Raises come second to faculty, staff says

Coor says staff not neglected in fight for pay

By MELANIE K. SELCHO
STATE PRESS

Classified staff officials on Thursday voiced complaints that the classified staff is coming in second to faculty for salary increases.

Robert Curry, Classified Staff Council president, said local newspaper articles about salary increases and a recent broadcast on KAET-TV featuring ASU President Lattie Coor are giving classified staff members the perception that faculty raises are more important to ASU administrators than staff pay hikes.

"In several articles where salaries were mentioned, either when (Coor) was quoted or in the text of the article, staff felt that faculty salaries have been emphasized and staff salaries have not," Curry said.

Coor said Thursday that his comments on the broadcast left out classified staff because he was asked a question that pertained specifically to faculty, but his commitment is to both groups. Coor said he supports both faculty and staff pay increases in "every ounce and in every way."

"I've tried (to include), in all of my comments, that we are going for major increases in salaries for both the faculty and staff," he said.

Coor said classified staff can be confident in his promise, because ASU has always been consistent in its efforts to include them in salary discussions.

"One of the great things about ASU is that we have consistently kept our commitment," he said.

Curry said he thinks Coor is receptive to and working for staff increases, but faculty get more media attention because they are more visible.

"In some cases, President Coor was actually saying salaries, he may have been talking about salaries for everyone," he said. "Faculty visibility is more than classified staff, but in all my conversations with President Coor, he's always mentioned faculty and staff and being focused on getting higher salaries for both groups."

Curry said one reason classified staff may feel left out of the discussion is that they are only vocal among themselves.

"They are vocal on an individual level," he said. "What I think classified staff need to do more than they have done is to communicate to legislators and University officials. That's all to our benefit, and it's the responsibility of each classified staff."

Coor said he will continue to work for a "major salary increase" but that any actual raise will be determined by the governor and legislature.

Another member of the council, electrician Jim Creech, said his perception also has been that classified staff does not take as much priority as faculty in the salary issue.

"Not once did (Coor) mention staff," he said. "It's faculty."

Because of the complaints, Coor issued a letter to be printed on the front page of this month's classified staff bulletin.

The letter states that he is committed to ensuring the University does not suffer the drastic budget cuts it faced last year and increasing salaries for classified staff.

Jay Reeder, a councilman from Facilities Management, answered Creech's complaint, saying classified staff must look at the intent of Coor's comments, not just the individual words.

"If faculty will be taken care of, we will be taken care of too," he said.

Reeder said administrators are working for salary increases despite the lack of publicity.

"They've been real receptive to our pleadings," he said. "Dr. Coor has stated straight out that salary increases are a number one priority for classified staff."

Marcia, former 'Brady' kid, gives ASU birth control talk

By JEREMY STEIN
STATE PRESS

Actress Maureen McCormick, better known as Marcia Brady, addressed a curious crowd of ASU students Thursday night in a lecture touching on topics ranging from unplanned pregnancies to life as a cast member of "The Brady Bunch."

McCormick's appearance at ASU marked her latest stop on a nationwide college campus tour aimed at educating people about contraceptives. The lecture, entitled "Birth Control Matters In Arizona," drew a crowd of over 100 students at the MU.

"The number one reason (for educating people on contraceptives) is because there are more than 3.5 million unintended pregnancies each year in the United States alone," McCormick said. "Half of those pregnancies happened to women who were using contraceptives."

McCormick's lecture ranged from talking about the number of unplanned pregnancies to memories of Tiger, the Bradys' dog. She said, however, that the main reason she came to ASU was to help educate people on the proper use of contraceptives.

She said failures in using contraceptives are the usually the result of women who incorrectly or inconsistently use them.

The "Birth Control Matters" series travels to college campuses around country educating people on the uses, effects, and types of contraceptives. ASU was the program's final stop of 1993, although it will continue its tour of colleges in 1994.

Prior to McCormick speaking, John Mattox, an obstetrician and gynecologist at Good Samaritan Medical Center, discussed the advantages and disadvantages of using different contraceptives.

A central point stressed by both McCormick and Mattox was that people should not be afraid to consult their physician and ask them about different contraceptive possibilities.

Sandra Kims, a senior justice studies major, thought the lecture contained good information, but was nothing new.

"I thought it was a good lecture," said Kims, adding that the only reason she attended the lecture was to see McCormick. "The doctor presented valuable information, some valuable statistics.

Culture ahoy

Junior, finance major and President of Chinese Student Association, Nien-Chih Ho, participated in a choreographed dance for the "Festdevil-93 Feel The Heat" Cultural Day. Nien-Chih Ho is from Taiwan, Republic of China. See related story on page 2.

I'm not sure if it was anything I haven't heard before."

Mattox said that there are four things that each person should keep in mind when deciding on a contraceptive:

- Every method of contraceptives has its advantages and disadvantages.
- Each person should get as much information as possible about different contraceptives, and then choose the one which best fits them. "That may be abstinence," he said.
- While there has been substantial skepticism toward hormonal contraceptives, Mattox said they have a number of attributes.
- Having the knowledge about a contraceptive does not mean that it will be effective for everyone. "Education does not equal motivation," he said.

While the majority of the lecture focused on contraceptives, the session ended with the audience asking questions about "The Brady Bunch."

Cultural celebration graces ASU

By JOY E. BEASON
STATE PRESS

The spotlight was on the West Lawn Thursday, as members of different cultural groups performed traditional songs and dances while others sold cultural foods as a part of this week's Homecoming activities.

"It's growth, it is all about growth," said Clarence Enos, member of the Association for Community Enhancement, about the cultural day experience. "It allows people to see what other cultures are like, and it is encouraging to see so many different clubs participating."

The Indian Students Association, Native American Dancers, Chinese Student Association, the Irish Step Dancers, the South Mountain Gospel Choir, group Mex-Sal and the Ukrainian Folk Dancers performed their traditional songs and dances throughout the day.

Several other students could also be found dancing to the group Mex-Sal's music.

Meanwhile, the groups sold food including Indian fry bread, greens, bean pie, nachos, noodles, rice cakes, creme puff pastries, Indian tacos, fried bee hoon, fried wontons, postelillo, relleno de papa and hot wing dinners.

"People stop at the tables and ask about our culture," said Jorge Leon, president of the Puerto Rican Student Association. "They are people who are here on their own time. That is a very important aspect of this event."

Leon added that more students turned out for this year's celebration than last year's festivities.

Aside from the celebration, students were quick to comment on educational benefits to be drawn from the event.

"It is very important," Leon said. "This is a very diverse campus. Anything to enhance that principle is important, and it is very good to see people from such a variety of cultures and traditions to share in the experience."

"Minorities are growing. They have a lot to offer, and events like this help a great deal to achieve this wonderful sharing experience".

Others used the day to educate the Valley's youth. Debra Gross, teacher and former ASU student, brought her class from Mesa Junior High on a field trip to culture day.

Gross said she hoped her students would benefit from the exposure to different cultures.

"I hope they take back (that) we can all be different, but we are all the same," Gross said. "I think exposing them to culture day allows them to see different kinds of people."

DeConcini: Ethics committee dealings influenced vote

PHOENIX (AP) — Sen. Dennis DeConcini says his experience with the Senate Ethics Committee was a factor in his vote against forcing Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood to turn over diaries as part of an investigation into alleged sexual harassment by the Oregon Republican.

DeConcini, an Arizona Democrat, was among only six senators out of 100 to vote against the move Tuesday night. The other five were all Republicans.

