It's official! Governor authorizes creation of ASU East

BY SHAWN BOYD
STATE PRESS

Gov. Fife Symington signed a bill authorizing establishment of an ASU East branch during a ceremony at Williams Air Force Base Wednesday, which ASU president Lattie Coor said will create a synthesis of uses for the facility.

SYMINGTON

Symington signed HB 2366 at the base, located in southeast Mesa. The base was vacated by the Air Force last year in a nationwide round of base closures.

The Governor also cut a large red ribbon signaling the grand opening of Williams Gateway Airport, a civilian field that will use the existing facilities built by the Air Force.

About 200 spectators and people involved with the base attended the ceremony.

ASU East will share the sprawling base with the new airport, the Maricopa Community College system and various other private and public entities.

"We are a hardy band of pioneers in this effort (to develop new uses for a closed base)," Symington said.

Coor said he is happy that education was emphasized as a part of the redevelopment plan from the beginning, which will allow the base to be a multi-purpose facility.

"ASU is immensely proud to be a part of this historic moment," Coor said, adding that the redeveloped base will shape the area in ways currently unimaginable — much in the same fashion that Luke Air Force Base has impacted the West Valley.

At full capacity, ASU East is expected to handle 10,000 students.

Among others attending the ceremony were Rep. Mark Killian, R-Mesa, speaker of the Arizona House of Representatives, and Mesa Mayor Willie Wong.

Killian was an integral part of the effort to move the authorization through the Arizona Legislature. The original form of HB 2366 included a $2.1 million appropriation for start-up costs.

That funding was made separately through

Candidate's debate challenge refused in presidential race

BY TODD KELLY
STATE PRESS

Associated Students of ASU presidential candidate Kurt Wilhelm drew a line in the sand Wednesday, but rival candidate Marci Hendrickson refused to cross it.

"I challenged Marci Hendrickson to a debate, but she declined," said Wilhelm, the current ASASU activities vice president.

Wilhelm and Hendrickson were both campaigning on Cady Mall during the first day of run-off elections, which continue today.

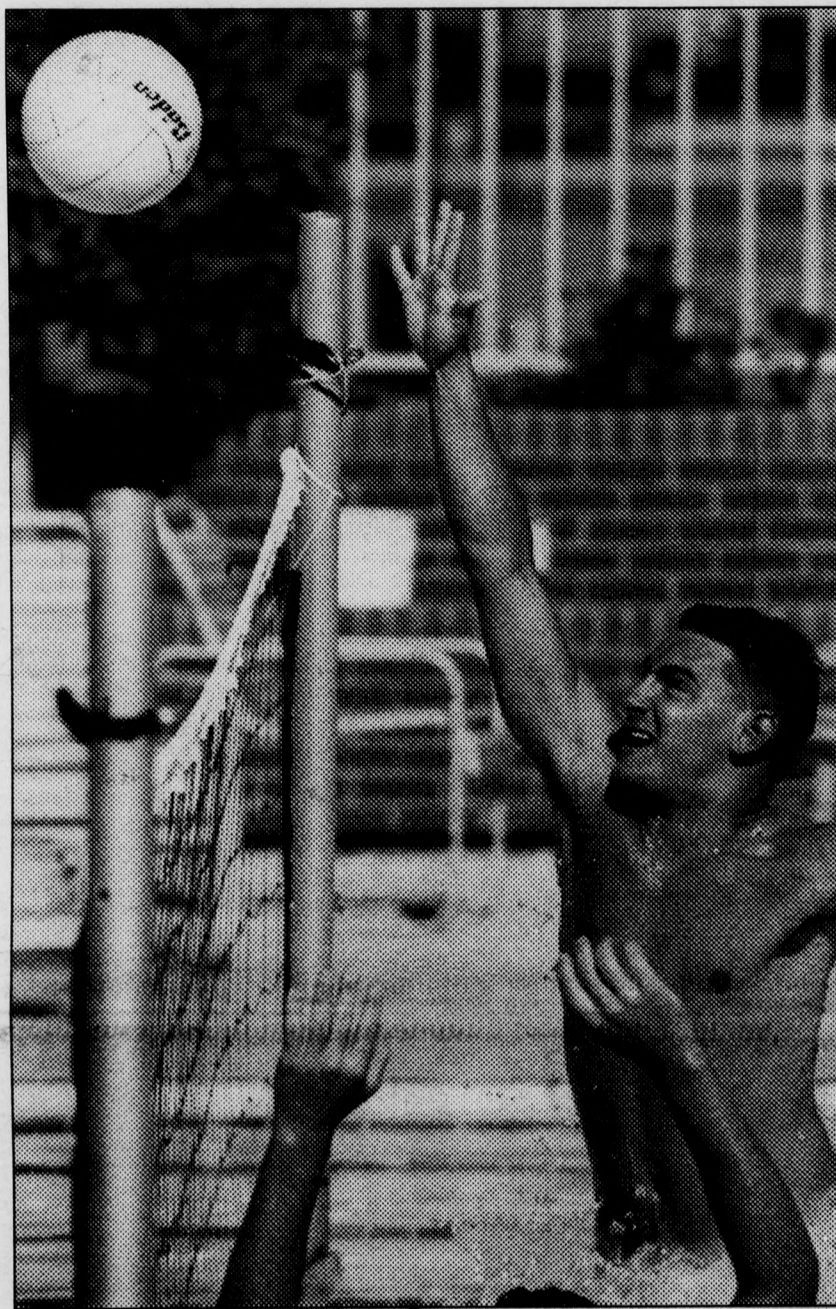

Wilhelm said he hoped to provide an open forum for students during the run-off elections. He cited two other instances where the two were supposed to meet, but it did not work out.

"He's getting belligerent. He tried to get me to speak in his microphone, but I told students to come by my booth instead," Hendrickson said.

Hendrickson and Wilhelm, the top vote-getters in last week's ASASU presidential elections, were forced into a run-off election Wednesday and Thursday because neither candidate won a majority of the vote. Hendrickson won 39 percent, 719 votes, while Wilhelm garnered 23 percent, or 421 votes.

A NIGHT TO REMEMBER

First-time gay prom scheduled for Valley students in early summer

BY MIKA AKIKUNI
STATE PRESS

A green sports coat and a "nice" pair of jeans is what ASU student Mark Wendell will wear on the night of his prom in June.

During that night of gala, Wendell and his male partner, a student at Mesa Community College, will walk side-by-side, enjoying the delicious food and the sweet fruit punch served in the Tempe Kiwanis Recreation Center.

