ASA opposes grad student tuition increase

Group takes aim at Regents, expected '94 university rate hike

BY MARK M. MACIAS
STATE PRESS

The Arizona Students Association is opposing an expected Arizona Board of Regents increase in tuition rates for graduate students at Arizona's three universities in hopes of preventing a fall 1994 hike.

Patrick McWhorter, ASA executive director, said raising the tuition for graduate students may not necessarily raise extra revenue for the state universities, because many graduate students currently receive tuition waivers.

ASA is a statewide group of student and alumni leaders who lobby the state government on behalf of university students.

"A very large number of graduate students get tuition waivers because they are teaching assistants or research assistants," McWhorter said. "The (Graduate College) deans are arguing, 'You're not going to collect as much money as you think you are, because of the number of graduate students that receive tuition waivers.'"

ASA officials said they are mustering public support for their position early to thwart off expected proposals regarding a graduate tuition hike from the Arizona Board of Regents.

The regents took the first step toward varied university tuition levels in April when they approved a $1,000 increase for law students above the hike approved for Arizona university students in general.

McWhorter said opponents to the ASA movement are arguing the high cost of providing graduate programs and the higher earning potential of the students.

Jerry Thomas, Graduate College associate dean, said the graduate program would need to research how many students receive tuition waivers before he could estimate whether a tuition hike would be successful for ASU.

"It would take a little work to find out (how much money could be raised from a tuition hike), because we would have to figure out how many of the 11,500 graduate students are teaching assistants and research assistants at the University," Thomas said. "We also give graduate scholarships that are not even connected to teaching assistants and research assistants."

"I'm sure if that became a serious proposal, then we would look very carefully into all those kinds of issues before we would decide whether this is something that we thought was a good idea."

Regent Art Chapa said he is not opposed to raising tuition for graduate students if the ABOR can show that it makes fiscal sense.

"It made sense for the law school," Chapa said. "I'm not sure

Administrators plan policy review

ASU, UofA officials to target admission standards for felons

BY JAKE BATSELL
STATE PRESS

In response to recent urgings from the Arizona Board of Regents, administrators from ASU and UofA said Tuesday that plans are in the works to review admissions policies for convicted felons.

In addition to reviewing law school admissions standards, Regent Andy Hurwitz said late last week that the ABOR has directed the state's three state universities to review policies regarding the admission of felons on all academic levels.

The possible revamping of Arizona admissions standards stemmed from the controversy surrounding paroled murderer James Hamm's acceptance into the ASU College of Law this fall.

On Tuesday, several administrators from ASU and UofA — which house the state's two law schools — said they will adhere to the ABOR's request.

ASU College of Law Dean Richard Morgan said he plans to meet with the chair of admissions within the next few days to discuss implementing the review.

"We need to work on it, and we will work on it before we start admitting students again," Morgan said. "I don't see it as something that has to be done instantly."

ASU President Lattie Coor said the ABOR originally suggested reviewing admissions policies at last month's board meeting, but said there has been an increased emphasis on the request with the recent media attention directed at the decision to admit Hamm.

"I feel (the Regents' request) is an appropriate response," Coor said. "They asked that at the July meeting of the Board ... to look at the policies of other universities and state schools as they relate to felons."

Neighborhood groups, liquor store find middle ground

BY JOY E. BEASON
STATE PRESS

Neighborhood associations from the community surrounding Farmer Avenue and University Drive on Tuesday withdrew their protest to Tops Liquor store's proposed move into their community.

The two parties had been at odds over the move announced earlier this summer, after the neighborhood associations publicly raised a concern over potential traffic increases.

But a compromise requiring Tops to post traffic signs around the property satisfied the ongoing feud.

The store's owners agreed to the compromise at a Tuesday meeting with the Mitchell Park and Maple/Ash neighborhood associations. Both neighborhoods comprise much of Tempe's historic district.

Greg Eccles, Tops co-owner, said the dispute could have prevented Tempe city officials from approving a liquor license at the new location.

"The city told them (neighborhood association representatives) they had no problems with the building, designwise," said Greg Eccles, co-owner and licensee of Tops Liquor.

"We listened to their concerns based on the number of complaints," Eccles said. "The neighborhood is the core part of our business; we did not want to make any enemies over there."

A letter sent by the Mitchell Park neighborhood association raised traffic concerns involving a proposed drive-thru window.

Tops' owners compromised, stating they would place a no-right turn sign on their property. Although the sign will not be legally enforceable, interested parties believe it will deter people from driving through the neighborhood.

Tops has also agreed to construct an 8-foot wall between themselves and the historic area.

"The drive-thru window is a substantial amount of our sales at our Mesa location," Eccles said. "We hoped to increase our sales by putting in a drive-thru."

As a result of the compromises, Karen Spittler, president of the Mitchell Park neighborhood association, sent a letter of support to Eccles withdrawing the complaint against the liquor license.

"Hopefully, they (the city council) will rule in our favor," Eccles said.

"I am much more inclined to be in favor of the Tops move now than before these changes," said Tempe Vice Mayor Neil Giuliano. "I am hopeful that we will be able to move through this without any difficulty. The concerns that have been addressed are the concerns I had in mind."

"I still want to talk to more neighborhoods and get their reactions. The project may be able to go ahead at this point."

though that the same arguments can be made for other graduate classes." Prior to that supplemental increase, law students held a tuition status that mirrored that of current graduate students, which allowed them to pay rates identical to all undergraduate students.

Although no official agenda has been released, Regent John Munger said the ABOR has informally discussed raising graduate students' tuition for the next academic year.

"We've talked generally about (raising graduate students' tuition)," Munger said. "I think there's going to probably be increase tuition across the board. I don't know if graduate students are going to be paying more than undergraduates."

Chapa said the regents have not yet discussed whether the extra revenue generated from the hike would go directly to the graduate program.

"I think one of the right questions is: 'Where is the money going?'" Chapa said. "When we made the decision about increasing the tuition for law school, we had all of that information in front of us. With respect to the law schools, the money did not all go to the law schools. It went into (the university) general funds, but the presidents understood that a significant part of that new money would go to the law schools."

I really don't know whether that rationale would hold for the other graduate colleges."

said he expects the two law schools will mull over their current policies, but added it may not necessarily result in a change of admissions criteria.

"The two law school deans are going to review their admissions standards," Fahey said. "What the right outcome should be, I don't know. They (the law schools) are the experts."

"But I don't think there's any harm at all in their engaging in this now, just to clear the air and to clarify exactly how they operate."

Morgan announced last week that the school will review its admissions standards "with respect to past criminality."

Hamm said the regents' request to review admissions policies is legitimate, though he defended the right for felons to attend a public institution.

"If one person gets out of prison and he's going to be blocked from public education out here, it seems to me that we've got a problem," Hamm said.

COOR

ASU Provost Milton Glick stressed that the ABOR is requesting a review of admission criteria, not a mandatory revamping of them.

"I have no problem that the regents want us to review the policy, but that doesn't imply any particular result," he said.

Glick added that changing admissions standards at all university levels could affect programs aimed at assisting past criminals.

Glick mentioned that a felon rehabilitation program administered by NAU could be affected if general admissions criteria were altered.

Several Arizona politicians and local attorneys have protested Hamm's admission in recent weeks. State Senate President Sen. John Greene, R-Phoenix, went so far as to suggest that funding be pulled from ASU's law school if admissions standards were not reviewed.

Coor said he is confident that the University could defend against threats to pull funding.

"There are always concerns that are raised that we speak to, but the practice in Arizona is to look at the totality of the University when funding," he said.

Kolbe backs NAFTA bill

PHOENIX (AP) — Both Mexico and the United States will suffer if Congress fails to approve the free trade agreement that includes Canada, but the United States will be blamed, Rep. Jim Kolbe says.

Kolbe told a business forum Monday that President Carlos Salinas de Gortari's liberalization and privatization of trade are "the most dramatic changes that have ever been made in Mexico."

The Arizona Republican who is to lead House ratification efforts for the free trade agreement predicted it will pass if President Clinton supports it strongly enough.

But whether he will do so remains to be seen, and if it is rejected, it will be a huge blow for Salinas and a major loss of credibility for the United States, Kolbe said.

