Ball passed to administrators to fulfill goals

Proposed programs target athlete involvement

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

The ball is now in the court of University administrators to carry out a comprehensive list of goals regarding student-athletes announced Monday by ASU President Lattie Coor.

Officials said Tuesday that they are waiting for feedback from the University community on Coor's suggestions before rushing into decisions that may not work.

"I don't think that any institution has the perfect model for student success," said Christine Wilkinson, ASU vice president for Student Affairs. "It's really a goal that all of us have to work for."

Wilkinson emphasized that student-athletes, like all students, need to become involved on campus in order to improve their academic success.

"We need to make them feel like they're part of the larger University community," she said.

Wilkinson said Freshman Year Experience (FYE), an academic support program providing advising, tutoring and counseling, was established to increase student involvement.

Jim Rund, dean of Student Development, praised the FYE. He said that students new to ASU, especially athletes, sometimes need help adjusting to University life.

"I think it would be beneficial for student-athletes, as it is to all other students who are making their adjustment to the University as new students," Rund said.

While Rund said he hasn't read the report in its entirety, he said he's familiar with the outlines.

He added that the programs proposed are beneficial for students in general, not just athletes. But he said sports can add to the burdens new students face.

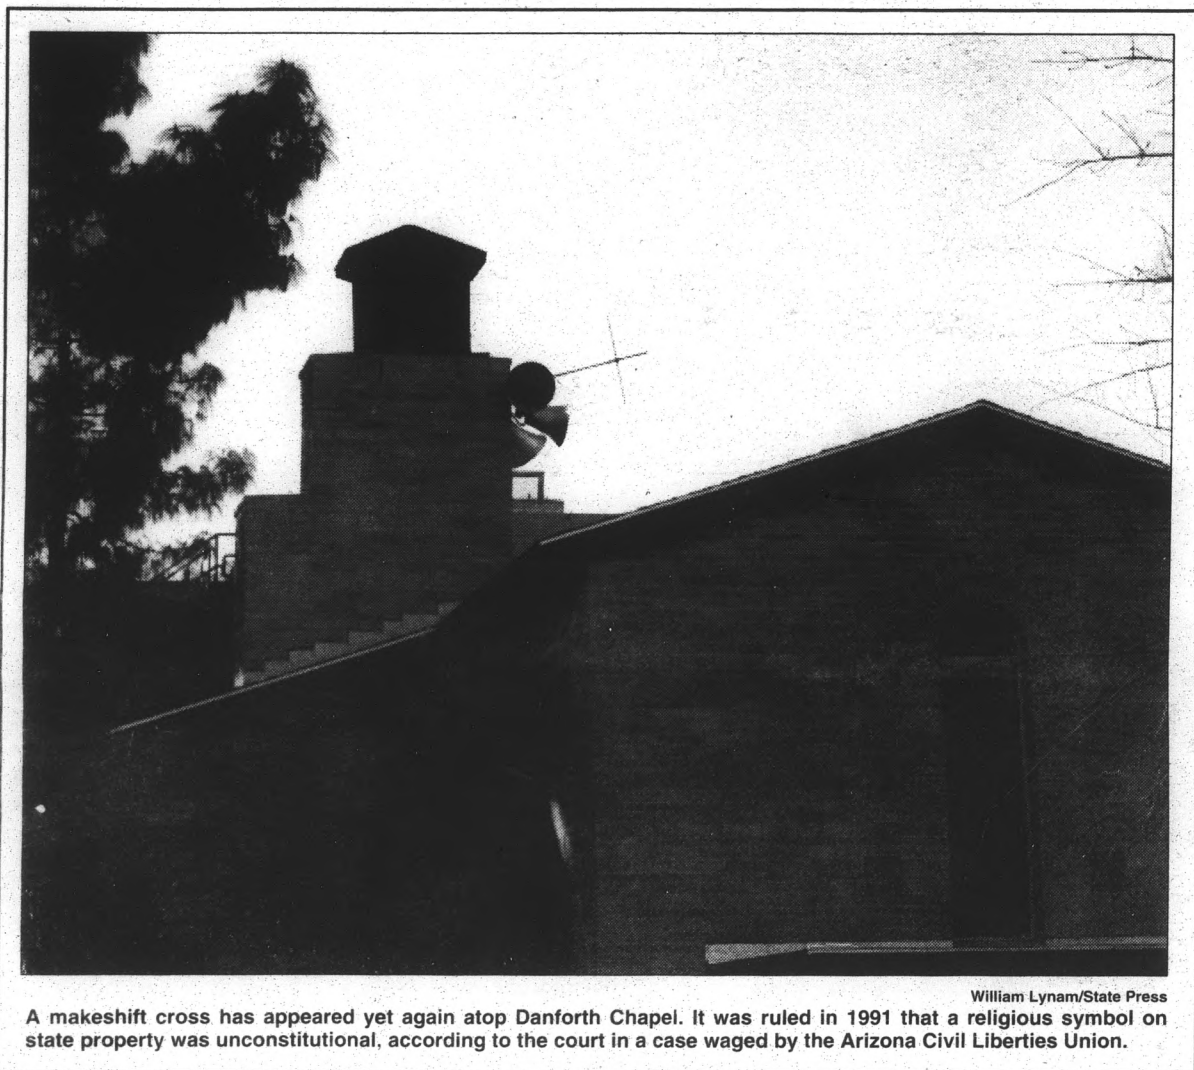

"Given the demands on the student-athlete's time, there may be additional things that are required to help them be successful," Rund said.

Susan Clouse Dolbert, director of Undergraduate Admissions, is working on recruiting strategies and helping athletes adjust to ASU.

The report states that preferential treatment should not be given to student-athletes. Clouse Dolbert said that goal has already been achieved.

"There had never been preferential treatment," she said.

Student regent selection set to get started

BY VICKY YOUNG SCHAUER
STATE PRESS

Spencer Insolia's term as student representative on the Arizona Board of Regents is nearing its end, and the search for his replacement to serve for the 1994-95 term will get underway soon at ASU.

"It's lonely at the top. But being student regent has been the most incredible experience of my life," Insolia said.

The student regent, which rotates each year between ASU, UofA and NAU, represents nearly 100,000 students from Arizona's three universities. He or she serves as a voting member of ABOR and has a unique opportunity to represent student concerns.

