Fraternity member disputes estimate of building damage

BY MAXWELL HIGGINS
STATE PRESS

Members of Theta Delta Chi fraternity will meet with the Greek Relations Board and Residential Life officials in coming days to discuss an estimated $300,000 done in damage to the fraternity's house on Alpha Drive.

The damage — which reportedly occurred last weekend — includes broken windows, holes in walls and ceilings, garbage scattered about the interior, and missing and broken doors.

Officials have speculated that Theta Delta Chi members purposefully vandalized the house, following an order from Residential Life to vacate the premises because of health and safety risks in the structure.

Water damage resulting from a leaky roof in the building has compromised materials containing asbestos, thus posing a health risk, according to University officials.

But Theta Delta Chi member Justin Shire disagreed with the police damage estimate.

"The house isn't even worth that much," he said. "They're including stuff like holes in the walls that've been there for 20 years. These figures are way, way off."

Attempts to contact Theta Delta Chi's chapter president Mark Bailey and other members of the fraternity Wednesday were unsuccessful.

Interfraternity Council President Reagan Dunn said Wednesday that each of the GRB's nine members has visited the wrecked house, and they will meet with Theta Delta Chi members to determine whether the University should take disciplinary action against individual students.

Although an ongoing ASU Department of Public Safety investigation has not yet produced suspects in the case, Dunn said he thinks the University and police assume members of the fraternity did the damage.

"If they're responsible for it, it's not something we condone," he said. "In no uncertain terms, Theta Delta Chi will be dealt with severely. Monday could roll around and they could be gone. I think it's a fair assumption that they'll lose their house."

Dunn said the GRB can take disciplinary actions such as mandating community service for the fraternity and recommending that Residential Life levy fines. The ultimate decision to terminate the fraternity's lease on the property rests with Residential Life and the Board of Regents.

Dean of Student Development and Residential Life Jim Rund said his department will be interested in the GRB's recommendation for how to proceed. He also said he spoke with Bailey about the damage and that he did not deny fraternity involvement.

"I assumed the damage occurred because of a misunderstanding in the (fraternity's) membership," he said.

Shire said he did not know if fraternity members caused the damage.

Despite Dunn's ominous predictions, Rund said it was possible that the fraternity could return to the house if five months of back rent was paid in full.

"We would have to work through the conduct issues," he said. "We would have to identify the individuals responsible, at a minimum. And that's not to say there wouldn't be repercussions for the chapter."

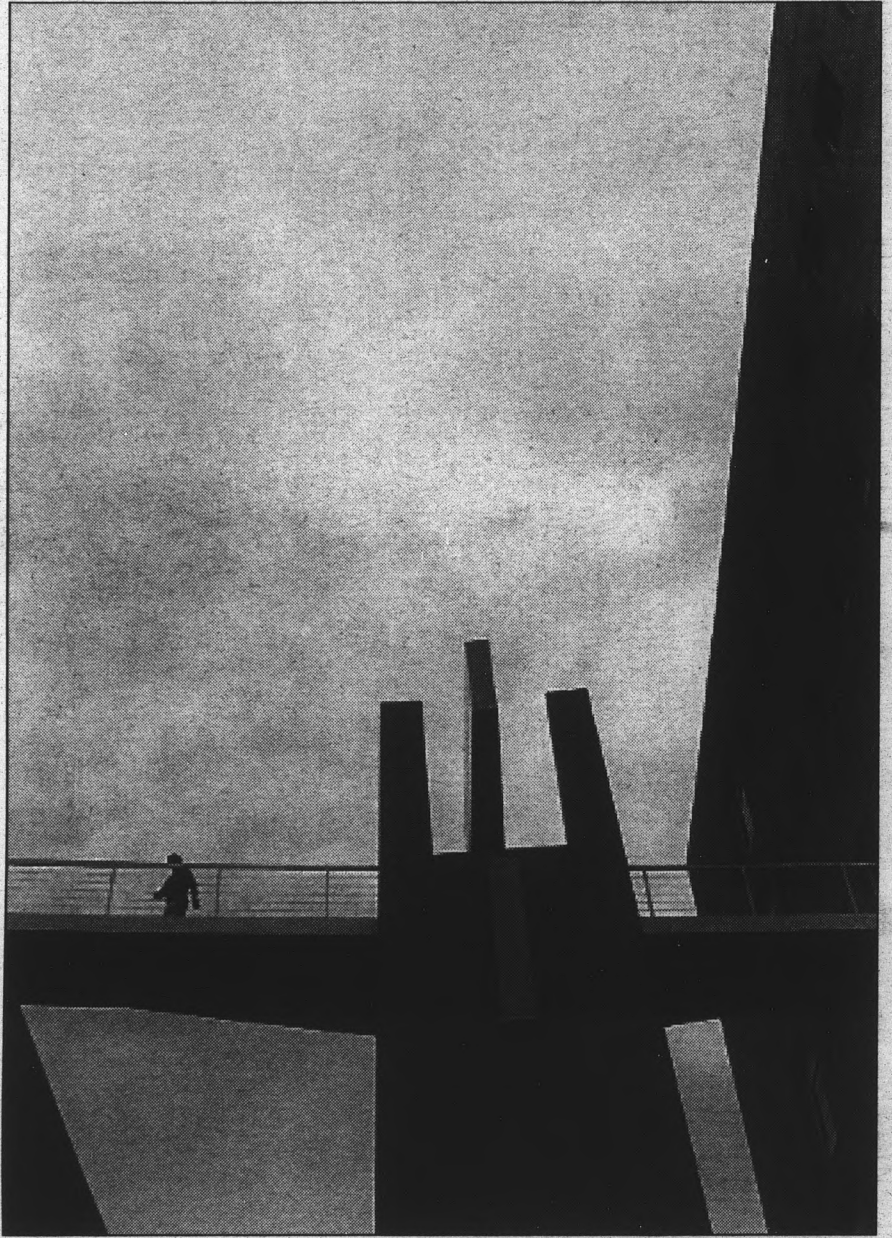

ASU DPS Commander Craig Emanuel said he would not be surprised if the case eventually went to civil court as a matter between Residence Life, as landlord, and the fraternity, as tenant.

Dunn said Greek Life, representing the IFC and Panhellenic Council, cannot see any defense for Theta Delta Chi. The University informed the chapter's alumni seven years ago of the needed roof repairs, which would cost $110,000. The chapter has had plenty of time to find the money, he said.

Yet Shire told a different story.

"ASU wasn't working with us," he said. "We were trying to fix the roof all summer, but they weren't working with us. I mean, we're a part of the student body. They should be trying to help us."

ASU Law School Under Fire

Entrance of felon to prompt review of admissions

BY JAKE BATSELL
STATE PRESS

In the wake of an onslaught of public criticism from some of Arizona's most visible politicians, the dean of ASU's College of Law said Wednesday that the school will launch a review of the admissions policy that allowed convicted murderer James Hamm to enroll in the program this fall.

"We will look at our admissions criteria specifically with respect to past criminality," said Richard Morgan, law school dean.

Gov. Fife Symington and several state legislators were among politicians who on Wednesday voiced their discontent with Hamm's admission.

State Senate President Sen. John Greene, R-Phoenix, went so far as to suggest that funding for the law school be pulled if admissions standards are not re-evaluated.

"My belief is that the vast majority of people in Arizona would object to giving up one of the precious law school seats to someone who probably never will be admitted to the Bar in any state," he said. "If we're not going to train people to be lawyers, then we should shut the law school down."

"There are a lot of very mad legislators. There are some legislators who have been saying for years that we don't need two state-funded law schools. This has opened that debate."

Arizona's other law school is located at the UofA.

Hamm said he found the angry legislators' comments irrational and unfounded.

"They have a right to express their opinion, and to do so in the press," Hamm said. "But I

ASU law professor allegedly practiced on bar suspension

BY TAMMY MESA-SIERRA
STATE PRESS

A Flagstaff attorney has filed a report with the Arizona State Bar Association alleging that ASU Law Professor Dale Furnish is continuing to practice law despite a recent bar suspension for not meeting ongoing educational requirements.

