Latest poll shows Symington behind

BY GREG SEXTON
STATE PRESS

Gov. Fife Symington would have a tough time getting re-elected if the gubernatorial election were held today, according to a University poll released Tuesday.

According to the poll — conducted by KAET-TV and ASU's Walter Cronkite School of Journalism — 37 percent of registered Arizona Republicans said they would vote for Attorney General Grant Woods in the upcoming election if it were held today. Thirty-three percent said they would vote for Symington.

The survey, conducted from Oct. 20-24, is based on telephone interviews with 592 registered voters statewide and has a potential margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent.

Journalism professor Bruce Merrill, the pollster who conducted the survey, said much of Symington's future as Arizona governor may hinge on the next several months.

"If the 1994 election was held today, Gov. Symington would have a very difficult time being re-elected," he said. "Still, the election is a year off, and Symington has ample time to turn his image around."

For Symington, the key "is to see what happens during the next several months with the (Resolution Trust Corporation) and his financial crises," Merrill said.

The poll also found that in the Arizona Democratic race for governor, former Phoenix mayor Terry Goddard has strong support against current Phoenix Mayor Paul Johnson and Arizona Board of Regent member Eddie Basha.

The survey interviewed 235 Democrats, with 39 percent supporting Goddard and 23 percent in favor of Johnson. Twenty percent said they would vote for Basha.

"Goddard's early lead is because he ran a statewide campaign two years ago," Merrill said. "I feel he is ahead because he is the best-known Democrat and has more strength within the party workers."

But Merrill added, "Both Basha and Johnson could run strong primary campaigns. It will be a very tough, competitive race."

Statewide, if the gubernatorial race boiled down to Goddard and Symington, the poll said 51 percent of voters would vote for Goddard, while 35 percent would vote for Symington. Fourteen percent remain undecided.

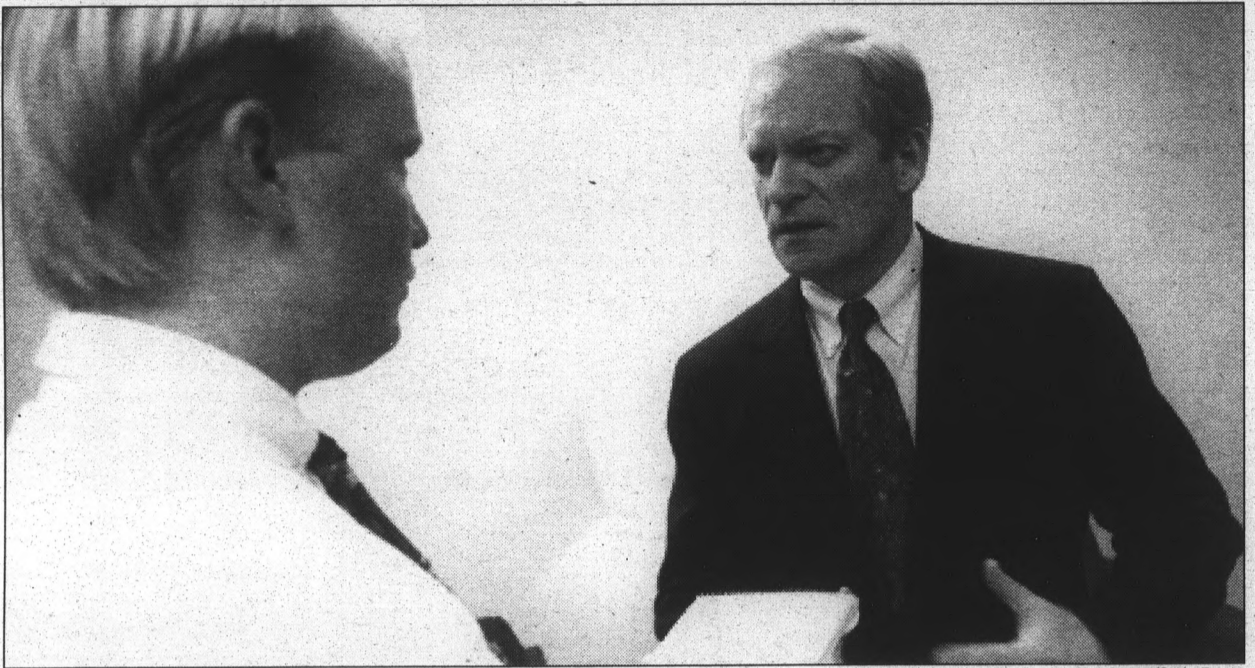

The poll also found that voters would favor Basha over Symington if the two squared off in the election. Forty-two percent said they would vote for Basha, compared to 35 percent for Symington. Twenty-three percent said they were undecided.

Johnson leads Symington by a 54 to 27 percent margin, according to the poll.

Merrill also said that with a Democratic president and a civil lawsuit pending against Symington, he expects the pressure to be on the governor. And that pressure could come at campaign crunch time.

"It's kind of hard getting elected when you are in court every day," Merrill said, adding that Symington's 33 percent

Symington addresses education issues

BY SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

While on campus Tuesday, Gov. Fife Symington said that a proposed four-year college in southern Arizona may be needed and the state's universities need to work harder to graduate students more quickly.

"It (a new college) is certainly worthy of consideration, because our universities are reaching a saturation point," Symington said before an interview about his new anti-crime plan on KAET-TV.

"In order for them to maintain their quality, they're going to have to limit enrollment, and that means we're going to have unmet needs," he added. "We need to start looking at the alternatives."

The Arizona Board of Regents decided on Friday to begin planning a four-year liberal arts college in Pima County.

Symington visited the Channel 8 studios on campus to tape an interview for the news show Horizon with host Michael Grant. Earlier Tuesday at the Grand Canyon, Symington unveiled his plan to fight crime in Arizona.

The governor said it is distressing that students can't get the classes they need to graduate in four years.

"My son Scott graduated from the University of Arizona a year ago," the governor said. "I've learned a lot about it through the eyes of a student and, for one thing, I think students need to be guaranteed that they can get through in four years in their particular major."

"I think the fact that they can't is an indication of the failure of the system, so my emphasis is really on the student and ensuring that the student gets a good education and is receiving the kind of teaching that he or she should receive."

Regent John Munger has said students who have accumulated 150 or more credit hours without earning a degree should pay for their entire education.

"Just at the Board of Regents level, we need to continue to look at that issue and force change in the way universities do business so you can get through in four years," he said. "Frankly, it adds to everybody's cost to lengthen the process."

Symington said his new plan to curb violence centers around juveniles.

"My plan is a very comprehensive plan dealing with both intervention and prevention as a long-term strategy and dealing specifically right now with the problem in the rise of juvenile violent crime," he said.

Symington said the plan addresses 24 areas and costs about $31 million.

His plan includes placing peace officers at 75 schools, making it a felony to sell a gun to a minor and requiring jail time if a gun is used in a crime.

Attorney General Grant Woods outlined a comprehensive anti-gang plan Oct. 25 that includes stiffer penalties for gang members who commit crimes and bans the sale of handguns to minors.

Animal rights group to fight ASU over open meeting law

BY MELANIE K. SELCHO
STATE PRESS

About a dozen animal rights activists threatened legal action against the University Tuesday after being barred from attending an ASU meeting to discuss animal research protocol.

Members of Concerned Arizonans for Animal Rights and Ethics (CAARE) said they have the right to attend the monthly University meetings of the Animal Care and Use Committee. But the University and committee members said they are not a public body and therefore are not subject to open meeting laws.