He admitted he is not friends with Oregon senator and that it appears Packwood was abusive to women.

"But to me, this was not an issue of sexual harassment, or what have you," DeConcini told The Arizona Republic in a Washington interview published Thursday. "It's an issue of how much authority you want to give a non-judicial, non-statutory committee."

He said the committee sought the diary without producing an affidavit or other evidence pointing to possible misconduct.

DeConcini, as one of the five senators linked to since-convicted financier Charles Keating Jr., went before the Ethics Committee in 1991.

Wong doing better

PHOENIX (AP) — Mesa Mayor Willie Wong was in fair condition Thursday at Barrow Neurological Institute, officials said.

Wong, 45, has been hospitalized since Oct. 26 when he was admitted for fatigue. Officials at Mesa Lutheran said initial tests showed Wong had a small mass in his brain.

Barrow doctors completed their assessment of Wong's condition, but hospital spokeswoman Debra Gelbart said she couldn't elaborate because of a request from the family.

Scottsdale moves to save scenic Saddleback Mountain

SCOTTSDALE (AP) — City officials are have gone to court in an effort to obtain control of a strategically placed piece of desert property.

The city filed court papers Wednesday, seeking immediate possession of Saddleback Mountain after learning the city was apparently not the high bidder in a federal auction of the property near Fountain Hills.

The high bidder has not been revealed by the Resolution Trust Corp., which is handling the sale.

A spokeswoman for the Salt River-Pima Maricopa Indian Community said Wednesday that the tribe most likely is the high bidder on the 712-acre parcel.

Scottsdale officials worry that the Indian community could develop the property despite federal and city regulations stipulating that it must remain undeveloped.

Tribal officials, whose land borders the property to the south, have said they want to preserve the property.

Neither Scottsdale nor the tribe will disclose their bids. The RTC's reserve price for the land is $2.8 million.

The court is scheduled to hear on Nov. 12 Scottsdale's request for an order of immediate possession, which would give the land to the city until the court ruled on the overall condemnation.

Hospital cuts positions

PHOENIX (AP) — Good Samaritan Regional Medical Center, trying to cut costs because the length of hospital stays has decreased, has eliminated 30 management positions.

Chief Executive Steve Seiler said the hospital may have to tighten its belt even beyond the $1.4 million of job cuts announced earlier this week.

"As we move into 1994, we need to further reduce our operational costs through tight expense management, attrition, job consolidation and transfers and possibly additional staff reductions," he said in a memo to employees.

Posey Cartentier, a 30-year resident of Rambla Orienta in the Malibu hills, examines her residence for the first time since it was destroyed in the Old Topanga firestorm.

Malibu locals return to ruins

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Alice Kavalgian cried as she trudged through the ashes of her home. "This is it," she said, pointing to the clothes she was wearing. "I don't even have a sweater."

Kavalgian was among thousands of residents chased from this celebrity enclave by an arson wildfire that roared out of the Santa Monica Mountains on Tuesday and burned 200 houses. One person was killed.

Some returned Thursday to see whether any of their past was still standing. Others waited at roadblocks hastily put up to allow fire or aircraft bombing runs over the remaining hot spots.

By Thursday, firefighters had contained 70 percent of the 18,500-acre wildfire, one of a series of blazes that have destroyed 1,000 homes, blackened 500,000 acres and injured nearly 200 people in Southern California since Oct. 26. Several were blamed on arsonists.

The Malibu fire claimed actor Sean Penn's $4 million Spanish-style mansion along with Ali McGraw's home, with its panoramic view of the Pacific Ocean.

"I'm grateful to be alive. I'm grateful to my friends who helped save my animals. And I'm grateful to all the firefighters for their extraordinary efforts in saving so many people's lives," the star of the 1970 hit movie "Love Story" said in a statement released through her publicist.

Many celebrity homes, including the 100 mansions in the exclusive Malibu Colony, were spared.

With cool sea breezes mixing with wind gusts in the hills, crews and firefighting aircraft focused Thursday on the hot spots around Fernwood in Topanga Canyon.

Forecasters weren't expecting a return of the hot, dry Santa Ana winds from the deserts northeast of Los Angeles that fanned the worst of the fires.

Mike Pierson, 33, returned to his wood-sided house to find it intact. His relief, however, was subdued.

"My cousin's home is gone, my best friend's home is gone. Every person I grew up with, their home is gone," Pierson said. "I look here and I can't even tell where people live."

Chris Mitchell sat in her fully loaded car in the middle of a highway, unable to get home.

"Last night we rode our bikes up the highway so we know our house is all right," she said. "But we're tired of driving around and living out of our car."

Nelson Carpentier returned to his Las Flores Canyon lot to find his home destroyed and his restored 1970 Mercedes-Benz a burned out shell. Sitting next to the car were the remains of a 20-foot Wellcraft boat.

As family members dug spoons, metal tools, ceramic cups and pots out of the ash, Carpentier expressed anger at the arsonist who authorities said set the fire.

"It makes me sick," he said. "I did nothing to that guy and he destroyed everything I own."

The blaze claimed its first fatality Wednesday night.

British movie director Duncan Gibbins, 41, died of burns suffered when he tried to rescue a Bluepoint Siamese he had taken a liking to. A burned friend, Ron Mass, 40, remained in critical condition.

The cat survived and was brought by sheriff's deputies to a Los Angeles County animal center in Agoura Hills on Wednesday. It was badly singed, with burned paws and ears.

A $250,000 reward was posted for information leading to the capture and conviction of whoever set the Malibu fire.

Authorities searched for clues and questioned a witness who saw two men in a pickup near the fire's point of origin.

In Riverside County, firefighters Thursday contained an 8,000-acre brush fire that destroyed or damaged 11 homes, a county fire dispatcher said. The fire was caused Tuesday by a downed power line.

Canada's new prime minister sworn in OTTAWA (AP) — Jean Chretien became Canada's 20th prime minister Thursday and immediately canceled a multi-billion dollar helicopter deal, launched a job creation program and repeated his demand for renegotiating parts of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

The Liberal Party leader held his first Cabinet meeting just three hours after he was sworn in by Governor General Ray Hnatyshyn, putting an end to nine years of Progressive Conservative Party rule.

Chretien moved quickly to fulfill his campaign promises.

His first act was to cancel contracts for 43 EH-101 military helicopters, which were to have been built by a British-Italian consortium with Canadian participation. That deal was worth $3.6 billion.

The lack of a Russian threat has removed the need for submarine-hunting helicopters and the money can be better used elsewhere, he said.

Chretien designated Treasury Board President Art Eggleton to set up a $4.5 billion public works program aimed at creating 120,000 jobs and gave the go-ahead for making $1.5 billion available over the next two years. That money is to be matched by $2 billion each from provincial and municipal governments.

Chretien, 59, a small-town Quebec lawyer, told a news conference that he has spoken to both President Clinton and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gotari about the free trade agreement.

"They are aware of our concerns," he said. "They are aware of what our party program is and that we intend to sit down with them, even though time is pressing, to gain satisfaction."

Chretien said he will withhold final approval of the agreement until he can renegotiate articles concerning subsidies, dumping and energy.

NAFTA is now before the U.S. Congress, where it faces an uphill battle. Clinton concedes he doesn't yet have enough votes to win passage.

Even if NAFTA fails, the bilateral U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement remains in effect. But failing renegotiation of that, "abrogation is there as an option," Chretien said.

He said he intends to have very good relations with the United States, but stressed: "Business is business and friendship is friendship and the two cannot be confused."