Kolbe and others told the gathering that it also would lead to loss of potential jobs and to a possible boycott of U.S. products in Mexico, now America's third-largest trading partner.

Approval would create the world's largest economic trading bloc.

Indian casino talks end

CAMP VERDE (AP) — Negotiations apparently have ended between the Camp Verde Yavapai-Apache tribe and a casino consultant whose partner reportedly is linked to organized crime, the tribal chairman said Tuesday.

Chairman Ted Smith said he hadn't heard directly from Minneapolis-based consultant Rober Sabes, but had been told by a mutual friend that Sabes had decided against resuming negotiations.

The tribe had discussed a role for Sabes or a company he founded in the tribe's planned casino off Interstate 17 on the busy tourist route from Phoenix to the Grand Canyon.

Smith said a friend of his who worked for Sabes in Minnesota told him that Sabes did not want to do business in Arizona, likely because of the publicity he has received since his business ties were reported earlier this summer.

Waste threatens landfills

PHOENIX (AP) — A proposal to allow limited medical waste disposal in landfills has some officials complaining the public would be endangered.

The Department of Environmental Quality is drawing up rules governing disposal of medical waste. One proposal would allow doctors and dentists who generate less than 50 pounds of medical waste a month to throw it out with regular garbage.

Lawrence Sands, state epidemiologist, said medical waste hasn't been shown to be a major contributor to the spread of infectious disease.

But others disagree, saying the proposal would be especially dangerous to scavengers.

Lawsuit: Suicidal man ignored,

PHOENIX (AP) — Prison officials knew of previous suicide attempts but failed to provide mental health care for an inmate who killed himself after watching a televised documentary about his crime, a prisoners' lawsuit says.

Lee Bolli, 19, was found hanged on July 29 in a restroom at the minimum security Picacho Prison. Department of Corrections spokesman Michael Arra said Bolli committed suicide after watching himself featured on a NBC News special about misguided youth.

"Although he had a history of suicide attempts, (Bolli) was placed in an open housing unit without any supervision," the lawsuit filed by 16 inmates at Picacho says.

"Simply put, no efforts were made by defendants to seek mental health counseling for the inmate despite knowing the inmate's past mental health history," the lawsuit says.

The prisoners are being represented by inmate William Adams who, in a written statement, said a prison psychologist recommended Bolli be placed on suicide watch but that the recommendation was not heeded.

Israel, PLO say agreement near

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emotion-charged Mideast peace talks reopened Tuesday with confident Palestinian and Israeli predictions that a historic agreement to establish Palestinian self-rule would be concluded within days.

Moreover, Nabil Shaath, chief political adviser to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, said "we hope to hear very soon — tomorrow or the day after" statements of "full mutual recognition" by Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Israeli sources confirmed Arafat and Rabin would move toward an accommodation but said the announcement may be several days off. The sources, declining to be identified, also said the PLO had agreed that 3,300 Jewish settlers would remain in Gaza with Israel responsible for their security.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, praising the accord that will put the PLO in charge of day-to-day life in Gaza and in the West Bank city of Jericho as "a conceptual breakthrough," said the United States was prepared to provide financial assistance. "We want to be side by side with the parties," he told reporters.

But in the Arab world beyond, and in Israel, there was anxiety and some bitter opposition forming to the agreement.

Many Israelis worried about giving Arafat a foothold on the West Bank, some 20 miles from Jerusalem, while militant Arabs questioned the Palestinians settling for less than a state at this stage.

Jewish demonstrators in Jerusalem called for rejection of the plan. Opposition leader Binyamin Netanyahu led a delegation of parliament members through Jericho, and police arrested two protesters while breaking up a rally outside Rabin's house.

Bosnian peace talks near climax

GENEVA (AP) — Bosnia's Muslim-led government and rebel Serbs agreed Tuesday on a new cease-fire as year-old negotiations to end the brutal war by splitting the country reached a decisive phase.

Serb President Slobodan Milosevic and Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, meanwhile, said they expected Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic to accept a separate plan to split Bosnia into three ethnic republics on Wednesday.

"The conference continues tomorrow (Wednesday) and we are expecting the Muslim side to sign the whole package," Karadzic said as he emerged from daylong talks.

However, Izetbegovic said no breakthrough has occurred in discussions on the boundaries of the republics.

"No progress so far," he said. "Maybe tomorrow." Izetbegovic has been consistently downbeat in public comments about the peace talks.

He has slammed a peace plan proposed by international mediators as rewarding Serb and Croat aggression. But he fears the outgunned government forces and suffering Muslim civilians may not survive another winter.

Earlier, Bosnian Serb and government officials said the two sides agreed to a cessation of hostilities as part of a five-point plan. The three warring factions — Muslims, Serbs, Croats — have repeatedly agreed on cease-fires, and then broken them.

Karadzic aide Nikola Koljevic said other provisions included prisoner exchanges and a telephone hot line between government headquarters in Sarajevo and the Bosnian Serb base in nearby Pale, the first phone link since the war began nearly 17 months ago.

Izetbegovic and Karadzic also agreed to set up a joint commission to

Consumer group: McDonald's healthier than Chinese food

WASHINGTON (AP) — Somebody always seems to be out to trash the food you enjoy the most. Now the calorie counters, sodium sifters and cholesterol cops are taking out after Chinese.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest decided to test the notion that Chinese food is better for you than, say, McDonald's burgers and fries, and came out voting for McDonald's.

For instance: An order of Kung Pao chicken has almost as much fat as four Quarter Pounders.

An order of Moo Shu Pork has more than twice the cholesterol of an Egg McMuffin.

And House Lo Mein had twice the salt of a Pizza Hut pizza.

"Popular Chinese dishes like Kung Pao Chicken and Moo Shu Pork are as bad for you as a greasy cheeseburger and fries," said nutritionist Jayne Hurley in CSPI's September Nutrition Action Healthletter.

But wait, General Tso's fans. You can make it all better if you eat a cup of steamed rice along with a cup of entree. Says the newsletter: "Chinese food suddenly becomes good for you." Most devotees of Chinese cuisine do that anyway.

CSPI, a consumer advocacy group, bought dinner-size take-out portions of 15 popular dishes from 20 mid-priced Chinese restaurants in Washington, Chicago and San Francisco, and sent them to an independent lab for analysis.

"Soup and egg roll aside, what we found would make your chopsticks splinter," said the article titled "A Wok on the Wild Side."

"Fat ranged from a respectable 19 grams (Szechuan shrimp or stir-fried vegetables) to an outrageous 76 grams (Kung Pao chicken)," it said. "that's more than you should eat in an entire day, and more than 40 percent of calories."

Sweet and Sour pork was OK for sodium, but stir-fried vegetables hit the day's quota with 2,100 mg. House Lo Mein had 3,460 mg., which

Greek expectations

Yet again, another Theta Delta Chi fraternity member has spoken out about the unfairness of ASU's $300,000 estimate of damages to the Theta Delta Chi house, and has not denied that members of the fraternity inflicted the damage themselves.

In fact, the only thing members of the fraternity who have come forward openly have tried to do is provide a justification for destroying the house.

They claim ASU administrators were unfair in their request that the fraternity fix the roof on its house. They claim the school didn't give them enough time. They claim that the school gave them short notice to get out.

Well, is seven years not enough time? That's how long ago ASU informed the group and its alumni that the house roof needed to be fixed.

Seven years to raise the $110,000 that would have repaired the roof and the fraternity's image with administrators. Greeks are always yapping about how great they are at raising money for charity, but they couldn't muster the cash to fix their own house.

On top of that, at the time of eviction, the fraternity owed the school $18,000 in back rent. If an individual owed that much on a rental property, most landlords would send a very large person over to the tenant's house to take the debt out in bodily damage. At the very least, the tenant would be evicted. That's the way it works. If you don't pay your bill, you get booted out onto the pavement.

So the University had two reasons to kick the fraternity out: non-payment of rent and an unsafe, uninhabitable building.

ASU officials were already in the process of evicting the fraternity for the non-payment of rent. That procedure must be approved by the Arizona Board of Regents, and the school was prepared to do it this month.

