Report: Athletics should focus on grades

Big money sports show lowest GPAs

By MELANIE K. SELCHO
STATE PRESS

ASU's athletic department should become more responsible for ensuring that its student-athlete recruits perform at respectable academic levels, according to a report issued Monday by the Faculty Athletics Representative.

In his annual report to the Academic Senate, Intercollegiate Athletics Faculty Representative Jerry Kingston said athletes who entered the University in their freshman year have a graduation rate of 43.1 percent over the past four years. ASU's general student body population over the same time period graduated at a rate of 44.7 percent.

In making his recommendations, Kingston pointed out that ASU's men's basketball team accumulated a 1.4 grade point average (GPA) during the spring 1993 semester — down from a 2.37 average in the previous semester.

"A 1.4 GPA — whether for a team of four or 50 — should have significant impact on the type of students you can recruit into the program," he said. "(Coaches) should be accountable for academic performance, as well as success on the field."

The combined GPA for ASU's football team for the spring 1993 semester was 1.96. ASU baseball registered in at a GPA of 2.09 for the spring 1993 semester.

Since 1989, baseball, men's basketball and football are the only ASU sports whose athletes have registered average GPAs below 2.0.

ASU's women's diving, women's gymnastics and women's tennis teams all earned GPAs above 3.0 in spring 1993.

The overall average GPA for all sports at ASU was 2.37 in spring 1993. Figures for non-athletes were not available for that semester, but fall 1992 numbers show that students not involved in athletics had an average GPA of 2.73.

The figures were provided by Kingston's office and ASU's Office of Institutional Analysis.

However, Kingston's report also said that by last year, athletes who entered the University in the 1986-87 academic year had a graduation rate nearly 7 percent higher than the student popula-

Regent funds excess credit accumulation 'insignificant' abuse

By SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

Regent John Munger said Monday that partial information from a study indicates an insignificant number of Arizona university students are earning excessive credit hours.

Munger said that according to data given to the board by NAU, only 22 students currently enrolled at the school have more than 160 credit hours.

"It is an insignificant number," Munger said.

Munger added that it appears unlikely that the state's universities are facing a great number of students who waste taxpayers' money by taking more classes than needed for graduation.

"With the figures from NAU, it doesn't appear that it will be a problem," he added.

Munger said NAU's figure is the first he has seen among data currently being collected at all three state universities. He said he is expecting the numbers from ASU and UofA at any time.

In September, Munger said a possible solution to the problem of in-state students collecting excessive credit hours would be to require them to finance their own educations.

The cost to the state for each in-state student's yearly education is $7,000, of which students pay $1,700. Taxpayers cover the rest.

In an Oct. 26 letter to the State Press, Munger wrote that if the

Deferring building maintenance could cause 'crisis' in future

By MARK M. MACIAS
STATE PRESS

ASU has deferred $44.6 million in campus maintenance work, a move that one administrator says could cause a "crisis" in the near future.

Alan Carroll, ASU director of fiscal planning, said the University has deferred maintenance work because it doesn't have the money to pay for the upkeep of some buildings.

"Buildings are scheduled for regular maintenance every so many years," Carroll said. "What happens (now) is we don't get them scheduled because we don't have the money. If you put it off for a year or two or three, then there's a crisis."

Carroll said a recent collapse of the roof at the Activity Center is proof that you can't delay maintenance for too long.

Brian Gregory, assistant for finance and budgets for the Arizona Board of Regents, said maintenance deferral is a problem for universities across the country, not just in Arizona.

The Arizona Board of Regents released information that UofA has deferred about $85.6 million in repairs this year, while NAU has deferred about $16.6 million and ASU West about $632,000.

Gregory said the ABOR determined that ASU needed $44.6 million in maintenance work by walking through every ASU building that is state owned.

ASU President Lattie Coor said the deferrals are just one of numerous results that can be attributed to declining education funds.

"There are always major unseen problems that result from a declining budget," Coor said. "The effect of deferring building maintenance is just one of the many problems that have resulted

ASU student in 8-car pile up

By MAXWELL HIGGINS
STATE PRESS

Heavy rainfall is being blamed for causing an eight-car pileup that closed down a mile of McClintock Drive for about two hours during Monday morning rush hour.

Five motorists — including at least one ASU student — suffered minor injuries in the wreck, and two people received serious injuries. All injured persons were transported by ambulance to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital.

ASU sophomore Janelle Ramos, a psychology major, was listed in fair condition late Monday night for unspecified injuries.

The accident occurred at 7:20 a.m. in the flooded T-intersection of McClintock and Curry Road, beginning when a northbound car in the curb lane of McClintock drifted left for unknown reasons into another northbound car. Both cars swerved into oncoming traffic, and each struck a southbound car in the intersection.

Four more vehicles became involved by either sliding into the pileup or being hit by other cars as they spun on the slick pavement. All the vehicles involved were traveling on McClintock, and the accident was almost entirely contained in the boundaries of the intersection.

Police arrived on the scene and closed off McClintock for two hours, with detours set up at McKellips Road and First Street.

No arrests or citations were made, and any potential police action awaits further investigation.

tion. The student-athlete graduation rate for that year was 52 percent, compared to 45 percent from the general student body.

In the past two years, ASU's student-athlete graduation rate has jumped 20 percentage points. The rate for the 1984-85 entering class was 32 percent.

Jill DeMichele, ASU assistant athletic director for academic services, said the increase in graduation rates will be a pattern.

"It's a definite trend that the student athlete graduation rate is improving," she said. "It has showed steady increases after the development of many, many factors including NCAA rules, the development of a plan of study for student athletes and increased monitoring."

Kingston said that low GPAs coupled with the 43.1 student-athlete graduation rate indicates a need for the implementation of recommendations his University Committee on Student Athletes made in a report to ASU President Lattie Coor.

That committee recommended that the University commit to recruiting stronger students and place more emphasis on recruiting freshman athletes rather than junior college transfers.

"(We need to) encourage the athletic department and coaches to place greater emphasis on athletes' academic preparation rather than athletic preparation," Kingston said.

Academic Senate President Bill Arnold said the senate is currently considering how to put in place the recommendations made in the September meeting.

"The recommendations made to the president you heard in September have been accepted, and we have committees in place to implement them," he said.

DeMichele said her department anticipates the student-athlete graduation rate to increase over the next two years.

"Our prediction for the next class would be 56 percent and our prediction for the class currently in their fifth year as seniors is 59 percent," she said.

DeMichele said new NCAA rules increasing the requirements for test scores, GPAs and substantial academic courses will also contribute to improving the quality of recruits and their academic performance.

Most academic services resources, DeMichele said, are directed toward students with low GPAs.

"We really focus on the students," she said. "Most of our resources are directed to students who have a GPA of 2.5 or lower, because (their GPAs) limit their choices for a major."

Kingston also said that women athletes contribute more to the graduation rate than men. Over the last four years, women have had a graduation rate of 62 percent compared with a 32 percent rate for men.

DeMichele said the academic success of women in athletics represents the national average and added that there are fewer female athletes.

from a declining budget.

"That's why we are always arguing for bigger budgets."

Val Peterson, director of physical plant facilities management department, said ASU will never be able to completely pay its deferred maintenance.

"You'll always have some deferred maintenance. There's no way to have every building 100 percent up to shape," Peterson said. "There are components in buildings that wear out on different cycles, so you don't normally build into your operating budgets money to take care of those kinds of things."

