Budget passed; universities net $23 million more

Coor: Funding must be steady

BY SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

The Arizona Legislature on Wednesday approved a budget that includes a $23 million funding increase for state universities.

While ASU and NAU officials said they were happy with the outcome of the vote, they added that they're concentrating on improvements in future budgets.

"The most important message for us to get out — not wanting to sound greedy or ungrateful — is to have everyone realize you cannot fix years of decline in salaries with one increase," ASU President Lattie Coor said.

In a vote that ran mostly along party lines, the Republican-dominated Arizona Senate and House of Representatives passed the $4.2 billion budget. The budget calls for nearly $550 million for state universities, a $23 million increase from last year.

The Senate voted 18-12 and the House 34-25.

When the final details are pinned down, Gov. Fife Symington is expected to sign the budget.

All state employees, including those at the universities, will receive a 5 percent salary increase under the budget. The increase will be given in two parts — one in July and the last

Clinton plan turning away from mission, Zah says in testimony

BY MIKA AKIKUNI
STATE PRESS

Under President Clinton's health care proposal, the government seems to be turning away from its mission to improve the health of the American Indian people, President Peterson Zah of the Navajo Nation said Wednesday in a hearing before the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs.

"I am very, very concerned, because one of the things that we've been trying to do over the years is to try to improve the health of the Indian people," Zah said. "And by what is happening now, it seems like we are (getting) away from that mission of having to improve the health of our Indian people in this country."

Zah said he is also bothered by the fact that government is using the tax payers' money to build an expensive health care facility (that costs nearly $30 million) in the Navajo reservation only for a half of the structure to be used by the Navajos.

Zah was one of 23 American Indian tribal leaders to testify in Phoenix at the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors' Auditorium in front of the committee, which is chaired by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz. The tribal leaders, representing Arizona's Indian tribes, spoke about the implications of the Health Care Reform for Arizona Indian health programs at the reservation and urban level. They also recommended additions to the current national health care proposals.

Congressmen Sam Coppersmith, D-Ariz., and Ed Pastor, D-Ariz., attended the hearing as well.

Student legislators plan to pull funds from UofA Greeks

Gender-based membership selection at center of proposal's grievances

BY PAUL MATTHEWS
STATE PRESS

Members of ASU's Greek system and student government reacted with mixed feelings Wednesday to a UofA student government proposal that would bar funds for fraternities and sororities that have gender-based membership.

UofA's Central Governing Council decided against giving student funds to a fraternity for its members to attend a leadership conference, based on the fact that the fraternity does not adhere to the school's nondiscrimination policy.

UofA students Daniel McGee and Naomi Mudge favored the decision and decided to take it one step further. They attempted to make it law and proposed the new legislation.

Vicky Sjong, president of UofA's Pan Hellenic, the sororities' governing body, said there is no gender-based discrimination in the Greek system because there are organizations for each sex.

"There's just as much opportunity for each group to get involved," Sjong said.

But Mudge disagreed.

"Either you support discrimination in different degrees or you don't," she said.

Members of the ASU Greek system said the issue isn't so much the university's decision not to fund the Greeks, but the reasons behind the decision.

"If they're funding student groups except the Greeks, then it's wrong," said Mitch Daugherty, ASU Interfraternity Council treasurer.

in April, 1995.

An additional $5 million has been set aside for bringing faculty salaries up to market value.

Coor said although he is happy with the results of the budget process, steady progress in raising salaries should be attempted, rather than having dry years with cuts and years when salaries are bumped up.

Sharon Marmaduke, NAU budget director, said the budget looks good, but there are still holes.

"Generally, we are pleased with the numbers," she said. "We're especially pleased with state employees getting a 5 percent increase."

But NAU requested $4.3 million for faculty salary equity and received only $700,000, she said.

Marmaduke said there is a lot of ground to make up on faculty salaries to keep teachers from leaving the university.

Richard Roberts, chief budget officer at UofA, declined to make any comments on the specific budget numbers. Other UofA administrators did not return repeated calls.

underfunded, understaffed, and overutilized," said Hopi Tribal Council Chairman Ferrell Secakuku. "Therefore, we do not support or condone the actions now being taken by the Clinton Administration through the reduction of staff and funds to the Indian health programs."

ASU junior architecture major Sheldon Preston agreed with Secakuku, saying that IHS hospitals are not as good as other hospitals.

"My friends always joke about IHS hospitals," said Hughes, an American Indian. "They say you have to wait in big lines before you can even be seen by a doctor."

Preston said he would rather go to a regular hospital than to go through the IHS.

"I know that in regular hospitals they will treat me better than in IHS," he said.

Secakuku said funds are needed on Indian reservations to upgrade health care facilities to replace outdated health care centers. He also said more staff are needed to work in those centers.

"The present restructuring is moving counter to what is needed," Secakuku said. "Instead of moving to prepare for an increase on our health personnel, we are reducing personnel to further jeopardize the unrealistic ideal for improving services."

According to Secakuku, IHS will face a $247 million reduction. In addition, it will have to absorb 45 percent of the Department of Health and Human Services personnel reduction.

"This is grossly unfair, since the IHS budget is only 2 percent of the total HHS budget," Secakuku said.

Architecture, said men and women have equal opportunity to become members of the Greek system and therefore he doesn't think they violate the discrimination law.

"If there was only male fraternities and no female sororities then I would have a problem," he said.

Mike Eckel, a former Theta Chi Fraternity president, said fraternities are generally self-sufficient and don't need money from student government.

"It would be stupid for student government to fund an organization that can fund itself," Eckel said.

PBS programs' sexual content under fire by citizens' group

PHOENIX (AP) — The Public Broadcasting System should no longer be subsidized by taxpayers because it airs nudity, explicit sex, profanity and programs that promote homosexuality, a citizens' group said Wednesday.

The organization, Americans for Decency-American Family Association in Arizona, complained that a program broadcast in January by KAET-TV and other PBS stations, "Tales of the City," was illustrative of "the kind of sexually explicit, anti-family, profane material being shown on PBS."

The six-part miniseries based on a book by Armistead Maupin portrayed the singles scene — both heterosexual and homosexual — in San Francisco in the 1970s.

Because of such programs, public funding for PBS should be cut off and support left to donations from those who back its programming, the organization's executive director, T.C. Bundy, said.

Tax cut passes through Senate, awaits governor's approval

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Fife Symington's $100 million income-tax cut passed the Senate Wednesday and now needs only the governor's signature to become law.

The income-tax cut is part of a tax-relief package that also would freeze the phase-out of the homeowners' property-tax rebate, which is scheduled to disappear in 2001, and cut some business taxes beginning next year.

The income-tax cut would amount to a little over $100 for a family of four with a federal adjusted gross income of $30,000.

Democrats had questioned the wisdom of cutting taxes so deeply. They argued that the cuts could erode the state's revenue base so that programs would have to be cut or taxes raised again in future years.

AZ Gubernatorial candidate seeks ban on assault weapons

TUCSON (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Paul Johnson accused Gov. Fife Symington and the Legislature Wednesday of "felony indifference" for their failure to regulate the sale of semiautomatic assault weapons in Arizona.

Johnson displayed a "TEC-9" — a small, 9 mm assault weapon — as he called on Symington, a Republican, and the GOP-controlled Legislature "to regulate the private ownership and transfer of these weapons now."

"If this governor won't act and this Legislature won't act now, next January, I will," Johnson said.

He said semiautomatic assault weapons should be subject to the same regulation as machine guns and other fully automatic weapons. That would require registration, fingerprinting, photographing and running criminal background checks on anyone who owns, buys or sells such a weapon, Johnson said.

Palestinian school children walk past flatbed trucks moving pre-fabricated office buildings out of Israeli army installations in the Israeli occupied Gaza Strip Wednesday. At least 70 percent of military gear has been removed.