Furnish calls the suspension the result of "an oversight," claiming the letter attorney Christopher Kramer sent to the ABA is nothing more than legal mudslinging.

Kramer and Furnish represent opposing parties in a divorce case.

"I am ashamed of myself for letting it happen," Furnish said. "I found out about it Friday and I filed a petition for reinstatement Tuesday."

Furnish admitted to practicing law during his suspension, but insisted his actions were unintentional, adding that the matter was reported by Kramer to "dredge up slime."

The italics) State Press obtained a copy of the letter Kramer sent to the ABA, alleging that "Furnish has continued to practice law since his suspension, appearing as counsel of record in Parker vs. McNeill."

Kramer cited ethical requirements as his motive for sending the letter to the ABA, but denied comment on the specific allegations pending a possible investigation.

"I am required as a member to report any misconduct or anything that would call into question an attorney's ethics to the State Bar," Kramer said. "I believe this matter is currently under investigation and rules on confidentiality prevent me from commenting (on the

Red Planet probe's fate dismal

Hopes of salvaging experiment sink for ASU scientists, students

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

The chances of raising the hopes of ASU geology scientists and students sank even lower Wednesday when NASA failed to receive an expected message from the dysfunctional Mars Observer spacecraft.

The spacecraft is carrying with it the Thermal Emission Spectrometer, a $28 million ASU experiment which was expected to provide information about the geological composition of the Red Planet.

The increasingly likely prospect of the spacecraft being lost left ASU geology students uncertain toward effects that the failure of the project would have on their futures.

"I don't know what I'll be doing," said Steve Schmidt, a student who works in the educational outreach program. "I have a six-month internship riding on this."

Ken Edgett, a graduate student in geology, said he had planned on conducting research to determine the composition of the Red Planet's dark-colored sand dunes.

"But that can still happen. It's just got to happen some other time when we build another spacecraft," Edgett said.

For now, Edgett said he plans on studying sand dunes in the Pacific Northwest as an analog to the dunes on Mars.

This could shorten by half the three years he planned to complete his degree, he said.

Bob MacMillin of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., announced late Wednesday afternoon that no signals were received from the craft, leaving many scientists to believe that contact may never be restored.

"The current situation, however, without communications, certainly erodes our prospects considerably at this point," MacMillin said.

said. "Everyday, in fact, without communications, clearly lessens our probability of success."

Because space exploration can be so risky, few of the graduate students relied heavily on the Mars Observer project for their theses, said Edgett, who is working toward his doctorate.

"We would very much like to have that data to work with and it certainly would have enriched the work that we're doing but it doesn't mean that we can't continue (toward obtaining our degrees) without it," he said. "It's not like we're all going to leave school or something."

David Reyes, a graduate research assistant who is working on his master's degree, said the problems with the Observer will not delay his graduation or keep him from pursuing further studies of space.

"There's an inherent risk, but it's worth the effort," Reyes said. "This is one of those risks that comes with the benefits."

Edgett said NASA could build a duplicate of the craft with the leftover spare parts.

Should NASA support a second Observer, Edgett said the group of about 12 students who have worked with the project would gear their future work toward a second TES.

"If they fund another Observer, I think it's a good bet that I'll be working with the data from the new Mars Observer," Edgett said.

Regardless of the Observer's outcome, Edgett said the project has provided an excellent learning experience to see how a team can work together on a common goal.

"We all have a lot invested in this project — a lot of emotion, as well as a lot of energy and time," Edgett said.

Edgett said the problem with the Observer will also affect the University's outreach program, which will lose the "exciting hook" that drew grade school students into learning about NASA's projects like the Mars Observer.

"The teachers and the kids in Arizona were really excited about interacting with the University, interacting with real scientists, interacting with the students," Edgett said.

This attribution was incorrect. A construction worker witnessed the removal of these items. The State Press regrets the error.

Tomassoni defender steps down from case

PHOENIX (AP) — The Maricopa County public defender's office says different legal representation should be provided an 11-year-old girl who wants to rescind her guilty plea in the slaying of her mother.

Amanda McGee, a deputy public defender, filed a motion Friday in juvenile court citing as a conflict the wish of Tammie Tomassoni to rescind her guilty plea to a juvenile charge of manslaughter.

Taking McGee's advice, Tammie pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the Feb. 5 shooting death of 61-year-old Lydia Tomassoni, her abusive mother.

McGee said the girl needs an independent counsel to determine whether she waived her right to trial in April "knowingly and intelligently."

McGee also said her office has a conflict because it represented four newly disclosed prosecution witnesses, including youths in juvenile detention with the girls.

No hearing date has been set on McGee's motion.

A disposition hearing for Tammie, the juvenile court equivalent of a sentencing, is scheduled for Sept. 17.

Laser guns double number of speeding tickets issued

PHOENIX (AP) — New laser guns that render motorists' radar detectors worthless have doubled the number of speeders some Department of Public Safety officers are catching.

"I used to stop about three people an hour, but now I stop about six," said DPS Officer Richard Edwards. "There are laser detectors out there, but humans can't slow down as quickly as a laser can get a speed reading."

The laser gun is about half the size of a large cereal box and can easily pick out a speeding car driving in a pack of traffic — something that's difficult for a radar gun, said Tucson police Lt. Robert Fund.

The Tucson Police Department recently bought its first laser gun. When seven officers tried it out last week, they issued 101 speeding tickets, including six citations to motorists with radar detectors, in less than three hours.

Using a radar gun, an officer typically issues about six speeding tickets while also making other traffic stops in a 10-hour day, Fund said.

Convict charged with murder

SCOTTSDALE (AP) — A prisoner whose accomplice was shot to death by an officer in a botched escape attempt now faces a murder charge in addition to escape.

Edward Charles Johnson, 22, was charged under the state's felony murder law, which allows first-degree murder charges when commission of certain felonies leads to someone's death, police spokesman Brian Freeman said Tuesday.

Brent Michael Eads, 20, was shot fatally by a detention officer, Harmon David Williams, as Eads drove away with Johnson after Johnson escaped from Maricopa County sheriff's officers at Scottsdale Justice Court.

County eliminates 275 jobs

PHOENIX (AP) — Budget constraints have forced Maricopa County to eliminate about 275 jobs, mostly through attrition, but 200 people could be receiving pink slips, officials said Wednesday.

Most of those to lose their jobs hold upper and middle management positions in the county Health Care Agency, said spokesman Don McDaniel.

He said the county wasn't in a hiring freeze but that it had eliminated more than 300 vacant jobs when the budget was approved in July.

"It is our intention not to reduce services to our constituents but to run a much more efficient level of operations," he said.

Clinic sues NBC for $6 million

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "Dateline NBC" falsely accused an eye clinic of scheduling needless cataract surgery, the clinic charged in a $6 million lawsuit filed Wednesday in federal court.

"What Dateline NBC did to this practice, its doctors and honest employees is reprehensible behavior that cannot be tolerated," said Mark McDaniel, executive director of the Southeastern Eye Center.

The network defended its report in a statement issued after the lawsuit was filed.

The lawsuit names NBC and "Dateline NBC" reporter Brian Ross as defendants. The plaintiffs are Central Carolina Surgical Eye Associates and Dr. C. Richard Epes of Southeastern Eye Center.

The lawsuit says NBC falsely accused officials at the eye clinic of engaging in unnecessary surgery and unethical practices in a May 4 broadcast that implied a healthy woman who posed as a patient was minutes away from needless surgery.

McDaniel repeated his claims that the woman, Beatrice Caine, was told by two different doctors she did not need cataract surgery. He said she called back to try to schedule surgery because NBC was facing a deadline.

NBC issued a statement saying it stood by its story and that it was fair and accurate:

"Dateline NBC" broadcast what happened step by step in that clinic, letting viewers decide for themselves what we had found."

Revenues at Southeastern, a $12-million-a-year business, dropped 30 percent in the three months following the broadcast, McDaniel said.

NBC said the clinic was trying to take advantage of the network following its February apology to General Motors Corp.

"Dateline NBC" apologized to GM to settle a lawsuit. NBC acknowledged it attached incendiary devices to a GM pickup so a fire would erupt after a test crash in a report about the design of some pickups. The head of NBC News, Michael Gartner, resigned after the apology.

