NAFTA brings out mixed emotions among Hispanics

By JOY E. BEASON
STATE PRESS

Members of ASU's Hispanic community have mixed hopes regarding today's congressional vote on the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"It is something that in the long run will prove beneficial," said Santos Vega, program director of the Hispanic Research Center. "It will help some, but some will get hurt. It was a natural step to be made in the name of progress."

If passed, NAFTA would considerably free up trade restrictions which currently exist between the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Not all Hispanic students are in favor of the proposal, however.

"What is already happening is that the constitution in Mexico has been changed — Americanized," said Juan Guevara, president of the Chicano Student Coalition.

Guevara said the Mexican education system has already become "Americanized" in that the Mexican government has begun charging for education that previously was provided free through college.

Guevara said he sees the passage of NAFTA as "leaving the poor on the assembly line. Now people are going to lose their lands to multiple-nation corporations."

Vega said he disagreed with comments made recently by Ross Perot, founder of United We Stand America and former presidential candidate, which insinuated that Mexican workers are not as productive as their American counterparts.

"That particular comment was upsetting and invalid," Vega said.

New problems, old skeleton plague basketball

Athletic department defends basketball team's low GPA

By MIKE BRANOM
STATE PRESS

Officials from the ASU athletic department on Tuesday attributed the men's basketball team's department-low 1.4 grade point average for the spring 1993 semester to heavy scheduling and departing team members who 'gave up' academically in mid-semester.

The figure was released during Monday's Academic Senate meeting by Jerry Kingston, faculty athletics representative and professor of economics, as part of his annual report to the Senate.

Two members of the department defended the players, saying that while last semester's grades were less than exemplary, all members of the team are making progress towards degrees.

"Last semester was a bad semester, but they're all in good standing at this time, and that's the bottom line to me," ASU Basketball Coach Bill Frieder said.

A 2.0 GPA is required to graduate from ASU.

"Right now, on the men's basketball team, there's only one member on probation," said Jill DeMichele, assistant athletic director for academic and student services. "We only have one student with a GPA below 2.0, and (that player's) GPA is between 1.95 and 2.0."

Frieder complained that team members miss two or three days of class when going on road trips. He suggested that the Pac-10 schedule its conference games during weekends, replacing the Thursday/Saturday routine used now.

The weekend format would mean the team would probably leave Friday morning or afternoon, resulting in less class time missed.

However, Kingston said that the travel demands placed on the basketball team are no greater than the demands placed on most other athletic programs in the department.

"The amount of missed class time in basketball is really much less than in a number of other sports, like tennis and golf," Kingston said. "Any time a student misses class it can affect their academic performance, but these problems are not unusual or unnecessarily severe in the sport of basketball."

Frieder was especially distressed about the timing of some of the away games. For the second year in a row, the Sun Devils will be on the road during the first week of the spring semester.

"I think that's ridiculous, and there's no better way to put your kids in a hole than to have them miss classes the first week when the groundwork is being laid," he said.

Another explanation for the poor academic semester, Kingston said, is that members of the team who would not be returning for the next semester may have cared little about their academic per-

Pitt gets 2 years probation for recruitment of Faulkner

By JULIE REUVERS
STATE PRESS

The University of Pittsburgh was placed on two years' probation Tuesday for serious violations of NCAA rules in the recruiting of former New York City basketball star and former ASU player Jamal Faulkner.

The sanctions were the first against the university in a major sport and resulted from former assistant coach John Sarandrea's recruiting of Faulkner in 1988 and 1989, according to a letter of inquiry sent to Pitt by the NCAA.

According to the NCAA's letter of inquiry, which wasn't made public, former CBS-TV video editor Sam Albano allegedly paid Faulkner's $7,000 tuition at Cheshire Academy in Connecticut after Faulkner did not meet Pitt's enrollment guidelines.

Albano, a St. John's graduate, was a friend of Sarandrea, a former coach at Tolentine High School in the Bronx.

The NCAA also found that Sarandrea told Faulkner that if he needed anything at Cheshire, he was to contact Albano. Faulkner planned to attend the prep school only long enough to meet eligibility requirements at Pitt.

Faulkner also received clothes and cash gifts and his mother allegedly was also given gifts.

Faulkner never attended Pitt and signed with ASU, where he was named the Pac-10 Freshman of the Year in 1991, one of only two Sun Devils to win that honor. He was ASU's top scorer when he was released from his scholarship in September 1992. He later transferred to Alabama.

Faulkner's dismissal from ASU followed his arrest on Sept. 5, 1992, for allegedly assaulting his ex-girlfriend at her Tempe apartment. The arrest came less than 72 hours after he was released from jail, where he served six days of a 30-day sentence for violating a probation sentence. He and three teammates were serving the sentence after pleading guilty to charging over $13,000 in telephone calls to a ASU credit card.

"Any time a team's GPA is low, it may be because those who are not returning or will have no eligibility remaining have less incentive to really pay attention to their academic work, because of the fact that they do not have to meet the NCAA Satisfactory Progress rule anymore," Kingston said.

DeMichele said there were such instances among the men's basketball team last semester.

"We did have at least one to two students who just did not take our guidance or advice and gave up and stopped attending (class)," she said.

The probation affects all Pitt athletic teams but does not bar the Panthers from postseason play or television appearances.

ASU Assistant Media Relations Director Doug Tammaro said Tuesday that ASU Basketball Coach Bill Frieder did not wish to comment on the matter.

Pitt's basketball program will be limited to 12 scholarships in the 1994-95 and 1995-96 academic years, down from the normal 13, and expense-paid recruiting visits will be cut from 15 to 12 next season.

"We're happy this is over with," Pitt Athletic Director Oval Jaynes said. "The cloud's been lifted from our heads. When you go through an extended period of time not knowing what's going to happen, you feel better when you get it behind you."

There is no evidence that Pitt coach Paul Evans was aware of the promises to Faulkner, according to Jaynes. However, Evans is in the final year of his contract and his status past this season has not been determined, Jaynes said.

Allegations that Faulkner was improperly recruited were first made by the player's former Amateur Athletic Union coach, Wayne Simone,

"That is the main reason for that aberration in the semester grade point average."

However, the team's GPA has dipped below 2.0 for four out of the last eight semesters. Spring 1993 was the lowest that the team's GPA has been over the last four years.

Departed guard Tes Whitlock, who reportedly transferred to a junior college in California, failed three classes last semester. He passed a Pass/Fail basketball class and received an incomplete in an independent study class, signifying a 0.0 semester GPA.

in the 1990 book "Raw Recruits."