Israelis pull troops from Gaza

Local Palestinians remain suspicious

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — The forest of antennas and military tents that sprouted up in downtown Gaza are gone, a sign of Israel's preparations for an imminent pullout.

Hisham Abdel-Razzak, the top PLO official in Gaza, estimated that the Israelis have removed about 70 percent of their equipment from Arab towns in the Gaza Strip and will be ready to withdraw immediately once an agreement is signed.

"Their withdrawal will be much quicker than anybody expects. It will take place in a matter of hours," Abdel-Razzak said Wednesday.

A Defense Ministry official confirmed that the army had reduced its presence by as much as 90 percent.

But for most of Gaza's nearly one million Palestinian residents, seeing is not believing.

Weary of long-delayed promises of a withdrawal, they look at the changes with suspicion. Incidents, such as the army killing of six armed Fatah activists Monday, deepen their mistrust.

"We haven't noticed any changes since the Israelis began their pullout," said Hussam Jamil, 21, a boutique owner. "The army is still in the streets, carrying out the same old practices — shooting, arresting, beating."

Also, Palestinian and Western observers note that the number of troops in the strip has not changed much, only the infrastructure has moved.

"They have withdrawn buildings and tents, but the army has not been pulled out," said Ali Sharqawi, 49, a shoe store owner.

Talks on Israel's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho were halted when a Jewish settler massacred 30 Palestinians in a Hebron mosque Feb. 25.

Israel was supposed to begin implementing the agreement on Dec. 13 and complete the withdrawal by April 13. There are halting attempts in Cairo to get the talks restarted.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres hinted Wednesday that Israel might withdraw from the strip even before an agreement is concluded. Asked by Israel television if it would consider such a unilateral move, Peres said: "every reasonable proposal will be judged thoroughly."

"Not only are the Palestinians interested in entering soon, we too are interested in transferring authority to them soon," Peres said.

The army has been quietly dismantling its operations in the strip's Arab centers after nearly three decades of violent occupation that has resulted in the deaths of hundreds of Palestinians and at least 20 Israeli soldiers.

But critics of the autonomy accord call it a redeployment rather than a withdrawal. Although structures like prisons are gone, the army is moving much of the infrastructure to new camps around the 16 settlements in the Gaza Strip. It will continue to protect them and the main arteries leading to them. Israel says the settlements will stay put for at least five years.

Clinton signs law to pare bureaucracy

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — President Clinton signed legislation Wednesday allowing the government to offer its workers buyouts of up to $25,000 if they resign or retire.

The new law is part of an effort to pare the federal work force by nearly 12 percent over five years.

"After all the rhetoric about cutting the size and cost of government, our administration has done the hard work and made the tough choices," Clinton said in a statement.

The law should reduce federal employment by 272,900 by the end of fiscal 1999, dropping the size of the federal bureaucracy below 2 million for the first time since 1966 and to its lowest level since 1950.

Clinton signed the legislation while vacationing in Southern California.

"Agencies need the cost-effective incentives provided in this bill in order to avoid excessive reductions in force that are costly, disruptive and disproportionately strike younger workers, many of whom are recently hired women and minorities," Clinton said. "With the 'buyout' authority granted by this legislation, agencies can target employees in unnecessary high-level jobs and maximize savings."

Budget Director Leon Panetta, in a statement released in California, said the law means the government is "going to be more lean, and it is going to be more responsive." It also will allow the government to minimize the use of layoffs that primarily hit "the most recent, youngest, lowest-paid employees, including a high proportion of women and minorities," he said.

Under the bill, a federal worker who has completed 12 months of continuous service could take severance pay or a lump sum of $25,000 — whichever is less — upon leaving the government.

The employee-buyout plan gained wide bipartisan support after it became evident that the reduction goals would not be reached through other means such as attrition or involuntary dismissals. Congressional investigators concluded that involuntary dismissals would disproportionately affect minorities and women.

Also Wednesday, Panetta announced that the Clinton administration had eliminated 284 federal advisory committees, exceeding its goal of a one-third cut in advisory committees not required by law.

Examples of those eliminated as part of a campaign to cut excessive bureaucracy include the Advisory Committee on Publications Subvention and the Advisory Panel on Dictionary of Occupational Titles.

Panetta said the government would save $17 million by eliminating the 284 committees.

U.S. woman beaten in Guatemalan "babysnatching" hysteria

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — An Alaska woman caught up in hysteria over rumors that Americans are stealing children was transferred to a hospital in the capital Wednesday after suffering severe injuries at the hands of a rural mob.

The condition of Diane Werntock Jung, 52, was described by her physician as "rather bad."

The State Department warned Americans on Wednesday to exercise caution in traveling in Guatemala because of "the hysteria that has come about."

Ms. Jung was the third foreigner known to have been attacked in Guatemala in recent days over rumors that children are being stolen. Some versions allege foreigners are taking children to sell body parts for transplant operations.

U.S. officials say no evidence has been found to support the stories.

"All Guatemalans must take responsibility," said Salvador Figueroa, the head of Guatemala's national police. "Information about child-stealing has been manipulated by the local press. There have been very few thefts and most have been resolved."

Ms. Jung was attacked Tuesday in the northern town of San Cristobal after a peasant woman screamed that the American had tried to steal her 8-year-old boy. She took refuge in a judge's office in the municipal building but was assaulted by a mob of hundreds of Guatemalans with sticks, clubs, machetes and stones.

She initially was taken to a hospital in Coban, about 75 miles from the capital, and diagnosed with eight stab wounds, a broken arm and a probable fractured skull.

The 8-year-old she was accused of stealing turned up later at a Holy Week celebration.

The army sent soldiers to San Cristobal and about 15 people were arrested.

STATE PRESS Editorial

Excessive correctness

Just about everyone would agree that discrimination is bad, right?

Outside of the occasional fanatical bigot, most people will agree (at least on a surface level) that sexism, racism, religious and cultural bigotry and affiliated biases are unacceptable concepts in modern American society. (Of course, they all still seem to abound, but that's another editorial).

UofA student legislators probably had this in mind when they decided this week to attack the forces of discrimination marshalled on their Tucson campus: to wit, by proposing that UofA fraternities and sororities which have a "gender-based membership" — in other words, nearly the entire Greek system — be ineligible to receive funds from Associated Students of the UofA.

Oooh. Brilliant. Let's prove how good it is to not be discriminatory by deliberately not giving funds to certain Greek organizations; wrong plus wrong equals political correctness.

The rationale for all this fuss is that the chief components of the Greek system — the all-male fraternities and the all-female sororities — are discriminatory if they do not let members of the opposite sex join. At the very best, the argument would go, the Greek system is segregated between the sexes.

Of course, whether or not a tangible policy of discrimination exists is something else. For one, the number of men wishing to join sororities or the number of women wishing to join fraternities isn't exactly legion. Who's being excluded?

And within the system as a whole, it would seem that both men and women have equal opportunities. Opportunities to make friends, exhibit leadership (and the rest of the spiel that Greeks make whenever they tout the system) can be found no matter which sex one happens to be.

Sure, there may be forms of discrimination going on in the Greek systems across America. And there are accusations of problems of hazing, racism and irresponsibility.

But this proposal is ludicrous.

And in any case, the means the two UofA students who introduced the bill are using to combat "discrimination" are pretty dubious. Withholding funds isn't exactly likely to be a deathblow to the Greek system; the fraternities and sororities — which are generally self-supporting entities — don't exactly request a lot of funding from ASUA as it is.

But, in the interests of holding the moral high ground, the UofA senators have brought out their legislation.

Let's just hope this absurd "discriminatory" mindset stays where it originated — at UofA.

Plague of rude, crude preachers has descended upon Cady Mall

Before the world began, God held a pebble in one hand. He called me before his throne and he asked me which hand the pebble was in. I guessed wrong so I was sentenced to life on Earth. That's my theory of creation.

