Dalai Lama awes ASU audience

Buddhist leader speaks of peace, compassion

BY MAXWELL HIGGINS
STATE PRESS

The Dalai Lama, spiritual leader of Tibet and winner of the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize, emphasized calmness of mind as the key to achieving happiness and peace in his address to a crowd of approximately 6,000 people on Thursday night at ASU's Activity Center.

Thursday's speech marked the first Arizona appearance for the Tibetan spiritual leader, who is visiting several U.S. cities as part of a nationwide tour.

A strange silence befell the audience as people stood to see the Dalai Lama enter the room amidst an entourage of religious followers and flash-popping photographers.

Conspicuously absent was the cheering and applause that usually greets such an auspicious personage. Instead, the crowd appeared awestruck by the arrival of a man whose own people refer to him as "the Wish fulfilling Gem" or simply "the Presence."

The Dalai Lama — also referred to as Tenzin Gyatso — was plucked from the obscurity of his peasant origins in northeastern Tibet at the tender age of two and recognized as the incarnation of Avalokiteshvara, the Bodhisattva of Compassion.

Last night, swathed in a maroon robe with his right arm uncovered to the shoulder, the Dalai

Lama seemed to be sharing a private joke with each member of the audience as he grinned and bowed repeatedly on his way to the stage.

Lopon Claude d'Estree, president of Arizona Teachings, Inc., which co-sponsored the event, then introduced His Holiness as "the embodiment of compassion, the most complete and whole human being I have ever met."

Seated comfortably in a large green armchair, the Dalai Lama leaned forward with elbows on knees and microphone held loosely in both hands and said, "Brothers and sisters, I am very happy to be with you this evening. For most of you, this is our first meeting, but whether old friend or new friend doesn't much matter. We are the same human being."

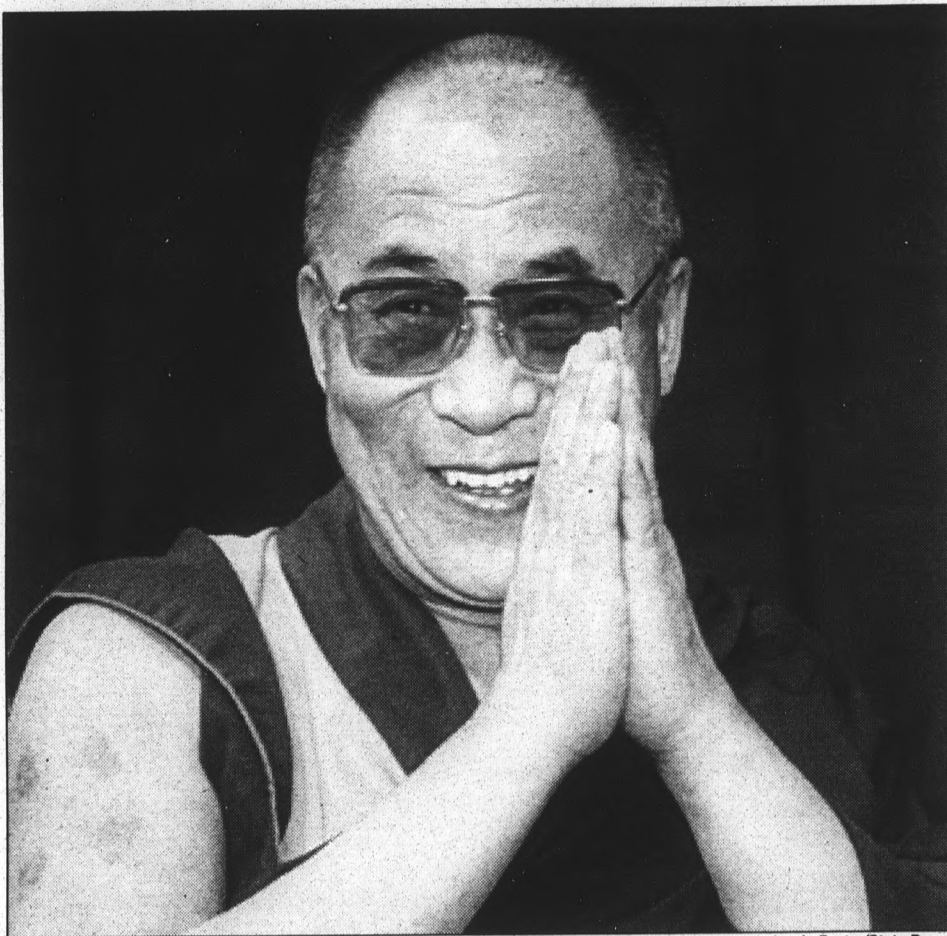

He then began his talk on "overcoming anger through patience" with the statement, "the very purpose of life is happiness."

In his speech, the Dalai Lama noted the difference between positive and negative actions and emotions, with compassion at one extreme and hatred at the other. There are also aspects of human nature, such as desire or a strong sense of self, that are neutral and may be positive or negative depending on other factors, he said.

The Dalai Lama likened the conflicts in life to waves in the ocean. They roll on the surface, but there is little effect deep down, he said.

"Through training we can reduce anger and hatred and increase compassion," he said. "Human nature is gentleness."

As the Dalai Lama left the auditorium, several people were able to touch and speak to him. Tears flowed down many of their faces as he passed by.

Coor to tape speech today

BY JAMES FRUSETTA
STATE PRESS

ASU President Lattie Coor will deliver his semi-annual State of the University Address at 8:30 a.m. today in the studios of KAET.

The address, which will be taped and broadcasted in its entirety next week, is entitled "ASU 2000 — Partnerships for the Future."

COOR

Although the event has come to be expected, its traditional format will change today, as Coor's speech will be followed by a interactive session with about a dozen community figures.

Members of the community scheduled to attend include Executive Director of Arizona Cable Television association Susan Bitter-Smith, former Speaker of the Arizona House of Representatives Alfredo Gutierrez, chairman of Arizona Technology Incubator Quinn Williams, italics Arizona Republic-Phoenix Gazette publisher Chip Weil, Honeywell executive Rod Woods and East Valley Partnership member Nancy Russell.

KAET will broadcast the speech on Sept. 13 at 9:30 p.m. and again on Sept. 19 at 4 p.m.

Police to patrol Manzanita Hall

ASU DPS officer in dorm Thursday through Sunday on nighttime trial basis

BY JOHN GUZZON
STATE PRESS

Residents of Manzanita Hall will have a new neighbor this weekend — an ASU police officer.

ASU's Department of Public Safety is expanding its community-based policing concept with a trial run at the 14-floor co-ed hall. Beginning Thursday night and extending through early Sunday morning, an officer has been assigned to a 7 p.m.-to-3 a.m. shift at Manzanita.

ASU DPS officials said the move was made in an attempt to become more accessible to the residents and decrease crime in the hall.

Hall Director Laura Cohen said she wants the trial run to become permanent if it lives up to expectations.

"If it works the way it's supposed to work, it will be wonderful," Cohen said. "If (residents) are open-minded about it, it will work."

Having officers present in the hall is the next phase of what ASU DPS officials hope will enhance interaction between the community and law enforcement.

"This is part of the bigger plan of community-based policing, and we want to become part of the Manzanita community like we are a part of the MU community," said Chris Davis of ASU DPS.

While the instigators of the program are optimistic about the idea, some students expressed distrust and doubt toward the effect of police presence in their hall.

"It might have a small influence on the partying, but it won't stop all the dudes from going crazy," said Cisco Dominguez, a Manzanita resident.

Corporal Al Phillips — the officer who will be deployed to the hall — said the experiment is an effort to decrease crime and increase public safety with communication and co-operation, not to instill fear and intimidation.

"We are not going to be there in the Big Brother sense, because if we want to write citations, we can go down there, write citations and go to town," Phillips said. "But most of the things that need to be addressed at Manzanita can be done in-house."

Phillips said the Manzanita officer will be in a back-up type situation, working with the hall staff to head off potential problems. He said communication between residents and the officer will increase.

"If the RA needs something, they can sit down with us at Manzy and tell us what they want," Phillips said.

With an officer on-site at Manzanita, Phillips said the familiar sight of ASU DPS writing tickets at the hall will decrease.

"If it gets to the point that we get called from the station, we'll go down and write a ticket," Phillips said. "But we're there to help them solve problems pro-actively, with arrests and citations as a last resort."

Besides being in the position to help staff deal with hall problems, ASU DPS and hall staff officials said they hope to increase awareness of crime-prevention programs such as bicycle registration.

"We also hope to get Manzy at 100 percent bike registration by using free movie passes as reinforcers to pull people in," Phillips said.

Some residents made it clear that they do not want police in Manzanita.

"(The ASU officer) ain't got no business being here," said resident Brett Baxter. "He should either be in the station or at the doughnut house."