Other than Mark Bailey, the fraternity's president, no member has denied fraternity involvement in the hedonistic melee that destroyed the house.

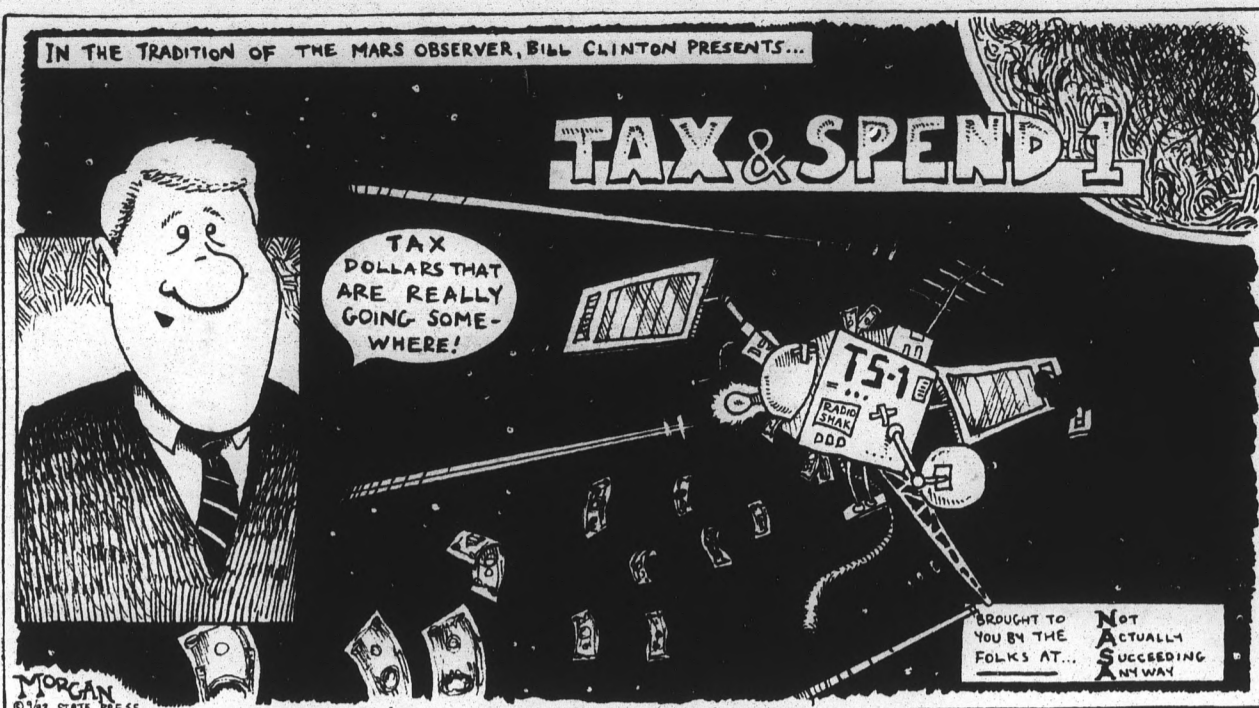

Bailey said he is cooperating with ASU's Department of Public Safety in the investigation into the matter, which is the right thing for him to do. He said if he knew Theta Delta Chi fraternity members were involved, he would turn them in himself. Bravo, Mr. Bailey.

By making that announcement, Bailey is helping to dispel any mythical stereotype of Greeks standing by their brothers and sisters no matter how heinous their offenses. This can only help their image among "independents," local police and ASU administrators.

Let's just hope it pans out.

People need parenting license before trying to raise children

Violent criminals, drug abusers, persons with no self esteem, unproductive persons and others are too often the products being raised by incompetent parents. Too many people are choosing to have children when they themselves have no idea how to provide even the most rudimentary parental support. Parents and parents-to-be should be required, by law, to show proof that they are at least minimally qualified to raise their children.

Many parents have never heard of concepts such as positive motivation, goal setting, delayed gratification, understanding behavior, and others. How can parents who have no understanding of basic parenting skills properly raise a child in today's society?

They cannot! It is probable that the child of such parents will be another criminal, a drug abuser, a psychologically unstable adult, or at best a nonproductive member of society.

Children need order, physical safety, and psychological security to have a healthy overall development. These things are lacking in many homes.

How many times have you been in public and heard a parent berating a child as if that child were the family dog? Many children are told things such as "You can't do anything right!", "I wish I had never had you!", and "You are worthless and stupid!"

The parents who treat their kids this way are destroying that child's self esteem, or not allowing it to develop.

What about parents who sell and/or use drugs in the presence of their children? These kids are learning to be criminals. In their homes, by watching their parents, kids learn to be poor, to not have respect for authority, to accept violence as a normal part of life, and various other unfortunate lessons.

Consider these facts: From 1983 to 1988 there was a 31 percent increase in the number of minors arrested for murder. During that same period the number of children under fourteen years old that were arrested for murder increased by 28 percent. In 1988, two thousand minors were murdered, roughly twice the number of minors murdered in 1965. This is very alarming, especially considering that there were 6.5 million more minors in America in 1965 than in 1988.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan was correct when he asserted that there is a culture of poverty.

There is also a culture of criminality, a culture of drug abusers, a culture of child abusers, a culture of learned helplessness and others. Why? Because many children are being raised by incompetent parents; they may not care about their child's welfare as an adult or they simply do not possess the requisite knowledge to provide a positive relationship with them.

The preceding information leads me to believe that there needs to be a legal mandate that forces parents and parents-to-be to possess a Parenting License. Parents-to-be should be required to show that they have the minimum requirements necessary to be competent parents. They should be able to show that they understand basic parenting skills; this is not much to ask of someone who will raise another human being.

At this point you may be thinking "What knowledge is required to be a competent parent?" and "Who should dictate what those standards are?" This is obviously one of the many difficult points of this proposal. However, certain minimum standards should include basic knowledge of how to care for the physiological needs of infants and children. In addition, education in understanding behavior, developing positive communications, and personality development should be encouraged.

If parents possess the knowledge to deal with their children effectively and positively, then many more children will be happier, have more self esteem, and will be more likely to be productive and law-abiding citizens. Positive goal setting leads to a positive self-fulfilling prophecy; namely, if parents treat their kids in a positive manner and expect positive results from them, the kids are more likely to become positive thinkers and doers.

Many readers at this point may be thinking that it is impossible to require parents and parents-to-be to have a license to have and maintain their children.

Well, you certainly must have a license to drive a car. You must have a license to fish, to go hunting, or to do a myriad of other things. Day care providers must certainly be licensed to take care of children. So why not a parenting license?

Surely raising a child is more monumental a task than handling a fishing pole.

Why is a license required for such activities? Because in many instances the state has compelling interest to provide for the safety of the public—as in the case of a drivers license, or the safety of a child—as in the day care situation. Thus, just as the state should try to insure that incompetent persons do not operate motor vehicles or care for children, the state should insure that parents meet minimum parenting competency requirements before they are allowed to raise children. This is true because a criminal or unstable adult, who was reared by incompetent parents, may be a danger to or at least a drain on the state and society.

If Strow resents minimum wage, he should get real job

It was with great dismay and disgust that I read David Strow's column Monday. I think Mr. Strow needs to examine his own bellyaching and get some facts straight before he proceeds to criticize Sen. Bob Dole.

First, what does he expect in what is probably his first job, a silver platter? Most students are forced to take minimum wage jobs as they have limited experience, as well as limited availability. Mr. Strow should be thankful that companies have the attitude that someone able to work only a few hours a day because they are going to school is truly better than someone who can work full time, but has no educational background. You must take your lumps, Mr. Strow. The CEOs who are making millions of dollars a year have done exactly that. What about Lee Iacocca? You cannot deny that this man has paid his dues and deserves the money he makes. In fact, it was he who saved the Ford Motor Company after the Edsel catastrophe.

