Minister Rasul Muhammad, son of Islamic leader Elijah Muhammad, spoke to an estimated crowd of 200 Wednesday night at Neeb Hall. He brought his message of "ethnic cleansing" to the racially diverse mixture of students, faculty and local Islamic leaders.

Rasul Muhammad: Respect women

BY JOY E. BEASON
STATE PRESS

Addressing a crowd he labeled as "a perfect blend" of people, Minister Rasul Muhammad, the Detroit representative of the Nation of Islam, touched on a range of topics Wednesday night while lecturing to about 250 students at Neeb Hall.

In his first time speaking at ASU, Muhammad spoke on ethnic cleansing and "a nation held hostage," a topic he described as "very serious" and "very important" in his address.

Rasul, the son of Nation of Islam messenger Elijah Muhammad, said the nation does not teach "black supremacy," because "we are the original people ... black, brown, red and yellow people are the original people ... the only people who cannot call themselves natives of anywhere is the Caucasian."

He also spoke about the value of women in society.

"When you educate a woman, you are educating a nation. Respect women."

He urged women to not allow a

"stupid man" to stand "in the way of the reason you are at this University."

Some past ministers from the Nation of Islam have referred to all white people as "devils." Rasul addressed this topic during his speech.

"According to the Honorable Elijah Muhammad, devils are any grafted thing," he said, adding that in the dictionary the devil is defined as an evil spirit or a careless person.

"Everything white people have produced has had side effect of disease or disaster," he said.

Speaking specifically to white students, Rasul said, "We know it wasn't you ... on the slave ship."

"We have to ask the question: Are you any better than your foreparents?"

During a question and answer period, Rasul spoke on the nation's feelings toward the Jewish community.

On Tuesday, some Jewish students expressed concern toward Rasul's appearance. In the past, members of the Jewish community have labeled Louis Farrakhan, the Nation's spokesman, as anti-Semitic.

Rasul said he wondered why Jews were worried whenever a member of the Nation of Islam was coming to speak, delving into the history of the relationship between the black and Jewish communities.

Student reaction to Rasul's speech was mixed.

"His appeal for racial unity was compromised by certain aspects of his theology, but it was nonetheless important," said Travis Brinster, a political science major who said he has read about the Nation of Islam.

"I think he has a lot of good things to say," said Jimmy Pace, a communication major. "He backed it up with statistics. I may not agree with everything he said, but as for the substance, I support his doctrine."

But Pace added, "as a religion, I strongly oppose (Islam) and choose not to believe it."

ASU police drop criminal case against fraternity

BY MAXWELL HIGGINS
STATE PRESS

ASU police said they have no criminal case against the recently ousted Theta Delta Chi fraternity for property damage that occurred at its on-campus house in late August.

ASU Department of Public Safety Chief Craig Emanuel said Wednesday that the two-month-old investigation will continue, but charges probably will not be brought against individual fraternity members. Without a direct confession from those responsible, there is no way to prove who caused the damage, he said.

"I would not submit this case to the (Maricopa) County Attorney's Office, because I have nothing," said Sgt. Kay Gokovich, the officer in charge of the investigation.

The fraternity's house was vandalized on the weekend of Aug. 21-22, with University officials originally estimating the damage at $300,000.

That figure has since come under scrutiny. Emanuel said Wednesday that the $300,000 estimate is inaccurate, since it includes damage that had accumulated over the years as well as the vandalism inflicted during the August incident.

One factor cited by Gokovich as leading to the lack of evidence in the case has been an unwillingness to cooperate on the part of Theta Delta Chi.

"The cooperation they have given us has been zip," she said. Gokovich said she originally contacted former chapter president Mark Bailey, who gave her the name of an alumnus and another person who wished to remain anonymous. However, the sources proved to be of little help, Gokovich said.

Bailey could not be reached for response on Wednesday afternoon, but another member of Theta Delta Chi said he knew Bailey had been in touch with the police.

Emanuel said another problem for DPS is that the case is more a civil than a criminal matter.

"The damage that occurred over there is analogous to a landlord-tenant dispute between the fraternity and Residence Life — unless someone comes forth with a confession," he said.

Overall, Emanuel and Gokovich said that because the case has the characteristics of a civil matter, it would not work well in a criminal context.

"Naturally, we want to help Residence Life and serve the community, but it's a misprioritization of our time and resources to be working on a civil case," Emanuel said. "We have to look at outcomes and resources and response levels. We've done the proper amount of investigation for a civil case."

ASU legal counsel Paul Ward said he couldn't yet predict how the University would seek reparation if there were no criminal charges. He reiterated that Theta Delta Chi has an $18,000 debt and that the University will assert its rights as a creditor.

The fraternity has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy and will need to make a more in-depth filing soon, Ward said. When it does, the University will evaluate the situation and make a decision about how to recover money for the rent debt and damages.

"The University will be vigorous in pursuing its claims," Ward said.

'Killer bees' no joke; first swarm arrives in west Valley

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

The arrival of Africanized "killer" bees into the Valley has come sooner than expected, as bees that attacked residents and dogs in a suburban neighborhood over the weekend were confirmed as Africanized by the State Department of Agriculture's laboratory on Wednesday.

Two dogs were stung to death in Saturday's attacks in Peoria. Residents took refuge in their homes and cars after being swarmed when an amateur beekeeper tried to remove a hive from a false column in front of a house.

Jon Harrison, an assistant professor of zoology at ASU who has been monitoring the bees' progress through the state, could not be reached for comment Wednesday afternoon. But in an earlier interview with the State Press, Harrison said it is unusual for swarms to come into metropolitan areas, since bees do not like to be disturbed.

Harrison predicts the bees will flourish mostly in warm areas of the state.

"Presumably ... the African bees will do very well around Tucson and Phoenix," he said. "They'll be coming in fairly rapidly over the next couple of years. It's going to be something that we're going to learn to live with, like we live with scorpions and rattlesnakes."

The bees' arrival to the Phoenix metropolitan area came as a surprise to some state bee experts.

"They're here sooner than people expected, certainly earlier than we expected," said Department of Agriculture spokeswoman Suzanne Sorich. "I think people are going to be alarmed, and they have reason to be."

This was the 16th swarm of Africanized bees found in the state, and this swarm was found farther north than the others.

Africanized bees have the same venom as domestic European honeybees, but they respond more quickly and in greater numbers if their colonies are threatened, said Dr. Lawrence Sands, state epidemiologist with the Department of Health Services.

The bees were first confirmed to have entered Arizona on June 18 in Tucson, where a dog was stung to death and a man was stung. Most of the other swarms have been found closer to the border with Mexico.

The bees have migrated north since their accidental release in Brazil in 1957. They have been blamed for 150 deaths in Mexico and one in Texas, where they entered the United

New calculus course to be offered

Computers will be integral part of assignments, instruction

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

A computer calculus class will be offered this spring as an alternative to college algebra with the goal of making calculus more accessible to students not pursuing a technical career.