Mother claims son arrested in stabbing 'just snapped'

TEMPE (AP) — Eight years after a molestation involving his younger brother, a 15-year-old boy "just snapped" when he learned that his brother may have been molested again, their mother says.

The 15-year-old has been detained in the stabbing of a 38-year-old man whom he believed had molested his younger brother.

"When I saw him in the jail he told me, 'Momma, they think I'm a bloody killer and I'm not. I love my brother.'" the mother told the Tempe Daily News Tribune in an interview published Thursday.

"He just snapped, and maybe I could have done something differently, but I've tried to do the best I could," said the mother, identified by the Tribune only as Claudia.

The names of those involved have been withheld by the media to protect the privacy of the victim in the alleged sex abuse.

After being stabbed Friday evening at his home, the man was able to telephone for help. Meanwhile, the 15-year-old called police from a convenience store near the man's home to turn himself in.

"He knew immediately that what he did was absolutely wrong," said the mother. "He is remorseful. He called the police and the paramedics himself, and he was in the house crying when they found him."

Transsexual denies charge in sexual harassment lawsuit

FLAGSTAFF (AP) — A fired used-car salesman is suing his transsexual supervisor for alleged sexual harassment, but the supervisor says she was the victim.

John P. Quaranta, 34, filed a $1 million lawsuit Tuesday in Coconino County Superior Court Tuesday against McCoy Motors Inc. and resale manager R.J. McCoy. Formerly known as Robert, McCoy underwent hormonal treatments to become a woman.

The suit cites wrongful discharge, creation of a sexually hostile work environment, breach of contract and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Quaranta also claims in the suit that he was fired, in part, in retaliation for his filing a sexual harassment complaint with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Because he decided to take the matter to court, the case is no longer active with EEOC.

According to the dismissal notice issued May 27, a week after the EEOC complaint was filed, Quaranta was fired for having loaned out a car to a customer without managerial approval.

2 arrested in Colorado

TEMPE (AP) — Two men accused of kidnapping a man who pulled a gun and killed a third abductor have been arrested in Colorado, police said Thursday.

The men are accused of kidnapping Brad Perkinson, 35, of Tempe, early Monday in hopes of stealing a high-tech copying machine owned by his family business, said Sgt. Al Taylor, a police spokesman. Police have suggested they wanted the machine for counterfeiting.

Perkinson told police that while being driven away in a rented truck, he freed his hands from duct-tape binding, pulled a gun he carried in a fanny pack and shot one of the kidnapers to death. Perkins jumped from the truck and escaped.

Police in Colorado Springs arrested Michael Adams Prostka, 21, on Thursday, Taylor said. Donald Dwayne Latham, 33, was arrested there Wednesday night.

Tempe police were seeking extradition of the men, both Colorado residents.

Police also have released the name of the man Perkinson killed. He was William Chad Holleran, 25, of Colorado Springs.

Associated Press

An injured Somali man is transported to the hospital on a cart after being shot by members of a rival gang Thursday in Mogadishu. In another part of Mogadishu, American and Pakistani troops fired into a group of protesters, killing an unknown number.

U.S., Pakistani troops fire on 'mob'

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — American Cobra Helicopters fired on Somali women and children Thursday in what the United Nations claimed was a "last-resort" effort to keep them from killing peacekeepers.

Nearby residents said the street was littered with the bodies of as many as 100 Somalis. A U.N. spokesman said a Pakistani soldier was killed and three Americans and two Pakistanis were injured.

The peacekeepers had come under fire from heavy weapons by Somali militiamen and were trying to withdraw when women and children joined in the attack with grenades and small arms, said Maj. David Stockwell.

Stockwell, the chief U.N. military spokesman, initially said a mob of women and children was swarming over the U.N. vehicles when the helicopters fired on them with 20mm cannons.

Later, however, he said the women and children had joined militiamen in attacking the soldiers from behind walls lining the route of their withdrawal and were clambering over roadblocks in their way.

"The women and children were combatants," Stockwell said.

"When the helicopters came in they shot at the gunmen behind the walls, and the women and children who were actively engaged as combatants as well," Stockwell said. "Whoever was behind the walls was shot at."

"There were some people swarming on the roadblocks, but not directly on the vehicles ... and the helicopters shot down the middle of the road to persuade people to leave," Stockwell said.

The incident was sure to fire the debate in the U.S. Congress over American involvement in Somalia and to add fuel to the arguments of some U.N. members, notably Italy, that the United Nations has lost sight of its humanitarian mission in the country.

Stockwell blamed the attack on the forces of fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, wanted by the United Nations for a series of assaults that have killed 48 peacekeepers and wounded more than 175 since May.

Stockwell said he had no information on the number of Somalis killed or wounded, but told reporters, "What I am acknowledging is that if you go out there tomorrow, you may find some women and children casualties."

The report of scores of Somalis killed could not be independently confirmed. But Stockwell acknowledged that U.N. troops and tanks, armored personnel carriers and helicopters used "heavy casualty-producing weapons" in defending themselves.

The U.S. Senate is debating whether to push for an end to America's Somalia involvement, which was initiated to ensure delivery of humanitarian aid and restore stability to the east African nation stricken by drought, famine and anarchy. More than 350,000 Somalis died in 1992.

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Thursday that U.S. troops should stay in Somalia "for the foreseeable future" to ensure the success of the U.N. operation there and to preserve America's credibility.

21 October Road, lined with abandoned factories, warehouses and other buildings, has been the scene of numerous skirmishes, including one on June 5 that took the lives of 24 Pakistanis.

The U.N. road-clearing crew consisted of 100 Pakistani soldiers, three tanks, four armored personnel carriers and an American bulldozer. One of the tanks was hit by what Stockwell said was a 106mm recoilless rifle and set ablaze.

"They got hit pretty hard," Stockwell said.

Gays an 'unacceptable risk' in military

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate branded homosexuality an "unacceptable risk" to military morale and voted Thursday to tighten President Clinton's policy toward gays in the military.

In the first floor vote on the issue since Clinton unveiled his "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" policy in July, the Senate rejected a measure that would have left the matter to the president's discretion.

The vote was 63-33, with members of the Democratic leadership, including Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine and Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia voting against the amendment.

Part of the fiscal 1994 defense budget, the gays in the military measure overshadowed debate on billion-dollar weapons systems. But the discussion Thursday lacked the emotionalism the issue sparked earlier this year.

The House and Senate worked Thursday on the overall spending plan for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The House Armed Services Committee has already adopted the same legislative policy as the Senate, and the full House was expected to pass it next week.

Clinton could veto the legislation to eliminate the congressional policy but he would also lose the entire defense budget, the first of his administration. Clinton has signaled to Congress that he finds this new policy acceptable.

The legislative policy states that Congress has the constitutional right to make rules for the military, that the armed forces are unique and "persons who demonstrate a propensity or intent to engage in homosexual acts would create an unacceptable risk to the high standards of morale, good order and discipline" in the military.

Team still hopes to save Mars Observer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A milk carton taped to a wall in the Mars Observer mission office has a picture of the vanished spacecraft instead of a missing child ad. The caption reads: "Have You Seen Me?"

Three weeks after Mars Observer disappeared, engineers with humor and hope as well as determination and new computer commands still are struggling to save the $980 million mission, even though NASA's management is investigating its apparent demise.

"They're doing an autopsy and we think possibly the victim is still kicking," said Leigh Torgerson, deputy chief of the spacecraft team. "You don't quit doing CPR until the doctor shows up and tells you the patient is flatlined."

Controllers lost touch with Mars Observer on Aug. 21, only three days before the spacecraft was supposed to fire its thrusters, enter Martian orbit and start the first U.S. exploration of the Red Planet in 17 years. The spacecraft, launched from Florida last year, remained silent Thursday.

Gloom has descended on NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, where Mars Observer workers are suffering the disappearance of a decade's work, face some layoffs and feel anxiety and exhaustion. Colleagues constantly approach them to offer support.

"It's sort of like you lost somebody in your family — the condolences you get," said Suzanne Dodd, chief of the mission planning team. Nevertheless, Mars Observer offices are adorned with editorial cartoons lampooning the spacecraft's troubles. Workers recount the latest jokes from David Letterman, who this week quipped that NASA was launching a bloodhound with a jetpack to hunt down Mars Observer.

"If you take it too seriously, you'd be so depressed you'd be in bad mental state," Dodd said. "Humor helps relieve the tension."

Mars Observer's disappearance has revived criticism of NASA and renewed emphasis on the agency's failures, but "the thing that's bothered me most is that some people have given up hope..."