Secondly, raising minimum wage will have little effect on the economy and on helping students. Let's face reality, folks, minimum wage gets raised and the difference is noticed only for a short period of time because pretty soon inflation catches up with it again. Then what do we do? We bellyache some more, get minimum wage raised again and hurt the lifeblood of our economy — small businesses. If it weren't for small businesses, most of you wouldn't even have a job. At the rate we are going, soon minimum wage will be a $40,000 salary for a 25-hour-per-week job. The fact of the matter is: President Bubba has raised the taxes on businesses, he will soon levy a tax on them for health care and now is considering raising the minimum wage again. Does this scare anyone besides me? If all of this comes to be, soon investment in the infrastructure will decrease due to all the taxes we will be paying, and growth in the industrial sector will shrink to virtually zilch.

I must give credit to Mr. Strow on one point, though. He was right on the fact that we have been ignored by Washington. Just look at Sen. DeConcini and Rep. English's decision to ignore their constituents and vote to support the tax and deficit increase plan. This is a perfect example.

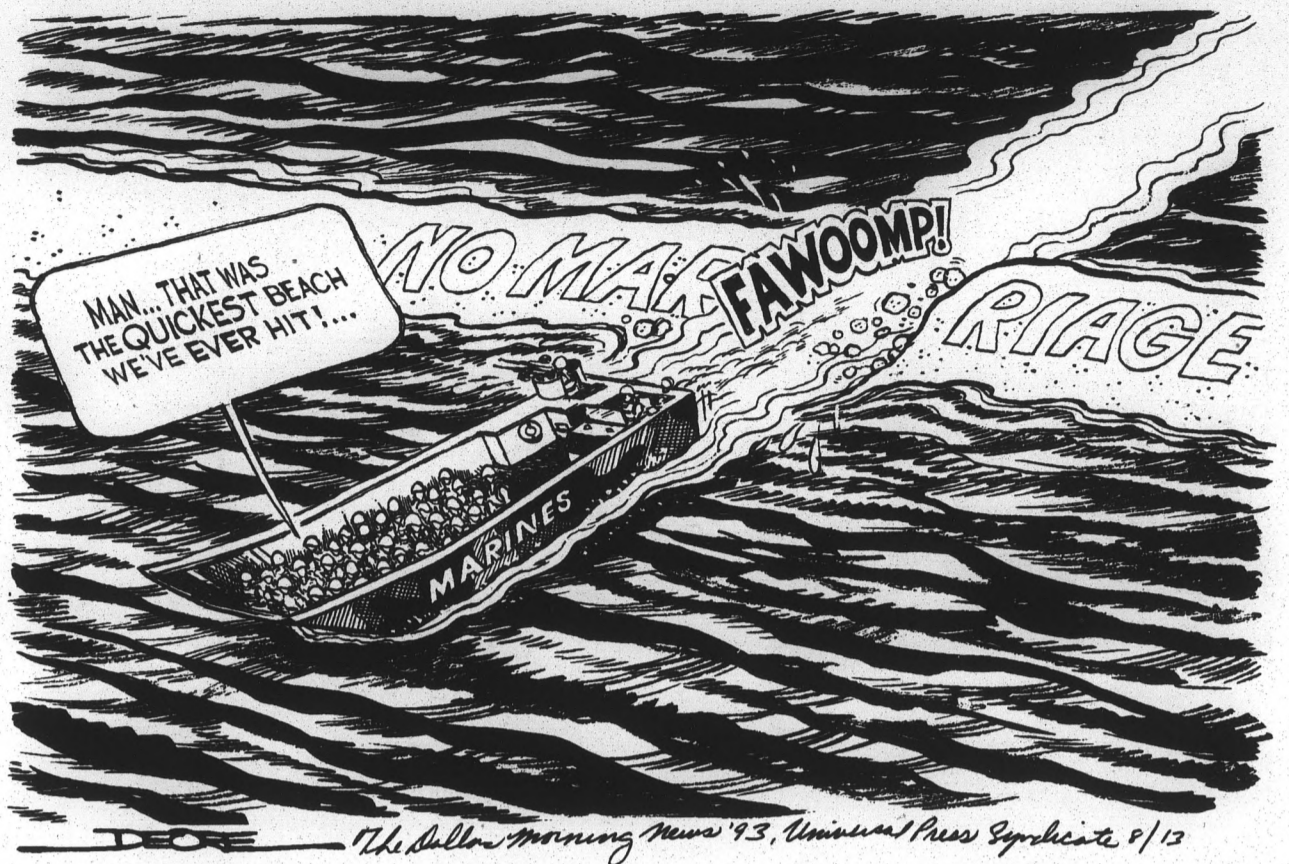

Mr. Strow, I think that you need to do some more studying on the issues. For starters, it is the Democrats who have raised your taxes, thereby taking more money from your take-home pay, not the Republicans. The proof is the record of the Congress; I urge you to study it. Finally, before you go pointing fingers at the business sector and scream about the evils of big business, I suggest you study the issues more, perhaps even take a business class. The only thing that you have persuaded me on is the fact that you are a journalism major, not a business analyst, because it appears that you obviously have no clue as to how the business world works.

Computer failure was preventable

ASU owns two mainframe computers, an IBM 1030 and an IBM 1090. One mainframe is used solely for registration. The reason for the system failure on Monday, August 23, 1993, is that ASU is too cheap to buy filters for the cooling system of these mainframes. The interior components of these mainframes are filthy. When dirt and dust build up on chips, registers, etc. it causes them to overheat and fail. They have been told by computer experts to remedy the situation, but they obviously haven't.

Civilian gives the president some free tips on marriage

Peering into his beer, Slat Grobnik said: "Something I don't understand. How come that Marine general had to go on TV and say he's sorry?"

Do you mean Gen. Carl Mundy, for his policy of discouraging young Marines from getting married and limiting the enlistment of married lads?

"Yeah, why was there such a squawk about that?"

For several reasons. First, he did not run it past his civilian superiors, Secretary of Defense Aspin and, of course, President Clinton, his commander in chief.

"Why should he have to clear it with them? He's a Marine and he runs the Marine Corps so he ought to know more about what's good for the Marines than politicians like Aspin or Clinton. Sure, Clinton's the commander in chief, but did he ever pull latrine duty?"

Of course not. But there is also the conflict between Gen. Mundy's policy and that of the Clinton administration. Clinton wants the military to reflect American society at large.

"Oh, boy, that's all we need, the Marines reflecting society at large when our society at large has never been more screwed up. What's he want them to learn in boot camp — gangbang shooting, armed robbery, abusing kids, dope snorting, crack smoking and gunning down old guys sleeping in their cars? Or embezzling, political double-talking, freeloading and ducking responsibilities? Hey, if the military ever reflects society at large, some G.I. pulling guard duty won't just say: 'Halt, who goes there?'"

What will he say?

"He'll say, 'Halt. And while you're at it, give me your wallet, your watch, your ring, and let's go find your wife or girlfriend so I can be a sex fiend.'"

You may have a point. But the White House was concerned that it would appear that the Marines were anti-marriage.

"That ain't how it sounded to me. It was like the general just wanted young guys to sit down with older guys for some counseling and find out what they're getting themselves into."

Such as?

"Such as being a young Marine ain't like a regular job. The average husband ain't gonna wake up his wife at 2 o'clock in the morning and say: 'Hey, sweetie, I got to go out of town on business. They're sending me to some place named Somalia to keep the peace and chase war lords. I ought to be back in a few months. Unless they decide to send me to Bosnia. Don't forget to pick up my clothes at the cleaners.'"

I suppose that could cause some stress and tensions.

"Sure. So instead of putting that general on the hot seat, the politicians should have seen that he's way ahead of his time."

In what way?

"It ought to be a national law. Not just in the Marines but everywhere."

You believe in mandatory pre-marital counseling for everyone?

"You betcha. How many marriages wind up in divorce?"

I believe about 40 percent, according to recent studies.

"See? You know what that costs the taxpayers? You got millions of people tying up the courts, fighting over the car and the house and the TV, and who gets the kids. And husbands ducking child support, so the wife ends up on welfare and the states have to hire gumshoes to track down the deadbeats. People talk about gun control. What we need is marriage control."

You would place restrictions on the right to get married?

"Why not? The gun control people want a cooling off period before you can buy a gun. We should have a law so that there's a cooling off period before you can get married. Maybe a year between when they buy the license and when they can use it."