Most students majoring in a non-technical major have no experience with a computer as a scientific tool — something this course aims to change, said Joaquin Bustoz, a mathematics professor who developed the class and will teach it in the spring.

"This is a way to introduce the computer in that sense," Bustoz said.

The special section of Math 210, "Calculus via Computer," will use a software program that is utilized through a method called the Harvard format, which is taught in advanced calculus classes.

"By using the software as a vehicle to carry the theory, we can concentrate more on the conceptual aspects of calculus and less on the mechanical techniques," Bustoz said.

"Thirty years ago it would have been virtually unthinkable to teach a calculus course to students who were weak in or, indeed, sometimes totally ignorant of the material in college algebra," Bustoz said. "But now with programs like this, it is easy to do."

Spending less time on the technical aspects of calculus will allow students to learn more of the philosophy, history and applications of calculus, Bustoz said.

"Calculus is, arguably, one of the major achievements of civilization," Bustoz said. "The invention of the calculus fundamentally changed our science and literally our daily lives."

While most of the work will be done on the computer, manual calculations are still taught. Students need to spend about one or two hours per class in a computer lab doing the homework, Bustoz said. The computer program can also be purchased for about $150.

The software used in the class allows students to calculate things such as amount of interest on a mortgage or value of an annuity, Bustoz said.

"We're trying, if you will, to make it more humanistic. Although, that may seem contradictory to the fact that we're doing it on a computer," Bustoz said.

Intermediate algebra (Math 106), the precursor to college algebra (Math 117), is a requirement to take the course, Bustoz said. The course, limited to 30 students for the spring, fulfills the college algebra requirement.

Students in programs requiring calculus are screened out because the course is designed to present what calculus is to non-technical students.

"I would recommend that a student who is majoring in a non-technical field might want to consider this course," Bustoz said.

"Calculus via Computer" was offered because many students were unable to use the techniques and skills taught in college algebra and because of the course's traditional difficulty.

Julia Emmons, program coordinator of tutoring services, said college algebra is tied with intermediate algebra as the class which has the highest demand for tutoring assistance.

Of 14 math tutors, nine are specifically for tutoring college algebra students, she said. About 360 students are tutored each semester for the course, Emmons said.

"For college algebra, all our tutors are booked," she said.

Bees

States in 1990.

The northernmost previous find of Africanized bees in Arizona was made Aug. 31 near Arizona City in a rural area about 50 miles southeast of Phoenix.

Sorich said the Agriculture Department will place traps in a two-mile radius of the Peoria neighborhood. They're trying to determine if the front edge of the main migration has reached Phoenix or if the bees were moving ahead of the front.

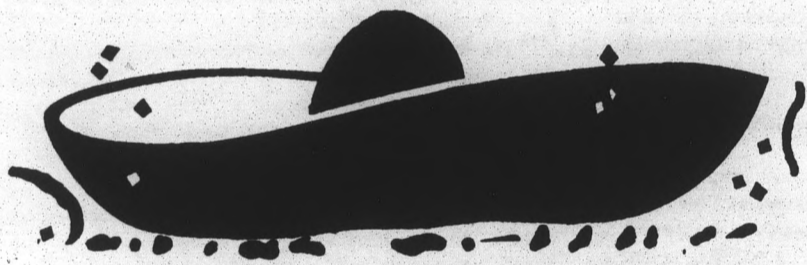

"It's hard to say when you have only one find whether it's isolated, whether it hitchhiked, whether it's part of the pioneer front," Sorich said.

State officials have been unable to determine how long the swarm was in the neighborhood, she said.

The state will extend education efforts already begun in the southern part of the state to include the Phoenix area.

"The key message that we're trying to send out is to rely on a professional when you have a bee hive in your backyard or near your home. They are defensive and become more easily angered than your typical European bee," Sorich said.

Around Arizona

Student charged in plot to poison teacher, teen-age girl

MESA (AP) — A high school student accused of plotting to poison a teacher and a teen-age girl with drain cleaner pleaded guilty Wednesday to two charges.

Alex Contreras, 18, pleaded guilty in Mesa Justice Court to conspiracy to commit aggravated assault. He faces up to ten years in prison when sentenced Nov. 18.

A co-defendant, 17-year-old Travis Massey, was put on probation last month.

Police accused the pair of planning to poison Mesa High School teacher Gary Butler and Massey's former girlfriend.

Contreras and Massey were arrested in March after a ham radio operator overheard a conversation they were having and contacted police. One of them had been using a cordless phone.

Authorities identify body

SAFFORD (AP) — Authorities were trying to identify human remains found in a desert area near where a woman was reportedly last seen on Aug. 18, Graham County Sheriff Richard Mack said Wednesday.

The badly decomposed body may be that of Stephanie Profitt Goodrum, 23, who had been seen about a mile from where the body was found Tuesday east of Safford, Mack said.

General Motors recruiting test drivers for electric cars

PHOENIX (AP) — General Motors Corp. said Wednesday it will let motorists here test drive its Impact electric car as part of a two-year test in a dozen cities.

The GM PrEView Drive, a partnership with electric utilities, will put one of 50 Impacts in the driveway of consumers for real-life use over two- or four-week periods beginning next spring.

Arizona Public Service Co. and the Salt River Project will choose a combined total of 80 motorists from among their customers to drive the cars for two or four weeks to see how the two-seater performs in real-life situations.

The test drives here will begin in the November 1994, the companies said.

The utilities and GM will pick drivers for the program.

California law requires that by 1998, automakers offer 2 percent of their cars and trucks as zero-pollution vehicles. Electricity is the only known non-polluting energy source.

Man charged in Hodge's death

PHOENIX (AP) — An 18-year-old man was charged Wednesday with murdering retired newsman Carle Hodge, who was beaten and run over with a car outside his apartment.

Efren Medina was charged with first-degree murder in the Sept. 30 killing, said Bill FitzGerald, spokesman for the Maricopa County Attorney's office.

Hodge a science reporter for The Arizona Republic.

Meanwhile, a newspaper reported that at the time of the killing, Medina was free on $21,000 bond on charges stemming from a shooting that left a man permanently disabled.

The June 1992 shooting occurred outside the home of Medina's family after Medina argued with Dennis Smith, a motorcyclist who had ridden by, according to The Phoenix Gazette.

Smith was shot in the leg, groin, stomach and arm, the Gazette said.

Medina pleaded innocent to charges of aggravated assault and armed robbery. Trial is scheduled for Nov. 4.

Medina's parents, who have a catering business, used their home to back their son's bond.

A woman searches for food in a pile of garbage near the docks of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, Wednesday. The U.N. Security Council voted to reimpose sanctions on the country if Haitian army chief Raoul Cedras does not resign in five days.