UN convoy reaches battered city

Associated Press

A Croat woman refugee tries to stop a U.N. vehicle Wednesday in route to Mostar. U.N. convoys successfully entered the city, carrying food and medicine past enraged Croatian women trying to prevent the aid from reaching rival Muslims.

MEDJUGORJE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — U.N. trucks piled high with food and medicine entered the embattled city of Mostar Wednesday, past enraged Croat women trying to prevent the badly needed aid from reaching rival Muslims.

"They are feeding the Muslims, who are then killing us," sobbed Anica Golamac, 59, a Croat who helped try to block the 27-truck convoy.

The convoy took hours to negotiate the 12 miles from Medjugorje, where it had been delayed for days by Croat intransigence. Relief officials say that thousands of Muslims are near starvation in the besieged city.

Alemka Lisinski, a spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in the Croatian capital of Zagreb, said the U.N. trucks entered the Croat-held western section of Mostar near nightfall.

She said 175 tons in basic drugs, powdered milk, baby food and other food was to cross into the eastern sector, where 55,000 Muslims have been trapped for more than two months.

Another 80 to 90 tons was to go to the Croat-controlled west bank of the Neretva River, she said. There was no word on when the trucks might unload.

Overnight, meanwhile, the U.S. Air Force made its first airdrop of food and medical supplies into Mostar, expanding its six-month program to drop supplies into Bosnia.

Once allies, Croats and Muslims have fought bitterly in recent weeks for Mostar, in southwestern Bosnia, and across central Bosnia. They and Bosnia's Serbs are engaged in a vicious land grab before a peace settlement is reached to divide Bosnia into three ethnic states.

Croats have been trying to drive Muslims out of Mostar, which they want as the capital of their lands in Bosnia.

As part of efforts to get the convoy into Mostar, U.N. officials said a cease-fire agreed for the town late Tuesday was holding Wednesday and U.N. military observers entered the town at dawn to monitor it.

However, while the United Nations said the truce was meant to be permanent, Croat military commanders said it was only valid for Wednesday's convoy.

Bosnian Croat women vowing not to let the convoy pass stopped it first on the outskirts of Medjugorje and again in the village of Citluk, about four miles away.

U.S. imposes sanctions on China, Pakistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States applied limited sanctions against China and Pakistan on Wednesday after concluding that China had sold missile technology to Pakistan, violating an international arms control agreement.

The move constituted another setback to U.S.-Chinese relations, plagued by differences over human rights and other issues relating to China's weapons export program.

The sanction bans the sale of sensitive high technology equipment to the Chinese entities responsible for the sale, said State Department spokesman Mike McCurry.

"It's our estimate that somewhere between $400 million and $500 million a year of commercial activity will be affected by the sanctions that are imposed today," he said. Those figures are less than 10 percent of U.S. exports to China last year. The impact on trade with Pakistan is expected to be minimal.

At issue is U.S. evidence suggesting that China transferred to Pakistan technology related to the M-11 surface-to-surface missile. Its export violates the Missile Technology Control Regime.

China denies selling the weapons to Pakistan. In Pakistan, a Foreign Ministry spokesman Munir Akram said Pakistan purchased short-range missiles from China, but not the M-11s. He did not address the question of whether Pakistan had purchased M-11 missile technology.

Pakistan already is prohibited from receiving most U.S. aid because of legislation barring assistance to countries developing a nuclear weapons capability.

Officials said part of the U.S. case against the two countries was based on satellite photographs taken of a Chinese shipment which arrived last year at the Pakistani port of

The excellence continues

The Theta Delta Chi fraternity house is in a shambles, conspicuously following the group's eviction Monday by ASU officials.

And not one member of the fraternity has come forward to deny involvement.

Wisely, Interfraternity Council Reagan Dunn said the damage, if done by members of Theta Delta Chi, cannot be condoned.

Simply, there is not much else he could say. The action was deplorable. And according to Dean of Student Development Jim Rund, the fraternity's president did not deny that members of the fraternity were involved in the destruction.

The one member who has been in contact with the State Press only disputed police damage figures. When asked if "Theta Delt" members were involved, Justin Shire said he didn't know.

But even before members of the fraternity have been charged and blame placed, individual Greeks are rushing to justify the fraternity's alleged actions, arguing that they are victims of a heartless ASU administration.

It is a knee-jerk reaction that makes absolutely no sense. Would the same people who are defending Theta Delta Chi defend them if they went on a shooting rampage through campus?

Greeks who are defending the fraternity need to rethink their priorities. Just because these allegedly destructive cretins are Greeks doesn't mean they are saints.

If fraternity members are charged, no one can justify what the fraternity did to that structure. Frustration with the terms of the frat's lease with ASU cannot be addressed through the destruction of the building being leased. Negotiations don't work if you destroy what you're haggling over.

Let's rehash what destruction was actually done:

- Human waste was left on the building's floors
- Forty windows were smashed
- Holes were punched in walls
- Doors were missing
- Toilets were broken
- Destroyed furniture and garbage were strewn throughout the structure and on the surrounding grounds.

Also on the grounds were hundreds of Theta Delta Chi "rush" fliers with the ironic heading, "The excellence continues." A note was painted in large letters on a nearby sidewalk reading "Rush Theta Delta Chi ... Grab flyer (sic)" with an arrow pointing to the grass where the fliers were haphazardly thrown.

The main question, if fraternity members were involved, is this: Wasn't there at least one "brother" who paused amid the destruction and thought that what they were doing was wrong, illegal or prosecutable?

Isn't this exactly what a frustrated child might do? The child doesn't get his way, so he rants and raves, throwing stuff around making a general ass out of himself.

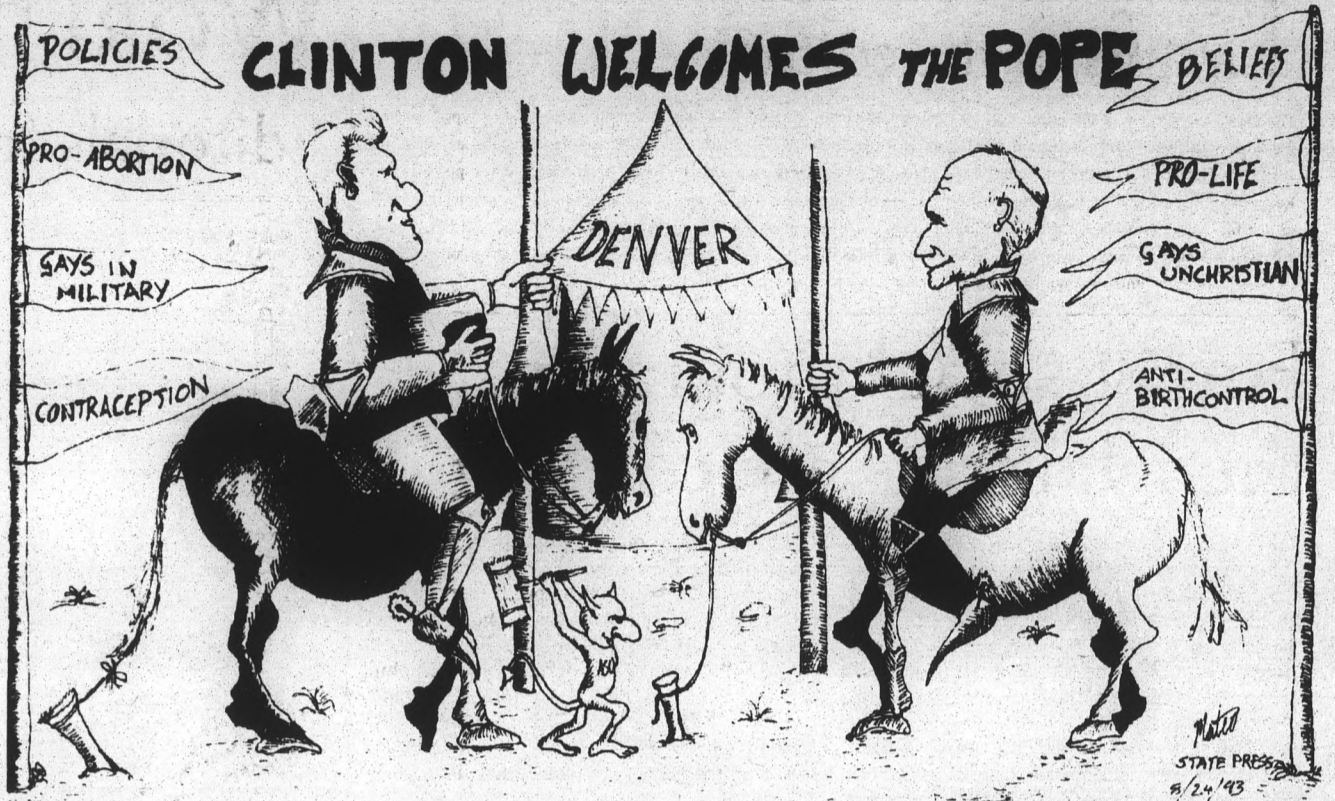

If members are found to have been involved, it's time for ASU officials to stick a big fat pacifier in the baby's mouth. The fraternity, without question, should be made an example of by the University.

