Law school refutes professor's claim

Deceased faculty member believed school discouraged hiring minorities

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

The dean of the ASU College of Law and several of its minority professors are denying a well-respected African American professor's charges — made before he died — that the institution has avoided hiring minorities.

Professor John Morris charged that the College of Law made an agreement to reverse its policy of not hiring minorities if he agreed to not go public with his knowledge of the faculty's opposition to affirmative action policies.

Morris, who died on Dec. 24, made these charges in a letter written Dec. 18 to the president of the Hayzel B. Daniels Bar Association. His letter states that a majority of faculty members are opposed to affirmative recruitment because they dislike quotas or because they feel minorities "do not have the intellectual 'horsepower' to perform up to the standards that they believe they exemplify."

Instead of hiring minorities, the college hired white women, the letter reads.

"I resigned Oct. 31, 1992, primarily because of the racist attitudes at the law school," Morris wrote.

Morris will be honored tonight by the Hayzel B. Daniels Bar Association. Morris' daughter, Robin Morris Collin, will attend and will read her father's letter to the association. Robin, who is a professor of law at the University of Oregon, said she talked often with her father about the lack of diversity in law education.

"The problem is, there is an internal culture at the law school which cannot see diversity as consistent with quality," Robin said. "It's that simple. They can't see that diversity means quality across a broader spectrum. They just see diversity as lack of quality — that's the problem."

Richard Morgan, dean of ASU's College of Law, said Morris told him that he left because of an early retirement option, not because of racial tension.

"John had certainly been concerned about the fact that there were not more minority faculty at the law school, but he did not indicate to me, at the time of his resignation, that he thought it was a racist law school."

Risky business goes awry

Tempe man, 3 ASU students arrested in gambling sting

BY PAUL MATTHEWS
AND SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

Three ASU students and a Tempe man were arrested Wednesday night on racketeering charges, the result of a three-month investigation conducted jointly by the Tempe Police Department, ASU Department of Public Safety and Arizona Department of Safety.

Arrested in the sting were ASU juniors Mitchell Friedman, 22, Keith Rudolph, 20, ASU senior Karry Moore, 22, and Tempe resident Mark Rubin, 30.

All four have been charged with operating an illegal enterprise through racketeering. The charge is a class 2 felony and carries a four- to 10-year prison sentence.

The charges stem from a reported $80,000-per-month gambling operation that Tempe police spokesman Tom Ryff said was run primarily from Rubin's apartment.

"That's where the computers were set up, where the incoming calls were being accepted," Ryff said. "Investigation revealed that he was the person organizing and running the mainframe of the organization out of his apartment."

Police reports indicate that the operation was supported by bets placed on college and professional sporting events.

Each of the suspects was arrested at his home, including

REPEATED DEPARTURES

Hullah's run-ins with players were common at Dartmouth

BY TODD KELLY
STATE PRESS

This year's mini-exodus of players from the ASU women's basketball team is apparently nothing new to first-year coach Jacqueline Hullah.

Hullah, whose team has seen four scholarship players depart since she took over the Sun Devil program last July, had a history of disagreements with players while coaching at Dartmouth, according to an article published last spring in the West Lebanon, N.H. Valley News.

The article, dated March 9, reported that of the 28 freshmen Hullah had on her Dartmouth rosters from 1984 through 1989, only 11 played four years.

The article quotes some of Hullah's former players as saying she was excessively negative and lacked compassion. Many said there was a communication gap between the coaching staff and players.

Jen Carter, a player who left the team early in her junior season, said in the article: "I've never been able to figure her out. She's not human."

This season, Hullah has seen team captain Crystal Cobb, star guard Stacey Johnson and freshmen Keisha McFadgion and Rameeka Lowe leave the team. The Sun Devils are 2-14 overall and have yet to win a Pac-10 game.

Through an athletic department spokesperson, Hullah declined any comment regarding the players who left her teams while she was at Dartmouth.

However, ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris said that departures of players upon the arrival of new coaches are not unusual.

"When Bruce Snyder came (to ASU) as head football coach two years ago, one of the first people who quit was the starting quarterback (Bret Powers)," Harris said. "These things do happen."

"In the long run, I'm confident in Coach Hullah, and quite frankly I'm very pleased with the core of young women who have elected to stay with the program. I think they recognize that while it will be a long haul, they are all headed in the right direction."

Amy Fowler, who was recruited by Hullah to come to Dartmouth in 1990, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that Hullah lacked chemistry with the team.

"There were communication problems with the team and Jackie," said Fowler, who left the team after her sophomore season. "She never went past the 'player' mentality with anyone; she didn't get to know you as a person. She was difficult to relate with."

In the Valley News article, two players said that Hullah never called to check on them when they were recovering from injuries.

Hullah admitted in the article that there were times when she was not there for her players, but questioned how much of that is her responsibility.

"There are some kids who need more emotional support, and there have been some cases where I haven't been able to provide that emotional support," the article quotes Hullah as saying. "It is the role of the trainer to monitor an athlete's

Friedman, who was arrested at the Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity house, where he lives. Friedman is a member of the fraternity, but Ryff said the fraternity is not involved in the gambling operation.

"The fraternity was not involved, just members of the fraternity," Ryff said. "It is important to note that there is no indication that the fraternity itself is behind the gaming operation."

ASU DPS spokesman Lt. Bennett Rowe acknowledged his department's participation in the investigation, but he declined further comment.

Each of the four men was released on his own recognizance, Ryff said.

Officers seized computer equipment, a fax machine, telephone, voice recorders and a caller ID unit from Rubin's apartment, Ryff said. In addition, police seized approximately $10,000 in cash from Karry Moore's residence at 505 W. Baseline Road, and an additional $10,000 was seized from a bank account. Ryff was uncertain who the bank account belonged to.

Police seized the vehicles of all four men, including a 1981 white Corvette, 1983 Honda Accord, 1994 Saturn and a 1990 GMC pick-up truck belonging to Rubin, Friedman, Rudolph and Moore, respectively.

None of the suspects could be reached for comment.

The investigation began when a confidential source tipped the Tempe police to the gambling operation, Ryff said. Approximately 28 police officers were involved in the investigation.

Ryff said that the investigation has not yet been completed and he was not sure how many people on campus were involved. However, he acknowledged that some of the money wagered came from out-of-state sources. Those funds were transferred electronically.

Ryff also acknowledged that "there was a great deal of activity generated by ASU students." He said the students have not yet been identified, but computer files confiscated in the sting contain meticulous records as to names of people involved, including addresses, telephone numbers and amounts wagered.

Ryff said the attorney general's office will make the final determination as to whether people who placed bets will be charged in the incident. At this point, however, he said he does not expect them to be charged.

"It is still being reviewed," Ryff said.

In addition to the criminal charges, Friedman, Rudolph and Moore could face punishment from ASU.

"Illegal behavior that violates state and federal law can be covered under the code of conduct depending on the specific charge," said Art Carter, ASU dean of student life.

Morgan praised Morris as one of the college's founding members who made important contributions in his 25 years at ASU. Morris chaired the faculty appointments committee several times, and even recruited Morgan in 1979.

Morgan said increasing diversity is important to the college. The law school currently has one Hispanic professor and one Argentinean professor and hired a Native American professor about one week ago, Morgan said. The ASU law school employs about 30 professors, but none are black.

The school has employed one black associate professor and one black person who was promoted to full professor, Morgan said. They served from 1980-84 and 1987-91, Morgan said.

ASU's affirmative action office would not say if it received a complaint from Morris, because all such communications are confidential. A National Association for the Advancement of Colored People spokesperson said Morris never complained about the College of Law to the local chapter.

ASU law professors who said they were good friends with Morris disagree with his negative view of affirmative action policies.

Fernando Teson, a Latino law professor at ASU for 10 years, said Morris was "wrong" on the issue of affirmative action at ASU.

"A couple of years ago he became ill and he withdrew from the issues of the faculty and increasingly he became obsessed with this question," Teson said.

Charles Calleros, a Hispanic who has worked at ASU 13 years, said he shared Morris' interest in increasing diversity, but does not feel that the college is racist.