U.N. Security Council votes to reimpose Haiti sanctions

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council voted Wednesday to reimpose sanctions on Haiti in five days unless military leaders stop violating a U.N.-brokered accord on restoring democracy.

The U.S.-proposed resolution calls for the imposition of an oil and arms embargo and the freezing of the overseas assets of the country's military leaders if the government does not conform with the accord by 11:59 p.m. EDT Monday.

The resolution also threatens to punish Haiti further, possibly with a naval blockade, although it does not authorize the use of force.

In a speech to the council, U.S. Ambassador Madeleine Albright warned Haiti's military leaders they were treading down a dangerous path in seeking to "extinguish the democratic flame in Haiti."

"They're riding a tiger that may ultimately devour them," she said.

The United States called for reimposing sanctions on Haiti after armed toughs backed by the military forces blocked a U.S. ship carrying 200 non-combatant U.N. forces from landing in Haiti on Monday.

The military government also has been blamed for widespread political violence against supporters of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was ousted in a 1991 army coup.

The landing of the USS Harlan County was to launch in earnest the mission to help restore democracy in impoverished Haiti. Under the accord, Aristide — the first freely elected president of Haiti — is to return on Oct. 30.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said in a report to the Security Council that Cedras' regime had a "clear and explicit intent to prevent the democratic process ... from taking its course." He accused the authorities of "serious and consistent non-compliance" with the July accord.

In Haiti, Haitian army chief Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras declared Wednesday that he was prepared to resign, as called for under the U.N. plan. But he said he would step down only if parliament passed a general amnesty law.

He also insisted that any foreign soldiers sent to help implement the agreement leave their automatic weapons at home. Cedras had said that the Harlan County was turned away because the troops carried M-16s.

Before the Security Council voted, he complained that he was not being given a chance to defend his position.

"One does not have the right to condemn without giving a hearing," he said.

The resolution approved Wednesday does not authorize the use of force to permit Aristide's return, but leaves open the possibility of "additional measures."

Diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States had considered asking the Council for a blockade but apparently backed off because Washington would not have been able to get other council members to agree on such short notice. Washington now has a blockade in mind as a possible next step.

Albright said the United States would also order travel sanctions, presumably denying U.S. visas to Haiti's military leaders.

"We will maintain the pressure for democratic change in every manner possible short of an armed intervention that no one wants," she told the council.

Court tries to define harassment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court tackled the sensitive question Wednesday of when off-color workplace behavior — such as a boss asking a female employee to take coins from his pocket — becomes illegal sexual harassment.

"This is not simply a hurt-feelings situation, it makes it tangibly more difficult to do the job," Clinton administration attorney Jeffrey Minear argued in the case of a Tennessee woman who said her boss sexually harassed her.

In another closely watched case, the administration argued that a 1991 civil rights law should apply to thousands of employment-bias cases that were pending when it was enacted.

The 1991 law provides "new remedies ... for old wrongs" and should not be restricted to cases where the alleged discrimination occurred after the law was enacted, Solicitor General Drew Days III told the court.

The sex-harassment case was heard by the first Supreme Court to include two female justices — Sandra Day O'Connor and new arrival Ruth Bader Ginsburg, a former leading women's rights advocate.

The issue has received heightened attention in recent years, partly because of Anita Hill's accusation during Justice Clarence Thomas' 1991 confirmation hearing that he harassed her years earlier.

Thomas, who strongly denied any such conduct, sat silently during Wednesday's arguments.

The high court ruled in 1986 that on-the-job sex harassment is illegal if it is "sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment."

Interpreting that standard must depend on the perspective of a reasonable person who is the target of alleged harassment, Irwin Venick argued in behalf of Teresa Harris, who sued her ex-boss after resigning in 1987.

Harris said Charles Hardy, president of Forklift Systems of Nashville, Tenn., asked her to retrieve coins from his pants pocket, suggested they start "screwing around" although he knew she was married, and asked if she won a sales contract by providing sexual favors.

Attorney Stanley M. Chernau, representing the company, said rulings that denied Harris any remedy should be upheld. "I don't think that offensive conduct automatically alters conditions of employment," he said.

Chernau conceded that the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals went too far when it said Harris must prove actual psychological injury to win a sex-harassment case.

Nobody defended that standard, and it appeared to be doomed. But the justices seemed less sure of what to do about the 1986 standard.

Justice Antonin Scalia said that previous guidance is "utterly meaningless to me." A more sensible rule might be to require people to prove harassment harmed their performance at work, he said.

But Ginsburg suggested that sex harassment can create a hostile work environment even when a woman continues performing well. The question, she said, might be "whether one sex has to put up with something that the other sex doesn't have to put up with."

Haiti not

As the death count rises in Somalia, a new chance for freedom and hope struggles to surface in Haiti.

But that chance is being snuffed out by greedy military leaders who want to resist the attempt at democratic government in order to protect their illicit drug trafficking profits, according to the drug trafficking task force of the North-South Center, a federally funded think tank.

In response to Haitian protesters, police and military personnel who on Monday blocked the American amphibious warship USS Harlan County from docking at Port-au-Prince and drove out the diplomats awaiting the vessel, the United Nations voted to reimpose the sanctions that helped drive Haiti to agreeing to a democratically controlled government. If the Haitian military does not step down from power by Monday, they will not be allowed to trade with countries that are members of the U.N.

The result, the U.N. hopes, will be the return of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide — who was ousted in a 1991 coup d'etat — and along with him, peace and democracy.

The U.N. showed impressive solidarity with their swift vote to reimpose sanctions, but they shouldn't tinker around if the sanctions don't work.

If, within a month, the imposed sanctions fail, military action should be taken on Haiti.

Most people would think that military action is unwise, considering the situation in Somalia. Some may say the State Press editorial board is inconsistent in its opinions, since its members advocate total withdrawal from Somalia.

But Somalia and Haiti are different.

The United States has no real national interest in Somalia. They have no noteworthy resources, capital or goods for us to trade for, so we have nothing to lose by leaving them but the number of full body bags.

Besides, by leaving Somalia, we can concentrate our efforts in Haiti, where we have a bigger interest at stake — democracy.

If we remove the military from power, either by sanctions or by force, we stand to profit from resuming trade with them, and we can more easily stem the tide of narcotics (albeit comparatively small) entering the United States from the country.

In addition, the problem we were having with the "boat people" would all but be eliminated.

Whenever the United States has an easy shot at helping a country achieve democracy, we should do everything to ensure that it isn't messed up by a few hooligans.

With reliable intelligence, surprise tactics and, if needed, overwhelming power on Haiti's military, we can easily remove Haitian army chief Lt. General Raoul Cedras.

Perhaps Cedras knows that, and perhaps he will step down within the next five days. It would be in his best interest to do so.

Jordan's legacy of competition as empty as air he once trod

Shocked. Saddened. Disappointed. These were the predictable reactions to Michael Jordan's announcement that, since he doesn't have "anything else to prove," he is walking away from professional basketball.