Applications are being accepted until 5 p.m. Friday at the Associated Students of ASU office, located on the MU's third floor. A letter of interest and resume must also be submitted. Applicants must be Arizona residents and full-time ASU students, having a minimum 2.0 GPA.

"The student regent needs to be in tune with student needs. They should be a voice for student opinions and feelings," said Board of Regents liaison Jeff Carter. "They must relate well to students as well as the board and administration."

Insolia said he has been pleased with his experience on the ABOR.

"You're a full regent," said Insolia. "I'm impressed with how receptive the ABOR is to the student regent. They want to hear the student view."

Insolia said he has been able to be "right there" when important decisions are being made that will have lasting repercussions for students.

"It's hard for the other regents to empathize with the students. They can sympathize, but they are not students."

Insolia has focused his concerns on tuition and financial aid issues during his one-year term.

"I've been able to be there to say, 'This is probably not the way the students would want their money spent,' during discussions about tuition increases."

Past Student Regent Pat McWhortor, who served during 1988-89, describes his experience as student regent as "the best learning experience of my college career."

McWhortor currently works as the executive director of ASA. "Being student regent is a unique opportunity to do something on behalf of fellow students," he said.

McWhortor said it is important for a student representative to be present when the ABOR is making important decisions that affect students. "The process would be much less worthy without student input," he added.

A screening committee made up of ASASU presidential staff will review all applications for student regent.

After an interview process on Feb. 12, the committee will make a recommendation to ASASU. The presidential staff will then nominate the top three candidates to be ratified by the ASASU executive committee.

The recommendations will be sent to the governor's office.

Hispanic dorm sparks mixed reviews

Hayden Hall to host Latino theme next semester

BY MIKA AKIKUNI
STATE PRESS

A Hispanic residence hall slated to open next semester has been applauded by some at ASU, while others think the living space with a Latino theme will promote student disunity.

The hall, which will be located on the first floor of Hayden Hall (near Apache Boulevard), will be open to Hispanic and Chicano students, as well as those who are interested in learning about Hispanic culture. The community, together with the African Umoja and the Native American halls, will be part of Campus Communities, a core element of ASU President Lattie Coor's strategic plan to enrich and personalize undergraduate education at the University.

"This community will be open to anyone interested in Hispanic culture," said Debra Sells, ASU associate director of Residential Life. "I am sure that a lot of people will be interested in living there. Especially with the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement treaty, students will want to learn more about Hispanics."

At least one student organization leader, however, thinks the new hall will not promote unity among students.

"This community will not enhance cultural diversity on campus," said Jayanth Shankar, president of India Students Association. "Since the people who are going to be living in the new community will be mostly Hispanics, a non-Hispanic will be looked upon strangely if he goes to live there."

Sells said that the new hall, which will be composed of 40 spaces, will feature discussion groups, field trips, and other activities designed to increase cohesiveness among Hispanics, Chicanos and other ASU students.

"Students don't have to live in this community in order to ment given to student-athletes," she said. "They follow the same procedures as any other students."

ASU can also help athletes by determining what their goals are as well as what the University expects from them academically, she said.

Coor's report recommended that a summer bridge program be established for student-athletes to aid in their transition to University life.

While in agreement with the proposal, Clouse Dolbert said a summer bridge program for the entire student body would be beneficial.

Not all athletes need extra help, she said, but those who do could benefit from the program.

"I'd love to see it available to athletes, as well as all students who need it," she said.

participate in its activities," Sells said, adding that University Honors College Dean Ted Humphrey will be in charge of the new community's administration.

Rund said living in the co-ed hall for an academic year will cost about $1,926. He also said that the name of the community is still unknown.

"We expect forward representation from the ASU community in this Hispanic hall," said Jim Rund, ASU dean of Student Development and Residential Life. "I don't think this hall will enhance segregation on campus because anyone who likes to participate will be able to come and live in the hall. The communities will not be developing for specific groups of people only."

Rund said he does not know how much planning for the hall will cost.

Mary Charette, program coordinator of Campus Communities and the Honors College, said the idea of structuring the new hall came from ASU students and faculty who saw the need to build a community that understands Hispanic culture, customs and traditions.

Charette added that the community will primarily target second-semester freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors.

"However, anyone can be involved," Charette said. "The community will consist of three parts, academics, residential option and activities."

Richard Nagasawa, academic adviser to the Asian Students Association, said he likes the idea of the new hall.

"This will be a good place for student networking," Nagasawa said. "If students live in a community where they are comfortable, they might do well academically."

"In the beginning, this community might have more Hispanic students than non-Hispanics, but who knows what will happen later? People's attitudes might change, and slowly, more non-Hispanics might join in."

Viola Fuentes, culture and arts chairwoman for the MU Activities Board, said that the building of a new Hispanic community is a good idea.

"This issue is long overdue, considering that Hispanics are the largest ethnic minority in Arizona," Fuentes said.

Proposal would add 40 cents to cigarette tax

PHOENIX (AP) — A statewide coalition kicked off an effort today to get an initiative on the November ballot calling for a new 40-cent-a-pack tax on cigarettes.

Revenues raised by the new tax — an estimated $90 million the first year — would support a variety of anti-smoking and health-care programs, according to Arizona for a Health Future, the coalition behind the petition drive.

Of the estimated $90 million, 70 percent would be used by the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System for indigent health care, 23 percent would go to the Department of Health Services for anti-smoking education, 5 percent to DHS for research into smoking-related diseases and 2 percent to the Department of Corrections to offset any loss in revenues from the current tobacco tax used to support prison construction.

Legislative panel endorses gun-free zones

PHOENIX (AP) — A House subcommittee has endorsed changes that would establish gun-free zones around schools and require schools to report all weapons violations to police.

The Judiciary subcommittee on firearms also agreed Monday to recommend a harsher penalty for illegally selling guns to minors and changes that will make it easier for police to immediately seize a gun from a juvenile.

Some panel members have advocated even stricter requirements, including an outright handgun ban for minors.

Swan killed at Scottsdale City Hall

SCOTTSDALE (AP) — One of the two swans that swim in a pond at the city hall complex has been slashed to death, police said.

Swans named Winnie and Pooh have graced the area for 20 years, but now city officials may not be able to ensure the safety of the birds.