"I think many or all of us here are dissatisfied with the level of diversity in the faculty and are constantly trying to improve it," he said.

Former border agent acquitted in shooting case

PHOENIX (AP) — A former Border Patrol agent who killed an unarmed Mexican with two rifle shots to the back was acquitted Thursday of violating the man's civil rights.

Michael Elmer said he shot Dario Miranda Valenzuela in self-defense during a 1992 drug stakeout near Nogales, Mexico, as Miranda ran toward him at sunset, then changed directions and headed for the border.

Elmer said he thought a canteen on Miranda's hip was a gun holster, but prosecutors said Elmer dragged the body 50 feet and hid it, then discussed with a fellow agent how to cover up the shooting.

A U.S. District Court jury acquitted Elmer of violating the civil rights of Miranda, 26, and of an unidentified man Elmer shot at several minutes later on June 12, 1992.

Mental health workers: no sex with patients

PHOENIX (AP) — Having sex with a patient could result in prison sentences for psychologists, psychiatrists and other mental health practitioners under a bill the House Judiciary Committee approved Thursday.

The bill passed 11-0 after the committee rejected an amendment proposed by Rep. Phil Hubbard, D-Tucson, that would have applied the bill's provisions to all physicians.

Under the bill, violation could result in a prison sentence of 1 1/2 years and a fine of up to $150,000. Such sexual conduct already is considered unethical for psychologists and psychiatrists and can result in loss of one's license, but not all practitioners are covered.

The bill doesn't prohibit sexual conduct with a former patient no longer under the practitioner's care.

Escaped prisoners caught

SAFFORD (AP) — Three prisoners who escaped from the Safford state prison's minimum-security unit were captured Thursday by searchers who spotted their campfire in the desert, prison officials said.

Search teams spotted the fire about 20 miles south of the prison, said Department of Corrections spokesman Michael Arra, who described the men as cold and tired.

Arra identified the escapes as Oscar Martinez-Torres, 32, serving a five-year term for a Maricopa County burglary conviction; Claudio Martinez-Mendez, 35, serving 10 years for Maricopa County convictions for production, sale and use of marijuana; Martin Martinez, 26, serving a four-year term out of Cochise County for burglary.

Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan holds up a book entitled, "The secret Relationship between Blacks and Jews" in a news conference Thursday. Farrakhan dismissed top aide Khalid Abdul Muhammed for making anti-semitic remarks.

Farrakhan dismisses top aide

Condemns anti-Semitic talk but criticizes Jewish group

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan today dismissed a top aide for making anti-Semitic remarks that were "repugnant" and "mean-spirited." But he coupled the rebuke with attacks on a Jewish organization and on Vice President Al Gore.

Farrakhan dissociated himself from the words of his national spokesman, Khalid Abdul Muhammad, who had referred to Jews in a speech last November as "bloodsuckers."

"In that instance, he was not representing us. He was representing himself," Farrakhan said at a news conference.

The Muslim minister said, "I found the speech ... repugnant, mean-spirited ... and spoken in mockery of individuals and people ... against the spirit of Islam."

"While I stand by the truths that he spoke, I must condemn in the strongest terms the manner in which those truths were represented," he said.

Farrakhan left open the possibility that Muhammad could be reinstated and said he remains a member of the Nation of Islam.

The outspoken Muslim leader said he remains convinced that the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is prejudiced against blacks and is trying to destroy him and the Nation of Islam.

Farrakhan called the Jewish organization "self-centered, bigoted and malicious."

"The obsession of the ADL with my destruction has blinded them to the terrible need in the black community for a unified, programmatic approach to solving our problems," he said. The ADL ran a full-page ad in the New York Times condemning Farrakhan.

Farrakhan also asserted that there was

Clinton lifts Vietnam embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moving to ease an emotional legacy from a divisive war, President Clinton on Thursday lifted the 19-year U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam.

Clinton said he was taking the step convinced that it will further efforts to get a full accounting of the Americans missing in Vietnam — and not based on expanding U.S. business opportunities there.

"We would lose leverage if there were no forward movement," Clinton said. He said in recent months there had been much progress in accounting for 2,238 American MIAs and POWs in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Even so, Vietnam is one of Asia's fastest-growing markets and nearly all other Western countries that had once joined in the embargo have re-established commercial ties with the communist nation.

American businesses have pressed for an end to the embargo.

Clinton insisted that removing the trade embargo was not the same as restoring full diplomatic relations with Vietnam.

"I want to be clear. These actions do not constitute a normalization of our relationship. We must have more progress, more cooperation, and more answers," Clinton said.

Clinton also said he would establish a U.S. liaison office, presumably in Hanoi.

Clinton made the announcement after meeting with representatives of the families of soldiers still missing in action. Many veterans groups preferred that he keep the embargo in place to encourage continued Vietnamese cooperation accounting for missing servicemen.

But Clinton said: "I am absolutely convinced it offers the best way to resolve the fate of those who remain missing and about those about whom we are not sure," Clinton said.

The Space Shuttle Discovery began its eight day mission Thursday morning. Its crew consists of five Americans and the first Russian cosmonaut to fly on a U.S. Space Shuttle.

NASA shuttle rises with sun

First Russian joins crew

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery rose with the sun and launched a new space age Thursday, carrying the first Russian into orbit aboard a U.S. shuttle.

The head of Russia's space program praised the prompt, and perfect, liftoff, considered a prelude to a shared space station and maybe, some day, a joint trip to Mars.

NASA's chief was so excited he got goose bumps. "We're going to change the whole way we look at space. We're going to do it together, instead of competing," said NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin.

Discovery blasted off at dawn, piercing a clear sky on its way to a 218-mile orbit. The rising sun gave the huge clouds of vapor left in the shuttle wake a pale orange glow.

Joining the five Americans on board for the eight-day science mission was cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, who wore a Russian flag patch on the shoulder of his orange flight suit.

It's the first U.S.-Russian manned mission since the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking and the first time ever that astronauts and cosmonauts have been launched in the same spaceship.

In a statement from Moscow, Russian President Boris Yeltsin called the launch "a vivid manifestation of ever-growing cooperation and partnership between our countries and peoples."

"We are beginning to understand that we need to combine efforts to solve the complicated problems both on Earth and in space, for the benefit of our peoples and the entire world," Yeltsin said.

The Russians were treated to a rare, trouble-free liftoff; even the weather was perfect.

"It is remarkable that this launch has been on schedule, and everything is well, going all right," Russian space director Yuri Koptev told the shuttle launch team in Russian. "I hope that in our future cooperative projects, everything will be going as well, or right on schedule."

Koptev promised to return the favor early next year with a punctual Soyuz launch of a NASA astronaut to Russia's Mir space station.

Goldin later announced that astronaut will be Dr. Norman Thagard, with Bonnie Dunbar as his backup; they leave for Moscow in two weeks for a year of training. Dunbar's husband, astronaut Ronald Sega, coincidentally is aboard Discovery.

Atlantis is to make the first of up to 10 planned shuttle-Mir dockings in mid-1995, three months after Thagard's arrival at Mir.

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BOO — To the Arizona Senate Education Committee's approval of Hank Amos as a member of the Arizona Board of Regents. Although millionaire Amos is certainly an impressive man, his appointment to the board will not help the Valley of the Sun get the representation it critically needs on the ABOR. A long, drawn-out BOO to Governor Fife Symington for failing to live up to his pledge to nominate an ASU-affiliate to the board.

BRAVO — To NASA and to Sergei Krikalev, the first Russian cosmonaut to travel into space on a U.S. launch. Today's liftoff of the space shuttle Discovery marks the first cooperative manned launch between the two countries since 1975. With luck, this might be the first step in a joint manned space station and eventually, a joint mission to Mars. Next year, the Russians will return the favor by including an American astronaut on a launch to the Mir space station.

BOO — To the three bills pending in the State Legislature which would take the political agenda ax to the ASU Law School. The two agendas of preferring in-state students to out-of-state students, and of banning students pursuing degrees who could not pass the Arizona bar (a thinly veiled attempt to prevent another James Hamm from attending the school) are ridiculous.