My mom is devoutly religious. She organized a coalition of Catholic teachers who teach in public school. On the other hand, my father is an atheist. Somewhere in between, I believe in God, but I think he has a strange sense of humor. That's because I've watched evangelists set some very bad examples. Some of the worst examples happen daily on Cady Mall.

I was first introduced to a Cady Mall preacher the day I registered for ASU. He greeted me quicker than the ASU parking problem. He was six feet tall and he hadn't changed his outfit or brushed his teeth in weeks. The man walked up to me and said, "Jesus loves you." I was raised Catholic, attended ten years of religious education and almost every church retreat, so I replied, "I know."

At first, it amused me to watch long-haired students in AC/DC T-shirts trade insults with these preachers. It also amused when I boarded the tram and could still hear the preachers, who were standing several hundred yards away by the MU fountain. I can cope with their screams. I can cope with them singing "Amazing Grace" three steps out of key.

And I can also cope with God never sending a lightning bolt when I ask for it.

But, since then, two preachers have interrupted my studies, three preachers have insulted my honesty, and several have harassed my friends. And quite frankly, I'm sick of listening to them whine.

Then, last week, I saw some things that literally scared me. A lady actually gave her number to a preacher and inquired about religious services. Who knows where these preachers come from or where they would bring converts? Remember Waco? Cults would love to recruit on college campuses. And while legitimate clergymen spend years in college or seminary before they begin preaching, the only qualification for preaching on Cady Mall is having too much free time. Don't forget, ASU already has a safety problem.

The Campus Environment Team has looked into moving the preachers off Cady Mall since last October. But it won't happen because they have freedom of speech. I don't think they should be moved off campus, but several of the preachers really need to take a course in manners. It can be done. ASU ordered former ASASU Vice President Kate Lawrence to take a course in manners last year. And I believe these preachers need the class more than she did.

Why? Last week, I saw a preacher yell, "You had better listen," at a bicyclist riding toward Gammage auditorium. The preacher was yelling loudly and right into the cyclist's face. The cyclist not only listened — he almost fell over. Had he fallen, he could easily have broken a leg. This kind of behavior is dangerous, and it has no place on campus.

Predictably, I've heard these preachers say that God hates Jews and homosexuals. A wise priest once told me, "Do not take the lord's name in vain," means never preach hate in God's name. That's because, "Created in God's image" means created with the capacity to love. And everything created with that capacity deserves the utmost respect, including all the students on campus. So I was offended as I observed several preachers yell, "slut" indiscriminately at any woman who passed by them.

How does a self-declared evangelist know anything about a woman's personal life without knowing her personally? Remember, we live in a society where AIDS has become an epidemic. The students here are honestly concerned with their health. All female students couldn't summarily be sluts, even if they all wanted to. One preacher told me that's what AIDS is, punishment us for our immoral behavior.

Get this straight, AIDS is not the wrath of God. And if you're stupid enough to believe that you're immune because God likes the group you belong to, then you belong to the highest-risk group of all.

Now consider this: If I picked any student at random and called her a slut, in public, then I would get my face slapped, in public. Moreover, I would deserve it. Then I might be slapped with a sexual harassment lawsuit. Slander is not OK because a self-declared evangelist spreads it in the name of God. Besides, as I remember, Jesus never judged anyone. I'll spare you the story about the Jesus and the adulteress. I'm sure you've heard it.

But, alas, I know campus evangelists will remain long after I graduate. And I doubt they'll ever change their tactics. In fact, when I return for my master's degree, they'll probably be holding up this column and saying, "We're still here."

Guns create oppressive atmosphere in America

People in Japan are being told America is a dangerous place. The land of the free and the home of the brave is no longer viewed as the land of opportunity by visionaries, because regardless of our theories of freedom, no one in this country can be free until they are free of the fear of violence.

Over the weekend, two Japanese students were shot in the head and killed. For what? Their car. The shooting is nothing new here, there are probably several across the country each weekend.

And cars are not the least of what people are being randomly killed for. Some have cool jackets, others annoy people at a gas station or cut someone off on the freeway.

I'll admit I've felt the driving rage before. It's dangerous for someone to cut you off, ride your bumper or just plain drive like a general maniac. But killing someone for this? That thought has never even crossed my mind.

Unfortunately, America has given its citizens so much freedom that many possess guns in their homes, in their cars, and on their persons. I find it unnerving to walk into a store and see someone carrying a gun. Could this guy fly off the handle if I beat him to the check out line? What if I take the last blue-light special item?

My conservative upbringing (which I've been fighting for years) is still with me on this point, though. There is a reason we all have guns. Our Constitution gives us that right. And someone who makes a living because a Constitutional right exists cannot take any freedom it offers lightly.

The Second Amendment gives us the right to bear arms, but all of the National Rifle Association's public relations budget for 10 years couldn't convince me for a minute that it was included to preserve the right to go hunting. This is a silly argument. Hunting is not necessary for survival, it is a leisure and recreation, and a warped one at that. But for those of you with your assault rifles poised to go kill animals who are unarmed and unexpected, unfortunately your Constitution protects you in that endeavor.

MELANIE SELCHO

I would argue that the real reason we have the right to bear arms is to revolt against our government, something the revolutionaries way back then considered. So we won't be as helpless as the students fighting in Tiananmen Square, our predecessors made sure the government would not have too much control over us.

Because this noble thought appealed to my visionary and idealistic nature, I believed this right should preclude gun control. Until I started paying attention to what is going on in my world.

Now, I find the idea of guns revolting. They are made for only one purpose, to kill. And they make that task rather easy. And our society has "progressed" to the point where anyone can and does get one and can take it legally practically anywhere.

Now that I see kids killing other kids over less than a hundred dollars, over an argument about a Nintendo game, or over a pair of Air Jordans. Now I see childish adults killing other adults because someone beat them to the gas tank, because someone cut them off on the freeway or because someone has a cool car. It's ridiculous, but it's American.

None of our industrialized allies have this problem. Look at Canada, Japan, Great Britain, etc. While not all of these countries have strict gun control, their society has obviously adapted quite well to the right to own a gun. Ours has not.

Thus, we must follow the lead of others. Those countries who do have strict gun control also don't have the problems we have, yet they aren't under complete government control in other areas of life.

The need for guns is no longer apparent. A handgun can hardly combat our government's armor and weaponry. And no one is fighting governmental control on I-10.

Surely the right must be preserved, but there must be more limits. No right in this country is absolute. Freedom of speech, religion, the press all have limits imposed for the betterment of society as a whole. These limits are still imposed even if the speech is intended to make government more accountable to the people. The right to own a gun should be no different. Even though sometimes that right may be ideally sound, limits must be imposed to ensure the safety and freedom of others.

The emotions that lead to the shootings and killings are unpreventable, but what we can and should prevent is for a gun to be handy while someone is feeling rage or jealousy. It is no longer a surprise when people react so quickly. Most have never killed before, never seen someone die before, and don't know the aftermath of murder. A gun in their hands makes it too easy. And afterwards, they may wish that it wouldn't have been so convenient.

But in a society where instant gratification prevails, where what we watch and hear all around us tells us that guns solve problems and protect us, it shouldn't surprise us when we give in to our anger or envy and take the only solution we've learned is appropriate.

In a society where instant gratification prevails, where what we watch and hear all around us tells us that guns solve problems and protect us, it shouldn't surprise us when we give in to our anger or envy and take the only solution we've learned is appropriate. Shooting.

Shooting.

This is why no one has any business owning a gun. Guns don't protect people, even most police officers advise people not to own them as a protector.

Most importantly, if we don't control our guns or our tempers, no one is free. We are not free to own nice clothes, nice homes or nice cars. We are not free to stop at a rest stop, go to the grocery store or the mall.

This intimidation guns have is far more restrictive than any gun control law.