NCAA infractions committee chairman David Swank said Pitt cooperated fully in the investigation — the school hired an attorney to probe the alleged violations — and may have avoided more serious sanctions by its openness.

Sarandrea, a former New York fireman, was hired by Pitt coach Paul Evans in 1987 specifically to recruit New York City. His recruiting was generally regarded as average and he left the school last year to coach at nearby New Castle High School.

According to the NCAA report, any member school that hires Sarandrea as a basketball coach in the next three years faces an automatic hearing before the infractions committee.

As a freshman, Faulkner established himself as one of the Pac-10's brightest stars. He set ASU freshman records in total points scored in a single season (462) and in scoring average (15.4). Faulkner also started in more games (28) than any other Sun Devil freshman. He holds the freshman record for most field goals attempted (384) and made (189).

Goddard slams crime plan

TUCSON (AP) — In a preview of the coming campaign for governor, Democrat Terry Goddard accused Gov. Fife Symington of "literally throwing away money" with his $32 million proposal to fight juvenile crime.

Goddard, a Democrat who lost to Symington in 1991, spoke Monday to the Democrats of Greater Tucson at the end of a southern Arizona campaign-organizing swing.

Goddard legally began his campaign in May when he registered his fund-raising group. The former Phoenix mayor said Tuesday he plans a formal campaign kickoff "with the glossy photos and balloons" early next year.

Goddard said Symington's plan ignores the actual causes of juvenile crime — a "completely ineffective juvenile justice system," a lack of state funding for behavioral health programs targeted at young people and a "corrections system that everyone knows is broken."

Symington's plan was outlined on Nov. 2 at an Arizona Town Hall on juvenile crime and proposes more spending on programs for at-risk preschoolers, training for parents and anti-drug efforts.

The Republican governor also called for more police officers in schools, boot camps for juvenile offenders and county-wide curfews for young people.

Goddard said he would offer a detailed program for fighting juvenile crime as his campaign develops.

Gun measure awaits action while legality reviewed

TUCSON (AP) — Police won't enforce Tucson's new gun control law for minors until the city attorney reviews whether the ordinance is allowed by state law.

The ordinance passed on a 5-2 vote Monday by the City Council prohibits people younger than 18 from carrying a gun or air gun except while hunting or target shooting while accompanied by a parent, grandparent or licensed gun instructor.

A less-strict state law allows minors between ages 14 and 17 to carry a gun if they are involved in hunting or target shooting, even if alone. The state law specifically prohibits cities from making their own laws.

If City Attorney Fred Dean holds to his position that the state law means the city cannot enforce its ordinance, police will comply, acting Police Chief Michael Ulichny said.

"We will submit (the law) to him and wait for guidance," said Ulichny, who spoke in favor of gun control for minors at a previous council meeting.

Mayor George Miller said the council enacted the ordinance to demonstrate to state lawmakers that tough measures are needed.

Hospital doctor arrested in connection with rapes

PHOENIX (AP) — A hospital pediatrician has been arrested on a felony warrant out of Utah involving rape charges, police said.

Mark Kenneth Patton, 30, was taken into custody at his home here Sunday and is being held in Madison Street Jail without bail pending an extradition hearing Friday, Phoenix police spokesman Kevin Robinson said Monday.

Robinson said Patton was arrested on a felony warrant out of St. George, Utah.

Patton, a 1992 graduate of the University of Utah Medical School, was wanted in connection with rapes of a minor under the age of 14 in the summer of 1986 and 1987 and rapes in December 1992 and July 1993, authorities said.

A Washington County, Utah, prosecutor said all four charges involve a single victim but no other details were made available.

Clinton closing NAFTA gap

House to vote today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seizing the momentum on the eve of a House showdown, President Clinton won a rush of converts Tuesday for the North American Free Trade Agreement. Opponents accused the White House of doling out billions to line up support.

An Associated Press survey showed more than 200 House members were supporting the pact or likely to do so — a gain of roughly two dozen since the weekend. In contrast, opponents' numbers were dwindling, and stood at roughly 200.

"The Congress has simply got to vote for hope over fear, for the future over the past. They've got to vote for confidence in the ability of the American people to compete and win," Clinton told the nation's governors, summoned to the White House to provide evidence of widespread support for the treaty.

Rhetoric aside, it was the nitty-gritty details that concerned the president and his aides as they labored to nail down a majority for the agreement to bind the United States, Canada and Mexico closer.

Mickey Kantor, the administration's trade representative, worked with Florida lawmakers over terms to shield the state's tomato growers from damage in the event Mexico violates export standards.

Clinton met at the White House with Rep. Floyd Flake, D-N.Y., who emerged to announce his support. Flake said the president had pledged to support new Small Business Administration pilot programs to provide funds for urban areas. "It's my hope my district would be one of those," said Flake.

Opponents were biting in their criticism of such tactics. Rep. Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio, said the administration was serving up "pork" in the "basement of the White House."

Said Rep. David Bonior, the House Democratic whip and most active opponent, "I shudder to think what it will take to get votes to pass a decent health care bill next year."

Giving political cover to Republicans, Clinton pledged to send thank-you notes to any lawmaker who supports the agreement. He wrote GOP House leader Bob Michel it would be inappropriate to campaign against candidates in 1994 on the basis of their support for the agreement.

The House vote is set for Wednesday, and it will take a majority of 218 votes to win approval. Passage there would send the accord to the Senate, where Democratic and Republican leaders issued fresh predictions of passage.

"Let me make it clear and unmistakable: The Senate will pass the North American Free Trade Agreement," said Majority Leader George Mitchell.

The accord is designed to create a free trade zone for Mexico, Canada and the United States by reducing tariffs over 15 years. Supporters say the pact would open a vast new Mexican market for American industries and serve as a linchpin for broader agreements involving other countries in the hemisphere and Asia and Europe as well.

Opponents, from Ross Perot to organized labor, say thousands of jobs will be lost as American firms move factories south to take advantage of lower wages and laxer environmental standards in Mexico.

Patience was wearing thin at the end of the grueling lobbying struggle.

Rep. Mel Reynolds, D-Ill., emerged from a one-on-one talk with Clinton with a slap at organized labor's efforts to defeat the agreement.

"I'm 11-for-11 as far as labor votes are concerned since I've been here. Unmitigated threats about your tenure in this job. ... I thought that was out of line and wrong."

Several members of United We Stand, a Perot-backed organization that opposes the pact, complained after being denied admission to a closed-door session where Florida lawmakers met with the state's major agriculture interests.