One bill targets potential law school students who have plans to use their degrees for purposes other than being attorneys. It is inconceivable that the ASU law school's only purpose should be to crank out lawyers, but apparently the legislature would disagree.

BOO — To the Ku Klux Klan. America's traditional white-sheeted racists (established 1866) have begun a recruiting drive in Prescott. Prescott may be a rural, conservative area in a conservative state, but will anyone be idiotic enough to join a racist pack of goons like the Klan? Hopefully, the American Nazi Party won't be knocking on doors anytime soon.

BOO — To the ASU students and Tempe resident who decided to start up their own gambling hall. Police reported that some $80,000 a month flowed through the coffers of the group, whose clientele apparently included a significant number of ASU students. Tempe hardly needs a racketeering tradition in the style of Al Capone; what comes after the bookie operation? An ASU still? A campus brothel? A Sun Devil hit squad?

BRAVO — To Buddy Ryan, new Phoenix Cardinals coach and general manager. The blunt and cantankerous Ryan will bring a sense of humor, a dry wit and hopefully some victories to Phoenix — and he won't take any guff from Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill.

Justice system struggles to determine when, if criminals are truly 'sorry'

For reasons we will never know, Johnathan Doody murdered nine Buddhist monks on a less-than-August night in 1991. And this week, one man will weigh the evidence against his own conscience, and determine whether Doody deserves to die for his crimes.

Although sentencing is a painstaking and arduous process and, in a case like this, probably more than a little distasteful to those involved, it boils down to one essential question: Is Doody sorry for what he's done? If defense counsel can show that Doody feels an appropriate degree of sorrow for his heinous actions, his sentence could be commuted to a life term. Without a showing of repentance, the judge will probably sentence him to death.

The legal attempts to measure Doody's exact degree of remorse have been nothing short of ridiculous. Prosecutors argue that because his acts were premeditated and without mercy, Doody should be given the death penalty. On the other hand, counsel for the defense insists that Doody's impassive exterior is simply a result of his Asian background, and not a true reflection of his inner turmoil.

Aside from the racism implicit in defense counsel's argument, there are several issues of concern in this debate. What about the fact that Doody was underage when he committed the crime? What about the fact that the state still considers him underage in many ways and for many reasons? What about concepts like therapy, rehabilitation and treatment — not to mention mercy and forgiveness?

Who knows what Doody is thinking or feeling? Does it really matter? In light of the magnitude of Doody's crime, why should our legal system be concerned over a comparatively trivial thing like an apology?

Remember when our moms made us say 'sorry'? Unfortunately for me, the memories are all too clear: "Tell him you're sorry, dear. Sorry! Sorry, sorry, sorry! Ma, Diana didn't say she was sorry!" And the scene went on until, beaten down by my sibling's insistence, I apologized with some degree of real regret.

Just exactly what is it about an apology that means something? Why did my mom think it was important? Why does my legal system think it's important?

The answer, I think, lies in an apology's end result. Regardless of its sincerity, an apology soothes the pain of wounded souls and broken hearts. Its magic is something more than common courtesy — it acknowledges another person's right to exist independently and act exclusively. No matter how grudgingly the apology is given, the wronged person retrieves an essential part of himself — the right to perceive himself as a worthy human being, significant to his peers and of importance to the world.

When our legal system asks Doody for a showing of remorse, it is asking him to understand and acknowledge the enormity of his acts. An apology to the court is an apology to society, and an assurance that law and order still prevail.

Doody's impassive and deferential personality offends the American ideal of liberty and justice for all. The inscrutability of his demeanor, combined with the unfathomable cruelty of his actions, provokes hate and anger and more than a little fear. Our handy legal solution is simply to kill again. The death penalty is society's last resort, a desperate option born of helplessness and real pain. But does that make murder by the state more tolerable than murder by Doody?

On the whole, Americans like to characterize themselves as hale and hearty bon vivants, happy at home in the barcalounger, but more than willing to spread a little good cheer throughout a crazy world gone wrong.

Other nations, however, see a lumbering miscreant of a legal system, hemming and hawing, and finally killing its own. The United States consistently and flagrantly violates international norms of human rights when it kills its children. We are one of only a few "civilized" nations that continues to impose the death penalty for its criminals, and we are the only nation that kills its juveniles.

Should we maybe question this practice? Or should we continue to pretend that world opinion doesn't matter? Doody is just a kid — a kid who is and was a freak, a loser, a psychotic loner. Not only that, but he's also a freak, a loser, and a psychotic loner who won't say he's sorry. Maybe he doesn't know how.

Or perhaps Doody's obstinate silence is his way of recognizing the atrocity of his acts. In some odd way, he has already absorbed the crime, accepted the punishment and no longer considers himself worthy of even offering an apology. But if this is true, hasn't the legal system already achieved its goal? And how will we ever know?

Because Doody has displayed no overt remorse for his actions, his life hangs in the balance. It's ironic that we can so easily justify a second murder by such a childish standard. Partly in ignorance, partly in prejudice, and partly in pain, we consider the inscrutable face of Doody's troubled adolescence, but in the end, it looks no different than our own.

Diana Lopez is a second-year law student.

Cats, rats and wildebeests don't apply to gay rights

Over the past semester, I have read Anirban Bhattacharya's letters and the numerous responses from other students. However, his most recent letter takes the "proverbial" cake. Tigers, wildebeests, Red Ridinghood, cats and rats? Who is this person?

Granted, matters of sexual orientation are hot topics in today's society. But these things are indisputable for anyone who has any sense of intellectual humility. First, with regards to the question of orientation, no one knows how orientation is determined. Whether it is a factor of genetics, hormones, socialization, choice, or a combination of factors, no research has conclusively proven when and where orientation begins. Second, with regard to gays in the military, all I can say is this — always have been; always will be.

Bhattacharya said that "gays can be straightened out." Can we try to change things that we don't even yet understand? Has he successfully changed anyone? There is a big difference between orientation and behavior. Sexual behavior can change. It can be expressed in many ways whether one is straight or gay. However, sexual orientation seems to be immutable. Just ask any of the millions of gay people around us and they will tell you the same.

Using Bhattacharya's (poor) analogies, if a cat acts like a rat, does it make it a rat? Did the wolf who dressed and acted like Red Ridinghood's grandmother make him the grandmother? No. The cat will still be a cat and the wolf remains a wolf. Thus, a person with a homosexual orientation who sexually behaves like a heterosexual remains a homosexual. There are many gay men and women who are married, have children and appear to everyone as heterosexual. Yet they secretly identify themselves as homosexual. Conversely, a person with a heterosexual orientation who sexually behaves like a homosexual remains a heterosexual. Thousands of incarcerated heterosexual men have homosexual encounters in prison, but that does not make them homosexual in orientation. Once released from prison, they resume a heterosexual life with corresponding behaviors.

I realize this debate will continue, but I believe it is important to look at the bottom line: In the final analysis, does it really matter what causes homosexuality? The reality is that gay people are active and productive in our society. They are as normal as any other person. It doesn't matter how they got here — they are here! And they don't have to change. No one should try to impose their morals, values, beliefs, or attitudes on any other group if we are all going to live together. Let us put aside our prejudices and embrace the unique contributions that everyone makes in society. Let's get rid of the "us" and "them" mentality and realize we are all interdependent upon each other.

With regards to Bhattacharya, I never cease to be amazed at how someone with such a high level of education could be so foolish.

Pettiness hurts ASU goals

"As I stepped across that invisible line and the door closed behind me, I stared with terrified eyes down the dark cold street. Alone, my heart began to beat faster, and faster, and I cringed as I tightened my fist around the strap of my backpack. Thoughts ran through my head at a million miles an hour, and with a small tear of fear rolling down my pale cheeks I began to walk across campus to my residence hall."

As one of the most terrifying experience of my life, I thank the Lord every night for the hand that accompanies me home every night from the MU to Manzanita, so that I will never have to go through the horrifying experience of being attacked ever again.