Prosecute, prosecute, prosecute.

And the rest of ASU's Greeks should condemn their actions too, lest they be grouped with them.

Pope reaffirms life in Denver visit

They seem like such an unlikely pair.

NBA superstar Michael Jordan and Pope John Paul II. One man is a rich, black athlete. The other is an old, Polish priest. They are two different people from two different worlds. Yet these two men were brought together on the front pages of America's newspapers last week by a common issue.

That issue is the slaughter of innocent human beings.

Because of the immeasurable fame of his son, the details of James Jordan's death are well known. Of course, the murder was a shocking and grotesque act of violence. Of course, the randomness of the crime is frightening. Of course, these kinds of things happen everyday.

And, of course, this is exactly what John Paul II was speaking out against while presiding over World Youth Day in Denver.

Delivering several passionate speeches, the head of the Catholic Church implored America to put an end to the "slaughter of innocent human beings." Admittedly, the call to cease such a "slaughter" will be narrowly interpreted by many people as only a condemnation of abortion. That it is, but it is also much more.

The slaughter of innocent human beings is not only happening in abortion clinics. Euthanasia proves that the slaughter is happening in hospitals. Gang violence proves that the slaughter is happening in the streets. Dr. Jack Kevorkian proves that the slaughter is happening in people's homes. And the senseless murder of James Jordan proves that the slaughter is happening to those we least expect to be affected.

Such rampant denial of human dignity proves that the slaughter can also happen to you or me.

Once we are able to cut through all of the rhetoric that seems to cloud contemporary issues concerning life and death, we are left with this conclusion: the dignity of the human person has been rejected by American society.

Ironically, if not for the brutal slaying of the man affectionately called "Pops" Jordan, the average citizen could easily dismiss the stirring words of the pontiff as delusive ramblings of just another Catholic priest out of touch with the "real" world.

However, the murder of his father is exactly that which brings Michael Jordan so close to the Pope.

Last week, both of these famous men were forced to share the burden of the slaughter of innocent human beings with the American public, as well as the world media.

One man shared his grief from a pulpit in North Carolina at the funeral of his father. The other shared from a pulpit in Denver at a celebration for the world's youth.

And both men did it on the front page of your newspaper.

Forget social programs, the Martians are coming

I would like to address two astronomical events that I feel are related. One is the not-so-recent sighting of irrigation canals on Mars, and the other is the loss of NASA's Mars Observer. These events taken together can only lead to one obvious conclusion. There are living beings on Mars and they blew up our spaceship.

I don't intend to spark mass hysteria, but since our two civilizations now know of each other, I can foresee only two courses of action. Either we invade Mars, or the Martians invade Earth.

Ray Bradbury vividly described the danger inherent in overtaking a planet such as Mars, but

I feel that it is our only choice if we want to keep our civilization the way it is. (It is possible that Martians could be friendly, but not probable as theorized by solo recording artist Peter Wolfe in the song "Mars Needs Women.")

In order to keep our women, and anything else that the Martians want from us, it is mandatory for all Earth organizations to stop funding frivolous programs like Social Security and education so that they may focus on an invasion of Mars.

Get story straight on ASASU

A response to S. Talbott Smith's editorial of Wednesday:

First of all, make up your mind, are you not covering ASASU because it's behaving like a student club or because only "a couple hundred" people will read about it?

If your concern is with your perception of your readership (has this been surveyed or are you just guessing?) then it doesn't matter how ASASU behaves, does it? You say you won't cover ASASU because "the thought of turning readers away is disheartening." Then why not just run articles and pictures about the size and shape of the breasts of freshmen women. I'm sure your readership will rise dramatically!

On the other hand, if the reason you choose not to cover ASASU is that they may be violating the Open Meetings Law, or at least acting like power-drunk fools, THAT should be front-page news. The court to bring this to is the student body, your readership. The concept that a journalist can be openly refused attendance at a meeting that concerns a public body and public funding by elected members of the government astounds me, but I can't see that putting by refusing to cover their activities hurts anyone except the student body, and allows their indefensible behavior to continue.

Your pointless list of offenses, nay, fiascos at ASASU serves only to enforce the petty appearance of your argument. The beauty of a newspaper is that those who want to read about a year-old hurricane in Florida, the latest Greek tragedy, or the current actions of our elected officials can select the page containing just the information they want to read and skip the parts that are disinteresting.

As a student, I am offended that the most two powerful allies that students have on campus are wasting their time and resources attacking each other rather than working together for all our benefit.

Get your collective heads out of your a**es and do your jobs!

State Press unfair to Greeks

We all know it is another year here at ASU because of the press surrounding the Theta Delta Chi fraternity here on campus. Once again ASU officials play it off as though they had only the best interests of the undergraduate fraternity members on their minds when they ordered the members out of the house. Anyone who knows this campus realizes that ASU has been trying to get rid of the Greeks for a very long time. Also, anyone who knows this campus knows that fellow students at the State Press are willing and eager to support the stereotyped image of Greeks as drunk, ignorant rich kinds. If you do not believe this then try and think back to a front-page story with a huge headline supporting the fraternities and sororities. I would like to bet that there are more negative stories on Greeks than positive stories.

But it is unfair to say that the total problem is at the hands of the State Press and ASU officials. The members of the Greek community are out there wearing their letter T-Shirts, joining groups on campus, raising money for charity, living in the dorms and houses that require payment to ASU itself and provide money to Residence Life, singing and dancing, having a good time, etc. It is almost scary to think what society will be like when these Greeks infiltrate the system! Let me provide you with just a few examples: Craig T. Nelson (Beta), Francis E. Willard (Alpha Phi), Delta Burke (Pi Beta Phi), Robert Frost (Theta Delta Chi) and George Bush (Deke).

WORLD VIEWS

Editorials from around the globe

Compiled By The Associated Press

Arab News, Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, on Bosnia-Herzegovina:

As NATO bumbles and blusters over Bosnia, the time has come to rethink its role, which ultimately begs this question: Should NATO still exist?

"To be or not to be" was the famous question that Shakespeare's Hamlet, prince of Denmark, posed to himself. Perhaps some North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) officials should dust off their worn schoolboy Shakespeare collections and begin asking themselves the same question.

After the end of the Cold War, NATO has found it increasingly difficult to find its niche in the game of nations. With its raison d'etre — a menacing Soviet Union — no longer in existence, NATO has struggled to find a new reason for existence. ...

If NATO cannot be an impartial arbiter of Europe's broils, then NATO should not be involved in the process at all. Why build up such a formidable military machine if there is no intention of using it? Can there be a more clear-cut case for the necessity of intervention than in Bosnia?

It's time for NATO to do some soul-searching, to either rethink its role or rethink its existence.

Unfortunately, while NATO gropes for a new role, Bosnia slowly burns.

The Straits Times, Singapore, on Japan's World War II responsibilities:

Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa deserves to be complimented on his reported proposal for a ... fund to compensate victims of World War II.