"It may be an end of an era," said Mike Akins, a sprinkler technician who fed the swans daily.

"It's a heartbreaker, cruelty beyond belief," said Jacquie Murray, a city volunteer greeter.

The bloody remains of Pooh, a male mute swan, were found by a parks worker Saturday morning. A broken butcher knife also was found in nearby bushes.

President Clinton holds up a pamphlet titled "The Human Impact of Health Reform," while addressing the American Hospital Association in Washington Tuesday. The president appealed to the association to support his health-care reform effort, saying it would relieve legal paperwork and other "unconscionable burdens" to provide care.

Clinton: No more tinkering

President insistent on guaranteed health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton cautioned against mere tinkering with America's health-care system Tuesday and insisted he would settle for nothing less than guaranteed insurance for all. His chief Republican critic held out new hope for compromise.

After back-and-forth appearances by Clinton and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole before the nation's governors and the American Hospital Association, the president said he came away encouraged about prospects for reform.

"It's better for the American people if we work together and tone our rhetoric down," Clinton later told reporters.

Dole, speaking to the National Governors Association just before Clinton, told the governors they "may have laid out a framework for the rest of us to rally around and talk about."

He was referring to the governors' newly minted "call to action" on health care. It stops short of some of Clinton's goals, but includes a GOP concession that employers be required to make coverage available to workers.

Dole seemed intent on keeping Republicans involved in the debate, telling his party, "We're going to be up in the bleachers when the parade goes by unless we get our people together," the Kansan said.

As Congress continues hearings on health care, he added, "we may be able to resolve some of these issues that look impossible now because we have just gotten started."

Dole repeated Republican opposition to Clinton's proposal that employers be required to pay at least 80 percent of their workers' health-care premiums. Clinton countered, "I still believe in the requirement for employers to cover their employees."

The president, in two speeches that nearly exhausted his voice, affirmed his State of the Union declaration that universal coverage must be a part of any health-care plan.

"We have to do it now," he told the hospital executives. "And what we have to do includes providing guaranteed private insurance to every single American."

Colleges simplify admissions process

NATICK, Mass. (AP) — David Provost applied to and was accepted by Bard College in less time than it takes to play a double-header.

Bard's "immediate decision" program is one of the many ways colleges and universities are streamlining the admissions process in the increasingly competitive world of college recruitment.

Many schools are giving students a decision earlier. Others are accepting applications by computer, or giving instant estimates of financial aid.

"There's been a radical shift in thinking," said Bruce Poch, director of admissions at Pomona College in Claremont, Calif., whose students can apply via computer disk. "There is a sense of students as consumers."

Most private colleges and universities have application deadlines in January, and make their decisions by mid-April. Nearly half of all colleges and universities offer early action programs, which allow students to apply in November and learn by mid-December whether they're admitted, according to the National Association of College Admission Counselors.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tonya Harding's ex-husband pleaded guilty today to taking part in the attack that knocked Nancy Kerrigan out of the U.S. Figure Skating Championships.

Jeff Gillooly struck a plea bargain under which he confessed to a racketeering charge in exchange for his testimony. He implicated Harding in the Jan. 6 clubbing of Kerrigan, Harding's chief American rival.

Prosecutors said they would recommend a two-year sentence and a $100,000 fine for Gillooly, 26. Sentencing was to take place April 1.

His lawyer, Ron Hoebet, told the court that Gillooly participated in a conspiracy "that included Tonya Harding" and the three other men who have already been charged.

Prosecutors said Nancy Kerrigan and her family were informed of the plea bargain and supported the district attorney's efforts.

Gillooly was accused of asking Harding's bodyguard, Shawn Eckardt, to send alleged hitman Shane Stant and alleged getaway driver Derrick Smith to Detroit to club Kerrigan on the knee, knocking her out of the national championships.

Harding went on to win the championships, along with a spot on the Olympic team. Kerrigan was named to the other women's figure skating spot.

Hoebet said investigators have gathered evidence including telephone records, bank records and videotapes, to back up Gillooly's story.

"The truth is, Tonya was in on it from the beginning," Hoebet told The Associated Press on Monday night. "That's what Jeff has said, and I believe that to be the truth."

In a statement issued today, before Gillooly entered his plea, Harding again denied the accusations and called them evidence of "a continued practice of abusive conduct intended to disrupt Tonya Harding's life and destroy her career." The couple divorced last summer, but then reconciled and were living together at the time of the attack.

A Tucson tea party

As George "Hank" Amos III, regent-designate of Gov. J. Fife Symington III, breezes through the confirmation process at the Arizona Senate, the ASU community is cringing.

And understandably so.

The Arizona Board of Regents, which already has no ASU graduates among its members, is about to welcome two more regents from south of the Gila River.

Amos, a Tucson realty executive, and Sierra Vista developer Judith Gignac were supported enthusiastically by the Senate Education Committee at Monday's confirmation hearings. Gignac passed unanimously, while Sen. Bev Hermon, R-Tempe, lodged the only vote protesting Amos' addition to the ABOR.

Gignac appears to be a suitable regent nominee. She has no apparent allegiances to any of the state's three universities (she doesn't have a college degree) and would bring a unique perspective to the board.

But it's puzzling how Symington — who says he's looking out for the best interests of all three state universities — came to the decision to select Amos.

If Symington were truly searching to comprise a balanced board, he would have had every reason not to appoint Amos:

- Amos is a Tucson native and UofA graduate. Five of the nine current regents are Tucson residents, giving the board an inherent bias. Think Tucsonians are under any pressure from their community to vote down a proposed ASU medical school?

- Amos can't possibly relate to students teetering on the brink of financial reality. He inherited his own company and is a real estate mogul at age 34. Can he truly register an unbiased vote on tuition fees that will affect thousands of students scrambling to make ends meet?

But, alas, the affluent Amos fits Symington's mold. And the governor has consistently proven that he's a bit out of touch when it comes to education.

Amos' confirmation from the Senate seems to be imminent, though, so it appears that ASU and NAU will experience yet another setback in the geographical representation of the ABOR.

Let's hope Amos can see through the red-and-blue wool pulled over his eyes.

State Press, students both suffer while ASASU wallows in luxury

Jimmy Carter was quoted as saying, "Nobody ever said life was fair."

And here I got an example of that for you.