Asked if a majority of the House yet supported the accord, Clinton said, "We're getting there."

His optimism was echoed by leading congressional supporters.

U.S. circuit court judge: Navy must admit gay man ousted by academy

WASHINGTON (AP) — For a fifth time this year, a court has ordered a homosexual in the military restored to service. Six years after midshipman Joseph Steffan was forced to leave the U.S. Naval Academy, a court ordered him graduated and commissioned as a naval officer.

The decision Tuesday suggested that the final word on homosexuals in the military may be spoken by the courts — very likely the Supreme Court — and not by Congress or President Clinton.

"America's hallmark has been to judge people by what they do and not by who they are," Chief Judge Abner Mikva wrote for the three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington. All three were appointees of President Carter.

The panel said the Navy's ban of declared homosexuals was based on prejudice and served no legitimate purpose.

"It is fundamentally unjust to abort a most promising military career solely because of a truthful confession of a sexual preference different from that of the majority, a preference untarnished by even a scintilla of misconduct," the court held.

Steffan, whose stellar performance at the Naval Academy won him an appointment as a battalion commander his senior year, was forced to resign in 1987 — six weeks before his scheduled graduation in the top 10 percent of his class.

Steffan said he looked forward to serving the country as a naval officer and added:

"The opinion underlies a very important reality ... that no court decision, no action by Congress or the president or anyone, is going to change the fundamental reality that gay people have always served in the military, and we always will serve in the military."

Steffan was among 10 outstanding students who had been chosen to be battalion commanders. He had sung the national anthem as a soloist at two Army-Navy football games and had been cited for "constant dedication to superior performance."

But the day after he said he was gay, academy officials lowered his military performance grade from an A-minus to an F, according to his lawyer, Marc Wolinsky.

Steffan, 29, is now a third-year law student at the University of Connecticut.

Tuesday's decision did not deal with Clinton's new "don't ask, don't tell" policy on homosexuals in the military. But under the president's compromise policy, Steffan could have been discharged for having told a friend he was gay.

STATE PRESS Editorial

Supreme Court speaks up

At last, a branch of the United States government that has its wits about it.

The three-judge panel of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington ordered the United States Navy to allow an openly homosexual man back into armed forces service after he was kicked out based on his orientation.

"America's hallmark has been to judge people by what they do and not by who they are," Chief Judge Abner Mikva wrote in his decision for the panel.

Well spoken.

This was the fifth court ruling this year to uphold the rights of gays to serve in the military regardless of whether or not they admit their orientation.

Four other circuit court decisions in 1993 have found the ban on gays in the military unconstitutional. If the courts' records are any indication, Tuesday's decision certainly won't be the last of its kind.

A Supreme Court decision finding the prohibition of openly homosexual men and women in the U.S. armed forces unconstitutional may well be in the making.

When a heated issue like this one goes to the middle courts, and those courts overturn the government's ruling in favor of individual rights, the Supreme Court often follows suit.

Many times in the past, the court has seen more clearly than the politicians who got caught up in the sometimes uninformed opinion or an always (financially) uninhibited interest group. (It seems the interest group this time is the military itself.)

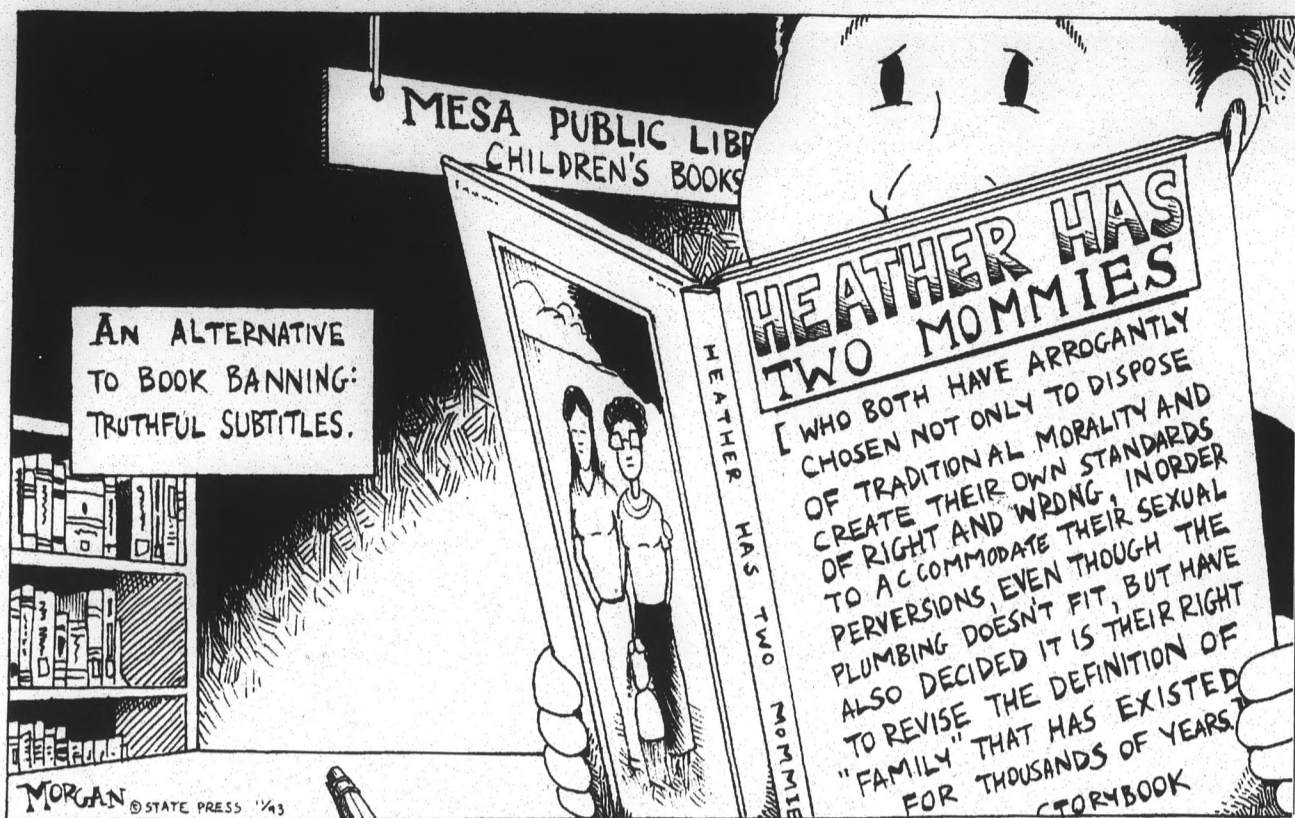

While the president and the members of Congress sit around on their collective duffs on the issue of gays in the military, the judicial branch of the government seems to be taking the bull by the horns and doing what should have been done long ago.