You want people to wait a year before they can marry?

"Hey, a year ain't that long. And they can always fool around while they're waiting. And there ought to be a warning on the license like we got on smokes or booze."

What kind of warning?

Possible pear tree removal leaves residents upset

City targets plants for axing because require too much water

By JOY E. BEASON
STATE PRESS

Tempe City Council members will discuss on Thursday options to re-landscape a Tempe median in a project that has surrounding neighbors up in arms about the possible removal of unlawful trees.

Pear trees now inhabit the median on Alameda Drive between Rural Road and Dorsey Lane. According to Jim Jones, Tempe's public works director, the half-mile stretch is going to be re-landscaped and have an irrigation system put in.

"State officials are suggesting we take out the trees," he said.

Karen Logan, who will design the city's landscape, said she has fielded opposition to the removal of the trees.

Logan said she has heard from a representative of the Rural/Geneva Home Owners Association, Herbert Fibel, who has expressed concern over taking the trees out.

Attempts to reach Fibel were not successful. However, Logan said Fibel "feels pretty strongly about keeping the trees."

Jones said Tempe officials are going to "work with the state to keep the trees," and added that he will convey his concerns to Tempe officials today.

The pear trees are not on the "low water using list," according to Logan. The list, issued by the Arizona Department of Water Management, was adopted by Tempe about 10 years ago.

Although the list is extensive, pear trees are not in compliance with the watering levels, and are thus deemed illegal to grow in Tempe.

Logan said the city has followed the list in its planting procedures since it was adopted.

Not all neighbors are protesting taking the trees.

"Last summer, they were not watering them," said Nathan Lewis a 12-year-old Tempe resident. "It does not make our neighborhood look good."

Louis Porter/State Press

Pear trees growing on the median of Alameda Drive east of Rural Road have been targeted for removal as part of a landscaping project designed to conserve water.

Logan said she hopes a consensus can be reached as to landscaping options at today's meeting. She said that she can design the landscape with or without the pear trees, but the city would have to get a waiver.

She added, however, that the project would be finished "a couple of months from now."

Vice Mayor Neil Giuliano said he favors leaving the trees, because residents are willing to pay for watering even though they are on the city median.

"I don't think we should go around tearing down trees when there are people who are willing to pay to water them, since they are already there," he said.

However, Giuliano said he would not support planting new trees that are not on the low water using list.

1993 report cites 822 vehicles stolen; Tempe auto thefts persist

By GREG SEXTON
STATE PRESS

Imagine parking near ASU, going to class and returning to find a blank spot where your car used to be.

This scenario may sound far-fetched, but according to the 1993 Uniformed Crime Report — which lists year-to-date numbers through July — 822 vehicles have been reported stolen to Tempe Police this year.

Though preventative measures can be taken, Tempe Police spokesman Sgt. Al Taylor said the problem of car theft is a persistent one.

"You've got to realize that every device that has ever been made by man, there is another who can figure out how to defeat it," Taylor said.

But Taylor said a visual deterrent like the "club" sometimes will prompt the thief to look for a different vehicle.

"When you have a bad guy who looks in the window and sees the 'club', he'll often say, 'Do I really want to take the time and effort to saw this thing off, when I can find (a different car) without a club two spaces down?'" Taylor said.

In 1992, there were 35 autos reported stolen at ASU, down from 46 in 1991 and 54 in 1990, said ASU Department of Public Safety Director Bill Bess.

The reasons for the on-campus decrease differ, but the threat of having a vehicle stolen in the Tempe area poses a significant risk, Taylor said.

He added that installing car alarms or using the "club" can help prevent theft, but don't count on it.

The most common types of cars stolen are 4x4 trucks and jeeps. Sports cars and vans are also favorite targets, Tempe police said.

ASU DPS has installed cameras in parking lots 58 and 59 in hopes of curbing the auto thefts in those areas. The cameras will also aim to protect students and faculty who park in the perimeter lots.

Taylor said a common fallacy is for people to believe that auto thefts are problems simply for insurance companies to handle.

"I talk to a lot of people about prevention and in the area of auto theft there seems to be a perception that it is an insurance problem — 'If my car gets stolen, I get insurance money.'"

"But anyone who has had to make a claim against a stolen car knows that ... it's not that easy. Often, the vehicle is not worth that much, and what they get is a lot less than they thought they would."

Alarm systems can run in the hundreds of dollars, depending on the car and the type of system. The "club," which is locked to the steering wheel, prevents the car from being towed or turned.

"Some of these devices can prevent a lot of headaches in the long run," Taylor said. "But as with any type of crime and crime prevention, awareness and prevention are the key to avoiding becoming a victim."

Jordan's King Hussein flew unexpectedly to Damascus for emergency talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad, and Arafat was under death threats from hard-line Palestinian rivals.

After a two-hour meeting in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, Arafat told reporters confidently: "We will reach a just and comprehensive peace that will account for the Palestinian people's political rights."

Shaath, the PLO coordinator for the talks, said the basic outline of the declaration had already been worked out and that the negotiations, which resumed Tuesday after a two-month recess, were in a "holding pattern" awaiting approval of the PLO executive committee and the Israeli parliament.

The negotiators would then sign the declaration — probably in Washington — and move on to the fine print, he said. By way of example, Israeli sources said this would include how Israeli forces would have access to Jewish residents of Gaza.

Israeli Ambassador Itamar Rabinovich, also upbeat, said "there are no technical or substantive problems" remaining. He said the accord would be concluded by the end of the round next Thursday.

Rabinovich, who is in charge of parallel negotiations with Syria, said an accord on that front could take longer. "I would be grateful for just some tangible progress," he said.

Government spokesman Mirza Hajric confirmed the agreement, which has yet to be signed and is separate from the plan to divide up the country. However, he played down its importance.

Koljevic said Izetbegovic made only minimal demands for changes in the map proposed by international mediators despite his earlier statements that the proposals were unacceptable.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman said the Bosnian Croats had dropped their demands for changes in the borders on the proposed maps and were ready to sign the peace plan.

The Serbs have already said they will sign the deal proposed by mediators Lord Owen of the European Community and Thorvald Stoltenberg of the United Nations.

Officials discuss possibility of holiday shutdown

Proposal designed to save money, give time off

BY JAMES FRUSETTA
STATE PRESS

Classified Staff officials are looking at the feasibility of implementing a campuswide shutdown during extended holiday breaks, in order to save on utility costs and provide employees with additional time off.

President of Classified Staff Robert Curry said an informal survey was taken to determine the response to such an initiative.

"We had taken a survey of Classified Staff ... and asked how people would feel about closing the campus down over the holidays," Curry said.

Any potential shutdowns would not take place until 1994 "at the earliest," Curry said.

"This is in terms of a long-range idea," he said.

Classified Staff officials noted three factors which support a shutdown:

- Potential savings in utilities costs
- The relatively small staff and number of students present on campus over the holidays
- The possibility of giving staff members additional time with family over the holidays.

"We thought (the last option) would be a nice benefit," said Curry, "since raises haven't been forthcoming the last couple of years."

Other ASU officials have mixed reactions to any potential shutdown.

"We have in the past looked at the impact of closing academic buildings," said Director of Fiscal Planning Alan Carroll. "What we found was most couldn't be shut down because of research."

Research activities at ASU continue over the break, and certain forms of research cannot be shut down — for example, mainframe computers and lab animals require maintenance staffs, heat and electricity continuously.

Carroll also said there might be difficulties in terms of classifying any holiday shutdown.

"It might cause some problems since the state only allows 10 holidays, so I don't know how we'd figure in a shutdown," he said.

Officials concurred that while it is too early to estimate any potential savings, the need to maintain certain academic buildings would limit the financial benefits of a shutdown.

Curry noted the difficulties facing any potential shutdown plan but noted that other research universities have adapted to the change.

"The University of Michigan is a major research institution, and it is my understanding that they have a holiday shutdown," Curry said.

Jack White, billed as an "internationally famous pocket billiard and trick shot artist", zeroes in on another "impossible" shot.