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BOO — to the Tempe Daily News Tribune for sticking its nose in the editorial policy of the State Press regarding coverage of Associated Students of ASU. The Tribune ran an editorial Thursday slamming the State Press for “wimping out” by not pursuing an ASASU vs. the Open Meetings Law issue in court. The whole point, which the Tribune seems to have missed, is that even if the Press won the case, ASASU’s comparatively minuscule budget and dearth of influence give little reason to cover the group. If the Tribune’s editorial board thinks coverage of ASASU is so important and the State Press is committing such a heinous offense against its readers, let them cover the group and put their money where their rhetoric is.

BRAVO — To the Clinton Administration for digging in and making an effort to finally clean up the bureaucratic mess in Washington. Clinton launched the program from the South Lawn, with a backdrop that included two forklifts holding 10,000 pages of personnel codes. Although the clean-up plan could cost 252,000 jobs, the campaign could save the government and thus taxpayers $108 billion.

BRAVO — To ASU faculty and staff for their donations of books, clothing and computers to an orphanage in El Salvador. Economics professor Jose Mendez organized the project after visiting El Salvador and seeing the conditions under which the country’s children lived. If only a similar donation drive could be made to help the children living in horrible conditions in this country...

BOO — To Antioch College in Dayton, Ohio, for requiring consent for every specific romantic act that takes place between two students of the school. The new rule is aimed at curbing date rape. It is not enough to say “yes” to a request for sexual intercourse right off the bat; each specific act must be secured on its own (if foreplay is involved). The rule is really pushing it when it comes to privacy, and how will it be enforced?

Does the female have to say “yes” to each and every kiss? To the removal of both the socks and the shoes? Besides, the policy takes away all protection from the male (assuming the relationship is male-female).

For example, a couple that has been going out for a long time has consenting sexual intercourse, but the woman did not specifically say “yes” to every single act. A bitter and heated fight breaks out between the couple immediately following intercourse, and the woman “gets back” at the man by pressing sexual assault charges. (This is an improbable situation, but it very well could happen with this new rule.) The male is up the creek when the question arises, “did she say yes to every act?”

‘HOW WAS YOUR VACATION?’

Supreme Court usurps idea of democratic government

It is generally accepted in this country that democracy and majority rule are good things. If a majority of our democratically elected representatives passes a law, all must obey. That’s the way our government works.

There are many people who think that the process of democracy could be improved somewhat. I, for one, think that term limits, run-off elections, and lower pay for our elected representatives would be a good thing. But there aren’t many people who would publicly say that the very concept of majority rule is faulty.

However, there exists in our country one very powerful and very undemocratic branch of government: the Supreme Court of the United States. The Supreme Court’s unelected and life-tenured members can effectively veto any law they want by judging the law to be unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court is even more powerful than the President. The President can only veto laws passed by Congress. The Supreme Court can rule unconstitutional not only the laws passed by Congress, but also the laws passed by the legislatures of all fifty states.

Why do we allow the Supreme Court so much power? Because majorities, if left unchecked, will sometimes violate the rights of minorities. When I use the term “minority,” I don’t mean racial minorities. I mean the opposite of “majority.” Those who believe they have a right to smoke marijuana constitute a minority. If they were a majority, then marijuana would be legal. What gives the majority the right to tell the minority that they can’t smoke marijuana? The right of majority rule!

We also allow the Supreme Court so much power because theoretically the Court does not decide constitutional cases based on the personal predilections of its members. The Court is supposed to make decisions based on interpretation of the Constitution. The Court is duty bound to declare unconstitutional laws which the Constitution prohibits. Likewise, the Court is duty bound to let stand laws which the Constitution does not prohibit. They must let these laws stand even if the members of the Court personally disagree with them.

In the past few decades, the Court has strayed from its role as neutral arbiter of the Constitution. The Court’s attitude is “hey, we’re brilliant guys, we graduated at the top of our classes from the nation’s most prestigious law schools, we know better than you moron voters and politicians what is good for this country, and we’re not going to let the Constitution get in the way changing things.”

This is an attitude that all Americans should worry about. After all, Adolf Hitler was a brilliant guy, and he thought he was acting for the benefit of Germany. Our Constitution was founded on the principle that no branch of government should be too powerful. The Supreme Court has subverted that principle of the Constitution.

As an example, I point out the Court’s well known decision of Roe v. Wade, where the Court mysteriously discovered a new constitutional right, the right to obtain an abortion! I challenge anyone to show me where in the Constitution it says that there is a right to have an abortion.

The opinion of the Court claims that the right of access to abortion lies within the right to privacy. I challenge anyone to show me where in the Constitution it says that there is a right to privacy. And what does abortion have to do with privacy anyway? Abortions take place in public places like hospitals. On the other hand, if a person wishes to smoke a joint, read child pornography, or engage in certain unusual sexual acts, all in the privacy of his own home, then he is out of luck. The Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, offers him no protection.

It is fine to talk about the right to personal liberty. But the Court has never held that we have the right to do as we please as long as our actions don’t harm anyone else. For example, there are laws against drug use, prostitution, sodomy, cruelty to animals, suicide, bestiality, and working for less than minimum wage.

Why may prostitution be outlawed, but not abortion? It’s not because of anything written in the Constitution. It’s because a majority of justices on the Supreme Court think that prostitution is bad, but access to abortion is good.

This is a dangerous usurpation of power for the Court to be making such decisions. Under our constitutional scheme, it is the duty of the legislatures of each of the fifty states to make such decisions.

Press coverage a '90s witch hunt

I understand the State Press wanting to discuss important topics at ASU. But this concentrating on individuals with criminal records is starting to go too far (witch hunt). I realize the Administration and the Board of Regents are already overreacting to the whole thing, but throwing the question up for public debate is adding fuel to their fire (witch hunt).

This whole episode is reminiscent of last year's problem with football and basketball players who had criminal records (witch hunt). Of course the Administration overreacted to that as well by performing background checks on all student athletes at ASU (witch hunt). All they found was a young girl from the swim team who hadn't paid a drinking ticket in Wickenburg. She was humiliated by ASU, whose Administration then decided to let those other athletes play anyway.

This year it's law students (witch hunt). Who's next? These kinds of policies are bordering on discrimination and probably wouldn't be able to stand up in court because of their selective bias. And it just does more to give ASU a bad name in the community and in the overall university picture. It's amazing how little we've learned in 200 years.

Football patrons cheer immaturity

How does ASU spell spirit? I-M-M-A-T-U-R-I-T-Y. At Saturday's game against Utah, many ASU students proudly gloated in their "young adult" Sun Devil spirit. For those of you not exactly sure what Sun Devil spirit is all about, here's a quick overview: First, be as rude as you can to anyone within 100 feet of yourself. Start off by yelling as many obscenities as quickly and loudly as you can, but don't slow down, the guy next to you might make you look like an amateur. Next, make sure to have some food on hand to throw at band members. This is always a real crowd pleaser. After all, the band is not there to support our school and team, it's just there for your personal amusement. A quick tip to the group throwing peanut M&Ms into the tubas and steel drums; try bouncing them off of your drunk friend's head, he'll get a bigger kick out of it than the band will.

In all, the ASU student section at games can resemble Romper Room gone mad, nothing more than a bunch of "young adults" without grown-up supervision, I know it's tough, trying to impress friends by sharing such neat talents as throwing food at people and shiny objects; It sure did impress my friends in second grade ... how time flies. It seems like just yesterday we were able to stay home without mommy and daddy there to slap our hands. I think it was just yesterday for quite a few people attending this school. In fact, maybe we should seriously consider changing our school mascot to Barney. Actually, that wouldn't work. Barney may be a spastic, blundering idiot, but he does know how to be courteous. Maybe Beavis and Butt-head would do, and instead of the fight song, we could all sing the Pampers Pull-Ons commercial "Mommy, wow, I'm a big kid now." It would work. ...

ASU employees delay graduation

On Aug. 23, (the first day of classes) after attending what I thought were my scheduled classes, I made my way through the snaking line to receive what remained of my financial assistance after fee payments. I was informed by the young lady at the computer terminal that, according to her records, my tuition had not been paid and I had been dropped from all of my classes. I explained that I had registered on April 16 and put my fee payment slip in the "drop box," indicating that Financial Assistance would cover my fees. I was sent to speak with Carol Balk, the director of financial aid disbursement. Ms. Balk informed me apparently someone had lost my envelope and even though I am scheduled to graduate this spring, my only recourse would be to ask the College of Business for overrides just like everyone else. After learning that I would only be able to salvage one of my initial five classes, I was told that I would have to settle for graduating in December of 1994.

I write this letter not only as an expression of my own grievances, but more importantly, as a warning to fellow students. When you sign your name on the little slip of paper and drop it in the box, you are not issued a receipt. This puts you in a dangerous position simply because it is obvious from my case and many others that Carol Balk's staff cannot keep track of fee payment envelopes. I find it difficult to believe, that after more than 100 years of "service" to students, that the University has not made revisions to this archaic fee payment system, at least informing students that the possibility of losing fee envelopes exists.