Chretien named a 22-member Cabinet.

The left-of-center Liberals swept to victory in last week's general election, winning 177 seats in the 295-seat House of Commons. Kim Campbell's Progressive Conservatives, who had governed for nine years, all but a few months under Brian Mulroney, fell from 155 seats to a mere two in the worst political clobbering in Canadian history.

The separatist Bloc Quebecois became the official opposition, winning 54 seats, followed by the Reform Party, a western-based conservative movement that won 52. The socialist New Democratic Party fell from 43 seats to nine, and one independent won a seat.

With unemployment at 11.2 percent of the work force, a government budget deficit of $26 billion and a national debt approaching $375 billion, the economy is Chretien's first priority.

"We were very clear in our program that we really felt that the root cause of the deficit and the root cause of unemployment were the same — that is to say a failing economy — and that's what we really want to address," said Paul Martin, the new minister of finance.

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BRAVO — to the classified staff members, for speaking up for themselves in the fight to implement pay increases across the board. Staff officials complained Thursday that University administrators were placing staff pay raises lower on the priority list than faculty pay raises.

However, they should be more outwardly vocal and bring the issue to the attention of the Legislature as well as ASU administrators.

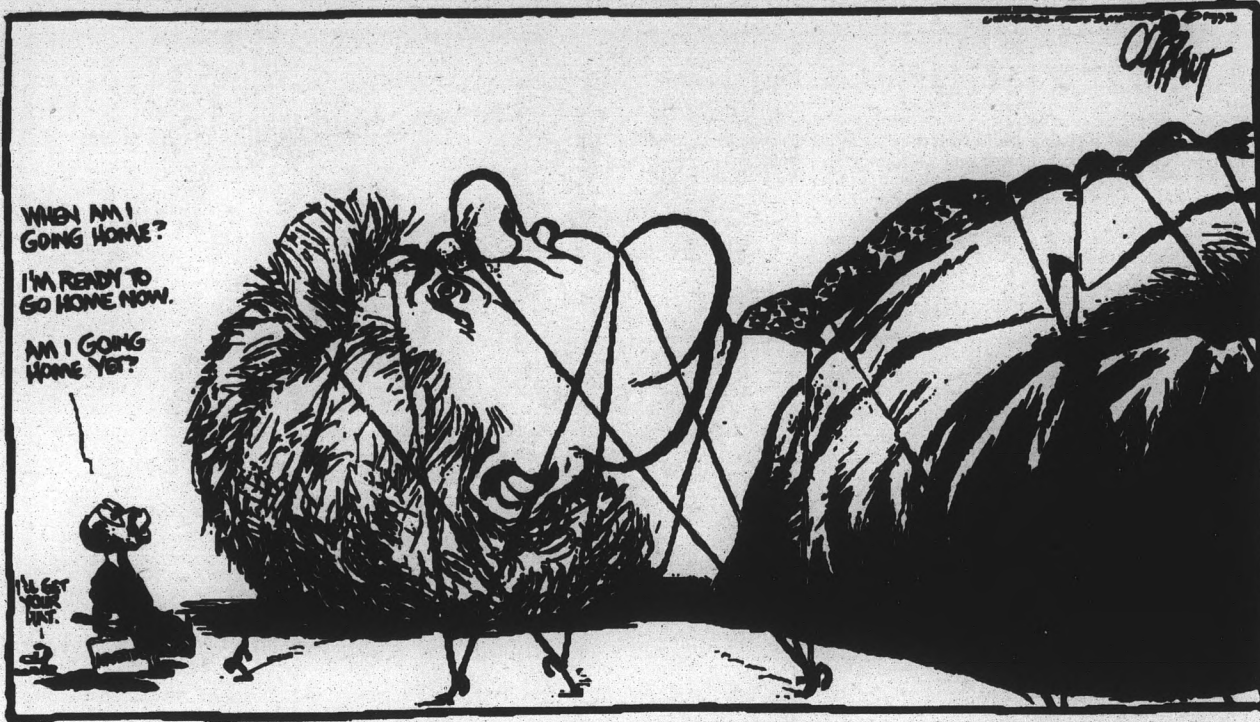

BRAVO — to the Arizona Board of Regents, for unanimously approving a funding request for a new four-year liberal arts college in Pima County. The college may be offering classes as soon as 1995. The good thing about the new college is that it will be a separate entity instead of another extension of UofA. That means the college will have full departments, instead of department branches. In contrast, ASU West (and the proposed ASU East) is a branch of the main University campus, and does not have its own full departments. Thus, students at the new university won't have to come all the way to the main campus to take a class they couldn't get at the branch campus.

BOO — sort of, to ASA, for proposing the use of tuition money to make available scholarships for sixth-graders. Many ASU students are strapped for tuition as it is. But BRAVO to the idea. Most sixth-graders are indeed aware of their parents' (or parent's) financial situation, and knowing that there is money to fall back on can give them a new hope and keep them from dropping out during high school. The only real problem with ASA's proposal is where the money will come from — students currently at ASU.

BOO — to the recent wave of Kurdish terrorist attacks which have broken out across Europe. Protesting the treatment of Kurds living in Turkey, militants attacked over 60 targets on Thursday. Although it is understandable that the history of injustice angers many Kurds, sparking off a civil war between the 400,000 Kurds and 1.5 million other Turkish citizens living in Germany is hardly a positive step forward.

BRAVO — to Maureen McCormick, alias Marcia Brady, for that groovy talk on birth control. Although not the most graceful speaker (she's used to TV acting, after all — and on the "Brady Bunch," at that), she did draw a standing-room-only crowd last night in the MU basement (something doctors promoting birth control could never have done alone).

BRAVO — to ASU's ROTC program, for continuing to remember those Americans who served, died, became prisoners of war, or are still missing in action in Vietnam and in other conflicts. They will hold a 24-hour vigil beginning noon, Nov. 9, at the flag pole outside Tempe City Hall. The vigil will serve as a reminder that those soldiers who suffered and died were supposed to have done so for a just cause. It is up to us to make sure they did not die in vain.

Arizona's complex legal codes regulate 'unnatural' intercourse

Ever wonder about the legality of various sexual acts? You will be surprised to discover what conduct can get you put in jail.

Our survey begins with what may be Arizona's most mysteriously worded criminal statute. A.R.S. § 13-1411 reads: "A person who knowingly and without force commits the infamous crime against nature with an adult is guilty of a class 3 misdemeanor." What exactly is the "infamous crime against nature?" No, it's not the chopping down of a tree, or the polluting of a river. Apparently, everyone is supposed to know that the "infamous crime against nature" is synonymous with "sodomy."

In State vs. Potts, 75 Ariz. 211 (1953), the Supreme Court of Arizona defined sodomy as follows: "Sodomy proper is the carnal copulation of human beings in other than the natural manner; that is against nature and per annum." In Potts, the court thus held that "penetration of the mouth of another human being by the male organ" was not an act of sodomy because it was not "per annum."

One Harvey Poole was charged with having engaged "in an act of sexual intercourse with a beast, to-wit: a Holstein cow." Did Poole commit a crime against nature? The answer is yes. Because the "crime against nature" embraces "bestiality." "Bestiality is a connection between a human being and a brute of the opposite sex." See State vs. Poole, 59 Ariz. 44 (1942).

Let one get the impression from my explanation of § 13-1411 that oral sex is legal in this state, I bring your attention to § 13-1412 which reads: "A person who knowingly and without force commits, in any unnatural manner, any lewd and lascivious act upon or with the body or any part or member thereof of a male or female adult, with the intent of arousing, appealing to or gratifying the lust, passion or sexual desires of such persons, is guilty of a class 3 misdemeanor."