White arrives at ASU each fall to charm students with his sarcastic wit and bulldog-like demeanor, as well as to teach them a thing or two about the art of sinking balls.

The free pool clinics continue the rest of this week in the MU Recreation Center, culminating in White's noon-time trick shot exhibition on Friday.

Judge denies withdrawal of alter ego's murder plea

PHOENIX (AP) — A judge presiding over a murder case has refused to permit the withdrawal of a guilty plea by a man who contended that one of his multiple personalities agreed to a plea bargain.

Brian Keith Stallings, 26, pleaded guilty July 15 to first-degree murder and other crimes in the Feb. 4, 1991 shooting death of Michael Vincent Emmons in Usery Mountains Park east of Mesa.

Stallings said Monday that his plea must be set aside because it was entered by an alter ego, "Tommy."

Judge John Seidel of Maricopa County Superior Court refused, ruling after a hearing that there was evidence Stallings was mentally competent when he pleaded guilty.

Scottsdale psychologist Joyce Vesper earlier testified that Stallings has at least 12 personalities, including both sexes and a spectrum of ages.

Under cross-examination by prosecutor Robert Shutts, Vesper said she disagrees with other experts who believe Stallings is faking.

She told defense attorney Orest Jejina that another personality may have been in control when Stallings entered the guilty plea. However, Vesper said she couldn't be sure because she wasn't there.

Stallings, who is to be sentenced Oct. 1, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder, robbery, burglary and theft. Under the plea agreement, he must be sentenced to life in prison without parole for 25 years. An additional 65 years in prison could be added.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The marriage is off, and Axl Rose wants his money back.

The lead singer of Guns N' Roses and model Stephanie Seymour began dating in early 1991, got engaged on Feb. 4 and split up later that month. Now, Rose is seeking to recover $100,000 in gifts he says he lavished on her in anticipation of marriage.

Among items he listed in a lawsuit are wedding and engagement rings, a gold and diamond turquoise necklace and a diamond and sapphire antique watch. He is also seeking punitive damages.

Seymour was asked in an Aug. 13 letter to return the gifts but she refused last week, according to the complaint filed Friday in Superior Court.

Rose contends that Seymour punched, hit and kicked him at a party she threw at his home last Christmas. He said she attacked him "without warning or provocation" while he was sitting at the kitchen table.

Seymour's attorney, Marc Goodman, was attending a meeting Tuesday and was unavailable for comment, his secretary said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jennifer Chambers Lynch's childhood reverence for the Venus de Milo statue is clearly evident in "Boxing Helena."

The film, which opens Friday, stars Julian Sands as a surgeon who cuts off the limbs of the woman he's obsessed with, played by Sherilyn Fenn.

"I had an obsession for Venus de Milo, having been born with club feet and having the normal insecurities that children have," the filmmaker said. "I was feeling very broken and sort of imperfect.

"I was in awe of how beautiful the Venus was, and how people looked at her as if she were whole and perfect and not as if she were broken."

A life-size replica of the Venus occupies a spot in the living room of the director-writer's Hollywood Hills home. It also can be seen in the movie.

The film took six years to reach theaters. Madonna and Kim Basinger abandoned it; both had been involved with the production for eight months and walked out four weeks before the start of filming, Miss Lynch said.

Main Line Pictures won a $7.4 million judgment against Miss Basinger in a breach of oral contract lawsuit; she has since filed for bankruptcy.

Lynch, 25, is the daughter of "Twin Peaks" filmmaker David Lynch.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Hundreds of family members, friends and fellow performers turned out to watch magicians Melinda Saxe and Lance Burton exchange wedding vows.

After Monday evening's ceremony at the Tropicana Hotel, the couple performed a levitation illusion. In attendance were a Who's Who of the magic world, including illusionists such as David Copperfield.

The bride, born and raised in Las Vegas, is billed as "The First Lady of Magic." She is performing at the Lady Luck hotel and casino, and Burton is a headliner at the Hacienda Hotel.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When she turns 60 on Wednesday, Gov. Ann Richards will get her birthday wish: a motorcycle license.

"She took the written test and driving test" Monday and "passed with flying colors," said Bill Cryer, her press secretary and partner in motorcycle training class.

Cryer said the governor will go to a Department of Public Safety drivers license testing station Wednesday to be photographed and complete the paperwork.

Holtz denies book's charges

Lou Holtz says he has no intention of reading the book that accuses him of paying players while he was at Minnesota and encouraging steroid use during his seven seasons at Notre Dame.

The coach of the Irish remained firm but even-tempered Tuesday as he was pressed for reaction to the book during a news conference leading to No. 7 Notre Dame's opener Saturday against Northwestern.

"I have not read the book. I do not plan on reading the book, and I'm not going to answer questions about the book," Holtz said. "This is not easy for me to do this, but in fairness to our football team, this is the way it is going to be handled."

The book, "Under the Tarnished Dome: How Notre Dame Betrayed its Ideals for Football Glory," is written by Don Yaeger and Douglas Looney. It is due out Sept. 7.

Holtz, 56, is accused of participating in the payment of players while he was coach at Minnesota in 1984-85. He took over at Notre Dame in 1986.

Davis dealt to Detroit

Eric Davis, once touted as the next Willie Mays but beset by slumps and injuries in two seasons with the Los Angeles Dodgers, was traded to the Detroit Tigers on Tuesday for a player to be named.

Eric Goldschmidt, the agent for the 31-year-old outfielder, said Davis will report to the Tigers on Friday when they play a three-game series against Chicago. Davis, who made $2 million this year, is eligible for free agency after the season.

"It doesn't matter what I think. It's done," Davis said in Pittsburgh. "I'm looking forward to it. It's an opportunity to jump in a situation where they have a chance to win. You can't ask for more than that if you have to leave."

The Tigers entered Tuesday night's game at Seattle trailing Toronto by five games in the AL East. The Dodgers began a three-game series in Pittsburgh on Tuesday night. Postseason rosters had to be settled by Tuesday.

San Diego to host Classic

San Diego State and the Greater San Diego Sports Association have agreed to stage a September Holiday Classic football game annually for the next decade.

The Holiday Classic normally will be scheduled for the Saturday preceding Labor Day at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

The first Holiday Classic was held last year and ended in a 31-31 tie between SDSU and Southern Cal. An opponent couldn't be found this year, so the Classic will resume with SDSU playing Navy on Sept. 3, 1994.