Wendell and his partner will not be the only gay couple at the prom, however. Two to three hundred other gays and lesbians are also expected to come to the "Romance & Rainbows Prom '94," a party organized by the Lesbian and Gay Community Switchboard and the Lesbian Resource Project, both of Phoenix.

"This is the first year that we organized a gay and lesbian prom," said Bonnie Benítez, an ASU senior resources and conservation major and executive director of the LGCS. "The purpose of this prom is to provide an alternative prom, much like a high school prom, to lesbians and gays.

"We wanted to provide a prom where gays and lesbians feel welcome. When you are a gay or lesbian in high school you have no outlet."

Benítez said this prom will welcome gays and lesbians of all ages, mainly those "who didn't have the opportunity to go to their high school prom."

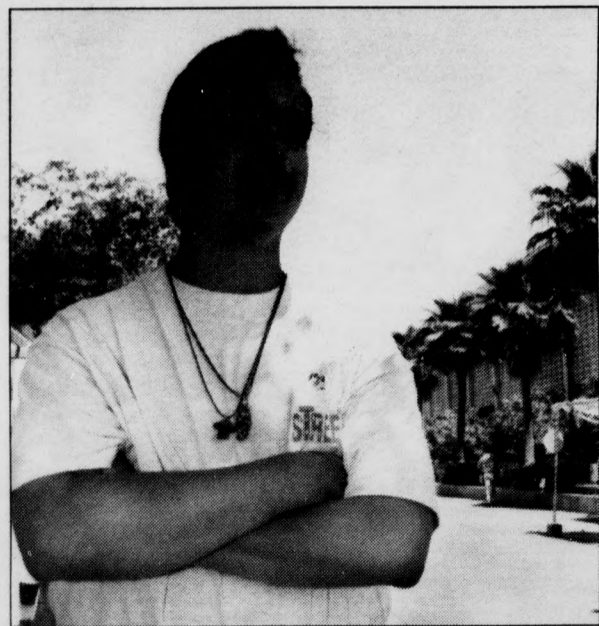

The gathering will take place at the Kiwanis Recreation Center, 6111 S. All American Way, north of Guadalupe Road and west of Rural Road, June 18 from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Tickets will go on sale on mid-May and people interested should call the LGCS at (602) 234-2752. Tickets will cost $14.95 per person or $24.95 per couple.

"The biggest difference between this prom and regular high school proms is that in this prom, you will see couples of the same gender," said Barb Jones, director of LRP, a non-profit agency that supports lesbians and gays. "We also welcome single people to the prom."

Jones said her group "will probably not" make political moves against high schools that do not allow gays and lesbians in their proms.

Wendell said this prom will be a good chance for "gays the budget process, allowing the stripped-down authorization version to glide through both chambers of the Legislature.

Looking at the clear sky and hot sun, Killian said he could not understand why the Air Force would want to close a base in such a great location.

"This is a family and community asset," he said, adding that people of all ages will be able to use the base.

Wong said things have been looking up for the base lately.

"We are pleased with the increasing activity at the airport," he said. "Since the closure of Williams Air Force Base, We've been waiting for this positive step in the reuse of the facility."

Mark Schneps, mayor of Queen Creek, a small town near the base, said the new utilization of the facility is expected to create about 17,000 jobs for the area in 10 years.

Coor said after the ceremony that the federal government still has not officially handed over the land for the ASU branch campus, but there should be no snags.

"They have slipped their April decision date to July," he said, adding that the complexity of the plan is causing the delay.

Coor also said two ASU officials will be traveling to Washington, D.C., to remain in contact with the federal government.

and lesbians to bring their partners and introduce them to other people."

"It's a prom that we never had," Wendell said. "I didn't go to my high school prom because there was no girl I wanted to go with. I didn't feel comfortable at that time to go to the prom with my boyfriend."

Wendell said that when a gay person goes to a prom, chances are that he or she will be "ridiculed, laughed at, and in some cases, beaten up. That's why most gays and lesbians choose not to go."

Adam Leeds, a senior nursing major and member of Delta Lambda Phi, a gay fraternity on campus, said he thinks the prom is a good idea for people who have become comfortable with their identity.

Leeds, who said he did not acknowledge his gay identity during high school, also said "once people become comfortable with their identity, they will regret that they did not go to their high school prom."

Arizona elderly population soon to be second largest PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona will have a larger percentage of people over age 65 than every state, but Florida by the year 2020, according to U.S. Census figures released Wednesday.

The state also should have the largest Indian population after 2000, the figures show.

The figures are part of a report that broke down population projections for states by age, sex, race and Hispanic origin for the first time, Census officials said.

People 65 years and older account for 13.4 percent of the population, ranking Arizona 18th. But the projections say that segment will more than double in number, growing to 19.6 percent by 2020, placing Arizona second behind Florida in percentage of elderly.

"Certainly there is some merit in those figures," said Ardell Haines, director of the Arizona office of the American Association of Retired Persons. "I could easily see that number double."

Utility company announces universal rate reduction

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona Public Service Co. has agreed to the first across-the-board rate reduction in its history, the company and Corporation Commission officials announced Wednesday.

Gary Yaquinto, manager of the commission's utilities division, said the Phoenix-based utility would ask for approval of a 2.2 rate reduction, which would affect all classes of customers.

In addition, Yaquinto said APS had agreed to leave the lower rates in effect for at least three years and to spend $30 million over that period on cost-reduction and alternative-energy programs.

"It is now time for APS to share with customers the savings from incentives put in place in the 1991 rate-case settlement," Yaquinto said. "The staff review of APS' financial position shows that the settlement we reached three years ago achieved the intended results, bringing the company and customers savings from reduced costs and greater efficiencies."

President Clinton speaks on the telephone with Russian President Boris Yeltsin about the situation in Bosnia Wednesday. Clinton called for aggressive NATO air strikes to stop assaults on safe havens in the war-stricken country.

U.S.: Serbs must pay Clinton calls for wider air strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton declared Wednesday that Serb forces responsible for the carnage in the Muslim enclave of Gorazde "must pay a higher price" for their unrelenting attacks. He called for more aggressive NATO air strikes to stop assaults on safe havens throughout Bosnia.

Acknowledging that the situation in Gorazde is increasingly grim, Clinton urged NATO to ban all heavy weapons from Gorazde and other designated areas, as was done last month to break the siege of Sarajevo.