This is not the first time this has happened; according to accounting adviser Susan Felker, it happens rather frequently. One way to avoid the bureaucratic nightmare that I endured is to use the In-Touch system to pay your fees. Through In-Touch, you will be issued a confirmation number that will act as your receipt.

Finally, I think the University owes the students of ASU an answer to the following questions regarding the current fee payment procedures.

- 1) Why are students not informed by a staff member, or even a sign, that the possibility exists for their fee payment envelope to be lost and the In-Touch method of fee payment is a safer?
- 2) Why are students not informed by mail that the fees for their classes have not been received and they have consequently been dropped from their classes?
- 3) Why is it that there is an extreme lack of continuity between departments at the University and each employee tries to "pass the buck" to another department? After all, as tax paying citizens we own the University and as students we are also the customers. I ask any employee of the University, regardless of department, to answer these questions and I challenge you to do your part to ensure that these unfortunate circumstances do not befall other students in the future.

HIV prevention best AIDS cure

Your article on Wednesday, Sept. 8, describing my research at ASU has a number of inaccurate statements. I wish to give a more accurate description. We have nothing to do with "synthesizing a microorganism as an AIDS remedy." My research consists entirely of the chemical synthesis of two naturally occurring organic compounds that may be of benefit.

The whole affair began when my students and I submitted a paper and a poster to the American Chemical Society meeting held in Chicago, Aug. 22-26. We presented our preliminary results on the chemical synthesis of two naturally occurring compounds. The first project is a chemical synthesis of phenoxan. This compound was isolated by German scientists in 1990. They discovered that phenoxan has anti-HIV activity and published their work in the journal Liebigs Annalen Chemie 991, 707-708. No mention was made in the article of how they tested the compound. The second project is a chemical synthesis of a compound called L-687-781. This compound was isolated by Merck scientists in 1990. They showed that the compound is effective against Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia (PCP). This pneumonia is frequently contracted by AIDS patients due to their increased susceptibility to opportunistic infections. The Merck scientists tested their isolated compound on rats infected with the pneumonia. Their results can be found in the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Science (USA) 1990, 87, 5950-5954. Both of these journals can be found in Noble Library.

There are reasons why chemists want to chemically synthesize a particular compound. First, the structure of the compound must be confirmed through a total synthesis from readily available starting materials (i.e. inexpensive chemicals); second, the supply of the naturally occurring substance may be in limited supply (for example, taxol); and finally chemists want to increase the fundamental knowledge of making complex molecules.

The AIDS epidemic is a complex and tragic medical problem and ultimately, preventing the transmission of HIV is still the best strategy. A remedy for AIDS is still years away. I deeply regret any misunderstanding and the raising of false hopes the article might have given.

Tuition increase figures mislead

In response to an editorial printed in Thursday's (Sept. 2, 1993) State Press, I feel compelled to suggest that some of the statistics cited were inaccurate and possibly misleading.

Upon reading the piece, I had contacted the Student Fee Payment Department on campus to verify the tuition increases for both in-state and out-of-state students. While in-state, full-time tuition had increased 16 percent over last semester, out-of-state, full-time tuition had only increased 5 percent.

However, these statistics serve no other purpose but to inflame the debate of in-state/out-of-state parity when tuition increases are forthcoming. The fact of the matter is that the out-of-state tuition increase had been greater than the in-state tuition increase. In absolute dollar amounts, out-of-state tuition had increased $175 per semester versus a $125 per semester increase for in-state tuition.

Aside from this particular issue, I look forward to reading future editorials from the board members of the State Press.

City government puts sales tax increase to voters

Insufficient revenues cited as motivation for proposed raise in rate

BY JOY E. BEASON
STATE PRESS

An initiative aimed at boosting Tempe's ailing budget by increasing the city's sales tax will be put to the voters Tuesday.

Citing insufficient revenues for various citywide services, Tempe officials are asking citizens to approve an increase of 1-1.2 percent in the local sales tax. If approved, the measure will result in an average sales tax increase of $39 for a family of four.

Hut Hutson, chairman of the Tempe Citizens for Quality Service, said a primary reason for the proposal stems from a lack of funding to man much-needed city service facilities that have already been approved by voters, but remain unimplemented due to budget cuts.

"We have a fire station that needs to be built and manned, and a sub-police station that needs to be built and manned in south Tempe," Hutson said.

Tempe currently has only two operational fire stations, leaving many residents with an increased wait for response to emergencies.

Hutson compared the city's situation to ASU's prior mothballing of the Computing Commons and Life Sciences buildings, which were built but remained unopened until funds were obtained for operational costs.

"We saw what happened to ASU, and we didn't want the same to happen to us," he said.

Budget woes have caused the public library to cut its hours, and police beats have been eliminated in downtown and school locations.

To date, the proposed sales tax hike has received minimal criticism and widespread support from the city council and other local agencies.

"It is a critical turning point for Tempe, either we do it now, or it will cost us more later," Hutson said. "Tempe will be the second lowest place to live in Arizona."

"The entire council supports the sales tax," said Councilman Frank Plencner. "After two years of looking at it, it is really very, very important."

Plencner noted that the revenues will not only come from residents, but also from the numerous people who travel to and shop in Tempe.

Although the same sales tax was on the ballot and failed by 59 votes in 1991, Plencner said he is confident the new measure will pass.

"It is needed, and people can see that it is needed," he said.

Similar to businesses nationwide, the Tempe city government is "streamlining," Hutson said.

"There have been 57 positions eliminated and the whole budget has been re-prioritized," Hutson said. "We were able to bring 17 new people into the police department. We are still looking to do more (such as) eliminating positions where any duplication of effort exists — I could on and on and on."

Hutson said that streamlining will continue even if the sales tax passes.

If the proposal passes, officials estimate that 69 percent of the $5.1 million generated yearly will be used to fund police, fire, paramedics and anti-gang services.

Anti-gang services include a police liaison in the schools, as well as an anti-gang task force. Although no drive-by shootings have been reported in Tempe, Hutson said gang activity is "the number one item that citizens are concerned about."

Don Schlagenhauf, ASU economics professor, said the effects of the proposed tax hike on locals would be "minimal."

The polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Antioch College combats date rape with sexual contracts

Policy requires mutual consent at each level of sex

BY MARK M. MACIAS
STATE PRESS

Everyone knows that when a woman says "no" on a date, it means no. But does yes still mean yes under a new university policy?

According to an acquaintance rape prevention measure for students of Antioch College in Ohio, one verbal yes is no longer enough.

The small liberal arts college — comprised of 70 percent women — has adopted a policy requiring students to give "verbal consent ... with each new level of physical and/or sexual contact in any given interaction, regardless of who initiates it."

So far, school officials say they have had luck with the policy, with no violations reported since it was implemented in January.

Charles Silver, president of ASU's Men Stopping Rape, said he doesn't think the policy would work at ASU, because enforcement would be difficult.

"I think it's a neat idea, but I can't see how they are going to enforce it," Silver said. "People who are more likely not to rape are going to be the only people who will sign it, and people who are prone to rape are probably going to be the only people who won't (sign) it."

"This is a useful idea that needs to be discussed. Anytime you bring that kind of awareness to the issue, it's going to have a positive effect."

Antioch College spokesman Jim Mann said the policy was developed after an alleged date rape in 1990.

"What this establishes is, 'I did say no,'" Mann said. "It also establishes that if someone is drunk or passed out, they do not have the ability to consent."

Mann said the school has widely supported the policy, but "it has been greeted with some humor."

Contrary to the students' response at Antioch College, Silver said he doesn't think the contracts are a "silly policy at all."

"Half the time people kiss, it's because one person kissed the other person," Silver said. "Typically, you don't say, 'Can I kiss you?' Up to that point (of kissing), one person is unsure until the other person takes the liberty to kiss the other person. You'll never ever know whether you offended the other person unless they tell you or sign the contract."

Krista Masuch, an ASU sophomore business major, said she doesn't think such a policy would work at ASU because students will not stop "in the heat of passion" to ask for verbal consent.

"What, are you going to ask at each level, 'Can I touch you here?'" Masuch said. "What if a girl is too drunk to sign her name, but she really means 'yes?'"

