves, proponents say.

But others claim the hand puppet, used in 16,000 elementary schools around the country, is brainwashing youngsters.

They say the bluish-green lady dragon, introduced in 1987, hypnotizes students with self-esteem exercises and contradicts Christian beliefs that only parents, or a higher power, have the right to tell children how to act.

"We don't think psychological courses or group therapy belongs in the classroom," said conservative activist Phyllis Schlafly. "It teaches them to look at a dragon as a friend instead of their parents."

Supporters say Pumsy, which comes with a manual to guide teachers or counselors through a series of lessons, merely tries to help students think clearly and to build their confidence and respect for others.

Jill Perlman of Bethlehem said she's all for Pumsy, as are most parents in the Saucon Valley School District, where her two daughters attend elementary school.

"In this day and age, guidance isn't always given in the home," she said. "A positive feeling about oneself is always a plus."

Much of the criticism focuses on parts of the program designed to encourage decision-making.

For example, Pumsy asks students to visualize themselves on a playground saying "no" to a stranger who uses peer pressure to encourage them to take a white pill. In another scene, students are asked to visualize themselves finding $20 and discuss what they would do.

Last year, parents challenged Pumsy in Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Kansas, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and South Carolina. In most cases, the puppet has won.

Last month, the program was pulled from two districts in eastern Pennsylvania after several parents complained. And in Kansas, parents argued that the puppet promoted Satanism and New Age and Eastern religions and taught children "to be stronger than Jesus Christ."

Pumsy's developer, Timberline Press Inc. in Eugene, Ore., said the program gives students a better chance of succeeding academically.

"We do not feel it is psychological treatment of children," spokeswoman Carolyn Kortge said. "There have been so many accusations that are not founded in an awareness of the programs but are broad, sweeping accusations from people who haven't even read the program."

In South Carolina, four school districts battled parents over the program. After extensive review, Pumsy won, but the district now allows parents to keep their children from participating.

Some parents felt teaching children to say no would encourage them to refuse to do household chores, said John Kelley, assistant superintendent for elementary education at South Carolina's Oconee School District.

"They felt we were undermining parental authority and we were hypnotizing children and placing them in mind-altered states," he said. "Their reasons for objecting to the program was based on fear rather than fact."

Nine-year-old Alex Hillman of Hellertown took part in a Pumsy program last year at Reinhard Elementary School.

"I didn't think I was hypnotized," he said. "I think it was pretty neat."

Golfers take title, end streak at Ping/ASU Invitational

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's golf team ended top-ranked San Jose State's 12-tournament winning streak Sunday, capturing first place in the Ping/ASU Women's Invitational at Karsten Golf Course.

The second-ranked Sun Devils won their second tournament of the season with a three-day total of 897, five strokes ahead of San Jose State's 902.

The Spartans' streak — which included an NCAA Championship last season — started last season by winning the ASU Lady Sun Devil Invitational.

ASU coach Linda Vollstedt said she was uptight until the last threesome — featuring ASU's Emilee Klein, USC's Jill McGill and San Jose State's Ninni Sterner — finished.

"I was a nervous wreck out there,"

Vollstedt said. "The lead would change so quickly. Every hole was a different story."

The Sun Devils seemed to be in doubt of winning the tournament when Klein double-bogied on the 17th hole after hitting into a sand trap and missing a putt. ASU clinched the win when Sterner hit into the water teeing off on the 18th hole, causing her to double-bogey.

Stanford's Martha Richards won the tournament with a score of 218, followed by McGill (219) and USC's Heidi Voorhees (220). ASU's Wendy Ward finished with a 222, tying UofA's Leta Lindley for fourth.

Klein finished tied for eighth (225) with San Jose State's Vibeke Stensrud.

ASU's Tracy Cone finished in 10th place at 227, but her score was not counted toward the team's total because she competed as an individual.