Clinton, at a White House news conference, said the Sarajevo approach was best despite apprehension among some allies.

"Under the Sarajevo model you can say, 'OK, here's the safe zone, all the heavy weaponry has to be withdrawn or put under U.N. control and if there's any violation by anybody, there can be air action,'" the president said. "It is a much clearer thing."

Clinton's plan represents a shift in policy after months of indecision and takes the United States and its allies deeper into Bosnia's two-year civil war, which has left 200,000 people dead or missing.

NATO signaled it was willing to go along with Clinton's proposal but delayed final approval to give military advisers time to consider the best way to proceed.

The president said the United States,

Russia and European allies planned "a major diplomatic initiative" to end the strife in the former Yugoslavia. He did not provide details, saying they remain to be worked out.

"Air power alone will not settle this conflict," said Clinton. "This conflict will have to be settled through negotiations."

Before speaking, Clinton conferred by phone with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, French President Francois Mitterrand and Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien.

Clinton said he personally favored dropping the arms embargo that has prevented outgunned Muslim forces from rearming. However, he said the allies continue to oppose him on that point.

There are six safe havens designated by the United Nations, including Sarajevo and Gorazde.

Sarajevo was singled out by NATO when the capital was besieged by Bosnian Serb artillery. NATO threatened the Serbs with punitive air strikes unless they removed their heavy weapons from a "free zone" around the city or placed them under the control of U.N. troops.

The Serbs generally complied, no air strikes were undertaken and life in the city has been limping back to normal. However, the Serbs recently have seized or tried to reclaim some of their weapons by force. They have not been punished.

Judge declares mistrial in "urban survival" killing

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors plan to retry a black teenager whose lawyers won a mistrial Wednesday after arguing that "urban survival syndrome" forced him to gun down two blacks with whom he was feuding.

After 2 1/2 days of deliberations, the jury of nine whites and three blacks deadlocked 11-1 in favor of convicting Daimion Osby, and District Judge Bill Burdock declared a mistrial.

Osby, 18, was charged with two counts of murder in the fatal shootings of cousins Willie "Peanut" Brooks, 28, and Marcus Brooks, 19, during a confrontation in a crowded parking lot last April. Prosecutors said the victims were unarmed.

Osby's lawyers acknowledged that he killed the men but said the two had threatened him with a shotgun the week before. Osby and the cousins were involved in an intensifying feud, defense lawyers said.

The defense strategy centered on the claim that because Osby was raised in a poor, violent neighborhood, he suffered from "urban survival syndrome" and believed he had no alternative but to kill the men.

Defense lawyer Bill Lane said he was encouraged that one juror had accepted the argument, which he said he would expand on in Osby's next trial. Prosecutors planned to retry Osby.

Some of the 11 jurors who voted for conviction called the strategy far-fetched.

One juror said the panel had a hard time believing that Osby thought his life was in jeopardy when he was the only one of the three who was armed.

"I was born and raised in New York City ... and I find it to be totally bunk," said Paul, who spoke on condition that only his first name be used. "We went in the back and laughed about it. We thought it was all a big joke."

The lone holdout on the jury was foreman Artis Barnett, who is black. Although he declined to talk with reporters, Barnett told the attorneys he believed Osby killed in self-defense.

Prosecutors dismissed the defense arguments as a racist theory that could lead to unequal justice.

Warrantless searches considered for safety in projects

Residents stay inside, avoid socializing

CHICAGO (AP) — Victoria Bennett moved into the Robert Taylor housing project 16 years ago with her mind made up: This was home.

In the years since, she has lost a boyfriend to gunfire, seen bullets shatter her windows and struggled to steer her five children and three foster kids past the drugs and gangs waiting just outside her door. Still she stays.

"When I decided to move here, I decided this was the last place," Ms. Bennett says.

Now, she faces the possibility of police entering her home without warrants to hunt for guns. The Clinton administration proposes clauses in public housing leases to permit warrantless searches to crack down on crime.

The White House pitched the plan as a compromise between the Chicago Housing Authority, which has ordered such "sweeps" in the past, and Chicago's U.S. District Court, which last month ruled such searches violate the constitutional guarantee against unreasonable search and seizure.

Ms. Bennett, 40, doesn't debate constitutional principles. At Taylor, she has learned a simple, practical rule: Stay inside when they're shooting.

"Right now, everybody's at peace," she tells a visitor to her home, a cramped but clean three-bedroom apartment with cinderblock walls and steel-grated windows draped with sheets.

"I don't wake up in the morning and say, 'Ooh, I wonder if they're going to be gangbanging today. I just keep the faith.'"

But late last month, the 92-acre complex was hostage to five days of gangbanging — shootouts among drug-dealing gangs. Police recorded more than 300 reports of gunfire. Three people were killed in the shadows of the 16-story buildings that stand like giant tombstones beside the Dan Ryan Expressway on Chicago's South Side.

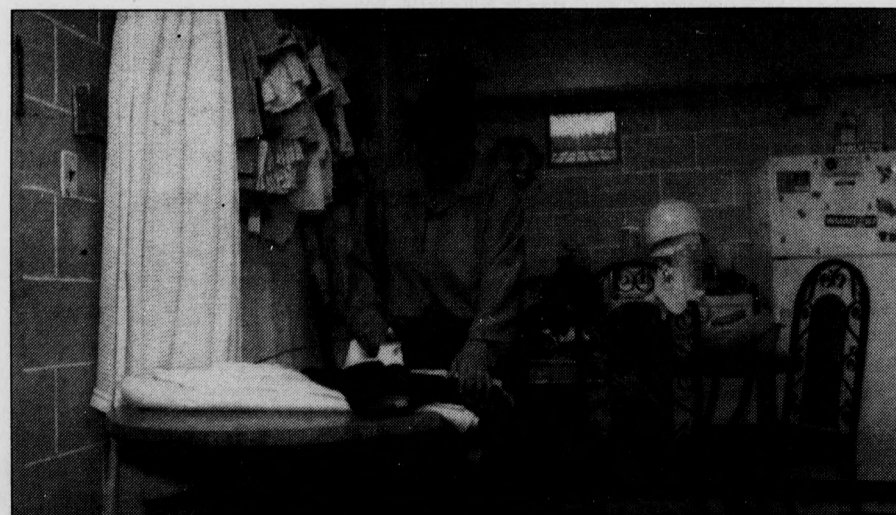

Ms. Bennett still has two teen-age daughters and a 6-year-old son, Printes, at home, along with the foster children — Debra, 10, Michael, 7, and Laura, 3. Out of the nest are Tanya, 20, a college freshman, and Larry, 22, who lives in Waterloo, Iowa.

