FOUR'S A CROWD

Ordinance could pose problem for potential apartment renters

By DAVID PROFFITT
STATE PRESS

If you're are thinking about moving into an apartment next semester, watch out. A little-known and rarely enforced Tempe ordinance has caught some students and apartment complexes by surprise.

A law that has been on the books since the 1930s prohibits more than three unrelated people from living in the same apartment. Although the law is only sporadically enforced, it can cause major headaches for students looking to cut costs on rent.

Matt Ellsworth, a junior English major, found out first-hand when he and three friends tried to rent at Rancho Murietta Apartments.

"One of the first things they said when we told them we had four people coming (is) that we couldn't put four people in a two-bedroom place because we aren't related," he said.

Before this spring, Rancho Murietta routinely signed leases with four people in a two-bedroom apartment.

Shantel Lytel, a leasing agent at the complex, said a new management company recently bought the complex and its policy is to prohibit more than three people in two-bedroom apartments.

She said she did not know if it was in response to the Tempe ordinance.

Anthony Chavez, a junior journalism major and Ellsworth's roommate, said the ordinance, and its sporadic enforcement, came as a complete surprise.

"We found out about it on our (apartment) search," he said. "It doesn't really make a lot of sense."

The four have since found another apartment complex that would rent to four people.

Student Health gets hepatitis-A vaccine

By N. SCOTT TRIMBLE
STATE PRESS

The ASU Student Health Center received the vaccine for hepatitis-A last week, making the center among the first in the country to provide definite prevention against the disease.

The vaccine, called Havrix, is the first hepatitis-A vaccine to be developed, said Carl Labbe, pharmacist at the health center.

"We used to give gamma-globulin shots which boost the immune system if someone had the infection," he said.

Although less severe than hepatitis-B or C, both of which can cause death, hepatitis-A nonetheless is a serious condition that has evaded prevention until now, Labbe said.

Typically, people traveling abroad to third-world countries with poor sanitation conditions are at high risk to opportunistic diseases such as hepatitis-A. The disease is transmitted by contact with blood or feces.

Symptoms include jaundice-like yellowing of the complexion, nausea and fever. They soon disappear, but a couple of weeks later the symptoms recur with a vengeance, with pronounced swelling of the liver that could be fatal in the sick or elderly, Labbe said.

Last year, 2,272 cases of hepatitis-A were reported in Arizona, said Claire Kioski, spokeswoman for Arizona Disease Prevention Services.

Annually, more than 130,000 people in the United States contract hepatitis-A.

"We usually have a few cases a year here at ASU," she said "It easily can be passed on by (handling of spoiled food)."

Immunizations are about $50 at Student Health, about $10 less than at other sites. The injection prevents infection within one month and only one shot is required. However, a booster is recommended after 6 to 12 months,

Survey shows positive response to winter shutdown

Administrators weigh pros, cons to create next year's schedule

By KENNETH BOLIG
STATE PRESS

Top ASU administrators are considering whether they will repeat the winter break shutdown as they look at the results of an employee survey that show a generally warm reception for the shutdown.

The survey shows a majority of faculty and staff were satisfied with the shutdown and are in favor of a repeat, ASU provost Milton Glick said Monday.

During the campus-wide shutdown, ASU's non-essential services at ASU were closed for 10 days, including three days that usually serve as normal work days for faculty and staff.

The survey, recently completed by ASU's evaluation department, targeted randomly selected faculty and staff to determine if the first-ever shutdown was successful.

Of the 1,990 faculty and staff that responded to the survey,

71 percent said they were satisfied with the shutdown and 83 percent are in favor of the University repeating the closure, said William Johnson, the director of University Evaluation.

Glick said he now will begin discussing the results of the survey with deans of the different colleges, the president's cabinet, classified staff and the Academic Senate to determine whether the shutdown should be repeated. He added that he expects the decision to be made by the end of the semester.

Discussions also will address the 24 percent in the survey who had concerns about the closure, Glick said.

"Right now we are trying to understand the concerns of the people that had problems," Glick said. "Even if it was only 20 percent that had a problem, those problems could be very important to those 20 percent."

but said they failed to understand the reasons behind such a law.

"It seems ludicrous to me," Ellsworth said. "I don't think we're going to get into any illegal or immoral activity just because we're not related."

Atis Krigers, the principal planner for Tempe's Community Development Division, said the portion of the housing ordinance limiting unrelated people living in an apartment is not a major focus for law enforcement.

"It's one of the more difficult portions of the ordinance to enforce, but in fact there is a problem and it comes to light then, yes, the city will go out and pursue it," he said. "Depending on where the complaint comes from and who generates it and how much of a problem it is, then it will be taken seriously."

"It's one of those situations you have to kind of react to what other people tell you," he said. "We can't have our inspectors just going up and knocking on peoples' doors saying, 'How many people live here?' — it's kind of a dual-edged sword."

ASU owns and operates Sonora Center, a residence hall where four people live in a single two-bedroom apartment.

"I'm not familiar with the language of the law, but I would think that housing is part of the University's mission and that we are exempt," said James Rund, dean of Residence Life.

Tempe officials could not be reached for comment on the issue.

According to Krigers, Tempe does not regulate leases between landlords and tenants, but it would be "technically illegal" for them to violate any city ordinances, such as the maximum occupancy law.

If city officials do discover a group of four or more people living in an apartment, the landlord is held responsible because he or she controls the property, he said.

Krigers was unsure of the motivation behind the occupancy limitations, but said "it's potentially likely that the issue of how to deal with college students may have come into the equation."

Vaccine

Labbe said.

Scientists that developed Havrix have estimated the vaccine to work in the body for at least 20 years, he said.

Because sanitation in the United States and other developing countries is getting better, the need for the vaccine may not be imperative. However, Labbe does give advice to students for the summer:

"If you're traveling abroad over the summer, you should really protect yourself from hepatitis-A. It's not deadly, but it is very severe and it will take four months out of your life."

Survey

The most common complaint was the enforced vacation time. Twenty-seven percent of those surveyed said they would rather have taken vacation hours at a different time, Johnson said.

Classified Staff President Robert Curry said the vacation time was the main complaint he heard. He added that classified staff may discuss ways to avoid this, such as using sick days as vacation time.

"Ideally, we don't want extra vacation days, but we are looking into changing personal sick days into vacation days, but that is something up to (the Arizona Board of Regents). We are also worried how that would be perceived by the public."

Another complaint concerning the closure was the time given to faculty and staff to prepare for the shutdown, Curry said.

"We want to give employees the maximum number of options to compensate for the time off," he said. "We want the University to give them enough time in advance. That would be the one thing that if we could have done better. I wish we had. I am hoping they make the decision sooner."

According to the University survey, 20 percent of the respondents would have preferred that the University had informed them earlier. Faculty and staff were notified of the closure Oct. 20 in a letter from ASU President Lattie Coor.

Despite the complaints, the majority of the classified staff response was positive, Curry said. He conducted his own survey of more than 1,100 classified staff, finding that about 95 percent want another shutdown.

"Across the board, the response was fairly positive," Curry said.

Around the World

Nuclear arms race cleanup to cost $230-$350 billion, Dept. of Energy says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cleanup of radioactive waste left over from decades of nuclear weapons production will take longer than the Cold War itself and cost between $230 billion and $350 billion, the government estimated Monday.