Less than a fortnight ago, in his first news conference upon becoming premier, he acknowledged that Japan had conducted a war of aggression against its neighbors. Last week he underscored the sincerity of his contrition when it was disclosed that he was considering the setting-up of an "Asia-Pacific Fund" for the victims. For those who stand to be compensated, that is good news. The news is no less important for a Japan which is still trying to come to terms with an inglorious period in its history. ...

The jury is still out on whether the majority of Japanese regret the past sincerely and unequivocally and are willing to apologize for it. The payment of compensation to the direct victims of aggression will be a step in that direction. It is important that Japan take that step as it rehabilitates itself politically in post-Cold War Asia.

Milliyet, Istanbul, Turkey, on Armenia-

Azerbaijan:

News reports from the front indicate an expanding Armenian occupation and the fleeing of tens of thousands of Azerbaijanis towards the Iranian border, leaving their towns and villages behind.

Local Armenians and the people in Armenia may feel happy over this "victory." But if there are any realistic people among them, they should consider this occupation and acquisition of land not as a happy event but as a matter of concern for the future.

The Armenian attacks have hit Azerbaijan at a time of unpreparedness, weakness and confusion. But this cannot go on forever. Time will come when the Azerbaijanis will regain their strength and certainly try to get back the lands they lost. The entire Azerbaijani population already shares the same hate.

Don't the Armenian aggressors realize they have sown the seeds of enmity that might last for generations to come?

La Repubblica, Rome, on changes in Russia and China:

Those who say that Russia is drawing closer to the West should think again. It is actually becoming much more like the world's underdeveloped countries.

How is it possible that a country which boasts the best balance in the world between its population and its resources, is beginning to resemble regions which have never developed from extreme poverty? And how do you explain the fact that China, which has an unfavorable proportion between its population and its resources, seems to be flourishing?

It is tempting to attribute everything to the fact that, while China is becoming capitalist, Russia is still trapped in socialism's stranglehold.

This explanation seems too simplistic but one fact is certain: the majority of industry in China is state owned and works, as the economic indicators testify. On the other hand, in Russia everything is under threat of paralysis.

Since the death of Stalin, the former Soviet Union has produced the worst ruling class imaginable. Not one ruler is exempt, least of all Gorbachev.

They were all communists, but so were the successors of Mao. The group of rulers that emerged after Mao's revolution have produced much better results for their country than the statesmen that came out of the school of Lenin and Stalin.

Russia is growing away from the world in which we live and it is not at all clear where it is headed.

"I've heard some legislators talking about closing down one of the law schools, and you can guess which one. They're going to have to change their enrollment standards."

—House Speaker Mark Killian, R-Mesa, on the ASU College of Law, which has been criticized for admitting paroled murderer James Hamm.

Sound Off: 965-4287

This Week's Question:
"What was your biggest back-to-school surprise?"

Hamm

think that to go beyond that and to threaten one of the major institutions in the state — I honestly believe that is very injudicious. It's inappropriate, it's uncalled for, and I think it's unwise."

Morgan added, "I hope that something as dire as cutting or pulling our funding wouldn't result from a single decision with which people disagree."

Hamm was granted parole last year after serving a 18-year sentence for a drug-related murder of a Tucson man in 1974. He was one of 161 students admitted to ASU's law program this year.

Doug Cole, Symington's press secretary, said the governor contacted ASU President Lattie Coor on Tuesday to inform him "that the sentiment of the Legislature was well against the policy of the law school admitting Mr. Hamm."

"And the Legislature controls the purse strings," Cole added.

Coor declined comment on the issue, but University spokesperson George Cathcart said Coor is firm in his support of the decision to admit Hamm by the law school's admissions committee.

Both Cole and Greene said they have received phone calls from students and parents outraged at Hamm's admission.

"I've heard several people tell me that they thought their kids were going to go to ASU law school, and they refuse to send them there now," Greene said.

Though Morgan said admissions criteria would be reviewed, he defended the decision to admit Hamm, who scored in the 96th percentile on his LSAT exam.

Morgan said the admissions committee "considered the matter deliberately and carefully and reached a judgment that Mr. Hamm ought to be admitted."

"When he was convicted, he forfeited a number of his rights, but he didn't forfeit the right to apply to a state university or law school for an education," Morgan said.

Greene disagreed.

"I just think it was an irrational thing for the committee to do," he said. "Hiding behind academic freedom and diversity and all that stuff is like being on another planet, as far as I'm concerned."

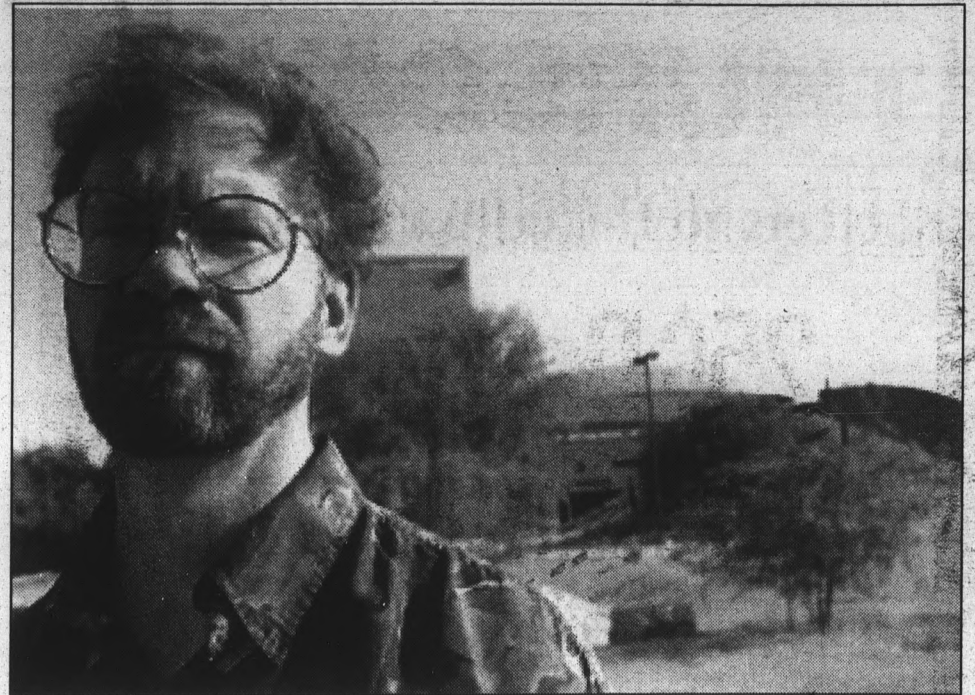

Although Hamm said as a convicted felon he would likely face considerable scrutiny in being admitted to the State Bar, he said a denial of approval would not be automatic.

"Who says I can't make it to the State Bar?" Hamm said. "There are other people in other jurisdictions who have committed homicide and have subsequently been admitted to the Bar."

"I understand that I would bear a heavy burden before the Character and Fitness Committee ... but I'm fully convinced that I can do that at the time."

Hamm has said that he plans to utilize his legal education in continuing to work with Middle Ground, a prisoner-rights organization which he and his wife founded.

Christina Womack, a senior justice studies major planning to apply to ASU's law school next fall, expressed support for Hamm's admission.

Brian Fitzgerald/State Press

The admission of convicted murderer James Hamm (pictured) sparked outrage among state politicians Wednesday, prompting ASU College of Law Dean Richard Morgan to say the school's admission requirements will be re-evaluated.

"I feel if he scored in the 96th percentile on his LSAT, he's obviously qualified to be there," she said.

"There are many of us out there who want to go to law school to teach, to go on and do other things in their career and not necessarily go out into private practice."

Hamm said his critics are labeling him by stereotype rather than evaluating him as an individual.

"These people don't know James Hamm," he said. "They're just looking at the category — he's a felon, it was a capital crime, he's been in prison for a long period of time."

specifics.)

Harriet Turney, chief ABA counsel, verified Furnish's suspension, but said Arizona Supreme Court confidentiality rules prevent her from divulging information about Kramer's letter or any investigation.

"If we did get that letter and we were conducting an investigation on that, I wouldn't be able to tell you," Turney said.

Furnish's suspension stemmed from a failure to report his completion of continuing educational courses that all ABA members are required to take in compliance with an Arizona Supreme Court rule.