"But we're not attacking the problem like we should be in reducing that (maintenance budget) amount."

Peterson said he thinks the ABOR is announcing the deferred maintenance budget because it wants to make state legislators aware of the fiscal woes currently plaguing Arizona's universities.

"We have a serious problem on our campus, and if something isn't done, we may have to close some of our buildings," Peterson said.

ASU hasn't closed any buildings yet as a result of the deferred maintenance work.

Phoenix council considers law protecting clinic visitors

PHOENIX (AP) — The City Council will consider an ordinance that prevents demonstrators from approaching people at abortion clinics.

The ordinance would establish a 100-foot zone outside abortion clinics, family planning offices and health care facilities. In that area, demonstrators would have to stay at least 8 feet away from people entering or leaving the buildings.

The Council is scheduled to consider the ordinance Tuesday.

Mayor Paul Johnson and Council members Craig Tribken and Kathy Dubs coauthored the ordinance.

"This ordinance is intended to protect the rights of all citizens whatever their personal beliefs might be on family planning issues," they said.

Crash probe includes number of people on plane; 9 hurt

PHOENIX (AP) — Federal investigators looking into a plane crash that injured nine Utah residents, including five adults and four children, are looking into whether the six-seat, single-engine plane was overloaded.

"The number caught our attention," said Fred O'Donnell, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Los Angeles. "We're not prepared to say there was a violation."

He said federal regulations permit infants less than 2 years old to sit on adults' laps instead of having their own seats.

On the single-engine Beechcraft 36, three children ages six months to five years were seated on adults' laps, the Pinal County Sheriff's Department said.

The plane, flying from Heber City, Utah, to Tucson, belly landed during a storm Sunday night in the desert about 10 miles east of Florence.

Officials nonplussed by plan to bridge canyon with bras

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK (AP) — A California artist's plan to bridge the Grand Canyon with brassieres is getting the cold shoulder from park officials, who say their objections are based on aesthetics, not prudery.

Park spokesman Jim Tuck said Monday that officials had heard news reports beginning a few months ago about the plan. But they've never actually gotten a call from the artist, who calls himself Nicolino.

If the one-named artist does get around to seeking permission, the answer is no, Tuck said.

"The park was established for its scenic beauty," Tuck said. "A string of American flags — well, anything stretching across the canyon — would be inappropriate."

The 53-year-old artist told the Rocky Mountain News he hopes to collect 10,000 bras from women around the country, and has already received 1,500. He said he hoped to string the line of lingerie across the canyon in 1995.

"It's about the puritanical obsession with the breast," Nicolino said. "It's about breast implants and victimizing the health of women. It's about connecting a woman's self-identity to the size of her breasts."

"I'm trying to keep it on the humorous side."

Luke AFB workers to lose 293 jobs in aircraft swap

LUKE AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — Luke Air Force Base will lose 293 military and civilian positions under plans to move aircraft and training units to and from other bases, base officials announced Monday.

In late 1994, the 58th will begin losing all 33 of its F-15E fighter-bombers when a program to provide pilots with their initial F-15E training is transferred from Luke to Seymour-Johnson AFB, N.C.

Clinton pushing for NAFTA votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Struggling for votes with time running out, President Clinton leaned on Democrats opposing a trade agreement with Mexico Monday and tried to hold Republican supporters. The White House tried to pick up farm-state votes with a wheat deal.

Two days before the showdown, the outcome rested with 42 House members who said they were still undecided. Both sides contended they would have the votes to win.

Clinton argued there was nothing to lose by giving the agreement a chance. "If all the nay sayers turn out to be (correct), the treaty gives us a right to withdraw in six months," he said.

"Why don't we just wait and see whether we're right or they're right?" Clinton said in a speech to owners of small businesses. "Ring the phones up," he implored, seeking to increase pressure on fence-sitting lawmakers.

The White House claimed to have picked up 15 votes over the weekend.

An Associated Press count found 206 lawmakers saying they would vote against the agreement or were likely to do so. On the other side, 186 lawmakers said they would vote for it; 42 said they were undecided. Clinton needs 218 votes to win.

Congressional sources said the administration struck a deal with several congressmen from Oklahoma and Texas to take action against Canadian wheat imports in exchange for their votes.

The administration agreed to impose quotas on durum wheat if Canada does not change its pricing policies within 60 days, the sources said. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, cited that agreement in announcing his support for Clinton Monday.

"They've done a deal with everybody but working people," charged House Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., a leader of the anti-NAFTA forces. But he added, "I think we're going to win."

On the Capitol's West Front, several hundred civil service union members, mostly from New York state, rallied against the trade pact.

"Dump this NAFTA," the crowd chanted.

Many carried placards depicting an oversized monkey labeled "NAFTA" perched on the shoulders of a frowning, hardhat-wearing worker.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland lashed out at Clinton for his extraordinary promise to defend Republicans who are attacked in congressional races because they voted for the trade agreement.

"The president has clearly abdicated his role

Associated Press
President Clinton tells small business owners and operators Monday in Washington that they should tell lawmakers before Wednesday's vote that the North American Free Trade Agreement will open markets for American businesses.

as leader of the Democratic Party," Kirkland declared.

The labor leader also dismissed the notion that a loss would wound Clinton's presidency — a frequent argument by NAFTA supporters in recent days.

"That is nonsense," Kirkland said. "I think the best thing that could happen for the Clinton administration is for this agreement to be voted down." He said that would allow Clinton to focus on issues "to put people first for a change."

Undecided lawmakers who dined with Clinton Sunday night told him there had been "a sea change out in their districts" and that public opinion is moving toward support of the agreement, White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

Buttafuoco case 'finally put to bed'

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — The saga that began in a Long Island auto body shop ended Monday in a courtroom where a handcuffed, smirking Joey Buttafuoco was led away to the same fate that befell his former lover, Amy Fisher — jail time.

Buttafuoco's expression never changed as he was sentenced to the maximum six months in prison, $5,000 fine and five years' probation for statutory rape.

Only minutes earlier, Fisher, now 19, faced Buttafuoco for the first time since she shot his wife, Mary Jo, on May 19, 1992. In a nervous, barely audible voice, she spoke of the ill-fated relationship that began "when I was a 16-year-old with braces."

"This man took me to expensive restaurants and cheap motels," she said softly. "I am sad to say that he taught me well. He taught me to disrespect myself and to deceive my parents. Unfortunately, these were lessons that I learned too quickly."

BUTTAFUOCO

The midday drama provided a certain closure to the case that has provided grist for countless talk-show jokes and three made-for-TV movies. Mrs. Buttafuoco, 38, who has steadfastly stood by her husband throughout the chain of events, did not attend the sentencing. But prosecutor Fred Klein spoke of her outside court: "She was victimized twice. Once by Amy Fisher and once by her husband. "With Joey Buttafuoco going to jail," Klein said without a trace of irony, "we can finally put this case to bed." A year ago in the same courthouse, Fisher had been sentenced to five to 15 years for shooting Mrs. Buttafuoco, who still has a bullet lodged next to her brain. Buttafuoco wanted justice.

Lack of money to blame for proliferation of tuberculosis, health organization says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tuberculosis, the "world's most neglected epidemic," could be killing 4 million people a year within a decade unless Western countries come up with $100 million to fight it, the World Health Organization said Monday.