The largest environmental cleanup ever undertaken still is expected to leave hundreds of acres contaminated with buried debris and cordoned off from the public. Many of the other areas would be suitable only for limited uses.

The staggering cost estimate announced Monday by the Energy Department envisions a middle-of-the road approach to cleaning up the legacy from nuclear research, production and testing during the decades of the Cold War.

U.S., Russia lock diplomatic horns

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia rejected a U.S. request Monday to abandon a planned sale of nuclear reactors to Iran, and, in a new point of dispute, said it might take "countermeasures" if NATO expanded east toward Russia.

After a full day of meetings with top government officials, Defense Secretary William Perry told reporters he had failed to persuade the Russians that selling the reactors would enhance Iran's efforts to acquire nuclear weapons.

Perry said Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin assured him his government would see to it that Iran did not use the reactors for any nuclear weapons purpose.

"I told him I do not share that confidence," Perry told a news conference.

In a further sign of discord between Moscow and Washington, Gen. Pavel Grachev, the defense minister, told reporters after meeting with Perry that Russia might be compelled to take "countermeasures" if NATO expanded its 16-nation membership to include Eastern European countries on Russia's borders.

Up to 450 Hutus slaughtered in Burundi

BUJUMBURA, Burundi (AP) — At least 150 Hutus, mostly women and children, were massacred in a single village in northeastern Burundi by attackers who shot or bludgeoned them to death, the U.S. ambassador said Monday.

The killings took place between Wednesday and Friday in the village of Gasorwe, said Ambassador Robert Krueger. The death toll for the whole region could be as high as 450 in killings over the past two weeks.

Former United Way head found guilty of stealing $600,000 in funds

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Former United Way of America president William Aramony was convicted Monday of stealing nearly $600,000 from the nation's biggest charity and lavishing it on young women, some only in their teens.

A federal jury deliberated more than seven days before finding Aramony guilty of 25 counts of fraud, conspiracy and money laundering.

Aramony was charged along with Thomas J. Merlo and Stephen J. Paulachak with siphoning off money that had been donated to the charity by businesses and individuals. Merlo was convicted of 17 counts; Paulachak, of eight.

After the scandal broke in 1991, donations to United Way fell off sharply. They recovered slowly but never reached the pre-scandal level of $3.1 billion in 1990.

"This verdict sends the message that society won't tolerate individuals who are charged with protecting the precious assets of charity diverting those assets for their own personal use," Assistant U.S. Attorney Randy Bellows said.

Aramony and Merlo could get about five years in prison. Paulachak could get about two years. Sentencing was set for June 14.

During the three-week trial, the government depicted the 67-year-old Aramony as a dictatorial executive who treated girlfriends and cronies to all-expenses-paid vacations and tried to intimidate or buy off those who might expose him.

Hoop dreams

6 dead in Texas shooting

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A former employee opened fire Monday in a refinery inspection company, killing the owner, his wife and three workers before fatally shooting himself, police said.

The shooting took place at Walter Rossler Co., an industrial inspection company where authorities believe the gunman was once employed.

Up to 10 people were still inside the business when the gunman entered through the back door and began shooting, said Police Chief Henry Garrett. Two workers escaped by crawling out the back door, he said.

"We know that everyone he came in contact with, he did shoot and kill and then shot himself," Garrett said.

The gunman, identified as 28-year-old James Simpson, was carrying at least two pistols, said Assistant Police Chief Ken Bung.

"When we arrived, we learned preliminarily that a disgruntled employee walked in and started shooting. ... We're still trying to piece together the why of what happened," Bung said.

The victims were identified as owner Walter Rossler, 62; his wife, Joann Rossler, 62; Derek Harrison, 35; Wendy P. Gilmore, 41; and Richard Tomlinson, 34.

Simpson and one victim were declared dead upon arrival at a hospital, police said.

The bodies of the other victims remained at the scene hours after the shooting, drawing dozens of onlookers and grieving relatives to the north Corpus Christi neighborhood.

Chris Cline, 17, said he and his father were working at their house near the company when the attack began.

"Me and my father did hear shots. ... Usually we do hear firecrackers go off, so we didn't pay much attention to it," he said.

University students rally for environment

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 college students from 40 states rallied on Capitol Hill on Monday against congressional efforts to weaken a host of U.S. environmental laws.

"I'm scared. I'm very fearful of this Congress," said Sonia Slater of Seattle, a freshman at Western Washington University in Bellingham, Wash.

Campus Green Vote, a nonpartisan student organization organized the Earth Day Campus Summit here, urging students to lobby Congress in conjunction with the 25th anniversary of Earth Day on April 22.

"Twenty-five years later we are facing a full frontal attack on the cornerstones of our environmental legacy," said Kalpana Krishnamurthy, a student at the University of Oregon in Eugene.

"It is our generation that will bear the burden of the anti-environment actions of the new Congress," she said.

Environmental activism is on the rise on college campuses, said Chris Fox, executive director of Campus Green Vote.

Organized environmental and recycling groups on campuses have grown from a few hundred five years ago to more than 2,500 today, he said.

Cybersurfing censors

Avast, ye maties! Batten down the home page and hoist the hard drive — it's Jim "Bluestocking" Exon and his crew of mangy senators off the port bow.

Exon has fired the first broadside at the Internet, proposing the Communications Decent Act of 1995. If it passes, it will become a crime to transmit or post "obscene ... filthy or indecent" images, e-mail, text or any other form of communications.

Arrrrr — and that would be a blasted fool thing to do.

Agreed, there's (probably) few people at ASU or in the United States at large who log in to, say, alt.binaries.erotica or alt.sex.bestiality.

Also agreed, Exon and his congressional corsairs mean well. Unlike print media or cable broadcasts, it's difficult to self-police the internet to prevent your 12-year-old from logging on to, say, the Playboy home page. The regulation would make the internet a "family" environment, but by feeding some of its existing community to the sharks.

And, just like walking the plank, the first step of regulation is a long one. Most cybersailors won't grow weepy if it becomes a felony to, say, transmit pictures of puppy-dog sex. As the old saying goes, 90 percent of people don't care.

But that's not the point. The point is whether or not the government's scurvy censors should be regulating it.

Should it regulate alt.nuke-the-usa, a forum for people to vent their spleen about how much America the Beautiful sucks? Not only is this seditious and treasonous in some cases, it takes place with the use of many a colorful metaphor, and nary a smiley face — represented, for those unfamiliar with "netiquette," as :-).

What about, say, alt.games.frp, or alt.pagan, both of which deal with topics that much of Washington is queasy about: non-Christian religious belief and role-play gaming. Shall we be bannin' those, too?

Any step toward regulating "filthy" materials will inevitably snowball. And even if one agrees that pornography isn't a healthy thing, the fact remains that there's an easy way to keep it out already — through the means of not reading it, unsubscribing it or killfiling it.

For a country which has prided itself on free seas and free trade, it seems strange to balk at free communication. And free communication means just that — allowing people to say whatever they want.

The idea underlying the Internet is that it's an unregulated forum, the same way that personal conversation is. Arrrrr, so Exon's worried about his kids hearing dirty things on the net, eh? Better keep them off the play ground, har, har, har.