We do know that the statute prohibits both fellatio and cunnilingus, because the Supreme Court of Arizona has said so. See, e.g. Faber v. State, 62 Ariz. 16 (1944). (Because both "fellatio" and "cunnilingus" are defined well enough in any good dictionary — although the words are mysteriously absent from some abridged dictionaries — I need not offer any further explanation.)

It is also clear that the "lewd and lascivious" statute prohibits "act[s] of masturbation by one adult male upon another adult male." State vs. Mortimer, 105 Ariz. 472 (1970). The court more broadly stated that any act "employed by homosexuals to achieve sexual gratification" is "unnatural" and violates the "lewd and lascivious" statute. The court went even further, however, and suggested that any sexual act engaged in "for purposes of having children" would violate the statute. Does this mean that an act of heterosexual sexual intercourse, where birth control is used, is illegal because the act is not engaged in for the purpose of having children? Who knows! But it is certainly something to think about the next time you slip on a condom.

MICHAEL KANTOR
Columnist

It should come as no surprise that in this state, adultery is illegal. See A.R.S. § 13-1408.

But did you know that according to § 13-1409, "open and notorious cohabitation" is illegal? Yes, this means that it is illegal for an unmarried couple to live together. See State vs. Griffin, 58 Ariz. 187 (1941).

I conclude with a brief discussion of what is commonly known as "statutory rape." Unlike the statutes referred to above, which are only class 3 misdemeanors (meaning you can only be sentenced to a maximum of 30 days incarceration for violation of those statutes), statutory rape is a felony. You don't ever want to be convicted of a felony.

If a sexual act is engaged in between two persons, one being exactly 18, and the other being one day younger, and thus one day shy of being 18, the 18-year-old has violated § 13-1405. Even the Arizona Legislature saw the silliness of this result. Beginning January 1, 1994, if the defendant is less than 19 and not more than 24 months older than the victim, than the statute does not apply. But this still creates a somewhat unsatisfactory result, for a person who is one day shy of 19 may legally have sexual intercourse with a person who is 17. But the following day, when the older person turns 19, the very same act of sexual intercourse becomes a felony.

Now it may be that no one ever gets prosecuted for violating any of the aforementioned statutes. But if that's so, why are they still on the books?

On the other hand, I note that the College of Law does not allow the U.S. military to conduct job interviews at the law school because of its policy of discriminating against homosexuals. Why should the law school be concerned about employers who discriminate against people who engage in illegal acts? It is true that some may define sodomy as a victimless crime, but so may the use of drugs be defined.

In fact, with the AIDS epidemic, it may be said that sodomy is not at all a victimless crime, because it is well documented that anal sex spreads that virus. Given the deadly danger of that virus, it may certainly be said that engaging in sodomy is much more dangerous to one's health than smoking a joint. But one act of sodomy can kill you.

This column is not intended as an attack on homosexuality. I only wish to point out that (1) it makes no sense for someone to say that we need to fight a "war on drugs," but at the same time express moral outrage that anyone could suggest that homosexual activity should be illegal; (2) the law school policy forbidding the U.S. military to interview on campus makes absolutely no sense; and (3) the Arizona legislature is stupid.

Michael Kantor is a third year law student. His columns appear on Fridays.

STATE PRESS Letters to the editor

The State Press welcomes and encourages written response from our readers on any topic. All letters must be typed, double-spaced and no longer than two pages to be eligible for publication. Please include your full name, class standing and major (or any other affiliation with the University) and phone number. Only signed letters will be considered for publication. Requests for anonymity will be granted only with an appropriate reason. Letters are subject to editing by the opinion page editor for factual errors and print space availability. Letters containing obvious factual errors will be rejected. All letters must either be brought in person with a photo I.D. to the State Press front desk in the basement of the Matthews Center, or addressed to State Press, 15 Matthews Center, Arizona State University, Tempe Ariz., 85287-1502.

Kudos to State Press for encouraging fanatics

Just a quick note thanking the State Press for writing on "The Spiritual Search" (Oct. 28) and that the "College years best time to seek out and identify" religion. This will now rationalize every religious fanatic to come prostitute themselves at the ASU campus to gullible ... uh, "searching" college students in order to steal the student's soul. This proselytization not only insults their own beliefs but the belief of every person who is not of their faith. Thanks, State Press, for encouraging the practice of every religious nut-case to preach at ASU.

Domestic abuse's victims have options available

I was glad to see that Jessica Klinger brought attention to domestic abuse (Nov. 2). I used to think that such things happened when both partners preferred to resort to violence or name calling than to reason and compromise and I associated this behavior with lack of education. However, I've changed my mind and learned a lot. Despite our college degrees, despite my fairly intellectual job at ASU, I have been abused by my husband both physically and verbally. Having grown up blissfully ignoring the existence of such abuse, I was thrown into absolute confusion and shame by it.

Since it shouldn't happen to me, since it was so abnormal to me, since he felt so bad because of it, surely it would stop — but it didn't. I lived in fear, of his embarrassing telephone calls at work, of his having a fit if I had to stay late, of losing my job if I didn't (how could I let myself down by explaining the situation?), of any other man talking to me. I stayed with him and let friendships go because I thought that if he were reassured of his importance he'd stop — he didn't. The reasons for his behavior, the reasons for my trying to accommodate it, hope it would go away and not let anyone know about it don't matter so much as the fact that as long as a woman puts up with it, there's no need for the man to change. While she may think she's doing her best, she's doing neither one of them any good.

I thank God for shelters (and for the ASU students who do volunteer work at them). There you get practical advice that most likely your friends can't give you, you find out you're not alone in what has happened to you or in how it has affected you, you're not incurably mad, and you're safe! Your attachment to your abuser is understood but you learn that you can't make anyone else change (although your leaving can precipitate a change). I spent a month in one and have the greatest admiration for the women there. Many had left their homes with their children and nothing else. At least I had a job which provided both finances and some self respect and I'd never wanted to subject a child to my circumstances.

I used to look at the people walking around the campus and envy their freedom. Now, having learned some horrible statistics, I wonder how many people are hiding monsters. To anyone in such a situation I would say: Please ask for help — you both need it and he's not likely to look for it first. And remember that it's much braver of you to leave than to stay with things as they are, wishing one of you were dead or in a mental hospital. Things can get better.

Too much of one story, two copies of another

On Wednesday's (Nov. 3) State Press, you apologized for omitting some of Jessica Klinger's article. Listen, you don't need to apologize to the students and faculty, instead we should be thanking you for offering some relief from her drivel.

And another thing, when I read Tuesday's (Nov. 2) State Press, I experienced some deja vu. No, I didn't read yet another "100 pound purse filled with alcohol and cigarettes" story written by Laurie Notaro, or another "Man found masturbating" story in the police reports section. No, it wasn't those things at all. On page 9, the same article was printed twice. Both articles were about some study and the "culturally aware." It's just that you omitted the more important story about some art thieves getting off the hook. I would have liked to read that story.

Other than that, you're doing a great job of putting out a newspaper that almost rivals both the Phoenix Gazette and the Arizona Republic, although that doesn't say much.

Highway confrontations can lead to unexpected, bloody outcomes

How do you react when someone cuts you off in traffic or commits some other act of motoring rudeness? Give him a blast from your horn? Maybe roll down the window and thrust a finger toward the sky? Pull up next to him and glare or even shout an obscenity?