Boo — to Press' inaccurate Boos & Bravos of March 25

On Friday, March 25, the State Press Editorial Board awarded a "bravo" to the law students who protested at the law school on Wednesday, March 23. In justifying your "bravo," you indicated — incorrectly — that the law school has had only one African American faculty member in its 27-year history.

On Thursday, March 24, your paper reported that the law school has had two tenured African Americans on its faculty. One was a full professor who served on the faculty for 25 years until his retirement and the other was also a full professor at the time of his departure for an Eastern law school. In addition, a third African American was an associate professor who left for personal and family reasons after several years service at the law school. Although there are no African Americans now on our faculty, we do have other minority faculty members, and we have made substantial efforts to recruit minority faculty.

The writer of your "bravos" apparently does not read your newspaper. Boo.

Scholarship office fails in keeping students informed

As pre-registration began I sat down to choose my fall classes. The farthest thought from my mind was how I was going to pay for next semester and the semester after that. Although many may think that I was crazy for my carefree attitude, I was the victim of a very thoughtless organization.

During my senior year of high school I frantically applied for scholarships and other sources of financial aid to lift the burden of funding my own education. One of the scholarships that I applied for was the Tempe Diablos Scholarship. I was thrilled when I was awarded the largest award. I was also told that it was "renewable" each year.

The Tempe Diablos Scholarship is only given to students who decide to go to Arizona State University. Although I had been accepted to an out-of-state university, I believed that I had a full four-year scholarship to Arizona State University and thus I decided to go to ASU.

A few days ago I went to ASU's scholarship office for a "renewal" application for my Tempe Diablos Scholarship and was given the phone number of the person I needed to contact. Dr. Shell, associate vice-president of student affairs and a member of the Tempe Diablos, was the man I was told to contact. Shell told me things that I was astonished to hear.

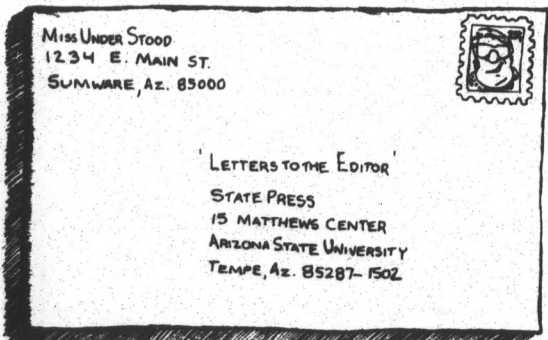

Evidently, Tempe Diablos scholarships are far from "renewable." An entirely new application must be made and the selection process begins again. Out of the 70 continuing students that apply only about "25-30 students," according to Shell, actually receive the scholarship again. Shell also told me that I was not the only person who was misinformed about this process, but that I was mistaken to believe that my education was going to be paid for.

Upon calling ASU's scholarship office to find out if they were aware of this general misunderstanding, they were clueless. They had no idea about anything having to do with the Tempe Diablos scholarship program. Is it just me or should they have at least an iota of knowledge about scholarships even if they are privately funded? As long as a scholarship is given to students at Arizona State University, no matter what its origin, the Arizona State University scholarship office should be familiar with it to help students who have the potential of being totally (for lack of a better phrase) screwed over.

The Tempe Diablos scholarship program helps students start college financially, but it does not help students continue and finish college. For those of us who were misinformed, we can re-apply for next year — next October. If we are the "25-30 students" (less than half of us) who are awarded a continuing student scholarship, we will get it next March. Yee-haw.

ASU police release details of August rape

By PAUL MATTHEWS
STATE PRESS

ASU police released details Tuesday related to an on-campus sexual assault complaint filed by an ASU student on Sunday.

The student alleges that on or about August 29, 1993, she met a man at a local Tempe bar. A week later she agreed to meet him in the lobby of Sahuaro Hall and the two went to the Vine Tavern for drinks.

Afterwards, the man walked her back to Sahuaro Hall where she left him in the lobby and returned to her room. The man returned a short time later and knocked on her door. After the two exchanged words, the man reportedly forced his way into her room and sexually assaulted her.

The victim said she only knew the man as "Matt."

ASU police detective Kay Gojkovich said the case remains under investigation.

WOULD YOU RATHER THINK ABOUT BIRTH CONTROL 365 TIMES A YEAR...

OR 4 TIMES A YEAR?

Many women wish they didn't have to remember their birth control every day. If you're one of them, you might want to know about Depo-Provera.

Some of the benefits of Depo-Provera.

Depo-Provera is an injection you get from your doctor or nurse, every three months. When taken as scheduled—just 4 times a year—it's more than 99% effective. So it's one of the most reliable contraceptives available.

Depo-Provera has been used for many years by millions of women in countries like England, France and Sweden. And Depo-Provera is reversible. Once you stop using it, you can usually become pregnant within one year. Depo-Provera from Upjohn is a prescription product that costs about the same per year as birth control pills.

But before you consider any birth control method, you should discuss the risks and benefits with your healthcare professional.

Some of the side effects of Depo-Provera.

Most women experience irregular or unpredictable menstrual bleeding and weight gain. With continued use, many women stop having monthly periods, but your healthcare professional can explain why this happens and that it is not a medical problem. Use of Depo-Provera may be associated with a decrease in the amount of mineral stored in your bones, which may be considered among the risk factors for development of osteoporosis.

Depo-Provera is not right for every woman.

Women with a family or personal history of breast cancer, blood clots, liver disease, or those who think they might be pregnant, should not use Depo-Provera.

Remember, Depo-Provera does not protect against sexually transmitted diseases.

But it does provide highly reliable birth control you only have to think about 4 times a year. If you have any questions or concerns, talk to your healthcare professional.

Depo-Provera Contraceptive Injection is available at the Arizona State University, at Tempe, Health Center.

ASASU to seek student opinions

BY GREG ZEMEIDA
STATE PRESS

How do you feel about the Associated Students of ASU?

- They're doing a great job.
- They could be doing better.
- They need to make major changes.
- Throw the bums out!

Students will get a chance to answer questions like this, along with many others, if they participate in an ASASU survey to be run in the State Press during ASASU election week.

ASASU will spend $2,448 for three full-page ads to run the survey. It will appear in the April 12-14 issues of the State Press. The purpose of the survey is to gain students' views of services received from ASASU and the University as a whole.

"We also want to get people's perceptions of student government; how they can fix it," said ASASU Senator Suma Mathai. "Maybe (the survey will) spark some interest; get people involved."

Mathai said she wants to hear the good and the bad comments from students.

"I'm hoping that at least the people who are (now) complaining the loudest will respond," she said. "I'm pretty sure that most people who respond will have a variety of negative things to say, but that's good."

"That's how we fix ourselves."

The results will be passed along to the various ASASU departments and reviewed to determine if any changes need to be made, Mathai said.

Shppard Wolf, director of the ASU Survey Research Laboratory, said the ASASU survey may not be an accurate way to measure ASU students' opinions. One problem with a newspaper survey, he said, is that not everyone's views will be represented because only a certain segment of the population responds.

He said the money set aside for the survey would be better spent if ASASU conducted random phone or face-to-face interviews to learn about students' feelings; that would be the best way to obtain a representative sample of ASU students.

ASASU would have to randomly contact at least 1600 students to get an error margin of plus or minus three percent, Wolf said.

ASASU Senator Jason Rupp said he thinks the survey is a good idea in principle, but in reality it may not be the best method to gain student input.

"Unfortunately, there is a lot of apathy on this campus and it's very hard to receive information," he said. "Hopefully the students will, instead of taking a couple of minutes to call us and actually tell us what's wrong, actually write it down."

ASASU Senator Sean Wander said ASASU expects to receive responses totaling at least half of the State Press daily circulation, or about 9,000 respondents.

