Regents to consider new entrance requirements

Proposal would mandate addition of language, math, science classes

By SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

A proposal to strengthen minimum class requirements for high school graduates seeking admission to Arizona universities has some support within the system, although one superintendent said Wednesday it would burden his rural school district.

The Arizona Board of Regents is expected to discuss and vote on the proposal during its two-day Tucson meeting, which begins today at UofA.

"I think that it recognizes if a student is going to succeed, they need tools coming in," said Student Regent Spencer Insolia.

Insolia said he will vote for the plan.

The plan would require 16 units of classes for admission to a state university, rather than the current 11. Students would have to take additional classes in mathematics, science and foreign language.

Concerns have been raised about the ability of smaller school systems, such as those in rural areas, to provide the needed classes.

George Sisemore, superintendent of the Tolleson Unified High School District, said he agrees with the plan, but it will make it hard on his schools.

"It will put on a big strain, especially the foreign language requirement," Sisemore said. "We'll have to find a way to finance it."

The school district, which has about 3,000 students, would have to hire two foreign language instructors, he said. The cost would be about $60,000, he added.

ASU President Lattie Coor said more requirements for admittance equates to more students who are likely to graduate.

"I think any time we can have a stronger base of preparation for students, they are more likely to succeed," he said.

Coor said he understands how some smaller districts could be overburdened by the requirements.

"I think when we add requirements, we (should) not make it inadvertently hard for students where there are limits to

ASU passes accreditation with ease

Report praises University but points out low funds

By GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

ASU passed the most comprehensive study of the University in 10 years, after a two-year evaluation by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools (NCA).

The accreditation was so positive that the NCA does not plan to visit ASU for another 10 years, the maximum time allowed between visits, said Gerald W. Patton, NCA's associate director.

The NCA report states that ASU's strengths greatly outweigh its weaknesses. However, it did list several areas of concern, including low levels of state support.

"Evidence of this budgetary distress include reduced admissions to some degree programs, smaller numbers of class sections, increased class size, deteriorating equipment in some equipment-intensive disciplines and graduate assistant stipends and benefits that are insufficient to recruit or retain outstanding graduate students who are necessary for a national research university," the report states.

Other problems cited were low salaries, below average student minority levels, student retention and graduation, and a need to coordinate academic programs between main and branch campuses.

"A lot of (the problems) were resource-related," said Brian Foster, dean of the Graduate College and chairman of a committee that conducted the self-study of ASU.

Foster said the accreditation will allow ASU leaders to work on problems and concerns identified in the accreditation.

"We've made a lot of progress on diversity, but we need to continue working on diversifying the faculty and the student body and the curriculum," Foster said.

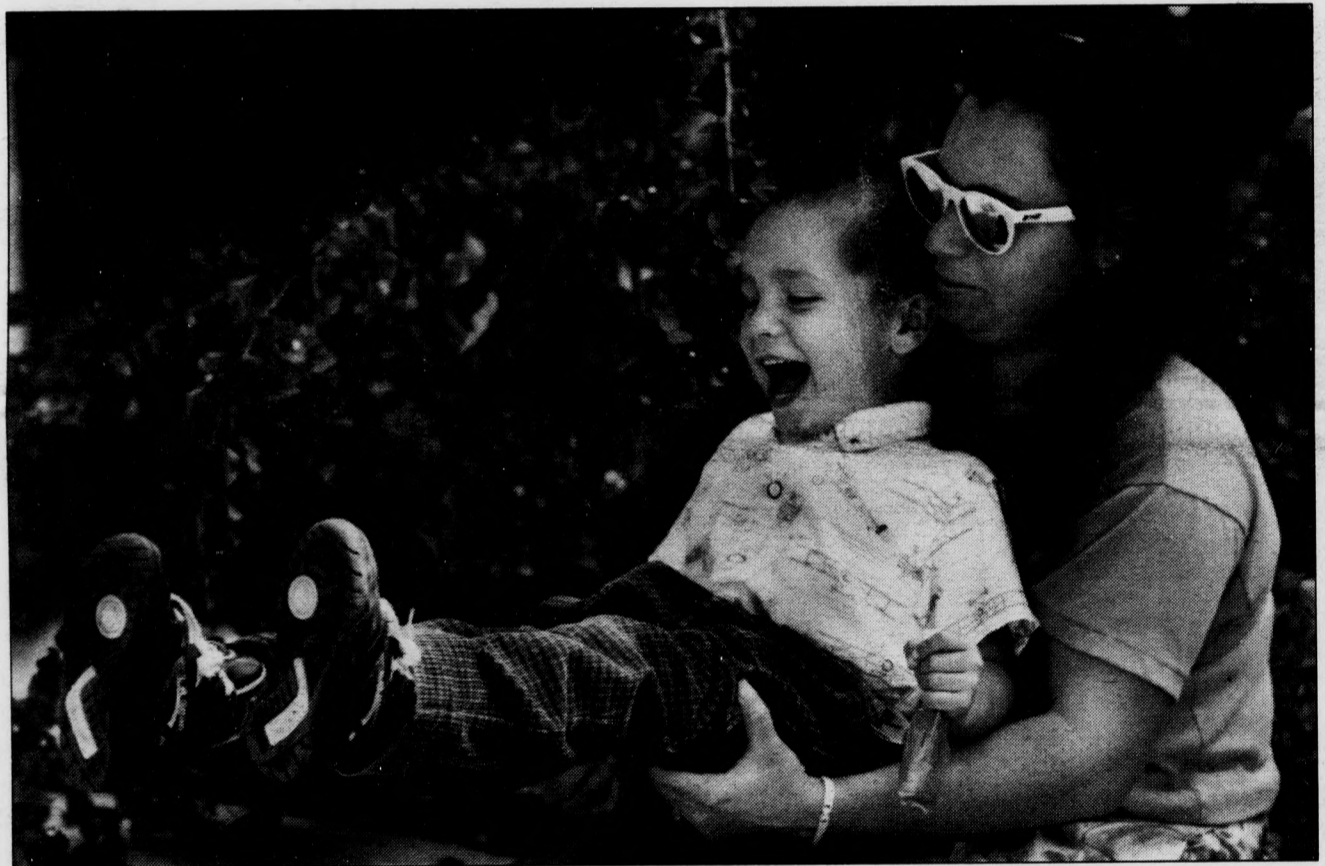

The points of strength listed are leadership, faculty, student services, administrative services, computer support and services, research, working with community colleges, curriculum and the library.