Vicki Culver, a former ASU student and member of CAARE, said federal law requires all animal research projects to be presented to a committee and university meetings to be open to the public.

"Before they OK a research project, by federal mandate they have to hold meetings," she said.

Russ Benford, a sophomore environmental resources major and member of CAARE, said although the meetings are legally required to be open to the public, members of CAARE were ejected from October's meeting and barred from Tuesday's.

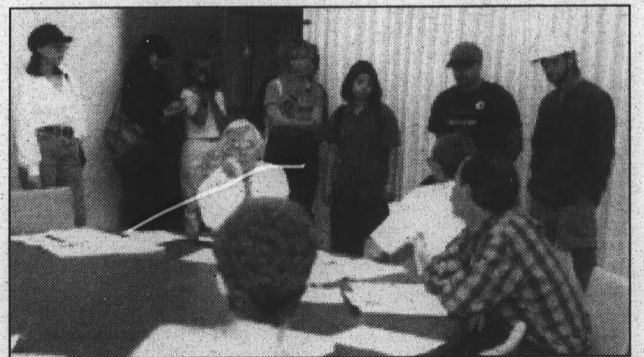

"They (committee) seem to make their own rules and their attorney comes later and patches things up," he said.

Nancy Tribbensee, ASU associate general counsel, handles the matter on behalf of the University, but was unavailable for comment.

Mary Stevens, ASU associate general counsel, said she could not comment on the specifics of the matter, but said not all University meetings are subject to open meeting laws. She added that some University meetings are open to the public by choice, but only Arizona Board of Regents meetings or meetings of a committee that reports to the ABOR are subject to the open meetings law.

Arizona Democratic support for the U.S. Senate appears to be favoring current Arizona Secretary of State Dick Mahoney over potential candidates Cindy Resnick, Steve Owens and Cathy Eden.

"Most meetings at the University are not public meetings," she said. "The law is that it's got to be a board meeting or an advisory meeting to the board."

Benford added that the public has the right to attend these meetings because ASU is a state-funded institution and tax and tuition money support what he considers unethical and unnecessary animal research.

"I don't think the committee represents animal interests," he said. "They cut them up and stick things in them."

Kay Jensen, a member of CAARE, brought her video camera to document "what took place as we tried to get into the meeting."

Jensen said animal research is a public issue because it is funded by tax and tuition money and the University is a public body.

"Animal research has always been cloaked in secrecy, and the public has the right to know," she said.

Ronald Barr, associate vice president of research, told the group to leave because they did not have an invitation to be there. He told the group the meeting was closed and to contact him for future invitations, but added that there is "no guarantee you'll be invited."

"I did (close the meeting), because (during) the last two meetings, members didn't feel like they were doing their work satisfactorily," he said.

Barr said universities are not required by law to open meetings to the public. He said the group will receive the public information as soon as the committee has completed discussion and approval of a procedure.

"You can have the information as soon as it's completed," he said.

Richard Breeden, another member of CAARE, said the group will contact its lawyer over the incident to ensure that it will be admitted to the December meeting.

Although the group is not allowed to speak or participate in the meetings, Breeden said its presence at the meetings is important to make sure the public understands the animal research taking place at ASU.

"(It's important) to find out the information we're entitled to under law," he said. "The public should know what's going on."

Breeden said the group should be held responsible to the public for the research it performs.

"They review all protocol for any research and teaching concerning animals," he said. "They are subject to scrutiny and we will scrutinize them. We will stop them either by legal action or by our presence."

Pilots dispute crash report

PHOENIX (AP) — The pilots of a twin-engine plane that skidded off a runway at Sky Harbor International Airport dispute a federal report that said human error, not brake failure, probably caused the accident.

The crew of two and six passengers were uninjured in the Nov. 7, 1992, accident which occurred while the plane was returning at night from a business trip to Cleveland. After landing, the plane pierced a chain-link fence, crossed a major street and burst into flames after crashing through a block wall.

The Oct. 25 report by the National Transportation Safety Board said the probable cause of the accident was "the delay of the (pilot) to apply normal braking and his failure to execute the appropriate emergency procedures."

The pilot, Alfred Adams of Scottsdale, told The Phoenix Gazette that the plane's brake pedals jammed.

"I had to change directions to miss light standards, I went between parked planes ... and everyone walked out alive," he said Monday. "And yet they have the audacity to say I did something wrong? The armchair pilots really blow my mind."

Co-pilot H.R. Price of Phoenix, the physician who owned the plane, scoffed at the NTSB report.

"They just tested the parts. They weren't in the cockpit," Price said. "The sad thing is it burned up so bad they couldn't investigate it as well as if it had just crashed."

Singer Michael Jackson's grandfather dies at 100

PHOENIX (AP) — Samuel Jackson, grandfather of pop superstar Michael Jackson, has died natural causes in a nursing home in a poor section of the city. He was 100.

Jackson, who died Sunday, was the father of Joe Jackson, head of the musical clan that includes Janet, LaToya and the brothers who made up the Jackson 5.

Lee Solters, the singer's Los Angeles publicist, said he didn't know whether Jackson would cancel concerts scheduled this week in Mexico City would be canceled.

Solters declined to comment on the relationship between Samuel Jackson and his grandson, who was described in August by Forbes magazine as one of the world's richest entertainers with a net worth of more than $150 million.

John McLaughlin, a Jackson family spokesman in Los Angeles, said that since the pop singer was on tour, he was unlikely to attend services. He said it hadn't been decided when or where the funeral would be.

Juvenile to stand trial in murder of Tucson woman

TUCSON (AP) — A judge has ruled there is sufficient evidence for a juvenile to stand trial in the carjacking murder of a Tucson woman.

Jack Jewitt, 14, is charged in the murder of 26-year-old Ellen Marie Knauss, who police said was kidnapped Sept. 19 in the Tucson Mall parking lot.

Her body was found Sept. 24 in the desert southwest of Tucson. Police said she had been raped and shot once in the head with a sawed-off shotgun.

Jewitt is charged with first-degree murder, kidnapping, sexual assault, armed robbery and theft.

Pima County Superior Court Judge Raner C. Collins, presiding judge of Juvenile Court, ruled Monday there is probable cause for Jewitt to stand trial on all charges he faces.

Collins will hold a hearing Dec. 1 to determine whether Jewitt will stand trial as an adult or a juvenile.

High winds fan new fires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New brushfires fanned by fierce desert winds tore through brushland and hillside homes Tuesday, forcing hundreds of residents and schoolchildren to flee. Two people were badly burned while trying to rescue animals.

Roads jammed as people fled a giant blaze pushing through brush and enveloping homes in the Woodland Hills, Calabasas and Malibu areas 20 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

"We've got ashes falling all around. It's like nighttime over here in Malibu," said Jeffrey Bliss, a spokesman at Pepperdine University in Malibu.

More than 500 people were evacuated north of Banning in Riverside County as fire raced over 3,000 acres 80 miles east of Los Angeles, said Bonnie O'Connell, a county fire department spokeswoman.

Seventy acres were scorched in the San Bernardino County community of Yucaipa, 60 miles east of Los Angeles. "If it crests the hill, there is a potential threat to homes," fire spokesman Bill Peters said.

Wind winds clocked at up to 53 mph, the new round of blazes erupted as firefighters were consolidating their hold on big fires that broke out last week, causing extensive loss of homes especially in Altadena and Laguna Beach.

The blaze in Woodland Hills grew rapidly, sending a huge plume of reddish-brown smoke over the San Fernando Valley as it raged through the Santa Monica Mountains.

