Charles Harris' future as ASU's athletic director is expected to be among the topics addressed today by ASU President Lattie Coor when he announces his new goals for intercollegiate athletics to the Academic Senate.

Decision looming on Harris' fate

Coor to address new athletic goals today in meeting with faculty

BY JAKE BATSELL
STATE PRESS

For three unsettling weeks after the Phoenix Cardinals' season-ending victory over the Atlanta Falcons, Valley residents and media waited in anticipation before the fate of Cardinals' coach Joe Bugel was finally resolved.

The Charles Harris Watch begins today.

Unlike Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill, who ultimately fired Bugel, ASU President Lattie Coor hasn't set any "win-or-else" ultimatums for Harris, ASU's athletic director since 1985.

But Coor has been explicitly methodical in developing a process to revamp the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics (ICA). He will reveal his new set of goals for the department based on the recommendations of two prominent reports when he addresses the Academic Senate at 3 p.m. today at Dixie Gammage Hall.

One of those reports — compiled by former university presidents Bryce Jordan of Penn State and John Ryan of Indiana and released last September — suggested that Coor re-evaluate Harris' performance as athletic director. The report criticized Harris, claiming he had a "lack of leadership and human relations skills."

With his future at ASU uncertain, how is Harris handling the pressure?

"I guess, from a purely personal standpoint, the thing that I concluded an awful long time ago is that these jobs take on a very unique life of their own," Harris said late last week. "In my mind, what, then, I have to do is focus my energies on those things that I can do, must do, for the good of the University and need and have the ability to control."

"I think anybody would like to see a thoughtful process brought to a timely closure. But that's not something I can control."

"What I can do is schedule contests, go to meetings, write reports, meet with coaches and do sort of daily crisis management. Equally, I can do strategic planning. I do that and continue to do that, and these reports and the culmination of this process will help us to do more strategic planning."

It's improbable that any kind of final decision on Harris will come today. Though Coor said it was "likely" that he will speak on how he'll go about the re-evaluation process, he said he'll ask for feedback from the senate and the University community on all his recommendations before they're implemented.

While the suggestion to re-evaluate Harris has captured the most attention, Coor will touch on a number of other recommendations made by a 23-person University committee and the Jordan/Ryan report. Among them:

- Better assimilation of student-athletes into the mainstream University community
- Recruiting student-athletes of higher academic caliber, and
- Placing more emphasis on the recruitment of freshmen and less on the recruitment of junior college transfers.

"I think I have enough sense that the basic form (of the new goals) is pretty clear, but I will not absolutely adopt it until we have a chance (for feedback)," Coor said.

Once the recommendations have been announced, Coor has said the next step in the process will be to follow up on the Jordan/Ryan report's suggestion to evaluate Harris' performance as athletic director.

"It will really be based on what our goals are for the future," Coor said in September, just after

Students killing time after quake ruined campus

Northridge set to begin classes Feb. 14, says CSUN president

NORTHRIDGE, Calif. — The refrigerator is stocked with beer. Never mind the large crack running down the wall behind it. Cal State-Northridge FIJI fraternity brothers have the big game on, and they're ready to party.

"Today we just want to do what everyone else is," he yelled as about 20 members streamed into the house and began gathering around the television to watch the Super Bowl.

After spending a second weekend selling earthquake T-shirts on nearby street corners in the devastated Northridge neighborhood, Mica Kritzman, president of FIJI, is ready to join his "brothers" for a relaxing break before classes begin on Feb. 14.

This opening date was confirmed Friday by CSUN President Blenda J. Wilson. Kritzman joined about 150 other student leaders from throughout the Northridge campus community in a giant tent on campus to hear the good news. Wilson announced the receipt of $10 million of disaster relief funds from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), which will allow the campus to begin making repairs immediately. Repair efforts will focus on the House bills focus on law school limitations

James Hamm, the ex-convict turned ASU law student, is the focus of two out of three bills in the Arizona House of Representatives that would have a profound effect on the University's College of Law.

The three bills, which target out-of-state students and those who would face difficulty passing the Arizona bar, pose harm to ASU's College of Law, the college's dean said Friday.

HAMM

"My opinion of all of these is that they are not helpful to legal education in Arizona, and I hope they don't pass," said Richard Morgan, the College of Law's dean.

Rep. Jeff Groscost, R-Mesa, who authored the three bills in the wake of James Hamm's controversial admission to the college last year, introduced them to the Legislature in January.

Two of the bills would restrict admission and graduation from Arizona's state colleges to those who meet the Arizona bar's character and fitness requirements.

The third bill would restrict admission to the law schools, located at ASU and UofA, to students who are classified as in-

Planning officials: Airport noise should not bother ASU East

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

The proposed ASU East campus will be sharing the former Williams Air Force Base with a new airport, but planning officials said the campus shouldn't be bothered by the roar of jet engines.

Charles Backus, an academic planner for the proposed campus, said the University's classrooms are protected from most of the airport's noise because they are perpendicular to the center of the runway.

"That's sort of the advantage of being there first," Backus said. "On the education side, we will influence and dictate the constraints of what they do on the airport side."

ASU East will use 600 of the site's 4,000 acres, said Backus, the associate dean for the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences.

Backus said Williams Gateway Airport will be used for small, private planes and may eventually grow to provide some relief to Sky Harbor

International Airport in Phoenix.

"That would be acceptable from the educational and noise point of view," Backus said. "But all that development would take place on the other side of the runway. There may be traffic out there, but it shouldn't influence education."

Kent Cooper, Gilbert town manager, said ASU Main has as much as, or more noise from Sky Harbor than ASU East will have from Williams Gateway Airport.

Although the Gateway Airport will grow, its plans don't call for it to develop into a large commercial airport, he said.

"It would never be anywhere near as busy as Sky Harbor," Cooper said.

Jan Dodson, deputy director for the Williams Development Partnership, said the airport layout plan, which positions classrooms and buildings far from the runway, was designed to minimize the noise on the campus.

Dodson said the closest runway is less than one-half mile from the campus, but will only be used in an emergency. All other planes will use the runway farthest from the campus, she said.

"The airport master plan is designed around the fact that we have a large educational consortium that wants to locate at Williams," Dodson said.

Backus said aviation programs will be a major focus of the campus in its early development.

Other universities and the Maricopa County Community College District will open campuses there as well, he said.

ASU East will eventually house all of ASU's School of Technology. But the campus will have non-aviation uses as well, and it is expected to grow to serve 10,000 to 20,000 students in 15 years, Backus said.

ASU East passed the Education Committee in January and is scheduled to go to the Appropriations Committee this week.

The campus will receive about $2.2 million in funding if approved by the Legislature this month.

Harris

Harris said he feels the department is better off today than when he first took over a probation-plagued ASU program in 1985.

"For us to be able to have gone from the most penalized school in the country ... we've dropped so far down on the list that they (the NCAA) don't even list us anymore," Harris said.

Harris also cited a substantial increase in student-athlete graduation rates (a rise of 20 percentage points in the past two years), an enhanced academic and student services department and the construction of the six-story ICA complex at the south end of Sun Devil Stadium as major accomplishments of his tenure.

ASU will also be one of the first schools to receive NCAA accreditation next fall, Harris said.

But Harris has also faced considerable criticism. During the department's legal scandal in 1992, critics claimed that punishments handed down by Harris were too soft. Others were outraged when the department cut three of its most successful "Olympic" sports last spring — archery, badminton and men's gymnastics. And Laurie Vollen, former director of ASU student health, has alleged that Harris overrode the department's team physician to make questionable medical decisions.

The Jordan/Ryan report also questioned Harris' public relations skills, claiming he is sometimes "aloof to the point of inhospitality" to potential donors.

"I think that the president should take the advice of the people that investigated the entire situation," said Don Robinson, the 25-year ASU men's gymnastics coach who left the department last year after his program was cut.

"If he showed a marked interest in Olympic sports — which he hasn't — then there's a possibility of (Harris being retained), and also if he develops a better repertoire with everyone," Robinson added. "The public doesn't really even know him, and I worked for him for quite awhile, and I'm not sure what makes him tick."

ASU women's tennis Coach Sheila McInerney, who entered the department at the same time as Harris in 1985, said she hasn't had troubles in dealing with Harris.

"Charles has been good to me and my program," she said. "He's done great things for the department."

Harris said he expects Coor's evaluation to yield positive results for him and his department.

"I guess I look at where we are now," he said. "In that context, I think our record in many ways will speak for itself in terms of some of the steps and strides that we've made."

"We'll see from there."

Board of education proposes new graduation requirements

TUCSON (AP) — The state Board of Education has scheduled a public hearing Monday in Phoenix on a proposal for tougher graduation requirements for high school students.

Longstanding requirements, which are based on "seat time," would be scrapped and replaced with a battery of competency examinations under a plan being pushed by state Superintendent for Public Instruction C. Diane Bishop.

Four years of sitting in classes and sliding by with low grades will no longer be the ticket for a diploma.

If the nine-member board approves the proposal, the tests would be available in fall 1995. The statewide class of 1999 would be the first required to pass them.