ASU golfer Emilee Klein attempts to sink a putt Saturday during the Ping/ASU Women's Invitational at Karsten Golf Course. The Sun Devils took first place in the tournament, upending previously top-ranked San Jose State. Klein finished tied for eighth.

Wildcats hand ASU late defeat

UofA takes 2 of 3 in weekend series

BY GREG SEXTON
STATE PRESS

TUCSON — On Friday night in Tempe, the eighth-ranked ASU baseball team pulled some late-inning heroics to beat in-state rival UofA.

But Sunday afternoon in Tucson, it was the 11th-ranked Wildcats' turn to come through with a late victory.

With the score locked at 9-9 in the bottom of the ninth inning, UofA had two outs and two men on. Fans began clapping and chanting, "U...of...A, U...of...A."

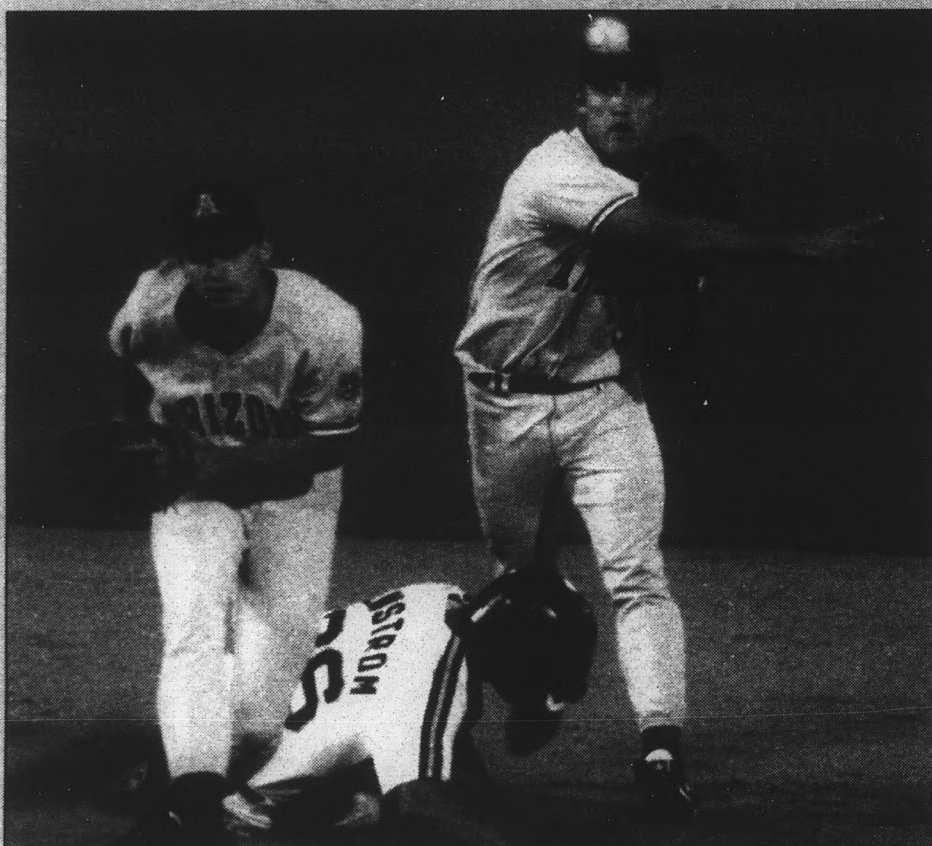

ASU pitcher Mike Fenton then gave first baseman Jason Thompson a slider. Thompson connected with a base hit, scoring shortstop James Motte and giving the Wildcats a 10-9 victory in front of 3,501 fans at Frank Sancet Field.

With the win, the Wildcats took two out of three games in the weekend series.

"It's tough," ASU catcher Paul LoDuca said. "We played great, they just battled. It was just one of those games where you play great and just don't get the breaks."

It was the sixth consecutive loss in Tucson for ASU (27-13 overall, 7-7 Six-Pac), and the second in as many games. The Wildcats soundly defeated ASU 9-5.