Worse, the agency warned: drug-resistant strains are increasing so rapidly that without fast action, a once easily cured disease is on the verge of becoming incurable.

"The world procrastinated on AIDS. Don't let the same thing happen with tuberculosis," said Richard Bumgarner, deputy director of WHO's TB program.

Tuberculosis kills more people — 3 million a year — than all other infectious diseases combined. About a third of the world's population is infected with the TB germ and 8 million people get sick every year.

Yet just $1 of every $30 spent on infectious diseases goes to the deadly lung infection, WHO said.

The world gave developing countries $16 million in aid to combat TB in 1990, a year that 1.9 million died from TB. But the world came up with $77 million to fight leprosy, which killed 2,000 people that year, and $185 million for AIDS, which killed 200,000.

"Something is seriously wrong," said Dr. Arata Kochi, WHO's TB chief.

Developing countries need $100 million a year to fight TB successfully, WHO estimated. With that money, TB's toll would drop to 1.6 million deaths annually by the 21st century, Bumgarner said. Without it, the toll will rise to 4 million annually, he said.

Bumgarner, traveling the United States to raise awareness of the TB problem, said, "There is a misallocation of priorities. Rich countries think it's not their problem. ... But TB will never be controlled in the United States unless it is gotten under control in the rest of the world."

Indeed, U.S. officials had virtually stopped funding TB work in the early 1980s because the disease had become so rare here. But it is rebounding, with 26,763 cases here last year, a 20 percent increase from 1985.

AIDS, which wipes out the immune system's protection against TB, and immigration are to blame, doctors say.

STATE PRESS Editorial

Athletics: Something's rotten

Something stinks in ASU's athletic department.

OK, so everybody already knows that. It's old news after all the athlete arrests last year and this year's report from two past University presidents that said Athletic Director Charles Harris is causing problems in the department due to a lack of leadership.

But academic figures from the spring semester show that — surprise — there's something else wrong in the department: Student-athletes may not be doing such a good job in their classes.

The bad news came in the form of a report issued to the Academic Senate Monday by Jerry Kingston, ASU's faculty athletic representative.

But the good news first. Many student-athletes are doing well at ASU. Since the NCAA began compiling graduation rates three years ago, the rate for ASU's student-athletes has risen steadily from 32 percent in the initial survey to 52 percent in the most recent graduating class. Smaller sports, particularly women's sports, are doing quite well. Women's diving, women's tennis and women's gymnastics all had average GPAs above 3.0 last spring.

However, the big money sports — baseball, men's basketball and football — are bringing in grades that most students and professors would consider very poor.

Football: 1.96 GPA for spring 1993.

Baseball: 2.09 GPA for spring 1993.

And here's the kicker — men's basketball: 1.4 GPA for spring 1993.

Maybe they just had a bad semester? Not quite.

Men's basketball has had just three out of the last eight semesters above the 2.0 mark. The same holds true for the football team.

Baseball players, on the other hand, have only dipped below 2.0 two times in the last eight semesters, ranging from a low of 1.65 to a high of 2.56.

Cumulative GPAs from fall 1989 through spring 1993 rank these three sports dead last out of all sports at ASU. Baseball registered a 2.2, men's basketball a 2.17 and football a 2.12.

All sports had a cumulative GPA of 2.44.

By contrast, the average ASU non-athlete earned a 2.73 in fall 1992 (figures were not available for spring 1993.) Non-athletes' cumulative GPA from fall 1989 to fall 1992 was also 2.73.

What does all this say about sports at ASU?

Figures don't lie. Though graduation rates for student-athletes have risen markedly over the last few years — a statistic much trumpeted by ASU President Lattie Coor and the athletic department — GPAs have not.

Since 1989, 15 out of the 21 ASU sports teams studied by Kingston have had their cumulative GPAs drop or stay about the same.

Is this "satisfactory academic progress" for ASU's administration? Is ASU graduating student-athletes who shouldn't be graduating just to make the department look good? How can GPAs be decreasing en masse while graduation rates jump by astounding percentages?

Figures like these only perpetuate the stereotype that schools are in big money sports to make money, screwing student-athletes out of an education in the process.

Bobbitt case illustrates society's fascination with male genitalia

This past month everyone and their dog has heard about the case in which a woman cut off her husband's — as the media so eloquently calls it — sexual organ. For purposes of this column I'll call it what everyone else calls it, a penis.

Anyone who has either not read about the case or who has passed it by with faint heart (or good taste), the specifics are as follows: Lorena Bobbitt removed her husband John's penis with a kitchen knife after what she said was an incident of rape by her husband, then proceeded to throw it from a speeding car shortly afterwards. Police officers later recovered the penis, which was reattached to John Bobbitt.

This case has been so publicized that it has made every male in America cross their legs with discomfort.

I, too, am discomforted by the massive publicity and the acquittal of this man aforementioned — and no, it is not because I have penis-envy as some critics of my articles might argue; it's because throughout history not only have women had their genitals removed without their permission, but marital rape (as took place in the case mentioned above) is not recognized as a crime in many states' law codes.

Women who have been victims of genital removal receive no media compensation for their mutilation, thereby illustrating that it is OK for women to be sterilized without their consent, but for men it the most horrifying crime that can possibly occur.

Throughout American history, Native-American women — even in recent times — have been the victims of sterilization without their permission. However, we are rarely taught about this in our American history classes.

We find ourselves afraid to admit this part of history, so we simply avoid the subject rather than confronting that some of our ancestors believed that only certain races were fit to breed. Also, in some cultures, women's clitoris have been involuntarily removed. Although women have been subjected to the same torment that the now-infamous Bobbitt suffered, it has largely been ignored.

JESSICA KLINGER
Columnist

Some may argue the case is making so much news because it is an unusual occurrence, but losing sexual organs is not so unusual when one looks at the history of genital removal in women.

Perhaps it is making so much news because men's identity may be defined by the penis. You would probably never find a woman who loses her breasts to cancer define herself as less than a woman or if she has a hysterectomy she probably will not worry about her sex appeal. But when a man loses a penis, it will probably harm his self-esteem and most likely may not view himself as sexually attractive.

And it is also uncommon for women to brag about how big their breasts are, as some men brag about their penises. Instead, they complain about how their big breasts cause future back problems.

The fascination with Bobbitt's severed male member is disquieting in and of itself. But what is truly alarming is that the media has largely ignored the fact that John Bobbitt (now with organ reattached) was acquitted of marital rape — rape which lay at the heart of his wife's action — because the state of Virginia does not consider rape between spouses to be "rape" in a legal sense.

Apparently, some states still believe that marriage is a license for rape and abuse.

Mr. Bobbitt said that his wife cut off his penis out of jealousy and that she was dissatisfied with his lovemaking.

Ms. Bobbitt said, sobbing to the jury for two hours, that she had repeatedly been forced to have sex with her husband. After she had been raped she went to the kitchen, grabbed a knife, went back into the bedroom where her husband was sleeping and "cut it off."

Now if she is unsatisfied with his lovemaking, why would she "cut it off?" That probably will not make the sex more gratifying.

Like any abused woman, she probably was going through trauma, not realizing what she was doing. Granted that is no excuse for harming an individual, but it is just as bad as acquitting someone for rape.