"It's heading to be bigger than the (5,700-acre) Altadena fire," said Steve Valenzuela, a Los Angeles County Fire Department spokesman.

"At this point the front of the fire is moving very quickly. The wind is pushing the fire rapidly toward the ocean and we are trying to pinch it off."

The two injured people were trying to rescue animals from that blaze, Valenzuela said. He had no other details.

Senate jilts Packwood's offer to release information on efforts to get wife job

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fuming Sen. Bob Packwood offered Tuesday to turn over "every scintilla of information" in his diaries on efforts to have lobbyists hire his former wife. The Senate Ethics Committee said no; its members still wanted the diaries themselves.

Two Republican senators then proposed the same deal with the intention of forcing a Senate vote on the issue. But the debate continued.

The second day of argument over access to Packwood's diaries, punctuated with flashes of anger by the Oregon Republican and others, moved the argument from legal theories to new disclosures.

It was Packwood himself who told a rap chamber that the committee raised questions about his "helping Mrs. Packwood find employment and linkage to official duties." Packwood said the job solicitations involved four people, two of them lobbyists, but did not elaborate.

However the core of the arguments focused on this question: Can the committee gain access to material containing potential evidence of misconduct ranging beyond earlier allegations of sexual harassment.

Packwood offered to provide all diary entries on the employment opportunities for his former wife, Georgie, in addition to his longstanding proposal to turn over everything involving the original allegations: that he made unwanted sexual advances to more than two dozen women and tried to intimidate some of them to keep them quiet.

Packwood and his wife were divorced in 1991.

Packwood's offer was embraced by Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and John Danforth, R-Mo., who offered it as an amendment to a pending motion which would put the Senate on record as authorizing a lawsuit to obtain the diaries.

Under the proposal, Packwood would relinquish his diaries to a neutral third party — former U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Kenneth Starr — who would forward relevant material to the committee.

"Take that decision out of the hands of Sen. Packwood and put that decision into the hands of the examiner ... Kenneth Starr, so there would be no doubt," Specter said.

Committee Chairman Richard H. Bryan, D-Nev., and Vice Chairman Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said they rejected Packwood's offer, in part because it would give him a choice unavailable to ordinary Americans facing a subpoena of their records.

"The proposal suggests that there be two

PLO suspends peace negotiations after Israel refuses total pullout

TABA, Egypt (AP) — The PLO walked out of peace talks with Israel on Tuesday, accusing the Israelis of trying to back out of an agreement to withdraw from occupied lands.

Nabil Shaath, the PLO's chief negotiator, charged that Israel wants to redeploy its troops rather than pull them out of the occupied Gaza Strip and the town of Jericho in the West Bank.

Israel's withdrawal plan, he said, ran counter to the Sept. 13 Israel-Palestine Liberation Organization agreement on Palestinian autonomy.

The Palestinian walkout was the first major snag since negotiations began three weeks ago on implementing the first phase of the autonomy plan.

But both sides said they wanted to resume the talks, and the Palestinians might have walked out to demonstrate their anger over the Israeli position on withdrawal.

The talks in Taba, in their fourth round, are meant to define how Israel will transfer some powers to Palestinians in Gaza and Jericho under terms of the Israeli-PLO accord.

Tuesday's dispute grew from maps and withdrawal plans the Israelis presented

Monday, and apparently centered on Israeli access to roads to protect Jewish settlements in Gaza.

Jewish settlers, saying their government has abandoned them to make peace with Palestinians, waged four days of violent protests in the occupied territories beginning Friday. The settlers did not take action Tuesday.

The Sept. 13 autonomy agreement called for Israel to start withdrawing its troops from Gaza and Jericho by Dec. 13, but gave it permission

Beseeking free speech

The Animal Care and Use Committee, a taxpayer-funded group that approves animal research projects conducted at the University and discusses animal testing protocol in general, held their monthly meeting Tuesday, but for the second month in a row, the members of Concerned Arizonans for Animal Rights and Ethics (CAARE) were not in attendance.

It wasn't that the members were slack in their crusade against animal testing. No, the members of CAARE were barred from attending the meeting. Again. And boy are they steamed.

They have good reason to be.

The Open Meetings Law states that in order to close a meeting to the public, it must post reasonable notice (at least 24 hours prior to the time the meeting is set to begin) of its plans. It is illegal not to give such notice.

The Committee claims that, since it is not a public body, it is not bound by the Open Meetings Law.

Haven't we heard this somewhere before?

But that's not the point.

Number one: the Animal Care and Use Committee deliberately and knowingly closed the meeting on the members of CAARE because the members attended the meeting in protest of animal testing.

The dozen or so members of CAARE were not disrupting the meeting in any way; they were not allowed to speak or participate in the meetings in any way. They say they had no intention of disrupting the meeting; they simply wanted to sit in and be informed.

The committee waited until the CAARE members showed up at the meeting before they finally decided that the meeting was closed. The committee members deliberately dodged the protesters because they wanted to avoid facing the protesters' opposition to what they were doing.

Number two: when a group, committee or government is tax- or tuition-sponsored, it has a responsibility to remain answerable to the people who pay for its privilege to exist. Its members, therefore, are chosen by the people and must answer to those people whenever those people choose to question them.

Whether such groups' responsibilities are bound by the word of law still is completely immaterial.

If the taxpayers pay the taxes forced on them so the very existence of a group is assured, and if the students are forced to pay a 16-percent tuition hike so that a group can keep its beloved budget, then that group should hold to the law's spirit.

Society mythicizes domestic abuse

Editor's note: Due to an error, only a portion of Jessica Klinger's Tuesday column was printed. The complete article appears below. The State Press apologizes for the error.

JESSICA KLINGER
Columnist

Domestic abuse is increasing in this country, yet we hear little about it.

In the early 80s conservatives withdrew funding for battered women's shelters because they "wished to protect the family," and believed these shelters were "homes for runaway wives" and that they "interfere with family life."

The irony is that the only thing interfering with family life was the men who abused the women and children of the relationship, sometimes to the point of killing the women and their kids.

Society has been unable to come to copes with abuse; the clear sign of this has been the creation of myths and stereotypes that conceal the realities of domestic violence.

This type of violence is not taken as seriously by the courts, family, friends and the community as some other vicious crimes like stranger rape and murder.

The media portrays only middle-class women as being the victims of abuse. The media also perpetuates the image that women see ways out of the relationship and that there is a prosperous life for them once they are free. But in the real world, 50 percent of all homeless women and children in this country are fleeing domestic violence.

But such convenient myths are shattered by facts like:

- Every 15 seconds a woman is battered.
- Abuse is the single major cause of injury to women surpassing rape and car accidents.
- 40 percent of women killed are killed by their partners.
- 2 to 4 million American women are abused each year.
- Abuse happens to women in every social group; it cuts across ethnicity, age, education and class. A student still could be a victim of abuse.

- More than 50 percent of women will suffer some form of violence from their spouses during marriage.

Last month the Maricopa County Task Force Against Domestic Abuse announced that October would be recognized as Domestic Violence Appreciation Month. The group held a vigil at the capital, created a haunted house in Phoenix to educate the community concerning domestic violence and passed out lavender ribbons for the police force and the community to wear in recognition of the victims.

But how many people will actually take the trouble to educate themselves about the myths of domestic abuse?

Physical abuse is about control over another. The image that most think of when we envision an abuser is a psychotic male that is out of control. But in reality, it could be your boyfriend or a member of your family.

Have you ever been shoved around or hit in your relationships with people you love? It is not easy to rationalize that as abuse, but it is and it could get worse.