Currently, students graduate after collecting 20 credits. The credits are granted when students pass classes with a grade of D-minus or better.

"We're getting out of the business of giving credits for seat time," said Bishop, who was a math teacher in the Tucson Unified School District for two decades before being elected to her current post. "Too many diplomas are going out to kids who just manage to sit through high school. They (students) should be held responsible for their education."

Private group seeks go-ahead for toll roads in Ahwatukee

PHOENIX (AP) — A private group that wanted to finish the Phoenix-area's freeway system with toll roads has whitened its proposal to a 5.5-mile highway near Ahwatukee.

The road would give drivers a new, western route around South Mountain and also give residents a concrete look at how toll roads operate in the 1990s.

If the consortium of firms known as VUE 2000 gets the go-ahead from state and local authorities, the toll road could be built within three years.

That's a decade earlier than scheduled in the current freeway budget, which wouldn't complete the segment until 2006.

"The idea of building that five-mile stretch as a toll road makes all the sense in the world," said Larry Bonine, director of the Arizona Department of Transportation. "I don't see any negatives in it."

If drivers didn't like the toll, expected to be 50-75 cents one way, the state could buy the freeway back when the money became available in 2006, according to Bonine.

Mandela appeals to right-wing whites

Hopes to avoid future violence

KHUMA, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress offered Sunday to let apartheid whites vote for their own homeland — but said a black government would retain power to veto the results.

ANC President Nelson Mandela appealed to militant whites to accept the offer and avert bloodshed.

But the right-wing Afrikaner Volksfront angrily rejected the proposal and vowed to establish its own homeland by force if necessary to avoid living under black rule.

That militant stance could be fatal, Mandela told an adoring crowd of several thousand squeezed into a stadium in the black township of Khuma on Sunday.

"We know how to fight," he said, referring to the ANC's 30-year guerrilla war, suspended in August 1990 after the white government introduced reforms to end apartheid.

Under the ANC proposal, whites could vote April 27 on whether to establish a whites-only homeland. The ballot would be separate from national elections April 27-29 for a new, multiracial government. The ANC is expected to win those elections.

Whatever the outcome of the homeland vote, the newly elected government would have final say on the issue, a condition unacceptable to white extremists who have threatened war.

"I want to appeal to the right wing not to do anything that would drag our country into a conflict that would kill many innocent people, black and white," Mandela said. "We are appealing to the right wing not to talk about violence so easily. We know what war means."

The ANC, the government and their opponents, including the Afrikaner Volksfront and the black, Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party, were to meet again Monday in an attempt to end the differences that have raised fears of bloody conflict during the election campaign.

Inkatha and right-wing white groups fear domination by the ANC, which has overwhelming support among South Africa's black majority. They have demanded constitutional guarantees of ethnic autonomy for their followers before they agree to take part in the election. The ANC has refused, saying that would mean a return to apartheid-style homelands.

South African Women overlooked in movement toward democracy

KEMPTON PARK, South Africa (AP) — Faith Nkosi falls into probably the most oppressed group of South Africans: She is black, female, and a domestic worker.

But when she stands on a stage in her apron and aims her piercing voice at a crowd, the cheers prove she is more than a maid.

Nkosi, head of the Domestic Workers' Union, is among a growing number of women who are entering the political limelight to make sure they are not forgotten when a black-led government takes power after the April elections.

The dramatic changes in South Africa have jarred women out of their traditionally cloistered lives into stands that often clash with African culture and raise questions about the commitment of the African National Congress to equality.

"When we used to talk about affirmative action, we had the support from our (ANC) comrades," said Dorothy Mokgalo of the Congress of South African Trade Unions, an ally of the ANC. "But when we talk about affirmative action today in relation to women, our comrades call it tokenism."

Mokgalo, Nkosi and about a dozen other women took the stage this month at a public hearing called by the Women's National Coalition to highlight discrimination in everything from tribal laws to jobs. The coalition of 80 women's groups was formed in April 1992, giving it only two years to challenge centuries of patriarchal values.

Perhaps the toughest job will be convincing women in rural areas that they can vote without permission from their husbands or tribal chiefs.

ANC President Nelson Mandela and other black leaders who address women's issues face much more than a political problem. African customs and tribal laws view women as minors and judge a man's wealth by the size of his family, which encourages polygamy and discourages birth control.

It could be politically treacherous for Mandela to condemn such customs publicly, but women have little to lose by doing so. They also have learned from the experience elsewhere, such as the former Soviet bloc, that transitions to democracy rarely benefit women as a whole and sometimes even lessen their political influence.

Russian joins U.S. space shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The planet's two space superpowers already have exchanged handshakes and hugs, shared borscht and cranberry sauce, and toasted with apple juice — 140 miles above Earth.

This week, 19 years after the Apollo-Soyuz docking mission, five American astronauts and one Russian cosmonaut will pick up in orbit where their predecessors left off.

Sergei Krikalev will become the first Russian to fly on a U.S. space shuttle when Discovery lifts off Thursday on a science mission.

Unlike Apollo-Soyuz, which brought three Americans and two Russians together in orbit in 1975, astronauts and cosmonauts will occupy the same ship from launch through landing.

"This to me is a real landmark, not just because Sergei's on our flight, but because our two countries are working together," said Discovery astronaut Jan Davis.

Both countries say the mission is only the beginning of many joint space ventures.

The ultimate goal is an international space station, to be built using launch vehicles from both countries. Construction is scheduled to begin in 1997 and the station is expected to house permanent crews by 2001.

The two countries agreed on the joint station late last year. They also agreed to 10 shuttle dockings with Russia's Mir space station, beginning in 1995, to exchange crews, do research and upgrade the aging Mir.

The deal expanded on a 1992 agreement that arranged for Krikalev's flight and for an American astronaut to fly on Mir for three months in 1995.

Altogether, five American astronauts are to spend a combined 24 months on Mir. And another Russian cosmonaut — Vladimir Titov, Krikalev's backup for Discovery's mission — already is training for a shuttle flight early next year.

"What is most interesting part of this mission for me is flying on space shuttle itself," Krikalev said. "I have long period of time flying on Mir station. I flew on Soyuz vehicle. But this is new vehicle, new hardware, new experiments."

Marcia Smith, a specialist in space policy for the Congressional Research Service at the Library of Congress, said the cosmonaut and astronaut exchanges make for good foreign policy.

But she said it's risky to build a space station with the Russians given the country's political and economic instability.

"Apollo-Soyuz was not supposed to be a one-time deal. It was supposed to be a new era of detente. It was supposed to lead to other things ... but it never did lead to anything at that time," Smith said. "The same thing could happen again."

Krikalev has the crucial job of using Discovery's robot arm to retrieve a satellite deployed by the crew during the eight-day mission. The satellite, called the Wake Shield Facility, is being flown to see if it can create an ultravacuum for growing thin, pure semiconductor films.

Chernobyl damage underestimated according to researcher's report

BOSTON (AP) — A 1986 explosion at the Chernobyl nuclear reactor led to a complete core meltdown and far worse contamination than previously reported, says a Massachusetts Institute of Technology researcher who studied the reactor's ruins.

The amount of radioactivity released during the world's worst nuclear disaster was up to four to five times greater than previously published estimates, Alexander Sich, a nuclear engineer, said in a 500-page doctoral dissertation presented earlier this month.

Soviet authorities claimed that the initial explosion at the 1,000-megawatt Chernobyl 4 reactor led only to a partial meltdown. They said helicopters were able to douse the blazing core by smothering it with 5,000 tons of sand, lead, boron and clay.

But Sich, who spent 18 months studying the ruined reactor, said the helicopters completely missed their target, according to the Boston Sunday Globe.

He said the melted core burned through protective layers and into the lowest levels of the plant basement. If it had penetrated the concrete floor, it could have come into contact with groundwater and set off an enormous steam explosion.

Instead of being doused by the dumped material, the nuclear reaction simply burned itself out after 10 days, Sich concluded.

"It's a new theory that I haven't heard of, but I can't say it's crazy," said Morris Rosen, deputy director of the International Atomic Energy Agency's division on nuclear safety, and the man responsible for the agency's analysis of the Chernobyl accident.

Rosen told the Globe that he was surprised by most of Sich's conclusions, including the calculation that between 185 and 250 million curies of radioactive material were released in the first 10 days after the April 26, 1986 accident.

"I don't think I've heard numbers like that before," Rosen said. Soviet officials said 50 million curies were released.

A curie is the amount of radioactivity contained in one gram of radium. The U.S. Department of Energy estimates that as little as 10 millionths of a curie of plutonium, if inhaled, could cause cancer.

Norman Rasmussen, an MIT nuclear engineering professor and Sich's thesis adviser, said Sich's work is "probably the best analysis of what took place during the 10 days after the accident."

The Chernobyl plant still contains 180 tons of partially burned nuclear fuel, according to Alexander Borovoi, the Russian scientist in charge of monitoring the site about 10 miles outside Kiev, Ukraine.