Although the higher courts' repairing of civil rights matters (for the most part) after the executive and legislative branches have fouled it up is nothing new, it is an indication of how the military will finally be brought to openly accept gays into their ranks.

When will the military and Congress get that through their heads?

Dishonest residency applicants cheat Arizona students, taxpayers

Arizona State University has been ranked as one of the top party schools in the nation.

It should also be ranked as one of the top schools where out-of-state students flock to gain residency.

Arizona residents and tax payers take heed, this university currently gives residency to far too many students who have no intention of remaining in our state to repay the taxes that are sacrificed in order to pay for their top-ten-party-school fiesta. Accordingly, out-of-state students should be required to either meet more rigid residency standards or not be allowed to claim residency in order to pay in-state tuition.

During each of the past six academic years, at least 84 percent of out-of-state students who applied for residency have received it. Many of these students have no intention of remaining in Arizona once they earn their degrees. Why, then, should Arizona tax payers subsidize their educations?

There are several ways that students wrongfully gain residency at ASU. According to the residency classification office at ASU, some parents claim that their kids are employees of the family business and that they are merely out-of-state marketing representatives or such. For example, they may contend that Johnny "earns" $15 thousand per year to persuade Arizonans to engage in business with their New York deli or whatever. Depending on the situation, this practice may or may not be legal; but it certainly is unethical and baneful.

In addition, some students have been caught lying about the time that they were actually in the state. Namely, some out-of-state students claim to have remained in Arizona throughout the entire year when, in fact, they went home for the entire summer.

Finally, some non-resident students are able to gain residency by showing that they can support themselves with trust/investment accounts. This is a situation where there are gray areas regarding the law and how to determine if a fund is or is not legitimate. I suspect that this area is prone to abuses by some less-than-virtuous students.

While attempting to dishonestly gain residency, some students display a frightening level of moral and ethical bankruptcy. They want a next-to-free ride and will do most anything to get it. This type of lying, cheating and blatant disregard for the long-term health of this, and our other universities, is instructive in showing the dire need to disallow residency to out-of-state students.

ALAN HOLCOMB

Yes, this may seem harsh, but consider the following: first, there are about 14 states that do not allow students to pay in-state fees once they have started their schooling as non-residents. Illinois, Washington, Idaho, and Oregon are just a few of those states. This seems to be the best possible way to run state-supported schools — require all out-of-state students to pay the amount that it costs to educate them.

Now, there is a need for diversity that comes by way of having out-of-state students at ASU, but scholarships should only go to students who possess a high level of academic or artistic ability. Namely, those students who truly wish to add something to our university, community, and state.

Next, by disallowing out-of-state students to pay resident fees, there will be a much-needed drop in the number of students at ASU. Currently, the student body is composed of roughly 43,000 students. The administration has recently stated that one goal of President Coor's university improvement plan is to cap the number of students on campus at 39,000. Hence, the stricter tuition requirements would aid in reaching the goal of a 39,000-student cap. Fewer out-of-state students would come here if they knew that they would not be able to gain residency.

However, there will still be more than enough students from out-of-state. ASU has low non-resident fees when compared to many other states' non-resident fees. As an added bonus, the students who come here fully knowing that they will be required to pay their way will most likely be more virtuous and academically oriented than those who presently come with hopes of gaining residency through less-than-virtuous means.

In the end, it all boils down to this: 1) Arizona State University should not allow any out-of-state student to gain residency status for the sole purpose of paying resident fees. 2) Until this becomes a reality (by way of legislation), the current residency requirements should be fully and honestly met by those who wish to gain residency.

The long-term health of this university and the quality of education afforded its students relies on a more sensible fiscal management of state funds and human resources—including which students pay resident fees.

Sealey offers rebuttle in Law Library debate

I realize fully that the Opinion pages of the State Press are not a forum for interpersonal debates and correspondence, but since my remarks in a letter published on Nov. 2 have been the cause of yet more letters, I decided that I should clarify my previous statements.

Although Danis Smith's letter of Oct. 25 was published before mine, it brings up some points which will help clarify some of my own. According to Smith, architecture must be functional and aesthetically pleasing. Is the Law Library functional? Smith says that it must be, otherwise it would not have been built.

Smith's aesthetic standards are so low as to be nonexistent; he asserts that "an aesthetically pleasing work is one that draws attention to itself, and sets itself apart from others." Smith is what I jokingly call an "arbysist" — he believes that "different is good." This is not true. A stapler-shaped building would have been different — or a mud hut — or a pile of rusting metal and rotting garbage. By arbysist standards, any of these would be equally aesthetically pleasing, since all are equally different, and difference is the only standard.

Christopher T. Reed's letter of Nov. 8 also brings up a very important point. He states that "worthwhile changes to our environment challenge the preconceptions that exist. This is how progress in our environment occurs." I could not agree more with Mr. Reed on that point. If people were afraid to challenge their preconceptions about the world and the way it is or should be, we would still be living like animals in the wild, worshipping the sun and cowering in superstitious fear every time lightning cut the sky. This is as true in aesthetics as it is in all other fields of human endeavor. But I am opposed to the idea that "new" and "different" are synonyms for "good" and "excellent." I am opposed to the idea that having to choose between "boring, plain buildings that follow countless stereotypes" and "innovative structures that enrich our environment by going beyond existing standards" means having to choose between "cracker-box shaped buildings" and the Law Library. Do we want our buildings to be different like the Gammage Memorial Auditorium, or different like the Law Library?