Some women who are in worse relationships have taken their rationalizations to a new extreme, saying to themselves, "Well, he only stabbed me once," or "I need to try to be more quiet and have the house clean when he gets home so he will love me enough not to break my jaw again."

Another image portrayed by media and society is that the women in the violent relationships can see alternatives on how to get out of the situation.

Severely abused women are sufferers of the battered-woman syndrome. They don't see a way out, so they remain in the situation. Often the abuser will tell the women that he will kill her or she will lose everything if she leaves. Therefore, she stays not seeing any other way to live.

Another symptom that battered women experience is learned helplessness. A good example of a study of this symptom was done on dogs. Test animals were subjected to repeated electrical shocks. At first, the dogs reacted strongly to the pain, but as time went on, each dog grew more and more accustomed to the pain and would suffer rather than attempt escape.

Battered women experience the same reaction to abuse. They soon grow climatized to the discomfort and pain. Therefore, they're unable to see their ways to safety.

It is easy for women to rationalize abuse. Admittedly, it is hard for a person that is in love with their partner to admit they are the victims and that it is not their fault their partner may be harming them.

There are some warning signs to determine that your partner may be an abuser:

- Isolation — controlling what you do, who you see, talk to and where you go.
- Emotional abuse — partner is putting you down, making you feel bad about yourself.
- Economic abuse — trying to keep you from getting and having a job and controlling your money.
- Sexual abuse — making you do sexual things against your will and treating you like a sex object.
- Using children — making you feel guilty about the children and using visitation as a way to harass you.
- Threats — making and carrying out threats against you.
- Using male privilege — treating you like a servant or subordinate.
- Intimidation-putting you in fear by using looks, actions, and destruction of your property.

Domestic abuse is a problem which society has ignored for too long. It is critical that the realities of battering come to light, and the myths be dispelled.

Swanson lauds control in rejecting individualism

Wade Swanson's article in the Oct. 28 issue of the State Press is a really frightening piece of journalism. At first glance, it seems he is just another ignorant proponent of the nostalgic family-values nonsense I have learned to ignore. At a deeper level, however, Swanson apparently embraces an ideological stance most notably exemplified by Hitler and Big Brother.

His statement that "[o]ur culture must begin to embrace the beauty of unharnessed birth and death" — which means we must return to the Good Old Days when uncontrolled birth was balanced by the decimation of epidemic diseases — is unfortunately not the scariest idea he advances.

Far worse is the assertion that "[o]ur present culture of radical individualism has rejected the idea that there is a moral authority exterior of, and superior to, an autonomous person's will and desire." Just what or who does Swanson think this authority is? If it is God, whose god is it? There are thousands of religions trying to convince us they have a direct line to God; how can we know which is right?

Or is Swanson's exalted "moral authority" the state? There are plenty of governments on this planet, and plenty of would-be dictators, all waiting for the chance to take over a docile population that will not resist the tyrant's "moral authority."

Perhaps the external moral authority Swanson refers to is no more than the majority in any given society, the mob. Must we simply look to the people around us and believe and act as they do to be cured of this "disease of control" that Swanson so abhors?

Interestingly, the "radical individualism" that Swanson reviles is exactly what the highly influential psychologist, Carl Jung, prescribes in his book, "The Undiscovered Self," as the only hope of rescuing the world from the kind of totalitarian state control from which Russia has recently begun to be liberated. For when people are convinced that they must give up their own will and subject themselves to the control of any external authority — moral or otherwise — tyranny is the inevitable result. Whether it is the intellectual tyranny of organized religion, which does not allow people to think for themselves, or the physical, social, and economic tyranny of a despotic government, which does not allow people to do as they choose (as long as they do not interfere with other people's right to do the same), tyranny is always reprehensible.

People must realize that they have the right to determine their own values, and then accept the responsibility that entails, rather than taking the easy way out and allowing some external "moral authority" to decide everything for them. The real "disease of control" is allowing oneself to be controlled instead of accepting the responsibility to take control of one's own life.

Castration only fit, just punishment for rapists

I am a male ASU student presently taking a human sexuality course. In the last class period, we were studying the rape of women, the effect it has on them, and the hell they have to go through to get our society to punish their violators. I was so angry by the time the class was over that my fists were clenched and I almost grit my teeth flat.

How much longer are we as a society going to put up with women being raped and very little being done about it? Are we still such a male-dominated society that we still overlook this horrible crime and let it go on? It is time for those who have the power to make the needed changes to do something about it. I am referring to the elected officials who make the laws, the judicial system that punishes the offenders, and men in general.

It seems logical to me that if a man violates a woman by raping her, he should lose the right to ever have sex again — yes, I am talking about castration. According to my teacher almost all rapists are serial rapists, meaning they will not rape once but many times. Many rapists who do not kill their victims can do less than five years in prison. Think about that if a man raped your mother, daughter, sister or your wife — would five years in jail be a suitable enough punishment for him? Even worse, getting away scot-free because a judge or jury felt she was asking for it.

No matter what a woman does, if she says stop, it means stop. There is no way, under any circumstances, that a woman deserves to get raped — I do not care how she is dressed or how she is acting. That would be like saying that anyone who drives a BMW and wears a Rolex is flaunting their wealth and deserves to get robbed. Women who are raped not only go through the trauma of this sickening crime, but to get anything done about it they must endure many personal attacks in the judicial process. While on the witness stand their character as a person and a woman is dragged through the mud like they were the criminal. I as a man am

Editorial board members whine without substance

In the Oct. 27 edition of the State Press, an article by the editorial board entitled "Lattie's World," likened ASU to a "junked care propped up on cinder blocks in a west Phoenix front yard." The article describes ASU President Lattie Coor's attempts to create close-knit communities within the main campus as "touch-up paint" applied to the dilapidated junker. The editors have proven their own point, because the type of near-sighted journalism exhibited in the article can be expected from students that have experienced a "substandard college education."

Many students would agree with the editors that programs like the "course match" in which freshman students attend introductory courses with a group of dormmates, are only a "Bunch of bells and whistles, clicking and chirping in hopes that students will forget that the state is sticking them with a substandard college education." What the authors forgot to include was a reason why this program has failed to create a sense of community at ASU. It bothers me slightly that this claim is a bit grandiose; what bothers me greatly is that the editors do not offer factual information to back their claim.

I rest assured knowing that the editors are well informed of their rights, as American citizens, to practice free speech. But do these three students belong to smaller groups like Arizonans, Phoenicians, residents of Tempe, or ASU students? If they did, they would certainly be more concerned with offering suggestions on how to improve the ASU community rather than simply complaining about it. The fact that these three students do not feel a sense of local social responsibility forces one to wonder if the lack of community at ASU is caused by an overpopulated school and an overburdened administration, or by an apathetic group of young Americans unwilling to take a personal initiative to solve societies' problems.

In their article, the editors did not mention the newly proposed branch of ASU at the now defunct Williams Air Force Base or ASU West. These two initiatives prove that ASU is trying to reduce its size to better meet the needs of the community, but these things take time. Surely, the editors of the State Press cannot consider these two items "whistles and bells."

Maybe ASU has failed to offer a "high quality personal education" if the editors of the school newspaper feel the need to complain without feeling a social obligation to make positive suggestions along with the complaints. But I wonder what kind of education the editors of the State Press participated in if they feel they have been "stuck" with it. The next time I am driving through west Phoenix, and I see three heads in the back seat of a beat-up jalopy on blocks waiting for I don't know what, one thing I am not going to do is push.

standards, one for 250 million ordinary citizens" and another for 100 U.S. senators, Bryan said. He added that "it suggests that the Senate must have a greater level of protection."