My example comes from a recent discussion when a couple of State Press staffers and I were contemplating our bleak and industrial office surroundings down here in the basement of the Matthews Center — or what we call "The Dungeon."

I visited the ASASU offices Tuesday afternoon when I picked up free movie passes for Thursday night's preview screening of "The Getaway." As I waited in line, I was amazed by the posh environment our student leaders work in at ASU.

Among the many luxuries of the "interior decorated" ASASU offices, located on the third floor of the MU, are partitions for each individual to work in a closed off area, private offices for high-ranking student leaders, relatively new desks for each student to work at, a convenient elevator to travel up and down from the many food establishments in the MU and a glorious view of the water fountains outside of the Business College.

And they even have wooden office doors, which caused former-ASASU adviser Gary Kleemann to circulate a memorandum asking students not to use Scotch tape to place materials on the walls because it "takes some of the varnish with it, damaging the surface and making it unsightly."

Well, we use plenty of Scotch tape at the State Press. We have to tack up as much material as we can to stop us from being blinded by the ugly white walls, a dirt-filled window well and air ducts hanging from the ceiling.

Unlike the ASASU offices, the State Press workplace is a step back in time. The newsroom doesn't have enough desks for half of its staff to work at while others wait in line as deadline approaches each day. Our pathway to get a snack is a narrow concrete stairway leading to a vending machine that eats your money half the time. When it rains, water often leaks into our offices and the rest of the basement causing damage to the floor. And the view we have from the Matthews Center — after walking up a stairway from the basement — are two trash dumpsters located next to Lot 11.

The question I raise is why does an undeserving student government receive better accommodations than a newspaper reaching 10 times the amount of people each day at ASU?

Last April's ASASU elections drew less than 4,000 voters, and that was even an improvement from the prior year's turnout. Every day, the State Press circulates 18,000 newspapers on campus and maintains a readership of more than 40,000.

From those statistics, you can see who has a bigger voice throughout the ASU community.

Also, ASASU receives less than $700,000 in state funds annually to feed its bloated bureaucracy. The State Press receives no University handouts and operates solely on revenue from its advertisers.

And how many times have current and past ASASU presidents made campaign promises they couldn't keep? Current ASASU President Rossie Turman sold us on his last campaign like a used car salesman would a lemon. At the State Press, you get what we promise — straightforward news covering the many aspects of the ASU community.

After the discussion between fellow employees and myself, we came up with a great idea.

Let the students of ASU vote on a referendum to be placed on the next general election ballot in April mandating that the Associated Students of ASU switch offices with the State Press.

If our student leaders are true politicians they would at least listen to what ASU has to say.

And maybe, if ASASU officers ever had to conduct business from the cellar of the Matthews Center, they would actually think about better serving the needs of ASU students because their third-level penthouse would be taken away.

However, that is maybe.

Coor's fiscal plans won't stand tests of time, reality

If ASU ever closes up shop, the administrative staff can always find employment as boxing trainers. Not since the "Rumble in the Jungle" have we seen a fighter do such a convincing job of feigning injury while simultaneously moving in for the knockout blow.

BARRY KELLEY
Columnist

Last Monday was round one of Rope-A-Dope. Playing the University's Ali to the state Legislature's foreman, President Lattie Coor danced around the ring, generously floating butterflies about the financial condition of ASU.

In his much touted address to members of the Academic Senate, Coor recited his "hopeful news" of a salary raise for faculty, as well as a general increase in the University's budget. To the state Legislature, the message was specific: We have suffered when the harvest was scarce; we expect to benefit when the yield is bountiful.

Round two came the following day, this time from the staff of ASU's fiscal planning and analysis department. Intentionally designed to elicit support from wavering legislators, a study was released claiming that 40 percent of exiting faculty members in the last academic year did so for financial reasons.

Disclosure of the report allowed time for Coor to sting like a bee, forewarning the state of the University's imperiled ability to retain qualified personnel. President of the Academic Senate Bill Arnold even chimed in, citing low pay as the primary cause for a 20-year low in morale.

Round three began last Thursday, with ASU Provost

Milton Glick stepping into the ring. Reiterating the well-worn claim of an underpaid faculty, Glick argued that while faculty salaries have increased more than 16 percent in the past five years, salaries have increased more than 29 percent in other states. Therefore, when fellow institutions pay an average of 15 percent more than ASU, the University is put in the precarious position of losing its best faculty members while productivity and quality decline.

While this all sounded foreboding, Coor and his fellow lightweights made three missteps in unleashing their statistical fusillade.

First, the provost office staff, perhaps experts at math, desperately needed a farmer. Apparently, they cannot tell the difference between apples and oranges. Faculty salaries reflect the cost of living in metro Phoenix, not Boston. From 1989 to 1992, the rate of inflation in metro Phoenix increased only 16 percent, while inflation nationally rose 20 percent. If one wishes the pay of a New York University professor, then one should incur the cost of living of a NYU professor.

Second, there is one flaw in the administration's contention that ASU suffers from a high turnover rate because of its failure to offer competitive salaries. Admittedly, 40 percent sounds ominous. However, that figure diminishes substantially when compared to the faculty as a whole. In 1992-93, the 40 faculty members leaving for monetary motivations constituted a whopping 3 percent of the professorial staff! Hardly the rats-abandoning-a-sinking-ship scenario which the administration paints.

Finally, Coor himself made a most egregious error when articulating his hopes for an increase in state funding. Coor has evidently decided that forthcoming monies will be used, not to improve existing programs, but rather to enlarge the size of his fiefdom, proving once again that expenditures will always rise to meet income.

The result of Coor's latest brain storm is the expansion of cultural and ethnic studies departments to include non-conventional criterion, such as an individual's sexual behavior or choice of partner. While this may inoculate ASU from accusations of cultural insensitivity, how will existing faculty members feel when there is less money to go around for cost of living adjustments? ASU, like a sow with more piglets than nipples, will have a few going hungry.

Coor has evidently succumbed to the fallacy of extrapolation: ASU excels in Scholastic Field A, hence the University will excel in Scholastic Field X. If there is a field of study that has not been explored, the University should design a major. If there is cultural group under-represented on campus, we should have a department.

If Microsoft decided to build cars in addition to writing software, existing products and services invariably would suffer. So it will go at ASU.