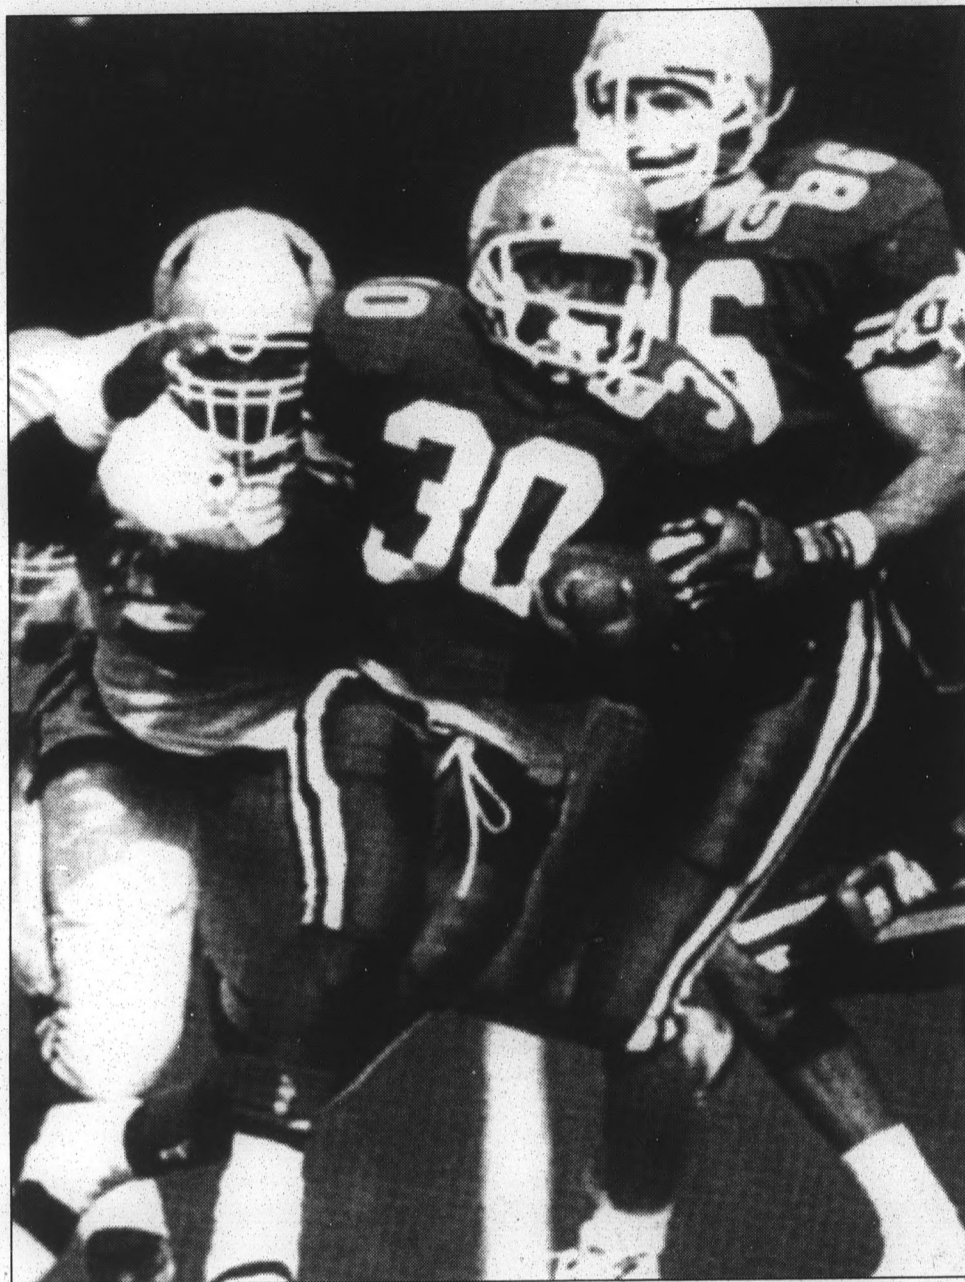

Future opponents will include California, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Arizona State, Arizona and Houston. Some teams will make repeat visits.

ASU volleyball not taking alumnae scrimmage lightly

Both squads exchange remarks for match

BY PAUL J. MATTHEWS
 STATE PRESS

Somebody forgot to tell the Sun Devil alumnae that tonight's match with the volleyball team is just a warm-up for the Sun Devil's season-opening tournament Friday.

Alumna Robin Ikeda, a starter on last year's squad, said she will be looking to teach junior Leanne Schuster a few things.

"I'm going to use you," Ikeda told Schuster jokingly.

However, Schuster brushed off Ikeda's remarks with a devilish laugh.

"I think that was me telling her last night that she was going to get six-packed," Schuster said to counter Ikeda's remarks. "She is the one that better watch out."

Although tonight's match is supposed to be a fun event, Coach Patti Snyder said she wants her team to take the exhibition seriously.

"We're taking it serious because we're using it as a warm-up for the tournament (this weekend)," Snyder said. "We want to try and get some game management stuff out of the way. Everybody is going to get a chance to play. The kids need to gel as a group and the alumnae match will set the stage for that."

Mindy Gowell-Rich, an alumna from the 1989-90 squad who now works as a graduate assistant for the Sun Devils, was a little more reserved.

"No one from the alumnae team has touched the ball in quite a while," she said. "I think we have a chance to play with them."

Gowell-Rich currently plays professional sand volleyball. Last summer, she competed in

McBride believes ASU among Pac-10 elite

BY JULIE REUVERS
 STATE PRESS

With renewed confidence after last season's Weiser Lock Copper Bowl appearance and a highly touted defensive unit, Utah football coach Ron McBride can't wait for Saturday's season-opener at Sun Devil Stadium.

MCBRIDE

Never mind that his Utes meet up with ASU, a team he picks to finish among the top three in the Pac-10 this season.

In fact, McBride won't mind at all if the Sun Devils forget to show up on their home field.

"I like to play at Arizona State, I think it's a beautiful stadium," said McBride, a former assistant football coach for the UofA. "It's not always my favorite team to go and play, but it's a great stadium to play in."

The Sun Devils have beaten the Utes five straight times at Sun Devil Stadium, winning 21-15 the last time around in October of 1991.

ASU will prove no easy competition for the Utes Saturday, according to McBride, who's team finished fifth in the Western Athletic Conference last season.

"Arizona State has the best pass-rusher in the nation in Shante Carver," McBride said. He also said that ASU quarterback Grady Benton will be hard to hold because of his confidence and high pass-completion percentage.

"This team will be a cut above the team from a year ago," McBride said of the Sun Devils. "Last year's run-ins with adversities are gone. This team is all business."

In his fourth season at Utah, McBride hopes he has laid the foundation his team needs to contend for the WAC title and to compete against Pac-10 schools. However, he still sees room for improvement on a team that returns 13 starters among 35 lettermen.

Bugel names Beuerlein starting QB

Team signs QB Furrer, 4 placed on inactive list

BY MIKE BRANOM
 STATE PRESS

The Phoenix Cardinals finally ended the "quarterback derby" by naming Steve Beuerlein as the starter for Sunday's game at Philadelphia. The Cardinals also solidified its regular-season roster by welcoming back some old faces and saying hello to a new one.

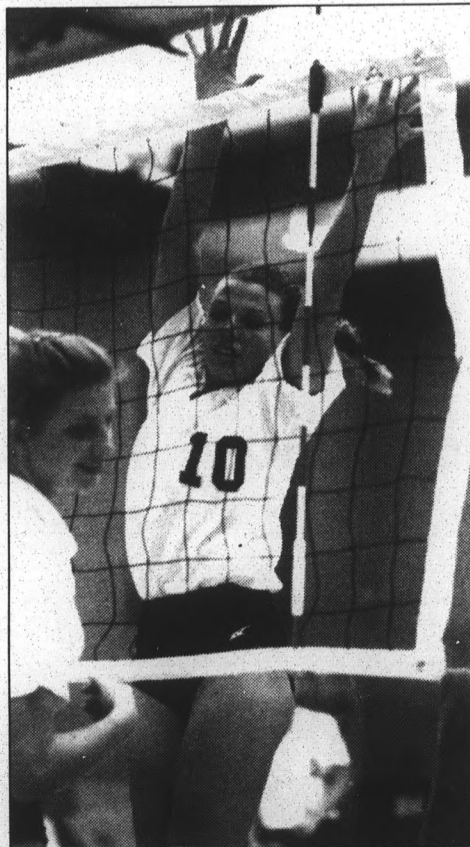

BEUERLEIN

Coach Joe Bugel announced that Beuerlein has won the job over last season's quarterback Chris Chandler. Bugel cited Beuerlein's 10-for-14 passing performance in the last preseason game and Chandler's continuing soreness in his sprained left ankle as the reasons for giving the six-year veteran from Notre Dame the starting nod.

Chandler said that he may test the free-agent market after this season, a vow that Phoenix took seriously enough to sign left-handed quarterback Will Furrer, late of Chicago, off the waiver wire Tuesday.

Sixteenth seed Andre Agassi returns a ball to Thomas Enqvist of Sweden during first round action at the U.S. Open in New York Tuesday. Agassi lost in five sets 4-6, 4-6, 6-3, 7-6, 2-6.

Agassi eliminated from U.S. Open

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP TENNIS WRITER

NEW YORK (AP) — All of Andre Agassi's boasts suddenly sounded empty.

He bragged about his new work ethic, his renewed confidence. He thought he'd strut into the U.S. Open without playing many matches and just stroll off with the trophy and the fat check.

Instead, he walked off a loser Tuesday in one round — just like Jennifer Capriati and Michael Stich. Two-time defending champion Stefan Edberg nearly did the same, while No. 1 Jim Courier and No. 2 Pete Sampras breezed ahead.