Further, he argued, Packwood's suggestion would require that Starr "turn a blind eye" to any other areas he found that could involve misconduct.

"We put a patch over his eye. If there's anything unrelated to the first series of allegations, unrelated to the matter Sen. Packwood described (the job solicitations). ... If there's anything else, he could not report that back to the committee," he said.

Bryan acknowledged that he was referring to the efforts to hire Mrs. Packwood when he said last week that the diaries raised questions of possible criminality by Packwood.

"I am informed those are the areas that were of concern to our counsel," Bryan said, adding the committee sought to learn "whether those incidents involved any kind of a pattern."

Packwood, his voice rising, said of his proposal, "It strikes a reasonable balance. I will provide every scintilla of information" on sexual misconduct and "employment opportunities for my wife and whether there was any quid pro quo."

Packwood said that he learned for the first time Monday night, at a meeting with ethics committee members, that the panel was looking into job offers to his former wife.

Packwood said there were diary references, in that connection, to: Ronald Crawford, a Washington lobbyist; Lester Pollack of Rye, N.Y., one of Packwood's law school classmates and a key campaign fund-raiser; Tim Lee, an Oregon businessman and former Packwood staff member, and Steven R. Saunders, a lobbyist who has represented the Japanese government and Japanese companies.

to maintain security over Israeli settlements in the vacated territories.

"We feel that the Israeli interpretation of that agreement is quite failing to grasp the meaning of withdrawal and its requirements," Shaath said.

"The agreement provided for withdrawal by the Israeli forces from the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area, and not within the Gaza Strip and Jericho area," Shaath said in announcing the suspension of the talks to reporters.

"This is a withdrawal agreement and not a redeployment agreement," he added.

Israel's chief negotiator, Maj. Gen. Amnon Shahak, said the Israelis were not presenting the Palestinians with an ultimatum.

In Israel, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said he was certain the impasse could be overcome, noting such difficulties were expected since security was involved.

But he added: "We will not compromise on anything that is linked to the security needs."

Shaath said he was going to Tunis to consult with Yasser Arafat, PLO chairman. He suggested the Israelis likewise consult their leaders to "come up with an interpretation that would allow us to proceed smoothly."

Shahak told a separate news conference that he saw no need for the walkout. He said the Israeli formula was "a logical plan that could be discussed, was discussed, until the moment they decided to go and have consultations."

The Israeli general described the suspension as "the first obstacle, which surely won't be the last one or the most difficult" in the negotiations.

On Dec. 13, Israeli troops are to begin withdrawing and Palestinians are to take over as administrators in Gaza and Jericho, about one-tenth of the Arab land Israel has occupied since the 1967 Middle East war.

The turnover, to be completed by April, is to establish the areas as proving grounds for an eventual full peace between Israel and the Palestinians.

Bono, 'Blue Eyes' to get promo on new Sinatra CD

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank Sinatra on modern rock radio? Capitol Records' promotion of his first album in nine years apparently is aiming for it.

"Duets," released Tuesday, includes 15 signature songs by the Chairman of the Board with help from Liza Minnelli, Barbra Streisand, Aretha Franklin, Tony Bennett, Natalie Cole, Anita Baker, Gloria Estefan, Carly Simon, Charles Aznavour, Julio Iglesias and saxophonist Kenny G.

The odd cut out, though, is the one Capitol is promoting in a special compact disc sent to those in the music industry: a duet with U2 rocker Bono on the Cole Porter standard "I've Got You Under My Skin."

"That's obviously the track with the hippest cachet in today's market," said Ken Barnes, editor of Radio and Records, an industry trade publication. "It's a sign of what they're aiming at — the alternative market."

Because of its diversity, the album was expected to sell well to many audiences.

Paul Herzman, assistant manager at the Tower Records store near Lincoln Center in Manhattan, said there had been advance interest by telephone and the store had ordered "a good number" of albums.

"It's a big one, certainly one of the five to 10 biggest of the year," he said.

Tammy Laub, store manager at the Tower outlet on Sunset Boulevard in Los Angeles, agreed.

"There's a big demand for it from everybody and anybody," she said.

Directors, premier, movie lovers mourn death of filmmaker Fellini

ROME (AP) — The studio where Federico Fellini transformed his vision of the grotesque, bizarre, pathetic and mystical onto celluloid became the set for a wake Tuesday as thousands came to mourn one of filmmaking's greatest maestros.

Music by Nino Rota, who composed the haunting and evocative scores for many of Fellini's 20 feature films, played in the background as celebrities, fans and Italy's premier filed past the coffin of the Oscar-winning director.

Fellini, 73, died Sunday in a Rome hospital. He had suffered a stroke during the summer and went into a coma two weeks ago before dying.

"He supposedly said that you should never abandon irony, not even now," said director Lina Wertmuller, a director who worked with him on "8 1/2," after she filed tearfully by the coffin.

"I'd like to come up with a witty line for him, but I can't do it," Wertmuller told reporters. "Federico didn't like weeping, he never liked it." The coffin was brought to Studio 5 in Cinecittà, a filmmaking complex on the outskirts of Rome where Fellini shot most of his films. He won four Oscars for his movies, and this spring his entire career was honored with a special Academy Award.

Studio 5 was "always Fellini's kingdom, his true home,"

Wertmuller said.

The studio was reconstructed for the wake with the set of the last scene of Fellini's "The Interview," an autobiographical work. An enormous sky-blue backdrop with painted clouds floating by stood behind the coffin.

"He really would have liked this set, that sky, all this space," Paolo Villaggio, an Italian comic actor, told reporters.

Franco Zeffirelli, director of the 1968 film "Romeo and Juliet" and a film version of the opera "La Traviata," also attended the wake.

Premier Carlo Ciampi stood silently before Fellini's coffin, which was covered with a thick blanket of red roses.

Four police honor guards, decked out in ceremonial uniforms, stood at attention at the coffin.

By late morning, some 3,000 people had filed by. Some held flowers as they waited quietly for their moment to pass by. A schoolteacher brought her class.

Fellini's widow and star of the Oscar-winning "La Strada" and others of his films, Giulietta Masina, had not come by late afternoon.

The funeral was set for Wednesday in a Rome church.

- A male student was arrested for disorderly conduct at Manzanita Hall Monday evening.
- A male student was told to leave Manzanita Hall after police found him trespassing there Monday night.
- An underage male not affiliated with ASU was arrested for possession of alcohol at 950 S. Forest Mall Monday night.
- The east wall of ASU Stores was spray painted sometime prior to Monday afternoon.
- A metal dedication plate was taken from the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house early Monday morning.
- An ASU employee lost an ASU key Saturday afternoon.
- Two bicycles were stolen from on-campus bike racks over the weekend.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A 29-year-old transient was arrested for criminal trespass early Monday morning after an apartment complex maintenance supervisor discovered him masturbating in the hot tub. The man left when confronted by the supervisor, but he was located and arrested at his workplace on Monday afternoon.
- A 30-year-old Tempe man called police Wednesday night after seeing a man unlawfully enter the fenced jacuzzi area of his apartment complex. An officer arrived to discover the man masturbating in the hot tub.
- A 25-year-old Tempe woman was offended by an unidentified man's public sexual indecency Tuesday afternoon. As she jogged on the bike path next to Indian Bend Wash, a man passed her on a bike, then stopped ahead and ducked into some bushes. When she jogged by, she saw the man masturbating in the bushes 50 feet away. Police could not locate the suspect, but if they do, the woman is willing to aid in prosecution.
- A man driving a Honda Civic approached a 17-year-old girl as she walked near 3200 S. Hardy Drive Friday afternoon. The man asked if she wanted a ride, and as she turned to say "no," she noticed he was masturbating. She kept walking, and the suspect sped away on Hardy Drive.
- A 21-year-old ASU man was assaulted by a neighbor at their apartment complex near 1000 E. Apache Blvd. After knocking on his neighbor's door at about 10 p.m., the student was punched in the face by the man who answered. A brief skirmish then took place between the student's companions and the people in the apartment. The student suffered a black eye, but no charges were filed.