Rainwater continues to weaken the concrete structure, and more than 11,000 square feet of holes in the concrete building permit air and water to enter and escape, Sich and Russian officials say.

Fifteen reactors of the same design as the Chernobyl reactor are still operating in Russian, Ukraine and Lithuania.

Opinion

STATE PRESS Editorial

It's brewing again

The controversy that surfaced last fall with the admission of ex-convict James Hamm to ASU's College of Law is being stirred up once again by Arizona lawmakers.

Rep. Jeff Groskost, R-Mesa, and Rep. Russell "Rusty" Bowers, R-Mesa, introduced three bills this month to the state Legislature that would significantly impact the University's law school.

Two of the bills are designed to limit admission to and graduation from the state's law colleges only to individuals who fulfill the character and fitness requirements set forth by the Arizona bar.

Let's get this straight. Not only do prospective law students have to boast excellent test scores, glowing letters of recommendation and a considerable cash flow to get into law school — under these proposed bills, they would also have to be deemed "fit" according to Arizona bar standards.

And all of this before an individual is even allowed to take one step inside a law school classroom.

The whole idea of such bills reeks of constitutional infringement.

It is illogical to suggest that people have to meet the criteria set by another organization, rather than the law school in question, in order to attend a public law college and receive a law degree.

What happened to freedom? Isn't that what the U.S. Constitution and the legal system itself is based upon — protecting the rights and freedoms of individuals?

Why is it suddenly all right to restrict the opportunity to earn law degrees to those students who have one organization's form of "character" to practice law? Isn't a sincere interest to learn about law — or any subject, for that matter — enough anymore?

The third bill proposed by Groskost and Bowers aims to restrict admission to the ASU and UofA law schools only to those classified as in-state students.

So add "resident" to the growing list of elements that could become essential to Arizona law students.

Seventy-five percent of the nearly 500 students in ASU's College of Law already must be in-state students. And according to College of Law Dean Richard Morgan, every law school in the nation admits non-residents.

A diverse mix of students is what makes higher education the quality experience that it is. Many students currently enrolled in ASU's College of Law have agreed that the admission of James Hamm has been helpful, because of the perspective and experience that he is able to share with the other students.

While it may seem noble to save spots in the state's law schools for residents who fund the universities with their taxes, it is inexcusable to ban a qualified individual who pays the necessary tuition from attending an institution simply because they're from a different state.

The consideration of such bills is an insult to this state. Let's hope they disintegrate quickly into the Legislature's endless shuffle of paperwork.

Dorsett's election to Hall of Fame stirs memories of America's Team

The past weekend was a joyous one for Dallas Cowboys fans.

True Dallas Cowboys fans. I'm not talking about any of those giddy fair-weather fans you'll see around campus today, showing off their brand-new, blue-and-gray Cowboys apparel adorned in honor of Dallas' 30-13 Super Bowl Sunday victory over the Buffalo Bills.

The fans I'm speaking of are disciples of the Tom Landry era, who were delighted Saturday upon hearing the news that Tony Dorsett was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

I can see the look on some of your faces.

"Tony Who?"

Tony Dorsett. Number 33. The mainstay of the Cowboys' offense for nearly a decade.

The Aliquippa, Penn. native set the standard for NFL running backs during his 11-year career. He racked up 12,739 rushing yards and 77 touchdowns on his way to becoming the NFL's No. 3 all-time leading rusher.

And he did it with class.

"T.D." had every right to showboat in the end zone after his NFL record 99-yard touchdown run against Minnesota Jan. 3, 1983. He could have rubbed salt deep into the wounds of the Denver Broncos when he and the Cowboys claimed their second Super Bowl title in 1978. He would have been taken seriously if he proclaimed after every Dallas victory that he was among the best to ever play the game.

But he didn't. Dorsett let his dazzling performances speak for themselves.

Dorsett might not have fit into today's sports world. Players today are popular as much for their flamboyant end zone dances as their athletic ability.

Under Landry, "T.D." and his teammates were the players truly responsible for making the Cowboys known as "America's Team."

Dorsett was the star runner for an offense captained by quarterback and ASU alum Danny White, flanked by wide receivers Drew Pearson, Tony Hill and Butch Johnson.

JAKE BATSELL
Editor

The trademark "shift" of the Dallas frontline before every offensive play sent chills down Cowboys fans' spines.

On the other side of the ball, the "Doomsday Defense" — anchored by defensive linemen Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Randy White — built a blockade its foes seldom passed through.

And roaming the sidelines, wearing his trademark fedora hat, was Coach Tom Landry. The even-tempered coaching legend was a model of poise, whether his team had just lost a heartbreaker in the waning minutes of the 1982 NFC Championship in San Francisco, or if his team had powerfully captured its second Super Bowl crown.

When current Cowboys owner Jerry Jones took over the team in 1989, he apparently wasn't much impressed with the accomplishments of America's Team. He abruptly fired Landry — the only coach the Cowboys had ever had — and hired buddy Jimmy Johnson to take the reins.

At the time, Dorsett was already at the twilight of his career, playing a much less significant role in the Denver Broncos' backfield.

That's when the magic disappeared.

While Johnson has impressively directed the Cowboys to two consecutive Super Bowl victories, they simply don't carry the same luster that the Cowboys' successes under Landry did.

The Cowboys' championship season this year was marred by internal squabbles. Running back Emmitt Smith sat out the first two games of the season as a result of a contract dispute with Jones. Fans pointed a finger all season at defensive lineman Leon Lett for committing a Thanksgiving Day blunder that cost Dallas a sure win. And Johnson even speculated that he might be looking to move on to a new head coaching position with the expansion Jacksonville Jaguars.

But those of us who followed the Cowboys in their glory years — which spanned from the mid-1970's to the early 1980's — can always look back fondly at Dorsett's contributions to America's Team.

"It's quite an honor to be elected the first time around," Dorsett said Saturday after hearing he'd been elected to the Hall along with teammate Randy White.

"In my mind, this is the best fraternity there is."

Indeed it is, Tony. And there's no question that you should be part of it.

Tony Dorsett, the Dallas Cowboys' all-time leading rusher, was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame Saturday.

Liberal media bias warps Symington in the public eye

Too often, ASU students and the public are fed news that is cast only in the most negative terms.

They hear about proposed tuition hikes, rather than the relative affordability of Arizona universities. They hear about a lack of funding for certain programs, rather than the virtually unparalleled diversity of our curriculum. The public hears about the allegedly low salaries, rather than the high standard of living, complete with benefits packages many people can only dream of.

It is time that ASU students — in fact all students — and the public demand balanced reporting of the issues affecting their lives — even if it means forcing our jaded journalists to throw a little good news our way on matters where it will not further the liberal agenda to do so.

A good place to start is with a discussion of Gov. Fife Symington's record on education. Governor Symington and his administration have placed, and continue to place, education as a top priority in our state.

I cringed when I read the following statement, an editorial excerpt from a local paper: "... the government in this state has placed little emphasis on promoting education in Arizona. Look at the ongoing trend toward falling university budgets and an apathy toward much needed expansion projects ..."

If the aforementioned statement were true, then we would be justified — in fact we would be obligated — to rally against our state government. But let's look at the facts. As the following evidence will show, such statements are misguided and ignorant at best.

- Gov. Symington and his administration have proposed a 5-percent, across-the-board pay increase for both the faculty and staff at our universities. This pay raise should go far toward helping to retain our best faculty members and attracting new faculty to our state schools.

- The governor's budget requests $1.4 million dollars in order to support the ASU Engineering Excellence Program. This program will increase the availability of jobs for graduates. It will also, by improving the quality of manufactured products, provide a more highly skilled engineering work force. The long-term result for our state will be an enhanced technological economy — an element essential to a stable 21st century.

- The ASU College of Business stands to reap the rewards of an additional $500,000 during the 1995 fiscal year, again due to the governor's recommendations. The ASU College of Business has demonstrated a propensity to graduate employable individuals and has been rated recently among the top business programs in the nation.

- The College of Nursing should see a $200,000 increase in its fiscal 1995 budget. This money will help ASU increase its number of primary-care nursing graduates.

- Gov. Symington also recommends that more than $1 million dollars be appropriated to aid in the development of an ASU East Campus. President Lattie Coor is also in favor of creating an ASU East campus. Just as ASU West has greatly improved the educational opportunities for many West Valley residents, so should ASU East provide opportunities for our East Valley residents. These increased opportunities are necessary to the advancement of our Valley residents, and Arizona as a whole.

Next, at the opposite end of our wonderful and diverse state, Northern Arizona University should gain an additional $500,000 to implement its "2+2" program. This effort seeks to provide NAU with the funding it needs to extend its existing telecommunications network and/or deliver more courses via satellite.

Contrary to some reports, the governor also boasts a record of exceptional commitment to K-12 education. Consider the following:

Since Symington took office, funding for K-12 education has increased each and every year. In fact, from 1991 to 1994, state aid for K-12 education increased by $208 million.

The governor's fiscal 1995 budget recommends funding of $81 million in order to accommodate the anticipated growth in the number of K-12 students.