Furthermore, the net is self-regulating; it's an international forum on which almost anything goes. Since it's international, will Exon be willing to allow, say, Iraq, Libya or Cuba the right to help police it? Me thinks not.

So load the chainshot and run the guns out. It's time to give Exon and his mangy crew a gut full of lead.

Arrrrr.

ASU assault statistics call for more concern

Concerning the article on March 23, "ASU crime rise reflects national trend," I take exception to the blase attitude that these findings were related. This article implies that aggravated assaults at ASU are nothing to be concerned about because it reflects a national trend. This implication is far from the truth.

Since the article only offered a graph for ASU and I was curious to see how the national trend compared, I checked it when I was in the library this weekend. I looked up the national average for aggravated assaults. For the years 1990-93, ASU's aggravated assaults went up by 82 percent while the national trend in aggravated assaults went up 4 percent. In your paper, it showed an increase of 110 percent from 1990-94. I didn't have the data for 1994-95 for the national average, but in order for the national average to catch up to ASU, it would have to have jumped 78 percent in those two years.

Also, other college campuses in Arizona were not covered in your article which I think would have been an interesting addition for comparison. I don't know whether it has changed, but in 1993 ASU had the highest population of students and the lowest ratio of police officers to students (in comparison to NAU and UoA).

Your story seems to suggest that ASU's aggravated assaults and national aggravated assaults are rising the same amount when stating, "Aggravated assaults at ASU have more than doubled in the past five years, coinciding with a national trend of increasing crime against people." However, the trend of aggravated assaults does not coincide. Their only similarity is they are both going up — not, however, by the same amount.

I think this is an important concern for students on campus. I feel that for your article to imply that assaults are no worse at ASU than nationally is misleading. If these statistics are double checked to be true, then they need to be addressed and not written off lightly. Yes, crimes against people are going up nationally, but not by 82 percent.

Frusetta has right idea respecting gun control

Finally, someone who has a logical opinion about gun control on campus and elsewhere. James Frusetta was totally justified in his sarcastic comment that he would "support anything that allows me to carry one of those nifty Russian 30mm Playma grenade launchers;" after all, "nothing works like a few rounds of HE."

If gun control laws continue to be liberalized, we will not only be allowing others to have easier access to a deadly weapon but we will be endangering ourselves. Haven't we all learned our lesson by the many children and innocent victims who have been killed or injured in crossfire and with stray bullets. Or how about the victims of accidental shootings when a gun goes off without intention? Or how about our latest tragedy that struck so close to home and clearly defines the reason why not just anybody should be able to buy or carry a gun.

Angela Ivie, an ASU student, was recently shot and killed by a seventeen-year-old boy who was carrying a semi-automatic weapon. The only response to the crime that the police could give was "there seems to be no reason for the crime," according to Phoenix police detective Mike McCullough in Tuesday's article, "Mourners attend memorial service for slain student." No reason at all. Perhaps these boys were just bored and looking for a good night of terrorizing and murder.

You see, by allowing guns on campus for self-protection and what not simply allows many more chances for another situation like this to occur. Many of the people who would be carrying these guns would not be trained or, like Frusetta said, the guns would many times not even be accessible for use in an emergency. It's time society started looking toward other ways of crime prevention — perhaps more security or better education in self-defense instead of continually debating over the right to carry a gun. In my opinion, the right for every individual to carry a gun is self-destruction, not self-protection.

Teacher sex offenders bring back old memories of abuse

Almost two months ago, I embarked on a maddening journey through hell.

Again.

Only this time I didn't try to run away from it. I was able to embrace it and learn from it. And although it seems like a short amount of time, I have felt myself grow as a writer and a person.

It started out with an article I read in the newspaper about a 13-year-old girl who was molested by her favorite teacher for three years. The writer said it was an "affair," which incensed me.

The dictionary defines an affair as "an amorous episode," amorous meaning "full of love." There is nothing "amorous" about stealing someone's innocence, betraying that person's trust and making that person believe it's their fault.

Then all of sudden there were more teachers accused of molesting their students popping up in the news. I wanted to know how and why this was happening.

I thought I had done investigative reporting before. I thought I knew how to talk to people with power and authority. I thought it would be simple to find the answers I was searching for and that I'd find a system that was up-to-date and hard for sex-offenders to get into.

I was wrong on all counts.

What I found really shocked the hell out me.

In the last five years, at least 15 teachers had their teaching certificates revoked or surrendered them after being accused of or convicted of improper conduct with one or more of their students. There have been six in the last six months.

Every teacher must go through a certification process with the Arizona State Board of Education, which is responsible for conducting preliminary background checks on all teachers wanting to be certified, before they can be hired by a school district.

But before a state law was enacted in 1990, mandating that all new hires be fingerprinted and go through a state and national criminal history check, they didn't do background checks.

Arizona Department of Education director of recertification Berkely Lunt said they had to answer the same questions they ask now regarding their criminal background on a completed notarized application.

CHRISTINA BAILEY
Columnist

"But they could have lied, quite frankly," he said. That's was nice to know considering that half of the teachers accused of or convicted of child molestation had been in the system anywhere from five to 25 years. And those hired before 1990 did not and do not have to be fingerprinted.

It was also nice to know that if a person has never been fingerprinted or convicted of a crime, nothing will show up on their background checks. If a teacher was accused of molestation, some of the schools had tried the facts themselves and either discounted or ignored what the parents and children said or brushed incidents under the carpet so none of us would know.

Now that is changing because school districts are paying millions of dollars in lawsuits.

I couldn't believe that these things were happening and happening at more frequently than any of us knew about.

I talked to one of the Mesa Unified School District's assistant superintendents because at least seven of the teachers accused of molestation came from that district.

I swear, I wanted to go through the phone and strangle her. She basically said incidents like these happen. If 95 percent of the teachers are good, why does the press always have to focus on the bad ones?

The president of the Arizona Providers Association for the Treatment of Sex Offenders said a sex offender will molest an average of 270 different times over a lifetime or before he or she is caught. He also said teacher offenders have a higher rate of victims than other offenders because of their vocation.

That's why we need to focus on this problem.

But nobody wanted to talk about it. Everybody involved in the process seemed to be busy covering their own asses, when all I wanted was the truth.

It wasn't about trying to find someone to blame. It was about trying to find out where the problem was and what was being done about it. It was about making the public more knowledgeable about how this system works or doesn't work and giving them the opportunity to make some changes.

As I gathered the information, I found myself feeling overwhelmed, angry and frustrated. I didn't even know where to begin. One day in class, my professor was trying to help me re-focus and asked me what part was making me the angriest and I just lost it.

I felt like an idiot crying in front of my classmates but I couldn't stop the tears. I felt like no one cared. To me, if one child is violated by a teacher that is one too many.

Later that night, I realized it was more than feeling like nobody cared about these children. It was about me, feeling like nobody cared about me as a child either.

I am a survivor of incest and sexual abuse. I have been dealing with the scars, the anger and the immense pain for about four years.

But it didn't have to be that way, and that's what hurts and angers me the most. When I was growing up, people around me knew something was wrong. The signs were there.

When I was five or six, I had a hickey on my neck. When people asked me what was on my neck, I told them a brick had fallen on it.

Nobody questioned it.

Nobody said anything about the little girl who talked about humping and penises so matter-of-factly or who had stomach problems.