The Legislature may indeed be generous in granting a salary raise. But what next year?

A new legislature may not be so unsparing. What will the University do when Coor has more children to feed but the pie is the same size? Evidently, he has again forgotten basic math, believing that somehow he can feed his brood by simply cutting the budgetary pie into more slices, hoping no one realizes the pieces are getting smaller.

Like an alcoholic extolling the virtues of sobriety on the way to the local pub, Lattie Coor is preparing to take ASU on another bender. While taxpayers will get to pick up the tab, faculty and students will eventually get stuck with the hang-over.

Barry Kelley is a graduate student in history.

Bhattacharya's logic clouds realities of gay, lesbian rights

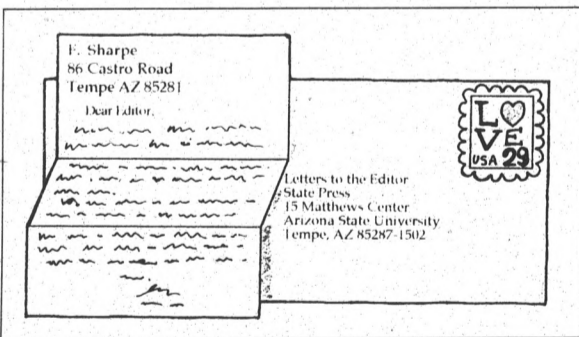

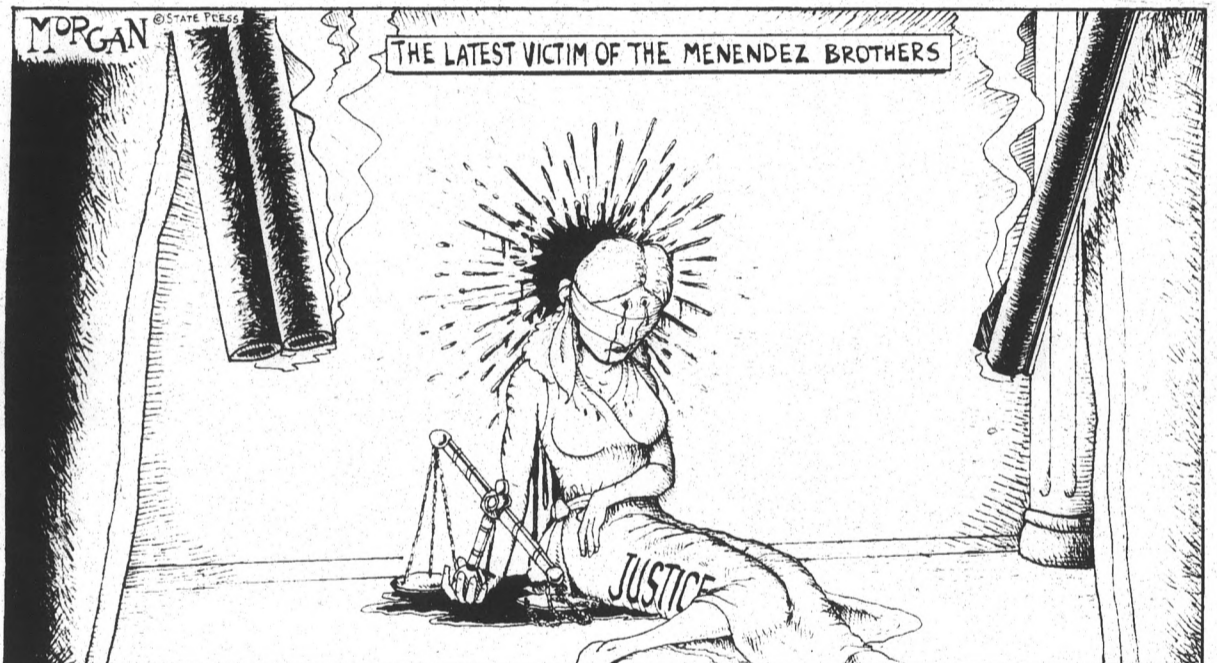

I am writing in response to Anirban Bhattacharya's recent continuation (Feb. 2) of trying to use logic to explain how gays and lesbians should be thought of.

First of all, Bhattacharya, behavior is besides the point. I can teach a cat to use the toilet instead of a cat box; and one can teach a person certain types of behaviors as well; you can teach a person to speak, to fight, to love, just remember Pavlov's experiments with dogs — you can train an animal to do almost anything. I don't doubt the fact that gays can be taught to behave straight. I just want people to realize that teaching such behavior forces a gay person to act unnaturally. I'll admit what you have to say about behaviors has merit; it is what you say about gays in the military and how easily you can tell that someone is gay, that I really have qualms about.

Let me take you back in time for a moment. We see the Spartans, who are considered by some to have been the fiercest and toughest fighters of the ancient world. Their army was made up of pairs of homosexual lovers; they fought together, defended each other, sang and prayed together and they believed that they were better warriors for loving each other. Hmm, and all-gay army. Looks like gays of the past didn't have any problems dying for something they believed in.

Now, back to the present — being the son of a colonel of the Marine Corps, and having dated a gay marine for quite some time, I can assure you that gays in all the armed forces (or myself for that matter) have no hesitations, none whatsoever, of fighting, dying or becoming a POW for this country, whose founding fathers designed a government based on the strengths of the different people it represents. You shouldn't have to worry yourself over what would happen to a gay soldier in combat. He has, after all, been trained for just such an occurrence. (Sounds like behavior training at work to me.)

As for being able to pick out a gay, boy, have your senses left you on that one. I'm gay, and I have the damndest time trying to figure out who else is gay. Now I'll admit that with some gays, you can tell by the dresses or the leather and chains that they might be wearing that they are, in fact, gay. But this is a minority. Gays come in all different sorts. In fact, some of my friends still don't believe that I could be gay. Now, if I and many of my friends who happen to be gay have trouble figuring out who's gay, what makes you think that it'll be such a walk in the park for you?

There are only two ways that I know of how to figure out who is gay. The first is the fact that a gay males' hypothalamus is a little bit smaller than those of straight males. Now I don't know about you, Bhattacharya, but I have a little trouble trying to see someone's hypothalamus.

The other way is just to ask.