Another $147.8 million has been proposed for the K-12 operating budgets. This is the largest single-year increase in at least ten years. When all proposed funding is added, the total dollar increase for the 1995 fiscal year for K-12 operating aid is $240.1 million.

This information may not fit in with the education establishment's plot to derail the governor's educational reform, but facts are facts. The governor is committed to education.

It's time that the students of ASU, and the public, were privy to this good news.

Tempe residents to benefit from Minnett's street plan

A small, intimate community, cherished by its citizens, a place where the merchants and customers work and live side by side, a place to call home. Does Tempe truly have such potential? John Minnett surely thinks so.

Dr. Minnett has designed a way for Tempe to transform itself into an integrated community, a way to make the city more inhabitable. As is the case with most large cities, Tempe's residents, perhaps more appropriately termed commuters, have divided downtown Tempe, have split Arizona State University's campus and have in essence separated themselves from each other.

By redirecting traffic from University Drive, downtown Tempe could be allowed to grow, ASU could be reunited with its northern campus area, and a sense of intimacy could be fostered among Tempe citizens.

As a visiting professor from Oxford, Minnett is certainly aware of the great architectural and urban planning that characterizes most European cities. In such cases, a city of several million can somehow be reduced to small neighborhoods or town sections, each with its own unique character.

Tempe already has such a familiarity to a limited degree in its downtown area. Downtown Tempe, with its theaters, galleries, eateries and shops is one of the most continental locales in all of Arizona. If the traffic on University Drive could be lessened, perhaps more of these establishments could develop in the area.

I encourage Minnett in the pursuit of his plan, and I invite others to join him. I also entreat the city officials to consider earnestly his ideas. More importantly, however, I ask Tempe residents to consider the nature of their town.

Responses to last week's question:
"What are your feelings regarding academic classes on non-traditional sexual behavior (i.e., the NAU sociology class, Transsexualism and Society)?"

"My feeling on this is that it shouldn't be allowed, simply because if we condone it, we are setting the wave of the future. It's a real moral dilemma of whether to accept this type of a class or behavior in society, and I just don't feel that it's right. People will call me ignorant, people will say that I am maybe even prejudiced, but I just don't feel it's right. I don't think we can condone this in our society, and the more things like this that we do, the more that we're opening the door to this type of behavior, and I think it's incorrect."

Chris Sanchez
Junior/Undeclared

"Frankly, I'm disgusted with the fact that NAU, a state funded school, would implement a class that deals with transsexuals in society as a sociology class, while they're cutting out legitimate programs like the journalism department. I think it is such a waste of the taxpayers' money, and a waste of students' time."

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Sunday:

- A malfunction activated the fire alarm at the H-wing of the Physical Sciences Building. The responding officer found the area secure and reset the alarm.
- A male ASU student was injured at the Student Recreation Center playing fields. He was transported to the Student Health Center.
- A female ASU employee reported that unknown persons stole gym equipment (uneven bars) from the University Activity Center. Estimated loss is $600.
- A female student reported that unknown persons took her checkbook from the Social Sciences Building. Estimated loss is $25.
- A female employee reported that between Jan. 16 and Jan. 18, unknown persons criminally damaged a set of double doors at the UAC. Damage is estimated at $650.
- A male employee reported that unknown persons stole his black 1981 Chevy pickup truck while it was parked in Area 59. The loss is $1,000. ASU DPS recovered the vehicle in Lot 59. It was driveable.
- A nonaffiliated female fell down at the Kiva Building at ASU West. She wasn't injured and refused medical treatment.
- A nonaffiliated male stole $10 from a parked vehicle in Lot 17.
- A female student reported her Diamondback bicycle stolen from the Language and Literature Building. Estimated loss is $410.
- The hold-up alarm was activated at Kerr Cultural Center by an employee error. The building was found secure and the alarm was reset.
- The Phoenix Police Department recovered a 1990 Honda motorcycle reported stolen by the ASU police department. The vehicle was recovered at 1350 E. Thomas Road and was driveable. The registered owner was notified of the $4,700 recovery.
- Two male students were arrested, cited and released for being minors in possession of alcohol at Manzanita Hall.

- A male employee reported that unknown persons damaged the roof door of the Art Building.
- A male student became ill at Sahuaro Hall. ASU DPS took him to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.
- The fire alarm was activated at the new Architecture Building by unknown means. The responding officer found the area secure and reset the alarm.
- The fire alarm was activated at the Physical Science F-wing by unknown means. The area was found secure and an electrician was called in to reset the alarm.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Sunday:

- A Tempe man came home to his apartment at 1216 E. Vista Del Cerro Drive Thursday and found his 21-year-old male roommate lying against the hall closet dead. An investigation revealed that the victim had been treated at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital for the flu. He was given a prescription which was never filled. Police saw no signs of foul play.
- A 20-year-old Tempe man was arrested Friday for disorderly conduct after he tried to start a fight with his apartment complex manager at 430 W. Sixth St.
- Three Phoenix men were arrested for shoplifting after they were observed by employees of Smith's, 3244 S. Rural Road, removing pallets and placing them in a vehicle.
- A 38-year-old Scottsdale woman was arrested Wednesday for shoplifting and being in possession of a narcotic drug after she was observed by store security at JC Penney, 1028 E. Baseline Road, shoplifting a pair of tennis shoes. While being detained, she attempted to discard a folded package containing a white, powdery substance from her purse. Police found a second package of the substance, which they believe to be cocaine, in her purse.

Law School

state students.

"These two bills, as I understand them, would require the law school to make determination of the fitness of our admittees," Morgan said. "It requires us to apply the Arizona bar's standards."

Morgan said there are several problems with the two bills:

- They would duplicate what the bar is already doing;
- They would raise the costs of the school in order to follow the requirements written into the language; and
- Many students won't attempt to pass the bar, because they will be going into areas like philosophy and political science.

Groscost said the limited number of spaces in the two law colleges requires more than test scores and letters of recommendation.

"The issue is, if we had enough spaces in the law school, Hamm would never be the issue," he said.

Despite his feelings about the controversy, Groscost said the bills probably won't be scheduled for discussion in committee.

Controversy over Hamm's admission to ASU's law school erupted last year because of his conviction in a drug-related murder about 20 years ago.

Hamm, in his second semester at the law college, said the two bills are a partial reaction to his admission, but agreed with Morgan, saying it should not be assumed that students in the law colleges want to be attorneys.

"There are a lot of people who apply to the College of Law that don't want to be an attorney," he said. "It would be inappropriate to use the (state) colleges of law as an arm of the state bar."

"The interest (of the schools) is more intellectual and philosophical."

Don Cracchiolo, a Phoenix attorney and staunch critic of Hamm's admission to the school, said few people enter the schools to go into areas other than law.

"That's baloney," he said. "I think it's appropriate and a reasonable mandate."

He said the admission of people with criminal records involving a felony gives the wrong image of law schools to the public.

Cracchiolo added that convicted felons cannot enter many other fields of work, and that Hamm's admission leaves the door wide open for anyone's entrance to the school.

"If Mr. Hamm can be admitted to law school, I don't know of any other person who can be asked about his past," the attorney said.

Morgan said the bill concerning resident-only admission to the state's law schools is the wrong move.

"There are very good reasons for admitting some non-resident students (to Arizona's state law schools)," Morgan said. "Every law school in the country has non-residents in the mix."

"It would probably harm us (if passed). It would make us a very unusual law school and it would impact our image."

He said the non-Arizona residents who partially constitute the school add needed breadth of experience to the education provided there. Currently, 75 percent of the approximate 500 students in the college must be in-state students.

"Legal education is very much a participation enterprise," he said. "The main impact (of the bill) would be that it would lessen the quality of everybody's experience."

Groscost said Arizona residents have had difficulty entering the state's law colleges, and positions should be opened for those who have lived in the state.

"(The bill) is an attempt to use these limited spaces to the greatest benefit of those in the state," the representative said.

Rep. Russell "Rusty" Bowers, R-Mesa, cosponsored the bill, saying Arizona students should be the first priority in the admissions process.

"I'm worried about our students in Arizona being able to use the schools we paid for," he said.

John's losing his hair.
His mission: get it back.

ASAP!
But how?
Weaving?
Not him!
Transplant?
Never.
A hairpiece?
Never, never.
What John really wants is his own hair back. And now he's learned, for male pattern baldness, Only Rogaine has been proven to regrow hair.

Rogaine
TOPICAL SOLUTION minoxidil 2%

Rogaine Topical Solution (minoxidil) 2% works in part by prolonging the growth of hair, which grows in cycles. With more hairs growing longer and thicker at the same time, you may see improved scalp coverage.

Dermatologists conducted 12-month clinical tests. After 4 months, 26% of patients using Rogaine reported moderate to dense hair regrowth, compared with 11% of those using a placebo (a similar solution without minoxidil, the active ingredient in Rogaine). After 1 year, 48% of the men who continued using Rogaine in the study rated their regrowth as moderate to dense. Thirty-six percent reported minimal regrowth. The rest (10%) had no regrowth.