But before Mike goes, I've got one thing to say: goodbye and good riddance. As my mother would say, I hope he doesn't let the door hit him in the butt on the way out.

Please, readers, don't misunderstand that as a lack of respect.

Just like everyone else, I am shocked. I am saddened. I am disappointed.

I am shocked that such a competitive athlete was able to quit in the prime of his career. I am saddened that it was the death of his father that finally helped Michael Jordan realize that life "can be taken away from you at any time." I am disappointed that Jordan couldn't handle the attention, adoration, and responsibility that automatically accompanies the role of basketball's greatest player and the world's most recognizable athlete.

Last week, while hiding behind his trademark grin, Jordan told the world that basketball has nothing left to give him.

He has won an NCAA title. He has led the Chicago Bulls to three straight championships. He has played on two American Olympic gold-medal teams. He has been awarded every conceivable honor bestowed by the NBA. You name it, Michael Jordan has done it or won it.

"The thrill is gone," Jordan said. "There is nothing left for me to do."

So now that he has used professional basketball for all it can offer, Michael Jordan believes that "it's time...to move on to something else."

One wonders, what could possibly be next?

Is there another job that is going to pay such a selfish person $50 million a year to play a game?

But this doesn't deter the man called "Air."

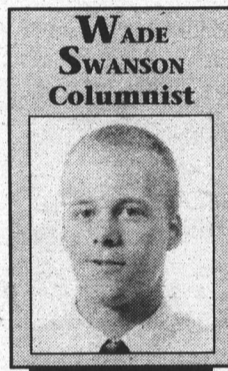

As Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf said, "I'm absolutely convinced he's doing the right thing. He's living the American dream."

Let's one falsely believes that losing hundreds of thousands of dollars in gambling bets is the American dream, Reinsdorf explained that it is actually reaching "a point in your life where you don't have to do anything you don't want to."

You mean like getting out of bed and going to work? Of course, basketball fans have assured Jordan that he won't ever have to do that again.

And after nine years of getting pampered for dunking a basketball, Jordan has turned his back on his employers and quit.

Remarkably, here we are one week later. The world is still turning. You and I are still breathing. And the professional basketball season is still going to start in November.

WADE SWANSON
Columnist

Upon the announcement of Jordan's retirement, the media, coaches, and players alike were quick to acknowledge that Michael's retirement was unexpected, yet understandable.

It seems that, for the tongue-wagging, high-flying Jordan, playing professional basketball was a Catch-22.

On one hand, Michael had an unequalled passion for the game that allowed him to compete relentlessly. On the other hand, the game of basketball brought Jordan unprecedented fame and the accompanying fishbowl experience.

Not surprisingly, such a lifestyle wore thin on the superstar from North Carolina.

Then, with the murder of his father (his biggest fan and closest companion), Michael Jordan finally realized that more money, added adoration, and increased competition isn't always the key to happiness and contentment.

Welcome to the real world, Mike.

As his one-time teammate and previous opponent James Worthy put it, "life is bigger than basketball." Yet this is an idea that Jordan has only seemed to grasp at in the past.

You see, Michael Jordan is a compulsive competitor.

Admittedly, with his unquenchable desire to win, Jordan has helped transform a simple game into a gold mine that is more business than sport. Perhaps even worse, basketball is no longer a game, it is an attitude.

Pick any neighborhood playground. Kids no longer play basketball for fun. They play to intimidate and humiliate their opponents. Even at ASU's own recreation complex, students don't play basketball for enjoyment. They play for no other end than to win.

This is just part of the legacy of a tireless personality named Michael Jordan. Compete. Win. Make money. Take all that you can. Scorn and blame the media for any criticism you receive. Then quit.

Some have praised Jordan for walking away from the game to concentrate on his family. Ironically, the toughest challenges of Michael's life are now ahead. His performance as a full-time husband and father are much more important than that of a professional athlete.

Perhaps fittingly, Jordan will now have to truly answer the questions that he asked in a Nike commercial earlier this year. As he practices shooting free-throws alone in a darkened gym, Jordan queries the viewer in a somber voice-over.

"What if my name wasn't in lights? What if there wasn't a crowd around every corner? What if I was just a basketball player? Can you imagine that?"

Sure, Mike, I can imagine the game of basketball without you. But can you?

Wade Swanson is a senior religious studies major. His column appears on Thursdays.

Gauging the Greek system

Media's negative bias paints a false portrait of Greek life, values

We have all seen the classic films, "Animal House," "Fraternity Row" and "Revenge of the Nerds."

What images about the Greek system come to mind when viewing these films? Most likely we think of partying, hazing and a divided Greek system, which are the images these films portray. These movies are just more examples of how the media characterizes Greeks. The mass media has been treating Greeks badly for years when in reality, the Greek system does more grace than harm.

There are at least two articles per week published by the State Press that say how terrible one fraternity or another is on this campus. If you include every university in the United States, Greek bashing occurs daily in the media. In most cases, it is an exaggeration of a very small truth blown way out of proportion to make the entire Greek system look bad.

So far this semester, numerous articles about the Theta Delta Chi fraternity have been published, making them look bad, when actually they were treated unfairly by the University. There were a few articles published about the Zeta Beta Tau and Sigma Chi incident that once again, was a minor incident taken too far by the local media.

In addition to these local stories, there were two in-depth articles about Greeks written by the same author. One was about how Greeks in general cause problems on campuses all over the United States.

The article stated that fraternities were as hard to insure as a toxic waste dump and that violence and rape were more common among Greeks. Rape is happening all over the world, and is in no way associated with being Greek. The other article explained that Greeks consume more alcohol than non-Greeks.

It is true that Greeks have socials that sometimes involve alcohol, but the purpose of socials is to give students the opportunity to meet other people, not to get drunk. What is the point of these articles and what does this author know about being Greek? He knows only what the media has been teaching him for years, and that is a vicious lesson.

Those who are not members of the Greek system must look beyond the partying and the hazing (which is decreasing in the Greek system) and investigate its positive aspects. The sad thing is that the good stuff doesn't always make the best stories. People want to read about scandal and controversy. The media is too caught up in reporting bad news.

Knowing that the Greek system raised over $10,000 for United Way may touch the hearts of many readers. Some people like to hear that individual chapters raise thousands of dollars for The Leukemia Society, Child Help USA, Multiple Sclerosis, The American Heart Association and many other charities. Some find it interesting to read about how much one learned as president of his or her chapter, or even holding a leadership position within the entire Greek system, and how it helped that person to get a job after college. The fact that a homesick freshman found a second home in the Greek system might make a nice human-interest story.

The news is the most depressing medium in the mass media. In most cases the bad news needs to be reported, but there are a lot of positive things to write about too.