ASU Provost Milton Glick said administrators were pleased with the full accreditation, especially considering recent budget difficulties.

"We were never concerned that we

Chicano residence hall to be inaugurated

El Zocalo newest addition to Campus Communities

By MIKA AKIKUNI
STATE PRESS

A residence hall aimed at educating ASU students about Chicano culture will be inaugurated tonight at Hayden Hall, near Apache Boulevard.

Named El Zocalo — which means "meeting place" in Nahuatl, an Aztec language — the hall, located on Hayden's first floor, will be opened to all students next fall. The hall will be part of Campus Communities, one of the core elements of ASU President Lattie Coor's strategic plan to enrich and personalize undergraduate education at the University.

"I think it's great that the hall will be opening," said Armando Torres, president of the ASU branch of Movimiento Estudiantil

Chicano de Aztlan, an organization dedicated to educating people about the Chicano culture. "I think it's long overdue for something like that."

Torres said the hall will be a place "where the Chicano students coming to campus will be comfortable."

Mary Charette, program coordinator of Campus Communities, said she is excited to have a new addition to the campuswide program.

"It's very timely to be able to showcase the new Campus Communities," Charette said.

Debra Sells, associate director of Residential Life, said she is uncertain as to how many people have signed up to live in El Zocalo so far.

The inauguration is one of the events planned for LaSemana Cultural — Culture Week — which started Wednesday and will culminate Sunday with the National MEChA Conference. The culture week will feature speakers, dance shows and other entertainment on Hayden Lawn.

Virginia Gallegos, a member of MEChA and coordinator of the week, said the week was planned by MEChA and the Hispanic-Chicano coalition El Concilio, with the cooperation of the American Indian Council.

"We are very proud of our indigenous culture," she said. "We are a mixed race with Indigenous and Mexican blood, and we wanted to emphasize both of them, so that's why

The four basic criteria for accreditation, according to an NCA report, are:

- the institution has a clear purpose, consistent with its mission and appropriate to a post secondary education institution;

- the institution has effectively organized human, financial and physical resources to educational and other programs to accomplish its purposes;

- the institution is accomplishing its purposes; and,

If the ABOR passes the proposal, it would begin with students starting high school in 1994-95.

The UofA Faculty Senate has endorsed the plan, but the NAU and ASU faculty senates have raised concerns.

The Arizona Students' Association has come out against the current framework of the proposal.

- the institution can continue to accomplish its purposes.

NCA is a non-profit organization that accredits 970 private and public colleges, universities and technical schools. The accreditation began in late 1991, when Foster's committee began working on a self-study report it gave to NCA. After receiving the report, NCA sent a team to ASU last year to prepare its own report.

The next accreditation is scheduled to begin in 2002.

Around Arizona

Bill would allow Arizonans to carry concealed weapons

PHOENIX (AP) — A bill allowing Arizonans to carry concealed weapons after obtaining a permit and meeting other requirements has been sent to the governor for signature.

The bill passed the House 44-16 on Tuesday, a week after being approved by the Senate 23-4. Gov. Fife Symington has not said whether he will sign the bill.

Previous efforts to authorize concealed weapons have passed the House but have died in the Senate.

"For the first time in the state of Arizona, people will have the right to provide for their own self-defense by carrying a weapon discreetly," said Rep. John Keegan, the main sponsor of this year's measure.

Adults now are allowed to carry a gun any time so long as it's in full view. That includes in a hip holster, lying on a seat in a vehicle or hanging in a rack over the rear window of a pickup.

Arizona third-worst in U.S. for welfare overpayments

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona may owe the federal government as much as $4.3 million because of welfare overpayments that exceeded the national average.

Arizona's 8.3 percent overpayment rate in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program was third-worst in the nation for 1991 behind Florida (9.66 percent) and Ohio (8.36 percent). The national average was 4.9 percent.

The program, run by states and financed jointly by states and the federal government, helps poor families.

About 196,000 Arizonans got $21.4 million in benefits in January, the last month for which figures were available.

Nationally, AFDC recipients were overpaid more than $1 billion in 1991 with Arizona's recipients overpaid $14.8 million.

Symington says state won't press gun-control lawsuit

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Fife Symington says Arizona has dropped its plan to sue the federal government over the Brady gun-control law.

Instead, the state has filed a friend-of-the-court brief in support of Graham County Sheriff Richard Mack's federal-court lawsuit challenging the law.

Symington said Tuesday the planned lawsuit lost its legal punch when U.S. Department of Justice officials decided last month that law-enforcement officials would not be held criminally responsible for violations of the law.

The law requires a five-day wait before handgun purchases. Law-enforcement officials must make a "reasonable effort" during that period to check whether a potential purchaser has a criminal background.

U.N. considers pulling peacekeepers

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) — Government troops and rebel soldiers traded artillery fire and fought street by street in downtown Kigali Wednesday as Tutsi rebels pushed to capture Rwanda's capital.