The trouble with this case is that it has had to much publicity because when we look at history it is not that uncommon for unwanted sterilization to occur. Also, states need to recognize marital rape for what it is, an act of violence that deserves punishment.

STATE PRESS Letters to the editor

The State Press welcomes and encourages written response from our readers on any topic. All letters must be typed, double-spaced and no longer than two pages to be eligible for publication. Please include your full name, class standing and major (or any other affiliation with the University) and phone number. Only signed letters will be considered for publication. Requests for anonymity will be granted only with an appropriate reason. Letters are subject to editing by the opinion page editor for factual errors and print space availability. Letters containing obvious factual errors will be rejected. All letters must either be brought in person with a photo I.D. to the State Press front desk in the basement of the Matthews Center, or addressed to State Press, 15 Matthews Center, Arizona State University, Tempe Ariz., 85287-1502.

'Feminist' a term loaded with negative meaning

I would like to play the see-saw, and respond to the response I received about a letter to the editor I wrote earlier. I feel the need to explain to Janice Stamps why I do not label myself a "feminist."

First of all, I stay clear of labeling myself as anything, because I feel that it robs me of my individuality. Before I am a woman, I am an individual. Before I am a writer, I am an individual. Before I am anything, I am an individual.

Yes, I am proud to be a woman. Yes, I am proud of the history of the women's movement which finally opened many people's eyes to the unjust treatment women were receiving. I acknowledge that the feminist group has done a lot for women everywhere. I want to play a part in helping women. Believe me, I know that injustice is still being done in our society, today. Women are still being treated as inferior objects. I just don't want to be a part of some people who label themselves feminists today.

This comes to my second point, that feminists today have surpassed the realms of what feminism is supposed to stand for. Instead of claiming their individuality, they instead adopt a male-superior attitude and take on the defensive. I am not saying all feminists are like this, but what the public is hearing are these types of feminists. All I've been hearing from feminists since I came here for school is male-bashing. Who is going to listen to this?

All of this is hate. The word feminist has a bad connotative meaning attached to it. Maybe this isn't fair, but feminists themselves have given to this bad connotation. I am a woman that would like to bridge the gap between genders instead of spreading them further apart. I am an individual, and I will always be one, but there is no reason why men can't realize that women are their equals. There is no reason why we can't talk intelligently, maybe even respect each other.

If there is a new word you want to tack on me, go ahead. If it bothers you that much, go ahead. No, I am not a "feminist in denial," no, I am not a baby machine, no, I don't need a man to complete my life, but neither do I need anyone. I am completely confident in who I am (the right to choose, the right to say no, the right for equality), and that just doesn't include the word "feminist."

The very first Suns letter of the basketball season

I agree with about 90 percent of Mike Branom's NBA predictions in the Nov. 10 issue of the State Press. First, I'd like to say that everyone should root for the home team, in this case the Suns. I missed last year's excitement during the NBA playoffs because I recently moved here and am therefore anxiously looking forward to Sunmania and the upcoming season. Anyway, here's where I get to go out on a limb.

Atlantic Division — Unfortunately, New York is unchallenged to win its division. However, I am picking the Nets over the Orlando Magic and the Boston Celtics over the Heat.

Central Division — Charlotte will win the Central due to the acquisitions of Eddie Hohnson and Hersey Hawkins. So far their presence seems to have been motivated Johnny Newman and Dell Curry. And finally, I'm picking the Atlanta Hawks to make the playoffs based on the additions of Craig Ehlo, Andrew Lang and head coach Lenny Wilkens.

Midwest Division — How can you dismiss the Jazz? They never have problems making the playoffs, their problem is in the playoffs. I'm picking the Mailman and Company to squeak by the Rockets and Spurs to take the division. The young breed in Denver should win 40 games and make the playoffs because they aren't lucky enough to just miss the playoffs, make the lottery, and get the first pick. However, they may be lucky enough to win a playoff series by drawing Utah in the first round. Just kidding!

Pacific Division — If the Suns can get healthy, they can take care of the Seattle Supersonics. The Trailblazers, lead by Clifford Robinson's defense and Clyde Drexler's rebounding, should be a close third. The final team to make the playoffs: The L.A. Lakers. Coincidentally, the Lakers are also my pick for Rookie of the Year (Yes, the whole team!)

Finals — Phoenix over New York in a seven-game series! Charles Barkley is named finals MVP, A.C. Green gets Most Improved Player and Paul Westphal gets coach of the year.

Night owl student's schedule ruined by insistent phone calls

Anybody who has worked a night shift can sympathize with Dave Gault.

At night, he goes to his job as a bartender-waiter at a restaurant. When he gets home, he studies and grabs a nap. Then he gets up and goes to college, where he is working toward becoming a teacher.

After classes, he returns home and tries to grab a few hours of sleep before heading to his job.

He tries, but sleep isn't always possible. There is the dreaded enemy of all night workers: the telephone.

Gault, 35, doesn't get many calls from friends or relatives because they know his schedule.

But for the past year, he's been getting calls from bill collectors, collection agencies.

They are after a deadbeat who happens to be Gault's neighbor. "I don't know the guy," Gault says. "I don't know anything about him, except he lives in the same building," which is a 14-unit apartment complex in Chicago.

"The guy doesn't have a listed phone number. But I do. And I guess they can look in some kind of directory and get my name and number because I'm listed.

"So they wake me up and ask me if I know him. And I tell them, no, he lives in the same building but I don't know him.

"They say something like: 'Would it be possible for you to leave a message for him or go to his apartment and ask him to come to the phone?'

"Have you heard of anything that crazy? I'm supposed to go get him on the phone. I don't know if he's a nut or what, just that he doesn't pay his bills. I could be putting my life at risk bothering him.

"And what's the point? If the guy is a deadbeat, that's none of my business, except that they're making it my business."

When the calls began about a year ago, Gault would just tell them to go away and not bother him.

"They were about once a week. But then they started calling more often. And there is more than one company after him. There's one in the suburbs. There's another in Ohio.

"And for the past few months, I've been getting calls almost every day. It's really starting to drive me up a wall.

"I told one woman that if she wanted me to chase him for her, I'd send her a bill for $500 as a consulting fee. She got huffy and said I didn't stand a chance in hell of collecting a cent.

"Then I decided to change my tactics. When they'd call, I'd talk to them very politely. Then I'd get their names and the names

MIKE ROYKO
Tribune
Media
Service

and phone numbers of their companies. That way I'd know who was harassing me.

"One of the worst was this woman, Janet, in Ohio. She's a supervisor there. After her people kept calling me, I asked to talk to the supervisor. After I got her full name, I told her there was nothing I could do for or her company and asked her please not call me again.

"She yelled how it was my own fault because I don't have an unlisted phone number, and if I don't like being called, all I have to do is hang up. How is that for logic?

"And she told me that they have a perfect right to call me because I'm listed in the phone book."

Gault thought about what Janet said: Because he's listed, she has a right to call him.

"So I decided that if she felt that way, it ought to work both ways."

He tried a long shot, calling information for her company's area code in Ohio and asking if there was a listing for Janet's home phone.

Bingo, there was.

"I finally got even," Gault says. "A few nights ago, I got home at about 1:30 in the morning. That's 2:30 Ohio time.

"I was feeling a little spunky, so I called. My wife was mortified.

"Her husband answered the phone. I asked to speak to Janet.