Regent appointees unlikely to empathize with students

In response to an article in today's issue by Shawn Boyd, "ASU supporters to fight Symington's regent appointees," it seems that George "Hank" Amos III and Judith Gignac were appointed.

Amos says that his two greatest assets are his business skills and his identification with students. He claims that he "inherited a company and turned it around."

This may sound like a dumb question, but how is a student who is treading water to make ends meet going to identify with someone who inherited a company? I wonder if any nepotism was behind his appointment.

Gignac says that she has no agenda. She claims that she is a fiscal conservative and socially compassionate.

A lack of an agenda can be a dangerous thing. Does this mean that she will never set priorities or make decisions? The U.S. Congress is fiscally conservative and socially compassionate. That is why the taxes are never enough to balance the budget.

This Week's Question:
"Do you feel ASU President Lattie Coor should have chosen to retain Athletic Director Charles Harris?"

Senator says ASU student concern for ABOR pick could have swayed his vote

By SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

If ASU students had voiced concerns earlier about geographical inequities on the universities' governing board, a state senator said Tuesday he may have voted against a nominee to the board.

"Had I known about it before, I think I would have been real leery voting for that person," said Sen. Stan Furman, D-Phoenix.

After the testimony of the two nominees, Ross Bell, a representative from Associated Students of ASU, said there are concerns about a large number of southern Arizonans holding positions on the board and that Gov. Fife Symington promised earlier to place an ASU graduate to the board.

No one could be reached for comment on the hearing in Symington's office.

Five out of the nine current regents are Tucson residents, and not one has a degree from ASU.

Furman is a member of the Arizona Senate's Education Committee, which voted Monday to support the nominations of Hank Amos III of Tucson and Judith Gignac of Sierra Vista to the ABOR. He said if ASASU had been more aggressive, he may have voted against Amos.

Bell said he did not make a major push against more southern Arizonans on the board until it was too late.

"I didn't plan on doing anything at the meeting until only a few weeks ago," he said. "When the medical school vote came down, we decided we had to do something."

In January the ABOR voted to delay planning for a medical school at ASU, a decision which Bell said emerged because of regional influences.

"The truth is, on the opposition we weren't sure how we were going to pursue it," he said, adding it was difficult to move forward without the support of ASU administrators and alumni.

Bell said too much pressure could not be exerted to avoid difficulty in the future with the ABOR.

"Opposing it would only put us at the jeopardy of a regent backlash," he said.

ASASU made an attempt to rally student support against the nomination of Amos, the owner of a Tucson realty business, but the support did not materialize in student testimony demanding more ASU representation on the board.

Furman said students should have pressed him on the issue.

"The students never came to me with the information I heard in committee," he said.

However, Furman said he would have trouble voting against a nominee to protest the majority of seats being held by Tucson residents.

"It's an attack on the individual I don't want to do," he said. "The ASU concerns about the problem are justified."

But others said they expected the two nominees' swift confirmation.

Sen. Bev Hermon, R-Tempe, chairwoman of the Senate Education Committee, registered the only vote against Amos, but she said she did not expect others on the committee to follow her.

"I was prepared to vote 'no' myself, but I did not try to bring anyone with me," she said. "It's not my job to lobby."

Sen. John Huppenthal, R-Chandler, voted for Amos' confirmation, but said he would have felt better if ASU had a graduate on the board.

"I want to see ASU treated well," he said. "My preference would have been an ASU graduate, but I still feel good about the two candidates."

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A female employee sustained an injury on the corner of College Avenue and University Drive. She was treated by members of the Tempe Fire Department and transported to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.
- A fire alarm was activated at Palo Verde East by burned food. The responding officer found the area secure and the alarm was reset.
- The Phoenix Police Department recovered a 1985 Buick that had been reported stolen by the ASU police department. The vehicle was recovered at an unknown location and was driveable. The vehicle's owner was notified. Recovery was estimated at $3,500.
- A male not affiliated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for driving on a suspended license at Apache Boulevard and McAllister Avenue.
- A male employee reported that he lost 37 keys to ASU's MU.
- Burned food activated a fire alarm at the C-wing of Cholla Apartments. The responding officer found the area secure and reset the alarm.
- A female student reported that she lost three keys that belong to ASU at Tempe High School. The loss is estimated at $30.
- A fictitious license plate was taken off a black 1986 Dodge belonging to a male ASU student and impounded.
- A female student reported that unknown persons took her bicycle from the bicycle racks at Hayden Library, where it was secured with a cable and lock.
- A female ASU student reported that a gray four-door vehicle with five male occupants ran into her vehicle while it was parked in Lot 35. Estimated damage is $400.
- A male ASU student reported that on Monday his bicycle was stolen from 410 Adelphi Drive where it was secured to itself with a U-lock.
- A female ASU employee reported that she was threatened by another ASU employee.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A 27-year-old woman reported that her 5-year-old daughter witnessed the family's roommate feeding a small kitten to the roommate's dog, a wolf hybrid. Police are investigating.

- A 23-year-old Tempe man was arrested Sunday for aggravated assault, resisting arrest and giving false information to a law enforcement officer. The man punched an officer in the chest as the officer attempted to arrest him for an outstanding warrant.
- An unknown man got out of his vehicle and struck a 36-year-old man in the left leg with a tire iron Friday. The incident occurred in front of Fry's grocery store, 1835 E. Guadalupe Road. The man was apparently upset because the victim honked his horn at him while driving northbound on McClintock Drive.
- A 16-year-old girl was arrested Sunday for disorderly conduct and delaying and obstructing law enforcement after she refused to comply with police officers who asked her to leave Jack in the Box restaurant. The girl was involved in a verbal altercation with another girl in the parking lot. When an officer attempted to take her arm to escort her out of the parking lot, she slapped his arm away and called him a profane name.
- A 17-year-old Mesa youth was arrested for misconduct involving weapons after an officer noticed a pair of nunchucks in the back seat of his car. The youth had been stopped for a noise violation when the officer noticed the weapon. The youth was also found to be in possession of a buck knife, brass knuckles and a hatchet.
- A 26-year-old pregnant Tempe woman was assaulted by an unknown man. The man punched her at least three times on the left side of the face and kicked her in the stomach. She described her assailant as an Hispanic male, 20-25 years old, heavy build with black hair. Her injuries were not serious.
- A 23-year-old Phoenix man was arrested for disorderly conduct and assault after he punched his girlfriend in the face. She suffered a cut lip and a sore jaw. The couple recently broke up after living together for the last seven months.
- A 17-year-old Tempe girl was arrested after she pepper maced two high school students at 900 E. Curry Road during a verbal altercation.