He called the situation "ironic" because he was a proponent of the requirement and voted to have it enacted. Although he failed to file a report before the suspension deadline, Furnish said he has far exceeded the legal requirements of 15 course hours per year between classes taken and taught.

Both Turney and Furnish said the suspension was procedural rather than substantive, which is considered less severe and unlikely grounds for disbarment.

College of Law Dean Richard Morgan said he just learned on Wednesday of the accusations made against Furnish.

"This is the first I have known of any difficulty," Morgan said. "Until I have time to reflect on this, I would prefer not to comment."

Morgan added that law school faculty members are not required to possess bar membership.

Karachi.

Lynn Davis, the undersecretary of state for international security affairs, informed the Chinese and Pakistani ambassadors of the U.S. decision.

U.S. law requires that sanctions be applied when the Missile Technology Control Regime is violated. It bars the transfer of missiles with a range of more than 186 miles or a payload of more than 1,100 pounds.

Richard Brecher, of the U.S.-China Business Council, said China had an $18 billion trade surplus with the United States last year. The net effect, he said, is to worsen the trade imbalance.

He said the U.S. company most affected probably would be Hughes Aircraft, which exports to China satellites that are launched on Chinese rockets.

McCurry said the U.S. decision principally affects the two Chinese entities that were involved in the transaction: the Ministry of Aerospace Industry, which includes the China Precision Machinery Import-Export Corporation, and the Ministry of Defense. Subsidiaries of these entities also are affected.

The administration acted only after high-level contacts did not produce a positive result. The contacts included one by Secretary of State Warren Christopher last month in Singapore.

McCurry suggested the sanctions may be extended beyond the entities cited in his announcement. He said a legislative amendment penalizes all government entities in a country which engages in trade in violation of the MTCR.

Earlier this week, the administration rebuked China for having revoked the passport of a labor activist who had visited with President Clinton in the spring.

Health center boosts HIV testing

By MELANIE K. SELCHO
STATE PRESS

ASU Student Health Center has increased its free anonymous HIV testing to a weekly basis starting this month in an attempt to accommodate high student demand, a health educator said.

Anne Raynor, health educator who coordinates the testing program, said SHC began offering anonymous testing through Maricopa County in February during AIDS Awareness Week. Because they turned away more than 260 people, Maricopa County agreed to provide the service at ASU monthly in April. Testing was increased to twice a month in June, she said.

Early testing opportunities are important for students, Raynor said.

"Early detection is an opportunity to engage in preventive treatments, therapies and lifestyle behaviors. People can expand the length and quality of life and lengthen the time before symptoms appear," she added.

Even with weekly testing, which began this month, SHC is still turning students away. Students may call one week ahead to make an appointment, but Raynor said the appointments are usually filled within 30 minutes. Only 10 students can be tested per week.

"The staff has been inundated with phone calls on Wednesdays," she said. "It's very disheartening to have to turn students away."

However, with SHC providing the service, many students who would be turned away because of space restrictions are referred to other sites providing free anonymous testing, Raynor said.

Though SHC offers confidential testing for a $6 lab charge, anonymous testing has some advantages some students prefer, Raynor said. If tested anonymously, a student is given a number and all results and appointments are listed only by that number.

Confidential test results are linked with a student's name, though the results are still confidential. But there is a risk of discrimination from insurance companies because they "traditionally get a hold of the information," Raynor said.

One student being tested at the center Wednesday, who wished to remain anonymous, said she was referred to the testing program by a SHC doctor. She said both types of tests were explained to her, but she preferred to be tested anonymously.

The convenience and anonymity of SHC AIDS testing encourage students to be tested.

"I think it's great," the anonymous student said. "It's more convenient (than the county health sites)."

She added that she got an appointment on her first attempt so she didn't face the frustration of being put off week after week like other students.

Some physicians at SHC do prefer confidential testing, Raynor said. Its advantage is that the physician can prescribe treatment after a positive test.

"A student will have access to the care and treatment that can be helpful in prolonging life," she said. With an anonymous test, "it's the individual's responsibility to seek medical care."

Campus reaction to the testing has been nothing but positive, Raynor said.

"There's been a favorable response and it's been well-received by the administration and students," she said.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

• A fight broke out Tuesday in Room 206 of the Goldwater Engineering Complex between two ASU students. The brawl began after a disagreement over who was next in line for advisement.

• The car of an ASU employee was burglarized off campus Tuesday resulting in the loss of several ASU keys. The police report estimated damage and loss from the theft at $6,000.

• A Manzanita Hall resident reported Tuesday morning that numerous harassing phone calls have been made to her dorm room during the past week.

• A $800 steel drum was stolen from the Music Building Tuesday afternoon.

Between 8 p.m. and 10:10 p.m. Tuesday night, six alarms were activated in various buildings around campus. Thunderstorms were blamed and ASU DPS reset the alarms.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

• A Tempe man was robbed Monday night by three men in the west parking lot of 4130 S. Mill Ave. When the 40-year-old was confronted by the assailants, he was told, "Die, or we want your money," police said. The victim was pushed around and surrendered $35. Because of a high level of intoxication at the time of the incident, the victim said he would be unable to identify his attackers.

• An unknown man is being sought by police for a reported indecent exposure at 2642 E. Orange St. Sunday night. The man was in the pool area of an apartment complex when a resident saw him lift his jogging shorts to expose his penis and begin masturbating. Two other witnesses saw the man but told police they did not see him masturbating.

• A Tempe man was arrested Sunday night after police found eight packets of methamphetamine in his pocket. The man was searched after police discovered he was wanted on two warrants.

• Three Tempe residents were arrested Sunday when a warrant search at 929 E. Vista Del Cerro Drive revealed two small plastic bags of marijuana. Police received the warrant after several small pipes and other drug paraphernalia were seen by police during a kidnapping investigation.

• Two Tempe children started a grass fire in a vacant field in the 2300 block of West University Drive. The fire burned one half acre.

• The restaurant in Smitty's at 3232 S. Mill Ave. was robbed of $2,514.62 Monday night. The cash and checks were taken from a secured safe which had no sign of forced entry.

• Upon investigating an apartment at 616 S. Hardy Drive Tuesday night, police confiscated one laminated marijuana leaf. The leaf, found stuck to the fridge, was impounded and marked for destruction.

ASA opposed Clinton's national service proposal

Members fear federal student financial aid cuts

BY MARK M. MACIAS
STATE PRESS

Arizona Students' Association members said they are not in favor of President Clinton's proposed National Service Trust Fund bill because funding for federal student financial aid will be affected.

However, two of Arizona's representatives who supported the bill said it will not have any impact on student financial aid.

ASA Director Patrick McWhortor said ASA opposes the National Service Trust Fund bill because it doesn't provide funding for higher education.

"ASA does not believe that the national service proposal is a higher-funding education bill.

It is a proposal to promote public service," McWhortor said. "We don't see this as a bill that provides financial aid for students to pursue a higher education. (The bill) will only fund about 150,000 students across the country."

The National Service Trust Fund bill, which passed the U.S. House of Representatives by a 275-152 vote on Aug. 6, is awaiting approval in the U.S. Senate. If it passes the Senate, Clinton is expected to sign it since the proposal was highly touted during his campaign.

Arizona's District 6 Rep. Karen English said she is in favor of the National Service bill because it will promote "job training, higher education and (will) help our communities address some of their most pressing social needs."

"This legislation will target communities located in potential enterprise zones, military conversion areas or on public lands and Indian reservations," English said. "These areas have immediate economic development needs.

"National Service (also) offers a unique opportunity to middle-class families who are struggling to pay for their children's higher education. Anyone can participate in the program, regardless of income."

Lonnie Johnson, spokesman for District 1 Rep. Sam Coppersmith, said the National Service Trust Fund bill will not affect any other forms of federal financial aid. He cited the Congressional Research Service, which stated that 50 percent of appropriated funding must be spent on programs in areas of economic distress.

ASA delegate Rossie Turman said he is in favor of the bill, but only if student financial aid levels remain constant.

"We don't want a program that is going to take away from grant and loan money," Turman said. "If they are going to do national service, they need to come up with another source of funding, rather than take it away from programs that are already underfunded."