She supports the weapons sweeps — "Too many little kids getting shot," she says — but believes the best way to avoid trouble is to "keep your business to yourself and don't get in other people's business."

She has never owned a gun but sympathizes with those who feel threatened enough to use one.

"I don't say it's right — it's not right — but you've got a right to protect yourself," she says.

Her apartment buzzed with activity after school one day last week as the kids rushed through their homework and 16-year-old Tiffany headed for her after-school job at a drycleaner.

The children are forbidden to linger on the cracked concrete playground where gang members hang out, but they run errands, unaccompanied, to the nearest store, a battered grocery two blocks away.

Ms. Bennett advises her children to run if they hear gunfire. If the shooting is near their building, they're to go to their church and call home.

"I try to teach them not to be afraid," she adds. "You've got to go forward. You can't just stop because gangbanging is going on."

Neither can you be careless. Little Laura knows to keep the front door locked, and Debra rollerskates only on the 100-foot-long communal balcony outside their fifth-floor apartment.

Editorial

Kill or be killed?

Live in a large city?
Suffer from poverty, oppression, a bad work environment or some other source of intense stress?

Congratulations, you may suffer from "urban survival syndrome." And, yes, it could very well be a license to kill.

The syndrome comes to us courtesy of a court trial in Fort Worth, Texas, where defense lawyers argued that a African American teen-ager who shot and killed two unarmed African American men was forced to do so because — due to a life lived in a poor, violent neighborhood — he simply did not believe he had any alternative.

Q.E.D., if one has reason to believe that you have to kill someone, it's perfectly fine.

Although the defense strategy did not convince the jury of Daimion Osby's innocence — the jury deadlocked at 11-1, and the presiding judge ruled a mistrial, so the case will very likely go back to court — it provides a frightening possibility of future defenses to come. Is it legal to kill someone if you're "convinced" that there is no alternative to killing them?

Remember, the two men slain — Willie Brooks and Marcus Brooks — were not armed, although they had reportedly threatened him with a gun the week before. And Osby admittedly shot both men in cold blood. There is no question that he took two lives. The defense's argument is not that he didn't, it's that he had to.

Since there are so many more Hispanics and African Americans living in urban poverty areas, is such a strategy racist? Are we, as Americans, being asked to agree that the murder of a minority gang member in a city should carry less penalty of the murder of a white middle-class man in a suburb? This seems to be giving de facto recognition to racial bias in the legal system; allowance that the protection of a far-from-blind justice is based on one's skin color.

We have, legally, created a system where taking a life is not always murder — there are certainly situations where Osby could have done what he did and not be found guilty of murder. We can legally kill in the grip of war; we can kill in self-defense; we can kill unknowingly, due to an accident; we can kill if insane, due to the angst and irrationality of madness.

But what a group of lawyers has tried to do in Texas is create a legal precedent for legal murder on the basis of "stress," a loophole which would give nominal recognition that America's slums are essentially war-zones.

Arizona Legislature ends term with a few last pieces of business

The Arizona Legislature has passed its final laws and closed its doors until next year, and its done in typical Arizona style.

The first order of business which Governor Fife Symington swiftly signed into law Tuesday is the tough crime bills. See my previous column for my thoughts on tough prison sentences as I don't have room for that here because the Legislature was so busy. Besides lengthening prison sentences and establishing a boot camp for juveniles (does hard labor rehabilitate people?), the legislature might also go as far as suspending their drivers licenses if the juvenile is caught with a weapon or is driving or riding in a car with a weapon. I'm not sure this really will ensure juveniles only legally carry their weapons with a note from Mommy or Daddy, but at least they didn't pass caning.

The problem with all of these laws aimed at juveniles is this: juveniles do not have the right to vote. This reminds me a bit of the American Revolution, when people were forced to pay taxes and abide by rules without any voice in their government. It seems, in the very least, unfair.

However, the Legislature did pass some preventive measures like putting police in the schools. This is where the real focus should be. Hard labor and losing drivers license privileges do not rehabilitate the juvenile who watches adults in Arizona behave in the same violent manner.

If the state refuses to rehabilitate criminals, then it should be preventing the crimes from happening. The measures passed were mild prevention at best and the Legislature might consider making this a priority for next year. Yeah, right.

And on another slightly positive note, parents of the juveniles will now be slightly legally responsible for the crimes their children do. They will be required to attend delinquency hearings for their children, something the Legislature shouldn't have to make them do. However, they may also be liable for fines and serving jail time. Once again, if the parent is a bad parent, why do we put him or her in jail? Looks like to me the parent should be offered some help to make them better at their job like a parenting class.

Additionally, not all blame may be placed on the parent. There is an age, and it's an individual decision, where we all basically start to live for ourselves regardless of our parents' opinions. Making them liable for something they cannot control may be dangerous. But overall, the Legislature did a good job with the parent aspect to at least include them in the proceedings.

The biggest missing piece of legislative action was the "Success by Six" bill which died a slow death. The bill would give money for preschool programs for at-risk children and money for prenatal care, child-abuse prevention and parental literacy. I guess with the big tax refund and tax breaks for businesses the Legislature passed, it can't afford to prevent crime. Maybe when the governor calls the legislators into a special session they will see the light. Maybe, one day, they'll realize that prevention is cheaper than prison. Maybe.

The second big business in the Legislature this session was a bailout of a hurting business. Doesn't sound new to Arizona as businesses generally get what they ask for. However, this tax break was ridiculous.

The racetrack owners in Arizona are whining that they can't make enough money because people would rather go play the big games on the reservations. Thus, they either want to be entitled to offer more gambling, or they need a tax break to stay in business. Not wanting to see such an important Arizona business that contributes so much to the state die, the Legislature agreed, to the tune of about $6 million over the next three years.

Regardless of how we want to live, we do live in a capitalist economy, a make-it-or-break-it yourself, pull-yourself-up-by-the-bootstraps society. It doesn't sound like it makes good economical sense in this type of a society to give money to a business that can't cut it because people don't want to engage in it.

The only investment that Arizona has in the racetracks is the revenue they bring from tax money. If no one wants to bet on the dogs, the state doesn't get any money. Which makes me ask, why is the state paying to keep a business open when it won't help the business bring more people to it? What does the state get out of all of this? A question I don't think I'll ever get an answer to.