I always believed there was something wrong with me because it happened with more than one person. I always thought if I told, no one would believe me and I would be left alone to rot in hell.

Then, years later, someone very dear to me said she told my mother she thought I was being sexually abused when I was six or seven. But nothing was ever done and she never said another word about it.

I had to endure about 10 years of abuse because no one around thought it was their business. No one thought they could do anything about, nor did they care.

That is why I felt so intensely angry about the comments and reactions I received from these people who are supposed to be protecting our children.

It's a national epidemic that no one wants to hear about, deal with or talk about. Like, somehow, if we ignore the problem, it will go away.

That way of thinking is exactly what keeps the cycle of abuse rolling.

I realized how much I wished there had been someone like me around when I was little so I could at least be understood and feel like someone was trying to stop the craziness.

Our school officials and lawmakers try to say they've done all they can to protect our children. What I say to them and to you is that as long as there are cases of sexual abuse still being reported, we haven't done all we can.

And I will continue to do everything in my power to change that.

Applause for Smith, boos for ASU DPS

This letter is in response to the article that appeared in the March 28 edition of the State Press detailing Laury Smith's horrible experience with ASU's Department of Public Safety following her brutal rape in Parking Structure 1. I was incensed and sickened by the insensitivity of ASUDPS safety immediately after, and in the five weeks following her rape. As the article states, ASUDPS "handled the incident poorly almost from the start." But what I felt more than anything else as I read the article was an admiration for Laury Smith's courage to go public with her story. It has to be deeply painful for her, yet doing so might mean that the next victim's case (unfortunately, there probably will be others) will be treated more sensitively.

I cannot imagine the isolation and fear Smith must have felt when she was forced to return to the scene, alone, with a male officer. Smith does not characterize this officer's treatment of her, but no amount of kindness could have made up for this insensitive and incompetent move on ASUDPS's part. Despite her request for female accompaniment, Smith, "afraid to say anything at that point to any man," had to return to the scene of the rape and possibly relive the whole incident while describing it to the male officer. The least ASUDPS could have done was send a female in order to make this horrifying experience slightly less horrifying.

Smith's isolation and fear obviously continues up until this day, exacerbated by ASUDPS's subsequent treatment of her case. Smith claims that recently ASUDPS has neither contacted her nor returned her phone calls. Keeping Smith updated on their progress (even if it was minimal) would have been the least ASUDPS could have done. Smith's bad experience with ASUDPS has resulted in her confessing that if she were raped again, she would not report it because, in her words, "the aftermath of what I have gone through is worse than what happened to me." Moreover, I wonder about the lack of publicity surrounding the case — besides the composite drawing of the suspect appearing in the State Press a few days after the initial report, I have seen no posters around campus warning the public to watch out for the suspect.

I applaud and support Laury Smith's choice to tell her story to the public. Although the article in the State Press details her negative experiences with ASUDPS, I see some possible good coming from her story. First, ASU ASUDPS might make some changes, changes that would ensure more sensitivity toward victims in the future. Secondly, Smith's telling her story sends the message to women that rape is a violent crime of which victims need not be ashamed. With Smith as a positive role model, as someone who had the courage to go public with her story, the next victim might be more likely to report her rape — not necessarily to go public, just report it.

Letter's self-defense logic unreasonable

This is in response to the letter from Steve Forsberg that appeared in the March 28 edition of the State Press.

According to Forsberg, "virtually any law enforcement agency around would tell you the best way to survive an attack is to cooperate completely with the assailant. Failing that ... fall to the ground, go limp, close your eyes, and count backward." You know, that's probably the same advice you'd get from any gang member! Sheesh. Forsberg continues with, "Even a 100 pound female is difficult to lift ... most criminals will simply leave you and go look for easier prey." WHAT? Steve baby, if lying helplessly on the ground begging for a good kick to the head (or worse) isn't your definition of easy prey, I'm dying to know what is. They won't be "putting away their weapon" as you claim — they'll be putting out your lights, maybe permanently!

Since you seem in need of some good advice, here it is for free, and hopefully in time to save your or someone else's life: The best way to survive an attack is to defend yourself by whatever means necessary. Sure, we have police and an escort service, but they can't always be there. This may shock you, Steve, but some of us actually think we have a right, nay, a moral obligation, to defend ourselves from the parasites of society. You go ahead and play possum, Steve, and if you're lucky, someone else will be lying on the ground nearby with a sign that says "even easier prey than that shmoe" on his head to divert your would-be killer. If not, well, you can't say I didn't warn you.

Anything can happen at Serendipity Fair

BY BETTY MIHALOPOULOS
STATE PRESS

Students should "expect the unexpected" when they stop to survey the various hand-made creations being offered by 27 vendors during the Serendipity Arts and Crafts Fair on campus today through Friday.

Vendors from the outside community as well as from ASU will display and sell items such as jewelry, paintings and clothing from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the Memorial Union's West Lawn. Musicians and a belly dancer will be among the entertainment provided throughout the fair and food will also be available.

"The fair's slogan this year is 'expect the unexpected,'" said Rosalyn Monk, the program director for the Memorial Union Activities Board. "You just never know what little twists the crafts people will put on their creations."

Monk said the fair, which is held every fall and spring semester, has been called Serendipity for as long as she can remember. She said the activities board has been sponsoring the event for about 20 years.

"I think it deals with what the word serendipity means — a fortuitous find of some kind," Monk said.

Monique Walsh, Serendipity coordinator, said most of the vendors are from the western states and sell their crafts to make a living.

"Many of them live in campers and travel around the country just doing these types of fairs," she said.

Walsh, a sophomore business major, said coordinating the fair this year has given her the opportunity to gain some leadership experience while providing something fun for students to do.

"Just the atmosphere is enough — it will be laid back and people can come out, enjoy the entertainment, shop and rest from school for a while," she said.

Prosecutors: Duran faking insanity

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 26-year-old man on trial for trying to kill President Clinton is faking mental illness to escape punishment, a federal prosecutor told a jury Monday.

"The man's faking. He knows this is his only way out," Assistant U.S. Attorney Eric Dubelier said during impassioned closing arguments before jurors began deliberating in the trial of Francisco Martin Duran of Colorado Springs, Colo. "You don't have paranoid schizophrenia one day and it's gone the next day."

But defense attorneys said psychosis prompted Duran to stand in front of the White House for hours last Oct. 29, then suddenly open fire with a semiautomatic rifle.

"He clearly shouldn't have shot at the White House. There's no question about that," Public Defender A.J. Kramer said. "Clearly, Mr. Duran had some crazy ideas. That hardly makes him an assassin."

Two psychiatrists and a psychologist have testified that when Duran began shooting, he was firing at what he thought was an evil "mist" that was taking control of Clinton's mind and leading him to destroy the world.

"In his mind he was protecting us from some sort of force that he believed in," defense attorney Leigh Kenny said. "You may want to laugh about it and say, 'Oh, my God.' ... That tells you more than what the doctors have told you."

Prosecutor Brenda J. Johnson countered: "There was no mist. The only mist is the one they are trying to pull over this jury." Three behavioral experts called by the prosecution testified that Duran was sane at the time.

Academic Senate president-elect already planning for upcoming term in office

BY ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

Thomas Callarman is glad the waiting is over. About six weeks after the ballots for Academic Senate president-elect were mailed out, Callarman was announced as the new president-elect last week.