Side effects were minimal. 7% of those who used Rogaine had itching of the scalp. Rogaine should only be applied to a normal, healthy scalp (not sunburned or irritated).

Studies indicate that at least 4 months of twice-daily treatment with Rogaine are usually necessary before there is evidence of regrowth. So why not make it part of your normal routine when you wake up and go to bed, like brushing your teeth.

As you'd expect, if you are older, balding longer, or have a larger area of baldness, you may do less well.

Rogaine is a treatment, not a cure. So further progress is only possible by using it continuously. Some anecdotal reports indicate that if you stop using it, you will probably shed the newly regrown hair within a few months.

Why wait? Find out whether Rogaine is for you. Call 1-800-688-4891. Today. We'll send you an informational brochure explaining all about the product and how to use it. And because only a doctor can prescribe Rogaine, we'll include a list of nearby dermatologists or other doctors experienced in treating hair loss and a $10 incentive to visit a doctor soon.

Young Democrats target students in health-care petition drive

By JONI TAIT
STATE PRESS

Super Bowl fans flocking to a Phoenix supermarket Sunday to pick up last-minute party supplies became targets of a Young Democrats' petition drive to promote President Bill Clinton's health-care campaign.

"We have to keep the issue of health-care reform going," said Scott King, chairman of the organization.

King said the group, which has more than 80 members, decided to hold this event because "there has been a lot of misinformation out there" about President Bill Clinton's health-care plan.

He said the organization believes distributing information from the Democratic National Committee about the president's plan is going to help clear up the confusion.

"(Students) need to make sure that the principles of this plan get passed because they are a large part of the majority of people who are uninsured," said Fran Senall, former vice president of ASU's Young Democrats.

"We believe that our future is dependent on this kind of plan," she said.

But Paul Clark, president of ASU's branch of the College Republicans, said the Clinton administration should fix the socialized programs we have now before starting a new one.

"I think people will abuse it like the welfare and social security programs," he said.

Clark said that even though there is no doubt among Republicans that health-care reform is needed, many problems exist with Clinton's plan.

The National Health Security Plan, put forth by the Clinton administration, is just one of seven plans on health-care reform that is circulating through Capitol Hill.

"What we're hoping for is the basic framework of the president's plan, (that) the basic principles that he put forth will be included in the final plan," Senall said.

Clinton claims his proposal will provide universal, comprehensive coverage for all Americans with the guarantee that they'll never lose it for any reason.

"A key part of the plan's success depends on its portability," King said.

Clinton, who threatened to veto any health-care reform bill from Congress that did not include universal coverage, wants employers to pay for 80 percent of worker premiums and employees the other 20 percent.

"An employer mandate is going to be the most debatable part of his plan," King said.

ASU graduate Karen Davis said that people need to realize it's a start toward health-care reform, and that the president's plan is not set in stone.

"I still think we can improve on it, and (Clinton) is willing to compromise," she said.

King, a social work major at ASU West, said that since the petition and literature distribution drive started in September, the group has collected more than 200 signatures in Maricopa County supporting the president's plan.

Members of the Young Democrats hope that as the debate over health care heats up, more Americans will realize that the principles of the president's plan is what this nation needs.

"This ought to be a bipartisan effort," King said.

"Once the plan is implemented and administered correctly it will be beneficial for future generations."

Earthquake

largest buildings first, including the Oviatt Library, which sustained major damage in the Jan. 17 quake.

"We've received excellent support from everyone," Fritzman said. "We are spreading the word to our fellow students that classes will resume." He added that students could even purchase books starting Monday, when the campus bookstore reopens outside.

A sign posted on the front of the campus states, "Cal State-Northridge 'stands.' Spring semester will open."

Several buildings and a four-story parking structure received further damage in a strong aftershock early Saturday morning which measured 5.0 on the Richter scale.

The entire campus is currently unusable, according to Building and Safety inspectors from the City of Los Angeles. Damage on the campus has been estimated at $25 million, although this figure may climb as the buildings are more closely inspected throughout the next few weeks.

The first of 600 portable classrooms arrived on campus Saturday afternoon. These will be used until buildings are once again deemed safe for students. Maps will be mailed to all registered students next week so they can locate their new classrooms. Parking will be available across from campus at a closed elementary school, and the nearby Valley Fairgrounds will also be used. Shuttle bus service will be started to assist students.

Class times and dates have been adjusted to allow for the time required traveling from one side of the campus to the other. Class schedules have also been altered to accommodate students trying to graduate in May. Students will not get a spring break, and will attend class through the middle of June. Students who had not yet registered before the earthquake can now do so using a telephone system patched into the system at Cal State-Fresno, about 100 miles north.

One of the 15 student housing buildings will be torn down because of damage. The students from this building are being paired with students in the other buildings until other housing can be found. The dorms were reopened early last week for students returning to campus for spring semester. Students are being offered $2,500 loans through an emergency fund established at CSUN to allow them to find housing off campus.

About a mile away at the Northridge Meadows apartment where many CSUN students lived and 16 people were killed, structural engineers are still examining damage to learn what, if anything, went wrong in the building.

The building is scheduled for demolition on Tuesday.

Many anxious residents were allowed to re-enter their wrecked units on Wednesday. They found not only destruction, but evidence that confirmed rumors that the apartments had been combed through by vandals earlier in the week. Doors had been kicked in and many valuables removed before residents were allowed back in, despite a strong show of force by the local police and the National Guard.

"There's been a lot of fraud, and that's a shame," Tony McKinski said. "They're turning in dead peoples' names and trying to collect relief money. It's sick."

"We feel responsible to these people. All they know is Pat and Tony. I wasn't just the landlord. These people were my friends."

According to McKinski, several residents have been approached by movie producers who have already begun filming a television docudrama based on the events at the Northridge Meadows. "Everyone expects to be a celebrity," he said. "People are saying they lived there forever, when they had only been there a few weeks, just to capitalize on their misfortune." McKinski has been approached by two producers, but he has made no commitments so far.

"I just want to take my wife to Vegas for a while, to get away from here. We need to get away from here. We need a break from all this."

None of the Cal State-Northridge students who lived in the building had returned to collect their belongings. Students who lived in the apartment but were not on the lease will not be able to collect FEMA disaster relief checks because they can not prove their losses. They can receive aid from the Red Cross disaster relief fund, however.

"The Red Cross will always be here," said Red Cross information officer Marcelaine W. Rovano from the disaster relief center housed in a giant tent at Northridge Fashion Center Sunday morning. "We have based our relief efforts on our own damage assessments. We will be here as long as people need us."

"We have seen about 50,000 family dwellings in the L.A. area that are affected by this disaster," she added. "The Red Cross anticipates serving over 33,000 families in terms of recovery services."

The voucher system is being used to encourage victims to shop at local businesses, which were also devastated by the quake.

Rogaine
minoxidil 2%

The only product ever proven to regrow hair for male pattern baldness.

What is ROGAINE?
ROGAINE Topical Solution is a prescription medicine for use on the scalp that is used to treat a type of hair loss in men and women known as androgenetic alopecia: hair loss of the scalp vertex (top or crown of the head) in men and diffuse hair loss or thinning of the front and top of the scalp in women. ROGAINE is a topical form of minoxidil, for use on the scalp.

How effective is ROGAINE?
In men: Clinical studies with ROGAINE of over 2,300 men with male pattern baldness involving the top (vertex) of the head were conducted by physicians in 27 US medical centers. Based on patient evaluations of regrowth at the end of 4 months, 28% of the patients using ROGAINE had moderate to dense hair regrowth compared with 11% who used a placebo treatment (no active ingredient). No regrowth was reported by 41% of those using ROGAINE and 60% of those using a placebo. By the end of 1 year, 48% of those who continued to use ROGAINE rated their hair growth as moderate or better.

In women: Clinical studies with ROGAINE were conducted by physicians in 11 US medical centers involving 256 women with hair loss. Based on patient evaluations of regrowth after 32 weeks (8 months), 19% of the women using ROGAINE had at least moderate regrowth compared with 7% of those using a placebo. No regrowth was reported by 41% of the group using ROGAINE and 60% of the group using placebo.

How soon can I expect results from using ROGAINE?
Studies show that the response time to ROGAINE may differ greatly from one person to another. Some people using ROGAINE may see results faster than others; others may respond with a slower rate of hair regrowth. You should not expect visible regrowth in less than 4 months.

How long do I need to use ROGAINE?
ROGAINE is a hair-loss treatment, not a cure. If you have new hair growth, you will need to continue using ROGAINE to keep or increase hair regrowth. If you do not begin to show new hair growth with ROGAINE after a reasonable period of time (at least 4 months), your doctor may advise you to discontinue using ROGAINE.

What happens if I stop using ROGAINE? Will I keep the new hair?
Probably not. People have reported that new hair growth was shed after they stopped using ROGAINE.

How much ROGAINE should I use?
You should apply a 1-mL dose of ROGAINE twice a day to your clean dry scalp, once in the morning and once at night before bedtime. Wash your hands after you or your fingers are used to apply ROGAINE. ROGAINE must remain on the scalp for at least 4 hours to ensure penetration into the scalp. Do not wash your hair for at least 4 hours after applying it. If you wash your hair before applying ROGAINE, be sure your scalp and hair are dry when you apply it. Please refer to the Instructions for Use in the package.