A midday ceasefire was shattered in the afternoon by mortar fire and gunbattles. By nightfall, five mortar rounds were falling each minute during a battle for a building near parliament and the capital was anarchic. Mobs of marauding youths roamed in commandeered cars.

The U.N. Security Council was to meet behind closed doors later Wednesday in New York to consider pulling its 2,500 peacekeepers out of the Central African nation, where a weeklong ethnic slaughter has left an estimated 20,000 dead.

Foreigners have nearly completed their exodus, emptying Kigali of almost all but international relief workers and the battling government troops and Tutsi rebels.

As many as 20,000 mainly Tutsi fighters of the rebel Rwanda Patriotic Front began moving into the city Tuesday, reinforcing small groups already in the capital. A fragile cease-fire between the Hutu-dominated army and the Tutsi rebels fell apart in the ethnic fighting that followed the president's death in a plane crash last week.

A joint International Red Cross and Doctors Without Borders convoy of nine vehicles carrying two surgical teams and 25 tons of medical supplies reached Kigali from Bujumbura, the capital of neighboring Burundi. Later Wednesday, the Red Cross began feeding Rwandan refugees in Kigali.

The relief convoy was the first to reach the blood-soaked capital since the bloodshed erupted.

Doctors Without Borders field officials said 150,000 to 200,000 people are fleeing in every direction from central Rwanda, where the capital is, to seek safety in Zaire, Burundi, Tanzania and Uganda.

Many of the refugees were walking through the lush green hills, avoiding the main roads for fear of government roadblocks and vehicles carrying soldiers.

"Many, many people have been killed," said Philippe Gaillard, head of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Kigali. "The people are fighting against their own brothers, and this is very sad."

Second suicide bomb hits bus in Israel

HADERA, Israel (AP) — An apparent suicide bomb claimed by Islamic opponents of Israel-Palestinian peace talks ripped through a bus jammed with soldiers and civilians Wednesday, killing six people and wounding 28.

Senior officials warned that two such attacks in a week could mean the start of a gruesome pattern that would be difficult to combat. Militant Islamic groups vowed they would carry out at least three more suicide bombings as revenge for the Feb. 25 Hebron mosque massacre.

Officials reacted quickly to try to reassure the Israeli public, whose support for the peace talks is largely based on the belief they will bring security inside Israel's pre-1967 borders.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin sent more troops to seal off the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank, where authorities believe the bomb was constructed, but said he would continue with peace talks even in the face of future attacks.

The morning explosion at the central bus station in this coastal city midway between Tel Aviv and Haifa reverberated across the country at the start of an extended holiday weekend, when Israel first mourns its 17,955 war dead on Remembrance Day and then celebrates its 1948 creation on Independence Day.

Police said they suspect a West Bank Palestinian either rigged the explosives to his body or carried them in a bag and ignited them after climbing in the back door of the public bus, which stops repeatedly on its route from Tiberias across the country to Tel Aviv.

bus was timed to go off at 11 a.m., when sirens sounded nationwide for two minutes in memory of the war dead and virtually everyone stands at attention. It was exploded harmlessly by police.

Bus passengers said someone outside had noticed an abandoned black bag, suspected it contained a bomb, and was yelling at the driver to move the bus when the bomb inside the vehicle went off.

Blood, flesh, glass and burning metal flew in all directions.

"Suddenly there was a roar, I felt things hitting me from all sides," said Rachel Muallam, 50, from her hospital bed. "The man sitting next to me was either wounded or killed. He was completely mangled, covered in blood, his head lolling."

There were about 70 people on the bus when the bomb exploded.

Clinton: 'I have done my best' in handling Whitewater

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton heatedly defended his handling of the Whitewater affair today, telling newspaper editors, "I have done my best to answer the questions asked of me."

"Maybe you have total and complete recollection of every question that might be asked of you at any moment of things that happened 12, 13, 14 years ago," he told a questioner.

"You think I should have shut the whole federal government down and studied these things fulltime?" Clinton asked.

He was talking about the tax and other voluminous records involving his and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's investment in the Whitewater land deal in Arkansas.

The president's sharp words came after an editor suggested that his explanations so far of Whitewater-related matters reminded him of a daughter's excuses for not doing her homework.

"All I can tell you, sir, is I have done my best to answer the questions asked of me," Clinton responded to John Simpson, international editor of USA Today.

"I have been as candid and as forthright as I can," he said.

The president complained that he had supported creation of a special Whitewater counsel so that all details of the affair could be investigated, and he could get on with his job as president.

"Since then, the same people who have asked for the special counsel ... have decided they were kidding and they wanted for us to continue to deal with this."

"Well, I'm sorry but I'm doing the best I can doing the job I was hired by the American people to do," he told the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Clinton was invited by another questioner to assess the news media's coverage of his administration and of the Whitewater affair, but declined to do so. "If I could grade the press, I wouldn't," he said.

As to Whitewater, he said, "If you have any doubts about it, then that's good because you ought to be having doubts about things like this."

But he quoted humorist Garrison Keillor, who had told a broadcasters' dinner the night before that Clinton attended: "All I know is what I read in the papers, so Whitewater is a mystery to me."

Clinton skirted an editor's question about limits on the use of American tax dollars for abortion overseas.

"I think at a minimum that we should not fund abortions when the child is capable of living outside the mother's womb," Clinton said. "Secondly, we should not in any way, shape or form fund abortions if they are forced on citizens by the government against their will."

The administration is trying to get more liberal language into a U.N. plan to stabilize the world's population. Currently, the population plan only addresses abortions in the case of incest or rape.