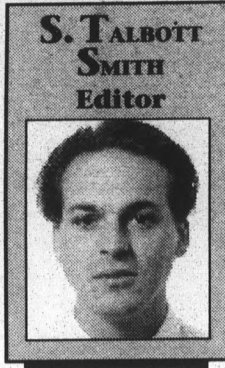

The new episodes of the TV show "Beverly Hills 90210" are another example of how the media portrays a negative image of Greeks. The characters rush Kappa Epsilon Gamma, also known as the "KEG" house. It may be fiction, but it tells people that the only thing Greeks do is drink. Another character on the show is discriminated against by a sorority because she is Jewish. This is a show that has high school students as a target audience and it is really sad that they don't promote Greek life in a realistic way.

The media should research the current Greek system before treating it so badly. Everyone thinks it is the same as it was in the 1950s and 60s when our parents were Greek. Back then, universities didn't put restrictions on the Greek system, so they were more reckless since they got away with it.

If we, as members of the mass media, would take the time to research our subjects instead of going by assumptions, our readers would be so much more eager to learn. Taking the easy way out may not always be ethical journalism. The only fair way to present an issue is to tell it all; so present both sides.

The Greek system may have its problems, as any organization does. But as an insider, the positive aspects of being Greek out-weigh the negative aspects, which is something the media has failed to recognize.

Bad press reflects real problems, issues with current Greek system

The position Greek organizations find themselves in now is not one created by the media — they have brought it on themselves with the acts that have been perpetrated by members of individual campus chapters.

This is not some kind of knee-jerk anti-Greek attitude, either. Many people have the same viewpoint, including many Greeks.

A friend of mine, now a graduate student at UofA, rushed a fraternity while I was his roommate several years ago. I went with him to rush events held by several fraternities, because, believe it or not, I was curious about the Greek system and thought about joining a fraternity.

However, the one fraternity I strongly considered held a rush party which ended up in a vicious brawl with a group of teen-agers. Some of the brothers were injured pretty badly, and the next day I decided to drop the idea of rushing. It wasn't for me.

My friend decided to rush a different fraternity and began hanging out with them, doing all the necessary, albeit humiliating, tasks required of a pledge.

But then several weeks later, my roommate went out with his pledge brothers and some of the "actives." A bunch of them piled into an open-bed truck and set off for the desert to have a party.

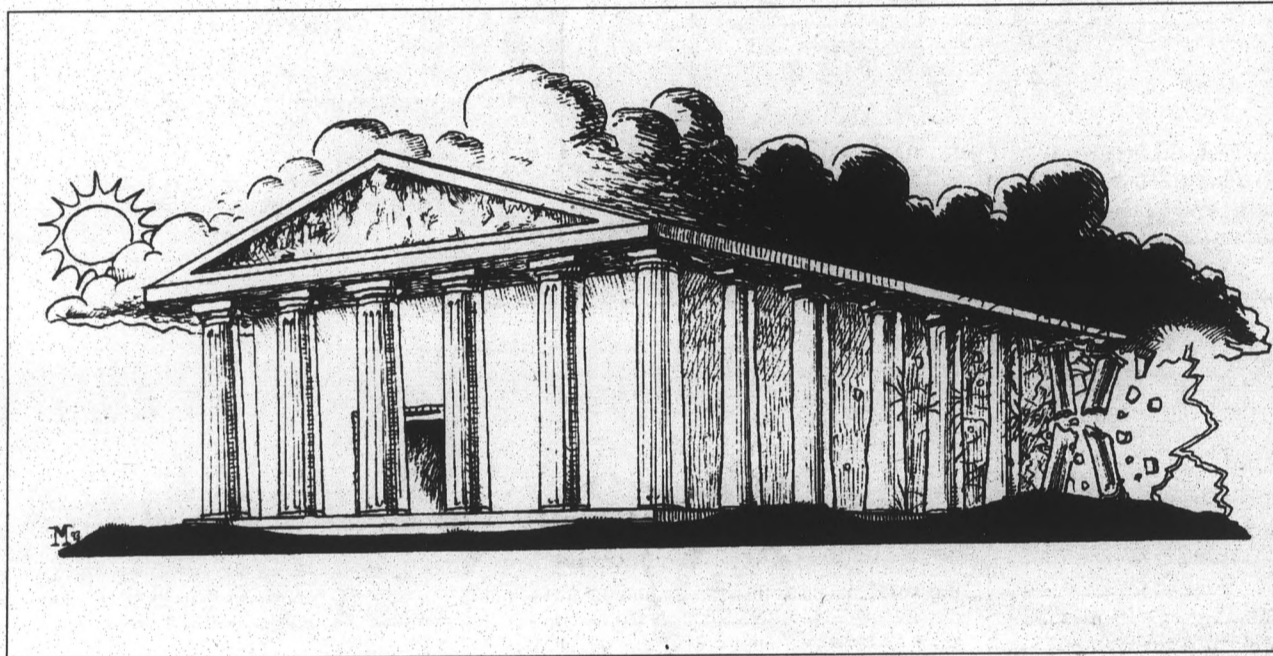

The driver was either drunk, drinking or both. Once out in the open desert, the driver was driving fast and recklessly despite rough terrain and pleas from those in the back to slow down.

Eventually, the driver lost control of the truck, and it flipped, ejecting everyone from the open bed. The truck came to rest on my roommate's body, where he remained pinned and in excruciating pain until help arrived.

He suffered through several operations over the next year to repair his smashed hip. He felt incredibly stupid and, of course, dropped the rush notion.

His fellow fraternity members came to visit him in the hospital, as I did, but their main concern was that he not talk to the press since the event was an official fraternity happening. He listened to his brothers and didn't talk to the press.

A little over a year ago, I lived for a year with three friends from one of ASU's fraternities and went to many of the exchanges and parties thrown by the group, so I got a first-hand look at what the Greek system is about from an outside, objective point of view without actually having to be a brother.

Counter-POINTS

"Taking the easy way out may not always be ethical journalism. The only fair way to present an issue is to tell it all..."

"It is necessary for the University community to know ... so they have an informed viewpoint. There is nothing sinister here"

My experiences confirmed my earlier decision not to join a fraternity — little things that went on at parties and other goings-on that proved to me the scene wasn't for me.

One of those friends who stuck with the fraternity until graduation couldn't stop laughing when I told him about the Theta Delta Chi story. He wasn't surprised at what had happened and he supported the State Press covering the issue in detail.

I also have a close friend in one of ASU's sororities, who told me that there are severe problems with date rape in the Greek system, something she said gets swept under the rug rather than dealt with by the system. She also said many sorority women admit in private to being date raped at some Greek social events, but wouldn't dare bring it up in public, much less confront the jerk who did it.

There are many problems that need to be dealt with by Greek organizations, issues of what is right and wrong, and what needs to be done about them. But they get pushed aside because the groups must be image conscious to survive.