Ah, those were the good old days, when civilized people could have an occasional uncivilized outburst without having it escalate into hand-to-hand combat or worse.

Now most of us know better. A beep of the horn, giving the bird, or even a shout can be the modern equivalent of the glove-in-the-face challenge to a duel to the death.

Alfred Woodbury, 45, knows better. An ex-cop and now a state child abuse investigator, he is street-smart.

But as the flower children liked to say, stuff happens.

And Woodbury's blood pressure went up when he was driving on Chicago's Roosevelt Road and, he says, a big tractor-trailer truck swerved and almost forced him off the street.

"I wrote down his license number and the name of the barrel company he works for and I thought I'd contact his employer.

"But it made me so mad that I pulled up next to him, rolled down my window and told him a few things. I really can't repeat them.

"He yelled back and told me to pull over. It was stupid, I know. I know, I know. It was real stupidity.

"But I pulled over. I guess I thought, I'm a former police officer, been with the Department of Children and Family Services for seven years, I'm wearing a suit, I can handle myself — what could happen to me?

"So I got out of my car and I stood there. He jumped out of his truck and he's got this big tire iron.

"That's when I knew what could happen to me. I could get killed.

"He comes running up and starts swinging the tire iron. I put up my arms to protect myself and he gave me about four whacks on the arms with that thing.

"At first I was so stunned I just stood there. Then I took off running.

"There were some guys on the street, and they came running over, so he jumped back into his truck and revved it up. He bumped into two cars and then he just kept going.

MIKE ROYKO

Services

"I got in my car to follow him, then I changed my mind and went over to the outfit he worked for, which wasn't far away. But nobody in charge was there. So I decided to go back to the crime scene.

"And there he was talking to some policemen. I guess he figured he should go back or he'd be in trouble for hit and run.

"I was glad to see the cops there, so I went over and introduced myself and showed them my state ID card.

"They said we could sign cross complaints against each other. That was fine with me. But when we got to the station, you know what they did? They arrested me for aggravated assault. I asked them why. He was the one who assaulted me with a tire iron.

"They said he told them I had a knife and threatened him. That was crazy. I don't carry a knife. When I was a cop, I didn't even carry a weapon when I was off-duty because I knew it could get you in trouble.

"I told them that if I was going to be charged, I wanted to sign a complaint against him. At first they said I couldn't. The sergeant said he couldn't take the complaint and the watch commander wasn't around.

"I know the rules and I finally got to sign a complaint against him for aggravated battery.

"But there was something suspicious going on. That stuff about me having a knife. If they come up with a knife when we go to court, then that'll tell me there might have been some funny business between the driver and the police before I got back there.

"I shouldn't have been arrested. He attacked me with that tire iron, I didn't attack him. When I got out of my car, I thought we'd just jaw at each other."

Of course, if you hadn't stopped and got out of your car in the first place ...

"That's right. My wife keeps telling me how stupid I was, that I could have been killed. You should hear her."

And if you hadn't yelled at the truck driver in the first place ...

"Yeah. My wife keeps telling me how stupid that was, too."

So now you have to go to court, and who knows what can happen when you get entangled in the legal system?

"I was a policeman, so I know. My wife thinks this whole mess is stupid."

Then listen to your wife. And never yell at another motorist. Unless it's a little old lady. They don't carry tire irons.

Of course, they might have long hatpins, so forget it.

Sound Off: 965-4287

The State Press would like to hear from you on its Sound Off Line. Each Monday, the opinion page will print a question of University or community interest, taking answers all week, 24 hours a day at 965-4287. When leaving a message, please leave your name, major, class standing (or any other affiliation with the University) and a number where you can be reached. All calls will be verified, and responses will be published every Wednesday, starting September 1. Responses may be edited for length and to eliminate profanity. Sorry, the State Press will not grant requests for anonymity on the Sound Off Line.

This Week's Question:

"Is ASU's athletic department too hard or too lenient on athletes who commit crimes?"

POLICE REPORT

Five men allegedly committed several crimes in Wednesday in a charade that spanned five cities.

At about 7 a.m., the suspects stole five cases of Budweiser beer from a delivery truck at Circle-K, 939 W. Baseline Rd., while the delivery man was inside the store. Upon returning to the truck and finding two of the men removing beer, the delivery man told them to stop. One of the men then dropped his case of beer, pulled out a semiautomatic pistol and told the driver to get away. The driver obeyed, and the men jumped in the car and fled east-bound on Baseline Road.

Shortly afterward in Mesa, the men ditched their Oldsmobile — which was reported stolen in Glendale — and stole a Jeep Cherokee. They then drove to Chandler, where they were involved in a shooting at about 7:45 a.m.

An officer in the area of the shooting heard eight or nine shots fired and saw two men in the Jeep and two standing nearby. Upon sight of the officer, the men in the Jeep sped away on a residential street congested with students on their way to school. The two suspects left behind ran north and west. The officer chose not to pursue the Jeep, but chased one of the suspects and apprehended him without a struggle.

Later, after abandoning the Cherokee and stealing a Monte Carlo in Phoenix, the remaining suspects were involved in another shooting. Four of the men are still sought by police. All suspects are described and young and Hispanic.

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

• Three men were seen running naked down McAllister Avenue early Thursday morning. One of them, an ASU student, was apprehended by police and warned of indecent exposure laws, then released. He was reportedly intoxicated.

• An underage female student was arrested for possession of alcohol at the Dash Inn Wednesday night.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

• A 47-year-old mentally ill Tempe woman caused an estimated $1500 damage by keying a car Tuesday afternoon. The car's owner did not wish to prosecute.

• A 23-year-old Tempe man was arrested for three counts of public sexual indecency. Since August, he had exposed himself in front of women on separate occasions.

• A 23-year-old Tempe man was arrested for possession of marijuana Wednesday afternoon. While being questioned by an officer, the man had attempted to rid himself of a baggie of the green leafy substance by throwing it on the ground.

• A 29-year-old Tempe man was arrested for assault Tuesday morning after he punched another man during an argument over money.

• While trick-or-treating near 300 E. Balboa Halloween night, four 12- and 13-year-old girls were robbed of their goodies by a 15-year-old boy. The suspect ran up from behind them and grabbed one girl's bag, another girl's hat and another girl's costume sword. He attempted to take the fourth girl's bag of candy, but she was able to hang on to it. When the girls tried to stop him, he pushed them out of the way, then fled down the street.

Council puts off anti-smoking proposals

By JASON HILL
STATE PRESS

Attempts to set a date for a public vote on strict anti-smoking proposals were placed on hold at Thursday night's Tempe City Council work/study meeting.

The new measures would require supervisory control of vending machines and would mandate that restaurants with a seating capacity of 100 or higher establish non-smoking sections.

Councilman Frank Plencner suggested requiring restaurants which seat 50 or more patrons to have non-smoking sections. After the debate, the council decided to further delay setting a date for a public vote on the matter until a clear understanding could be established regarding the impact Plencner's proposal would have on small businesses.

"A majority of our citizens want this," Plencner said.

Councilman Don Cassano, speaking to Plencner, said Plencner's proposal would be a hardship on the small businessman.

Plencner countered by saying the small businessman might be surprised at the number of non-smokers who would appreciate the opportunity to sit in sections designated specifically for them.

Jim Huling, Tempe special programs director, said that of the 379 restaurants in the Tempe, 229 hold fewer than 100 patrons.

Mayor Harry Mitchell criticized the fact that the council has not defined the potential size of non-smoking sections.