In opening remarks, Clinton cited an erosion in what he said were the middle-class family values of earlier generations and a decline in living standards.

"Fear of violent crime has made neighbors seem like strangers," he said.

STATE PRESS Editorial

Tough love

The Arizona Board of Regents is scheduled to vote Friday on a plan that would make entrance requirements for the state's three universities tougher. If the bill is passed, college applicants will be expected to have stronger backgrounds in math, science and foreign languages than is currently required to graduate from many Arizona high schools.

Traditionally recognized for their strengths in areas of college life other than academics, Arizona's universities are gradually becoming known as more and more credible scholarly institutions.

However, at the same time the state's schools are making a name for themselves by making strides in research and instruction, it remains possible for students with academic deficiencies to be admitted, as long as they make up for lost time once they start taking classes. If a college-bound student does not reach a level of proficiency recommended by his or her high school, he or she is simply directed to a remedial class.

The mission of a university is, of course, to educate, but remedial courses are outside of the scope of what should be expected as the universities' responsibility. These courses cost the universities more than students pay to take them. They offer instruction at a level that is accessible in high school.

It is understandable that not all students come from the same academic backgrounds, but at least a minimal level of competency should be expected of incoming freshmen so they will be able to survive the demands of a college curriculum. The responsibility of fulfilling this level of competency should rest on the shoulders of students and high schools, so university departments can focus on college-level instruction.

Critics of the plan have pointed out that it would leave high school students in some areas of the state at a disadvantage because the classes they would need are sometimes not offered — foreign languages, for example. While this is a potential problem that needs to be addressed, allowing it to keep the board's proposal from being passed would not solve the problem — it would only be skirting the issue.

The purpose of the bill is not to keep more students from entering college — it is to make sure those who are admitted are prepared for the challenges they face once they get there.

As it stands, the universities' standards of admission are far from rigorous. (The average amount of time State Press editorial board members spent filling out their applications for admission to ASU was about 10 minutes.)

In order to successfully implement higher admissions standards, some sacrifices will be required — expenditures by some school districts to hire additional teachers, for example. But in the long run, it will benefit the university and its future students.

Overcrowded, ineffective prisons in America need reform now

Do Drugs, Do Time. The bumper sticker clings to patrol cars in Arizona like a silk shirt clings to a sweaty body in July.

We want the creeps of our city put behind bars. And we want them to stay there. This isn't just an Arizona thing. Politicians everywhere are jumping on the crime bandwagon and promising to clean up our streets by eliminating the "bad guys."

There's only one problem. What are we going to do with them? Arizona practically leads the nation in the number of people it incarcerates per capita. We have so many "bad guys" that the sheriff has built big, beautiful tent cities to house them in.

But, we still don't have enough room. Thousands of Arizona inmates don't have beds. Many are escaping from their holding tanks, which could be caused by too many inmates to adequately secure. And we're still putting non-violent offenders behind bars.

And the violent ones get paroled.

While many Americans are calling for caning as enforcement, supporting a violent government can have disastrous repercussions. Maybe they should learn a little more about life and "freedom" in Singapore before demanding vandals be caned. And maybe they should consider the fact that their son, daughter, brother or sister may get a little plowed one night and raise a little mayhem. Their position on caning might be different.

Yes, vandals and others who break the law should be punished, but there's got to be a better way.

And though I wouldn't want to see an ex-rapist on the street any sooner than anyone else, I wonder what criminals are like when they finally get paroled, and they will.

We've thrown all the bad guys into one place. They can all share stories of their wheeling and stealing days and those of us on the outside are feeling pretty safe and smug knowing they can't do anything to us from prison. No one seems concerned about what happens when they leave.

They're put out on the street with no job, no money, no food but they have their memories of prison. They've lived crime for their entire sentence so when they finally resort to crime outside of jail, no one should be surprised. After all, it was our system that sentenced them to live in a crime commune among their peers.

No, I'm not such a bleeding heart liberal that I don't think anyone should go to prison. I'm just curious about what a drunk driver will learn from a few months in jail. I wonder why we have the gall to believe that people come out of prison "cured" of their crimes and magically rehabilitated.

I still want violent offenders to serve their time. But I want that time to be productive. The only ones who are there for life are those who have already killed, but what about those who have fallen one short step away from killing? I don't think the magic solution is longer and stiffer sentences. Prison is rarely a deterrent; if it were, there wouldn't be the overcrowding there is now.

We must prepare those who obviously haven't learned how to live in a civilized society to do so, and randomly throwing them in with a bunch of others who haven't learned to live in a civilized society is not the solution. The answer is rehabilitation.

Rather than hard labor, how about hard counseling? Many criminals commit crimes that were committed against them, have repressed feelings from living a dysfunctional life, and much more that those skilled in criminal rehabilitation could figure out.

Maybe it won't cure every violent offender, but like it or not they will be living among us again, probably sooner than later, and for those it will help, I'd rather not need to worry about the days they will be paroled.

And for those who haven't committed violent crimes, let their punishment fit the crime. I want drunk drivers, bad check writers and pet abusers to pay, but these are the people who will be more affected by stiff fines than jail time. They are usually already somewhat productive contributors to society with jobs and families. Putting them in jail serves no one's best interest.

And enough has not been said about community service. Make the drunk drivers serve the community by working with a group dedicated to preventing people from drinking and driving. Make pet abusers serve their communities at animal shelters.

And don't forget their rehabilitation. It must be a part of everyone's sentence. People who commit crimes have problems. Jail and prison don't solve those problems and can even perpetuate them.

Sure this may cost more money. But the long-term savings are inevitable. It may not fix every problem, but it's still a better approach to just "getting them off the streets." Because, sooner or later, they'll be back.