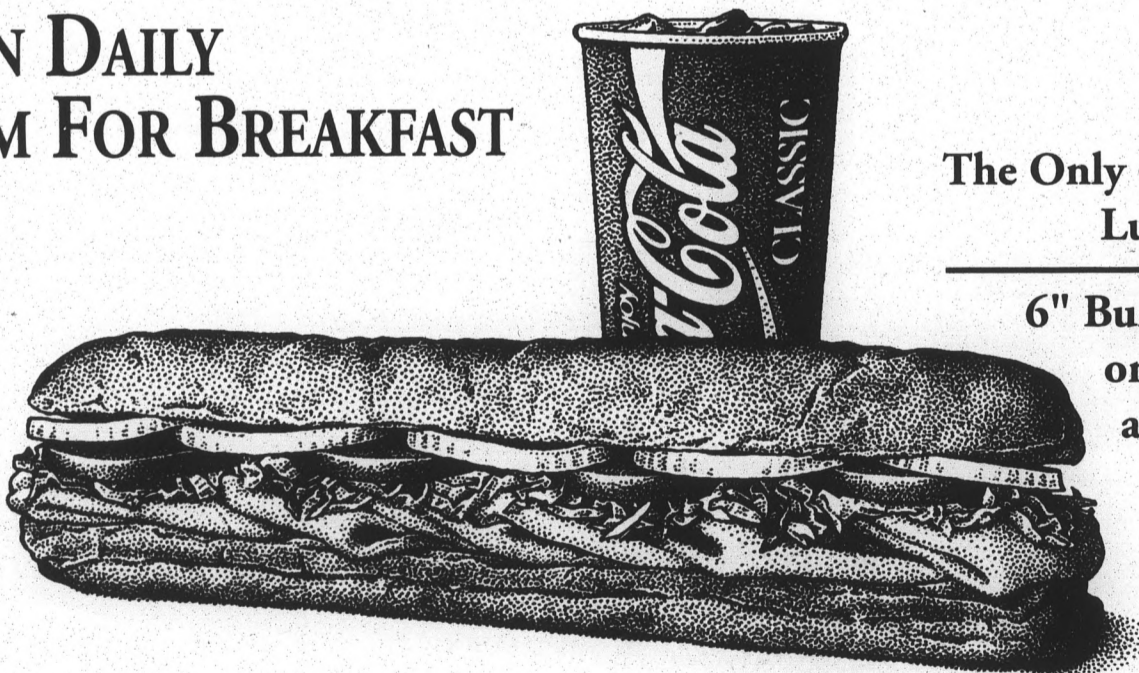

"Maybe it that will work on the East Coast, but it would never work here."

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A color computer monitor and a VCR were reported stolen Wednesday from room 120 of the Law Building. Loss is valued at $490.
- A laptop computer was stolen last week from the skyboxes at Sun Devil Stadium. The computer is valued at $500.
- An ASU employee reported receiving harassing phone calls Wednesday while at work at ASU Stores.
- An ASU student had his license plate stolen while his vehicle was parked in lot 59.
- A student became ill at the Student

Recreation Center Wednesday and was taken by ASU DPS to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A 38-year-old nude Tempe man was arrested Wednesday after he knocked on a woman's door in the 600 block of E. Solano Drive. When the woman opened the door the man said, "I know I have no clothes on," claiming someone "slipped me a mickey." He was arrested after police found him hiding between cars in the parking lot.
- A 15-year-old Tempe youth was arrested for forcing a 20-year-old "mentally disturbed" woman to perform oral sex. The youth was released to his mother after he confirmed the act, but denied that it occurred forcibly.

- Tempe police on Tuesday raided a room at the Travelodge Motel, 1005 E. Apache Boulevard, where they found methamphetamines and marijuana. Two people were arrested during the raid, while two others remain at large.
- Two Tempe youths were forced at gun point Monday to remove all of their clothes by three unknown people and were then left naked in the parking lot at 100 W. Sixth Street.
- A 30-year-old Tempe woman was arrested at 1600 E. Apache Boulevard after she offered a act of prostitution to an undercover Tempe police officer. She was also charged with possession of marijuana.

- While checking his vehicle before a shift Wednesday, a Tempe police officer found a marijuana "joint" under the back seat.
- Police reported four DUI incidents and four car thefts.

Westphal: Maravich 'a jerk' before finding God

By SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

Phoenix Suns Coach Paul Westphal didn't always have fond memories of late Louisiana State basketball great "Pistol" Pete Maravich.

When he was a sophomore at Southern Cal in the early 1970s, Westphal guarded Maravich, a senior at the time and the No. 1 scorer in the nation averaging more than 44 points per game.

"When he was a player he was pretty much of a jerk," Westphal recalled of Maravich's selfish play. "Nobody liked him, except for the fans."

"In the South they thought he was the greatest player of all time. It was like Elvis, and then Pistol Pete."

But now, five years after Maravich passed away while playing a pickup game of basketball, Westphal tries to tell the story of how Pistol Pete found God to save his life.

"Now this was a guy who had everything," Westphal said at a Campus Crusade for Christ weekly meeting Thursday night. "He signed the biggest contract in the history of pro sports at that time. He had all of that acclaim in the South. But he had no peace in his life at all."

Westphal told the ASU Christian group that Maravich chased everything before his eyes, but he did not find peace until he found God. And after he found peace within himself, Westphal said all that Maravich wanted to do was to go around telling people how Jesus changed his life.

"When I speak to a group like this, he (Maravich) can't be here to tell his story," Westphal told the student group. "I just wanted to tell it to reiterate what (National Basketball Association Hall of Famer) Bill Russell says; there's no ultimate victory in sports. Pistol Pete is playing one day, and then the next day he's dead."

Although he said he has no affiliation with the ASU student Christian group, Westphal said he enjoys speaking to kids and young adults about reading the Bible.

"Basketball is fun, but it is not that important," said Westphal, who led the Suns to the league's best record and a trip to the NBA Finals against the Chicago Bulls last season.

"The only thing that I think is important is understanding who God is, who we are and what we can do about it. That can be found. He just says if you seek, you will find."

Westphal said he became a Christian when he was a child and was blessed to be raised in a Christian home. And since then, he was taught to understand anything that was in the Bible was the word of God.

"You see, being a Christian is giving up your life and having the Lord live his life through you," he said. "If you do that, you can't help but have opportunities. I just think if you dedicate your life to the Lord there will be opportunities that he wants you to have."

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

IF YOU THOUGHT COLLEGE WAS EXPENSIVE, TRY PUTTING YOURSELF THROUGH RETIREMENT.

Think about supporting yourself for twenty-five, thirty years or longer in retirement. It might be the greatest financial test you'll ever face. Fortunately, you have one valuable asset in your favor. Time.

Time to take advantage of tax-deferral. Time for your money to grow.

But starting early is key. Consider this: if you begin saving just $100 a month at age thirty, you can accumulate $172,109* by the time you reach age sixty-five. Wait ten years and you'd need to set aside $219 a month to reach the same goal.

At TIAA-CREF, we not only understand the value of starting early, we can help make it possible—with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over a million people in education and research are already enrolled in America's largest retirement system. Find out how easy it is to join them. Call today and learn how simple it is to put yourself through retirement when you have time and TIAA-CREF on your side.

Disabled athletic teams nearing reality if program funding becomes available

BY GREG SEXTON
STATE PRESS

A competitive athletic program for disabled students which could establish ASU as one of the West's premier schools for the disabled is close to becoming a reality.

Still, Ray Jensen, ASU director of purchasing and the driving force behind the program, is only cautiously optimistic that the effort can get rolling soon.

"Funding is our biggest obstacle," Jensen said Thursday. "We have crossed a number of bridges, but there is still much that needs to be worked out."

During the summer, Jensen — who also works with the Mesa Association of Sports for the Disabled — outlined his plan to the ASU athletic department, in hopes of receiving financial backing.

The response this week was positive, Jensen said, though he conceded the athletic department is not in an economic situation to provide much money for such a program.

"I expected an honest and serious review (from the athletic department)," he said. "I expected them to be willing to look at the feasibility of it, and they did. They seemed very supportive."

Although organizations offering competitive programs for challenged athletes do exist, they are rare. In the western United States, where the weather is most conducive for such training and competition, there are no universities that offer such a program.

That void could be filled by ASU, where disabled students comprise 2 percent of the population.

Jensen said support from the athletic department could come in the form of scholarships, but most is expected in corporate donations. The price tag for establishing a program varies, depending on what type of sports, training and coaching is involved.

Proponents of starting the program at ASU cite Arizona's warm, training-friendly climate, in addition to the University's training facilities — some of the most modern in the country.

The Student Recreation Complex (SRC) has numerous machines and training devices that are accessible to the disabled.

The SRC houses the Adaptive Weight Room, which boasts specially designed workout equipment for challenged athletes.

Gerry Maas, SRC director, said he would be willing to offer the SRC facilities as a training area for an ASU disabled athletic group.

Jensen said the next step is to talk with SRC and athletic department officials, and to devise a structure of what sports with which to begin. He said the program would likely begin with a small club-like format and added that the whole ordeal would be a slow process.

The objective is to form teams of physically challenged athletes. Common events would include basketball, track, tennis and swimming.

"Ultimately, it is our goal to have a fully (NCAA) sanctioned program for wheelchair athletics," Jensen said.

A handful of schools in the East offer such programs. Wright State University in Ohio has offered programs for challenged athletes for more than 23 years.