"Now I can plan the next three years," said Callarman, associate professor of operations with Decision and Information Systems.

Although the results of the election were not released until Friday, Callarman was notified March 27. He said he is pleased and not nervous about the new position.

"I'm confident I will be able to carry out the duties," he said.

Betsy Fahlman, associate professor of art history, was Callarman's only opposition. She could not be reached for comment.

Callarman will serve as the 1995-96 Academic Senate president-elect and as president from 1996-97. After finishing his term as president, he will serve on the 1997-98 Arizona Faculty Council, which reports to the Legislature and the Arizona Board of Regents.

As president-elect, Callarman will assist the president in several capacities, including serving on the council of deans and the AFC.

"My biggest challenge is trying to educate and work with the Legislature to understand what we as faculty and academic professionals do," he said, adding that he is not nervous about working with the Legislature. "I have confidence in myself and the message that we're trying to get across."

Current Academic Senate President Deborah Losse said Callarman will be strong support for Dan Landers, current president-elect and 1995-96 president.

"(Callarman's) been chair of the Financial Affairs Committee, and he did work on the merit-based salary plan, so he's already aware of the way the Senate works," she said. "He's done some valuable work and I think he'll step right into the job."

As Callarman and Landers prepare for their new duties, Losse, whose term is up, prepares to leave the presidency after a "very interesting, busy and productive year." Losse spent the last three months working with University officials to prod the Legislature into appropriating a 5 percent merit-pay raise for faculty and staff. However, on March 16, the Legislature approved only 2 percent.

"I'm still sorry we didn't get further with the salaries for academic professionals and staff, but it's been a great experience," she said.

Cold War legacy: $230 billion of nuclear waste

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cleanup of radioactive waste left over from decades of nuclear weapons production will take longer than the Cold War itself and cost between $230 billion and $350 billion, the government estimated Monday.

The largest environmental cleanup ever undertaken still is expected to leave hundreds of acres contaminated with buried debris and cordoned off from the public. Many of the other areas would be suitable only for limited uses.

The staggering cost estimate announced Monday by the Energy Department envisions a middle-of-the-road approach to cleaning up the legacy from nuclear research, production and testing during the decades of the Cold War.

"The future use of the land and facilities will largely determine if the cost is higher or lower," said Thomas Grumbly, assistant secretary for environmental management. He said in many cases it is not technically possible to return all parts of a facility to pristine conditions.

The Energy Department review, which was sent to Congress, estimates that it will cost $230 billion to decontaminate more than 80 facilities in 30 states with most of the money spent over the next 40 years.

But that scenario envisions productivity gains of 20 percent over the next five years among waste cleanup contractors. Such improvements in efficiency are considered by many to be optimistic. Grumbly said if such improvements are not achieved the costs would soar to $350 billion over the life of the cleanup effort.

Jewish festival to feature art, kosher food

By BETTY MIHALOPOULOS
STATE PRESS

Musicians, kosher food, crafts and an "Ask the Rabbi" booth are all a part of a two-day festival on campus to celebrate Jewish Awareness Month.

The festivities are scheduled from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. today and Wednesday on Hayden lawn.

Musicians will perform Yiddish and Israeli music from noon to 12:30 p.m. today, and Sharona Feller, a cantor, will sing classic Jewish songs from 1:15 p.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday. A cantor leads songs in the choir and chants from the Torah, the Hebrew bible.

Jewish artists will also sell their arts and crafts.

"It's an opportunity to enlighten the senses and learn the breadth and depth of Jewish life," said David Wells, assistant director of Hillel Jewish Student Center. "It's going to be a lot of fun."

David Frankel, outreach coordinator for Hillel, said the festival's purpose is to help publicize the Jewish presence on campus and to share food and religion.

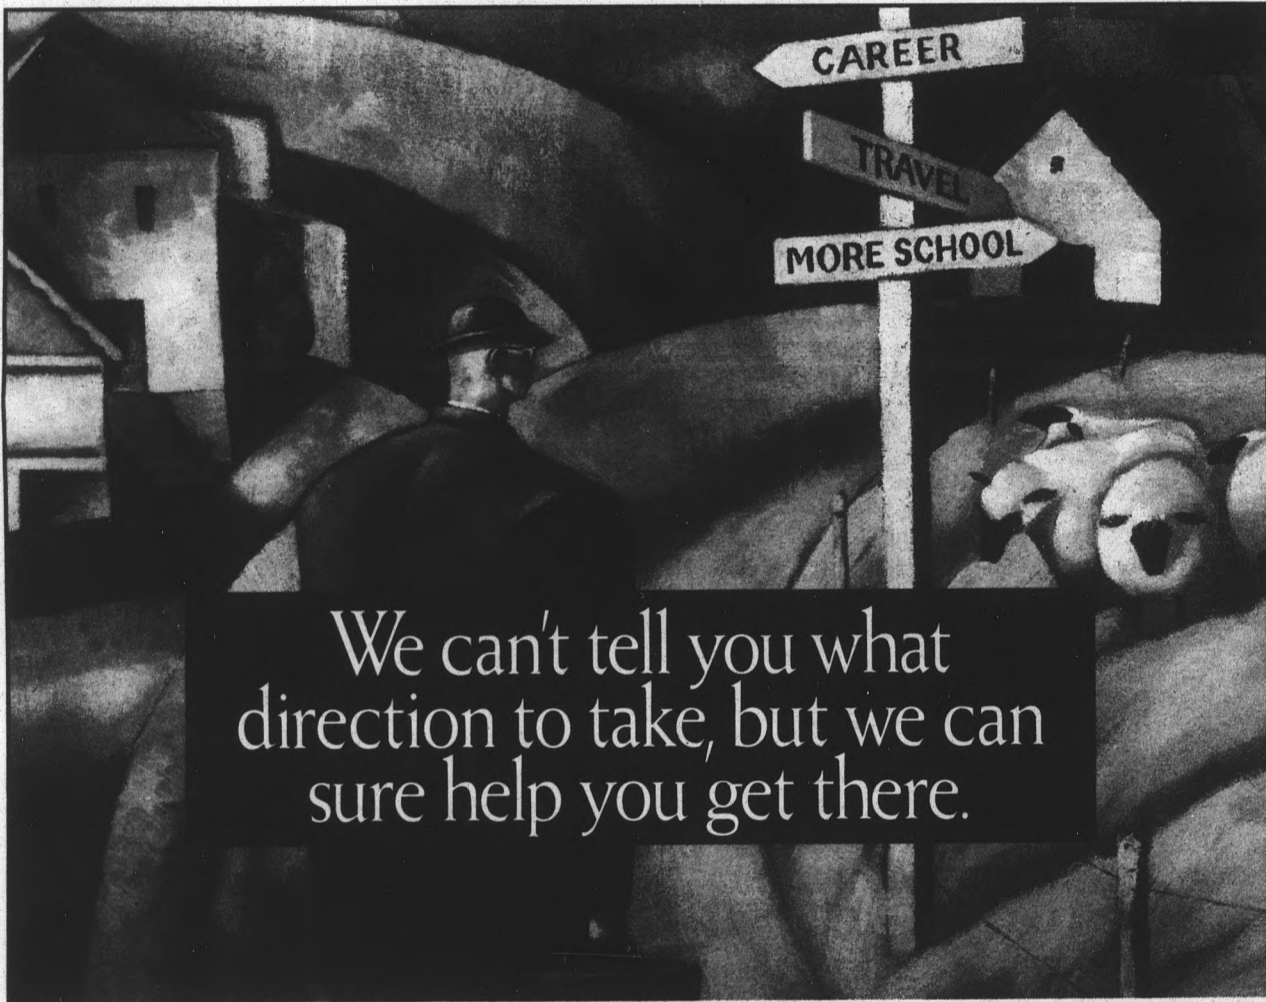

A butcher will be on the premises to sell kosher beef for Passover, a Jewish holiday that will be observed from April 14 to April 22 this year.