Editor's note — due to the high response to Jennifer Palmer's letter of April 11, 1994, in order to include as many letters as possible, only highlights of the following letters could be printed.

• The problem here is apparent, and it is not the existence of a student organization (which has the backing of the ASU administration, ASASU, and the Greek Life professional staff) comprised of people of a particular sexual orientation who perform philanthropic and community service functions as part of their activities. ... No, Palmer, the problem lies with people of your mind set — Frank Meliti and Jesse Helms immediately come to mind — who lack appreciation for diversity on any level and are self-righteous enough to feel justified in passing judgment and cramming your convoluted morality down other's throats.

You are not Greek; this was confirmed by the Panhellenic advisor. Therefore you have no justification in expressing an opinion about an organization of which you have no firsthand experience. ...

Until rampant hatred and bigotry (which sound sinful to me) gain widespread acceptance, perhaps you should show consideration for others by keeping your narrow-minded folderol to yourself.

• ... I, like Jennifer, am heterosexual and happy, but I do not see where one is the prerequisite for the other. I do not understand how her happiness would be threatened due to the existence of a gay fraternity. Besides, as the saying goes "ignorance is bliss" and with an attitude like hers she must be absolutely ecstatic!

As for their community service project, "Project Safe Place," what does that have to do with them being a political group? They are helping people; I thought the meaning of philanthropy was to help those who needed it, not those who need it more.

... Does Ms. Palmer think all the "unacceptable" minority groups should have consideration for others and exile themselves to their own special country until they stop being a disgrace or narrow-minded bigots can accept them for who they are? ...

• ... After decades of fighting prejudice and discrimination, one would think that we had overcome the ignorance and close-mindedness of her opinions. Palmer's argument against gays and lesbians is not only an affront to those in the homosexual community, but is also a slap in the face to anyone who has ever fought for civil rights in this country. ... If we all follow Palmer's advice then we would never, ever again see a mixed race couple. We would never, ever again have women working in the business industry.

... Gays and lesbians are people — human beings — with hopes, dreams, thoughts, rights and emotions just like every other human being on this planet. ... They do not deserve to be ridiculed and slandered simply because of their lifestyle.

Have you [Palmer] personally gone to every single person in America and asked their personal feelings on [this] subject? Or are you generalizing your own feelings to fit everyone else's? ...

I found two things very ironic about your article. First, you say "If and when our society as a whole decides to accept homosexuality, then you may be free to act in your sinful ways." How are we to find acceptance without first being allowed to be part of society? ... The second thing that I found ironic, as well as amusing, was the part you said of consideration for others. I do not think you realize we have given the world centuries of consideration, and I am personally sick of it. We have kept quiet and now when we step forward to say we are proud of ourselves you ask us to be quiet again. Imagine if I was to take your letter and replace the word homosexual or gay with the word Afro American. ### 'Gay frats' have no place in ASU's Greek system

I felt violated when I read that ASU and ASASU members and staff were in favor of Delta Lambda Phi, a gay male fraternity.

Most of the ASU student public is heterosexual, happy, and would like to stay that way. Personally, when the subject of homosexuality enters a conversation, I experience two feelings. First, how could someone live such a horrid lifestyle, and second, these people should stop trying to find acceptance in a society that thinks "alternative" relationships are disgraceful.

If this so-called fraternity is not trying to be a political group, then why such an interest in a community service project named, "Project Safe Place?" Do you think that by distributing the ASU faculty and staff with pink triangles, that gay awareness will just be accepted by all? Why not save your breath, and consider more needful organizations such as D.A.R.E., Rape Prevention or even Child Abuse?

If and when our society as a whole decides to accept homosexuality, then you may be free to act in your sinful ways. Until then, have some consideration for others.

Jennifer Palmer
Business

• As one of the founding fathers of the ASU chapter of Delta Lambda Phi, popularly known as the "gay fraternity," I would like to respond to Jennifer Palmer's belief that we should "stop trying to find acceptance in a society that thinks 'alternative' relationships are disgraceful."

First of all, I would like to thank her for helping to explain to ASU and the Greek system that there is a need for Delta Lambda Phi. One argument against having a "gay fraternity," fortunately more common than Palmer's objection to it as "horrid" and "sinful," is that ASU is accepting and open enough that it is not necessary to have a separate organization. Thanks to Palmer and others like her, it is needed.

Palmer also feels that Delta Lambda Phi should find projects other than Project Safe Place. While we have contributed in past years to programs which are not specifically gay in nature, I have no apology for this year's choice. Gay and lesbian young people have tragically high rates of suicide, depression, and drug abuse. They often feel alienated and alone. Hopefully this project will help those young people who pour into ASU by the hundreds each semester to find a friendly person they can confide in and get help from. What is wrong with gay people helping other gay people to overcome common problems, and what is so political about it?

Should we leave that up to people like Palmer? She states that most of ASU is heterosexual and happy. We would like to rest of ASU to be happy, too, heterosexual or not. Anyone who finds other people's happiness horrid, sinful or who feels violated by it should find some counseling.

Adam Leeds

• I was very impressed to see that Jennifer Palmer had the courage to exercise her First Amendment right and express her opinion concerning the Delta Lambda Phi fraternity. I am, however, completely unimpressed that there is actually an (apparently) educated person who feels she has the right to represent "most of ASU[s] student public..." by stating that most of a 43,000+ population is happy, or heterosexual. How many is "most," Palmer? ... Personally, it is none of your business how someone could live such a "horrid lifestyle." And furthermore, how dare you prohibit another human being from being accepted in a society, or campus, of diversity? ...