So what did we all learn from this session in Arizona Congress? Let's see, if you're a juvenile and can't vote the politicians out of office, watch out! If you carry a weapon that could kill someone, you might lose your driver's license. And most importantly, if you're an at-risk business that can't make it the Legislature cares, or if you're an at-risk kid, whine to someone else.

Obsolete clichés need updates for 1990s

We wonder why boys have problems with self-esteem, as we tell them they're made from snakes, snails, and puppy-dog tails. Meanwhile, we say, diamonds are a girl's best friend. Then, we wonder why relationships collapse.

SHAYNE
WHITEHEAD
Columnist

We need to analyze which sayings aren't appropriate in the 20th century. Then, we need to update them.

My favorite revised saying is, "The weather is here, wish you were beautiful." I like it so much, it's the only bumper sticker I'll ever have. I've taken it upon myself to update some others.

- It's a woman's prerogative to change her mind. For men it's called lying.
- The meek shall inherit the Earth, and then give it right back.
- Ignorance is the mother of superstition. Practical jokes are the grandmother.
- Death is permanent, except in sequels.
- Every man must sow his wild oats, until a woman comes along and rips out the stitches.
- No man can serve two mistresses.
- You can fool some of the people all the time, and all of the people some of the time. The rest don't give a damn what you're doing any of the time.
- The Lord will provide, so why work?
- When it rains, it pours on a newly washed car.
- A rolling stone gathers no moss, but most rocks are stationary.
- You can't please everyone, so ta hell with 'em.
- The way to a man's heart is with a knife and an attitude.

- If Mohammed thinks the mountain is coming to him he should get off the drugs.
- Money talks quietly to psychopaths.
- Music soothes the savage beast. But I don't take ghetto blasters on safari.
- Cheaters never prosper. They're elected.
- You're never too old to relearn what you've forgotten.
- Opposites attract, and commence fighting.
- The road to hell is paved with TV evangelists.
- For every man there is a woman, or a pay-per-view special.
- Ignorance is bliss, so the joke is on the educated.
- Chrysler killed the cat.
- Laughter is the best medicine for the hypochondriac.
- Lightning never strikes in the same place twice. But people are mobile.
- Like father, like son, or else inquire about your adoption.
- Laugh and the shrinks will come and get you. Cry about it and the courts will get you.
- Let the buyer beware, unless the warranty covers parts and labor.
- People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones, they should paint.
- All's fair in love and war. (Same difference.)
- You are what you eat; you aren't what you excrete.
- Dead men tell no tales. Some dead women could find a way.
- Hitch your wagon to a horse.
- Nothing is certain except taxes.
- Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me; fool me thrice, and I'll kick your ass.
- Don't bite the hand that feeds you. Apparently, it's OK for everyone else.
- Don't butter your bread on both sides, unless you're playing a joke.

- I made your bed; can I lie in it with you?
- Save your money for a rainy day, and then go buy an umbrella.
- Speak well of the dead; they've suffered enough.
- Deceive not yourself, or you're really stupid.
- The shortest distance between two points is a gas station.
- Divide and conquer, then let the UN clean up the mess.
- Love conquers all, including insanity.
- To err is human, to forgive is divine, to forget is to ask for a replay.
- A man who is his own doctor should file a malpractice suit. Either way, he wins.
- A sleeping dog never bites. It wakes up.
- If you lie down with the dogs, then you'll wake up with the fleas. Of course, if you're sleeping with the dogs you probably don't care who you wake up with.
- A penny saved is a peso earned.
- Early to bed and early to rise makes a man an insomniac who oversleeps his alarm clock.
- A woman never forgets.
- Imitation is the most sincere form of flattery, and a copyright violation.

Some sayings were revised before I got to them. For instance, "Cleanliness is next to godliness, so why go to church?" Then, "Love thy neighbor, but leave his wife alone," and "Familiarity breeds contempt, and children."

Others are so obvious, I wonder how they became clichés. For instance, "Bread always lands butter-side down." Imagine that. "The heaviest side hits first." Wait 'til dice makers figure this out.

By the way, I have one original saying that is not a cliché. But it should be:

Love is a four-letter word.

ASU yet to understand value, utility of bicycles

Bikes are a common and practical form of transportation, especially in a college town. Bikes are not only affordable and a good source of exercise, but they can cut down on traffic and pollution. Why, then, does ASU fail to recognize the amount of students using bicycles as transportation? The reason why I ask this question is because as a pedestrian and a biker I can offer the typical scenario.

It's 10:25 and you leave to get to your 10:40 class. As you begin your journey to campus you are faced with having to challenge other bikes, pedestrians, and cars. Even on the big open roads, any student has to face mass pandemonium fighting his way through ASU vehicles and the above-mentioned.

To me it seems logical to create more bike lanes, especially in the areas where you are not to ride at all such as near the MU. In order to get to the Farmer Building you have to get off your bike and walk about 10 minutes. If you fail to do so then you get scolded by these annoying little bike patrollers who are themselves on bikes. It does not make sense. ASU should make provisions that enable bike access to all campus buildings throughout the day.

Comments about University Archives taken out of context

In no way did I attack the practices of the University Archives, as claimed in the April 7 issue of the State Press. Reporter Jason Hill never asked for my opinion of the University Archives. He asked me about the Tempe Historical Museum's Oral History Project, and I took more than half an hour to explain about our program and answer his questions.

I was shocked to read how some of my comments had been taken out of context. I did point out that ASU had undertaken several oral history projects over the years. He seemed unimpressed that the University had the foresight long ago to interview administrators and department heads. I also observed that neither the Tempe Historical Museum nor, to my knowledge, the University had done oral history interviews with students relating to student life. However, when put in perspective, that is not an indication that ASU is not preserving its history. Manuscripts, documents, photographs and many other resources in the Archives provide a very complete record of ASU's history.

Arizona State University and the city of Tempe share a lot of common history, and the University Archives and the Tempe Historical Museum work together to document and preserve that tradition. I resent implication that I attacked my friends and colleagues at the University Archives, and I am amazed that Mr. Hill could show such careless disregard for my reputation on campus.

Video gamers must fight congressional censorship

This letter is in regard to violence in video games. I'd like to show people who think we game players are mindless zombies that yes, we can think for ourselves. I also want to let people who don't know what's going on what the game players' fight is about.