"He asked me what this was about. I told him that it concerned her company. He said: 'She's getting a call from work at this hour of the night?'

"So I told him what the situation was, that they are always calling me when I'm trying to sleep, so I was calling to let her know that I couldn't help her with that deadbeat neighbor of mine.

"I wasn't rude or obscene. I just explained the situation. And I said: 'I trust that you are as irritated by my call as I've been by all the calls I've been receiving.' Then I said goodbye and hung up."

We called Janet in Ohio at her office, and she was highly indignant about having her sleep interrupted.

"If he calls me again, I will file charges. You tell him that. Making harassing calls in the middle of the night! It's unethical, it's against the law. I am doing my job, but he has no right to call me at home."

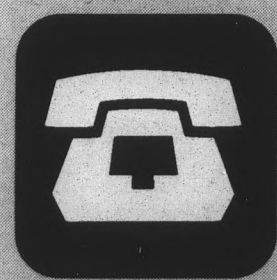

But your company calls him at home when he's trying to sleep.

"All he has to do is hang up."

Actually, he can do more than that. There are federal and state laws against what these collection companies have been doing. We've researched them for Gault, and he's going to pursue them.

The indignant Janet might learn that she isn't the only one who can file charges.

POLICE REPORT

Tempe police were called Sunday morning to contact a man whose van had been in the parking lot of the Safeway at 926 E. Broadway for three days.

The officer found the 42-year-old man asleep inside the van with a dog and two girls of ages 12 and 14. The man said he had arrived three days earlier from Idaho with his daughters. A records check revealed the man had an outstanding warrant for kidnapping the girls, who were not related to him, 17 days earlier in Sandpoint, Idaho.

The man was immediately arrested, and a subsequent search of the van produced a bag of marijuana, a pipe, a 9mm semiautomatic pistol and an AK-47 semiautomatic assault rifle. The girls were unharmed, and arrangements were made to return them to their homes. The dog was taken to Animal Control, the guns and marijuana were impounded, and the man was jailed to await extradition to Idaho.

ASU police reported the following incidents Monday:

- The weight room in Cholla Apartments E-wing was damaged by a fire Sunday afternoon. The State Fire Inspector's office is investigating the cause of the fire, but police have no suspects.
- A woman not affiliated with ASU reported that an unknown man exposed himself to her at Hayden Library Sunday evening.
- Unknown persons spray painted graffiti on a wall at Tempe Center some time before Sunday morning. Damage is estimated at $100.
- A male student called police from Ocotillo Hall after cutting his finger while off campus. He was treated by Tempe paramedics, then taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Monday:

- A 27-year-old Mesa man was killed while driving his motorcycle westbound near the 1600 block of East Southern Avenue Friday morning. He was hit on the right side by another vehicle as the driver, a 79-year-old Mesa man, made a left turn from a private road onto Southern without yielding to traffic. After the initial collision, the motorcycle crossed the center line and ran head-on into another vehicle at about 45 miles per hour. The driver of the motorcycle was not wearing a helmet, and was pronounced dead at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital because of massive head and chest injuries. Police made no arrests and did not issue any citations.

• A 26-year-old Tempe man was arrested for forgery after he signed a former co-worker's name to a $500 purchase order at Grainger, Inc., 2223 S. Wilson. Police later discovered the man had forged checks at three other Tempe businesses. The man admitted his guilt, and the property was recovered.

• A 19-year-old Phoenix man and a 28-year-old Guadalupe man were arrested Wednesday night at Denny's for trying to sell 30 pounds of marijuana to undercover detectives for $19,500.

• Police found a 40-year-old man passed out behind the wheel of his truck at 1300 S. McClintock Drive Saturday night. Investigation revealed the man had been involved in a hit-and-run accident minutes earlier at 800 S. Hacienda. He was arrested and taken to jail. Apparently upset in his cell, the man kicked and banged the door, then punched and spat in the face of the jailer who came to calm him down.

• A 29-year-old woman was arrested at 1701 E. Don Carlos Ave. late Wednesday night for soliciting prostitution.

Auto emissions test more stringent; cost doubles; repair fees increase

By JASON HILL
STATE PRESS

Last week's passage of the new clean air bill will double fees for vehicle emissions tests, but students who are eligible for food stamps can obtain financial aid, according to an Arizona legislator.

Arizona Rep. Lela Steffey, R-Mesa, said, "You don't actually have to be receiving food stamps, but if you are eligible then you can get assistance."

The bill, passed Friday, raises emissions testing fees from $5 every year to $20 every two years. Steffey said she is not satisfied with the clean air bill and said she felt that the increase in prices of the emissions test were unfair to citizens.

Tempe Vice Mayor Neil Giuliano said he was happy to learn that the bill will enable low income families and students in the same bracket to receive financial aid, but he said he felt that not all students should be included.

"I don't think it should blanket all students, because some students aren't low income," Giuliano said.

Repair costs for vehicles that don't pass emissions tests will also rise by 50 percent as a result of the bill. Drivers who own vehicles from 1967-1974 will have to pay a minimum of $100 in repairs; models from 1975-1980 must pay a $300 minimum; and cars from 1981 to the present will jump to $450.

People with low incomes will be able to receive assistance up to half price by virtue of waivers. The money will come from a fund set up as part of the clean air bill.

The new emissions test, called the IM/240, will be in full effect by 1995 and will include both governmental and commercial vehicles to pass stringent tests which search for broken hoses and faulty canisters.

Jim Huling, special programs director for Tempe City Projects, said that though Tempe has not had air quality problems in the past to the extent that Phoenix has, the recent addition and future expansion of the Red Mountain freeway is cause for concern.

Huling said he believes that the passage of the clean air bill was a difficult decision for all the legislators involved, but the threat of losing potential federal highway funding would have been detrimental to Arizona.

"It's like going to the dentist — the worse it gets if you put it off," Huling said of the bill.

Also included in the clean air bill is a mandate which requires burning wood in the fireplaces to be banned on days when pollution is high in the Valley.

Steffey said that if everything works right, the clean air bill could have a positive effect on air quality.

ASU parking decals are not currently issued to students or faculty unless they provide sufficient proof that their vehicles have passed emissions. ASU parking spokesman Gary Burns said that decal prices should remain the same for at least two years, despite the increase in emissions testing fees.

numbers are significant, he would propose incentives for students to graduate within 160 hours, such as improved counseling and required courses that are more readily available.

Munger said he believes that figures from the other two universities won't be much different from NAU's.

"I would be surprised if they weren't consistent with (NAU's numbers)," he said.

Regent Rudy Campbell agreed with Munger, saying the number of NAU students who have collected over 160 hours poses no problem.

"That number doesn't amount to much," he said. "If it's that small of a number, I don't think it's being abused."

Campbell said he will have to see all of the data to make a final judgment on the issue. But he said regular students are being hurt if the figures turn out to be high at ASU and the UofA.

"It's not fair having students want to stick around six years," he said. "If it's being abused, that's at the expense of other students."

"I don't like to have students calling me and telling me they can't get classes."

Munger said reactions to his suggestions have been overblown.

"All of the students are excited that something is happening, but I'm just asking questions," he said.

He added that the rest of the ABOR knows that he is only looking for facts. "They all know that I am just asking questions," Munger said.