"All the food will be kosher," Frankel said. "Jewish law allows only certain sections of cows and other animals to be eaten. If it is a land animal, it must have cloven feet and chew cud."

Rabbis will be available to anyone at the festival who has questions about the Jewish religion or culture.

"Images of the cartoon character Lucy from 'Peanuts' sitting in her booth with the sign 'The psychiatrist is in' came to mind for this idea," said Rabbi Barton Lee of Hillel Jewish Student Center.

Around Arizona

PHOENIX (AP) — Spring training officials were ready for the return of major league baseball players this week in what will be a second spring training for Arizona.

Tentative plans call for players to begin arriving Monday through Wednesday, with reporting mandatory by Friday.

Plans also call for 12 games to be scheduled for the three-week period, six played at home and six played away, said Pies. Teams need to return to their home cities for the start of the season April 26. The exhibition games reportedly will begin April 13.

PHOENIX (AP) — The fields at Arizona spring training ballparks will be in good shape for another three weeks of the game's longest spring season. The question is who, if anyone, will be in the stands.

Attendance at exhibition games involving replacement players was off almost 70 percent from the record crowds attracted in 1994, when the players were debating whether to open the season without a new collective-bargaining agreement.

The window of opportunity may have closed on the state's $250 million spring training industry, though. Many of the winter visitors who bought 276,449 tickets to watch replacement players in the uniforms of their favorite teams have returned home.

A year ago, the eight teams that train in Arizona sold 799,585 tickets.

"No one will come close to making up their losses," said California Angels assistant general manager Tim Mead. "But that financial consideration isn't the issue right now. The worry is getting them prepared for the regular season."

WITTMANN (AP) — A man driving a pickup reported stolen in Missouri was shot and wounded by a Maricopa County sheriff's deputy.

Sheriff's spokesman Sgt. John Kleinheinz said 21-year-old Donald A. Smith of Glendale tried to drive off while the deputy was questioning him early Monday. When he did so, the deputy was dragged 15 to 20 feet.

When Deputy Lance Novasad yelled at Smith to turn off the engine, Smith accelerated again, Kleinheinz said. At that point, Novasad drew his gun and fired two shots, wounding Smith in the left hand.

PHOENIX (AP) — For police officers, the stress of the job doesn't stop when the shift is over.

For those who bottle up the daily trauma they witness, health problems and divorce are often down the road.

A chaplain and former sheriff's deputy wants to change that for officers in the Phoenix area. John South has started the non-profit Law Enforcement Ministries to provide counseling and other services to officers dealing with the trauma of the worst part of their jobs.

The center, dedicated last month, includes a non-denominational Christian chapel, a lounge, a library and a lush courtyard. Day care is offered and South is always on call for counseling in a family or job-related crisis.

FLAGSTAFF (AP) — Some people hiking in the Verde Valley stumble upon an area that just doesn't smell the way a pinon juniper forest should.

A strong chemical odor fills the air, and there's a large, wet spot on the otherwise dry ground.

After testing the soil, the U.S. Forest Service determines that somebody has dumped several drums of cleaning solvents on the ground. Thirty cubic yards of soil must be removed to insure the chemicals don't seep into the groundwater stream and pollute the Verde River.

Cleaning this hazardous waste site, which was discovered last Easter on the Coconino National Forest, cost the agency about $20,000.

Unfortunately, it was not an isolated incident.

As laws regulating landfills became more particular about what type of waste can be plowed into the ground, a growing number of Arizonans have begun dumping toxic materials in the national forest, officials with the Forest Service said.

"Five years ago, when I started working here, nobody spent any time on hazardous waste," said Alan Anderson, hazardous materials coordinator for the Coconino National Forest. "Today, I spend half of my work week on it. It's very much a concern."

Oil, cleaning solvents, old gasoline and asbestos-contaminated roofing shingles are among the more common hazardous products dumped in the woods.

Besides destroying the vegetation and posing a threat to animals and people, chemicals in such products can seep into the groundwater and drinking wells posing a health hazard to humans.

A typical dumper may be an individual cleaning out a storage shed containing a year's worth of old paint products, garden pesticides and engine fuel. Small business owners who don't want to pay for proper disposal of hazardous materials also appear to be frequent culprits, forest service officials say.

PHOENIX (AP) — Heavy winter rain has allowed the desert to bloom and could lead to the worst brush fire season ever, according to authorities.

Seed produced by vegetation after heavy rains two years ago has resulted in even more foliage this year.

This winter, rain totals in December and January were twice the average and temperatures have been mild. Occasional showers this spring have proved ideal for desert bloom.

"This whole Sonoran Desert is prime to burn this year," said Scott Hunt, forester for the state Land Department's Phoenix district.

PHOENIX (AP) — A man simultaneously married to four women in three states without ever getting a divorce was given a five-month jail sentence Monday after pleading guilty to a bigamy charge.

Vernon Pierce, 33, had been sought by authorities in suburban Glendale since September in connection with two of the marriages performed here in Arizona.

Pierce turned himself in to police Dec. 27 and pleaded guilty to one count of bigamy March 3.

"I'm not going to insult anyone's intelligence by putting up some mock defense," Pierce said. "I've wasted five years of my life with this."

Judge Robert Hertzberg of Maricopa County Superior Court also sentenced Pierce to three years probation and ordered him to perform 250 hours of community service.

High school student lobbies Washington for arts, public TV as senior year project

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most high school students would probably write a report, give a speech or cut out a cardboard display for a senior year humanities project. Casey Routh visited Congress for his: a full-fledged lobbying trip in support of public broadcasting and the arts.

"A lot of students listen to National Public Radio. A lot of us grew up on public television," said Routh, a senior at Franklin High School, an arts magnet school in Seattle.

"It is important to society to have commercial-free programming," he told Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., from across the conference table in her office.

Routh and 20 of his classmates met Monday with Murray and Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., to urge support for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Routh held an auction at the school to raise $6,500 for the trip to Washington by his humanities class. He collected most of the donated items himself, including theater tickets and sports autographs.

"A lot of people in my class were doing arts-related projects," Routh said. "Mine was to save what they are doing."

During her 20-minute meeting with Routh and his classmates, Murray said she is a strong defender of the NEA and public broadcasting.

"If you eliminate public broadcasting, it will be a few rich, elite people who own the airwaves," she said. "They will decide what it is and who gets to see it."

Routh, who credited his friend Iain Dick with helping to pull off the trip, asked Murray what kinds of arguments they would run up against as they backers of steep cuts in public broadcasting.