Sweden's Thomas Enqvist, ranked 61, beat Agassi at his own game in a 3 1/2-hour affair, outhitting him from the baseline and making his head spin with 20 aces in a 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-7 (3-7), 6-2 victory.

"I didn't really feel sharp from the first point to the last point," said Agassi, the 16th seed. "And when you are down two sets, it takes a lot of energy out of you to get back into it."

Agassi should know because he never has come back from two sets down.

"In the fifth set," he acknowledged, "I made a lot of mental errors."

Agassi complained he had trouble with the swirling winds, trouble with his backhand. Mostly he had trouble with double-faults — three in the final set — and with Enqvist's 125 mph serves.

"It's definitely a setback for me," Agassi said. "To what degree I don't know yet. Maybe I have to work a little harder."

He seemed as shocked by his upset as the crowd that had cheered so hard for him.

"If you win," he said, "you feel like you're on top of the world. If you lose, you feel like I am right now. It will get worse if this guy gets his butt kicked in the next rounds."

Before Enqvist experienced the biggest victory of his life, his compatriot, Edberg, nearly suffered one of his worst losses.

No defending men's champion ever lost in the first round of the U.S. Open, much less a two-time defending champ like Edberg. Yet he barely avoided that dubious distinction, surviving 6-2, 0-6, 7-6 (9-7), 5-7, 6-3 in a 3 1/2-hour drama against 99th-ranked Olivier Delaitre.

Less fortunate was Capriati, the women's No. 7 seed, drummed out in the first round by Leila Meskhi, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4.

"I couldn't believe I could get totally off after the first set when I played great," said Capriati, who punched a forehand long to end an 18-shot rally on the final point. That was Capriati's 61st unforced error, more than double Meskhi's total.

Mary Joe Fernandez, the women's No. 6 seed, withdrew because of abdominal pain. She was replaced by Maria Jose Gaidano of Argentina, a "lucky loser" from the qualifying tournament, who promptly showed up to beat Andrea Vieira 6-2, 5-7, 6-0.

Bye-bye, too, went Stich, the men's No. 6, who succumbed to Henrik Holm 6-3, 7-6 (10-8), 3-6, 6-3.

Not all the top players had a tough time. Courier dispatched Marco Aurelio Gorriz 6-1, 6-3, 6-3; Sampras beat Fabrice Santoro 6-3, 6-1, 6-2, and with Agassi's loss now has a seedless path to the quarters. He could then meet No. 7 Michael Chang, who beat Shelby Cannon 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

Women's No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario downed Florencia Labat 6-4, 6-3; No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini defeated Patty Fendick 6-3, 6-1, and No. 8 Jana Novotna, the Wimbledon finalist, beat Angelica Gavaldon 6-2, 6-4

"I think we've done well against the Pac-10 schools," McBride said. "We still have a lot of things to learn in this program on how to play the game of football, to be tough enough to play the game day-in and day-out. We're not by any means where we want to be in this program."

But the Utes are definitely getting closer. When McBride took over for Utah in 1989, he gained a team ranked 106th in defense, the worst in the nation.

However, by making the switch to a quicker, harder-hitting defense, the Utes finished last season as the WAC's third best defensive squad. They also boasted the WAC's best passing defense.

"We've really turned our defensive unit around," McBride said. "It all has to do with attentiveness and ability. We are tougher mentally than we were when I first came here."

McBride did not stop with defensive changes, but continued his surge, leading the Utes to back-to-back winning seasons in 1991 and 1992, the first time in 19 years that feat was accomplished at Utah. The Utes also finished fourth in the WAC in total offense last season, which placed them 19th in national rankings.

Last December, McBride broke another streak by taking Utah to the Copper Bowl, the school's first bowl game in 28 years, where the Utes fell to Washington State, 31-28. Defensive program alterations were evident when Utah cornerback Kareem Leary was named defensive MVP of the Copper Bowl.

Because he did some recruiting for the UofA as an assistant coach, McBride said he is especially familiar with the Sun Devils who came from Tucson. He has watched ASU tailback Mario Bates, from Tucson Amphitheater, since his sophomore year in high school.

"Anything that (Bates) does as a football player won't surprise me," McBride said.

In addition, McBride said he has known and followed ASU flyback Barry Bacon, a graduate of Tucson Sahuaro, since he was 14 years old.

"I know Arizona State has a dependable player in him," McBride said of Bacon.

Although McBride said he's going up against a talented Sun Devil squad, he feels his team is good enough to compete against anyone they play this season. The key, according to McBride is getting his players to play consistently.

"As far as I'm concerned," McBride said, "the jury is out on our whole football team until we play and they see what we are made of."

the Long Beach Open, a professional two-woman sand volleyball tournament.

"It's going pretty well," Gowell-Rich said of a possible professional career. "We're going to a tournament in Florida in three weeks and we're going around trying to get sponsors right now to go on the tour full-time next year."

Tracy Heflin, a freshman setter, has not really had a chance to get into the spirit of the rivalry yet and she said she was just anxious to play a game.

"I'm ecstatic," Heflin said. "I definitely want to get some playing time. I don't want to be nervous for our first real match (this Friday). I want to know what it feels like to be on the college court, you know?"

Snyder was informed of a "rumor" that Gowell-Rich took her graduate assistant position with the team in order to scout Snyder's offense for Wednesday's match.

"I was really very suspect about her desire to become part of the staff," Snyder said tongue-in-cheek. "But now its become clear what her intentions and ulterior motives really are."

Cardinals

Furrer, a fourth-round pick by the Bears in the 1992 draft, will be the Cardinals' fourth-string quarterback, behind Beuerlein, Chandler and Tony Sacca.

Four players, instead of the maximum six, were placed on Phoenix's inactive list. Bugel said that he would not fill the inactive roster because when running back Garrison Hearst is activated, a roster spot will have to be cleared for him.

"It isn't fair for a guy to work out all week, then be cut on Friday," he said.

The players on the inactive list are Furrer, center/long snapper Kani Kauahi, safety Odie Harris, and offensive lineman Mark Tucker.

On Tuesday afternoon, Phoenix placed the maximum five players on its developmental squad. Those players are wide receivers Mike Cook and Robert Jackson; defensive tackles Chuckie Johnson and Alphonso Taylor; and offensive tackle Mike Moody.

If any of these players are activated from the developmental squad to be placed on the active roster, they must clear waivers first.

Wednesday, September 1, 1993
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
 Behind-the-scenes career developments are in your favor. Guard against minor clerical errors on the job today. Be careful not to take someone for granted.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
 A child who talks back may be a concern today. A friend you haven't heard from in a while gets in touch with you. Job matters take priority over socializing.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
 You need to be tactful with those you deal with today. An innovative move brings you a business success. Tonight brings happy social times.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
 A partner gives you a new perspective on a matter that concerns you. You may have too much going on at home to have out of town guests visit now.
LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
 Reaching agreements with others about mutual financial interests may be difficult today. You will feel inspired on the job now. Tonight you are eloquent!
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
 The morning hours may find you a tad critical. Today could bring you extra financial benefits. Partners will enjoy a spontaneous outing to some place special.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
 Your own enthusiasm about a personal matter may make concentration on routine matters difficult today. It is a good day to hire someone to help around the house.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
 Try not to spread your energies thin today. A small difference could arise with a friend. Creative types are inspired now. Pleasure interests are happily highlighted.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
 Be thorough at work. Don't skim the surface. It is better to visit with friends than to have company over. Shopping is favored now. Tonight finds you quite popular!
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
 Though you are creatively energized now, you may be disappointed in today's lack of feedback. A new business development looks very promising.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
 It is best to keep today's financial developments to yourself. Don't confide in those who talk too much. A travel or party invitation comes tonight.
PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
 Don't let a minor concern get you unduly upset. This is a day when you will make a grand impression on those you contact. Social life is a delight.
YOU BORN TODAY are independent and self-reliant. You have leadership abilities and can succeed in business for yourself. You must be careful not to let material considerations keep you from taking a chance on your individuality. You can succeed in both the arts and sciences and are often known as a person who does his or her own thing. Birthdate of Lily Tomlin, actress; Edgar Rise Burroughs, writer, and Rock Marciano, boxer.