"You could get away with only having two seats and calling it a non-smoking section," Mitchell said.

The council agreed that no changes should occur with previous council proposals on the regulation of the sale of cigarettes through vending machines.

The regulations would mandate that keys be used by store managers to ensure that cigarettes are not distributed to minors.

A proposal by a token distributor to use tokens rather than keys was immediately rejected by the council. Several members said they felt that these tokens would still end up in the hands of minors.

ROTC commemorates POWs, MIAs

By GREG SEXTON
 STATE PRESS

While many will be celebrating the culmination of Homecoming this weekend, others will be remembering some of the missing heroes from the Vietnam War.

ASU's ROTC will march in the Homecoming parade today in commemoration of those soldiers still missing.

Col. Ron Karp, a Vietnam and Gulf War veteran, attended ASU from 1963-67 and said the thrill of riding in the Homecoming parade "is a very rewarding experience."

On Tuesday, ASU's Air Force ROTC will begin a 24-hour POW/MIA vigil at the flag pole outside Tempe City Hall. The event coincides with Veteran's Day. And for those who might have forgotten the brave soldiers — the vigil is a necessary reminder.

"It's something that is done every year that allows us and others to remember the POW/MIA's that still remain unaccounted for," Karp said.

Karp said it is important to remember those who put their lives on the line and yet, today, still haven't returned to their families and friends. For those in the military, the remembrance is a very rewarding experience.

"It's good to remind ourselves and others that this issue is not completed," Karp said.

The flag pole vigil begins at 5 p.m. Tuesday with the raising of the POW/MIA flag and finishes 24 hours later with a closing ceremony.

In addition to the vigil, ROTC will also be selling bracelets that serve as another reminder that some have yet to return from Southeast Asia. On the West Lawn, the ROTC will sell bracelets that bear the names, ranks and serial numbers of some MIAs. Prices range from $4 to $7 and the proceeds go to support scholarship opportunities for the families of the POW/MIAs. Last year all 50 of the bracelets sold out.

He also feels it is important to think of those soldiers who fought in Vietnam the same as those who recently fought in the Gulf War.

"They all fought in the name of freedom for all of us," Karp said. "It is important for us all to remember and treat all with that in mind. There are some major differences between the two wars, but the people are the same."

The ROTC color guard will also march in two Veteran's Day parades.

Engineering college expects $2 million grant

University to improve manufacturing education

By GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

ASU's College of Engineering is expecting about $2.2 million in federal funding to develop a manufacturing training program as part of the Clinton Administration's technology reinvestment project.

The Joint Arizona Center for Manufacturing Education and Training (JACMET) has two goals, according to Charles Elliott, director of the Center for Professional Development.

In the short term, at least 2,000 workers who lost their defense industry jobs will be retrained for manufacturing jobs, Elliott said. The long term goal of JACMET, he added, is to provide lifelong professional training to improve

America's standing global manufacturing. "I think we're now learning that real wealth creation comes from manufacturing," Elliott said. "And if you want high-quality jobs for large numbers of people — not just for a handful of engineers who do the science — you're going to have to do manufacturing."

The program is scheduled to begin its three-year stint this spring, Elliott said, adding that it was created to train workers — mostly those who have lost their manufacturing jobs to the rapidly changing industry.

"We're being responsive to industry. We're going to work with them to develop exactly what they need," he said.

The seven industry sponsors will provide as much as $5 million to fund the program, based on the number of full time equivalent students.

The program is set up in focused "modules," rather than traditional courses, which will teach only the related skills that students need training and a certificate in, Elliott said.

The modules will not follow the traditional semester schedule as the length of the courses will range from one-hour seminars to three-credit hour courses, he said.

The modules will be taught by computer, satellite, videotape, television, traditional classroom presentations as well as at the companies involved, Elliott said.

"We're trying to serve the whole state here, not just Phoenix," because UofA and NAU are both involved in the project with us," Elliott said.

The modules will be team-taught by professors and professionals.

The manufacturing industry annually spends an average of 40 hours per person to re-train and update its workforce because of new technology, said David Chang, dean of the College of Engineering.

"The life cycle of technology is getting shorter all the time," Chang said. "So clearly, the University should play a role in the lifelong role of education."

JACMET is an innovative model for training, Chang said, because its multi-media delivery of interactive networks and industry-based policy board which helps to develop curriculum.

THE FAR SIDE

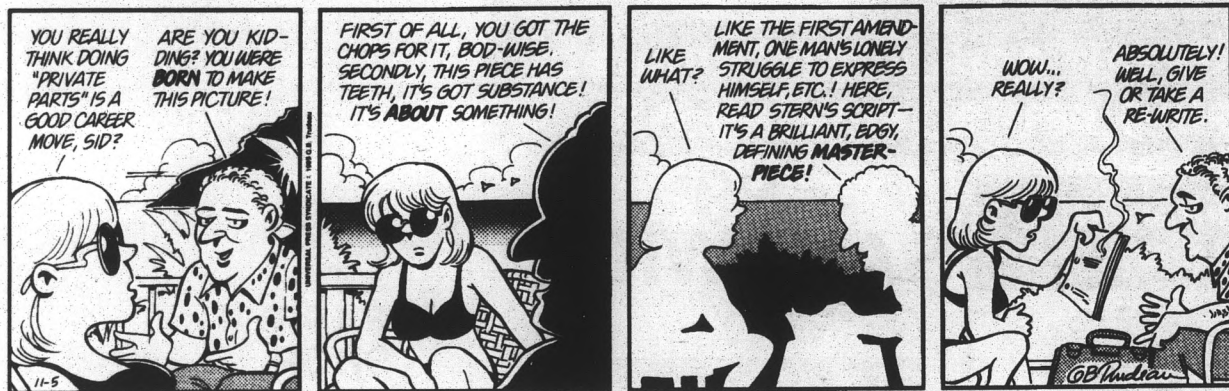

By GARY LARSON

It had started off as a pleasant evening, but, as the Caldwelles soon discovered (too late, regrettably), it was best not to try and trump the old gypsy woman.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

PEOPLE

HAMELIN, Germany (AP) — A cheering crowd of 10,000, including a Pied Piper playing a flute, welcomed Queen Elizabeth II to town on Thursday.

The British monarch visited as honorary colonel of the Royal Engineers based at Hamelin, which plays heavily on its local piper legend. After signing the town's visitor book, she inspected military equipment.

The Pied Piper of Hamelin is a legendary 13th century figure who rid the town of a plague of rats by playing the flute. When he was refused payment, the fairy tale figure took revenge by charming away all the town's children.

The queen arrived Wednesday in Hamelin, about 25 miles southwest of Hanover.

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan's retirement fantasy is to duck the celebrity spotlight like he used to dunk basketballs.

Now all he wants to do is take his three children on everyday family outings without drawing a crowd of star-struck autograph hounds.

"That would be my day. My perfect day," Jordan writes in his new photo book, "Rare Air: Michael on Michael," which reaches stores this week.

In an excerpt published in USA Weekend magazine, Jordan says nothing he's ever done on the basketball court compares to being a father, but his superstardom makes it hard to lead a normal life.

"Sometimes I wonder what it would be like not to be Michael Jordan," he says.

NEW YORK (AP) — Her mother's snobbery isolated singer Natalie Cole from blacks during childhood. Her father's legendary crooning cast a long shadow over her singing career. Then there were the drugs.