Andy Krieger, a wheelchair athlete himself, worked at Wright State as an adaptive specialist for three years. He said the West definitely lacks a comprehensive program.

Krieger thinks wheelchair athletics will continue to grow. "Pretty soon, students will get together and say, 'Why don't I have athletic opportunities like the able-bodied person,'" Krieger said.

Jensen said he's confident the program will get started, but remains guarded.

"We need to get a sense of working toward this, but I don't want to raise expectations, because this type of thing takes so long to work out," Jensen said. "There is just so much to do."

ASU professor: Global warming trend natural, not catastrophic

Changes linked to volcanic, solar activity, says expert

By GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

The theory that catastrophic climate changes are underway as the result of human-caused global warming has drawn criticism from an ASU professor, who says the earth's slight rise in temperature has virtually no correlation with people.

"I think that people have been oversold on the idea that we have some catastrophe about to happen," said Robert Balling Jr., director of the Office of Climatology at ASU and senior climate consultant to the United Nations.

Balling's studies on possible climate changes — which date back to when he earned his doctorate in 1979 — have been published in "The Heated Debate," his book that he said has been used by at least 40 professors throughout the country since its publication last year.

Balling said efforts to decrease the production of planet-warming greenhouse gasses are not worthwhile, because the trends and variations in this century's climate are more closely linked to volcanic eruptions and solar output than to human activity.

"People are being told it's time to act now and do these things and help to solve the global warming problem. It's all a bunch of nonsense," Balling said.

Balling attributed recent speculation of a two- to five-degree global temperature increase to computer models that have predicted a warmer climate accompanying the doubling of carbon dioxide on earth by 2040. Carbon dioxide is a greenhouse gas, one of several gasses that has been shown to trap heat in the earth's atmosphere.

"We went halfway to doubling equivalent carbon dioxide and we saw a warming of probably not more than a tenth of a degree or so," he said. "It doesn't add up that somehow we're going to get four degrees in global warming for a doubling of (carbon dioxide)."

When these models have examined the last century, Balling said, they have shown that the planet should have already warmed several degrees, due to the increase in greenhouse gasses. But records show that current warming is far below levels that would be required for a future climate disaster, he said.

"In the past century, you find that almost all of that warming occurred early in the century," he said. "Seventy-five percent of the global warming had already occurred before the second World War."

"There may have been a half-degree of warming, but you've got to be a flaming idiot just to say that a half-degree of warming was caused by a buildup of greenhouse gasses," Balling said.

He added that the increase of carbon dioxide — which may result in slightly higher temperatures — will not have a negative effect on Earth because billions of years of evolution has eliminated the most vulnerable forms of life.

"There's nothing wrong with carbon dioxide," Balling said. "I assure you, carbon dioxide is vital for the growth of every organism on this planet."

"I just don't see the whole system as delicate and fragile and all that junk. I think this rock in space is pretty tough."

Cutting the output of greenhouse gasses could actually hurt developing countries, Balling said, since they are often the biggest producers of such gasses.

Places like Eastern Europe, India, Vietnam, China and Russia would worsen their already weak economies if they had to cease production of these gasses, he said.

"I do think that wealthy nations protect their environment far better than poor nations," Balling said. "And the more we can do to keep people wealthy, I think, has a great outlook for the environment."

"It's very hard to cut back on these things. And the U.S. is extraordinarily efficient already in the way we produce things and don't put out much."

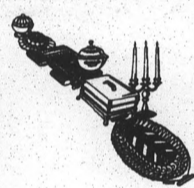

Balling said while scientists expect carbon dioxide production to increase, they do not expect global temperatures to rise more than one degree by the end of the next century. He added that predicting an exact temperature is not possible, because many factors affect climate.

"There are just as many gasses being emitted to help to cool the earth as there are gasses to warm the earth," he said, adding that research is being done on the cooling effect of sulfur dioxide.

Balling said increased technology will eventually lead to a substitute for fossil fuels, which produce greenhouse gasses when burned.

Global warming is an issue that will come and go, he said, only to be replaced by another catastrophe that lacks conclusive proof.

"That is the way of the world," he said.

ASU project gets supplies to El Salvador orphanage

Group provides computers in effort to give children job skills

BY MELANIE K. SELCHO
STATE PRESS

An orphanage in El Salvador was supplied with computers, clothes and books last week, as donations from ASU faculty and staff reached their final destination.

ASU professor of economics Jose Mendenez organized the donation project, which he said took over 1 1/2 years to become reality. The contributions — including 20 computers — were delivered to the Gustavo Magana Mendez orphanage in Ahuachapan, El Salvador last week.

Mendez started the campaign after visiting El Salvador while directing a project to provide technical assistance to the Central Bank of El Salvador.

When he saw what conditions the children in the orphanage lived under, Mendez said he felt he had to do something to help them. He said most of the children had no education except in agriculture and textiles. Many were learning to be shoe cobblers.

"That's an industry that's been put out of business," Mendez said. "It's not a skill marketable, even in El Salvador, after these kids grow up."

The orphanage's 100 children have very little to live on, he said.

"They get 18 cents per day for each child from the government to pay for their food, clothing, any material for books, and the salaries for anyone who works there," he said.

Denis Sorenson, program coordinator for ASU's Center for Latin American Studies, helped Mendez solicit the contributions from some 40 or 50 ASU staff members.

"I was really impressed," Sorenson said. "The University community came through. A lot of people donated."

Mendez expressed thanks to the project's contributors and said they can be assured their efforts were not made in vain.

"Here is a project that they can be assured that they actually got something done," he said.

The children are already at an economic disadvantage because they don't have parents, Mendez said. He said the computers are intended to get the children familiarized with technology so they will be more economically secure when they leave.

"A large percentage of the children are children who lost their parents because of (El Salvador's) civil war," he said. "Another large group have been abandoned by mothers who are prostitutes."

"We're reasonably sure that they're going to gain access to a tool that they won't be afraid of. In most of our lives, it's the little things that cause us to change directions."

After gathering all of the contributions, Mendez said the project hit its "low point," because it was difficult to compile a congruent system from the diverse selection of old computers and operating systems.

Lewis Gale, a graduate economics student, said he helped put together the computers into usable equipment.

Both Gale and Mendez were present when the orphanage received the equipment and supplies, and said they received great satisfaction from the experience.

"The kids (using the computers) were just going nuts," Mendez said. "I was impressed by how quick they learned. We just started crying — it was really neat."

Both Mendez and Gale said they want to continue with a project similar to this one. The school still needs more computers, Mendez said, and has requested a school bus and copy machine.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Minnesota Fats, the legendary pool player portrayed in the movie "The Hustler," was committed to a hospital psychiatric ward.

Fats, whose real name is Rudolf Wanderone, was admitted Wednesday to Vanderbilt University Medical Center after becoming disoriented and walking out of his home. A court commissioner later committed him to the hospital at the request of doctors.

His wife of six months, Theresa Ward, declined to comment. Wanderone's age is a matter of dispute. Associates have said he is 93, but the 1966 biography "Bank Shot" said he was born in 1913, which would make him 80 years old. He had a heart attack last year.

A hearing was set for Tuesday on whether Wanderone should remain hospitalized.

He was portrayed by Jackie Gleason in the 1961 movie that also starred Paul Newman.

HOUSTON (AP) — The man in the white cowboy hat just wanted a little target practice. He turned out to be the target of attention.

That's because the man was Lyle Lovett. "When we were checking out, there was a lady there gawking at Lyle," customer John Hensley said. "I told her, 'I'd be excited, too, if his better half was here.'"

"The woman said, 'She's right behind you.'"

Actress Julia Roberts was taking turns practicing with a handgun. The two were married in June after a whirlwind romance.

Billy Carter, manager of Carter's Country, a gun and target practice store, said the couple spent about three hours at the store Wednesday.

"He's done business with us before in the past," Carter said. "That's the first time he's ever had Julia with him."

DENVER (AP) — Oil heiress and political activist Swanee Hunt has been nominated by President Clinton to be ambassador to Austria.

Hunt, 43, daughter of the late Texas billionaire H.L. Hunt, said in a statement Wednesday she was "deeply honored" by the nomination. She faces Senate confirmation, which could come this month, a Hunt aide said.

Hunt has been an advocate and supporter of Clinton. She helped organize a Colorado gala last fall that raised $1 million for the Clinton presidential campaign, including Hunt's $251,000 contribution.

Hunt, a mother of three, has lived in Denver since 1977. She earned a doctorate in theology from the Iliff School of Theology in 1986.

Hunt has lived and studied in Germany and speaks German fluently.

She is well known in Colorado for her work as president of the Hunt Alternatives Fund, which last year gave more than $1 million to programs and groups that address poverty and racial discrimination in Denver, Dallas and New York.