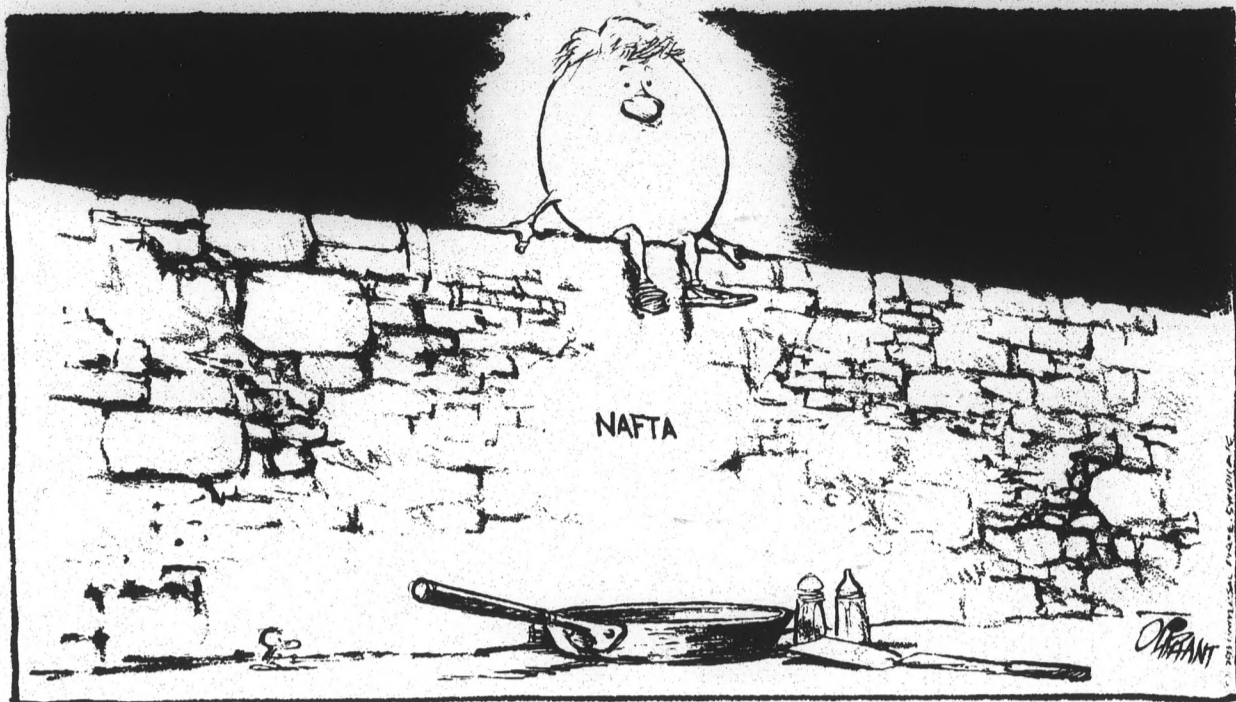

Finally, Edwin N. Acosta writes in once more. Acosta said I misunderstood his intentions in his letter of Oct. 21; his intent was not to defend the Law Library, but to criticize Jessica Klinger's writing. Fair enough; let us evaluate his letter with that in mind. Does Mr. Acosta's letter accomplish this goal?

Acosta could have pointed out any one of several important flaws in Klinger's article. He could have discussed the basic stylistic errors. He could have spent more time on her inadequate research and factual errors; for example, the "stairway to nowhere" which is in fact a fire escape and her repeated implication that the building is in danger of collapse, a judgment she is probably unqualified to make.

Any one of those topics would have been fair game in a criticism of her writing. Mr. Acosta chose none of them. Rather than discuss the article itself and the way it is written, he discussed the author's mental state — which is as irrelevant in the context of a literary critique as it is in a discussion of aesthetic merit.

Mr. Acosta, may I suggest you take a course in freshman composition to improve your skills in criticism and reading comprehension?

Workers' rights ignored in NAFTA arguments

The editorial board of the State Press has recently joined the chorus of media outlets around the country in its support of NAFTA. Like virtually every discussion I have heard in the mainstream press, the board too has framed NAFTA within purely economic terms, with the implication that NAFTA is purely an economic issue.

However, the economic issue is only one reason to oppose NAFTA, and even many of these concerns have been simply ignored.

As early as 1990 corporate trade magazines began running glossy pictures of smiling Mexicans who, it is announced with obvious excitement, can be hired for only 57 cents per hour. Why would US corporations not be excited about such opportunities?

In addition, Mexican workers have been injured or killed for attempting to organize. U.S. corporations are not ignorant of the fact that unions are essentially non-existent in Mexico. Likewise, workers' benefits are also nil. Compare this with the approximately $10,000 it costs to provide one worker with benefits in the United States, and the Mexican move looks even more promising.

However, these economic issues obscure other elements of NAFTA which never make it into public discussion of the treaty.

NAFTA stipulates that the United States cannot limit imports based on the mode of production, so that products produced as a result of, for instance, child labor, cannot be barred on that basis.

NAFTA devotes entire chapters to the rights of industry, but nothing is mentioned anywhere about workers' rights.

NAFTA stipulates that any environmental law that a participating country has which hinders industrial production (and therefore is a "trade barrier") must be relaxed to a level equivalent to the corresponding internationally agreed level. International levels are always at least as low as the lowest level of any given country. Therefore, any restrictive environmental laws must be lowered to the lowest accepted level.

As a result of these lower standards for corporations operating within the "free trade" zone, products produced within the United States will have a harder time competing since they will have to meet the typically tougher U.S. environmental standards than the lower international standards.

When a dispute between parties arises concerning consumer, labor, or environmental issues, NAFTA specifies that those disputes are to be resolved behind closed doors by non-elected trade officials.

The Trade Act of 1974 states that the United States shall enter no trade agreements without first seeking the advice of the Labor Advisory Committee. With respect to NAFTA the LAC was required to issue its report on Sept. 9, 1992. The LAC received the over 2000 pages of treaty text on Sept. 8. Even in that short time, the LAC concluded that NAFTA would be highly profitable for investors, but would harm U.S. and probably Mexican workers.

For the executive office to treat the LAC's advisory position with such contempt is nothing short of a breach of democracy.

If NAFTA is passed, it will add itself to the growing list of supra-national economic organizations, including the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the Tri-Lateral Commission and the other free trade agreements. The economic nature of these organizations allows for the creation of ideal investment climates in countries in need of monetary aid. This happens through economic pressures exerted by the transnational lenders, as has occurred in much of Central America. The supra-national nature of these organizations allows them to operate outside of governmental regulations, where global economic leaders can formulate policy based on their own interests.

Ultimately, in some form, NAFTA will surely pass. And when this free trade agreement has done to the economy what the Canadian Free Trade Agreement did to Canada's; when NAFTA does what the Caribbean Basin Initiative did to the Caribbean; when it does what the Zipsaloma and Sandizel free trade zones did in Nicaragua and Honduras, respectively; when those economic, social, and environmental predecessors come to pass in the form of NAFTA, then who will take the blame? I suspect, as always, it will be those lazy, over demanding American workers.

said. "It was proven wrong by statistical evidence. The fact is that the facts do not uphold his statement."