- A Tempe woman turned in her 16-year-old son Thursday night after she found him with a joint and a bag of marijuana. Police arrested the boy, then gave him back to his mother.
- A 27-year-old man was arrested for possession of dangerous drugs Monday afternoon at Optimist Park, 1975 E. Cornell Drive. An officer approached the man for suspicious activity, then discovered he had methamphetamines on him. The man also had an outstanding warrant for failure to comply with a court order. He faces increased charges because the park is a drug-free school zone located near Fuller School.
- A 22-year-old Tempe man was arrested for stealing beer twice on the same day from the same Circle-K at 2196 E. Apache Blvd. In the first incident, at about 3:45 p.m. Saturday, the man took two 18-packs of Budweiser without paying. At about 8 p.m., the man returned with a friend. The first man took another 18-pack of Budweiser, and his friend walked out with a pack of lunch meat down his shorts, even though the clerk confronted them. Police located and arrested the first man near 1300 S. River Drive at about 9:25 p.m.
- A 20-year-old Tempe man was arrested for assault on Halloween night near Sixth Street and Mill Avenue after an off-duty officer witnessed him grab a woman's buttocks as he walked by her.
- A transient was arrested for criminal trespass early Sunday morning at the Circle-K at University Drive and Ash Avenue. The man wanted to buy beer, but because of his drunkenness he didn't understand that it was after the legal hour of alcohol sales. The man went to the locked beer cooler and shook the handle until the clerk told him to leave. He left, then returned a few minutes later and went through the same routine. He was kicked out again, and he returned again a little later. The clerk finally called police, who arrested him in the parking lot.
- A 25-year-old Tempe man was arrested for assault Halloween night at his apartment after he slapped his live-in girlfriend in the face, bit her twice on the arms and choked her.
- A girl endangered the lives of five Marcos De Niza High School students by driving her car at them on the sidewalk where they were sitting. No one was hurt or arrested.

Faculty warns: Beware of note-taking services

Professors say notes both illegal, inaccurate

By GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS AND
DEANNE BOYNTON
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Students who buy notes from commercial note taking services are being taken advantage of by the business and their haphazard habits, according to an associate of ASU's general legal counsel.

"Students are being duped in this process," said Nancy Tribbensee, associate general counsel. "They think, 'Well, gee, graduate students are taking these notes — they must be good notes.'"

But about 20 professors have told her otherwise, Tribbensee said, complaining that commercial note takers provide notes of extremely poor quality, provide misinformation and violate copyright laws which protect the intellectual ideas presented in classes.

"The company that's selling the notes isn't accountable to anyone," she said. "They can sell anything they want and call them notes. Students are not in the position to sue them, and this company knows it, so they just turn out trash."

While taking notes commercially without the permission of the professor is illegal, Tribbensee said legal action is not taken because it is nearly impossible to identify the note-taker in a large lecture class.

Writing letters and meeting with employees of the business, Class Quotes, have not solved the problem, she said.

"I've met with them in person, and they essentially just thumbed their noses at the University. And that's a polite way to put it," she said.

Chris Torout, manager of Class Quotes, said the notes are of high quality because they are taken by graduate students and upperclassmen, some of whom are enrolled in the classes.

He hasn't heard any problems about the 20 students who take notes for 43 classes, Torout said. Note-takers are not required to identify themselves to professors, he said.

"It is easier for them to be anonymous. That way nobody picks them out," Torout said.

However, professors say they have experienced problems with Class Quotes and other services in the past, adding that their copyrighted material is being stolen by commercial services, as the business has not asked for the permission of the instructors.

Philosophy professor Richard Creath said he opposes commercial note taking, as he considers it to be theft of ideas when he does not grant his permission. Notes taken in his class do not provide a substitute for the lecture and are usually inaccurate, he said.

"Nearly every professor who does teach a large lecture course complains about this, and unfortunately nothing ever gets done about it," Creath said.

Richard Dagger, an associate professor of political science, said confronting the note-taking business did not stop notes from being taken in his class without his permission.

"I went up and tried to confront the people," Dagger said. "I asked about buying some notes and they were happy to sell them to me until they found out who I was, and they wouldn't. So I raised a ruckus."

Dagger said he allowed notes to be taken for three semesters in the past, because he knew the graduate student who was taking notes and found the notes to be accurate.

However, he stopped allowing notes to be taken when a different student took notes that were inaccurate, he said. Also, performance and attendance of his classes dropped, he said, probably because his students were using the commercial notes.

"I have warned my classes that any notes being sold are not authorized and very likely not much good," Dagger said.

Carrie Barsodi, a former employee of Class Quotes, worked for the business in the fall of 1992 but quit despite earning $10 per lecture.

Barsodi said she introduced herself to instructors and told them she was taking notes commercially, but received bad reactions.

"The reason I quit after a semester was that it was not a comfortable working environment. It was obvious that the instructors didn't appreciate what I was doing," she said.

Jim Elser, an assistant professor of zoology, called the commercial notes he has seen for his classes awful, saying they are grossly inaccurate and encourage ditching.

"I can't tell on the basis of the exam result whether or not I did a lousy job explaining something, or whether the note-taker has done a lousy job taking notes and then has disseminated that information to everyone else. That's a real problem," Elser said.

Elser said the service has upset him more this semester by copyrighting the notes, which are based on his intellectual property.

"That really ticks me off," Elser said. "They're profiting from it, they're copyrighting it, they're encouraging bad student habits, they're misleading students ... we can go on and on."

Students who used commercial notes said the notes were not grossly inaccurate as professors say, but they added that they don't trust the notes completely.

Julie Knyal, a broadcasting major, said the notes she bought were useful. She said she bought the notes to accompany the ones she had taken in her political science class.

"I would never rely solely on those notes for a test," Knyal said. "You never know what they are missing."

Another student said he bought notes for a few of the lectures and found them to be fairly accurate, but costly.

"When you do that, you pay an arm and a leg for them," said Brian Andrews, a communication major.

Notes cost $2.45 per class, or $24.98 for the semester, according to a Class Quotes flier.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Growing up in New Orleans may have deprived Harry Connick Jr. of more than holiday snowfalls.

Connick needed several takes before he correctly sang the reindeer names during the introduction to "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" at a Monday night taping of his first network television special, scheduled to air Dec. 24 on CBS.

"I'm glad there's no Christmas tour," Connick told the audience.

The singer-songwriter also forgot a verse of "Sleigh Ride" and had a stagehand fetch the lyrics to "Away in a Manger" and "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas."

"Most performers would do this before the shooting day," he said, wiping a hand across his sweating brow. "I'm very embarrassed."

Connick made it harder on himself by doing without cue cards or his glasses.

For anyone else with a reindeer-deficiency, Rudolph's friends are Dasher, Dancer, Prancer, Vixen, Comet, Cupid, Donder, and Blitzen.