What if I miss a dose or forget to use ROGAINE?
Do not try to make up for missed applications of ROGAINE. You should restart your twice-daily doses and return to your usual schedule.

What are the most common side effects reported in clinical studies with ROGAINE?
Itching and other skin irritations of the treated scalp area were the most common side effects directly linked to ROGAINE in clinical studies. About 7 of every 100 people who used ROGAINE (7%) had these complaints.

Other side effects, including light-headedness, dizziness, and headaches, were reported both by people using ROGAINE and by those using the placebo solution with no minoxidil. You should ask your doctor to discuss side effects of ROGAINE with you.

People who are extra sensitive or allergic to minoxidil, propylene glycol, or ethanol should not use ROGAINE.

ROGAINE Topical Solution contains alcohol, which could cause burning or irritation of the eyes or sensitive skin areas. If ROGAINE accidentally gets into these areas, rinse the area with large amounts of cool tap water. Contact your doctor if the irritation does not go away. If the spray applicator is used, avoid inhaling the spray.

What are some of the side effects people have reported?
ROGAINE was used by 2,857 patients (147 females) in placebo-controlled clinical trials. Except for dermatologic events (involving the skin), no individual reaction or reactions grouped by body systems appeared to be more common in the minoxidil-treated patients than in placebo-treated patients.

Dermatologic: irritant or allergic contact dermatitis—7.36%; Respiratory: bronchitis, upper respiratory infection, sinusitis—7.16%; Gastrointestinal: diarrhea, nausea, vomiting—4.33%; Neurologic: headache, dizziness, faintness, light-headedness—3.42%; Musculoskeletal: fractures, back pain, tendinitis—2.59%; Cardiovascular: edema, chest pain, blood pressure increases/decreases, palpitations, pulse rate increases/decreases—1.53%; Allergic: nonspecific allergic reactions, hives, allergic rhinitis, facial swelling, and sensitivity—1.27%; Metabolic-Nutritional: edema, weight gain—1.24%; Special Senses: conjunctivitis, ear infections, vertigo—1.17%; Genital Tract: prostaticitis, epididymitis, vaginitis, vulvitis, vaginal discharge, itching—0.91%; Urinary Tract: urinary tract infections, renal calculi, urethritis—0.93%; Endocrine: 0.47%; Psychiatric: anxiety, depression, fatigue—0.36%; Hematologic: lymphadenopathy, thrombocytopenia—0.31%.

ROGAINE use has been monitored for up to 5 years, and there has been no change in incidence or severity of reported adverse reactions. Additional adverse events have been reported since marketing ROGAINE and include eczema, hypertrichosis (excessive hair growth), local erythema (redness), pruritus (itching), dry skin/scalp flaking, sexual dysfunction: visual disturbances, including decreased visual acuity (clarity), increase in hair loss; and alopecia (hair loss).

What are the possible side effects that could affect the heart and circulation when using ROGAINE?
Serious side effects have not been linked to ROGAINE in clinical studies. However, it is possible that they could occur if more than the recommended dose of ROGAINE was applied, because the active ingredient in ROGAINE is the same as that in minoxidil tablets. These effects appear to be dose related; that is, more effects are seen with higher doses.

Because very small amounts of minoxidil reach the blood when the recommended dose of ROGAINE is applied to the scalp, you should know about certain effects that may occur when the tablet form of minoxidil is used to treat high blood pressure. Minoxidil tablets lower blood pressure by relaxing the arteries, an effect called vasodilation. Vasodilation leads to fluid retention and faster heart rate. The following effects have occurred in some patients taking minoxidil tablets for high blood pressure:

Increased heart rate: some patients have reported that their resting heart rate increased by more than 20 beats per minute.

Salt and water retention: weight gain of more than 5 pounds in a short period of time or swelling of the face, hands, ankles, or stomach area.

Problems breathing: especially when lying down; a result of a buildup of body fluids or fluid around the heart.

Worsening or new attack of angina pectoris: brief, sudden chest pain.

When you apply ROGAINE to normal skin, very little minoxidil is absorbed. You probably will not have the possible effects caused by minoxidil tablets when you use ROGAINE. If, however, you experience any of the possible side effects listed above, stop using ROGAINE and consult your doctor. Any such effects would be most likely if ROGAINE was used on damaged or inflamed skin or in greater than recommended amounts.

In animal studies, minoxidil, in much larger amounts than would be absorbed from topical use (on skin) in people, has caused important heart-structure damage. This kind of damage has not been seen in humans given minoxidil tablets for high blood pressure at effective doses.

What factors may increase the risk of serious side effects with ROGAINE?
People with a known or suspected heart condition or a tendency for heart failure would be at particular risk if increased heart rate or fluid retention were to occur. People with these kinds of heart problems should discuss the possible risks of treatment with their doctor if they choose to use ROGAINE.

ROGAINE should be used only on the balding scalp. Using ROGAINE on other parts of the body may increase minoxidil absorption, which may increase the chances of having side effects. You should not use ROGAINE if your scalp is irritated or sunburned, and you should not use it if you are using other skin treatments on your scalp.

Can people with high blood pressure use ROGAINE?
Most people with high blood pressure, including those taking high blood pressure medicine, can use ROGAINE but should be monitored closely by their doctor. Patients taking a blood pressure medicine called guanethidine should not use ROGAINE.

Should any precautions be followed?
People who use ROGAINE should see their doctor 1 month after starting ROGAINE and at least every 6 months thereafter. Stop using ROGAINE if any of the following occur: salt and water retention, problems breathing, faster heart rate, or chest pain.

Do not use ROGAINE if you are using other drugs applied to the scalp such as corticosteroids, retinoids, petrolatum, or agents that might increase absorption through the skin. ROGAINE is for use on the scalp only. Each 1 mL of solution contains 20 mg minoxidil, and accidental ingestion could cause unwanted effects.

Are there special precautions for women?
Pregnant women and nursing mothers should not use ROGAINE. Also, its effects on women during labor and delivery are not known. Efficacy in postmenopausal women has not been studied. Studies show the use of ROGAINE will not affect menstrual cycle length, amount of flow, or duration of the menstrual period. Discontinue using ROGAINE and consult your doctor as soon as possible if your menstrual period does not occur at the expected time.

Can ROGAINE be used by children?
No, the safety and effectiveness of ROGAINE has not been tested in people under age 18.

Caution: Federal law prohibits dispensing without a prescription. You must see a doctor to receive a prescription.

An Angel of Mercy Earns her Wings

Part of Supple's day may mean giving eye exams at Lowell Elementary School in Mesa (above), or painstakingly searching a child's head for lice (left). Below: Supple comforts an infant who has been in the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit at St. Joseph's Hospital in Phoenix for seven months with respiratory problems.

Julie Supple is not your average ASU senior.

In the course of a single week, she might care for a seriously ill child in an intensive care ward, help an elementary school teacher plan a health-education program and administer free immunization shots to the elderly in Mesa—all in addition to being a nationally-recognized honors student in ASU's College of Nursing.

Her schedule would be hectic even without a husband and daughter. But for Supple, nursing is more a labor of love than a convenient occupation.

The work, at times, is tough. Some may be surprised to find that nursing students have such serious responsibilities while still in school—thinking, perhaps, such skill could be learned on dolls and from charts.

However, they would be forgetting the most essential part of nursing—the human contact it involves.

In this, her final semester at ASU, Supple interns at an intensive care unit at a large Valley hospital, where she plans to stay after graduating in May.

Sitting in lecture classes is only one component of nursing students' lives (left). After four years, the nursing school seems to grow smaller, a collection of friends that have made it through what for many of them are the toughest years of their lives. Above, Supple shares a laugh with classmates after a clinical. Everything else aside, Supple still must go home at night and put in hours pouring over her books (right). A graduate also of the University of Arizona, and a former retail manager, Supple works hard to prove to her family and to herself that the change to nursing was the right choice.

PEOPLE

ATLANTA (AP) — Sorry Broadway Joe. There were so many celebrities in town for the Super Bowl, stargazers got choosy.

Joe Namath, hero of Super Bowl III, was ignored by some fickle autograph hounds on Atlanta's Peachtree Street when boxing champ Muhammad Ali passed by.

"This man's a legend," said Anthony Willis of Atlanta, pointing to Ali. "Namath does TV commercials in New York. He's a nobody."

Gov. Zell Miller ambled by nearly unnoticed. "Hey, governor," an eagle-eye bellman at the Hyatt Regency yelled Friday as Miller tried to find a way inside past a row of limousines.

The list of celebrities in Atlanta included Frank Sinatra, James Brown, Rush Limbaugh, Clint Black, Hammer, Bo Jackson, Martin Mull, Stevie Wonder, Mary Lou Retton, Tanya Tucker, and Natalie Cole, who was invited to sing the national anthem before the game.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Larry King took a bow after Michael Jackson bowed out.