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time in Romania, Communists forced the king into exile. But as he left, he stripped his castle of art treasures and spirited them abroad.

Romania charges in a $500 million lawsuit that the 40 paintings by El Greco, Rembrandt, Titian, Breughel, Caravaggio, Van Dyck and others belong to the country.

Michael, 72, contends that the paintings are his because the 1889 will of his grandfather King Carol I bequeathed the art to the Romanian Crown, and he is still the legal king despite being forced to abdicate on Dec. 30, 1947.

The current Romanian government, which overthrew the Communists in 1989, filed the lawsuit in state court in May. It was filed here because two of the paintings may have been sold at a New York art gallery.

Attorney Pamfil Riposanu, who filed the lawsuit, said King Carol's will does not permit any member of the royal family to take the paintings out of the country. The paintings "absolutely" belong to the Romanian people, he said.

In court papers filed on behalf of Michael, who lives in Versoix, Switzerland, attorney Daniel Kornstein asked for dismissal of the lawsuit. He said a state court in the United States is not the proper forum in which to decide the dispute.

The Romanian government has filed two other lawsuits in this country to force return of some of the paintings. Both were dismissed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country star Merle Haggard raised more than $3 million by selling 600 of his songs, enough to rescue him from bankruptcy.

Among the songs purchased Tuesday by Sony-Tree Publishing were: "If We Make It Through December," "I Think I'll Just Stay Here and Drink," "I'm Always on a Mountain When I Fall" and "Are the Good Times Really Over."

Haggard filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection last December.

"We're more than clear," he said Wednesday. "We were able to come out of Chapter 11 yesterday. It's a nice feeling."

Haggard is one of five finalists for induction this year into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Dragoo considering options

Sun Devil linebacker Justin Dragoo, who suffered an injury to his surgically repaired right knee in Saturday's game vs. Utah, flew to San Francisco on Thursday to discuss with doctors options for the remainder of the football season.

There is a possibility that Dragoo can return in four weeks after a tear to his right medial collateral ligament heals. He would then have to wear a brace to support the injury he suffered to his anterior cruciate ligament.

Dragoo rehabilitated his knee all of last summer after suffering a season-ending tear to his ACL against UCLA last season.

Security for Hobert in Seattle

Former Washington quarterback Billy Joe Hobert, now a Los Angeles Raiders rookie, will receive special security protection when he returns home this weekend for his NFL debut.

Hobert, a former co-Rose Bowl MVP for the Huskies, said he has received threats because of $50,000 in improper loans he received as a college player.

Word of those loans helped prompt a Pac-10 Conference investigation of the Washington football program, resulting in the Aug. 22 issuance of penalties for UW violations of NCAA rules. The stiffest of those penalties was a two-year bowl ban. Coach Don James quit as a result of the Pac-10 penalties.

Raiders spokesman John Novak said Hobert will be monitored closely during his 24-hour stay in Seattle. The Raiders play the Seattle Seahawks Sunday night in the Kingdome.

Baseball to realign in 1994

Baseball owners made a break with tradition today, voting to divide each league into three divisions, starting next year.

The plan, subject to the approval of the Major League Baseball Players' Association, would lead to an expansion of the playoffs from four to eight teams, beginning in 1994, and end the two-division setup that has existed in each league since 1969.

With the new setup, six division winners and two wild card teams will make the playoffs, which will expand to three rounds.

"I made my arguments and went down in flames," said Texas Rangers general partner George W. Bush, the leading opponent of the change. "History will prove me right."

Kimble cut by Knicks

Guard Bo Kimble, the nation's college scoring leader only three years ago but who averaged only 3.7 points in nine games with the New York Knicks last season, was waived by the NBA team Thursday.

"It was in the best interest of Bo and the Knicks to allow him to seek other opportunities to play at this time," Knicks vice president and general manager Ernie Grunfeld said.

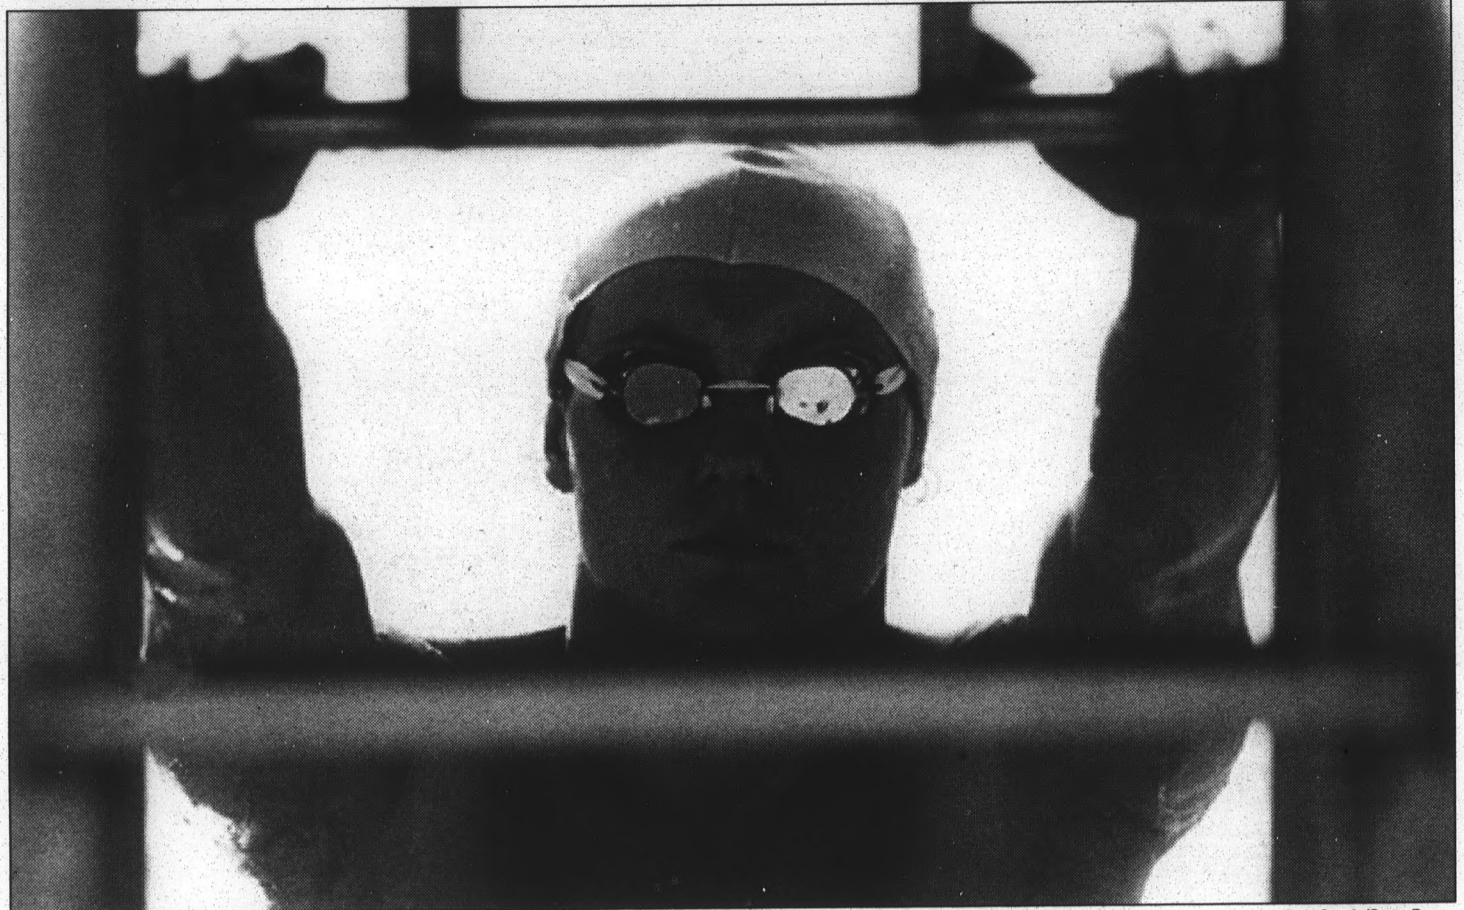

Kimble came to the Knicks last year after averaging 5.6 points in 96 games in two seasons with the Los Angeles Clippers.

In college, Kimble starred at Southern California and Loyola-Marymount. He averaged 22.6 points, before being chosen by the Clippers as the No. 8 pick in the 1990 NBA draft. In his senior season at Loyola-Marymount in 1989-90, he led the nation in scoring with a 35.3 average as the team reached the NCAA quarterfinals.

First-Team All-America Academic swimmer David Holderbach is one of three captains on this year's Sun Devil squad. The senior aerospace engineering major is a nine-time French national champion in the 200-meter backstroke.