Andrew Guile, an NAU student on the Arizona Students Association board of directors, said the figure disproves the idea that students are abusing the system.

"In my opinion, that shows how ludicrous the whole accusation is," he said. "It would cost 10 times more for the state to go and collect the money than to just pay for the classes."

Guile stressed that less than 1 percent of NAU's 15,000 students have collected over 160 hours. He said he believes ASU and UofA will have similar percentages.

"Overall, the figures statewide won't be much higher," he said.

Guile said he hopes that he will be able to contact the 22 students. "We're going to find out if it was the system, rather than them abusing the system," he said.

Steve Jordan, deputy executive director of planning for the ABOR, said the data is compiled from numbers the universities are collecting to fulfill a request by state auditors.

Campus environment report complete

By JOY E. BEASON
STATE PRESS

An administrative task force has completed a report listing 20 ways to improve the learning environment for an increasingly diverse campus and will present its findings to ASU President Lattie Coor next week.

"Our committee met last week and reviewed the final draft of the report," said Gretchen Bataille, chair of the Self-Assessment for Quality and Diversity committee and associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

The committee held several hearings over the past few months in an effort to garner feedback on the report from students, faculty, staff and administrators.

As a result of the feedback, clarifications have been made to the report rather than major changes to the content, Bataille said.

According to Bataille, the last addition to the report was a clarification on the difference between diversity and cultural diversity. As a result, Bataille said the committee has planned to add some paragraphs clarifying the difference.

Last month, the task force received negative feedback that its definition of diversity was too broad. At the time, Bataille said the definition would not change.

Other modifications have included clarifying the classification of "under-prepared students" and adding recognition of minority faculty who advise minority students on top of their normal workload.

A rough draft of the report was released in late September, composed by a group of faculty and administrators from various departments throughout the University.

It details 20 points "recommending a strategic framework to guide future actions aimed at improving the learning environment for an increasing diverse student clientele."

The information for the report was compiled as a result of committee members' answers to 64 study questions on the "as-is state" of ASU and ASU West. The committee validated its findings — which are archived in the Hayden Library — in focus groups.

Bataille said that the committee will present the report to Coor by Thanksgiving, meeting pre-established target dates.

Coor could not say when he would be able to respond to the report, but said he would attend to it as time allows.

"I will try to move as quickly as I can on the report," Coor said. "I hope to give them some feedback by the beginning of the (spring) semester."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson didn't check into an overseas drug treatment program as an excuse to avoid returning to the United States to face child molestation allegations, his attorneys said today.

The entertainer's civil attorney, Bertram Fields labeled as "flatly false" suggestions that Jackson's claim that he is seeking help with an addiction to painkillers is an excuse to avoid returning home.

"If Michael Jackson wanted an excuse to stay out of the United States all he had to do is stay on his tour," Fields told a news conference.

The attorney said Jackson was "barely able to function on an intellectual level" because of his addiction to painkillers.

The drug treatment program was not revealed. Fields said Jackson's privacy could not have been protected in an American institution, but he insisted the program was actually chosen based on medical advice.

Asked about reports that Jackson was in France, Fields would only say that extradition laws had nothing to do with the country where Jackson went for treatment.

The tour cancellation led to a parting of ways between Jackson and Pepsico.

The soft drink giant canned its backing of the superstar on Sunday, two days after Jackson backed out of the tour claiming he was addicted to painkillers.

Jackson has said he became addicted after corrective surgery seven months ago for injuries suffered when he was burned by a fire on a Pepsi commercial set in 1984.

The Pepsi endorsement was scheduled to end at the same time that Jackson's "Dangerous" tour ended. Jackson called a halt to the tour Friday.

"The cancellation of the tour really effectively cancels our relationship with Michael right now," Pepsi spokesman Gary Hemphill said Saturday. "We just hope he is able to resolve his problems."

Jackson, 35, has been hounded by accusations that he molested a California boy. No formal charges have been filed.

Jay Coleman, who brokered the deal between Pepsi and Jackson, told The New York Daily News today that the endorsement had simply "run its course."

Meanwhile, Jackson remains in seclusion.

"Jacko: You can't hide!," headlined the Sunday Mirror of London.

His whereabouts were not announced. Various reports put him in London or Switzerland, and the director general of a hotel in the French Alps said today he was there.

Jackson's stay had been kept secret because the pop star "needed a certain amount of discretion," said Albin Marchesseau. He is director of the Marchesseau hotel group that runs the Hotel Les Dromonts in Avoriaz, a resort town.

Sports Briefs

Lucas named Player of Week

ASU linebacker Dan Lucas has been named one of four Pac-10 Players of the Week, along with quarterback Steve Stenstrom of Stanford, Eric Zomalt of California and punter John Stonehouse of USC. All four were involved in upset victories over the weekend.

Lucas, a junior from Oroville, Calif., keyed ASU's defensive effort and scored the only touchdown in the game in the Sun Devils' 9-3 upset of 10th-ranked UCLA. He returned an interception 31 yards in the fourth quarter for the game-winning touchdown. Lucas also was credited with 11 tackles (six unassisted), caused two fumbles, recovered one fumble and had one pass deflection.

Smith makes Wooden Top 25

ASU guard Stevin "Hedake" Smith was one of 25 players named to the pre-season poll Monday to receive one of college basketball's most coveted honors — the Classic Games John R. Wooden Award.

The top 25 candidates for the 1994 Wooden All-American team were selected based on their performances last season and on the performances of their teams. A second group of 25 players was recognized as having received serious consideration for the award.

Ten players from the top 25 will be chosen to the Wooden All-American team, and one will be named "Collegiate Player of the Year" on April 8, 1994.

Early frontrunners for the award include Duke's Grant Hill, Vanderbilt's Billy McCaffrey, Eric Montross of North Carolina and Glen Robinson of Michigan.

Other Pac-10 candidates are California's Jason Kidd and UCLA's Ed O'Bannon. Mark Hendrickson of Washington State, Lamond Murray of California, Damon Stoudamire from UofA and Shon Tarver of UCLA made the second team.

Geiger, Davidson top Wildcats

ASU's Meredith Geiger and Kori Davidson defeated cross-state rivals, UofA's Michelle Oldham and Celine Verdier 7-5, 6-7, 6-4 for the doubles championship at the Rolex-ITA Southern California Women's Tennis Regional Sunday.

Geiger/Davidson were unseeded in the doubles competition and upset a number of seeded teams before defeating the UofA duo.

ASU's golf coach to be honored

ASU women's golf coach Linda Vollstedt will be honored today at the Women's Golf Summit in Pebble Beach, Calif., for her continuing contributions to the sport.

The award will be presented by Dinah Shore to the ten recipients along with master of ceremonies Kathleen Sullivan.

Vollstedt, who is in her 14th year at ASU, coached the Sun Devil squad to NCAA Championships in 1990 and 1993. The ASU graduate swept all coaching honors last season with Pac-10 Conference Coach of the Year, Far West Region coach of the year and national honors as well.

Also receiving awards will be ASU Hall of Famer Jane Bastanchury-Booth, Patty Berg, Kellee Booth, Vicki Goetze, Nancy Lopez, Carol Mann, Caren Peek, Carol Semple-Thompson and Shirley Spork.

Tom Sadler, director of Stadium Operations, says the Sun Devil Stadium field is "light years" ahead of the poor condition it was in last year and is excited about showing off the turf at the upcoming Fiesta Bowl.