King picked up the 23rd Scopus Award on Saturday night. Jackson declined the award while dealing with the molestation accusation that recently led to him settling a teen-ager's lawsuit for an undisclosed sum.

American Friends of Hebrew University, which presented the award on behalf of Israel's oldest university, recognized King for his humanitarian work and his use of mass media.

"He has used radio and television to shine light on complicated political and social issues," said Harvey Silbert, deputy chairman of Hebrew University's international board.

King is host of "Larry King Live" on Cable News Network, and his radio show, "The Larry King Show," is broadcast on more than 365 stations.

The group announced last July that Jackson would receive the award, citing his Heal the World Foundation and other charities.

At the time the pop star declined, he was said to be in Europe getting treatment for a prescription drug addiction and unsure he could attend the ceremony.

Past recipients of the award include Elizabeth Taylor, Gerald Ford, Barbra Streisand, Steven Spielberg, Johnny Carson, Quincy Jones, Aaron Spelling and Frank Sinatra.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The court battle is on to decide who was to blame for the 1991 plane crash that killed most of country singer Reba McEntire's band.

Lawyers for the parents of McEntire's late band leader say it was pilot error. The airplane company blames an air traffic controller.

Testimony in a $20 million wrongful death lawsuit brought by the parents of bandleader Kirk Cappello began Friday in federal court.

Seven members of McEntire's band and her tour manager were killed in March 1991 when the plane slammed into a mountain near San Diego after a concert.

McEntire was not aboard.

Russ Heldman, lawyer for Cappello's parents, said in opening statements the pilot, who died in the crash, wasn't watching where he was going.

Martin Rose, lawyer for Duncan Aircraft Sales of Venice, Fla., said the pilot was flying low while waiting for clearance from a controller who turned his back on the radar screen for 1 1/2 minutes to type a report.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The first lady can expect first-class treatment when she makes her next stop at the Las Vegas Strip.

"Please come back and visit us again real soon," singer Paul Anka told Hillary Rodham Clinton Friday night at the Bally's casino. "We'll give you free drinks, a big discount on the room and $5 worth of nickels for the slot machine."

Mrs. Clinton was in town to promote President Clinton's health care plan.

PHOENIX (AP) — A sore throat sidelined Delores Hope, forcing Bob Hope to cancel a show featuring the couple.

The Saturday night show at the Celebrity Theatre was called off because Mrs. Hope, a singer, had laryngitis.

"Ever since Delores' success with her album ("Now and Then"), I've made sure we are a team," Hope said in a statement. "Seriously, I want the people of Phoenix to hear her wonderful voice."

The show was rescheduled for March 26.

Women's hoops falls to UO

ASU's women's basketball team fell to the Oregon Ducks on Saturday 73-59, in Eugene, Oregon, despite a solid performance by center Melani Francis. ASU is now 2-13 overall and 0-7 in the Pac-10.

Francis scored 17 points on 7 for 16 shooting and grabbed nine rebounds. Depth again played a part, as only eight players were listed on ASU's roster, and only six played more than 15 minutes. As a team, ASU shot just under 38 percent.

In front of 1,413 fans at McArthur Court, Oregon enjoyed a ten-point lead at the half, largely due to 60 percent shooting from the field, as compared to ASU's 36 percent.

Molly Tuter scored 17 points for ASU and made two of three three-point shots.

The team returns to Tempe for a Thursday game against the 18th-ranked Washington Huskies.

Gymnastics buries Golden Gophers in Minnesota

The Sun Devils' women's gymnastics team continued its dominance over its opponents on Saturday when it defeated Minnesota on the road, 190.8-186.025.

The victory moved ASU's record to a perfect 4-0 on the young season.

Junior standout Tina Brinkman added to her collection of honors by out-scoring Minnesota's Lacey Purkat, 39.075-37.250, and thus returning home with her third consecutive all-around title. Brinkman captured first place in the vault (9.9), bars (9.75) and floor (9.85) for the second consecutive meet, giving her eight first place finishes in 12 events through the first three meets of the season.

Sun Devil Michelle Naia took first place on the balance beam with a score of 9.75, giving ASU a clean sweep of the meet with a victory in all four events.

The Sun Devils' next home meet is at home against the University of Denver on Saturday, Feb. 4 at 7:30 p.m.

ASU women golfers named to 1994 U.S. Curtis Cup team

Sun Devils Wendy Ward and Eilee Klein have been named to the eight player 1994 U.S. Curtis Cup team.

Ward, an All-America selection for the Sun Devils, tied for third at the 1993 NCAA Women's Championship and reached the semifinals of the U.S. Women's Amateur.

Klein, only a sophomore, won the 1993 North and South and the Broadmoor Invitation, as well as finishing as runner-up at the 1993 Women's Western Amateur. She also won the 1994 Harder Hall Invitational.

The Curtis Cup is an international competition for women amateurs between teams from the U.S. and another from Great Britain and Ireland. The competition is scheduled for July 30-31 at The Honors Course in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dedication holds rewards for ASU

BY JULIE REUVERS
STATE PRESS

After Thursday's 88-82 win over Oregon State, ASU men's basketball coach Bill Frieder had little time to celebrate. Meetings and film sessions consumed what time was left before Saturday's match-up with Oregon.

Frieder said he has never worked harder between a Thursday-Saturday game in preparing ASU for the Ducks. The Sun Devils' usual free time between dinner and bed check Friday night was revoked. Individual meetings and film sessions began early Saturday, something Frieder said the team has never done.

"We did more things to get focused on Oregon because I never felt they knew how good this team was," Frieder said. "We knew Oregon was going to be tough. They've got a real good basketball team."

"He's (Coach Jerry Green) building that program like we built this here, and he's already taught those kids to be competitive and that they can win."

The extra effort couldn't have worked more in ASU's favor. Not only did the Sun Devils (10-6 overall, 5-2 Pac-10) come away with a 84-78 win at the University Activity Center, they played one of their most balanced games this season. Defeating Oregon (6-10, 2-4) gave ASU its seventh straight win in the UAC this season and ninth out of 10 home games.

Five ASU players scored in double figures and played more than 30 minutes. Ron Riley led all scorers with 21 points — 12 in the second half — and had eight rebounds. His second half efforts were welcomed Saturday, as point guard Stevin "Hedake" Smith went down with a sprained ankle with 3:07 remaining in the first half.

"I just turned it," Smith said. "And I turned it pretty hard. I just couldn't cut real hard after that."

Two rolls of tape were applied to Smith's foot and ankle, and he switched to a size 12 1/2 shoe (he usually wears size 12). He returned for the game's final 20 minutes, but was not pain-free.

Opportunities opened up for Dwayne Fontana as well. He was often left alone because of extra pressure on Smith and 6-foot-9 center Mario Bennett. The Ducks assigned 6-foot-5 forward Darryl Parker to defend Smith much of the game.

"They were sagging so much (off Fontana) and we had to tell him he's got to take it to the hole and make something happen," Frieder said. "Otherwise they're playing us five on four if he isn't a threat."

The 6-foot-5, 213-pounder responded, pouring in 19 points. He was 8 of 13 from the field, 3 for 4 from the charity stripe. The senior forward, who was held to just eight points against OSU Thursday, also collected seven rebounds.

"I just felt like I had to come play my game," Fontana said. "I don't really score that much, but I think I'm a leader out there just

Sun Devils sweep of NMSU answers pitching question

Injury brings caution to ASU celebration

BY MIKE BRANOM
STATE PRESS

For Coach Jim Brock and the rest of the 13th-ranked ASU baseball team, the three-game weekend sweep of New Mexico State offered an early answer to one question while creating another concern for the Sun Devils.

Pitching, both starting and relieving, was a sore spot entering the season, as closer Noah Peery is the only returner who threw a significant number of innings last season. Also, the Sun Devils have four freshman hurlers, causing Brock to comment before the season, "They will all be successful, but the question is when."

If the early returns are anything to go by, then ASU's pitching worries could be less severe than anyone would have dared dream.

The Sun Devils' three starters against the Aggies — Jason Ruskey, Jason Bond and Jason Verdugo — not only provided the fans at Packard Stadium with more Jasons than a Friday the 13th film-fest, but combined for three wins, 17 strikeouts in 18 innings with an aggregate 2.00 ERA.

Brock also found out that he could have an effective stopper combination of Peery and Larry Walty. In Saturday's 4-3 victory, the two combined for three innings of shutout ball to hold NMSU at bay after Verdugo surrendered a three-run homer in the seventh inning.

"I'm very happy with our pitching so far," said Brock.

Although Walty will be used as Peery's set-up man for the most part, he should see his share of save opportunities when Six-Pac play begins. The fact that Peery and his side-arm style will be following the over-the-top Walty should confuse opponents with their different looks.

"I think (Walty) helps a lot," said Peery when asked about the possibilities of this bullpen combination. "That will work out good."

The downside of the sweep did not happen on the field, but occurred even before the series even began. Last Wednesday evening, shortstop Cody McKay was riding in the bed of third baseman Antone Williamson's truck when somehow McKay bruised his right (throwing) elbow.