Valley shoppers rush to cash in on quadruple coupon craze

BY NOELLE KNOTT
STATE PRESS

Valley shoppers are clipping papers like mad and heading out to their nearest grocery stores to cash in on quadruple savings on coupons.

The latest craze in grocery store wars started Wednesday when Valley stores began frantically offering triple and even quadruple value on manufacturers' coupons to attract more customers.

"I thought the stores' doubling of coupons was great," said Heather Boulier, a shopper at Smith's Food and Drug on Rural Road in Tempe. "But, getting triple their value is just fantastic."

There is one catch, however. Stores are only cashing in coupons to a maximum of $1. While "quadruple-value" may sound great to shoppers, in reality they aren't getting full value on all coupons they bring in. For instance, if shoppers bring coupons worth 50¢ to Safeway, they should save $2. But, because of the $1 maximum, they actually are only getting double-coupon savings.

"I'm glad there's so much competition between stores because it just means more savings for me," said Glen Knowles, an ASU graduate student. "The more money I can knock off of my grocery bill, the more money I have for other things like tuition and rent."

Maricopa County has eight major grocery chains, so competition among Valley stores has been fierce for some time. However, Safeway's quadruple-coupon policy is a first for the Valley.

"There's a lot of people in here today," said Carol Pitchkolan, assistant manager for the Tempe Safeway on Warner Road and McClintock Drive. "We've been flooded with calls from people making sure that we really are offering quadruple-value on coupons. It's definitely increased our business."

However, stores could multiply coupons 20 times and it still wouldn't help some people save money.

"I don't use coupons," said Tia Carnes, an exercise science and photography major at ASU. "I can't afford to buy the Sunday paper, so the whole double and triple coupon frenzy doesn't help me one bit. I wish stores would just lower their prices instead of using all these gimmicks."

However, gimmicks are what advertising is all about and seeing consumers armed with coupons and ads just reinforces it.

"I just went grocery shopping, but I think I'm going to take my coupons to Safeway and pick up a few more things before the quadrupling ends Tuesday," said Stacy Schrage, an agricultural business major at ASU.

Depo-Provera®

Contraceptive Injection (sterile medroxyprogesterone acetate suspension, USP)

WHAT IS DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is a form of birth control that is given as an intramuscular injection (a shot) in the buttock or upper arm once every 3 months. To continue your contraceptive protection, you must return for your next injection promptly at the end of 3 months. DEPO-PROVERA contains medroxyprogesterone acetate, a chemical similar to (but not the same as) the natural hormone progesterone, which is produced by your ovaries during the second half of your menstrual cycle. DEPO-PROVERA acts by preventing your egg cells from ripening. If an egg is not released from the ovaries during your menstrual cycle, it cannot become fertilized by sperm and result in pregnancy. DEPO-PROVERA also causes changes in the lining of your uterus that make it less likely for pregnancy to occur.

HOW EFFECTIVE IS DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

DEPO-PROVERA is over 99% effective, making it one of the most reliable methods of birth control available. This means that the average annual pregnancy rate is less than one for every 100 women who use DEPO-PROVERA. The effectiveness of most contraceptive methods depends in part on how reliably each woman uses the method. The effectiveness of DEPO-PROVERA depends only on the patient returning every 3 months for her next injection. Your health-care provider will help you compare DEPO-PROVERA with other contraceptive methods and give you the information you need in order to decide which contraceptive method is the right choice for you.

The following table shows the percent of women who got pregnant while using different kinds of contraceptive methods. It gives both the lowest expected rate of pregnancy (the rate expected in women who use each method exactly as it should be used) and the typical rate of pregnancy (which includes women who became pregnant because they forgot to use their birth control or because they did not follow the directions exactly).

WHO SHOULD NOT USE DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

Not all women should use DEPO-PROVERA. You should not use DEPO-PROVERA if you think you might be pregnant, have any vaginal bleeding without a known reason, have had cancer of the breast, have had a stroke, have or have had blood clots (phlebitis) in your legs, have problems with your liver or liver disease, or are allergic to DEPO-PROVERA (medroxyprogesterone acetate or any of its other ingredients). You will have a physical examination before your doctor prescribes DEPO-PROVERA. It is important to tell your doctor if you are taking any prescription or over-the-counter medications or if you have a family history of breast cancer; an abnormal mammogram (breast x-ray), fibrocystic breast disease, breast nodules or lumps, or bleeding from your nipples; kidney disease; irregular or scanty menstrual periods; high blood pressure; migraine headaches; asthma; epilepsy (convulsions or seizures); diabetes or a family history of diabetes; or a history of depression.

WHAT IF I WANT TO BECOME PREGNANT AFTER USING DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

Because DEPO-PROVERA is a long-acting birth control method, it takes some time after your last injection for its effect to wear off. Based on the results from a large study done in the United States, for women who stop using DEPO-PROVERA in order to become pregnant, it is expected that about half of those who become pregnant will do so in about 10 months after their last injection; about two thirds of those who become pregnant will do so in about 12 months; about 83% of those who become pregnant will do so in about 15 months; and about 93% of those who become pregnant will do so in about 18 months after their last injection. The length of time you use DEPO-PROVERA has no effect on how long it takes you to become pregnant after you stop using it.

WHAT ARE THE RISKS OF USING DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

1. Irregular Menstrual Bleeding
The side effect reported most frequently by women who use DEPO-PROVERA for contraception is a change in their normal menstrual cycle. During the first year of using DEPO-PROVERA, you might have one or more of the following changes: irregular or unpredictable bleeding or spotting, an increase or decrease in menstrual bleeding, or no bleeding at all. Unusually heavy or continuous bleeding, however, is not a usual effect of DEPO-PROVERA, and if this happens, you should see your health-care provider right away. With continued use of DEPO-PROVERA, bleeding usually decreases, and many women stop having periods completely. In clinical studies of DEPO-PROVERA, 57% of the women studied reported no menstrual bleeding (amenorrhea) after 1 year of use, and 88% of the women studied reported no menstrual bleeding after 2 years of use. The reason that your periods stop is because DEPO-PROVERA causes a resting state in your ovaries. When your ovaries do not release an egg monthly, the regular monthly growth of the lining of your uterus does not occur and, therefore, the bleeding that comes with your normal menstruation does not take place. When you stop using DEPO-PROVERA your menstrual period will usually, in time, return to its normal cycle.

2. Bone Mineral Changes

Use of DEPO-PROVERA may be associated with a decrease in the amount of mineral stored in your bones. This could increase your risk of developing bone fractures. The rate of bone mineral loss is greatest in the early years of DEPO-PROVERA use, but after that, it begins to resemble the normal rate of age-related bone mineral loss.

3. Cancer

Studies of women who have used different forms of contraception found that women who used DEPO-PROVERA for contraception had no increased overall risk of developing cancer of the breast, ovary, uterus, cervix, or liver. However, women under 35 years of age whose first exposure to DEPO-PROVERA was within the previous 4 years may have a slightly increased risk of developing breast cancer similar to that seen with oral contraceptives. You should discuss this with your health-care provider.

4. Accidental Pregnancy

Because DEPO-PROVERA is such an effective contraceptive method, the risk of accidental pregnancy for women who get their shots regularly (every 3 months) is very low. While there have been reports of an increased risk of low birth weight and neonatal infant death or other health problems in infants conceived close to the time of injection, such pregnancies are rare. If you think you may have become pregnant while using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception, see your health-care provider as soon as possible.

5. Other Risks

Women who use hormone-based contraceptives may have an increased risk of blood clots or stroke. Also, if a contraceptive method fails, there is a possibility that the fertilized egg will begin to develop outside of the uterus (ectopic pregnancy). While these events are rare, you should tell your health-care provider if you have any of the problems listed in the next section.