When I say fight, I mean fight. People on Capitol Hill, namely Sen. Joseph Lieberman and Sen. Herb Kohl, are wanting violence in video games removed. What about we adult players? People may say that adults don't play video games — well, they're wrong. About 40 percent of Sega Genesis players are over eighteen. If I want to play a game with blood, guts and gruesome fatalities, that is my prerogative — the game in question being Mortal Kombat. Or maybe I would like to play a game with almost naked women being killed by vampire wannabes, the game being Night Trap.

I do agree with the senators on one point, however; little children should not be learning from and watching live action women being killed, although this is at the parents' discretion. Both games I have referred to have (or, in the case of Night Trap, had) ratings on them for parents to look at and consider. Apparently these parents did not care about the ratings, or did not take them seriously. Parents started getting scared that their children would attack their friends. But if these parents did not want their children to play these games, they should not have bought them. Parents should not blame the game makers because they did not take the time to see if the material was suitable for their children.

Most game makers are putting disclaimers and ratings on their software. Parents should pay attention to them. Adult players have the right to choose what they want to play, and the gamers have the right to make what will sell. Will adult game players eventually have to go to game pornography stores to buy or rent "X" rated software? In a way, that is sad, but it will also be helpful for us adult players and the game makers.

Draws an interesting parallel to the movie industry, doesn't it?

David Tung defends campaign for office

In order to clarify the confusion surrounding my candidacy, I am writing this to present my reasoning for running for the office of ASASU Activities Vice President.

Presently, I serve as president of the Memorial Union Activities Board. As president of MUAB, I oversee an executive budget of $20,000+ and am responsible for the leadership of MUAB membership. While serving in MUAB, I gained the vision of serving the ASU community through quality programming as a volunteer. While my opponent speaks of co-sponsorship and reaching out to other campus organizations.

In addition, I also serve as the co-chair of the Asian Coalition. I am also a representative on both the Cultural Diversity Committee and Campus Environment Team. Besides all activities I am involved in, I am also an honor student who works part time. I possess good time management skills in balancing my work loads and campus involvement. During the fall semester, I will no longer be holding any of my current positions. I will only focus on the Activities Vice Presidency and Student Regency.

Some of the students have expressed concern over my dual positions. As a student regent, my duties and role are to represent Arizona students regarding educational issues, such as tuition, student services, etc. As the ASU Activities Vice President, my primary role is to oversee the activities and programs that ASASU will provide for the students. My departments will include Lecture Series, Entertainment, Environmental issues which are very different from tuition and educational issues. I don't see the conflict between the two positions.

My vision for the office of Activities Vice President centers on co-sponsoring programs with other student groups. By combining human and financial resources with ASASU with other student organizations, we can bring quality programs that benefit all students, not special interest groups. I plan to bring nationally known speakers, writers, and lecturers such as Sandra Day O'Connor and George Bush. I also plan to continue to expand the successful Sneak Preview Program for ASU students.

Furthermore, the State Press editorial staff and reporters only interviewed people who gave unqualified opinions, such as my opponents Pat Baker and Mark Wendell, concerning my ability to hold two high-profile positions. Uneducated opinions from people such as Michael Chu can only bring one side of the story. They have not bothered to interview any of the people that I currently work with on MUAB or any of the activities with which I am involved.

I think the focus of the campaign has gone off-track. ASU students need to look at all candidates' qualifications in order to cast an informed vote. The candidates need to focus on issues, not on negative rhetoric to win students' votes.

I have the ability and dedication to serve the ASU student community while being Arizona Student Regent and ASASU Activities Vice President. I am committed to serving the community that has supported me in my personal development. I hope the students will listen to both sides of the issues and make an informed decision when they vote.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- A female ASU student reported she lost nine keys belonging to ASU in the Business Administration Building.
- A female ASU employee reported she lost two keys in Phoenix belonging to ASU.
- A female ASU student reported her $250 bike stolen from the bike racks at Cholla Hall where it was secured with a U-lock.
- A male ASU employee reported he found a bike in Area 58. Police impounded the bicycle for safekeeping.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- A man on a work furlough program was robbed Tuesday at gunpoint by a stranger who asked for a ride.

The victim had stopped at the Circle K at I-10 and Baseline Road on his way back to the Estrella Jail tent city. While walking back to his car, a man he had seen inside the store asked him for a ride to another Circle K where he said his car had broken down.

The victim drove down Baseline to 40th Street where the man asked him to turn right. When the victim turned, the man reportedly pulled a gun and demanded his money. The victim escaped with $135.

- A 19-year-old Phoenix man was arrested

Tuesday after leading police on a high speed car chase after an officer attempted to pull him over speeding.

Police clocked the man going 61 mph in a 35 mph zone in the 1700 block of north College Ave. At one point, the chase reached speeds in excess of 85 mph.

Police were able to corner the man and charged him with felony fleeing.

- Police are investigating a fire they believe was intentionally set Saturday to a Tempe man's recreation vehicle in an alley behind 7703 S. Heather. A police officer on patrol noticed the fire and called the fire department.

- Three reported gang members allegedly assaulted a 14-year-old girl and her mother at 1559 W. Seventh Pl., after the girl and her sister asked them to leave. The three youths are acquaintances of one of the girls and when it started getting late she asked them to leave. The youths became belligerent and began shouting obscenities from the lawn.

One youth punched the 14-year-old girl and her mother who had come outside to help. All three youths left before police arrived.

Students say auto theft prevention program infeasible

Sticker would identify stolen cars during late night hours

By Jason Hill
STATE PRESS

A program to be used by the Tempe Police Department to prevent auto theft will be 'ineffective' and 'not worth trying', according to ASU students interviewed Wednesday.

The C.A.T. (Combat Auto Theft) program requires registered car owners of vehicles to sign a waiver stating that their vehicle is not usually driven between the hours of 1 and 5 a.m. After ownership of the vehicle is verified, a sticker is placed in the left rear window of the vehicle. The sticker gives police officers the permission to stop the vehicle between these hours.

"I think students who tried the program would realize the mistake they made afterwards," said McKinley Sydnor, a junior economics major who felt it would cramp students' lifestyles if they joined the program.

Rick Young, a junior nutrition major, agreed with Sydnor saying, "this program) will be very ineffective."

"I don't think that's going to work. No way, what if you had to go out at 5 a.m.," said Marlo Wernick, a senior sociology major.

Marlo Sebens, a senior justice major said that the program simply isn't worth trying.