Greeks do raise a lot of money for charitable causes, but then so do many other campus organizations, and they don't get credit for it nor do they seek it out. I sometimes question whether Greeks would do as much for charity as they do if they weren't forced to earn "philanthropic points" in order to remain on campus.

An article in the State Press that dealt with how Greeks, according to an extensive study, drink much more than the average student shows one problem in the Greek system. Although not everyone in the Greek system drinks as much as everyone else, is alcohol being overemphasized by Greeks?

Many in the Greek system are working to make the situation better. But even so, are average students participating in the kind of behavior Greeks are still getting "bashed" by the media for? The answer is yes, but then you have to ask whether the numbers are equal, proportionately. I think that answer is no.

This is the kind of stuff people should know about the Greek system, but it never gets out because people are worried about rocking the boat. The information is necessary so that potential rushees can make informed decisions about what they are getting into. It is also necessary for the University community to know this so they, too, can have an informed viewpoint. There is nothing sinister here.

It is the role of the press to make sure these issues are dealt with if the organizations responsible don't do it themselves, and for the State Press and other media, that means reporting the bad as well as the good about Greeks.

PARIS (AP) — Sultry actress Sharon Stone, who steamed screens in movies like "Basic Instinct" and "Sliver," tried on a new role Wednesday: a racy bride on the fashion catwalk.

Flashing a wide, cherry-red lipsticked smile, Stone modeled a white miniskirted bridal dress in a show of the new summer collection by designer Valentino.

The outfit also featured criss-cross suspenders on either shoulder, white lace-up high-heel shoes and a broad white hat with netting to the floor.

Off the catwalk and at the Ritz Hotel, Stone was flanked by eight bodyguards who kept admirers at bay.

NEW YORK (AP) — She made her name as a dumpy everywoman, but Roseanne Arnold has no apologies for the plastic surgery that's made her look better and feel better.

"We're not in a perfect feminist world, and we never will be. And even if we were, I'd still have plastic surgery," the 41-year-old star of TV's "Roseanne" says in November's Ladies'

Home Journal.

Arnold says she has undergone breast reduction surgery, a nose job and a facelift. She's also dieting and exercising.

"It makes you feel really good about yourself. I mean, you have flaws that bother you, and to erase them is great. It was like reversing years of abuse that I've done to my body. I feel like I'm starting over," she said.

And what of her fans who saw a rotund Roseanne as a role model?

"Nobody can be fat philosophically," she said. "People are fat for protection, I think. And it was so hard for me to let go of those pounds. But I notice the braver I get, the more weight goes off."

HUNTINGTON, Ind. (AP) — The Dan Quayle Center and Museum has attracted more than 7,000 people since it opened five months ago — but not Quayle himself.

That will change Saturday when Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, finally dedicate the museum that honors his vice presidency.

The dedication will be part of a big Huntington weekend for the Quayles. Both also will receive honorary doctor of law degrees Friday from Huntington College.

Quayle, who grew up in Huntington, now studies business competitiveness issues for the Hudson Institute, an Indianapolis-based conservative policy research center.

NEW YORK (AP) — Police apologized Wednesday to Whitney Houston and Bobby Brown, whose limousine was mistakenly stopped at Kennedy International Airport by nine gun-waving officers looking for drug couriers.

Charles Knox, superintendent of the Port Authority police, delivered the apology personally in a phone call to Houston's office. His call reversed the department's previous statement, which challenged the singer's version of what happened Sept. 30.

"I offer my deepest apologies ... for the unfortunate and unwarranted stoppage of their vehicle," Knox said. "Both the Port Authority police and Ms. Houston have always agreed this was a case of mistaken identity."

Knox said he is investigating whether to discipline the officers.

Police stopped the limousine because they mistakenly believed it contained drug couriers. Houston and Brown, who are married, were detained even after Houston flashed the officers a peace sign and identified herself, said Houston spokeswoman Lois Smith.

Houston, whose recent hits include "I Will Always Love You" and "I'm Every Woman," is in Berlin as part of an international tour.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former President Bush was grinnin' but not pickin' when he made an appearance on the cable television program "Nashville Now."

Bush, a longtime country music fan, received a gift guitar on Tuesday's show from host Ralph Emery. But Bush declined to strum a few bars, saying he doesn't play.

He did, however, take a few moments to honor country entertainers.

Trebelhorn to lead Cubs

Tom Trebelhorn became the Chicago Cubs' 11th manager in 11 years when he was named to the position Wednesday night.

Trebelhorn replaces Jim Lefebvre, fired Oct. 6 after leading the Cubs to only their third over-.500 season since 1972. He beat out fellow Cubs coach Tony Muser for the job.

Trebelhorn was the manager of the Milwaukee Brewers from 1986-91 and Muser was on his coaching staff from 1986-89. Trebelhorn had been with the Cubs the last two seasons as bench coach and offensive coordinator, while Muser just finished his first season as bullpen coach after 13 years in the Milwaukee organization.

General manager Larry Himes said Tuesday that he had searched inside and outside the organization, deciding that Muser and Trebelhorn were his only candidates. He said he would feel comfortable with either as manager, and that the other would remain with the club as a coach.

Cowboys' home branded

A three-alarm fire raged Wednesday evening through at least seven suites of Texas Stadium and set about 10 rows of general admission seats ablaze.

As the fire moved from booth to booth, glass exploded from the suites, dropping debris to the lower seats, said Randy Ranew, who was working at the stadium when the fire started Wednesday afternoon.

The cause of the fire was under investigation, according to the Irving Fire Department. They reported no injuries.

Coleman being sued

Outfielder Vince Coleman will be named in a lawsuit filed Thursday or Friday by the family of a 2-year-old girl injured by an explosive that Coleman threw.

Attorney Darrell J. York, representing the family of Amanda Santos, said Wednesday the complaint to be filed in Los Angeles Superior Court would name both Coleman and outfielder Eric Davis, and possibly others whom he did not identify.

After a Mets-Dodgers game on July 24, Coleman admitted he set off an M-80 in a parking lot at Dodger Stadium. He was charged with a felony for illegal possession of an explosive. Three people were injured, the most serious being Santos, who sustained an injury to the cornea in her left eye.

Seles' stabber avoids prison

A tennis fan who stabbed Monica Seles out of an obsessive love for her rival, Steffi Graf, walked away free Wednesday when the court that convicted him gave him a suspended two-year sentence.

Guenter Parche, 39, an unemployed East German who had been detained since the April 30 attack at a Hamburg tournament, could have received a three-year, nine-month jail term.

But Hamburg District Judge Elke Bosse said she took into account a psychiatrist's testimony that Parche had a "highly abnormal personality" that could have diminished his ability to reason.

"I was shocked and horrified to learn that the assassin who stabbed me received a suspended sentence in Germany today," Seles said in a statement released by spokeswoman Linda Dozoretz.