Women gymnasts qualify for NCAA's 2 men also earn berths

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The seventh-ranked ASU women's gymnastics team qualified for the NCAA Championships with a third-place finish at the NCAA Midwest Regionals in Logan, Utah on Saturday.

The Sun Devils finished with a score of 193.20, placing behind Utah (196.975) and UofA (193.975).

ASU sophomore Tina Brinkman finished in a three-way tie for first in vaulting with a score of 9.995.

The Sun Devils placed two athletes in the top 15 in the all-around competition. Brinkman placed 14th with a score of 37.975, while freshman Jenny Ester placed eighth at 38.50.

ASU was also aided by the performances of senior Debbi Bryan and freshman Katie Freeland, who competed in three events each for the Sun Devils.

ASU will compete in the NCAA Championships in Corvallis, Ore. on April 17.

Two members of the men's gymnastics team also qualified for the NCAA Championships when nine Sun Devils competed in the NCAA Regionals Saturday at the University of Oklahoma.

Senior co-captain Paul Bedewi qualified in floor exercise with a score of 9.75, while freshman Rob Kjar qualified on pommel horse with a 9.75 mark.

The men's NCAA Championships will be held in Albuquerque, N.M. from April 15-17.

Sun Angel Classic lives up to billing

BY BRIAN CHARLES
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's and women's track teams had some excellent performances this weekend, as they hosted the 14th annual Sun Angel Track Classic.

Competing were college teams from all over the nation, as well as athletes from around the world. A crowd of 3,500 got to see one of the most competitive Sun Angel meets ever, highlighted by performances from previous Olympians.

Sun Devil coach Len Braxton said he was happy with his team's performance.

"ASU had a great meet," an excited Braxton said. "There were so many standouts, I don't know where to begin."

"This is an indication of how our season is going to go. We are going to shine some, and I'm just proud of them."

Headlining the day for the Sun Devils were middle distance runners Kim Toney and Jim McCreery, who swept the 800-meter event.

Toney, a two-time Pac-10 Champion in the 800, took first in 2:05.88. Despite a customary first-place finish, Toney was unhappy with her performance.

"I didn't run the race as well thought out as I should have," Toney said. "I think I was anticipating everyone else to go (faster). It is hard to run a fast second lap when the first is slow."

One of the biggest surprises of the meet was the performance turned in by McCreery, who surprised everyone by beating a stacked men's 800 field.

"I knew there were going to be a lot of good people in it," McCreery said. "I didn't think I was going to run that fast. I was thinking in my head, 'Well, what if I go out and just try to win the whole thing.'"

McCreery's time of 1:48.19 was the third best ever by a Sun Devil athlete.

The hurdle events provided some excellent competition, as former Sun Devil sensation Lynda Tolbert just missed first behind Footlocker-sponsored Dawn Bowles. Sun Devil All-American Ime Akpan took fourth.