In a written statement, the ASA Board of Directors concluded that federal student financial aid cannot afford further reductions.

The National Service bill allows citizens to perform public service work in exchange for benefits such as education financial assistance. The Senate is expected to vote on the proposal after its August recess.

Tempe City Council votes on false alarm plan

Offenders could receive $100 fine to reimburse city

By Joy E. Beason
State Press

Tempe City Council members will vote tonight on a solution to a "million dollar problem" — false alarm calls to police — by voting on an ordinance that will fine false alarm offenders.

"(After) the fifth false alarm in a 12 month period, you would pay a service fee," said Jill Kennedy, a city attorney. "People are contacted after their third false alarm."

The fee, which would be $100 if the Council approves the ordinance, is based on an officer's time on the scene as well as the time the police officer spends writing a report on the incident.

According to the Public Safety Committee of the Arizona Burglar and Fire Alarm Association, false alarms cost the city millions of dollars each year. Thousands of man hours are also wasted.

False burglar alarms are their biggest problem, she said. Last year Tempe had over 11,000 false alarms, most of which come from businesses. The problem with most businesses is a lack of education among employees as to the correct use of alarms.

"They are going to make it a little stricter," said Larry Randall, spokesman for the Tempe Fire Department, about the proposed ordinance.

He said the fire department, which deals with both city fire emergencies as well as those on campus, has problems with false alarms and thinks the proposed ordinance is a fair solution to the costly problem.

"It is not like they are slapping people in the pocketbook for no reason," he said. "I think it (the ordinance) will have a positive effect if the business owners and other Tempe residents are made aware of the great cost behind false alarms."

They hope the ordinance will target malicious false alarms and false alarms because of a lack of maintenance.

Malicious alarms are caused by "people who just get a kick out of pulling a false fire alarm," Randall said.

He said fire department officials understand there are always going to be false alarms, such as when someone bumps into a device. However, any false alarm cuts down the readiness of the fire department.

He said that campus alarms are "padded" because a fire alarm goes through ASU DPS before Tempe Fire Department is notified. However, he emphasized that a false alarm at a dorm would take a lot of fire engines out of service. They are required to send four engines because they are dealing with such a "great safety hazard."

"I would support it (the proposed ordinance)," said Joe Colaiacovo, an architecture student. "Anytime there is a false alarm, it could harm other people. I think it is a good idea."

The only downfall according to Colaiacovo is that the correct person might not be punished.

"You don't always know who did it ... like the people who do it as a prank or a joke," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sarah Ferguson, the Duchess of York, says she has been undergoing therapy since her breakup with Prince Andrew.

She began therapy after newspapers published topless photographs of her with American businessman John Bryan, she said in an interview recorded for broadcast Thursday on NBC's "First Person with Maria Shriver."

"It started after the photographs. And it's really helped me ... made me stop being so ... quite so hard on myself. I'm very, very super critical of myself. So it doesn't help when the press criticize too," she said.

Although Sarah and Andrew have lived separately for more than a year, she said they remain good friends. "We still just think of each other very highly, and we have a great love for each other."

She blamed their separation on Andrew's duties as a Navy officer, saying they spent only 42 days together during their first year of marriage.

"Andrew always used to say to me, 'one is a prince, then the naval officer, then the husband,'" the duchess said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An animated dinosaur film co-produced by "Jurassic Park" director Steven Spielberg will be released in November, Universal Pictures said.

"We're Back! A Dinosaur Story," is based on a children's book by the same name written by Hudson Talbott, the studio announced Tuesday.

The film features the voices of Walter Cronkite, John Goodman, John Malkovich, Julia Child, Jay Leno and Martin Short, the studio said.

Spielberg's "Jurassic Park" is the summer's top-earning film, with more than $300 million in domestic ticket sales after 11 weeks of release.

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Carville, chief political strategist for President Clinton's election campaign, and Mary Matalin, his counterpart in the Bush campaign, have finally set a wedding date — Thanksgiving.

Matalin announced the date Tuesday to the audience of her show "Equal Time" on the CNBC cable channel.

She joked that the date was appropriate because "it's a day to give thanks — James finally made the commitment."

They are collaborating on a book about the 1992 presidential campaign.

LONDON (AP) — The bad boy of the British aristocracy, Charles James Spencer-Churchill, the marquess of Blandford, was fined 1,000 pounds, or $1,500, Wednesday for failing to pay for six taxi fares.

Blandford, heir to a $150 million fortune, pleaded guilty to all six charges.

It was the latest in a string of misdeeds by the 37-year-old son of the 11th Duke of Marlborough. He also has been convicted of assault, burglary, possessing cocaine, driving while disqualified and failing to pay maintenance to his wife.

Blandford's father has taken legal action to prevent him from inheriting much of the family's fortune, including Blenheim Palace, birthplace of Winston Churchill. Blandford is a great nephew of the wartime prime minister.

NEW YORK (AP) — The next project for Roger Daltrey, ex-frontman for the rock group The Who, is a pair of new albums, one for grown-ups and the other aimed at their kids.

Daltrey signed two recording contracts last week, said his publicist, Michael Pagnotta. The first deal, with Continuum Records, is for a solo album, possibly followed by a live release.

The second contract, with BMG Kidz-Zoom Express, is for a children's album titled "The Man in the Moon Takes a Night Off." It's due out next spring.

With The Who, Daltrey provided his distinctive lead vocals on such classics as "Baba O'Reilly" and "Pinball Wizard."

Sun Devil scrimmage open

The public is invited to watch the ASU football team scrimmage tonight at Sun Devil Stadium at 6 p.m. The Sun Devils will also have an open scrimmage on Saturday following the annual Fan Photo Day, which begins at 10 a.m.

Jones joins wrestling staff

Zeke Jones, a former three-time all-America wrestler at ASU, will return as an assistant coach under Lee Roy Smith, Athletic Director Charles Harris announced Wednesday. Jones will join assistant coach Matt Ghaffari on the staff, as Smith begins his second year guiding the ASU program.

"I'm very excited to add Zeke Jones to our staff and our program," Smith said. "His personal charisma and knowledge will no doubt benefit our program as we look to rebuild this year with predominantly freshmen and sophomores."

Jones finished his Sun Devil career in 1990 with a second-place finish at the NCAA Championships, and is currently ranked third on the all-time ASU victory list with 134. He helped lead ASU to its first national championship in 1988.

Braves dealing for Martinez

The Atlanta Braves, trying to strengthen their staff for the stretch run, have worked out a trade for Montreal pitcher Dennis Martinez, pending his approval, The Associated Press learned Wednesday night.

Expos general manager Dan Duquette announced Wednesday that a deal has been agreed upon, but did not identify which team Martinez might join. Martinez was to give his decision at 2 p.m. EDT Thursday.

A source close to the negotiations, however, said the Expos had made a deal with the Braves for a player to be named later. That player was said to be power-hitting Brian Hunter, who was recently sent to the minors after the Braves acquired Fred McGriff.

Martinez, 38, has the right to veto any trade because he is a 10-and-5 man — he's played at least 10 years in the major leagues, including the last five with the same team.

Martinez is 11-8 with a 4.23 ERA this season. He was an All-Star in 1990, 1991 and 1992.

Seles speaks to media

Monica Seles says she "lost everything" when she was stabbed in the back at a tennis tournament four months ago, and now "I have to start out from scratch."

In her first interview since the April 30 stabbing in Hamburg, Germany, the two-time U.S. Open champion told ABC's Diane Sawyer, "I haven't hit a ball for a long time and ... I mean for me to get back to any level is going to take a lot of hours."

Unable to defend her Open title this year, Seles said her recovery will include not only a great deal of physical work but also some mental conditioning.

Seles, recuperating in Vail, Colo., hasn't even been able to look at the injury.

"It's not something I want to do. It just reminds me too much of what actually happened," she said.

Cardinals quarterback Steve Beuerlein, who signed a three-year $7.5 million contract with the team in April, has been battling with teammate Chris Chandler during the preseason for the starting job.

HELP WANTED

Beuerlein aims to be No. 1 QB

BY MIKE BRANOM
STATE PRESS

Phoenix Cardinals quarterback Steve Beuerlein still has not won the nod for the starting spot, but he has the look of a winner in his eyes.