Christine Fraker

• Palmer, grow up, life is full of diversity. You have enrolled in a major university and have come here, I hope, to learn and part of that learning is the willingness to tolerate alternative views. I have to accept your opinion about the people who choose an alternative lifestyle and I would hope you would be Christian enough not to label someone else a "sinner." I do not feel worthy enough to judge someone else for, according to the bible, it is a sin.

... "Adapt or die" is one of my English professor's preferred expressions and one that is necessary in an American society. As adults we have to tolerate others' opinions, lifestyles, race and religion in order to survive. This intolerance can leave you behind, as others move forward.

Julia Gowan

• ... Palmer, let me illustrate a couple of points that you have obviously missed. One of the primary goals of the Greek system is community service. Hence, a community service project like "Project Safe Place" is entirely appropriate.

... I'm quite sure the members of the Delta Lambda Phi fraternity are not so naive as to believe that pink triangles will make all ASU faculty, staff and students accepting of homosexuality. I'm sure they understand better than anyone that it is one step in a process that will take years to achieve ...

• I am writing in response to Jennifer Palmer's April 11 letter about the "so-called" fraternity, Delta Lambda Phi. ... I do not know why you think you have the right to speak for society. Please speak for your close-minded self when you say people that are homosexual are living "horrid lifestyles" or are having "disgraceful" relationships. ...

You insinuate that gay awareness is not a needy cause. I believe homosexuals are needful. They need to be treated with dignity and respect, as all human beings deserve to be treated. I do represent what you call "most of the ASU student public" — I am heterosexual and happy. I am not, however, so shallow that I fell "violated" by a decision that supports human rights. ...

Colleen Culliton

• ... Would Jennifer be allowed to publicly spew her hatred if it were directed toward African Americans, Latinos, Asians or the disabled? I think not. ...

Delta Lambda Phi is working to make life for gay men and lesbians on the ASU campus a little less terrifying. ...

Gay men have been an integral part of the ASU Greek system since its inception. We have participated at every level in fraternity life, from the lowly pledge to the president of the Inter-Fraternity Council. We have contributed our creativity in planning events, our sweat in intramural sports, and our stick-to-itiveness when things go tough. For this dedication we have been beaten, repressed, silenced, alienated and defrocked by our brothers. Delta Lambda Phi is a call for the cessation of these abominations. ...

Chris Larkin

• Jennifer suggested that "most of the ASU student public is heterosexual, happy, and would like to stay that way." Jennifer, dear, gay men are born into the gay community, they are not recruited.

Secondly, because uninformed students find the gay lifestyle "horrid" and "disgraceful" gay men (and lesbian women) desperately need a haven from the vitriolic fears and prejudices that plague the straight community.

... She would be a more considerate person if she'd allow others to proudly proclaim their affiliations and if she remembered "that all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God."

Anne Myers

• As president of the Delta Lambda Phi fraternity, I feel obligated to respond to Jennifer Palmer's recent attack on our house. Unfortunately, most well written letters to the editor can take many hours to construct. Aside from her obvious insecurity with her own sexuality, Jennifer's uneducated and rude comments regarding Delta Lambda Phi don't even warrant the ten minutes I'm taking right now to write this letter. Thanks anyway, though.

• What right do you have telling these men to have "some consideration for others" when "acting in your sinful ways?" You are the one that lacks consideration. These people have as much of a right as anyone else to form a fraternity. I too read the article about Delta Lambda Phi, and personally, I think they sound like a very respectable group of guys, not the appalling, leper-like outcasts you claim them to be. ...

These men have as much of a right as the next guy to have a place where they can get together and get away from regular, everyday, and 90 percent heterosexual world.

I hope this fraternity stays around for many years to come and that they continue to do the important and caring work that they're involved in. In my opinion, all the Greek system needs now is a lesbian sorority.

Alyssa Fagan

• I was extremely disturbed and shocked when I read a student's opinion regarding gay fraternities in our ASU Greek system. Not only do I feel that a gay fraternity has every right to be in our Greek system, but the particular fraternity, Delta Lambda Phi, should be honored for its accomplishments in bringing some hope to this campus. I applaud them for standing up for their rights and not being afraid to express them.

As for the comments made by this student, she has every right to express them but in doing so only shows her ignorance. ... As a "black woman" I am thankful it is not a popular one. To call homosexuality a "horrid lifestyle" and to say that this fraternity should wait until our society as a "whole" decides to accept homosexuality, is to ask for the impossible. To wait for society to accept anything is to wait for "pigs to fly."

Hermon supports link between business, education

Sees helping University as investment in community

BY JOHN SULLIVAN
STATE PRESS

Bev Hermon enjoys being considered a friend of ASU.

Hermon, R-Tempe, a Republican candidate for the 1st Congressional District, said she sees helping the University as part of an investment in the business community.

Hermon said she has been voting for the people in her district for 10 years as a state senator and supports the community by helping the University attract outside business.

Hermon said one of her major legislative accomplishments was to sponsor the Board of Regents Cost Study. The project, which took eight months to complete, resulted in ASU receiving approximately $5 million more each year to fund faculty salaries and academic activities.

Gaye Murphy, ASU assistant director of fiscal planning, agreed that Hermon was "instrumental in the endeavor."

Hermon said she is dissatisfied with the current Clinton health care plan.

"It's a typical bureaucratic mess. But I think we can do better with less," she said.

Hermon said she believes the Republicans in Congress have a good chance at getting at least some of their requests concerning a health care package.

The plan would include giving tax credits to insurance companies to provide comprehensive health care to everybody.

"Clinton desperately wants something to pass, so he'll compromise," said Hermon.