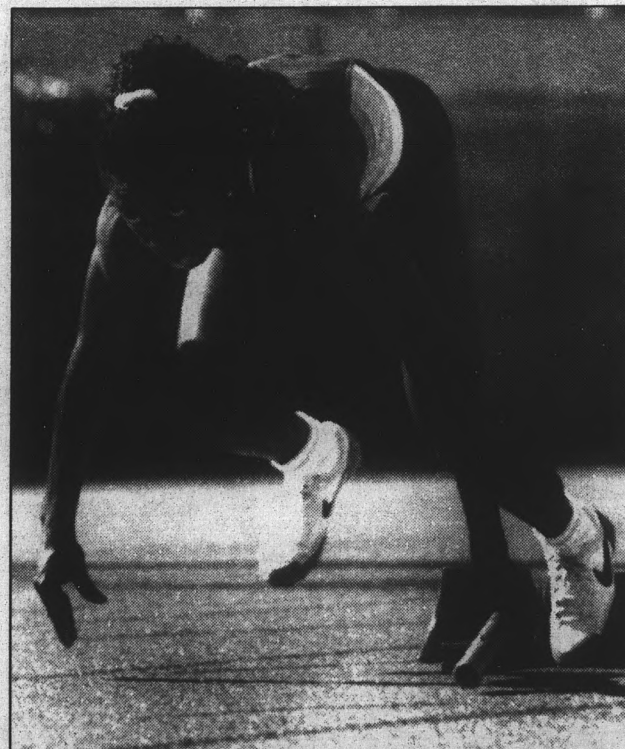

In the men's hurdles, former USC Trojan Mark Crear took first, while former Sun Devil assistant coach Andrew Parker took second. Willie Gault of the Los Angeles Raiders finished fourth, while ASU's Lamont Dailey took sixth.

ASU's new triple threat — sisters Lade, Tayo, and Christie Akinremi — kept busy throughout the day. After Tayo and Christie aided in a third-place finish in the 4x100 relay, Lade and Christie took second and fifth, respectively, in the 400 hurdles.

In addition, Tayo came back to take third in the 400 dash, then teamed up with Lade in contributing to a second-place ASU performance in the 4x400 relay.

Other highlights for the Sun Devils included a second-place finish by long jumper Victor Agebabku, a second-place finish in the high jump for All-American Gabe Beechum, and a fifth-place finish for Shelly Choppa in the high jump.

ASU will next be in action on Saturday, as they host intrastate rivals UofA and NAU at 5 p.m. at Sun Angel Stadium.

Darryl Webb/State Press

ASU sprinter Tayo Akinremi competed in three events during Saturday's Sun Angel Classic at Sun Angel Stadium, capturing third in the 400-meter run while also running on two relay teams. Several Sun Devils placed in the meet, which featured some of the world's best track athletes.

Softball blanked by No. 1 Bruins

By MICHAEL BRANOM
STATE PRESS

The ASU softball team was dealt two shutout losses by top-ranked UCLA on Saturday, in front of a near capacity crowd of 588 in a doubleheader at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

ASU coach Linda Wells said the 3-0 and 6-0 blankings gave the 16th-ranked Sun Devils (24-16 overall, 6-4 Pac-10) a lesson in executing strategy.

"In the first game, we had a strategy, but we didn't apply it well," Wells said. "In the second game, we should've applied the strategy, but we didn't."

Bruin pitcher/third baseman Lisa Fernandez, who Wells described as "premiere player", dismantled the Sun Devils during the twin bill.

The Sun Devils tried to limit Fernandez's contributions by pitching around her, only to get into trouble with other UCLA batters.

In the first inning of the opener, ASU pitcher Dawn Wood walked Fernandez with two out and the bases empty. Another walk and three straight singles followed, giving the Bruins (23-2, 8-0) all three of its runs.

Fernandez, two-time winner of the Honda Award for her achievements as the nation's best collegiate softball player, ruined ASU in the second game with a double and a booming homer, scoring twice. In the two contests, Fernandez went three for six, with three runs and a RBI.

Fernandez also dominated ASU with her pitching in the opener, throwing five and 2/3 innings of no-hit ball before Cheri Keller knocked a clean single to center. Fernandez finished with an eight-strikeout, one-hit performance.

on Saturday, one day after ASU pinch-hitter Sal Cardinale won the series opener in Tempe with a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth.

On Sunday, the Wildcats (22-16, 9-9) began to rise in the bottom of the first, when senior leftfielder Robbie Moen cracked a two-run homer over center field.

ASU starting pitcher Doug Newstrom was pulled in the first inning and replaced by Brent Smith. Smith then surrendered a single and threw a wild pitch that allowed a UofA score.

The Sun Devils added two runs in the third inning, during which UofA pulled its starting pitcher, Zachary Pringle. It would be the first of six pitching changes that the Wildcats would make on the day.

"The pitching was so down in the barrel for both clubs," ASU coach Jim Brock said. "It wasn't pretty if you were a connoisseur of fine college pitching."