Of the $700,000 ASASU spends of our tuition money, the Safety Escort Service is just one of a diverse number of services they provide to the student body. Each of 43,000 students pays approximately $1,000 each semester in tuition; don't you think they deserve more for their money than just classrooms and professors?

ASASU is the foundation block of the ASU community. We are hundreds of students who volunteer our time to improve the ASU community through student services, student advocates and student leader organizations. Many, many years ago, The State Press was started by a loan of $30,000 from ASASU. Your purpose was, and continues to be, to educate the students with information about ASU and the community; if, as you stated, 4,000 students voted in the last election, are you really serving your purpose?

While you provide a source to the students to expel their ignorance about campus issues, we as student advocates are the driving force to change the injustices done to the ASU student community. Together ASASU and the State Press could take the world by storm. With you providing the education and us providing the actions to support it, we could be the most powerful student coalition this campus has ever seen. Instead, while we put our education on hold to put forth an effort to change the system, you spend your time worrying about who has nicer desks.

Let's stop being petty, and work together to serve the ASU community to the maximum extent of our ability. Is that not what we are all here for?

Incorrect ASU class standing attributed to Bhattacharya

In the Feb. 2 edition of the State Press a letter to the editor was signed by Anirban Bhattacharya who listed himself as a graduate student in sociology.

Mr. Bhattacharya is not now nor has ever been a graduate student in sociology. I would appreciate it if you could announce this in your corrections section in a future addition. Moreover, if you print any more of this person's letters, do not list him as a sociology graduate student. This is a false claim.

Sociology

Editor's Note: The State Press apologizes for the error. Anirban Bhattacharya is an alumni of ASU with a major in sociology at the undergraduate level. The State Press would request that letter writers be sure to specify such information in their letters — Mr. Bhattacharya listed "graduate" under class standing, apparently meaning he had graduated, not that he was a graduate student.

progress and keep the coach abreast. I don't know anything about rehabilitation. It's not my area of expertise."

Another of Hullah's former Dartmouth players, Kelly Begg, said in the article that Hullah held up one practice in the 1990-91 season, waiting for Begg to finish vomiting during a round of strenuous sprints. She then immediately made Begg get back in line for another set of sprints, Begg said.

"She (Hullah) said, 'Kelly, we're waiting for you,'" Begg said in the article. "Her drawing attention to me was like she was punishing me for getting sick. I felt like a total loser for throwing up."

Begg eventually was cut by Hullah and left the team, the article said.

At Dartmouth, Hullah led her teams to five consecutive Ivy League Championships in eight years, compiling a 138-95 record.

Harris said he was aware when he hired Hullah that she'd had previous run-ins with her players, but said that Hullah's selection committee felt her record spoke for itself.

"I don't think there's any question that she has a stellar record in terms of not just coaching but in terms of graduation rates," Harris said. "Jackie is certainly somebody who I think the entire committee felt very good about."

McFadgion, a freshman, said Thursday that she had high expectations of playing for ASU, even after Hullah replaced former coach Maura McHugh, who recruited McFadgion.

"I love this school; I love the team," McFadgion said. "(Hullah) was a new coach ... I didn't know her, so I couldn't pass judgment on her."

But McFadgion said she soon found out that she would not be happy under Hullah.

"I couldn't play under her leadership," McFadgion said. "On the court, I wasn't doing anything that I thought was right. I felt tentative, very uncomfortable. I wasn't playing the way I knew I could play."

McFadgion decided last week to leave the team. She said she plans to explore the possibility of transferring to another university.

Fowler said that current Dartmouth player Betsy Gilmore, who left the team halfway through her sophomore season, rejoined Dartmouth this season because Hullah was no longer the coach.

ASU center Melani Francis, however, expressed praise for Hullah.

"I really like Jackie," Francis said. "She has the best intentions in mind. She's an excellent coach, and she knows the game."

Harris said the administration remains in support of Hullah.

"When there is a change, there's a natural finding-out process where coaches need and must extend themselves to find out about the players that they have, and players in return must find out about themselves."

"We'll continue to spend time with Coach Hullah in working through this first year. The first years are always transitional years."

Local veterans express mixed feelings over repealed Vietnam embargo

By JONI TAIT
STATE PRESS

For many, President Bill Clinton on Thursday closed a sensitive chapter in U.S. history by lifting a 19-year trade and investment embargo on Vietnam, but for others it concludes a chapter of government lies.

Rejecting appeals from veterans' groups and families who lost relatives in the war, Clinton said the United States would lose leverage in its search for MIAs and POWs if there was no forward movement in relations with Vietnam.

Eric Edwards, president of the Vietnam Veterans of America chapter in Phoenix said, "Most people have mixed feelings because we want to end the war and get on with life, but we're not going to forget those that are still behind or unaccounted for."

Currently there are 2,238 American MIAs and POWs unaccounted for in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

"The fullest possible accounting of all missing service personnel and prisoners will still be top priority, and we just hope that lifting the embargo will open new channels of communication to facilitate that cause," Edwards said.

"There are areas in Vietnam that are closed to foreign traffic, and we're hoping that all areas will open and be accessible once the embargo is lifted," he said.

The United States imposed the embargo on North Vietnam in 1964 and extended it to South Vietnam in 1975 when the country fell to communist forces.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said, "Under both Presidents Bush and Clinton, the United States gave its word that we would lift the embargo if the Vietnamese substantially cooperated with us to determine the fate of our missing."

McCain, a Navy pilot who was held prisoner in North Vietnam for about six years, said, "It would be unfair, and beneath the dignity of the United States, to go back on our word now."

During the last days of the Bush administration, officials began to relax sanctions against the country because they believed the Vietnamese government was showing more cooperation in finding the remains of missing American soldiers.

"These actions do not constitute a normalization of our relationship. We must have more progress, more cooperation, and more answers," Clinton said.

He said he would establish a U.S. liaison office, most likely in Hanoi.

Establishment of a liaison office is usually the first step toward full diplomatic normalization.

David Morrissey, a Phoenix firefighter who testified in front of the Senate Select Committee that was investigating the POW and MIA situation, said the administration's decision to establish a liaison office signals that it is proceeding rapidly toward full diplomatic relations.

Morrissey, whose father is unaccounted for, said he does not believe there has been sufficient cooperation to warrant lifting the embargo.

"I'm very disappointed in the president," he said.

"As long as the United States government holds onto the lie that we didn't leave servicemen behind, there's nothing in the Vietnamese's best interest to say otherwise."

Sheldon Simon, an ASU political science professor who is an expert in Asian security issues, said the decision to lift the embargo does not have any security implications.

"The implications are essentially political and economic," he said.

"Politically, it sends a signal that the United States is moving towards the desire to deal with Vietnam again as a normal state. Economically, Vietnam is one of the last states in East Asia to move towards a market economy."

Clinton said his decision to lift the embargo was based on progress in four key areas, not on expanding U.S. business opportunities there.

He said progress had been made in the following areas:

- The number of "discrepancy cases," in which family members of MIA and POW soldiers believed there were still survivors, had been reduced from 135 to 73 since July.
- The release of some documents from the Vietnamese archives that were expected to shed light on the fate of American soldiers.
- Continuing assistance from Vietnam and Laos in conducting searches along the border.
- The discovery of the remains of 39 American servicemen since July.

The Associated Press contributed to this article.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A female ASU employee reported Wednesday that she observed a female student with a handgun in her waistband while the student was in her class.
- A male ASU student reported that unknown persons took his Macintosh computer and style writer printer while it was left unattended in a hallway at 706 Alpha Drive.
- Police responded to a call at Sun Devil Stadium where a male ASU student had turned on the public address and television system. Stadium personnel were called to turn off the equipment.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A 25-year-old Mesa man was arrested Wednesday for felony theft after he embezzled approximately $500 from Texaco Star Market, 808 S. Priest Drive in Tempe, where he works as a cashier. The manager witnessed at least 150 instances of the man taking money from customers and canceling the sale. He then used the money to buy lottery tickets. The man admitted to the scheme and said his financial problems caused him to engage in the thefts.