WHAT SYMPTOMS MAY SIGNAL PROBLEMS WHILE USING DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

Call your health-care provider immediately if any of these problems occur following an injection of DEPO-PROVERA: Sharp chest pain, coughing of blood, or sudden shortness of breath (indicating a possible clot in the lung); sudden severe headache or vomiting, dizziness or fainting, problems with your eyesight or speech, weakness, or numbness in an arm or leg (indicating a possible stroke); severe pain or swelling in the calf (indicating a possible clot in the leg); unusually heavy vaginal bleeding; severe pain or tenderness in the lower abdominal area; or persistent pain, pus, or bleeding at the injection site.

WHAT ARE THE POSSIBLE SIDE EFFECTS OF DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

1. Weight Gain

You may experience a weight gain while you are using DEPO-PROVERA. About two thirds of the women who used DEPO-PROVERA in clinical trials reported a weight gain of about 5 pounds during the first year of use. You may continue to gain weight after the first year. Women in one large study who used DEPO-PROVERA for 2 years gained an average total of 8.1 pounds over those 2 years, or approximately 4 pounds per year. Women who continued for 4 years gained an average total of 13.8 pounds over those 4 years, or approximately 3.5 pounds per year. Women who continued for 6 years gained an average total of 16.5 pounds over those 6 years, or approximately 2.75 pounds per year.

2. Other Side Effects

In a clinical study of over 3,900 women who used DEPO-PROVERA for up to 7 years, some women reported the following effects that may or may not have been related to their use of DEPO-PROVERA: Irregular menstrual bleeding, amenorrhea, headache, nervousness, abdominal cramps, dizziness, weakness or fatigue, decreased sexual desire, leg cramps, nausea, vaginal discharge or irritation, breast swelling and tenderness, bloating, swelling of the hands or feet, backache, depression, insomnia, acne, pelvic pain, no hair growth or excessive hair loss, rash, and hot flashes. Other problems were reported by very few of the women in the clinical trials, but some of these could be serious. These include convulsions, jaundice, urinary tract infections, allergic reactions, fainting, paralysis, osteoporosis, lack of return to fertility, deep vein thrombosis, pulmonary embolus, breast cancer, or cervical cancer. If these or any other problems occur during your use of DEPO-PROVERA, discuss them with your health-care provider.

SHOULD ANY PRECAUTIONS BE FOLLOWED DURING USE OF DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

1. Missed Periods

During the time you are using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception, you may skip a period, or your periods may stop completely. If you have been receiving your DEPO-PROVERA injections regularly every 3 months, then you are probably not pregnant. However, if you think that you may be pregnant, see your health-care provider.

2. Laboratory Test Interactions

If you are scheduled for any laboratory tests, tell your health-care provider that you are using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception. Certain blood tests are affected by hormones such as DEPO-PROVERA.

3. Drug Interactions

Cytadren (aminoglutethimide) is an anticancer drug that may significantly decrease the effectiveness of DEPO-PROVERA if the two drugs are given during the same time.

4. Nursing Mothers

Although DEPO-PROVERA can be passed to the nursing infant in the breast milk, no harmful effects have been found in these children. DEPO-PROVERA does not prevent the breasts from producing milk, so it can be used by nursing mothers. However, to minimize the amount of DEPO-PROVERA that is passed to the infant in the first weeks after birth, you should wait until 6 weeks after childbirth before you start using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception.

HOW OFTEN DO I GET MY SHOT OF DEPO-PROVERA CONTRACEPTIVE INJECTION?

The recommended dose of DEPO-PROVERA is 150 mg every 3 months given in a single intramuscular injection in the buttock or upper arm. To make sure that you are not pregnant at the time of the first injection, it is important that the injection be given only during the first 5 days after the beginning of a normal menstrual period. If used following the delivery of a child, the first injection of DEPO-PROVERA should be given within 5 days after childbirth if you are not breast-feeding or 6 weeks after childbirth if you are breast-feeding. If you wait longer than 3 months between injections, or longer than 6 weeks after childbirth, your health-care provider should determine that you are not pregnant before giving you your injection of DEPO-PROVERA.

Caution: Federal law prohibits dispensing without a prescription. You must see a doctor to receive a prescription.

This Old House Serves Great Food and a Lot of History!

A Scoundrel Visits "The Old House"

The name is La Casa Vieja ("the old house" in Spanish) - it was built in 1871. Known as Monti's La Casa Vieja, not only has it been one of Arizona's most popular restaurants for decades, "the old house" has witnessed endless chapters of Arizona history. Built by Charles Hayden, a man of rigorous morality, "the old house" was visited by James Reavis (the Baron of Arizona). Reavis falsely claimed ownership of a huge parcel of Arizona Territory that included all of what today is the metropolitan Phoenix area extending all the way east into New Mexico. When Reavis visited the Casa, upright Hayden refused to "shake hands with such as you." Then Hayden ordered Reavis out. Charles Hayden's son, Carl, was born here in "the old house." Carl Hayden went on to serve Arizona in Congress for over 50 Years.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Legendary TV moms Barbara Billingsley, Florence Henderson and June Lockhart will get together for a special Mother's Day episode of NBC-TV's The Mommies.

In the show airing during the May ratings sweeps period, stars of The Mommies anticipate the arrival of their mothers for a Mother's Day get-together.

The four mothers are played by Miss Billingsley (Leave It To Beaver), Miss Henderson (The Brady Bunch), Audra Lindley (Three's Company) and Miss Lockhart (Lassie).

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Jimmy Buffett normally visits Birmingham to sing. His latest trip was to get punched in the mouth.

Then he celebrated by singing.

The Mobile native was in Birmingham on Tuesday to play a small role in Cobb, the movie about baseball legend Ty Cobb that is being filmed at Birmingham's Rickwood Field. Tommy Lee Jones stars as Cobb.

Buffett portrays a one-armed man who heckled Cobb during a game on May 15, 1912, in New York between the Yankees and Cobb's Detroit Tigers.

"I just lost an arm between Key West and Birmingham," Buffett quipped as he prepared for his role. "I'm going to play tonight with a prosthetic. Can you put a guitar pick in it?"

On cue, Buffett started yelling insults at Jones. Jones jumped into the bleachers, grabbed Buffett by the lapels and pretended to belt him in the face.

The scene was filmed three times before

Buffett got to take off his costume and entertain the film's extras with a concert.

"You might not recognize me. ... I'm the guy Tommy beat the stuffing out of," he said. Only the balladeer of bars and beaches used a more colorful word than stuffing.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A businessman in trouble needed a character witness, not just a "Man With No Name," but longtime friend Clint Eastwood.

The 63-year-old filmmaker and actor testified Tuesday at the bank fraud trial of Pebble Beach Co. President Thomas Oliver. Eastwood said he had known Oliver for about 30 years and served on a number of boards with him.

"I've always found him extremely straightforward in any dealings I've had with him," Eastwood said.

On cross-examination, Eastwood acknowledged he knew nothing about the $400,000 loan from a Texas banker that led to criminal charges against Oliver.

BOSTON (AP) — He's played jazz, sung pop, acted — sort of — on Broadway. What's left for Sting, but to become Dr. Sting?

The former bass player and singer from the rock group the Police, will receive an honorary doctorate from Berklee College of Music when he delivers the commencement address May 15. Also honored will be jazz singer Nancy Wilson, the school announced.

Previous doctoral recipients include Duke Ellington, B.B. King, Sarah Vaughan, Dizzy Gillespie, Paul Simon, Billy Joel, Bonnie Raitt and Quincy Jones.

Braman may sell Eagles

Philadelphia Eagles owner Norman Braman will sell his team to Hollywood producer Jeffrey Lurie, sources who know Braman told The Associated Press Wednesday.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the deal was imminent. The Philadelphia Inquirer reported Wednesday that a $185 million deal had already been approved by senior NFL executives and could be completed by the weekend.

The price would be the highest ever paid for an NFL franchise. Braman, a Miami automobile tycoon, bought the team nine years ago for $65 million.