Field flourishes at Sun Devil Stadium

BY MIKE BRANOM
STATE PRESS

A week from Friday, the eyes of the state will be upon Sun Devil Stadium, watching UofA and ASU write another chapter in the story of their heated football rivalry. On New Year's Day, the Fiesta Bowl may host the national championship with a rematch between Notre Dame and Florida State. An audience of millions around the globe would watch.

If all goes well for Director of Stadium Operations Tom Sadler, the field will be a lush carpet of green for those games, a far cry from the sandbox that was passed off for turf a year ago.

By all accounts, last season's field was a mess. Scheduling and the elements combined to kill the grass and make playing conditions generally miserable. Consider that the turf had to survive these assorted punishments:

- Between ASU and the NFL Phoenix Cardinals, 14 games played in 17 weeks, including two back-to-back games in a weekend.
- U2 played a concert in the stadium in late October.
- Two Arizona high school championship games at the stadium were played in a driving December rainstorm.
- The hot-water heating system built below the field caused the grass to destroy its root system in a desperate attempt at survival.

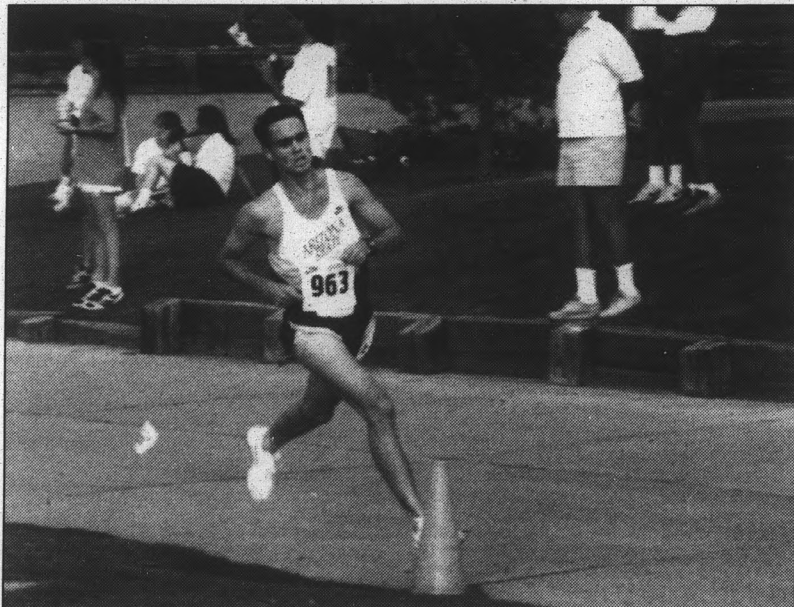

The management system responsible for the stadium's upkeep resulted in too much compromising and not enough action.

The result of all those forces made the field look terrible and play as it looked, as there was no wall-to-wall grass, but a homely mix of sand and turf.

Cardinals' kicker Greg Davis took the brunt of the ragged sod, hitting on only four of ten field goal attempts at Sun Devil Stadium. On the road, his accuracy improved, nailing nine of 16 tries. In Phoenix's last game of the season, Davis and Tampa Bay's Eddie Murray combined to miss six field goals on the sandy sod.

By the time Colorado and Syracuse met on

ASU's Scroggins races to 23rd-place finish

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ASU junior Erin Scroggins capped a fine season Saturday with a 26th-place finish at the NCAA Region VIII Cross Country meet in Woodland, Wash.

Scroggins, the lone Sun Devil to compete in the Regional meet, covered the 10,000 meter course at Lewis River Golf Course in 30:50.7. Scroggins grew up in nearby Vancouver, Wash., and competed as a prep at Vancouver's Mountain View High School.

Washington State's Josephat Kapkory claimed the men's individual title, finishing in 29:20.5, while sixth-ranked Portland took the team championship with 56 total points. The Pilots, along with runner-up Washington (71), earned a trip to the NCAA Championship, Nov. 22, at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa.

UCLA's Karen Hecox won the women's title with a time of 16:41.6 over 5,000 meters. UofA won the team title with 59 points, followed by Stanford with 65.

Olympic sports deserve 2nd look

Top-notch ASU athlete's create memories that will live forever

I missed the Florida State/Notre Dame game on Saturday to attend an ASU swimming meet, and I think I got the better end of the deal.

The Sun Devil swimming program is one of ASU's lesser known sports that deserves more attention. Other sports include volleyball, golf, wrestling, tennis and softball.

All of these teams are always in the top 20 of their respective sport, yet they get as much attention as the beloved campus preachers who stalk the Memorial Union fountain area everyday.

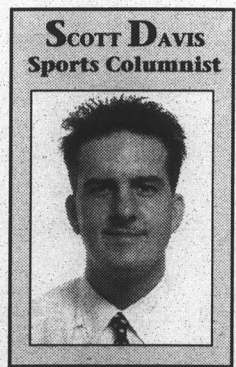

It's a shame these teams don't get the fan support that the baseball, basketball and football teams land. In terms of talent, there isn't a lick of difference.

Last season, the women's swimming team finished ninth in the nation, while the men popped in at 19th. This season, they're a combined 6-0 and have more talent than last year. Together, the two teams have five foreign Olympians.

Why not head out to the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center and watch these past and future Olympians tread through the water? It will give you something to tell your children come 1996 or 2000.

And what about our volleyball team? It is currently ranked 11th, but is arguably the hottest team in the nation. They upset No. 2 Stanford earlier in the year and have been nearly unstoppable since.

The Sun Devils are led by outside hitter Christine Garner. She is ranked numero uno in the Pac-10 and fifth in the nation in kills. Unfortunately, only 500 people come and see her play at ASU.

Jan. 1, the game looked less of a showdown between two college powerhouses than a twisted version of The Sands of Iwo Jima.

"That was a very long period in my life, from the beginning of December to the end of the Fiesta Bowl," Sadler said.

This year, though, the field is in great condition. Sadler says the turf is "light years" ahead of what it was a year ago.

The dominant reason for the field's revival is Sadler's use of a different management approach. Instead of hiring out groundskeepers on a contractual basis, the system last year, caretakers were hired directly through the university.

"What we've done is eliminate the different layers of management with all their different opinions," Sadler said. "This year, we have two consultants and one guy taking care of the field. By cutting some of the fat, you save the University some dollars and streamline the turf-maintenance process."

The Sun Devils play one more game on the field and the Cardinals play three more. With the Class 4A and 5A high school championships being held once again at Sun Devil Stadium, Sadler has six games in the next month and a half to worry about.

He is concerned, but not worried, about the turf. Sadler believes that the groundskeeping methods are correct and all is well for the potential Fighting Irish-Seminole showdown.

"We feel real good about where we're going and look forward to the possibility of a national championship," Sadler said. "We feel pretty good about that."

FSU, Nebraska No.2 in polls

BY RICK WARNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Once again, the polls have become a source of controversy in college football.

Who should get a chance to play No. 1 Notre Dame for the national championship, Florida State or Nebraska?

The two major polls disagree, fueling bar-room arguments, raising questions about the bowl selection process and putting pressure on the voters who play a key role in determining who gets to play for the title.

"Hey, it beats talking about NAFTA," said ESPN commentator Beano Cook. "I'd rather listen to Bowden and Osborne than Perot and Gore."