- On January 15, a 31-year-old woman was kidnapped from Circle K at 1101 S. Rural Road and driven to Phoenix where she was sexually assaulted by two male suspects. Police have not made any arrests in the incident.
- A Tempe woman reported that she was approached by a Hispanic boy who said "Hello, how are you?" and then proceeded to unzip his pants and expose himself to the woman as she entered her apartment at 833 W. First St. She saw him again Monday when he walked past her living room window.
- An unidentified man on Wednesday assaulted a clerk from the Mobil gas station at 802 S. Mill Ave. As the clerk tried to stop the suspect from stealing goods, the man whacked the clerk with a sawed-off baseball bat as he left the store. The suspect is identified as a white male, 18 to 20 years old, with shoulder length hair. He was wearing an orange sweat-shirt, jeans and white tennis shoes.

Reports compiled by State Press police reporter Paul Matthews.

Arizona Senate confirms Amos, Gignac for ABOR

BY SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

The Arizona Senate confirmed two nominees for the Arizona Board of Regents Thursday, a vote which they said requires changes in their lives and close study of the problems facing Arizona's universities.

Gubernatorial nominees Hank Amos III, a Tucson realty executive, and Judith Gignac, a Sierra Vista developer, were confirmed by a voice vote. Sen. Stan Furman, D-Phoenix, said he was listening for no votes, but didn't hear any.

"It's taken time already (to go through the process)," Amos said. "What I'll probably be doing is a lot less charity work by getting off boards that I'm currently on."

"Then I'll basically concentrate on the Arizona Board of Regents and my business."

One charity he's currently involved with is Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Tucson.

Amos said his time will be even further divided because his wife, Theresa, will be giving birth to a girl in about seven weeks.

"She's flattered, honored and happy about the recognition," he said. "At the same time she made it clear that you have a wife and a child and you have to spend time on them."

Gignac said she is relieved that the process is over.

"I'm very pleased, and I'm glad it's finally done so I can serve in an official capacity," she said. "It's been so long it's almost anticlimactic."

Gov. Fife Symington nominated the two to the ABOR during the summer, and both have been attending board meetings to acclimate themselves to its workings.

"You always feel good when it's over with," Gignac said. "Things can always go wrong."

She compared the process to an election when candidates give their all to win, adding that the vote will place additional burdens on her.

"I work real hard," she said. "I get into work at 6:30 or 7 in the morning."

"It is going to increase the pressure somewhat, but planning for this, I've left some of the boards that I'm on."

Gignac said she is looking forward to the tuition discussion the board will be going through.

"The biggest issue coming up is going to be the tuition issue in April," she said.

Amos said his major concerns as a board member are graduate assistants and teachers' assistants teaching undergraduates and employee pay raises.

"My concern is I don't think it's fair to do something across the board," he said. "When you do things across the board, it's bad for morale, and you don't increase productivity."

"racism at the highest levels of government" and accused Gore of conspiring with the ADL against blacks.

Muhammad's comments had caused a rift between Farrakhan and the leader of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Unless Farrakhan satisfied questions about his own views, any working relationship between him and the black caucus "is severely jeopardized," Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., said on Tuesday.

"Whether or not that means severing all ties and not being able to work on projects that deal with the salvation of young people in our community, I have to say to you: I don't know," Mfume said.

The Senate voted unanimously Wednesday to condemn Muhammad's comments, in a resolution offered by Sens. John Danforth, R-Mo., and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., as an amendment to an education bill.

"If Mr. Farrakhan wants to enter the political and social mainstream, then his actions will have to speak louder than the words of some of his associates," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Last month, Mfume asked Farrakhan to clarify whether Muhammad was reflecting official policy when he made the comments at New Jersey's Kean College on Nov. 29, and to reveal Muhammad's status within the Nation of Islam.

In that speech, which was quoted in a full-page newspaper ad by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Muhammad said Jews are "bloodsuckers of the black nation and the black community" who control government, the news media and other black activists.

He also called Pope John Paul II a "no-good cracker," and urged mob murder of whites in South Africa.

Vice President Al Gore called Muhammad's comments "the vilest kind of racism," and told the United Jewish Appeal that "America is a tolerant country, but we should not tolerate hatred and racism."

Jesse Jackson, who has condemned Muhammad's statements, accused Gore of "scapegoating" and called on President Clinton "to give a major civil rights speech."

Jackson said there was no denunciation of Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., for an offensive remark he made last year about leaders of African nations.

Hollings said of African leaders: "Rather than eat each other, they'd just come up and get a good square meal" at conferences in Switzerland.

Mfume also pressed "leaders of good will" to denounce Hollings' statement.

Mfume announced his pact with Farrakhan Sept. 16 in the afterglow of a rare display of unity between civil rights activists and the controversial Farrakhan, who wants a spot in the mainstream.

Clinton

tion to that war — made his decision all the more sensitive. But Clinton said that every American of his age knew someone who died or was wounded in the fighting.

Clinton said his decision was guided by progress in four key areas:

—Recovery of remains of American soldiers in Vietnam. Clinton said that since last July, remains of 39 American servicemen had been recovered.

—Resolution of "discrepancy cases" in which there was reason to believe people could have survived. Clinton said that since July, the number of such cases had been reduced from 135 to 73.

—Further assistance from Vietnam and Laos in conducting searches along their common border. The first such investigation took place in December and located new remains and crash sites, Clinton said.

—Release of any documents from Vietnam that could shed light on the fate of those still missing. Clinton said that since July, important documents had been released from the Vietnamese archives.

In terms of ability to generate emotions, few issues can match the one involving the missing. There is a strong suspicion among many MIA family members and veterans groups that some of the missing are still alive, but the administration has said there is no credible evidence of that.

An added component to the issue is Clinton's relationship with the war. As a student a generation ago, he marched against it and also avoided the draft.

Last summer, Clinton promised to keep the embargo until Vietnam provided a full accounting of the missing Americans.

His decision to soften that stance was made easier by a non-binding 62-38 vote in the Senate last Thursday favoring an end to the embargo. Some veterans and family groups maintain that Vietnam has recovered the remains of hundreds of MIA's but refuses to turn them over to U.S. authorities.

Administration officials say Vietnam may have stored remains at one point but no longer does so.

Initially, many Asian countries joined with the United States in barring trade with Vietnam but in recent years virtually all have established normal trade ties with Hanoi, leaving Washington increasingly isolated.

Report shows bad study habits can give students a pain in the neck

By MARY LEIGH SUMMERTON
STATE PRESS

Straighten up.

According to a report published by the American Physical Therapy Association (APTA) in January, bad posture costs the United States several million dollars a year in doctor visits and lost wages.

One part of the report focused on the study habits of 1,000 New York City college students during a two-year period. Half of the students used posture techniques taught to them by the research team. The other half slouched while studying.

The students who slouched reported 10 times as many headaches, backaches and muscle strains as the students who used the posture techniques.

"Many problems are started and made worse by bad posture," said Karen Ensley, a physical therapist from the Professional Therapy Association of Mesa.

Ensley said she retrains her patients to use good posture.

"Changing bad posture is a process," said Ensley. "It generally takes six to eight weeks of constant practice to learn how to have good posture."

Dr. Denise Beighe of ASU Student Health Center said that back pain is prevalent among ASU students.

"Students use incorrect mechanisms for lifting and moving," Beighe said. "They are under a lot of stress and spend many hours sitting at a computer."

Beighe recommends using heat for mild back pain.

Several ASU professors of exercise science and physical education stress the importance of good posture.

Professor Christine Wells said that most students know they have bad posture but do nothing to improve it.

"A lot of people are sloppy when they sit," said Wells. "Students will spend eight hours slouched over their books, a day later they will get a backache and then wonder why their back is bothering them."

Wells said that being physically fit does not necessarily guarantee good posture, strong abdominals are necessary to support the lower back.

"When you have weak abdominals, you let your back cave in and let everything hang out."

Professor Richard Hinrichs has done studies on repetitive strain injuries associated with computer keyboard use. He said the best posture he has found for computer use is putting the keyboard on the end of the table, and keeping your wrists straight while typing.