Vega added that the U.S. government collaborates with other countries on negative pursuits such as war and should use NAFTA to collaborate in a positive way.

"In the very beginning when it first came out, I was a witness in a hearing and gave a testimony in favor of NAFTA," Vega said.

Although today's vote appears to be up for grabs, Guevara said he feels the passage of the agreement is a foregone conclusion.

"Everybody knows NAFTA will get approved," he said. "This is a business deal and it needs to be looked at that way."

Vega said President Bill Clinton will calm the fears that skeptics have.

"People are in fear that they will get hurt. I think this might be true in the beginning, but Clinton will make up for the difference," he said. "There is the fear that our companies are going to move out of the country, but it is not because of NAFTA."

Letter to Santa Contest!

Ho. Ho. Ho. It's that time of year again! Christmas is sneaking up on us ... before you know it, Santa will be wiggling down your chimney and filling your home with gifts of joy (if you've been good and if you still believe in Santa Claus!).

Anyway, we are having our annual "Letters to Santa Contest." All you have to do is write a letter to Santa. It can be funny, creative, political, socially correct, sad, touching, senseless, inane, insane, colorful, vivid, cold ... you get the message.

There will be three winners. We will award a $25 cash prize to the first place winner, a $15 dining gift certificate to the second place winner and a special coffee mug to the third place winner.

All entries will be published in the December 7 State Press. The three winners will have their letters published in large type, large enough to cut out and magnet to the fridge as a joyous reminder of the festive season, not to mention large enough to cut out extra copies and give to everyone you know.

Dust off your keyboards, sharpen your pencils and begin your letters today. This is your chance to (finally) tell your parents that you "got published." Bring your typewritten letter to the State Press, Matthews Center Basement by noon Wednesday, December 1. Include your name, phone number and ASU ID#. Students and staff are encouraged to enter.

Medical group opposes proposed school

By MARK M. MACIAS
 STATE PRESS

It appears ASU's proposed medical school can't get an endorsement from any physicians' organizations in Arizona.

On Tuesday, Paul Lenio, president of the Arizona Medical Association (ArMA), said his group is against another state medical school because he doesn't think it solves the problems Arizona's medical field is currently facing.

"The real problems that are wanting to be solved are somewhat hidden in the desire to have another medical school," Lenio said. "The idea of a new medical school would appear superficially to solve the problem, but medical schools are expensive."

ASU officials have considered creating a second medical school that will recruit minority students, turn out primary care physicians and help improve health care in rural areas.

"We can't get only certain types of students into your medical school," Lenio said. "Anytime you're spending government money to support an educational institution ... you have to open it up to everybody."

ASU is currently researching whether Arizona has a shortage of minority and primary care physicians and plans to present the findings to the Arizona Board of Regents on Dec. 16.

ASU President Lattie Coor said he doesn't think the ArMA's resolution should affect the progress of the proposed medical school.

"There is no proposal before them (ArMA). We have not developed specific plans, nor have they talked with us about what the proposal is," Coor said. "People are free to express their views about whether there ought to be more medical education or not, but I don't think it has an effect on the fundamental issues that we are looking at."

ArMA's board of directors passed the resolution on Nov. 1, stating the organization was against another medical school in Arizona because of uncertainty surrounding health-care reform. The resolution passed 40-0, with one abstention.

Lenio said his organization passed the resolution because they wanted to make a statement.

"By holding back, we would have been looked at as wishy-washy, or perhaps we would have given the signal that we were for or against it (a second medical school)," Lenio said.

Susan Fuchs, director of communications for the ArMA, said her organization hopes the resolution will discourage lawmakers from approving a second medical school.

"We would like to believe that our resolution will have an effect on the State Legislature, Arizona Board of Regents or any other regulatory agency that has power over physicians," Fuchs said.

Fuchs said 3,800 of the state's 6,500 physicians are members of ArMA, which assists in policy making with the American Medical Association.

Jacqueline Chadwick, ArMA member and associate dean for Phoenix programs for UofA's College of Medicine, said the existing medical school in Tucson can meet the growing demand for minority medical students and primary care physicians.

"I work for (UofA's) College of Medicine, so obviously I'm biased," said Chadwick, who was the lone abstention. "I'm very much against a medical school at ASU. Right now, there is no need for a medical school anywhere in the United States, not just in Arizona.

POLICE REPORT

A would-be robber was caught by police as he waited for a sandwich after demanding cash and food.

"He wanted the money and a turkey sandwich," said Cheri Flasher, the lone employee at the sandwich shop during the robbery attempt Monday night.

The man, an 18-year-old Mesa resident, entered the Subway at 818 W. Broadway Road at about 10:45 p.m., jumped the counter and pulled out a gun.

He was arrested while waiting for his sandwich. Mesa undercover detectives had been watching throughout, including two others said to be accomplices in a car parked behind the restaurant. The detectives were reportedly acting on an anonymous tip.

Mesa Detective Luigi Dijirolamo refused to go into detail but said the three had been under surveillance in Mesa for several hours before the robbery attempt.

The three were held Tuesday on suspicion of robbery, Dijirolamo said.

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A female ASU employee told police she accidentally damaged a gas pump at the motor pool Monday afternoon. She had driven away from the pump while the gas nozzle was still in her vehicle's gas tank. Damage is estimated at $300.

- A woman not affiliated with ASU caused an auto accident Monday morning at Tempe Center when she pulled out of a parking lot and directly into the path of an oncoming car, causing it to hit her. Damage is estimated at $3,500.

- A male student told police he lost three ASU keys at some time on Wednesday. The loss is estimated at $75.

- Unknown persons stole a firehose from the top level of Parking Structure 4 some time before Monday morning.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A 21-year-old Tempe man was stabbed nine times last Saturday night by another man with whom he had argued earlier that night. After the stabbing, which occurred in the street near 2000 E. Apache Blvd., the suspect fled and could not be located. The victim was taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital.

- An unidentified man robbed a teller at Bank One, 1744 E. Southern Ave., last Tuesday afternoon. The suspect made off with an unspecified amount of cash in a gray 1984 Nissan two-door hatchback with license plate number EZZ-772.

- A man grabbed his live-in girlfriend by the neck and pushed her to the ground Friday night because she wouldn't give him a set of car keys. The woman was not injured, and the man has not been located by police.

- Between Oct. 29 and last Monday, a 19-year-old woman's boyfriend used her ATM card to withdraw $826 from her bank account without her permission. She reportedly wants to prosecute.