The Grammy-winner overcame many personal obstacles to define herself, finally putting it all together in 1983 at a Minnesota drug-treatment center. "I discovered that I was still grieving about my dad, in a lot of pain about my mother and a lot of shame about how I had done all these things," Cole says in Sunday's Parade magazine. "I learned about forgiveness."

She recalled growing up in Los Angeles' exclusive Hancock Park section, where the Coles were the only black residents.

"When I got friendly with the (black) people who worked for us, my mother was appalled," said Cole, 43. "She wanted us to interact with a different society — outside the house."

Learning forgiveness meant putting such trials in perspective.

"It wasn't just my mother," she said. "It's the way many black people are raised."

She was crushed by the death of her father when she was 15.

"Any kind of heartache pales in comparison to his death," Cole said, adding that his legacy brought career troubles too.

"People wanted to advertise me as Nat 'King' Cole's daughter," she said. "No name, just his daughter. I thought it was awful, and I fought it at every turn."

PEARL, Miss. (AP) — It's a cowboy cobbler's dream come true — whipping up a pair of python-skin boots for President Clinton.

"I'd have never dreamed of putting a pair of boots on the president of the United States," Dave Gardner said Wednesday. "It's something that will be with me the rest of my life. I feel the Lord has blessed me."

Gardner's cowhide leather boots average about $375 a pair. Nobody is saying how much he'll charge for Clinton's more exotic, custom-made pair.

The presidential footwear was ordered as a gift from Hayes T. Sullivan, an Arkansas farmer and longtime friend of the president nicknamed Bubba.

"I've been looking for six or eight months for somebody that was the finest in the country," Sullivan said of Gardner, 55.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Eudora Welty may not be a household name in the United States, but she is beloved in France.

At a private ceremony at her home, the University of Burgundy gave her an honorary doctorate Wednesday and presented her with its arts medal for her lifetime of work.

The 221-year-old institution in Dijon, France, also plans to name its new center for women's writing "Eudora" in her honor, university spokeswoman Daniele Pitavy-Souques said.

Welty, 84, was knighted by the French government in 1987.

She has been writing novels and stories for nearly 50 years. She won the 1973 Pulitzer Prize in fiction for "The Optimist's Daughter."

Strawberry apologizes

Darryl Strawberry has issued a second apology for a remark — "Let it burn down, because I don't live there anymore" — which he said in Japan upon first hearing of wildfires burning in the Los Angeles area.

Within moments of his remark during a telephone conference call to sports reporters in Los Angeles Tuesday, the Dodger outfielder asked about the severity of the fires, and said he had been joking. But recordings of his original statement had fans aflame on Los Angeles sports talk radio shows, despite the apologies.

"I'm truly sorry about some of the statements I made yesterday," the Los Angeles Dodger outfielder said in a statement issued by the baseball team Wednesday. "I realize it was something I should not have said even jokingly because of the seriousness of the situation."

"I grew up and have lived all my life in the Los Angeles area and would certainly not wish this destruction on anyone. Once I realized that someone on the call might have taken me seriously, I noted I was only kidding. But it was apparently too late and I was very sorry about that."

Yount, Brewers part ways

The Milwaukee Brewers on Thursday declined to exercise their 1994 option on Robin Yount's contract, and the 20-year veteran filed for free agency.

Yount, 38, made $2.7 million last season with the Brewers and the club had an option for $3.2 million for 1994. Yount also has a personal services contract for 1994 at $400,000 and for 1995 at $430,000.

Yount hit just .258 with eight homers and 51 RBIs last season. He hinted he would like to play another season and not end his career on a disappointing note after the Brewers finished 69-93 and in last place in the AL East.

Yount broke in as an 18-year-old shortstop in 1974 and has played his entire career with the Brewers. He won MVP awards in 1982 and 1989.

Steinbrenner's company sinking

The shipbuilding company controlled by New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner filed for bankruptcy protection Thursday.

The century-old American Ship Building Co. filed for reorganization in U.S. Bankruptcy Court. Steinbrenner owns 11 percent of the company.

American Ship Building was damaged in August when the U.S. Navy canceled a $176 million contract to build two oil tankers. On Monday the Navy said it may cancel a $63 million contract for a submarine-hunting vessel, the company's only remaining contract.

Steinbrenner could not immediately be reached for comment. It is unclear if the bankruptcy filing will have any effect on the New York Yankees, a partnership in which Steinbrenner and his family control 55 percent of the shares.

Munn still a Sun

Wednesday's sports column incorrectly stated that Jeff Munn, Phoenix Suns announcer, was no longer with the Suns. Munn, day anchor for KTAR radio, is no longer full-time, but he is still with the organization. The State Press apologizes for the error.

Sun Devils see red in UNLV meet

Hill expects freshmen, sophomores to shine

BY SCOTT DAVIS
STATE PRESS

After finishing ninth in last season's NCAA Championships, the only thing the ASU women's swim team did was add some youthful depth to its stacked roster.

Tomorrow, the newly-aligned Sun Devils will begin their dual meet season against UNLV at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center at 10:00.

Included in this year's squad are eight freshmen, all of whom should make significant impacts for ASU this season.

The five freshmen expected to help the Sun Devils tomorrow are Sara Gieseke, Cynthia Janssen, Patty O'Connell, Carolee Osborne and Gretchen Verdoorn.

"The freshmen will be a pretty big factor," ASU coach Tim Hill said. "Cynthia Janssen is going to help us a lot. The biggest surprise has been Patty O'Connell in the distance frees."

ASU will also depend on the leadership of its older swimmers to lead the way against the Rebels.

Two sophomores — Beata Kaszuba and Chris Jeffrey — are considered locks in their respective races by coach Hill. At last season's NCAA Championships, Kaszuba finished second in the 100-yard breaststroke and Jeffrey claimed third in the 400-yard individual medley.

This season, the two sophomore phenoms are expected to only get better.

Jeffrey feels her teammates are anxious to get the new season underway.

"UNLV is a good team, but realistically, we're looking to be real convincing," Jeffrey said. "We just want to get back in (the pool)"

Men's team looks to rout Rebels

BY JULIE REUVERS
STATE PRESS

For members of the ASU men's swimming team, Saturday's meet against UNLV signals a string of new beginnings.

The debut of a new coach and his assistants, the beginning of a season that the Sun Devils hope will take them to higher standings in the Pac-10 — improving over last year's third-place finish — and the addition of two relays to the dual meet are just a few.

"We're not going to swim our normal lineup," Coach Ernie Maglischo said. "We're going to try people in some off events — events that might be their third event, nationally, instead of their best two. We'll save that for later meets."

One alteration in the lineup will put ASU tri-captain Simon Percy, who normally swims the individual medley and the backstroke, at the block for two freestyle sprint events.

"It's going to give me an opportunity to strengthen my own strokes, and whatever I swim helps my IM (individual medley)," Percy said. "Ernie wants to help me as a sprinter, so I think it will help."

Another adjustment will switch senior tri-captain Christiano Michelena, who typically has a stronghold on the distance events, to the 50-yard butterfly and the 200-yard medley relay.

"For me, it's going to be really hard because of the events I'm going to swim," Michelena said. "I'm happy about (the switch) because I want to swim fly. I used to be in fly when I was a kid, and it's a chance for me to show something that I've never shown to anyone here."

Maglischo said the Sun Devils will swim the 400 IM, the 200 medley relay and the 200 freestyle relay Saturday, events which are not typical for a dual meet.

"The 200 medley should be a very good one for us, but we're looking for the right combination of people," he said. "The 200 free is our weakest relay, and we're just trying to get experience at it and find talent to try and turn that into a NCAA finals relay."