"Relax and don't stay in one place too long while you are working," Hinrichs said.

Professor Charles Corbin said that when he was a coach, he made his players aware of their posture.

"Bad posture puts you at a risk of injury and other health problems," Corbin said.

He said posture reflects how a person feels about themselves.

"Posture is partly structure, partly fitness, and partly attitude."

The American Physical Therapy Association recommends:

- Taking 15 minute breaks from studying every two hours.
- Using good posture when studying and
- Arranging study items close by to avoid excessive reaching and twisting.

Federal report reveals U.S. recipients of food stamps rose 26% since 1992

190,000 Arizonans receive this aid, DES official says

By MARY LEIGH SUMMERTON
STATE PRESS

Ten percent of the U.S. population is currently receiving food stamps, a 26 percent increase over 1992, according to a federal report obtained from the Arizona Department of Economic Security (DES).

An additional 20 million Americans are financially eligible for the stamps but do not receive them, according to the study.

"Food stamps are just like cash, but (they) can only be used to purchase consumable food," said Bruce Sankey, public information officer for Arizona DES. "Purchasing alcohol with food stamps is against federal law."

Sankey said 190,000 people in Arizona receive food stamps. The number is slightly higher than it was last year.

Arizona food stamp recipients receive an average of $70 per month, Sankey said.

"The maximum allowable income for a person to make to receive food stamps is $3,000," said Sankey. "Because of this, most people that qualify for food stamps are also qualified for other resources."

There are financial and non-financial requirements that must be met to receive food stamps.

A person must be a U.S. citizen and registered to work, he said.

Sankey said each DES case is handled on an individual basis, with officers who determine eligibility taking into account such things as the kind of car the person drives and the financial resources of the person's roommates.

Patricia Spakes, ASU West associate provost of academic affairs said that determining the number of food stamps that a person needs is a complex formula.

"Each state has its own way of defining poverty," Spakes said.

"Federal guidelines determine the minimum number of calories that a person needs to survive in a month, then officials in the state determine how much it would cost a person to purchase those calories within the state."

Spakes said the majority of the people on food stamps are using them as a form of temporary assistance.

"Most people use welfare and food stamp programs between jobs," Spakes said. "Only a relatively small amount of people are on them for more than five years."

Spakes said that most people on welfare want to get off it, but for some the cost of getting off welfare is too high.

"The people that are on welfare for five years or more are on because they have medical benefits," Spakes said. "If they get a job making minimum wage, they will lose their health-care benefits, child-care benefits and their children will suffer."

More than 1,000 people apply for food stamps in Arizona every day.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Michael Jackson popped up with Lisa Marie Presley to hear The Fifth Dimension and the Temptations at a Las Vegas resort.

The two arrived five minutes before the concert started Wednesday night at the Sheraton Desert Inn. They entered from backstage with a security guard.

"There was no announcement from the stage that he was attending the show, but there was a buzz from the crowd when he was seated," said Steve Schiffman, a resort spokesman.

"No one bothered him. The people in the audience respected his space," Schiffman said Thursday.

The Sheraton received a call earlier in the day that Jackson would be attending. Jackson was staying at The Mirage a block away.

Jackson, in black robe and black head-dress, and Miss Presley, daughter of "the King" Elvis Presley, sat in a VIP section called "king's row."

NEW YORK (AP) — Boris Yeltsin's firsthand account of the fall of the Soviet Union and his battles as Russia's president will be published around the world in May. The book, tentatively titled "The President's Journal," is written in the form of a personal journal, beginning with the failed coup in August 1991 against then-Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. Times Books said Thursday.

The memoir also covers the shelling of the Moscow White House in October during Yeltsin's conflict with parliament.

"It describes Yeltsin's feelings, reactions, thoughts, emotions at the time events were taking place," publisher Peter Osnos said. "It's not a book of lofty political vision. He tells you what was going on."

Times Books, a division of Random House, will publish the book simultaneously in about 20 countries, Osnos said.

Osnos wouldn't discuss money, but Yeltsin wrote in the book's introduction that his share will go to charity.

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — Broadcast journalist Jim Lehrer likes French horn player Barry Tuckwell and the feeling is mutual, so the musician decided to play for free at the wedding of Lehrer's daughter.

Lehrer, co-host of Public Broadcasting's "McNeill-Lehrer News Hour," read a recent newspaper story about Tuckwell and took a shot at asking him to play for the May 21 wedding.

Tuckwell, who also conducts the Maryland Symphony Orchestra in Hagerstown, has never met Lehrer, but decided to play for Amanda Lehrer's wedding at Lehrer's home in nearby Charles Town, W.Va., as a personal favor.

"Jim admires Barry's playing and Barry admires Jim's reporting," said Tuckwell's wife, Sue. "Barry likes journalism and journalists. He has got a lot of good friends in the media."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Being named People magazine's "sexiest man alive" could put some actors on the fast track to lots of juicy roles. Not Nick Nolte.

Two years ago, Nolte was auditioning for the role of the aging, bumbling Matt Hobbs in "I'll Do Anything" when the magazine came out with its tribute.

Nolte, 52, was concerned the magazine had blown his chances to play the chronically out-of-work actor. He called the director, James L. Brooks.

"Don't believe that magazine," Nolte recalled telling Brooks. "It's all bull. I'm not sexy at all."

Nolte said he drew a mustache on the magazine cover photo of himself, added a couple of scars and crossed out the eyes. He sent it to Brooks' house with a note: "This is how I really see myself."

Brooks said he had been concerned about the sexiest man stuff, until he spoke to Nolte.

"He was so awkward and uncomfortable and amused and concerned that I realized immediately that he was Matt Hobbs. He was perfect for the role," Brooks said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor William Shatner and his wife, Marcy Lafferty, are ending their 20-year marriage.

The couple issued a statement Thursday saying they plan to divorce. They called the breakup amicable. They have been separated for several months, spokesman Richard Hoffman said.

"Life took us apart and it was time to move on," said Miss Lafferty, an actress. "We both share the highest regard for one another and our loved ones."

It was the second marriage for Miss Lafferty and Shatner, who played Capt. James T. Kirk on "Star Trek" and is host of television's "Rescue 911." They had no children together.

Gymnasts go for sweep

The fourth-ranked Sun Devil women's gymnastics team goes for a season sweep of the University of Denver tonight at 7:30 at the University Activity Center.

ASU (4-0) soundly defeated Denver (1-7) on the road Jan. 14 in its first of meet of the season, 188.225-183.850. The Sun Devils took first in all the events except the bars, with Tina Brinkman capturing first place in the vault and the floor and Danna Lister finishing first on the beam.

Today's match will be the sixth meeting between the Sun Devils and the Pioneers, with ASU leading the series 5-0.

Men's wrestling faces Cal State Bakersfield

The ASU wrestling team resume their dual match schedule with a weekend trip to California.

The No. 14 Sun Devils (3-5 overall, 1-1 Pac-10) face off with 24th-ranked Cal State Bakersfield at the CSUB Activities Center. The dual is ASU's first since competing in the National Dual tournament in Lincoln, Nebraska on January 22.

ASU holds an 11-3 advantage in the all-time series with the Roadrunners, and has won the last seven matches.

Men's tennis to compete in NM

Three members of ASU men's tennis team are traveling to Albuquerque, New Mexico with assistant coach Ford Oliver to participate in the eight-team Sunsoft Lobo Invitational.

Scheduled to compete for the Sun Devils are juniors Eric Brunner and Peter Jeschke and sophomore Paul Reber.

In addition to the Sun Devils and No. 19 New Mexico, the field includes No. 4 Texas, No. 7 Mississippi State, No. 12 Pepperdine, No. 15 Texas Christian, No. 25 UC Irvine and No. 41 Northwestern.

Hoopsters squeak past Huskies

Hedake scores last 5 points of contest in ASU's 59-53 win

SEATTLE (AP) — Stevin "Hedake" Smith scored the game's final five points to give ASU a 59-53 victory over Washington on Thursday night.