Lurie, 42, is the heir to a multimillion-dollar publishing and moviehouse fortune, but many observers question whether he can meet the debt that would come with a $185 million purchase price.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said during the meetings that Lurie would make an outstanding owner.

"He's a very substantial person with confidence, ability and integrity," Tagliabue said. "He runs a very substantial business. And he knows sports and the NFL."

Rockets, King hit in pockets

Houston teammates Carl Herrera, Vernon Maxwell and Olden Polynice of Sacramento were fined by the NBA Wednesday for their actions in Tuesday night's game between the Rockets and Kings.

Herrera and Polynice each received $5,000 fines and one-game suspensions for throwing punches and attempting to fight each other with 1:05 remaining in the first quarter of the Rockets' 122-101 victory.

Polynice will miss the Kings' Thursday home game against Atlanta. Herrera, who was ejected, drew an additional $250 fine, and was unavailable for the Rockets' Wednesday night game at Golden State.

Maxwell was fined $10,000 for failing to leave the court quickly, berating officials and throwing objects following his ejection with 13.6 seconds remaining in the second quarter.

Baseball looks to end road woes

Sun Devil left fielder Billy McGonigle is one of many potent hitters for the 10th-ranked ASU baseball team. McGonigle is batting .377, good enough to be tied for sixth in the Six-Pac. ASU and its .335 batting average begins a three-game series against slumping UCLA tonight in Los Angeles.

By MIKE BRANOM
STATE PRESS

The 10th-ranked ASU baseball team heads west to begin a three-game series against Six-Pac foe UCLA tonight, as the Sun Devils will try to improve both their conference standing and road record.

Whenever ASU (24-10 overall, 7-5 Six-Pac) has hit the road this season, the road has hit back to the tune of a 2-7 record. After a successful homestand — seven wins in eight games — the Sun Devils want to do something about their ineffectiveness away from Packard Stadium's friendly confines.

"It's time we changed it (our record)," said right fielder Scott Shores, who was named the Six-Pac's Player of the Week Tuesday. "There's no better place to change it than UCLA."

Shores has a point, as the Bruins (7-19, 3-6) are struggling, having lost 14 of their past 17 contests. However, UCLA has won at least one game in each of its conference series' to date.

Coach Jim Brock is concerned that the Bruins may be on the verge of an up-swing since giving conference-leading USC a challenge last weekend.

In the first game of the series, sophomore Brian Stephenson shut out the then-No. 1 Trojans, something no UCLA pitcher had done since 1976. Stephenson was honored by the conference for his accomplishment when he was named Six-Pac Pitcher of the Week. USC won the second game 1-0 when they scored an unearned run in the bottom of the ninth inning, then took the third game 7-2.

"UCLA, traditionally, does not get off to fast starts," said Brock, who will manage the team in this series after being sidelined for a week following outpatient surgery on his liver. "They usually play better in the middle of the year, which is even more extreme this year."

Shores said ASU cannot look at the Bruins' record before taking the field, saying the best way to handle UCLA is "don't think about it, don't take them for granted. We have to go out there and annihilate them."

Offensively, UCLA is led by David Roberts, one of the better lead-off batters in the conference. Roberts leads the Six-Pac in stolen bases with 23 and is tied for eighth in runs scored with 31. He is looking for a three-peat of the stolen base crown, winning it the last two seasons.

Sun Devil softball falls to Titans

Wednesday was a night of missed opportunities for the ASU softball team as the Sun Devils dropped a doubleheader to Cal State-Fullerton 6-1 and 7-3.

In the first game, the Sun Devils (16-23 overall) were down 5-1, and loaded the bases with no outs on two Titan errors and a single by Amy Day. Two batters later, Lisa Dacquist hit a single to center, which scored Mona Nard. But no other runs scored in the inning.

The second game had a similar occurrence, as the Sun Devils faced a 5-1 deficit in the fifth inning. Jodi Pirtle, a freshman Cal State Fullerton's Jstone Vines beats the throw to second as ASU's Amy Day reaches for the ball. The Sun Devils lost both games of the double-header.

I have questions; I want answers

I may be smiling in my photo, but don't assume I was doing so when I wrote this. I've got a lot to say and I have questions which demand answers.

•Well, I've seen the Laurie Vollen lawsuit and I've talked to a good many people in the athletic department. Do you know what time it is? It's time for Lattie and Charles to start making about $19 million worth of calls to the big-money boosters. There's been a full magazine of bullets ducked in the ICA building, but I think this one has a few names on it.

Oh, Lattie. When everything finally comes tumbling down, I really hope you don't pull an "I'm shocked, shocked that this was happening here!" act.

•Now that I've got everyone's attention, I'd like to ask a few questions. Sadly enough, I'm not holding my breath waiting for answers, since I've seen how skilled ASU is at stalling and stonewalling whenever the State Press asks for documents related to the Vollen case.

•What's the real story behind Mario Bennett's second knee surgery? According to Article 16.4.2.b of the NCAA's operating bylaws, it isn't permissible for ASU to pick up the tab for "surgical expenses to treat a student-athlete's illness or injury that was not a result of practice or participation in intercollegiate athletics at the institution."

If I remember correctly, Bennett tore up his knee playing in a pick-up game in Texas over the summer. Doesn't it sound like 16.4.2.b applies in this case?

Once again, if I remember correctly, Harris arranged for surgeons to donate time, equipment and talent to fix Bennett's knee. Would Harris do the same for Eli Lopez if he was injured in a pick-up game? Would Harris do the same for me?

•And when Crystal Cobb, shooting guard for the women's basketball team, blew out her knee before the 1992-93 season in a team practice on campus, why did Charles say ASU wouldn't cover her surgery? "Pre-existing condition," my eye.

•Why did Maura McHugh, last season's women's basketball coach, quit? She was on the cusp of putting together a program which could compete year-in and year-out. Is it because she wouldn't stand for the lousy treatment she got

Pac-10 honors ASU gymnasts

By JEREMY STEIN
STATE PRESS

Two members of the ASU women's gymnastics team were honored by the Pac-10 Conference Wednesday.

Juniors Tina Brinkman and Danna Lister were named to the 1994 Pac-10 All-Conference Team. Brinkman, who was an All-Pac-10 selection in both her freshman and sophomore years, was recognized for her outstanding performances in three events: vault, floor and all-around.

"To be honest, I was a little disappointed in my individual performance at the Pac-10s, mostly because of bars. But hearing that news (her All-Pac-10 selection), I guess puts a smile on my face," Brinkman said.

Lister is also a repeat selection to the team, having been honored her freshman year. Lister was one of three Pac-10 gymnasts to be named to this year's team on balance beam, an event where she scored two 10s this season.

"I'm happy. It's an honor," Lister said of her selection.

Former University of Oklahoma head coach Barry Switzer, left, visits with Jimmy Johnson at the Dallas Cowboys training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif., on Aug. 4, 1989, Johnson's first year with the Cowboys. Switzer was hired Wednesday to take over the reins of the Cowboys for Johnson, who quit Tuesday.

'Sooner' the better, Jones says

Switzer lassos Cowboys' job

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Barry Switzer, who left Oklahoma under a cloud five years ago, became coach of the Dallas Cowboys today, just a day after his archrival, Jimmy Johnson, quit the two-time Super Bowl champions.

Cowboys' owner Jerry Jones hired Switzer, his freshman football coach at the University of Arkansas, citing the need for "continuity and motivation."

Johnson resigned as coach Tuesday after five years with the Cowboys, a tenure that saw him win back-to-back Super Bowls despite a long-running feud with Jones.

Switzer, who has never coached in the NFL, said he wanted to return to the game he left abruptly in 1989.

"I missed football," he said. "I decided I'd rather coach. I give my commitment of loyalty, of excellence, of total commitment of making this program what it has been in the past and what it will be in the future," Switzer said.