ASU set for Dial Invitational

Sun Devils, Wildcats face Golden Eagles, Cowboys Dec. 5 at Purple Palace

BY MIKE BRANOM
STATE PRESS

The ASU and UofA basketball teams will play a doubleheader against non-conference opponents Boston College and Oklahoma State, respectively, on Dec. 5 at the America West Arena in the inaugural Dial Invitational, it was announced yesterday.

"What makes (the invitational) so exciting is that it gives people the chance to see these four teams compete in matchups that normally don't occur in Pac-10 play," said Bob Hunt, president of the Fiesta Bowl, one of the event's co-sponsors.

The Sun Devils will play the Golden Eagles of the Big East Conference at 1 p.m., and the Wildcats will battle the Cowboys, this year's Big Eight favorite, at 3:30 p.m.

The Invitational is the result of a five-year deal between the Fiesta Bowl, the Dial Corporation, ASU, UofA and Jerry Colangelo, president and CEO of the Phoenix Suns.

Colangelo said that even before downtown

Colangelo luring NCAA tourney to arena

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

Whether it's directing the Suns to an NBA championship or possibly bringing Major League Baseball and National Hockey League franchises to Phoenix, Jerry Colangelo doesn't sell himself short of bringing major sports events to the Valley.

COLANGELO

Colangelo announced Wednesday that he has submitted an application to host NCAA regional championship games at the America West Arena, with the hopes of eventually bringing the Final Four tournament to Phoenix in the future.

"That's going to be a long shot," the Suns owner said about attracting the Final Four at a press conference announcing The Dial Invitational college-basketball double-header Dec. 5, at America West Arena.

"We have formally applied and we've almost been assured that its only a matter of time before we're going to be hosting probably the first round and then the regionals. I can't be specific because I'm not sure how quickly they're going to be picking those dates. It might be two or three years down the road."

Colangelo said he had started the process of trying to bring the NCAA tournament to the Valley when the America West Arena was still under construction. But one of the requirements set forth by the NCAA was the arena site had to be completed before you could submit an application.

"I think as we move forward in time, you're going to see some major college basketball played in this facility, because presently it is the finest basketball facility in the country," Colangelo said. "We're looking forward to hosting regionals for the NCAAs and so on and so forth. We think it is a great facility and we know it will be a great show."

An obstacle Colangelo will have to face in securing the Final Four tournament in Phoenix is the size of arena big enough to handle the huge following of the tournament.

The America West Arena holds 19,000, and for the last couple of years, the NCAA has

Clark ready for Redskins

Cards receiver awaits former teammates

BY SCOTT DAVIS
STATE PRESS

Phoenix Cardinals wide receiver Gary Clark may have his own restaurant in the Scottsdale Galleria — Catch 84 — but don't expect him to take his former teammates there when they come to Phoenix this weekend.

The Washington Redskins are coming to Sun Devil Stadium to face the Cardinals on Sunday, but Clark wants to take his former teammates of eight years somewhere else.

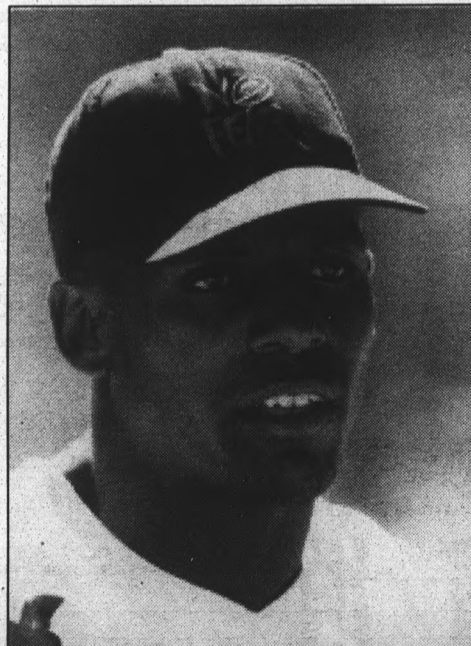

"I'll probably try to have dinner with Art (Monk) and Ricky (Ervin) on Saturday night," Clark said. "We like Italian. We don't have Italian (at Catch 84), so we'll probably go to Sfuzzi's."

Once the former receiving trio finishes off its after-dinner drinks, Clark will go one way and the Redskins will head another.

They will all go their own ways until meeting up again the next afternoon when the game starts.

Pulled groin or not, Clark has full intentions of being the Cardinals starting receiver when the opening kickoff is booted.

"It's the type of injury where you need four to Phoenix Cardinals wide receiver has no fear about meeting his old teammates, the Washington Redskins, Sunday at Sun Devil Stadium.

four and a half weeks total rest on it," Clark said. "You just don't get (the rest) in the NFL. I'll do the best I can and make plays one way or the other."

Clark was a key factor in the prior meeting between the two NFC East rivals. He pulled down six receptions for 93 yards to lead the Cardinals over the Redskins, 17-10.

That win was the only victory for the Cardinals this year. Since then, Phoenix has lost three consecutive games.

For Clark, more is on the line than the three-game losing streak.

Sun Devil spikers' digs mean saved rallies, more wins

BY PAUL J. MATTHEWS
STATE PRESS

Arching her back and crouching low, Kelly Harris turned and sped toward the tunnel, chasing a vicious Oregon State spike that had bounced off a Sun Devil block.

Harris dove, extending her hand about five miles west in a move that sent her somersaulting and cartwheeling out of control toward the ushers at the end of the tunnel. For a moment, it looked like Harris would end up in the parking lot, but she regained her balance and made it back to the court in time to see the Sun Devils win the point.

Dramatic digs like this one have become common for the Sun Devil volleyball team this season. They lead the Pac-10 in digs this year, averaging 20.8 per game.

Three Sun Devils are currently ranked in the top 10 of the conference in digs. Christine Garner is ranked sixth, averaging 3.76 per game, followed by Leanne Schuster, in seventh place averaging 3.55, and Nancy Christian who is eighth with an average of 3.49.

Sun Devil Volleyball Coach Patti Snyder said that Garner is greatly improved this season but she considers Schuster, Christian and Harris to be tops on the team. Harris is usually rotated in to play defense in the back row.

"(Schuster, Christian and Harris) read the best and they move the best and they get lowest to the ground," Snyder said. "They read shots really well."

TURN TO DIGS, PAGE 12.

Clark

"(The Redskins) want bragging rights for the summer," Clark said. "I want bragging rights for the summer. It turns into one of those type of things."

If the Cardinals are able to upend the Redskins, it will be the first time they have swept the Redskins since 1974.

Phoenix coach Joe Bugel feels Clark has been one of the key reasons why his team is faced with this special opportunity of defeating the Redskins twice in one season.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for him, because of his work ethics," Bugel said. "He's given our team a lot of leadership ability. He's really helped Randal Hill and Rickey Proehl."

Hopefully this leadership ability will set in for Sunday's big matchup.