Smith, who scored 16 points, became the fifth-leading scorer in ASU history. He surpassed Paul Williams (1979-1983), bringing his career point total to 1,470.

With the Sun Devils (11-6 overall, 6-2 Pac-10) leading by one point and 17 seconds remaining, Smith hit a 12-foot pull-up jumper and then stole a pass at the other end of the court as Washington tried to set up a three-point attempt.

Smith turned the steal into a three-point play after he was fouled taking the ball in for a layin.

Junior forward Sam Allen scored eight points during a 10-0 Washington run that closed the ASU lead to 54-53, and the Huskies had a chance to take the lead after Jamie Booker drew a charge from the Sun Devils' Isaac Burton.

But the Huskies couldn't get a shot off before the 35-second clock expired on their next possession, setting up Smith's heroics.

"We didn't play like we were ahead," ASU coach Bill Frieder said. "Maybe I should have called a time-out one possession earlier, but we got a good time-out when we had to. When you have to work so long to get the lead, you have to put it away when you get it."

Sophomore center Mario Bennett scored 17 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Sun Devils while senior forward Dwayne Fontana added 13 points.

ASU has won six of its last seven games, and 10 in a row over Washington. Frieder maintained his perfect (10-0) record against the Huskies.

"We knew it was going to be a tough basketball game," Frieder said. "We respect this team, as coaches — they've played a lot of good teams and played them really tough."

"We've had a rough week of practice — you don't feel good when it isn't going smoothly, like clockwork. It was a good victory for us. We'll take it and go on."

Washington (2-15, 0-8) tied a school record by losing its ninth consecutive game.

ASU women fall to No. 17 UW

Poor shooting in 2nd half sends Sun Devils to 9th straight loss

BY TODD KELLY
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's basketball team is closing the gap between themselves and their Pac-10 foes, as they demonstrated Thursday night against No. 17 Washington.

However, the Sun Devils lost to the Huskies 69-56 and ran their losing streak to nine games. Their record now stands at 2-14 overall and 0-8 in the Pac-10. Washington improved to 14-3 overall and 6-2 in Pac-10 play.

Not to worry, according to Molly Tuter. "We're improving from game to game, it's just going to keep getting better and better, and we are going to win some," she said after the game in which she scored 20 points and yanked down five rebounds.

The only drawback from the first half was Nikki Thompson's four first-half fouls.

"I've stayed away from foul trouble for a while, but it always comes back some time," Thompson said.

Thursday's game had a complete turn of the tide at the half. Washington came out of the gate and shot 8 for 24 (33 percent), scoring only 27 points while ASU shot 14 for 27 (52 percent) and scored 35 points. Leading at half-time was a very positive sign for the Sun Devils as the Huskies were 0-3 in games they trailed at the break.

ASU coach Jacqueline Hullah after the game had "mixed emotions," she said. "We executed well in the first half. We stuck to the game plan."

The second half did not hold as much luck for the Sun Devils. ASU scored a mere 21 points in the second, while UW scored 42. Most of the change in scoring can be attributed to the Huskies' stepped-up defensive pressure.

Although their defense proved tough, center Melani Francis was not impressed. "They were not as good defensively as we thought," she said. "We were pumped up for a good defense."

Washington coach Chris Gobrecht was impressed by ASU's effort, saying, "Arizona State came out and went right after us. They got our attention, and they got our respect."

Ryan takes swing at Cards

Buddy comes in with record of 43-35-1, 1 KO

BY MIKE BRANOM
STATE PRESS

The Phoenix Cardinals, anxious to reach the postseason after an 11-year absence, signed charismatic and controversial Buddy Ryan as head coach and general manager to a four-year contract Thursday morning.

In Ryan's previous head coaching experience, he compiled a 43-35-1 record with the Philadelphia Eagles from 1986-90. However, his team failed to win any playoff games in three attempts.

"I have said that I want to reach the next level," said Cardinals owner and president Bill Bidwill. "Buddy Ryan has been to the next level. I anticipate he will take us there."

The hiring was considered a surprise by many, considering that Ryan was thought to have ruined his future head coaching opportunities when he punched Houston offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride during the Oilers' nationally-televised regular-season finale.

Ryan believes that Bidwill did not put too much stock in the incident, which the former repeatedly refused to apologize for.

"I think (Bidwill) is a man's man," Ryan said. "He knows that in the heat of battle things happen."

Ryan is considered one of the top defensive minds in the NFL, an opinion backed by the statistics compiled by the 1993 AFC Central champion Houston Oilers.

Last season, the Oilers led the league in rushing defense (79.6 yards per game) and interceptions (26), were second in the NFL in forced turnovers (43) and set the club record for sacks (52).

The 24-year coaching veteran is hoping to bring "Buddy Ball," a brand of "smart, physical football," to Sun Devil Stadium.

He refused to speculate on player personnel moves, saying "I don't want to just shoot off and say things about players. I want to look at them on film and then I'll have plenty to say."

He did praise defensive lineman Eric Swann, comparing him to Reggie White, who played for Ryan in Philadelphia before signing with Green Bay before last season.

WINGS OF GOLD HAS LOFTY GOALS

Club seeks better financial, spectator support for sports

BY EVELYN SHEINKOPF
STATE PRESS

While the formal existence of the women's athletics program at ASU dates back to the late 1960's, Wings Of Gold, the only booster organization at ASU designed specifically for the promotion and funding of women's sports, has not yet celebrated its first birthday.

According to Pamela Willingham Holt, President of Wings' board of directors, and Carol Propstra, Development/Special Events Chair, women's sports programs at ASU have had an abundance of support in the past, but in recent years the fiscal and spectator support has dropped.

"We've seen this as a national trend," Propstra said. "But women's sports has never had an organization like this. Programs have been supported through other groups such as the Sun Angels and the Varsity A Club."

Holt further explained the need for a program like Wings, saying, "We are aware that Pac-10 schools are competitive for recruiting, and we have a strong tradition of women's athletics. Now we're furthering a tradition of athletic support. Athletes want to go to a school where they're watched."

Brainchild of the athletics department, the purpose of Wings of Gold is to expand the financial base for scholarships and funding for programs, aid in the development of those resources, increase recognition and spectator participation for all women's competitions and act as advocate for the women's programs and liaison to the community.

The eventual goal of the fledgling Wings — having all programs independently funded — is ambitious.

"We felt it was time to go out and gain support for women's programs," said Vic Cegles, assistant to the Athletic Director. "I got people together to raise support for a golf tournament and now we've taken it a step further. Instead of having each team go out and get their own funding, Wings should help with getting funding and recognition for all women's sports."

With the help of Propstra, a former Sun Devil tennis standout and current tennis champion of the 1994 Fiesta Bowl Invitational, and Holt, who worked for the University of Iowa athletic department, Wings of Gold began in April with pre-organizational meetings.

The steering committee of coaches, faculty, alumni and interested community members worked throughout the summer to put together the boards and committees.

The Kickoff event to introduce Wings of Gold to women student athletes was a picnic hosted by Propstra. A fundraising auction and awards banquet is already planned for April 18.

Also, The Sporting Woman: Insights From Her Past, an art exhibit depicting the history of women in sports, will be featured at ASU's Hayden Library during the month of March.

Wings of Gold will feature its first salable club item, a commemorative datebook/calendar. Propstra says that more fund-raising drives are planned.

"There are so many things we can do," she said. "I'd like to plan a wish day where people from the community play the sports of their choice with student-athletes. People would pay to play and people would pay to watch. It would generate community interest and raise money."

In its first six months, Wings has already raised over $25,000 for women's sports. Yet the events work not only to stimulate financial growth, but also community involvement and athlete recognition.

President Holt and Publicity and Promotion Chair David Short are working on putting collegiate sports events in the spotlight.

"We want to get the events mentioned in newspapers like the New Times and company publications so people will know that we're there," Holt said.

For Holt and Propstra the time they have volunteered has been worth the effort.

"The best part is seeing what we're doing," said Propstra. "It's kind like a new baby. We're still new. Just wait 'til we really get going."