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — Lee Iacocca has gone from selling cars to peddling olive oil.

It's Villa Nicola extra virgin olive oil, made at the former Chrysler Corp. chairman's Italian villa.

"I got into it about eight years ago. I bought a villa in Tuscany and ended up with 5,000 olive trees," Iacocca said. "I named the villa for my father, Nicola. The olive oil bears his name, too."

Olive oil is Iacocca's hobby. Son-in-law Ned Hentz, a former advertising writer, manages the business.

"How much work do I put in? Nothing. Zip, Ned does it all," Iacocca said. "This is just an opportunity to work with him."

Villa Nicola olive oil sells for $2.39 for 17 fluid ounces, and Hentz said sales in the United States amount to about $500,000.

Iacocca, who also is trying to sell the North American Free Trade Agreement for President Clinton, says NAFTA won't affect his oil business.

"The issue with Mexico is corn oil, which they use instead of sugar. Olive oil isn't even on the NAFTA plate," he said.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Parents shouldn't use their TV sets as baby-sitters because there's too much violence, Bob "Captain Kangaroo" Keeshan says.

"Children see violence as a problem solver," said Keeshan, who portrayed the friendly captain on television from 1955 to 1984. "They must unlearn that lesson — and some never do — if they are to be socialized."

Keeshan, a national spokesman for the Coalition for American Children, made his comments Monday to the Oklahoma Institute for Child Advocacy.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Boxing gloves autographed by Sylvester Stallone, an autographed bra from Cybil Shepherd and a guitar from the band Aerosmith will be auctioned to raise money for Midwest flood victims.

Country singer Clint Black and his wife, actress Lisa Hartman Black, will be hosts of the Nov. 22 celebrity auction, dinner and dance in Houston. Proceeds will go to Operation Heartland, which Black started last summer.

The fund has donated about $130,000 to food banks, farmer advocacy groups, child care programs and homeless outreach projects, Black's publicist said.

The event follows the final night of Black's "Black & Wy" Tour with Wynonna Judd in his hometown of Houston, Texas. Black played clubs in Houston for about a decade before his 1989 single "A Better Man" made him a star.

Eagles dump McMillan

Veteran safety Erik McMillan, who appeared in six of seven games this season after being signed as a free agent in April, was waived Tuesday by the Philadelphia Eagles.

"We have some needs at other positions and this will free up a possible roster spot," coach Rich Kotite said.

Kotite said he needs another player on the active roster to take the place of the injured Byron Evans.

McMillan was the Defensive Rookie of the Year in 1988 with the New York Jets. After several disagreements with Jets coach Bruce Coslet after McMillan was demoted in 1991, McMillan signed with the Eagles.

Indians deal Slocumb to Phils

The Cleveland Indians traded right-handed pitcher Heathcliff Slocumb to the Philadelphia Phillies on Tuesday for outfielder Ruben Amaro.

The Indians obtained Slocumb from the Chicago Cubs on June 1 in a trade for minor league shortstop Jose Hernandez.

Slocumb was 3-1 with a 4.28 ERA in 20 relief appearances for the Indians, and 3-2 with one save and a 3.56 ERA in 23 relief appearances for Cleveland's Class AAA Charlotte farm club.

Amaro, 28, a switch-hitter, hit .333 in 25 games for the Phillies. He spent most of the season at Class AAA Scranton-Wilkes Barre, hitting .291 with nine home runs in 101 games.

Bucs waive veteran DeBerg

Steve DeBerg, the NFL's oldest player and Tampa Bay's starting quarterback when the season began, was waived Tuesday after appearing in only three games.

DeBerg, 39, lost the No. 1 job to Craig Erickson after the Buccaneers' season-opening loss to the Kansas City Chiefs. He played briefly in two other games and had completed 23 of 39 passes for 186 yards, one touchdown and three interceptions.

In 17 seasons, he's thrown for 32,351 yards, 187 touchdowns and 196 interceptions while playing for Tampa Bay, Kansas City, Denver and San Francisco.

"Steve has been a close friend since our days with the 49ers 15 years ago, so this was a difficult decision," Bucs coach Sam Wyche said. "However, Craig Erickson has established himself as a starting-caliber quarterback, and we believe it is time for Casey Weldon to assume the full-time backup role."

Tigers ink Fryman to five years

The Detroit Tigers decided to lock up their best young player, agreeing with infielder Travis Fryman on a five-year, $25 million contract on Tuesday.

The deal made Fryman the second-highest paid player on the team behind Cecil Fielder and the 23rd-highest in the majors with the $5 million-a-year average salary. It followed last week's $29 million, four-year extension between the Chicago White Sox and first baseman Frank Thomas.

Fryman, 24, couldn't have become a free agent until after the 1996 season.

"I'm excited that the Tigers had confidence in me to give me such a contract," Fryman said. "Now I can concentrate on nothing but baseball and do my job right."

ASU's Chris Stutts is in his second season as a Sun Devil after transferring from East Tennessee State. Stutts, who chose ASU for its facilities and the level of its competition, has been improving his game ever since his arrival in Tempe.

Sun Devil football notes

Last week Coach Bruce Snyder suspended all weightlifting, shortened practices, eliminated conditioning for the most part and had the team take off its shoulder pads halfway through Wednesday's practice to allow his team to be "fresher" against Washington last Saturday.

As a result, the Sun Devils upset then-No. 19 Washington 32-17.

Snyder, who compared last week's practices to Club Med, said the players shouldn't expect the same treatment this week in preparation for their game against California.

"The players immediately after the (Washington) game starting lobbying for that," Snyder said. "But we must condition. It will reach up and get you if you don't."

However, Snyder said that he may keep practice times shorter to ensure the quality of repetitions during drills rather than the quantity of reps.

Baker, the field goal maker

With field goals of 32, 34 and 48 yards against the Huskies Saturday, former walk-on Jon Baker again put in a consistent effort at place kicker. And his effort paid off for him as he was announced as the Pac-10 special teams player of the week.

"I don't know, there may be a better place kicker in the league, but none of them are better than him," Snyder said. "He's so good right now."

Baker has connected on 13 of 17 attempts this season, including 10 of his last 11. He is 6-of-8 from 40-49 yards and 3-of-5 from 30-39 yards. Baker's 51-yarder against Stanford, his only attempt from 50 yards or more, tied Washington State's Aaron Price for the fourth longest field goal in the Pac-10 this season.

Reversal of fortune

Don't give all the credit to tailbacks Mario Bates and George Montgomery for the resurgence of the Sun Devils' running game during the last three games. The offensive line has gone through a complete turnaround.

The main reason being, according to Snyder, that left tackle Jeff Kysar has almost completely recovered from an ankle injury suffered earlier in the year. Second, there is not much substitution from the bench. And third, a number of running plays are being called.

"Offensive linemen would much prefer to block the run than the pass anyway," Snyder said. "It allows the line to get in more rhythm."

Run for the border

A new formation in the Sun Devils' offensive package features offensive guard Farrington "Taco" Togiati, who Snyder suspects to be tipping the scales at 360 pounds, lining up in the backfield as a "blocking" back.

It's not a fluke play. The Sun Devils ran it four times against Washington.

But will Togiati get a chance to run the ball this season?

"He's lobbied already," Snyder said. "He's now thinking he's a running back, not a blocking back. I asked him to carry the ball last year on a 'fumblerooskie,' and when he hit the ground the ball squirted out."