You can see the look as he sizes up the reporters who constantly ask him about Chris Chandler, his competition in the quarterback race. You can see it as he reads the defense while leading the Cardinals downfield. You can see it as he jokes with the receivers in the locker room. His face may have a soft, somewhat bored expression, but you can see it all in his eyes.

"If I didn't expect to be the starter, well, I guarantee you I wouldn't have come here," Beuerlein said. "If you don't expect to play and believe in yourself as being capable of being the starter, I don't think you're going to make it at this level."

"You have to have that confidence and that expectation and desire, otherwise you are not going to be successful because there are too many people out there who want your spot."

Beuerlein will get his chance to win the Cardinals' approval as the starter when Phoenix plays the Denver Broncos Friday night at Sun Devil Stadium in the last preseason game for both clubs.

"After the (Denver) game, in my mind, that's when the decision will be made," Beuerlein said. "I plan on making it a real easy decision for them. If I go out and play well, I don't think it will be a tough decision for them. If I go out and struggle, then they're going to have to make a tough decision."

"I don't plan on that coming into it at all." When Beuerlein entered the free-agent pool after spending the previous two years with the Dallas Cowboys, he wanted to join a quality team that would give him an opportunity to start. Minnesota, New England, Seattle and Tampa Bay were all possibilities.

Beuerlein nearly ended up taking snaps for the Kansas City Chiefs, but when the Chiefs won the services of Joe Montana, Phoenix became his first choice. On April 21, he signed a three-year, $7.5-million dollar contract to play for the Cardinals.

Maglischo brings scientific approach to Sun Devil team

BY JULIE REUVERS
STATE PRESS

First-year ASU men's swimming coach Ernie Maglischo has brought with him a scientific style of coaching needed for the Sun Devils to be a legitimate contender for the Pac-10 title.

"I base everything on scientific principles and I cut out the waste and the fat so we don't waste the swimmer's time," Maglischo said.

Hired in May to replace Ron Johnson, who retired after 18 years of service, Maglischo is respected across the country and around the world for his swimming expertise. He has written four textbooks on swimming and one on nutrition for athletes. In addition, he authored two computer programs and three booklets on the technical aspects of competitive swimming.

"He's probably done more research on swimming than almost anyone else in the country," breaststroker Mike Kidd said of Maglischo. "His new ideas are going to help the team immensely."

How well this season's squad does depends largely on the success of 17 new swimmers called upon to contribute. Team co-captain Simon Percy feels that Maglischo's coaching style will be especially helpful to the new swim-

Thomas, McCoy named starting receiver

This is the third story in a series previewing the Sun Devil football team.

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

Feeling hard-pressed to replace the loss of Eric Guliford at wide receiver, Coach Bruce Snyder made it a priority last year to recruit two highly touted junior college prospects in Johnny "J.T." Thomas and John Livingston.

Thomas, a junior college all-American last season at San Bernardino Valley College, has already nailed down one of the starting wide receiver spots with an impressive spring practice in May.

"I'm really satisfied with our improved speed at wideout," Snyder said. "Thomas was very impressive in spring drills and caught the attention of everyone. Both Livingston and Thomas were highly recruited individuals and both have the skills to return punts or kickoffs. That is another priority this fall."

Livingston will be competing with Carlos Artis for the No. 2 spot behind Clyde McCoy at the other starting receiver position.

At Palomar Community College last season, Livingston was a first-team all-Mission Conference and second-team all-state selection after leading his team to its fifth straight league title and the 1991 national championship. As a sophomore, he caught 55 passes for nearly 1,000 yards and 11 touchdowns.

But the battle with Artis for the backup position will be hard fought.

Artis had an impressive spring practice and concentrated more on football during the summer after seeing limited time off the bench for the ASU basketball team last season.

Beuerlein

"It seemed like everything was right," Beuerlein said. "It was exactly the contract I was looking for. I'm from California, so I'm closer to home now. I like the area."

His new teammates are glad to have the 28-year-old Beuerlein around, especially since the quarterback position has been a weak spot for Phoenix ever since Neil Lomax retired in 1989.

"He's a good quarterback and I respect all good quarterbacks," H-back/tight end Butch Rolle said.

"He's real intense," running back Ron Moore said. "He wants to get the job done."

If you look at Beuerlein's statistics from the preseason, they are not impressive, with four interceptions and just two touchdowns, but he is handicapped by an offense that has no game-breaking running back. Moore is correct, because when Beuerlein has the tools, he finishes the job.

He was handed the starting quarterback job at Notre Dame four games into his collegiate career. The Fighting Irish were 1-3 when Coach Gerry Faust handed him the job and Beuerlein did not disappoint. He led Notre Dame to five straight wins and a victory in the Liberty Bowl that season.

In 1989, Beuerlein took over the Cowboys' quarterback spot when Troy Aikman went down with an injury. Just like at Notre Dame, Beuerlein led his team to five consecutive victories, including a 17-13 win over Chicago in the first round of the playoffs. The defeat of the Bears was Dallas' first postseason appearance since 1985 and its first playoff win since 1982.

For all the talk about the quarterback battle, Beuerlein is handling the pressure admirably when compared to Chandler, who recently snapped at reporters when they asked one question too many about the competition.

Still, he is tired of all the "quarterback watches" and constant comparison between himself and Beuerlein.

"I'll be real excited when all this stuff does die down and the season gets going from the standpoint of everything will be decided," he said.

His clean-cut looks and All-American upbringing led one Dallas sportswriter to describe Beuerlein as, "invented by the Boy Scouts, sprang to life from a Norman Rockwell painting and went on to become the poster boy for the Pledge of Allegiance."

"What they don't know won't hurt them," Beuerlein said with a smile. "If people paint that picture of me, fine. I don't care as long as they understand what really makes me tick, what kind of person I am."

If his eyes give any hint to what kind of person he is, look for Beuerlein to be running the offense come Sept. 5 against Philadelphia.

mers. "They have a lot of potential to do really well," Percy said of the new swimmers. "With Ernie being a technical coach, they have greater opportunities to improve and to become that caliber of swimmer that will take us to high rankings in the NCAA."

Maglischo implemented a computer device which videotapes and measures velocity, something new to the team this year. The device allows the swimmers to see exactly what their speed is on the television screen, at the same time that they are watching a breakdown of their stroke. A line on the screen depicts the swimmer's peaks and troughs.

"I've never seen that just on a swimming team deck before," Percy said. "That's pretty high-tech for a school to have. By the end of the year, we'll be a strong force and someone to be reckoned with."

The Sun Devils, who finished third in the Pac-10 and 19th at the NCAA Championships last season, are looking to place higher in the conference this season. This will be no easy feat, according to Maglischo.

Receivers

"I worked hard all summer after camp," Artis said. "After last year, I thought about how hard I wanted to play. My coaches told me that I had to dedicate myself to football, and that is what I did."

"In my spare time, (concentrate on football) is all I do. I just go out and catch balls, and as a result I got better hands. Everything just worked out well."

Artis' dedication to playing football during the summer seems to have worked. In the Sun Devils' scrimmage game last Saturday at Camp Tontozona, he caught five passes for 123 yards and three touchdowns.

"He made great improvement last spring and picked up right where he left off," Snyder said. "He's a big target that can run and he's gaining confidence, so we're really pleased with his progress."

However, neither Livingston nor Artis will receive a great amount of playing time if McCoy stays healthy throughout the season. "If you look at the Pac-10," he said, "schools like USC, Cal and Arizona have been traditionally competitive as the top teams in the national championship. This is the strongest swimming conference in the nation by far."

Maglischo said he will use the preseason to focus on developing a program that will win the respect of the swimmers.

He added that he still needs to familiarize himself with the swimmers' techniques, something a new coach can only do by observation.

While at Cal State-Bakersfield and Chico State University, Maglischo racked up eight Division II and five Division III titles, the only coach at any level to do so. His first title at CSB came only one year after the school entered intercollegiate competition, the first time in NCAA history such a feat had been accomplished.

"At Cal State-Bakersfield, I tried to put together the best team I could as fast as I could," Maglischo said. "I will try to do the same at ASU."