Switzer, who won three national championships for the Sooners, was "a proven winner," Jones said.

As the 56-year-old Switzer sat beside him, Jones sought to allay fears among Cowboys' fans that he would meddle in the team's on-field activities. Two weeks before this year's Super Bowl, Jones had irked Johnson by saying there were 500 people — including himself — who could have similar success in coaching the Cowboys.

"I feel so strongly that you're going benefit from the fact that the guy next to me coached me, the guy next to me has my total personal trust and commitment," Jones said.

"I feel we have one of the most talented teams that there is the NFL, if not the most talented team, and one of the best that has ever been put together," Jones said. "I feel very confident that the continuity can be kept in place and be motivated with the new head coach of the Dallas Cowboys, Barry Switzer."

One source said Jones and Switzer worked out contract details today in Jones' office at Valley Ranch.

It was Jones' mention of Switzer's name in a barroom conversation in Orlando, Fla., that infuriated Johnson to the point of wanting to leave the Cowboys.

"Jerry believes that Switzer can quickly adapt to the NFL and that his college background won't be a detrimental factor," the source said.

"Switzer won't get the kind of long-term deal that Jimmy got, and of course Jerry will now be in charge of all the management and personnel decisions."

Quarterback Troy Aikman and every assistant coach on Johnson's staff went to Jones' office today to meet with the owner and Switzer.

Aikman and Switzer have had a rocky relationship. Switzer recruited Aikman out of Henryetta, Okla., to come to the Sooners, telling him that they were going to a passing offense. However, Oklahoma stayed in the ground-bound wishbone.

Aikman played one game as a freshman in 1984, then started as a sophomore until he broke his ankle against Miami in the fourth game of the season. He transferred at the end of 1985 to UCLA, where he found immediate stardom in a passing offense under Terry Donahue and eventually became the Cowboys No. 1 draft pick in 1989.

Aikman said Tuesday that Switzer "is an outstanding coach," and there should be no problem working with him should he become the head coach.

Jones sneaked into Valley Ranch the back way early today, driving his automobile across the lawn to his office to avoid reporters patrolling the parking lot.

Switzer won three national titles in 16 years at Oklahoma before leaving in 1989 amid several scandals involving arrests of his players. He went 157-29-4 at OU and won or tied for 12 Big Eight titles.

Johnson was diplomatic in his response to the news that Switzer will replace him, saying it is strictly Jones' decision.

"It's a little bit of a surprise to me, but again, that's Jerry's decision," Johnson said this morning on NBC's "Today" show. "We'll just have to wait and see how it works."

After two days of meetings with Jones, Johnson announced his resignation at a news conference Tuesday.

"After our discussions, we have mutually decided that I would no longer be the head football coach of the Dallas Cowboys," he said.

Johnson, 50, said he expects to coach again, although no NFL head coaching positions are open for the upcoming season.

Jones gave Johnson a monetary settlement he called a "big-time thank you" — it was believed to be a multimillion dollar payment — and the two were amiable at their news conference.

"There's no way in the world either one of us could have done all this without each other," said Johnson, happy to be leaving even though it meant giving up a chance for a record third-straight Super Bowl victory.

Johnson, meanwhile, was expected to spend several more days at the Cowboys' headquarters before heading to the Florida Keys to relax on his boat and move into a new house in the area.

Johnson, who originally signed a 10-year contract to coach the Cowboys, received permission to join any team he wants — whenever he wants — despite the five years left on his contract.

In his five years in Dallas, Johnson took the Cowboys from 1-15 to consecutive Super Bowl titles. He said he's leaving not because he couldn't do it again, but because he was having trouble wanting to.

"This boiled down to a personal thing between Jimmy and Jerry," said Cowboys defensive coordinator Butch Davis, who's spent 15 years working with Johnson. "It was nothing about football, it was nothing about management. This was personal."

Johnson and Jones had been trading verbal salvos since the Cowboys defeated the Buffalo Bills 30-13 in the Super Bowl in January.

The players, who still have to answer to Jones, were staying out of that aspect of the breakup.

"I'm paid to play football, but I had a lot of respect for what Jimmy Johnson did," said Aikman.

"There's no reason Barry can't be a great NFL head coach," Aikman told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "People think we have problems because I left there. But he was as friendly and as helpful as could be to me. Now, I think of us as being friends."

Emmitt Smith, who last week said, "If you fire Jimmy, you fire me," had a different view today.

About the selection of Switzer, Smith said: "We will give him a chance. All he's got to do is give us a chance."

Michael Irvin, who played for Johnson at Miami, stormed around Valley Ranch slamming doors. He sat still long enough to say "it hurts."

from the athletic department?

•Why was McHugh replaced with Jacquie Hullah? Does ASU really need a coach who is more renowned for driving players away than winning? She had four players, including the team captain, leave the team this season. Can this be considered a success on any level? And don't give me any of that "This is to be expected in any coaching change" excuse. When Bruce Snyder took over the football program, I didn't see a quarter of the team packing it in.

This happened to Hullah quite regularly during her previous gig at Dartmouth. Didn't anyone do a background check before she was offered the job here? If no one did, why not? If so, why was she hired?

•When the ASU baseball team went to Omaha, Neb., last June to compete in the College World Series, each player was supposed to receive between $70 and $100 per diem for food and lodging. I've been told each player only received between $30-$60 a day. The remaining amounts for each player reportedly went to pay for bills incurred by the football program. Why cheap out on a team that has a chance to win it all?

•Why does this school dump all over its non-revenue-sports athletes? ASU used to have a quality athletic department from the top down. What happened to it?

catcher in only her sixth at-bat this season, lined a single up the first-base line, scoring Dacquisto. Alyssa Johnson followed with a single, but Wendy Johnson could not, and the inning ended.

"It was four extra bases (for Fullerton) in the first game. That's too many," said ASU coach Linda Wells. "Just when we were trying to close the gap in the second game, they unloaded again."

CSU-F improves to 17-19, having won all four games on its current road trip. In the two games against ASU, the Titans scored 13 runs. They had been averaging just over three runs a game previously.

"On any given day, a team can come out and hit," said Jeanne Redondo, responding to the Titan offense. "Their hitting and us making a few errors, I think that cost us some runs."

Dacquisto continued to hit the ball well. She jumped her average to .403, and has a 12-game hitting streak. In seven at-bats, she had six hits and an intentional walk. She also scored two runs.

Alyssa Johnson continued to play well, both offensively and defensively, according to Wells.

"A.J. is hitting well and she made some hard plays on defense," she said. "Although you like to have a few really bright spots, you would like to have a few more."

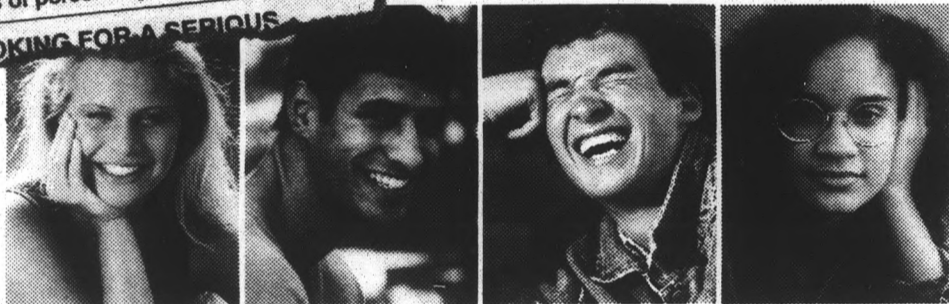

One such bright spot recently has been ASU's pitching. Jessica Niebuhr, the starter in the second game, had 16 straight innings of scoreless pitching. That streak continued for two innings, until a four-hit, five-run third inning struck.

"She's been pitching very well," said Wells. "She let herself get into this old combination of a hit, then run the count and walk somebody ... and now you're having to play out of a tough defensive situation and we don't do that."