ASU's Stutts makes all the right moves

ETSU transfer benefits from tougher competition

BY SCOTT DAVIS
STATE PRESS

Take away the ASU Karsten Golf Course, take away the fierce schedule of the ASU men's golf team, take away the gritty competition between the Sun Devils and their opponents and say goodbye to senior Chris Stutts.

Stutts, in his second season at ASU after transferring from East Tennessee State, made his decision to transfer based on the level of ASU's golf facilities and competition. He felt they were both a part of one of the top programs in the nation.

Not only is the competition Stutts has encountered while at ASU harsh at a national level, but it is just as demanding on the team level.

"Here, the level of competition is much higher," Stutts said. "I get a lot more out of my game because of the competition amongst the team."

Based on Stutts' golfing resume previous to enrolling at ASU, it appeared improvement wasn't really necessary.

He was the 1989 Tennessee Junior Golfer of the Year before attending ETSU. At ETSU, Stutts was the Buccaneer's top golfer during his sophomore season. He won two tournaments as an individual and finished the season with a 73.8 stroke average.

After two seasons, Stutts realized he could compete at a higher level. He came in contact with former ASU coach Steve Loy in 1992 and set up a recruiting trip. Little did Stutts know that when he arrived in Tempe, Loy would announce his resignation.

"I never played under Coach Loy, he just recruited me," Stutts said. "On my recruiting trip, he resigned. Fortunately, when I decided to transfer, there were some scholarships available."

ASU may get revenge, but with no singing

UofA smelling rose, but Sun Devils standing in way

Once again, I've got a lot on my mind, so sit down and shut up. Don't question, just accept.

Revenge is a dish best served cold

As everybody knows by now, the ASU football team upset the then-No. 19

Washington Huskies Saturday evening. This could be considered surprising.

Later that night, UCLA stomped all over UofA. Since the much-heralded "Desert Swarm" or "Cactus Curtain" defense, whatever you want to call it, collectively fell on its face, this also could be considered surprising.

Right now, the Wildcats are 4-1 in the Pac-10 with three conference games remaining. The Sun Devils are 2-3 in the Pac-10 also with three conference games remaining. If you look at the schedules for UofA, ASU and the Wildcats' two chief competitors for the Rose Bowl bid — UCLA and USC — the Nov. 26 game able."

During Stutts' rookie season with the Sun Devils, he struggled at first. Last fall, Stutts never really got his game going. It wasn't until the John Burns Intercollegiate in February that Stutts lived up to the reputation he had established at ETSU. He finished the tournament in fourth place.

From that point on, Stutts was one of the top Sun Devils in the lineup. In his next tournament — The Ping/Arizona Invitational — Stutts tied for first before losing in a playoff to Georgia Tech's Jason Walters.

"Chris came here last fall and played mediocre in the fall during the transition period," coach Randy Lein said. "The depth of the team may have overwhelmed him. He was going from a small pond to a big pond."

"He was somewhat intimidated, but he played himself through the fall. By the time spring came along, he played very well."

This season, Stutts is not suffering from any sort of fall fatigue. He led the Sun Devils at the Jerry Pate Intercollegiate in Birmingham, Ala. He finished tied for 11th with fellow Sun Devil, Todd Demsey.

Stutts felt his three-day score of one-over par 217 at Shoal Creek during the Intercollegiate could have been better. He added that he needs to become more consistent if he is to improve his game.

"At Shoal Creek, I shot 74-67-76," Stutts said. "I need to level that out. The 67 was nice, but the 76 wasn't too nice."

Regardless of the inconsistent play, Lein is satisfied with Stutts so far this fall. He credits Stutts' work ethics and minor swing changes as the main reasons for his surge to the higher ranks of collegiate golf.

"With the added distance off the tee and being a year older and smarter, he's at the next level," Lein said. "He's close to that point where you know you're there to win individual titles. A year ago, he was satisfied with finishing in the top 10."

Stutts doesn't want to stop until he reaches the top. His scores are steadily declining, and he said he has learned more about his game during each tournament.

Another thing Stutts has learned during his stay with the Sun Devils is that his teammates are always there for him.

"They've helped me out a lot," Stutts said. "Especially when I wasn't playing well last fall. They've been real supportive."

After next year's NCAA Championships in June, Stutts' collegiate golf career will come to an end. However, rather than head immediately toward the PGA Tour, Stutts will remain in school until December to earn his degree.

"My main goal is to get a degree," Stutts said. "Professional golf would be nice, but I realize it would be tough. I'm ready to face reality."

between the Sun Devils and Wildcats could be huge. This can't be considered surprising.

I want everybody to consider this not-very-implausible scenario: UofA wins its next two games (Oregon and at Cal) and UCLA wins out the rest of its schedule, including a win over USC in the Los Angeles Coliseum six days before the 'Cats-Devils showdown. The result — UofA must win in Sun Devil Stadium to get to the Rose Bowl.

I'll repeat that — the Wildcats will have to beat, not tie, the Sun Devils to reach the promised land of Pasadena for the first time ever in school history.

Don't you love it? ASU finally gets to have its revenge for the horrors of 1982 and 1985. In each of those years, the Sun Devils only had to tie the hated Wildcats to smell the roses. Each time, they came up short.

Now the shoe is on the other foot. Will the Wildcats be up to the task, or will they choke from the weight around their necks? Remember, UofA has never come this close to the Rose Bowl. The pressure mounts as you read this.

ASU could blow the whole deal by beating UCLA, but what the hell? It's fun to imagine.

No, the "Wave" does not count

There is a real problem around this campus and it stinks to high heaven. We all know what it is — the lack of any sort of tradition regarding athletics.

At Clemson, they have Howard's Rock and the unforgettable sound of 81,473 kazooes playing "Tiger Rag." At Oklahoma, they have the Sooner Schooner. Ohio State has the band dotting the "I". Hell, even at Oregon State — OREGON STATE! — the team touches the Beaver statue.

What do we have here in Tempe? Nothing. Well, we do have "making the 'A' team," but that's a different sort of sport, if you know what I mean (and I think you do).

Face it, the Sun Devils and their fans have nothing to get them all riled up for a game. When Traveler charges out onto the field to the tune of Fleetwood Mac's "Tusk," you bet USC fans get goosebumps. ASU has nothing that would even stir a slight chill.

I guess the only traditions we have are pre-game drinking, during-game drinking and being drunken idiots after the game. I've seen you guys after the game yelling at the Sun Devils as they come off the field. You are all lunkheads.

Cheer, cheer for old ASU

Another rotten thing about the Sun Devils is that nobody, and I mean nobody, knows the ASU fight song, "Maroon and Gold." Well, some people do, but they're the old boosters who get plowed in Lot 59 before going to sit in the Eoge level.

At Tennessee, everybody knows "Rocky Top". If you've watched a few weekends of college football on TV, you probably know Michigan's "Hail to the Victors." The Notre Dame fight song is part of America's national heritage. After a touchdown here, however, Sun Devil Stadium erupts in ... silence.

For your information, this is ASU's fight song:

*Fight Devils down the field,
Fight with your might and don't ever yield long may you co-lors outshine all oth-ers
Echo from the buttes, give 'em Hell, 'Devils.
So cheer, cheer for ASU
Fight for Maroon & Gold
For it's hail! hail! the gang's all here, and it's onward to vic-to-ry ..."
You can thank me later.*

The Honda Doctor's Helpful Honda Hints

Tip # 13. During the cooler season, run your air conditioner 10 minutes each week. This keeps your A/C seals, gaskets and components properly lubed, so they'll be in top shape when you really need them. Bonus Tip: Run your A/C with your defroster in the winter, as a dehumidifier.