The Sun Devils made their biggest run in the top of the sixth inning. The rally began with a Antone Williamson two-run homer over center field. Todd Delnoce added a solo shot in the eighth.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

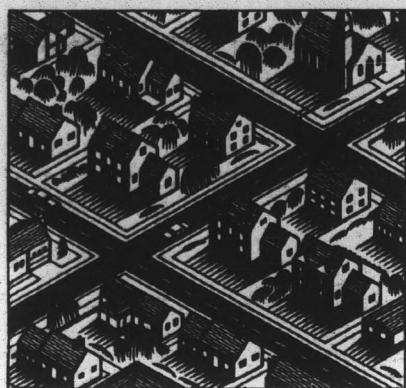

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

ASU tennis splits in weekend action

By SCOTT DAVIS
STATE PRESS

After a shutout victory over New Mexico on Friday, the ASU women's tennis team fell apart Sunday, losing to Texas 5-1.

The tenth-ranked Sun Devils (13-7 overall, 4-3 Pac-10) could manage only one victory in the Texas match.

ASU coach Sheila McInerney said the two opponents performed as expected over the weekend.

"We knew New Mexico would be easy, and we knew Texas would be good," McInerney said. "Texas played good, and we didn't play as well as we could. We had chances but didn't quite do it."

Kori Davidson, ASU's No. 1 singles player, opened up with a 6-1 victory over Texas' Susan Gilchrist in the first set. Gilchrist, currently ranked sixth in the nation, used a strong serve to notch the victory in the next two sets, 1-6, 6-2, 6-2.

ASU senior captain Pam Cioffi was the lone Sun Devil to post a victory against Texas.

The Sun Devils breezed past New Mexico 9-0, claiming seven of their nine matches in straight sets.

WE DELIVER!
SUBS & SALADS

Broadway & Rural 921-9222

For Monday, April 5, 1993
ARIES
(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
A friend burdens you with his or her problems today. Work interests go nicely now. Couples may spend too much in the pursuit of good times tonight.
TAURUS
(Apr. 20 to May 20)
Partners are in sync now, but career pressures make it difficult for you to unwind. A friend confides in you. Guard against overindulgence in food or drink.
GEMINI
(May 21 to June 20)
Business interests go well now and talks with higher-ups are favored. Tonight, you are the social butterfly and may place too much importance on superficial things.
CANCER
(June 21 to July 22)
Some monies due you may be delayed. A business adviser gives you information you can use. Guard against going overboard in planning a home entertainment.
LEO
(July 23 to Aug. 22)
Shoppers may find themselves returning an item. Helpful advice comes about financial concerns. A tendency to waste time needs watching. Stay away from superficial types.
VIRGO
(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
You could be bored with the usual routine on the job today and will need self-discipline to get things done. You may tend to spend wastefully now.
LIBRA
(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Have more faith in a child. Avoid unnecessary worrying. Get help if needed with a work project. You may be placing too much emphasis on little things tonight.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
One friend may seem distant now. Social interests are favored today. You must guard against immorality and overindulgence during the evening hours.
SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Though some business progress is made now, you still may be concerned about delays. Tonight, there is a tendency to overdo when partying. Avoid ostentation.
CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
You may find something for the home in a mail order catalog today. You will hear some big talk at work, much of which is insincere and off the mark.
AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
You are cautious and conservative where business interests are concerned today. You may become quickly bored with someone's small talk and idle chatter tonight.
PISCES
(Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
Preoccupation with your own thoughts could cause you to inadvertently shut out a close tie. There is a strong inclination now to wasteful spending and needless extravagance.
YOU BORN TODAY are dramatic and more universal in outlook than you are usually given credit for. You thrive on challenges and may have a talent for acting or brokerage. Adventurous, you enjoy change and are eager to try new things. You are drawn to both the arts and sciences, but may be somewhat impatient for research. Birthdate of: Bette Davis, actress; Gregory Peck, actor; and Spencer Tracy, actor.