No one knows where Ross Perot and Vice President Al Gore stand on the great Florida State-Nebraska debate. But every hard-core fan knows where the Seminoles and Cornhuskers stand in The Associated Press and USA Today-

CNN polls.

The AP media poll ranks Florida State second and Nebraska third. The USA Today-CNN coaches' poll has them reversed. The bowl coalition, which combines the two polls to determine the major bowl matchups, has Florida State No. 2 and Nebraska No. 3.

So who's right? "Nobody's right and nobody's wrong — it's just a lot of opinions," said Cook, who votes in the AP poll. "It's a great outlet for people who want to talk about college football, and it doesn't hurt anybody. Nobody's getting mugged over this — yet."

Bowl coalition officials acknowledge the system isn't perfect, but they believe voters try to be fair.

"We're not talking about brain surgery with laser beams," said John Junker, executive director of the Fiesta Bowl. "You look at all the

It amazes me that 46,344 people will go out and watch the ASU football team slither by Oklahoma State, but only 500 people will watch a young woman who may join some of the ASU swimmers in Atlanta in three years.

Right now, nobody can touch the ASU women's golf team. And the men aren't too shabby either. It's hard to cheer for them since they only have one home match per year.

But get out there during that one time. This season offers another story to tell your children in the future. Emilee Klein is leaving at the end of the season to hit the LPGA. Why not go to her home finale?

Besides Klein, numerous others are bound for the pro tour. The women have Pac-10 Champion, Wendy Ward. The men have NCAA champ, Todd Demsey.

Who does this compare to? A young lady named Brandie Burton and a young man named Phil Mickelson. Both millionaires. Can't you just see your child's eyes now? Sports such as wrestling, tennis and softball don't kick into high gear until the spring. Consider this a two-month notice.

The ASU wrestling team finished fourth in the nation last season. So what did Coach Lee Roy Smith do during the off-season? He brought in the third highest recruiting class in the nation. Some young blood mixed with some hungry veterans will provide plenty of success.

Both tennis teams are also looking impressive for the upcoming season. The women finished last season ranked seventh and will carry an almost identical team this season. Kori Davidson plays with so much pizzazz on the court that she makes John McEnroe look boring.

The men struggled last year, but that was without the Armenian wonder, freshman Sargis Sargsian.

Coach Lou Belken feels Sargsian could be one of the best, if not the best, in Sun Devil tennis history. Why not be at his first ASU match?

When he beats Jim Courier at Wimbledon in 1999, you could once again overwhelm your child.

The softball team is also on the upswing. After making it to the regionals of last season's NCAA tournament, Coach Linda Wells made some vast improvements.

She added a lethal battery in pitcher Carrie James and catcher Sandra Langston. This could be the final piece to an NCAA Championship puzzle.

NCAA Championships don't come to ASU athletics too often. When your child is about to select UCLA or Notre Dame over ASU because of their greater number of NCAA titles, sit him or her down and say, "Did I ever tell you about the time ..."

Poll

teams, you do your homework and you list the Top 25. I think the voters do a conscientious job."

The Florida State-Nebraska question is crucial because the team that finishes second in the coalition poll will get to play Notre Dame for the national title if both teams win their remaining-regular-season games.

If Florida State (9-1) beats North Carolina State and Florida, the Seminoles would get a Fiesta Bowl rematch against Notre Dame, which beat FSU 31-24 Saturday in South Bend.

But, if Florida State loses and Nebraska beats Oklahoma on Nov. 26, the Cornhuskers (10-0) would play Notre Dame (10-0) in the Orange Bowl.

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE
Every weekday, we give you the State Press absolutely free. Great news. Great features. Even a magazine. Crosswords and horoscopes. Not to mention the huge savings from all the coupons.
We do this for you every day. Will you do something for us? Good! Thanks!
When the State Press has inserts, they tend to flop to the ground and create a safety hazard as well as an eyesore. Would you be so socially correct as to bend over and pick an insert that might slip out of your State Press? Thanks.
We appreciate your help. And so does the earth.

MISCELLANEOUS MISCELLANEOUS

 Letter to Santa Contest

Ho-Ho-Ho. It's that time of year again! Christmas is sneaking up on us...before you know it, Santa will be wiggling down your chimney and filling your home with gifts of joy (if you've been good and if you still believe in Santa!)

Anyway, the State Press is having its annual "Letters to Santa Contest." All you have to do is write a letter to Santa. It can be funny, creative, political, socially correct, sad, touching, senseless, inane, insane, vivid, colorful, cold...you get the message.

There will be three winners. We will award a $25 cash prize for first place, $15 dining gift certificate for second place, and a coffee mug for third.

All entries will be published in the December 7 issue of the State Press. The three winners will have their letters published "larger than life..." large enough to cut out and magnet to the fridge as a joyous reminder of the festive season, not to mention large enough to cut out extra copies and give to everyone you know.

So. Dust off your keyboards, sharpen your pencils and begin your letters today. This is your chance to (finally) tell your parents that you "got published." Bring your type-written letter to the State Press in Matthews Center basement by noon, Wednesday, December 1. Include your name, phone number and ASU ID#. Students and staff are encouraged to enter.

Your Individual Horoscope

For Tuesday, November 16, 1993
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
A friendship may reach a critical juncture today. In business, you will meet with new opportunities to get ahead. Talks with those in high places are favored now.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
Though a business setback or delay is possible now, you will have luck in reaching agreements with others. A partner is understanding, supportive, and affectionate.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Students may have to buckle down today. Travel plans may be changed. Talks relating to business and financial interests are favored now. Be alert for opportunity.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Extra expenses may arise in connection with child-rearing. It's a poor time for financial risk-taking. Tonight brings happy developments in romance and partnerships.
LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
You will have to be willing to compromise to make a partnership work today. Clear thinking and good judgement bring job successes now. Tonight favors family talks.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
You may meet with delays or setbacks in business today. Patience, though, will win out. Later, there's an accent on romance and relaxation through leisure interests.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
You may be faced with extra expenses now. Home-based activities are favored over outside entertainments. Real estate dealings are a plus today.
Tonight brings insights.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
Extra responsibilities may come now through family. A relative may not see things your way. The afternoon and evening bring good news. Tonight you are communicative and self-expressive.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
A relative may need your support and encouragement today. You will receive information now that will be a help to you financially. A private discussion goes well.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
Money may be an issue between you and a friend today. However, tonight brings happy social developments. You will be making a wonderful impression on those you meet.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
Try not to sell yourself short today. Keep aspirations high. Extra study or research will make you more confident about a career concern. Do your homework.
PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
Morning hours will be given to worry. However, a social engagement will get you out of yourself. Be sure to accept invitations. Good time are special tonight.
YOU BORN TODAY may have an interest in politics and public service. You have strong beliefs and often serve the community in some advisory capacity. You enjoy challenges and bounce back readily from setbacks. You have philosophic and literary interests, which you should cultivate. Also, you have intense feelings, which you shouldn't let get in the way of good judgment. Birthdate of: Dwight Gooden, baseball player; Burgess Meredith, actor; and William C. Handy, songwriter.

Tip # 6. Want to get rid of that black muck on your front wheel rims? That's brake dust coming from your pads and rotors. Wash it away, when the car is cold, by just hosing down the inside of the rims.