- An unidentified man used a counterfeit $20 bill to pay for a $2.75 beer at Maloney's, 955 E. University Drive, last Tuesday night. The man also tried to get change with another bogus $20, but the cashier recognized it as a fake. She asked the man where he got the bill. He said he got it from a friend, then he got nervous and ran out the front door.

- Unknown persons stole $140 in quarters from a change machine at Supermat, 2730 W. Southern Ave., last Monday morning. The perpetrators used photocopies of $5 bills to fool the machine. Police have no leads in the case.

- A man assaulted a Scottsdale Community College student by hitting him over the head with a bottle of beer Friday night at an ASU student's party. The two men had argued inside the party, then stepped outside "to talk." The suspect was not located.

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Rees, who played Kirstie Alley's rich British beau in "Cheers," has been replaced as the lead in the Broadway musical "The Red Shoes."

His withdrawal was confirmed Tuesday by manager Alan Siegel. The actor's standby, Steve Barton, was to take over the role of ballet impresario Boris Lermontov.

The musical, based on the classic 1948 British ballet movie, is scheduled to open Dec. 2 at the Gershwin Theater. The troubled production already has fired its original director and two featured actors.

Rees' departure was amicable, according to Siegel and producer Martin Starger.

"I loved being in my first Broadway musical, and I look forward to my next but we all care about 'The Red Shoes' too much to try to make a size 11 squeeze into a size nine," said Rees.

NEW YORK (AP) — Model-actress Paulina Porizkova and Ric Ocasek, former lead singer for The Cars, have an addition to their family — a son.

Jonathan Raven Ocasek, the couple's first child, was born Nov. 4, and weighed 8 pounds, 3 ounces, publicist Jeff Albright said.

Porizkova, 28, and Ocasek, 44, met in 1984 when she starred in the band's "Drive" music video. They have been married since 1989.

The Czechoslovakia-born Porizkova was the face that hawked Estee Lauder cosmetics until recently when her contract expired. She also has graced many issues of the Sports Illustrated swimsuit edition.

Ocasek, who now sings solo, has a new album titled, "Quick Change World."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martha Raye received the presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian award, which President Clinton gave her for entertaining troops during wartime.

Several members of the military were on hand during Monday's ceremony at Miss Raye's Bel-Air home. Army Reserve Lt. Col. Michael R.S. Teilmann, who worked with the entertainer during her USO tours in Vietnam, was master of ceremonies.

She also entertained troops during World War II and the Korean War.

Miss Raye, 78, has suffered several strokes and other health problems. Her left leg was amputated just below the knee last month and she has been recuperating at home.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Scores of students screamed, squealed and cheered Michael Jordan when he spoke at his old high school.

"It's a great pleasure to come back here," Jordan told his young audience Monday at the Laney High School gymnasium.

"The place looks the same. Not much has changed."

He did pinpoint one difference.

"When I was here, I had a little Afro."

Jordan graduated from Laney in 1981. His recent retirement at age 30 gave him a chance to take up an invitation for a homecoming visit to the school. For the past nine years, Jordan was busy in November with the Chicago Bulls, a team he led to NBA titles the past three years.

Jordan commended his parents and his teachers for the way they raised him.

"I don't think I could have accomplished the things I did without these people," he said.

LONDON (AP) — Kiefer Sutherland having an adulterous affair? A tabloid said yes. Sutherland said no, sued — and won.

The News of the World published the story in 1989. It paid damages and apologized to the actor. The amount was not disclosed.

Sutherland's lawyer, Lawrence Abramson, said in court Monday that the story was based on a woman's false claims that she was having an affair with the actor.

ASU spikers enter top-10

The ASU volleyball team (18-5, 11-5 Pac-10) entered the top-10 of both the American Volleyball Coaches' Association and ITALICSVolleyball Monthly polls for the first time in its history.

This year, the Sun Devils have upset victories over Stanford, USC and Notre Dame and nearly beat No. 1 UCLA twice. ASU has a sound chance to host a first or second round regional at the University Activity Center in early December.

Outside hitter Christine Garner, a native of Tustin, Calif., is one of the premier players in the country and on track for consideration of Pac-10 and National Player of the Year honors. Garner is averaging 5.11 kills per game, the highest in the Pac-10.

The Sun Devils face No. 22 Washington State on Friday, Nov. 19, before taking on Washington on Saturday, Nov. 20.

Thomas breaks hand in scuffle

Isiah Thomas broke his right hand Tuesday when he punched Bill Laimbeer during a scuffle at the Detroit Pistons practice.

Witnesses said Thomas, who broke a rib Oct. 30 when he was elbowed by Laimbeer, became angry when Laimbeer elbowed him again. Thomas threw a punch that struck Laimbeer in the head.

The team said Thomas broke the third metacarpal bone of his hand and will be out 3-8 weeks.

Neither Thomas nor Laimbeer commented on the incident.

Coach Don Chaney said fatigue from a recent road trip and frustration from a four-game losing streak probably contributed to the incident.

"Frustration, fatigue, when you have those things combined then you have a problem. That's what happened out here on the floor," Chaney told WWJ-AM. "If you're going to play aggressive, tempers will flare. You can't play soft at practice."

It's the second time in a month there has been a scuffle during a Pistons' practice. On Nov. 4, Alvin Robertson fought with player personnel director Billy McKinney.

Manning on injured list

All-Star forward Danny Manning, the Los Angeles Clippers' leading scorer, has been placed on the injured list because of a cracked left ring finger.

Manning, who averaged 25.5 points in the Clippers' first four games, must sit out a minimum of five games including a Tuesday night contest against the Los Angeles Lakers. He will be eligible to return Nov. 27.

Manning was injured in a 111-99 victory over the Detroit Pistons Thursday night and sat out a 92-90 win over the San Antonio Spurs on Saturday night.

Manning, 27, averaged a career-high 22.8 points last year and was selected to play in his first All-Star game.

Freshman phenom

Plummer emerges as consistent QB in collegiate debut

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

Coaches around the Pac-10 have expressed their opinions on Sun Devils quarterback Jake Plummer — one of only three true freshman to take a snap from center this season in the conference.

Oregon Coach Rich Brooks told Plummer that he wasn't looking forward to seeing him for the next three years after the Boise, Idaho product passed for 237 yards to mount an unsuccessful second half comeback in his first collegiate start.

Stanford Coach Bill Walsh, who won three Super Bowls with future-Hall of Famer Joe Montana as his quarterback, called Plummer a "gem" after viewing videotape prior to facing the Sun Devils.

"We certainly took a look at him when he came out of high school," Walsh said. "We knew he had some skills. He'll do good things in this league."