Dr. Bruce Merrill, professor in the Walter Cronkite School of Journalism, said Hermon has indeed been a University ally, and could run a strong campaign, especially in Tempe.

However Merrill said he is not sure if Hermon's popularity in Tempe will be enough to catch current Republican leader Matt Salmon, who is currently considered the favorite for the Republican nomination. Merrill said this is because Matt Salmon is regarded as the conservative in the race.

According to Merrill, the moderate vote will be split between Hermon and candidate Linda Rawles, while the conservative vote will go to Salmon.

However Hermon said that Salmon's conservative views

(including a strong pro-life position) could hurt him if he faced the more politically moderate Democratic favorite, state senator Chuck Blanchard, D-Phoenix, in the general election.

Hermon said the 1st District is composed of politically moderate voters.

Hermon, who considers herself a moderate, said her major emphasis would be to reduce federal spending and return tax dollars to individuals. She said that she does not mind being considered an underdog, because it is a much easier place to be in than in front where all the pressure is.

Hermon said that she is running a "grass roots" campaign, concentrating on building voter coalitions in the Scottsdale, Tempe and Mesa portions of the congressional district.

The primary election will be held September 13, and will determine the Republican and Democratic candidates for the 1st Congressional District seat being vacated by Rep. Sam

Coppersmith, D-Ariz., who is running for U.S. Senate.

This article is the third in a series of five profiling the candidates for the Democratic and Republican Party nominations for candidates in the November general election for U.S. Congress District 1.

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Nancy, meet Barbie.

A line of Nancy Kerrigan dolls will appear on store shelves this fall, Mattel Inc. said Wednesday.

Mattel, which makes Barbie, said the first Kerrigan doll will wear a replica of the gold costume the champion figure skater wore during the Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

"We think that she is a very positive role model for young girls," Mattel President Jill Barad said in a statement.

No word on whether one of the dolls will feature a bruised knee. (Kerrigan's other claim to fame is being clubbed in a plot allegedly hatched by rival Tonya Harding's inner circle.)

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Judy Tenuta, the flamboyant, accordion-playing "love goddess," said her new comedy album's title is raising stress levels at radio stations.

"I think it's a really sweet title: 'Attention Butt-Pirates and Lesbians!'" How much more sweet can you get?" she said Wednesday.

Tenuta recorded the album at the Gay and Lesbian Festival in Los Angeles. "I'm their spokesmodel, their love goddess," she said.

The upshot is that interviewers are happy to talk to her about the album when she stops for chats at radio stations, "but then they'll say, 'I don't know if you should say the title on the air.'"

"I go, 'Excuse me, squid! It's NOT one of the seven dirty words!' ... It's so typical! I don't get it. They can have naked women exploding on MTV and I can't say, 'Attention Butt-Pirates and Lesbians.'"

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — There really is a reason why David Letterman decided on Sioux City as the home office of his Late Show. His name is Bruce Lewis.

Lewis is general manager of TV station KMEG. Like several other CBS affiliates, he decided not to carry Letterman's late-night show when Letterman switched to CBS last year.

But Sioux City is the only market where the show is unavailable on other stations, and that's why Letterman decided on his mock tribute.

Lewis broadcasts other shows in Letterman's slot and said they are doing well, but he hasn't ruled out putting on Letterman at some point.

Lewis enjoys Letterman's running home office gag. "I'm thrilled that the community is having fun with it, but I get a little tired with the media. It's an old story."

ASU signs top prep wrestler

The ASU wrestling program has signed one of the most highly regarded high school prospects in the nation, coach Lee Roy Smith announced Wednesday.

Casey Strand, a senior at College Park High School in Pleasant Hill, Calif., signed a letter of intent to study and compete in wrestling at ASU, and will enroll as a freshman in the fall of 1994.

Strand, a two-time California state champion, set a national record for wins in a career, finishing his prep tenure with a 228-10 record, surpassing the old record of 218. Strand was named Outstanding Wrestler at the state meet after capturing the 189-pound title, following a 171-pound title in 1993 and a runner-up finish at 160-pounds in 1992.

Moon heads to Minnesota

Warren Moon, the triggerman of the Houston Oilers' run-and-shoot offense who led the club to seven straight play-off appearances, is heading to the Minnesota Vikings.

Oilers owner Bud Adams and Vikings president Roger Headrick confirmed Wednesday they had reached an agreement in principle on a deal that would make the Oilers' most prominent player a Viking.

Houston reportedly will send Minnesota two draft picks — a fourth-rounder this year and a conditional third-rounder in 1995.

ASU gymnast Kirk Johnson tightens his routine during practice. Johnson will join the rest of the men's gymnastics club when they travel to the Gymnastics National Collegiate Championship this weekend.

RESURRECTION

Axed gymnastics team competing at Nationals

BY DAWN WAGNER
 STATE PRESS

A year ago they were doing backflips outside the ASU Memorial Union to raise money to keep their sport alive. In just under twelve months, the ASU men's gymnastics club has come full circle.

This weekend they will be traveling to Denton, Texas, where they will be one of only four club teams who qualified to compete in the USA Gymnastics National Collegiate Championships.

For Coach Scott Barclay, the mere fact his team is still around today, let alone that they qualified for nationals, is a huge accomplishment.

"This is what we have been training for since August," Barclay said. "This is one event I would not miss for anything right now. Given all that these student-athletes have fought through, I'm glad to see they made it and are going to represent ASU."

"I'm extremely proud of the team and what they have accomplished under the situation."

The "situation" included being cut as a University-sponsored sport by ASU, fighting to keep a place where they could practice, and relying on donations to keep the club afloat.

But despite all of their hardships, the team enters Nationals with a qualifying cumulative team score of 271.60 points, nearly 21 points above the second-place score posted by Washington.