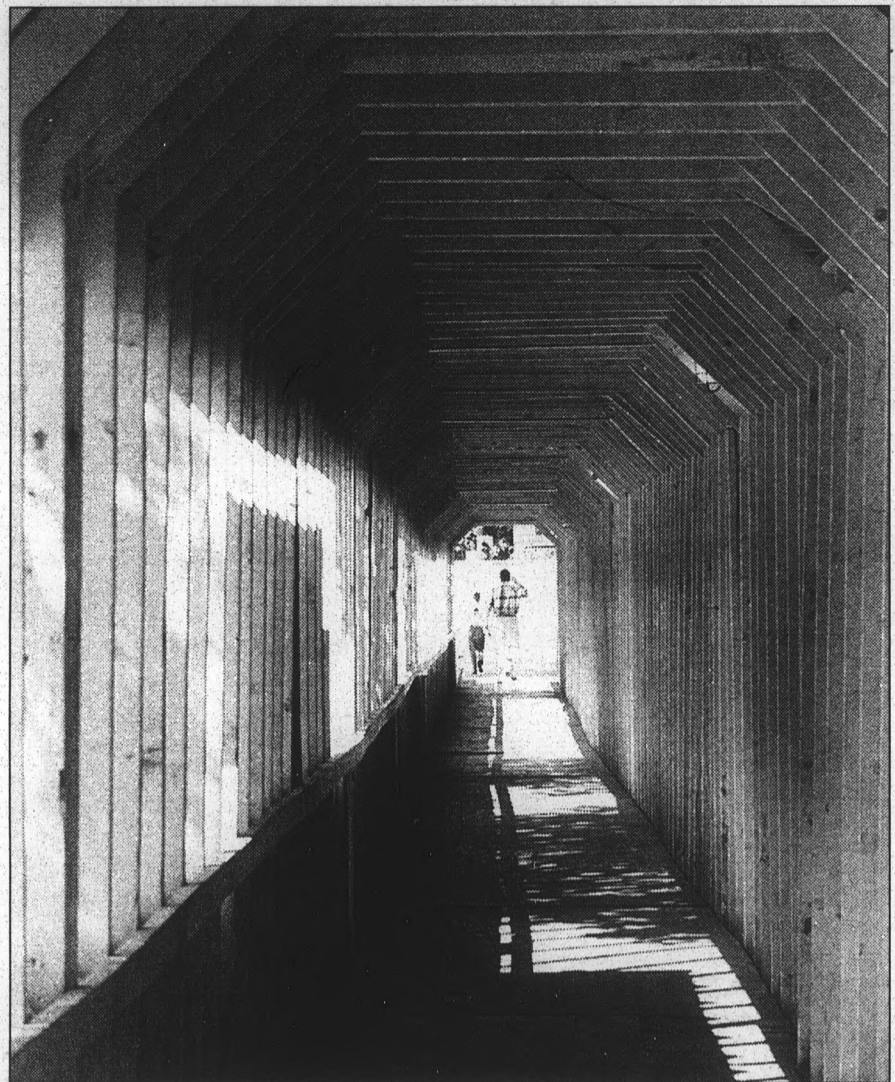

Murray said, "Some will say if it is so important to fund, then the private sector should be able to pick it up."

Senior Sebastian Sittig shot back, "So they are saying the government has absolutely no responsibility to help the people?"

Various proposals before the House call for reductions in public broadcasting spending from 10 percent to 30 percent.

"You are absolutely here at a critical time," Murray told the students. "You are the people who should be saying this."

Gingrich, House GOP leaders gain support for tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Driving for a final triumph on the "Contract With America," House Republican leaders picked up support for tax-cut legislation Monday from deficit-conscious lawmakers. Vice President Al Gore attacked the GOP for a "highly partisan, extremist, 100-day agenda."

With a tax vote set for Wednesday, Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, predicted passage for the measure with a $500-per-child tax credit for families making up to $200,000 a year. "I'm feeling very good we will have the final details worked out," he said.

Other lawmakers said that despite an agreement linking the tax cuts to sweeping spending-cut legislation to be passed later this year, the leadership could not yet count the votes to prevail. Some GOP holdouts want to scale back the per-child tax credit, while another group wants changes in a provision that would raise the amount federal workers contribute to their own retirement funds.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who last week vowed to keep the House in session until it passes tax cuts, also said during the day Monday that he was a few votes shy of a majority.

"We don't yet have 218 votes lined up, but we're making good progress," said Tony Blankley, Gingrich's spokesman.

Republicans were checking their 230-member caucus to see what, if any, additional changes they would need to make in the tax bill to assure passage without relying on even a single Democratic vote.

While the Republicans pushed to complete work on their campaign manifesto, Gore went on the attack as the leading edge of a coordinated, weeklong Democratic assault on the GOP program.

"Like the discredited trickle-down economics that nearly bankrupted our nation in the 1980s, this 100-day juggernaut is also a mistake," the vice president told a National Press Club audience.

He said the GOP had made "losers" of middle-income families who "are being asked to pay for another round of Republican tax cuts for the wealthy" through reductions in student loans and the school lunch program. The winners, he said, are the "very wealthy" who, Gore said, are in line for tax breaks.

After several days of negotiations with the leadership, a group of moderate, deficit-conscious Republicans said they would support bringing the tax measure to the House floor. Under the agreement, the bill would be changed so no tax cuts would go into effect until Congress enacted legislation later this year designed to eliminate deficits by the year 2002.

Gingrich had long since pledged to do just that.

How Republicans stand on 'Contract'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In their "Contract With America," House Republicans promised action in 10 areas during the first 100 days of the GOP-controlled Congress.

On Monday, Day 90; —House Republicans opened debate on the last item in the "Contract With America," tax cuts. A vote will occur Wednesday. GOP leaders negotiated with moderate Republicans who want any tax cuts contingent upon passage of spending cuts that would lead to a balanced budget by 2002.

The legislative status of chief "contract" items:

FISCAL CONTROLS

—Constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget by 2002. Passed House. Defeated in Senate.

—Bill giving the president power to veto individual spending items in appropriations bills. Senate action pending; House passed its version 294-134 on Feb. 6.

—Bill to discourage Congress from imposing requirements on states and cities without providing funds to pay for them. Bill passed, Clinton signed into law.

WELFARE

—House passed welfare overhaul, 234-199. No Senate action yet.

CRIME

—Funds for prison construction, relaxed standards for admission of evidence in trials, block grants instead of earmarked funds to hire police, limit death-row inmates' abilities to appeal cases to federal court. Passed House. Senate prospects uncertain.

FAMILY SUPPORT

—Tax breaks for adoptions and elder care, child-support enforcement. Awaiting committee consideration.

MIDDLE CLASS

—$500 per child tax credit, reduced marriage tax penalty, expanded IRA savings accounts. House opened debate; Senate has not acted.

DEFENSE AND FOREIGN POLICY

—Cut spending on peacekeeping operations, restrict putting U.S. forces under United Nations command. Passed House. Provision to restore funding for "Star Wars" missile defense system defeated by House.

SENIOR CITIZENS

—Raise Social Security earnings limit, repeal 1993 tax increase. House hearing held.

JOBS AND BUSINESS

—Require federal agencies to assess the risk and cost of new regulations. Passed House. Clinton hints at veto.

—Impose six-month moratorium on new regulations. Passed House. Senate prospects uncertain; Clinton hints at veto.

—Cut capital gains tax. House hearings completed.