ASU official: Slow job market not affecting campus recruiting

By JONI TAIT
STATE PRESS

Even though recent economic inactivity has made job hunting difficult, it has yet to affect companies' desire to recruit ASU students, according to Dean Barnes, assistant director of Career Services.

"Most companies are cutting back on their on-campus activities," he said. "However, we're still having an increase in the number of companies that are coming on to our campus for career fairs."

ASU Career Services hosts two major career fairs each year. The two-day fair in the fall — called Career Fiesta — is geared primarily toward students seeking full-time job opportunities, while today's fair — called Career Connection, is geared toward internships and co-ops.

"There still will be full-time opportunities available as well," Barnes said.

At last year's Career Connection, 44 companies participated in the one-day event, an 80 percent increase compared to 1992.

Organizers are predicting twice the number of company representatives at today's fifth annual Career Connection Internship/Co-op Fair than were present last year.

Barnes said about half of the companies involved in the event have used the department's offices in the past for interviewing students on campus, accessing the database system to find job-seeking students and using the 24-hour job line to list employment opportunities.

"They have a real strong affinity for ASU students and do what they can to hire them," he said.

Groups represented include large and small companies from across the nation from technological, financial, health, retail and travel industries to government and military agencies and graduate schools.

"In addition to that, we also for the first time made a concerted effort to contact some non-profit organizations, which normally don't come on campus," Barnes said.

"We try to get as many companies across the different colleges as we can."

Representatives will be meeting with students in the Arizona Room in the MU from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to provide them with information about the company, and to solicit resumes from them for prospective interviews and openings in the near future.

"It gives students a very specialized opportunity to meet with employers one-on-one," Barnes said.

He encourages students from all academic years to attend the career fair whether or not they have a resume ready.

"It's very important to start meeting employers as soon as possible because the more contact students have with them, the more it increases their chances of employment when they get out."

He said Career Services is hoping to attract more than 1,200 students to the fair, matching last year's attendance record.

MAKE THE MOST OF CHANGE

Customers change. Markets change. And only one thing remains the same: the need to evolve and grow so you can make the most of these opportunities.

The ability to respond positively to change has made Applied Materials the world's leading producer of semiconductor fabrication systems. Some of these changes are natural and gradual. Others require a high tolerance for ambiguity.

Which brings us to you; the expert on change. You're in the midst of the most dramatic transition you'll ever make in your life. And if you find this experience exciting, you'll be a great fit with Applied Materials.

You'll work with the world's most advanced chipmaking systems. And we'll give you all the tools to do things right, in an environment rich with freedom and responsibility. Of course, we have high expectations for performance, but you're used to that by now.

That's the way semiconductors are made here at Applied Materials.

And the way careers are made begins at our on-campus interview sessions. So make plans to join us.

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

Leonard felt his skin suddenly crawl. Coming through the door were a couple of real sketchy characters.

PEOPLE

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A pawnshop owner who likes Reba McEntire's singing but not her gun exchange program is offering his customers a chance to trade in Reba instead.

Bring a McEntire compact disc, cassette or concert ticket to Tulsa Gun and Pawn, and owner Buck Dickinson will give you a 10 percent discount on firearms.

The deal is his response to McEntire's offer to give 100 tickets to her Feb. 19 show to people who turn in their guns.

"She hasn't thought the problem through," Dickinson said Monday. "We don't have a gun problem. We have a criminal problem."

So far, McEntire's exchange program has brought in 49 guns, but only one person has taken advantage of Dickinson's offer, which began Friday. Another person wanted to trade his Twisted Sister albums, but Dickinson turned him down.

Dickinson said he will throw away the McEntire merchandise he receives.

"We wouldn't let this stuff get back out on the streets," he said.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Pearl Jam singer Eddie Vedder doesn't think security guards belong in a mosh pit. Police think Vedder belongs in court.

Vedder, who chased security guards from the slam-dance area during a Nov. 27 concert at the University of Colorado, has been issued a summons alleging he obstructed government operations.

The charge is punishable by up to six months in jail and $750 in fines.

Police say security guards were trying to remove a "disruptive individual" from the pit when Vedder stopped singing and told the guards to get out.

The incident prompted the cancellation of the last of the band's three sold-out shows at the university.

Pearl Jam is a Seattle-based alternative rock band whose hits include "Alive" and "Jeremy."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The way Al Lewis sees it, Officer Leo Schnauser is just like an old flame.

Lewis reprised his role as Schnauser in the newly released film version of the TV series, "Car 54, Where Are You?"

"It's like meeting your first love all over again," the 83-year-old actor said in Tuesday's editions of the Daily News of Los Angeles. "It still brings back certain warm feelings."

Lewis, who also is well-known for his role as Grandpa in the TV series "The Munsters," took time away from running his New York comedy club to make the film.

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — You can't have Billy Ray Cyrus' achy breaky heart, but his wardrobe is up for grabs.

Cyrus donated a T-shirt, black leather hat, tennis shoes and blue jeans to a benefit auction for a Memphis, Tenn.-based children's hospital. Cyrus wore the outfit during a December concert in Huntington, W.Va. The T-shirt and tennis shoes are autographed.

Cyrus also donated a pair of leather boots that he bought from a fan at the concert for $300. Cyrus autographed the boots, too.

The Feb. 8 auction, sponsored by Catlettsburg radio station WTCR-FM, also will feature merchandise from country music artists Ricky Van Shelton, Clint Black and Randy Travis.

Majerle won't participate in three-pointer contest

Dell Curry of the Charlotte Hornets will replace Dan Majerle of the Phoenix Suns in the NBA's long-distance shoot-out on Feb. 12, the league said Tuesday.

Curry, the Hornets' career leader in three-point shooting with 347 baskets, joins a field of eight in the contest. It is part of the skills competition scheduled the day before the NBA All-Star game at the Target Center at Minneapolis.

Curry is fifth in the league this season with a percentage of .410 (75 for 183).

Majerle said before the Suns' game Tuesday night against the Los Angeles Clippers that he agreed to participate in the shoot-out on speculation that he would make the Western Conference roster.