McKay played in Thursday's game driving in and scoring a run on 1-for-4 hitting. However, his elbow tightened in the late innings, probably due to the cool, damp weather, and he left the ballgame not to see action for the rest of the series.

At first, the bruise was feared to be turning into a case of tendonitis, but McKay may play again Friday when New Mexico comes to Tempe. Whatever the case, he will be getting a second opinion from the Oakland Athletics team physician today.

"He felt better today (Saturday)," Brock said. "He feels confident about his hitting."

If McKay misses any more games, his absence will probably be felt most by Williamson, who bats in front of him. Without the sophomore shortstop batting behind him in the series, Williamson saw few pitches in the strike zone.

"I think Cody is a good enough hitter to keep (opposing pitchers) honest," Brock said.

ASU blows NAU out of the water

Swim, dive takes 11 of 16 1st place spots

BY JEREMY STEIN
STATE PRESS

The Sun Devils' women's swimming and diving team cruised past NAU 146-93, raising its record to 5-3 overall and 1-3 in the Pac-10.

ASU dominated almost every event in capturing 11 first place finishes, including both diving events, in the meet's 16 events. The Sun Devils put in a complete team effort in the victory with a different swimmer finishing first in each of the swimming team's nine first-place events.

Sun Devil Coach Tim Hill was very happy with his team's overall performance.

"It was all pretty good. I was pretty pleased. The people that needed to swim better for us did."

The ASU divers added to the Sun Devils dominance by taking the top two spots in both the one-meter and three-meter diving. Jennifer Cnota and Amy Garner finished first in the one-meter and three-meter, respectively. Senior Jodi McCloughy took second place for the Sun Devils in both diving events.

The only area that ASU had any trouble in was distance swimming events. NAU finished first in both the 1,650-meter and the 500-meter freestyle.

The Sun Devils' next meet will be on Friday at 3 p.m. when they host Loyola Marymount.

Ice Devils can't stop UofA jinx

By TODD KELLY
STATE PRESS

The ASU Ice Devils found themselves in an interesting position this weekend, attempting to overcome 14 years of subservience to the UofA Ice Cats.

The Ice Devils do not have a victory over the Ice Cats in the 14-year history of the rivalry, and after Saturday's 9-2 loss at the Veteran's Memorial Coliseum to the Ice Cats, the streak now spans 52 games. Each loss adds to the team's mounting tension when playing against Arizona.

"There's a lot of frustration," said Coach Gene Hammett. "It's been going on a long time."

Hammett's primary goal for this year was to defeat the UofA, yet his team is 0-5 against the Ice Cats this season.

"It's getting over the hump, and beating them once. If we do that, we'll be all-right."

The Ice Cats came to town for two games this weekend. They defeated the Ice Devils Friday night 5-0. That one "got nasty," said defenseman Sean Eggert, who was disqualified from Saturday's game for fighting. UofA heads back to Tucson with a two game sweep and a 18-2 overall record.

Entering Saturday's game, the Ice Devils' record stood at 7-7, out of the running for the American Collegiate Hockey Association eight-team tournament. The Ice Cats, currently ranked No.2 in the nation by the ACHA, had more at stake. A loss to the Ice Devils would mean a drop in the polls, but also the label as the first team to ever lose to their upstate rival.

The Ice Devils wanted to be the first ASU team to ever beat UofA, and felt confident heading into the weekend series. One win would make the season worthwhile. The program is still a couple of years behind in terms of fan base and financial support. In terms of the pure talent, though, there is little disparity.

"We match up player for player. But they play as a team and we don't," team co-captain Rob McClelland said.

On Saturday, the Ice Cats struck quickly, scoring two goals in the first four minutes of play.

"After that, we settled down. But those goals should not have happened," said Hammett.

Brian Westerberg finally made it a game, scoring with 58 seconds left in the first period. Those two quick Ice Cat goals "affects the team mentally, the goalie more than anybody. We're used to, you know, you let one in, you get one back," said Westerberg.

However, the defense couldn't hold up as the Ice Cats scored three more times in the second, and following an early third period goal by the Ice Devils' John Allen, they scored four more times. The flood gates opened, and ASU couldn't stop the tide.

ASU ends the season in Tucson on February 25 and 26. Team chemistry, the missing link from this series, might resurface in time for those games. According to McClelland, "We get them once more." One more shot to end the streak, one more chance to start a new one.

Tennis sweeps No.16 Miami, falls to No.7 Cardinal over weekend

By EVELYN SHEINKOPF
STATE PRESS

ASU's ninth-ranked women's tennis team finished a double match weekend home-stand with a split. The Sun Devils lost to seventh-ranked Pepperdine 4-5 on Saturday and defeated 16th-ranked Miami 6-0 in a sweep on Sunday.

Defeated by one game in a highly competitive match against Pepperdine, ASU's squad managed to even the singles sets 3-3, making the doubles rounds the determining factor where ASU lost 2-1.

All-American Kori Davidson defeated 18th-ranked Isabella Petrov in one of the quickest matches of the day 6-1, 6-2.

"It was closer than 6-1, 6-2," said Davidson after the matches. "It was a tough match but I was excited to play. Winning is good for my confidence, now I feel excited for tomorrow."

The results of the rest of the singles matches were: No.2 Joelle Schad defeated Sonya Olejar 6-3, 6-3; No.3 Meredith Geiger lost to Myriam Berthe 6-1, 4-6, 7-5; No.4 Page Bartelt bested Natasha

Posnich 6-3, 6-2; No.5 Kara Schertzer was defeated by Tomoko Tsuruyani 1-6, 6-2; 6-3; No.6 Julie Coppinger lost to Nina Eriksson 6-1, 6-3.

In doubles, the No.1 team of Davidson and Geiger were bested by Petrov and Eriksson 2-6, 6-1, 6-4; No.2 Schad and Bartelt triumphed over Olejar and Berthe 6-4, 7-5; No.3 Schertzer and Coppinger lost to Pospich and Tsuruyani 7-5, 6-0.

But the Sun Devils made a strong comeback on Sunday, winning 6-0 over Miami. After ASU swept the singles matches, Miami decided not to play doubles.

No.1 Davidson broke Miami's Maria Vento 6-4, 3-6, 6-2; No.2 Schad bested Carolina Hora 6-1, 6-1; No.3 Geiger defeated Lean Gulkin 6-2, 6-0; No.4 Bartelt championed a quick 6-0, 6-0 victory over Machel Fry; No.5 Schertzer beat Katy Fairweather 7-5, 6-0; No.6 Coppinger defeated Janna Lipkin 6-0, 6-0.

"It's good to come back after a loss with a win," Coach Sheila McInerney said Sunday. "Pepperdine played hard, but we came back strong."

ASU beats NAU, falls to Texas

Swimmers face Loyola Friday

By DAWN J. WAGNER
STATE PRESS

After facing two tough teams last weekend, the ASU men's swimming and diving team came back home and split the weekend meets against No.2 Texas and in-state rivals NAU.

The Sun Devils (5-4 overall, 1-3 Pac-10) fell to the Longhorns 172-123 on Friday making only scattered finishes in the top three spots. ASU started off the meet with a first place finish in the 400-meter medley relay, but soon fell out of contention.

ASU's 400-meter freestyle relay team also placed first, along with Robert Shamosh's first-place showing in the 100-meter breaststroke.

Rich Bera, Eduardo Piccinini and Simon Percy all finished in the top three in individual events.

"We had a tough weekend last week and we were tired. The team did very well and some were tired, but we had a very good shot," said team co-captain David Holderbach.

The Sun Devils came back on Saturday, crushing the Lumberjacks 141-95. In individual events, ASU captured almost all of the top spots.

Holderbach took first in the 200-meter backstroke, while Bera was first in the 50 freestyle, and Renato Remahlo came in first in the 1,650-meter freestyle.

by example by going hard, going to the boards. I don't usually play that hard but I think my presence was felt."

Bennett continued his fierce inside game, scoring 18 points. Smith added 13 points, dished off six assists and recorded four steals. Junior guard Isaac Burton had 11 points.

Officials called 46 fouls in the heated contest, 31 in the second half. ASU shot 60 percent from the free-throw line to Oregon's 81 percent. Bennett missed on 8 of 12 attempts.

Orlando Williams led the Ducks with 16 points. He sank four three-point shots in seven attempts.

DIFFERENT DEGREES OF SUCCESS

"I never know hard work could be so much fun."

Paul McMillan
BS, Business Management
Assistant Manager
San Bernardino, CA

At Enterprise, the average time it takes to reach a management level position is less than three years. But, like Paul McMillan, you have to "pay your dues" - work hard, learn fast, and have fun. No exceptions. That's how we built one of America's fastest growing and largest privately held companies. But frankly, if you can meet the demands we place on entrepreneurial college graduates, there are no limits to how far you can go in a company that pays the highest wages overall in the industry.

Sales Management Trainees $23,000

To share in our success throughout the Southern California area, you need:

- A BS/BA degree
- Strong communication skills, enthusiasm and drive