Saturday's competition should help Maglischo decide which swimmers will work out the best together in each of the relays. To ensure a look at all possible combinations and find "hidden talent," he plans to race three or four relay teams of even potential in the meet.

"We've got several people in the running for the backstroke leg, we've got several people in the running for the breaststroke leg and several people in the running for the freestyle leg," he said.

UNLV, according to Maglischo, usually finishes second in the Big West conference behind UC-Santa Barbara.

"We know we're going to win the meet," sophomore Marcos Vecchini said. "Right now, we are training pretty hard, high quality training. It shouldn't be a problem."

Friendships put aside for ASU-Cal game

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

California Coach Keith Gilbertson is no stranger to the Sun Devils' coaching staff.

Coach Bruce Snyder hired Gilbertson as his offensive line coach at Utah State in 1977. Offensive coordinator Dan Cozzetto is the godfather of his son David. He has also served with defensive coordinator Kent Baer and assistant head coach Rod Marinelli at Utah State and Idaho.

But right now, Gilbertson can't focus much attention on anything other than rejuvenating the Golden Bears.

"I got a lot of relationships with those guys but right now, I got to focus on our team," Gilbertson said earlier this week. "I'll visit with those guys after the game."

Cal (5-3 overall, 2-3 Pac-10) started the season 5-0, but since then has lost three straight to Washington, Washington State and Southern Cal.

"There wasn't anybody around here that thought we'd be 5-0," Gilbertson said. "All we heard all year is that, 'We're going to be ninth in the league,' and, 'You guys are going to be terrible.'"

"I don't think any of them believed that. A lot of good players have missed a lot of quality time. We're not the deepest team in the league, so we're going to fall off a little bit when we lose players."

The Bears' key loss this season has been quarterback Dave Barr.

Barr sprained his right shoulder in the loss to Washington and the Bears offense, averaging more than 43 points per game at that time, has not been the same since. The Bears have only scored three touchdowns and 24 points since Barr's injury.

Gilbertson, in a conference call with Valley media Monday, said Barr would start Saturday. His backup will be freshman Pat Barnes.

"We aren't the same without him, that's obviously the case," Gilbertson said. "It's easy to see how different we are with him than without him offensively. Emotionally, I think we were down for a couple of weeks after (the loss to Washington)."

Snyder is familiar with both quarterbacks. He evaluated Barnes last year as a high school senior and said he was one of the top three recruits on the West Coast, behind ASU's Jake Plummer and Stanford's Tim Carey.

"Barr has a great delivery," Snyder said. "When he's throwing right, it's not (Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan) Marino, but it's a real good-looking throwing pattern with his arm and a tight spiral.

"I've not seen Pat Barnes throw in person ... he throws the deep ball very well."

However, Snyder, who is facing his former team for the second time since departing for ASU in 1992, is calling Saturday's game "the most important game in the Pac-10 this week." Both teams are tied with Oregon for fifth place in the conference and the winner has an inside track of representing the Pac-10 in the Alamo Bowl Dec. 31.

and get used to racing. We're going to treat it as a good quality workout."

Intense workouts are something ASU is getting used to. Because of the overabundance of dual meets throughout the remainder of the month, Hill has put his swimmers to work.

The Sun Devils have two dual meets during each of their next two weekends. They meet New Mexico and University of California at San Diego next weekend, before taking on conference rivals UCLA and USC on November 19 and 20. All of the dual meets take place at the MPAC.

"This week and next week are probably the hardest training periods of the fall," Hill said. "We need to increase the work and build a good base."

UNLV will provide the perfect opportunity for ASU to get off to a good start. Like ASU, the Rebels will have a few new freshmen on their roster, and are looking to upend the Sun Devils.

"I expect UNLV to provide a stiff competition," Hill said. "They usually swim real well against us. They're going to be strong in the backstroke and the fly. They don't have a real major weakness."

ASU volleyball reaching for the top

BY PAUL J. MATTHEWS
STATE PRESS

The Pac-10 conference is the volleyball equivalent of boxing's heavyweight division. Undefeated and top-ranked UCLA (20-0 overall, 12-0 Pac-10) is the reigning champion and No. 9 USC (16-5, 8-4) is the top contender. No. 3 ASU has already defeated former champion Stanford and now has its eyes on the title.

The Sun Devils will get the opportunity to take a shot at the title Friday night when they take on UCLA at 7:30 p.m. That will be followed by a 5:30 p.m. match against USC Saturday. Both matches are at the University Activity Center.

When the Sun Devils step into the ring (the UAC) against UCLA, they will have the opportunity to ditch a monkey that has been riding their back since 1987, the last time ASU defeated the Bruins.

"The kids are pumped; they want to give UCLA their first defeat (of the season)," ASU coach Patti Snyder said.

The Sun Devils might be forced to play without their most productive offensive player, Christine Garner, who went down Wednesday with a sprained ankle.

She left practice on crutches Wednesday night and did not practice Thursday afternoon.

"I will play with pain, but if it is something that will hurt me permanently, then I won't play," Garner said.

If Garner is unable to play, Kelly Harris will start in her place.

"(Harris) gives us a little bit more ball control on defense," Snyder said.

Junior Monique Allen will take over for Harris who normally substitutes for Holly Sones in the back row.

Winning against the Bruins has historically been a futile task. Bruin coach Andy Banachowski has led his team to the top four nationally an astounding 19 of the last 22 years, including six national titles. His record against ASU is 32-3.

Banachowski has established that record by not taking any team lightly, including ASU.

"We struggled with them when we played them here," Banachowski said, referring to the Oct. 9 meeting at UCLA which the Bruins won 3-1. "They controlled many parts of the match."

He expects a defensive struggle with lots of rallies when he plays the Sun Devils.

"The team that can eliminate their own mistakes will win the match," he said.

Although this weekend's matches have little consequence in terms of postseason selection, a sweep against the L.A. schools will boost ASU from its third-place spot to second place, a position currently held by the Trojans.

"We're playing for pride," Garner said.

ARIES
(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
It may be hard to get answers in business now, but it's a good time for dealings with bankers and getting things done at home. Afternoon and evening entertaining is a plus.

TAURUS
(Apr. 20 to May 20)
Partnership interests are highlighted now, but watch a tendency to let things slide on the job. A co-worker may be touchy. Don't overdo after dark.

GEMINI
(May 21 to June 20)
Extra drive and determination lead to business successes now. Take the initiative and things will get accomplished. Don't overspend on pleasure interests.

CANCER
(June 21 to July 22)
Crossed signals between close ties may be a morning problem. A relative needs reassurance that you care. Adventure and good times are tops on your agenda.

LEO
(July 23 to Aug. 22)
Try not to overreact to a real or imagined slight. You will make major progress today when tackling unfinished tasks at home. Quiet times are best after dark.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
You will need to watch your judgment about spending today. However, get-togethers with friends are happily accented. Travel too is a plus activity.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
You must be direct, down-to-earth and all business where work matters are concerned today. Then, you will enjoy successes. Money prospects

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE
Every weekday, we give you the State Press absolutely free. Great news. Great features. Even a magazine. Crosswords and horoscopes. Not to mention the huge savings from all the coupons.
We do this for you every day. Will you do something for us? Good! Thanks!
When the State Press has inserts, they tend to flop to the ground and create a safety hazard as well as an eyesore. Would you be so socially correct as to bend over and pick an insert that might slip out of your State Press? Thanks.
We appreciate your help. And so does the earth.