"I had told them when they asked me if I wanted to shoot in this that I would be glad to if I got picked for the All-Star team and I was down there, but if I'm not going to play in the All-Star Game, I'd rather stay here and relax and just take some time off," Majerle said.

Suns re-sign guard Perry

The Phoenix Suns on Tuesday signed guard Elliott Perry to a second 10-day contract.

Perry, who signed his initial contract Jan. 22, has started five games for the Suns, averaging 6.2 points, 6.4 assists and 2.2 rebounds in 23.6 minutes.

He joined the Suns from Grand Rapids of the Continental Basketball Association, where he was averaging 13.8 points and 6.4 assists.

SMALL BODY, GIANT HEART

Sun Devil gymnast Tina Brinkman's enthusiasm and energy have helped her to become ASU's top gymnast. Brinkman has taken the all-around title in all three of the Sun Devils meets, including the team's victory over No. 1 Alabama.

Tina Brinkman makes presence felt at ASU

BY JEREMY STEIN
STATE PRESS

She stands at a petite 5-foot-2, but All-America gymnast Tina Brinkman has the energy and heart of a giant. After spending nearly two hours talking to this upbeat 20-year-old junior, it is not hard to understand why Brinkman has had such great success.

Brinkman, who set an ASU record last season when she scored a 39.25 in the all-around competition, is picking up this year right where she left off. She has finished first in eight of the twelve events she has competed in this season, on her way to capturing the all-around title in each of the Sun Devils' three meets.

Brinkman admitted that the incredible success she has had this season has even surprised her.

"I am not trying to plan any success. I am not trying to plan to win or plan to score. I have just planned to do the best I can and to hit my routines."

Brinkman's success has come as no shock to ASU gymnastics coach John Spini. Spini first met Brinkman almost four years ago, when he coached her at a summer gymnastics camp in Wisconsin. Spini knew right then that had what it takes to compete.

"Tina is a very personable, charismatic, outgoing personality that is enjoyable to be around in any situation," he said. "She loves an audience, and she performs and competes to the level of pressure."

While her success may have come as a surprise to her, Brinkman, who is a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, attributes a lot of what she accomplished to her faith in God.

"I don't do it for anybody else, other than my Lord and Savior," she said. "That is a whole new attitude I have taken this year."

Besides bringing "many big scores," Brinkman also brings excitement and leadership to the Sun Devils, according to both her coach and teammates.

"She brings the excitement of loving to compete," Spini said. "She likes to get out on the floor. ...She has a lot of self-confidence,

Tennis season opens against Utah, high hopes

Peter Jeschke of ASU's men's tennis practices his swing Tuesday in preparation for today's season-opening match against Utah. Play begins at 10 a.m. at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

Strong showing at Pac-10 Indoor, winning record against Utes builds team confidence

BY DAWN WAGNER
STATE PRESS

After a strong showing at the recent Pac-10 Indoor Tournament, including Sargsian's trip to the semi-finals, the No.29 Sun Devils open their season against Utah today at 10 a.m. at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

The Sun Devils own a 12-10 edge in the all-time series against the Utes. This season's play starts a new format in men's tennis as this tournament will begin with the doubles matches followed by the singles. According to the Sun Devils, this new format will take some getting used to.

"This is brand new for us," assistant coach Ford Oliver said. "Because of the preparation with playing doubles first, this is like running a sprint instead of a marathon."

Although this may be the case, the Sun Devils are optimistic about the competition.

"We're looking for it to be a tough match, but we expect to win," said Oliver. "But they've beaten us before. They're a good team and they are certainly not to be taken lightly."

Junior Eric Brunner agrees, saying, "I hope were going to win. I think we can win. We just want to get off to a good start."

As for this season, hopes are just as high.

"Each kid is focusing on something a little different. More on the individual," Oliver said. "This is the best team we've had in a couple of years and we certainly expect to finish higher than 29th in the nation."

On Thursday, Sargsian, the seventh-ranked singles player in the nation, will travel to Dallas to compete in the Rolex National Intercollegiate Indoor Championships. He will be joined by coach Lou Belken.

Sargsian is currently the top-ranked player for ASU and is seeded fifth in the singles bracket of the tournament, which is the third leg of the Intercollegiate Collegiate Grand Slam.

Sargsian reached the finals of the first leg, but was defeated for the championship by No.1 Laurent Orsini of Mississippi.

and that confidence I think helps some of the other kids when their competing. She brings leadership by example."

"She gives a lot of team support," said freshman gymnast Bridget Sandman, who is also Brinkman's roommate. "She helps us, especially the underclassmen, to keep our nerves and shows us what to do. ...She is a good leader."

Brinkman's success has not been confined to strictly gymnastics. Brinkman, an elementary education major, was one of only two gymnasts to receive a 4.0 grade point average for this past semester.

Brinkman plans on putting her enthusiasm and energy into helping out young children after she is done with college gymnastics.

"I want to get involved in the school system. ...I know I don't want to dilly-dally around with something just simple or basic. I would really like to jump into teaching right away."

According to Spini, Brinkman's personality will make her successful at whatever she does after college.

"I think one of these days Tina is going to be an actress or a singer. ... I think Tina will be very successful in whatever she undertakes."

Brinkman will lead the Sun Devils women's gymnastics team when they face the University of Denver at 7:30 p.m. on Friday at the University Activity Center.

YOUR INDIVIDUAL HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Feb 2, 1994
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A private talk relates to a financial concern. You'll need tact in dealing with an uptight and agitated friend. You're tempted to major extravagance in spending.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Guard against overly expansive moves in business. You may be taking on more than you can handle. Couples will enjoy getting together with dear friends.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Morning hours bring valuable progress on the job. However, a difficulty could arise later with a coworker. You also may be feeling a bit lazy.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Entertainment that gives you food for thought is your best bet for fun. However, you may be inclined to go way overboard in celebrating tonight. Accent moderation.
LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You're cool, level-headed and practical as the day begins. However, you could be upset later by a family matter. Do your best to avoid domestic quarrels.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You and a partner will see eye-to-eye about mutual concerns today. However, a situation at work could aggravate you. Impatience could undermine efficiency.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You'll be pleased with how smoothly things go at work today. Your financial prospects should improve. However, it's not a good time for gambling.