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue deemed him a "really young, gifted quarterback" heading into last week's game against the Bruins.

"I think the freshman quarterback is an exceptional deep ball thrower," Donahue said. "He appears to be much further advanced than most freshmen who come into systems and try to play."

But ASU Coach Bruce Snyder, despite the recognition his quarterback had received from Pac-10 coaches, said Plummer's performance has just been average since replacing Grady Benton at halftime against Washington State six weeks ago.

However, that was until Snyder had a chance to evaluate the freshman's performance after Saturday's 9-3 win against UCLA in Pasadena, Calif. He credited Plummer as being part of the equation that's added up to the Sun Devils four-game winning streak and put the team into contention for a bowl berth.

"I'm really impressed with him, obviously," Snyder said. "It's not totally by accident or coincidence that we're winning when he started playing."

Since receiving the starting nod five weeks ago against Oregon, Plummer has completed 63 of 127 passes for 1,007 yards and six touchdowns. He has only thrown three interceptions in those five starts.

For the season, Plummer is 84-of-167 passing for 1,414 yards and eight touchdowns. His passing efficiency rating is 130.1.

In a season when he was looking to redshirt, Plummer is living in a fantasy world as the Sun Devils starting quarterback. At this time last year, Plummer was leading his Capital High School team into the Idaho state football playoffs. Now, Plummer is directing the Sun Devils to possibly their first bowl game since beating Air Force in the 1987 Freedom Bowl.

"It's hard to believe," Plummer said. "I just called my high school coach (prior to the Cal game) and wished him luck.

"It's just kind of weird talking to my high school coach. Thinking back then, it was just high school football. Now, it's a big change. It's kind of unbelievable."

Overall, Plummer, with the help of Mario Bates at tailback, has turned around a stagnant Sun Devil offense that averaged only 21 points in their first five games. In the last five games with Plummer at the helm, ASU has averaged 31.2 points per game.

"I try to be a leader out there as much as I can," Plummer said. "It's kind of difficult being young and having them accept you, but they're doing a real good job. I just go out and play my hardest and I think they respect me for that."

Plummer is the first true freshman to start at quarterback for Snyder in his 14 years as a college head coach, and first at ASU since John Walker started four games for the injured Jeff Van Raaphorst in 1984. Snyder said he has had redshirt freshmen (Benton last season and Eric Hipple at Utah State, who went on to play for the Detroit Lions in the NFL) play for him, but none have gotten off to a faster start than Plummer.

"I don't think Eric got started as fast as this guy (Plummer)," Snyder said. "This guy is off to a fast start."

Bowden's trickery blew it against Irish

Fiesta Bowl rematch has no room for Cornhuskers

You didn't ask me for my opinions, but I'll give them to you anyway:

• You don't win at least ten games a season for nine years straight without knowing something about football, but I'm wondering where Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden put his brains for the first half of the game in Notre Dame.

Double passes inside your own 20? A half-back option on every series? Trick plays should be used to supplement your game plan, not be the game plan.

• That being said, I want the Irish and Seminoles to play for No. 1 in the Fiesta Bowl. I don't want to hear a single peep from the Nebraska groupies out there, because we all know that the 'Huskies would be stomped flat by either Florida State or Notre Dame. We all have roles in life, and Nebraska's is to lose badly on New Year's Day.

America loves rematches between the best. Think of Yankees-Dodgers. Think of Steelers-Cowboys. Think of Holyfield-Bowe. To have the opportunity to play this game and to pass it up is just about criminal.

• The ASU football team's turnaround is the biggest this year in the nation. The Sun Devils' first six games were supposed to be the easy part of the schedule and they went 2-4. If you saw this team up to halftime of the Oregon game, there was no way that you would have thought it would win another game. 2-9 was looking not like a possibility, but a cold, hard fact.

Then they came alive and ripped off their toe tags, like some bad horror flick. The defense solidified. The offensive line started pushing people around. Mario Bates returned to his old form. Jake Plummer is the best young quarterback I've seen in ages. Second in the Pac-10 looks like a real possibility. Amazing.

• You know, it's been about a week since some stray Wildcats painted the 'A' red and blue, and nobody has touched it since. Somebody told me that the ASU Student Alumni Association is supposed to take care of the damn thing, but it doesn't look gold to me.

• Speaking of UofA, are they in a major choke or what? Losing to UCLA is one thing, but losing to Cal is quite another. And what happened to Dan White, the savior quarterback the Wildcats haven't seen the days of Tom Tunnicliffe? Last I saw, they were back to running the option. Somehow, I knew that Dick Tomey would eventually lose his nerve about throwing the ball so much. That man is more conservative than Pat Buchanan.

For Wednesday, Nov. 17, 1993

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
You may revise your thinking today about investments and long range financial security. A social connection proves helpful in business. A hunch is accurate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
With partners, there's a need for give and take today. A negotiation may break off now. Higher mind pursuits give you food for thought. Tonight brings a surprise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
You may be at impasse regarding one work concern. Do your best to avoid confrontations. You will be investigating new investment options. Intuition is keen now.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
The question of how much freedom to give a child arises now. It should be a happy day where romance and recreational interests are concerned. Follow a partner's lead.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
Either you or a family member may be stubborn now. A compromise is necessary to break the stalemate. Originality will bring you a business success.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
You won't rest till you bring a project to a conclusion. Creative interests are highlighted now. Entertainment plans tonight are made on the spur-of-the-moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
You may decide to buy or sell some collectibles today. A family member seems dreamy and self-pre-occupied. Unexpected company is likely to drop by tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
You have a renewed sense of purpose today, but be careful not to come on too strong with others. It's the light touch that will help you get your ideas across now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
You may decide to get rid of some clutter today. Reflection brings new insights about a matter from the past. Shopping is likely to be on the spur-of-the-moment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
You will give much thought now as to whether to continue your membership in a club activity. Singles meet with romantic possibilities today. Things go your way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
Power plays are very much in evidence in business today. You do best now by maintaining a low profile. Interruptions tonight may interfere with your plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
A new mental interest has you captivated today. Socially, you will be making new friendships now. You may decide to end your relationship with an adviser.

YOU BORN TODAY have management abilities and are adept at working with groups. Though you are good at handling the financial interests of others, you are not always consistent in the way you handle your own money. You can be alternately generous and penurious. You are at your best when you find and then do your own things. Often, you have executive talents. Birthdate of: Bernard Law Montgomery, military leader; Lee Strasberg, dramatic coach; and Tom Seaver, baseball player.