A C.A.T. decal user disagreed with those opposed to the use of the sticker.

"If it just stops one car from being stopped then it's effective," said Patricia Wagner, who has been using the sticker for nine months. She got a sticker after several of the family's cars were stolen over a period of two years.

Wagner said that there have been several times when she and members of her family have been out between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. and not been verified as the owners of the vehicle by police.

"Sometimes it can give you a false sense of security," Wagner said.

Kristen Miller, a State Farm Insurance agent, said she thinks it would be an effective way to stop car theft, saying, "I don't think that's a bad idea because most people don't drive their cars between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m."

State Farm does not give deductions on auto insurance to people using C.A.T. stickers or car alarms.

It does not cost any money to register for the C.A.T. program. Students interested in signing up need to bring their vehicles to the White Glove Car Wash at McClintock and Guadalupe, from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. this Saturday.

ASU to host job fair Saturday

100 potential employers to be on campus

BY CHRISTINA BAILEY
STATE PRESS

Supply and demand in the job market can mean the difference between flipping hamburgers and working in the field of choice.

On Saturday, April 23, ASU will host the Arizona Collegiate Job Fair '94 from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. on the second floor of the MU.

Representatives from about 100 companies with available job openings will be on campus to do on-the-spot interviews for graduating seniors and alumni only.

Jim Clayton, a career specialist senior for ASU Career Services, said that while an ASU education is "second to none," the activities that students decide to join while in college determine how far they advance in the job market.

With companies doing on-the-spot interviewing, it is imperative that students prepare themselves beforehand, said Linda Nessam, a career specialist senior for ASU Career Services.

ASU Career Services released a list of "to do's" to help prepare students for Saturday's Job Fair.

- Research the specific companies coming to the job fair.
- Dress for success: conservative attire.
- Have resumes for all the employers plus additional copies.
- Carry a list of references and any other additional credentials for your field.
- Be prepared to ask job-related questions.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — How does the supreme spiritual leader of Tibetan Buddhists relax? He watches "M-A-S-H."

The Dalai Lama, who lives in exile in Dharmasala, India, arrived in the San Francisco Bay area Tuesday as part of a two-week American tour.

He touched on topics ranging from U.S. economic policy toward China to "M-A-S-H," his favorite TV show before evening prayers.

"It comes on at 5:30 p.m., in time for my evening tea," he said, laughing. "So my office does not start my evening prayers until the appropriate time."

The Nobel Peace Prize winner said he feels defeated at the prospect of freeing Tibet from the Chinese, who have controlled the region since 1950. He has failed to get the Chinese government to negotiate the future of the Himalayan kingdom.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Reba McEntire considers herself a bad communicator. "I have a lot of my daddy in me," the country star said. "I have a lot of his drive and his determination, and his eagerness to succeed, but also, I'm a terrible communicator."

Her father, Clark McEntire, is a three-time world champion calf roper.

"I tell about a fourth — and explain about a fourth — of what I'm wanting to say," McEntire told The Tennessean in a story Wednesday. "I got that from Daddy."

Bantam Books just published her autobiography, Reba: My Story.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Marge Schott the chain-smoker will do her puffing in private when she watches her Cincinnati Reds play.

Schott was photographed violating a city-ordinance by smoking in her box seat behind the team's dugout. First, she said she didn't care if anyone complained, then she said she would stop.

"I've never broken the rules in my life," she told the Dayton Daily News in a story Wednesday. "This country has turned into wimps. I think a lot of people see more important things to focus on to help this country."

City officials said Schott would be cited for violating the law if she smoked in her usual front-row seat at Riverfront Stadium. On Tuesday, she stayed in her skybox, where she is permitted to smoke, during a game against Pittsburgh.

Gymnastics looks for 1st crown

Senior Chris Jantz will help lead the sixth-ranked ASU women's gymnastics team in its quest for its first national title at the NCAA Women's Gymnastics Championships in Salt Lake City. The Championships begin today and continue through Saturday.

ASU seeks elusive title, long-deserved respect

BY JEREMY STEIN
STATE PRESS

When the sixth-ranked Sun Devils take the floor tonight at the NCAA Women's Gymnastics Championships in Salt Lake City, they will not only be looking for their first team title ever, but they will also seek some respect.

Since its initiation in 1975, the ASU women's gymnastics team has managed three second-place finishes at the NAAs (1983, '85 and '86) and had eight individual national titles, all under current coach John Spini. Yet, the team national title has remained elusive.

"I've been here 14 years, and we've been runner-up three times and we've been in the top 10 several times. Winning a national championship would be nice," Spini said. "It would mean everything to me if all the kids walk away healthy and we win the national championship."

In the quest for their first national title, the Sun Devils will also be looking to prove that they are among the nation's best. ASU enters the 12-team championships as the No. 11 seed, and is coming off a 12th-place finish at last year's NAAs.

"We want to do better this year. We want to show them who we are and that last year was just a fluke," junior Michele Naia said.

Although the team had a less-than-

No. 1 UofA embarrasses softball

Sun Devils out-hit 32-5 in 18-0, 8-0 waxings

BY TODD KELLY
STATE PRESS

The UofA softball team came to Tempe Wednesday night and lived up to its No. 1 ranking with a doubleheader sweep of ASU (16-33 overall, 1-11 Pac-10) by scores of 18-0 and 8-0 in front of 571 fans at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

The attendance marked the largest crowd of the year.

"It's hard to say if we had played better, we would have won," said ASU coach Linda Wells. "I don't know if I think that. We get into a little combination of they get a hit and we don't make the plays we need to make."

Susie Parra led the charge for the Wildcats (44-2, 12-0) by throwing a two-hit shutout in the first game. The only two ASU hits were singles by Lisa Dacquisto and Jeanne Redondo. She also batted three-for-four including a three-run home run in the fourth inning.

Parra continued her hot hitting in the second game, with a triple in the fourth inning and another three-run homer in the fifth, giving her seven RBIs on the night. She now has 11 homers on the season. Also, Parra is now 20-1 for the season in the circle.

UofA scored of every inning of the opener, hastening the arrival of the 10-run mercy rule. The Wildcats pounded out 18 hits, including a double, two triples and Parra's homer.

In the second game, Wells mixed up ASU's defense, playing six players out of their normal positions. Only third baseman Alyssa Johnson, catcher Juliane Castro and pitcher Mona Nard could be found in their usual positions.

"What you mostly say to yourself is 'What can happen?'" Wells said.