The Sun Devils are considered strong contenders to take away the national club title from the Huskies.

"Well, we've competed against them before and we beat them by seven points," said Rob Kjar, who qualified to compete in the rings, parallel bars, horizontal bar, and pommel horse. "We just have to stay consistent and hit all of our routines, and we'll have to see how it works out."

"Definitely (we'll beat them)," said Garon Rowland, who qualified in the rings and parallel bars. "We did real well against Washington earlier in the year. They're really good guys to compete against. But once you get out on the floor, all of the friendships and stuff go away. You put it all aside and compete."

In the six individual events, ASU placed at least two gymnasts in the top six preliminary spots in each event. In both the vault

ASU faces top collegiate, Olympic athletes at relays

BY ELIZABETH APPELEN
 STATE PRESS

ASU's track and field team will once again go up against the best runners and field event athletes in the business Sunday at the 36th Annual Mt. SAC Relays in Walnut, Calif.

The Mt. SAC Relays will feature a host of Olympic athletes as well as over 100 colleges. Olympians Carl Lewis, Leroy Burrell and Dennis Mitchell are just a few of the tough competitors that will be competing at the relays.

The Sun Devils will line up against such national powers as UCLA, UofA, Houston, Iowa State and defending NCAA's men's indoor champion Arkansas.

Even though the meet will bring a lot of strong competition, ASU head coach

Leonard Braxton said "he's not looking for anything in particular."

"We are still training through these meets and trying to get ready for the Penn Relays (April 28-30) and the NC's (NCAA Outdoor Championships) so really whatever happens this week is a luxury," Braxton said.

Braxton also said the competition Mt. SAC will have is no tougher than the Sun Angel Classic competition in which the Sun Devils ranked at the top of almost all of the events.

"I think what we had out here for the Sun Angel is probably as good as it is going to get all year," Braxton said.

The Sun Devils will bring in the best to the Mt. SAC Relays. Several of the ASU track and field athletes have already made Sargis Sargsian, ASU's No.1 singles player, is waiting to hear from the NCAA to regain eligibility. Sargsian and Eric Brunner are questionable for today's match against UofA.

Troubled Tennis hosts UofA

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Despite the two losses in California last weekend and the suspension of its top two players, the No. 27 ASU men's tennis team moves on.

The Sun Devils (8-10 overall, 0-9 Pac-10) face 26th-ranked UofA today at 1:30 at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

ASU might have to move players around to compensate for the loss of Sargis Sargsian and Eric Brunner, who sat out of last weekend's tournaments as a precautionary measure pending the resolution of an NCAA rules clarification.

Sargsian and Brunner were among 40 players nationwide who are currently awaiting an eligibility ruling regarding their prior play in non-collegiate satellite tournaments.

The Wildcats (8-9, 2-7), also coming off of a two-game losing streak, will be trying to defeat ASU to gain a spot in the Region 8 Playoff.

The Sun Devils, who are seeking their first Pac-10 South win of the season, lost to the Wildcats in their last meeting, a 4-3 defeat earlier this month in Tucson.

Volleyball hosts tourney

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The second-ranked ASU men's volleyball team will host several of the nation's top schools for the 1994 Men's National Collegiate Volleyball Championships today through Saturday.

The Sun Devils come into the Championships as the No. 2 seed and begin play with three grueling matches today.

ASU will take on Buffalo State at 9:45 a.m., followed by a 1:30 p.m. showdown with the Georgetown Hoyas in the Student Recreation Center. The Sun Devils close out the day with a 7:45 p.m. match against No. 23 Notre Dame in the University Activity Center.

This year's Championships feature 92 universities from across the country, including No. 1 California, divided into two divisions based on the team's level of play and the size of the school.

All teams will compete in pool play on Thursday and Friday, with the top 16 teams fighting it out in a single elimination bracket Saturday.

The Championships finals are scheduled to take place Saturday night in the UAC, with the Division II final at 7 p.m. and the Division I final at 8:30 p.m. The cost of admission for the finals is $2.

the NCAA Championship automatic or provisional qualifying marks.

Field event athletes Nick Hysong, Brian Ellis and Shelly Choppa have all made either Pac-10 or NCAA qualifying marks. Hysong, who bettered his outdoor record in the pole vault by more than four inches at the Sun Angel Classic, cleared 18 feet, 5 3/4 inches to register the top collegiate mark this season. Ellis, an ASU triple jumper and long jumper, has made his way to second place in the Pac-10 rankings in the triple jump and third in the long jump, both of which have qualified him for the Pac-10 Championships.

"Going to Mt. SAC, my main focus is to perform as well as I can," Ellis said. "I plan on going to Mt. SAC 'top dog.'"

Choppa high-jumped 5-10 for the third time this season last week at the Texas Relays, matching her previous provisional qualifying time.

The Sun Devils will not only excel at the field events this Sunday, but they will also no doubt lead the pack in the sprints.

"We've seen the rest," Braxton said. "Only when we come will we bring in the best."

and horizontal bar competition, ASU managed to capture five of the six top spots.

In the all-around competition, Sun Devils' Marty Larsen, Kirk Johnson, and Kyle Johnson hold three of the top five qualifying scores.

Kyle Johnson, who is ranked fifth in the all-around competion, said it is an advantage having teammates who are also ranked as high.

"It gives you a lot more competition on a day to day basis," Johnson said. "Otherwise you only see competition five or six times a year. This way you see it every day in the gym. Your teammates are doing the kind of tricks you want to do."

According to Aaron Smith, the team is ready, and it is looking forward to the competition.

"This is the hardest competition we've had all year and we're all very mentally prepared, and I think we're going to win."