Both teams are coming off surprising losses last week. The Cardinals were upset by New England, 23-21, and the Redskins were annihilated by the New York Giants, 41-7.

"It's a way for us to jumpstart our season and get our butts in gear," Clark said. "It's the same thing for them. It's going to be a physical game, something that we all look forward to playing."

That physical style is something Clark remembers from his Washington playing days.

He said the Redskins always prided themselves on hard work at practice.

It was that hard work which helped the Redskins — with Clark — win the Super Bowl twice, pounding Denver in 1987 and knocking off the Buffalo Bills in 1991.

"The Super Bowl victory is the best thing that happened to me in Washington," Clark said. "The first time around (in the playoffs) is always the best time. It's new to you and your eyes are a lot more wide open."

Digs

Snyder attributed the team's digging ability to hard work in practice against one-on-one blocks combined with inconsistent blocking.

Inconsistent blocking has allowed numerous balls in the back row, allowing players like Harris to record a lot of digs.

But with so many talented players in the Pac-10, there will inevitably be players who beat the block, no matter how good it is. That's why players like Harris are indispensable.

"It's your job in the back row to keep the rally going," Harris said. "You just look at it as your job; it's self motivation."

A rally-saving dig can swing the momentum in a tight match and frustrate a team into attempting shots they would not normally take.

"When you can get a great dig and save a rally and win those rallies it's really good for the psyche," Snyder said. "You kind of get excited about a nice straight down block or a great dig. You create your own momentum."

"It takes the wind out of the sails of the offense on the other side. They start forcing shots, especially if you keep digging their best shot."

Christian said that for her it is a question of "I want to beat this girl or I'm not going to let her get anymore kills. You want to get every ball. Nothing's going to hit the floor."

But for Harris, the key to success is getting off to a good start.

"The more balls that you dig, the better you're going to be at it. If you get one ball up early in the match then your chances of getting good digs later in the match are higher because you have more confidence."

played the tournament in large-sized dome stadiums able to seat nearly 70,000 people. Last year, the Final Four was held at the Superdome in New Orleans, and the year before at the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

But for the 1994 Final Four tournament, the NCAA has broken tradition and will host its championship in Charlotte, N.C., at the Charlotte Coliseum, which seats approximately 22,000.

"Every so often they are playing in a smaller arena, but the NCAA has basically gone to the domed stadiums," Colangelo said. "Maybe after we build a baseball stadium we'll just put a portable floor out there and we can do it in there."

ASU basketball coach Bill Frieder believes attracting the Final Four tournament would be tremendous for the Valley, and he said Colangelo is the right man to bring such an event to the arena.

"Don't sell Jerry Colangelo short," Frieder said. "If it can be done, he'll get it done. He's very aggressive. Look at all of the things he has accomplished already."

Dial

Phoenix's America West Arena was completed, a basketball event featuring the two Arizona Pac-10 schools was envisioned.

"One of the things I really wanted was to have an annual Arizona-Arizona State basketball game on a neutral court, which I thought would be a great attraction," he said. "I'm very happy that this is becoming a reality."

Colangelo said that the Dial Invitational could be a stepping stone to the Arena eventually being chosen as an NCAA Regional site.

"I think as we move forward in time, you're going to see some major college basketball played in this facility, because presently it is maybe the finest basketball facility in the country," he said.

The Dial Invitational nearly did not get off the ground for this season due to conflicts with UofA's schedule.

"We had to postpone a return game to Rhode Island," said UofA Coach Lute Olsen. "The difficulty of that was that that was a focal game for them on their home schedule, and it was a contractual situation where we would return that they played us a year ago in Tucson. So now we return the game to them next year."

Ticket prices range from $30 to $50 and are available at the America West Arena or and Dillard's ticket office.

"I think the pricing is comparable to what was charged a year ago at the (Arizona Veterans' Memorial) Coliseum for the double-header that was held there," Colangelo said. "That's what it was predicated on. My recollection is that they sold out."

Last February, ASU and UofA participated with Cincinnati and Memphis State in the 7-UP Shoot-Out.

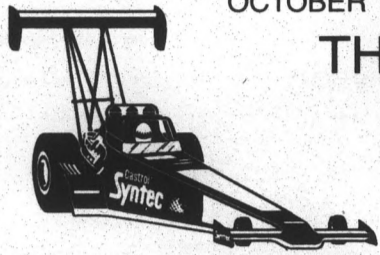

ASU Coach Bill Frieder said he was looking forward to the challenge of facing Boston College, a team that finished 18-13, 9-9 in the Big East, and won two games in the National Invitational Tournament.

The Golden Eagles return all five starters from last season's squad, including senior forward Bill Curley, who averaged 15.8 points and 7.6 rebounds per game.

"Boston College is a very experienced club, a veteran club with all their players back," Frieder said. "Of course, Curley is a big six-nine aggressive player. With the makeup of our squad, we'll have a very hard time handling him inside. That'll be a good game. That'll be a real good match-up."

Your Individual Horoscope

For Thursday, Oct. 14, 1993

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
Cooperative efforts in business aren't especially favored. You and a coworker don't quite mesh today. Evening hours, though, favor romantic togetherness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
Though today is likely to bring you new opportunities in business, you may have trouble staying on top of immediate tasks. You could easily fall behind now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Today brings fun opportunities, yet there may be some last minute changes in plans. In romance, keep your feet on the ground. Also, guard against foolish expenditure.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Family celebrations are favored, yet staying on top of household duties may be difficult now. Tonight may bring some confusion due to a mix-up in communications.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
Good news comes by phone or letter and weekend plans fall into place now. However, the unexpected could throw you off course where job interests are concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Money opportunities are certainly present today, yet you must guard against careless expenditures. Extra expenses may arise in connection with parenting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Though you are optimistic and in a happy frame of mind today, others could keep you waiting. Mix-ups in signals could occur between family members as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
You may get a confidential tip today that will benefit you financially, however, interruptions could make it difficult to accomplish as much as you would like now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Though you are sought after socially now, friends who can't make up their minds make it difficult for you to put your own plans in final shape. Others seem to be unreliable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
You may have a minor disagreement with a friend today. Business prospects look good at the moment, yet your independent attitude may not sit well with some you deal with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
You will receive conflicting advice today, so you might as well rely on your own judgment. Last minute changes make it difficult to make up your mind about plans for travel.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
Though today brings welcome financial developments, it's not the best time to make decisions involving the use of joint assets. A friend is hard to pin down.

YOU BORN TODAY have an adventurous approach to life, yet home life is also important to you. You are not afraid of taking chances and are good at extricating yourself from difficult situations. It is important that you make good use of your talents and not settle for what chance might send your way. Though you are a natural peacemaker, you are also an innovator. Birthdate of: Dwight Eisenhower, military and government leader; Lillian Gish, actress; and e.e. cummings, poet.