Laura Espinoza, the nation's home run and RBI leader, had only a single in the first game, but hit a two-run blast in the second, her 24th four-bagger of the year.

ASU now hits the road for a six-game trip beginning Friday, traveling to No. 11 Washington, No. 15 Oregon and Oregon State.

As for the 12-game losing streak, Tina Ruff said: "We're gonna do it this weekend. We're gonna sweep Washington and we're gonna end our streak."

Struggling ASU travels to Pac-10 Championship

BY DAWN WAGNER
STATE PRESS

After suffering a regular-season Pac-10 South record of 0-10, the 27th-ranked ASU men's tennis team looks to gain its first conference victory this weekend at the Pac-10 Conference Championships.

The Sun Devils (8-12 overall) travel to Ojai, Calif. where they will participate in the 95th annual Ojai Valley Tennis Tournament. The competition which begins today, continues through Sunday.

The Pac-10's six Southern Division tennis programs, plus representatives from the three Northern Division schools (Washington, Oregon and Oregon State), will be competing in the individual competition.

The men's competition, which will take place at Ojai's Libbey Park, begins today with two rounds of singles play.

Top contenders for ASU include Sargis Sargsian, the No. 4 singles player in the nation. Sargsian holds a record of 31-7 over the regular season.

In doubles play, Sargsian and Peter Jeschke hold a record of 13-3 over the regular season. They were ranked No. 2 in the latest ITA poll.

According to Pac-10 media relations spokesman Danette Macri, the Southern Division Team champion will be determined by round robin play.

By this format, top-ranked USC is the front-runner for the 1994 Southern Division Pac-10 Conference Championship. The Northern Division determined its champion by a combination of individual and team play earlier this month, with Washington sweeping both titles.

Competition is expected to be anything but easy. The Pac-10 has 17 men individually ranked among the top 95 in the country and eight men's doubles teams among the top 40 impressive third-place showing at the Midwest Regional April 9, the Sun Devils enter the NCAAs with a 13-4 dual meet record and high expectations.

Junior Sargis Sargsian, who is currently ranked No.4 in singles play, joins the rest of the Sun Devils this weekend at the Pac-10 championships. ASU is looking for their first conference win.

"I expect the team to do very well," ASU assistant coach Tracy Moser said. "Their mental attitude is real strong and they have the potential to do very well."

While it will take a complete team effort for ASU to bring home a national championship trophy, several gymnasts will play a key role in the team's success.

Junior Tina Brinkman, an All-America on floor her freshman year, will be vying for her first NCAA individual championship. Brinkman, a three-time Pac-10 floor champion, is a threat to take first in the floor, vault and all-around competitions, having posted a perfect 10 on vault and an ASU record 39.475 in the all-around in ASU's final dual meet of the season.

On beam, junior Danna Lister will be a strong force. Lister, who is a two-time All-Pac-10 performer, has recorded two perfect 10s on beam this season, giving her four in her collegiate career.

Seniors Debbi Bryan, Chris Jantz, Mindi Jones, Stephanie Klein and Suzy Person will also be important for ASU's success. Not only will they all be called upon to turn in great performances, but they will also provide leadership in their final collegiate gymnastics meet.

The championships will run for three days, April 21-23, at Utah's Jon H. Huntsman Center. The team competition lasts two days and is divided into two sessions, while the individual competition takes place on the final day.

During play this weekend, the top singles and doubles players will be crowned.

"It's an individual tournament," ASU's Paul Reber said.

According to Macri, the Pac-10 Championships are used strictly for this purpose.

"If you want to determine how a team championship is made, it's based upon their win-loss percentage and how well they do at the Pac-10's as a team," Macri said. "That will all go into their win-loss percentage. You know, who they beat and so forth. This will all affect the matches that still have to be played after the Pac-10s. Whoever has the highest win-loss percentage will be the Pac-10 champion and those people, depending on how many spots we get, will all go on to the NCAA."

The NCAA championships are scheduled for May 20-29 in South Bend, Indiana.

Tennis in clear, on road to Ojai

BY ELIZABETH A. APPELEN
STATE PRESS

The NCAA's new interpretation of Bylaw 12.1.2 spread mass confusion throughout the collegiate tennis world last week, threatening the ineligibility of ASU's top five women's tennis players.

However, the five Sun Devils are now in the clear and are all eligible to compete in the 1994 Pac-10 Championships in Ojai, Calif. which begins today and continues through Sunday.

The bylaw formerly stated if an amateur tennis player competed at summer tournaments, he or she can't receive prize money above and beyond travel expenses.

Last week, the interpretation of the bylaw changed. After much confusion, the NCAA's interpretation of the bylaw is that the amateur who competes at summer tournaments must have filled out an Amateur Reimbursement Form to show they did not receive more money than expenses.

"The rule was very ambiguous. On Friday there is one NCAA interpretation and on Monday there is another," ASU Coach Sheila McInerney said.

Unfortunately, No. 2 player Joelle Schad did not have a reimbursement form to show her innocence because she competed in foreign competitions where they do not have USTA (United States Tennis Association) reimbursement forms.

"Technically, she (Schad) is in the same boat as all these other kids because she hasn't received more than her expenses," McInerney said. "In my opinion, they're (the NCAA) sort of picking on the foreign athlete a little bit."

Even though all of the Sun Devils are eligible to compete, Schad and Julie Coppinger won't be making the trip. Coppinger has a shoulder injury and Schad has academic responsibilities to attend to.

11th-ranked Davidson is expected to blow away her opponents in both the singles and the doubles along with her partner Meredith Geiger. The duo is ninth-ranked and has only lost two matches this season.

Geiger, the squad's only senior, will be competing in her last Pac-10 Championship. She has compiled a 9-10 dual match record playing the No. 3 and No. 4 positions.

"I am expecting to do well," Geiger said. "I am gonna go out there with the attitude that I am gonna take it one match at a time and go after it."

The tournament team champion will be determined by double round-robin play, which has already been played during the season. The team with the highest win-loss percentage will be the conference champion.

Women's play will be at the Ojai Valley Inn Tennis Center. Matches begin at 8 a.m. with two rounds of singles on opening day. One round of singles and two rounds of doubles will be played on Friday. All semi-final and final matches will be played on Saturday and Sunday at Ojai's Libbey Park.

After the Pac-10 Championships, the Sun Devil team will start preparing for the NCAA Championships held May 13-21 in Athens, Ga.