Shining opportunities

ASU's Holderbach balances swimming, studies

By JULIE REUVERS
 STATE PRESS

At an age when many college students struggle to make critical decisions, 22-year-old Sun Devil swimmer David Holderbach finds decision-making to be second nature.

When the two-time Olympic participant left France to swim at ASU three years ago, he knew it was one of the smartest decisions he would ever make.

Holderbach, an aerospace engineering major, would have been forced to put swimming on hold if he had attended a French university. In France, Holderbach said educators often frown on students who attempt to balance their studies with the demands of sports at an advanced level.

"Most of the teachers say you have to make a choice - either you swim and you play sports or you study," Holderbach said. "That's why I came here. Being an athlete here is something good. People like it, and it's always a plus, but in France it's more like a minus."

Swimming and working on his undergraduate degree at ASU have allowed Holderbach to experience the best of both worlds, an option that was not available to him in France.

Former Sun Devil swimming standout Yan Cardineau, who attended the same high school as Holderbach, had good things to say about ASU. He encouraged Holderbach to swim for the Sun Devils and work on his degree.

Lucky for the Sun Devils, Holderbach listened.

The nine-time French national champion in the 200-meter backstroke returns for his fourth season at ASU as a three-time All-American in that event. Holderbach also picks up tri-captain duties along with senior Simon Percy and junior Renato Remalho.

Putting his studies on hold for swimming is something Holderbach has refused to do. Last spring he received honors as a Pac-10 First-team All-Academic member with a 3.33 GPA.

Since his freshman season, Holderbach has stepped up to contribute to the ASU team in more than one way. He qualified for the NCAA Championships in the 100 and 200 backstroke, as well as the 500 freestyle. As a junior, Holderbach grabbed second at the Pac-10 Championships in the 200 backstroke.

Even though daily pool workouts can take their toll, proving repetitious as well as strenuous, Holderbach said that consistency is the key

Backup moves forward

Newcomer Plummer looks impressive in debut

By SHAUN RACHAU
 STATE PRESS

Widely known for its export of potatoes, Idaho is probably one of the last states that comes to mind in producing a Division I college football quarterback.

But ASU freshman Jake Plummer, a 1993 graduate of Capital High School in Boise, is the exception to the rule.

Plummer had an impressive showing in his first collegiate game, backing up starter Grady Benton during ASU's 38-0 victory against Utah last Saturday. His first pass as a Sun Devil was a 78-yard touchdown pass to receiver Carlos Artis.

"For us to go in (Idaho) and get a guy like Jake Plummer I think is really terrific," Coach Bruce Snyder said. "Boise is one of the most over-recruited areas in the nation."

Plummer, whose parents and brother watched the ASU-Utah game via satellite in Boise, finished the game completing four of eight passes for 130 yards and one interception.

"He played like a freshman, which he is, so we can't expect any more out of him than that," Snyder said. "He was flashy on a couple of plays, obviously on the touchdown which Carlos made a contested catch, but then he made a couple of errors."

Plummer agrees that his first performance as a Sun Devil could have been better.

"Looking at the film, I probably could have done a little better," Plummer said. "It was a good outing, but I wish I could have completed all eight of my passes."

Plummer's quick start is no surprise to Snyder and his staff.

After passing for 6,097 yards and 68 touchdowns in his two seasons as a starter at Capital, Plummer was a highly recruited high school quarterback and received praise from many national prep publications.

Parade Magazine, SuperPrep and Schutt named him to their all-America teams last season, while also being tabbed as a "Northwest Nugget" by The Tacoma Tribune. SuperPrep also listed Plummer as the 14th-best quarterback prospect in the nation.

In his senior season, Plummer earned Idaho player of the year honors after completing 205 of 297 passes and running for 645 yards and 10 touchdowns.

But with all of the glory and praise he earned as an outstanding prep quarterback in Boise, the transition from high school to college football has not been that difficult for Plummer. He earned the backup position over fellow freshman Jason Verdugo during the Sun Devils' preseason camp at Camp Tontozona.

"Either one of them could have been (the backup)," Snyder said. "It was a tough call between the two - almost a flip of the coin."

"They both have their qualities. Jake has mobility, a very strong arm and a quick release."

However, Snyder said the battle for the No. 2 quarterback position is a week-to-week battle.

"Nothing is set in stone," Snyder said. "Everything is etched in putty."

Even though the battle continues for the backup position, there are no plans to unseat Benton for the starting position.

ASU spikers hit the road; Lobos await

UNM, NMSU will provide tough test for Sun Devils

By PAUL J. MATTHEWS
 STATE PRESS

The ASU volleyball team arrived in Albuquerque Thursday to prepare for weekend matches against the University of New Mexico Lobos and the New Mexico State Roadrunners.

ASU plays its first match Friday night against the Lobos, the team they defeated in the first round of last year's NCAA playoffs, and the Lobos will be looking for revenge.

"We were expecting a tough match," Lobos coach Laura Brassey said about last year's playoff loss. "That was the best our team had played in a long time."

"We won the first two games and looked as good as we had looked all year. Then we just went back to our old tricks and lost the next two. It (the last game) could have gone either way."

This year the Lobos opened the season ranked 20th in the American Volleyball Coaches Association poll, but they dropped their first two matches against the fourth-ranked UCLA Bruins and eighth-ranked USC.

to keeping himself motivated.

"If you want the best of yourself, you have to go out all the way every day, and do the best of what the coach asks," Holderbach said.

Holderbach's positive attitude and unique persona are a valuable addition to the ASU team, according to coach Ernie Maglischo.

"David brings a fantastic mood to the pool," Maglischo said. "He has a great spirit about life and about swimming. He's got a unique outlook on life, so he brings a lot to the team and to those around him as well."

Percy agrees. "It's good having a guy like David on the team because he's a workhorse," Percy said. "He's a good example because he gets good grades, and he sets a good example in the pool too."

But Holderbach's dedication and hard work may have backfired on him in his first Olympics. Because he worked so hard to make the 1988 French Olympic Team, he said he was worn out by the time the Olympics came around. Holderbach felt he put too much pressure on himself during the 1992 Olympics.

However, Holderbach said he wants to take "revenge" on himself in the 1996 Olympics and make it to the finals. After he graduates in May of 1995, Holderbach will serve 10 months in the French military. He will take this time to prepare for the Olympics.

The Bruins won the first match 3-1, while USC blanked New Mexico 3-0.

Attributing the losses to inconsistency, Brassey has devoted this week's practice schedule to working on fundamentals, instead of developing a game plan for the Sun Devils.

Although she hasn't seen any of ASU's game films from last weekend, Brassey said she is expecting a solid match from sophomore Sun Devil Christine Garner.

Key players for the Lobos include middle blocker Laurel Luman, who will be matched by ASU co-captain Nancy Christian, and outside hitter Tanya Gooley. Brassey said both players had strong performances against UCLA, but that both struggled against USC.

"I'm not expecting much," Brassey said. "We just want to do better on our side of the net and hope for the best."

ASU coach Patti Snyder said she thinks New Mexico is a good team that had the misfortune of opening its schedule against two of the top programs in the country.

"I think we'll be evenly matched," ASU coach Patti Snyder said. "I think it's going to be an excellent match for us."

When he returns to France, Holderbach said he will go back having gained so much from his experiences at ASU.

"On my resume I'm going to be able to say, 'I speak fluent English, I went to a foreign country to study, and I've been swimming,'" Holderbach said.

In addition to his swimming and scholastic achievements, Holderbach said he will always take with him what he's learned from each of his coaches. Former Sun Devil coach Ron Johnson, who retired after the 1992 season, worked with Holderbach for three years at ASU. Holderbach will spend one season with Maglischo as well.

"All of those coaches have made a big influence on me, and that's while I'm still here loving swimming and getting so much into it," Holderbach said. "My views of swimming are larger than what I had when I first came here. And I think Ernie, the new coach, is going to give me a different view again. So you keep moving and just keep adding on."

"But I think it's not only what you get at the end," Holderbach said about swimming, "it's the way that you get there that's most important. It's better to have a great season, not maybe swimming fast every day, but enjoying what you do every day. If you can enjoy yourself every day, of course it's going to work out. That will be your biggest reward."

Senior Michelle Monson agreed, adding that the Lobos are "very quick."

"They'll probably dig up everything," Monson said.

New Mexico State comes into this weekend's contest with a 1-3 record after last weekend's losses to the University of Utah, the University of Montana and the University of Portland. The Roadrunners' lone victory came against Montana State.

Roadrunner coach Gweyn Leabo will be leading a team hobbled by injuries. Starting middle blocker Letitia Melvin has a groin tear and will not play. The team's other middle blocker, Annette Monsen, is sidelined with an Achilles injury and will also sit out.

Despite the injuries, Leabo said she is glad to have the opportunity to play a team of ASU's caliber.

"Our players have a positive attitude," Leabo said. "They know their weaknesses, but I think we can be competitive."