Brian Fitzgerald/State Press
Carol Propstra, a founding member of Wings of Gold, ASU's booster organization for women's athletics, hopes that the program can flourish. "Women's sports (at ASU) has never had a program like this," she said.

Golf takes to the road

Todd Dempsey, NCAA champ, off injured list

BY JULIE REUVERS
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's golf team, ranked 10th in the latest GolfWorld poll, makes its first road trip of the Spring season Monday through Wednesday at the Ping/Arizona Invitational in Tucson.

The tournament features 14 teams at the par-72 Randolph North Golf Course, including UofA, Fresno State, Georgia Tech, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Pacific, Pepperdine, Texas, Texas-El Paso and UCLA.

Sun Devil junior Todd Demsey, the defending NCAA champion, returns to the lineup after missing two fall tournaments with an injured left index finger. Demsey had six stitches after he accidentally cut the finger working on his clubs in September. The Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., native competed in the Phoenix Open last weekend in Scottsdale and was the only amateur to make the cut. He carded a four-round total of 284.

ASU coach Randy Lein will field a lineup consisting of Demsey, Cade Stone, Chris Stutts, Chris Hanell and Scott Johnson.

Baseball faces UNM

Devils look for 2nd regional sweep in 3-game homestand

BY JEREMY STEIN
STATE PRESS

The ASU baseball team looks to sweep the second of New Mexico's two major universities as they host the New Mexico Lobos for a three-game series this weekend.

The No. 13 Sun Devils (3-0), hot off a three-game sweep of New Mexico State, kick-off their series with the Lobos (2-1) at 2:30 this afternoon at Packard Stadium, with Saturday's and Sunday's contests beginning at 1 p.m.

The Lobos come to Tempe with some momentum after taking two-out-of-three games from UofA last week in Tucson.

After scoring only one run and falling to the Wildcats in the first game, New Mexico's bats came alive, as they scored 21 runs in defeating UofA in the final two games.

To cool down the Lobo's hot bats, Coach Jim Brock has scheduled a repeat appearance of the Jason starting pitching trio. Brock's tentative pitching schedule has left-hander Jason Ruskey (1-0, 0.00) on the mound Friday, fellow left-hander Jason Bond (0-0, 1.29) starting on Saturday and right-hander Jason Verdugo facing the Lobos on Sunday.

At the plate, the Sun Devils are led by All-America third baseman Antone Williamson. Williamson went 6-for-10 with two doubles, one triple and three RBIs in three games against New Mexico State.

Devils headed for Mobil Invitational

BY EVELYN SHEINKOPF
STATE PRESS

Five members of the ASU women's track team will compete in the 800-meter dash and 4x400-meter relay events Sunday at the Mobil Invitational hosted by George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia.

The meet is part of the 1994 Mobil Grand Prix Indoor circuit which includes the championship competition in Atlanta, and features top international and national talent.

Senior Kim Toney, an All-America for her college career, will be running the 800 at the invitational. Toney, who holds the twelfth fastest time in the event this season, is up against fierce competition.

According to Joe Goldstein, a publicist for the event, Maria Mutola, the number one world champion; Christine Wachtel of Germany and two-time Olympian and five-time indoor champion Joetta Clark will run at the invitational. But, Toney is not thinking about the competition.

"I feel good about training," said Toney. "This past weekend we had the best beginning race for the indoor season. As far as Sunday I'm not thinking of the competition. I used to worry about it, but now I'm just worried about my process of getting to where I want to be."

Tayo Akinremi, Lade Akenremi, Shanequa Campbell and Jaqueline Gayle will make up the Sun Devil's relay team. Akinremi, Campbell and Gayle have already qualified under provisional standards for the 1994 indoor championships in their respective events. The relay team clocked in with the second best collegiate time for the season at 3 minutes, 40.45 seconds last Saturday at the Wolf Pack Invitational in Reno, Nevada.

ASU ready for inferior LMU

Lion's lack of depth gives Devils confidence boost

BY JEREMY STEIN AND DAWN WAGNER
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's and men's swimming and diving teams, ranked 11th and 12th, respectively, face Loyola Marymount today at 3 p.m. at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center, in their final dual meet together of the season.

Sun Devils men's coach Ernie Maglischo feels that LMU should not pose a great challenge for ASU.

"They're a fairly new team," he said. "I don't think they have quite as much depth as we do at this point and so we should be able to beat them."

Women's swimming coach Tim Hill agreed with Maglischo that the Sun Devils should not have any problem disposing of the Lions, since LMU is "a building team."

According to Hill, the women's team will use the meet to prepare for the Pac-10 Championships later this month and "to continue to improve on ... the little things."

Hill said that sophomores Kristen Prier and Erin Kilburn and freshman Patty O'Connell are all vying for a spot on the Pac-10 squad.

The soft competition and a total of six exhibition events will also allow the swimmers to compete in some events they wouldn't normally swim.

According to Maglischo, many of the men will be swimming off-events for this meet.

The men's team is lead by seniors David Holderbach and Simon Percy. Holderbach is currently ranked 32nd in the world in the 100-meter backstroke and 21st in the 200-meter backstroke, while Percy is ranked 70th in the 100 backstroke.

On the women's side, the meet will also mean a possible spot in the NCAA Championships for at least one swimmer. Sophomore Joanne Currah has a shot at the consideration cut in the 400-meter individual medley for the championships, which will be held on March 17-20 in Indianapolis, Ind.

Ryan

Ryan also refused to comment on whether he will keep any remaining members of ex-coach Joe Bugel's staff.

"When I get back from Houston, I'll talk with each one," he said.

Running back/half back coach Ted Plumb will probably be retained, Ryan admitted later. Plumb served as Ryan's assistant head coach for offense when they worked together for the Eagles from 1986-89.

With Ryan as both head coach and GM, the Cardinals have consolidated that position for the first time in their history. Phoenix's previous GM, Larry Wilson, resigned Dec. 14 and Bugel was fired Jan. 24 after a 7-9 season, the team's best season in the past five years.

The 59-year-old Ryan said that being named general manager was "pretty important" to his accepting the Cardinals' job offer, saying, "In Philadelphia, I didn't have the title, but I did the work."

YOUR INDIVIDUAL HOROSCOPE

FRANCES DRAKE

For Friday, February 4, 1994

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)

Consult with advisers about the best way to invest newly acquired funds. Weekend travel will lead to new friendships. Tonight favors dating and romance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)

A compliment comes today from a superior. A social contact will prove helpful in business. You may receive financial assistance from a relative.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)

It's a good day for reaching accords with others. Couples will enjoy an outing to someone special. Romantic introductions are likely for those unattached.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)

An assignment comes that you'll truly enjoy. You may meet with romance through the job today. Mixing business and pleasure works out to your advantage.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)

It's a tailor-made day for falling in love and sharing delightful times with someone dear to you. Parents will be enjoying a special event with the children.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)

A co-worker asks a favor of you and you're happy to oblige. Getting a new project off the ground will be easier than you thought. Home entertaining is a plus tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)

Weekend travel will have romantic overtones. You may meet with a romantic introduction at a class, lecture or seminar. Accent pleasure interests tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

It's a good day for beginning home improvements and meeting with real estate agents. You may receive a nice gift from a family member. Shopping is also a favorable activity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

It's a wonderful day for making important phone calls and winning others over to your point of view. Charm combined with grace and eloquence work to your advantage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)

You'll find something that you like at a garage sale or at an out-of-the-way shop. Quiet pursuits will afford you more joy than hectic socializing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)

You'll have time to visit with some friends you haven't seen in a while. It's a day of personal popularity for you. Romance is highlighted, too.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)

You'll be following up on a promising business development from yesterday. Couples will find time for each other. Inwardly you're very much at peace.

YOU BORN TODAY are perhaps more practical than the typical member of your sign. Though visionary in outlook, your natural common sense keeps your ideas down-to-earth. You are responsible with a willingness to work hard—and these two qualities are often the cornerstone of your success.

You are a practical idealist who can succeed in both the arts and sciences. You are also at home in the business world. Birthdate of: Charles Lindbergh, aviator; Ida Lupino, actress; and Betty Friedan, writer.