TERM LIMITS

—Constitutional amendment to limit how long someone can serve in House or Senate. By 227-204, more than 60 votes shy of the required two-thirds majority, the House rejected a proposal to limit lawmakers to 12 years' service in the House or Senate. A Senate committee has approved a statute authorizing states to set congressional term limits.

ATLANTA (AP) — Bonnie Raitt gave them something to talk about, all right.

Raitt settled her lawsuit against two Atlanta-area car dealers and their in-house ad agency over unauthorized use of her song "Something to Talk About" in a radio ad.

The settlement included a letter of apology and an undisclosed amount of money, Raitt's attorney, Comer Yates, said Monday.

Raitt had sued Stone Mountain Ford and Heritage Lincoln-Mercury, claiming they misused her 1992 Grammy-winning song.

Charles Ratz, attorney for the dealers, said his clients thought using the song was acceptable.

"If you listened to the radio, you would find that it's done all the time," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Carly Simon did what few are able to do: She stopped a crowd of New York commuters in their tracks.

As Simon taped a one-hour concert in Grand Central Terminal on Sunday, hundreds of passersby stopped to listen. The concert airs May 21 on the Lifetime cable network.

Simon sang old favorites such as "Anticipation" and "Let the River Run" as well as new material from her current album, Letters Never Sent.

Simon has a soft spot for the landmark commuter hub and sometimes goes there to write songs, says her publicist, Cathryn Swan.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's a dark song on Elton John's latest album, Made in England, that is based on his struggle to kick a cocaine habit.

"As soon as I read the lyrics, I thought of when I used to do cocaine and wouldn't come out of my room for two weeks at a time," the singer said in Sunday's editions of Los Angeles Times.

"I would creep around my own house so slowly that it would take me 15 minutes to walk across my bedroom floor."

The album isn't just about John's tough times. He and lyricist Bernie Taupin drew on the low and highs of their lives for the release.

Two cuts, "Blessed" and "Please," reflect the fulfillment John has found with his companion and Taupin has discovered with his wife and two stepdaughters.

"I feel very happy in my life that I can actually sing that and have someone in my life that I want to spend the rest of my life with," John said.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Debbie Reynolds threw herself a 63rd birthday party and celebrated the birth of her movie museum.

Celebrities such as Angie Dickinson, Rodney Dangerfield, Ann Miller, Esther Williams and Eva Gabor showed up for the party Saturday night at the Debbie Reynolds' Hollywood Hotel, just off the Strip.

The museum, which opened Sunday, displays Reynolds' collection of movie memorabilia, including the dress Marilyn Monroe wore in The Seven Year Itch.

Reynolds treated fans, staked out in bleacher seats, to a quick chorus of "Singin' in the Rain," her 1952 musical hit.

PARSONSFIELD, Maine (AP) — Not even Carolyn Chute can remember the name of the video of her best-selling novel, The Beans of Egypt, Maine.

"Is it 'Faltering Conclusions?' Or is it 'Florid Contusions?' Or is it 'Flagging Comprehensions?' Jeepers, I can't remember," Chute said in a notice telling friends and fans about the video's recent release.

Actually, the video is called Forbidden Choices. The movie, which stars Rutger Hauer, Martha Plimpton and Kelly Lynch as members of the poor Bean clan in rural Maine, had a short run in theaters under the title The Beans of Egypt, Maine.

A spokeswoman for the video's distribution company, Live Entertainment, said she didn't know why the title was changed.

Chute said, "Nobody is going to know that 'Forgettable Choices,' or is it 'Formidable Chances,' or ... or is it 'Frightening Changes?' Oh well, I forgot."

SPRINTING TO THE HEAD OF THE CLASS

Tetteh honored as collegiate female student-athlete of year

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

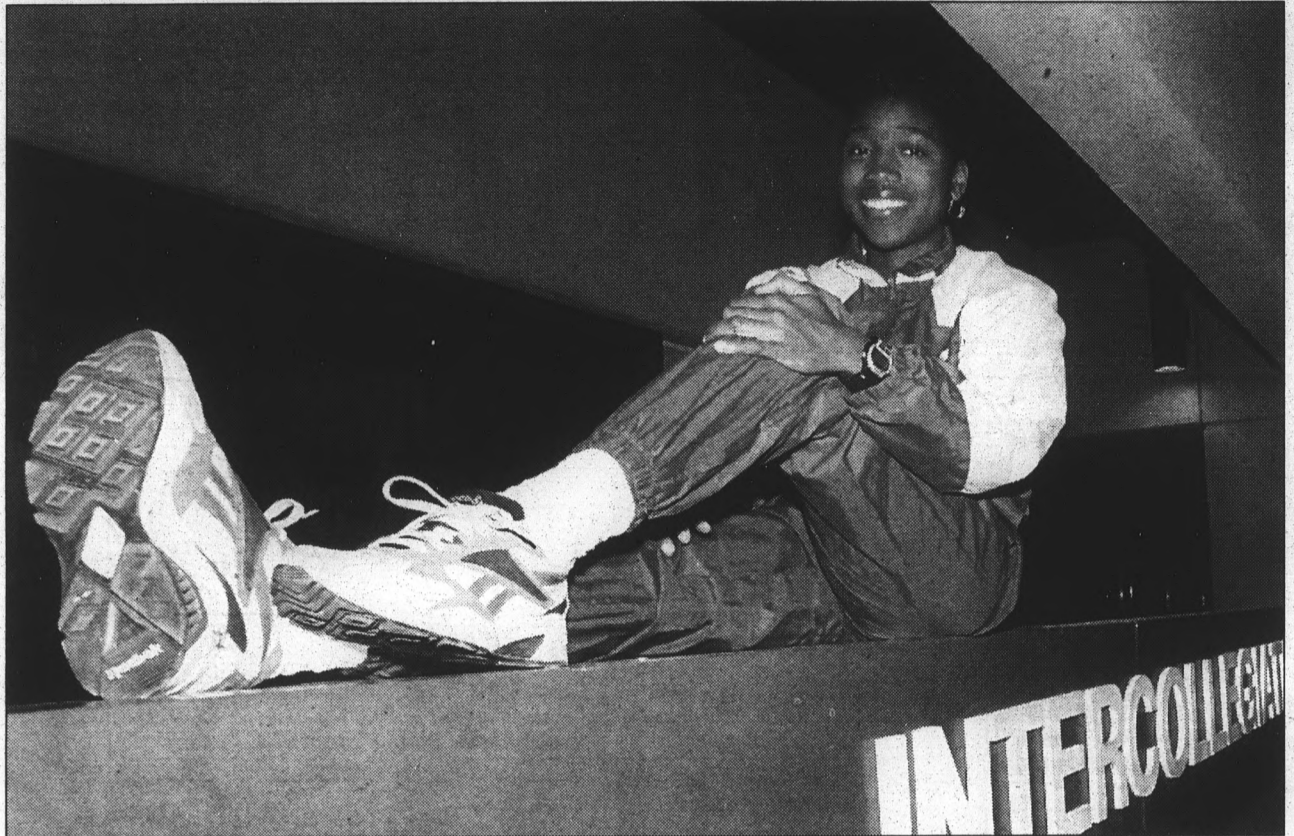

When sprinter Michaelene Tetteh arrived at ASU, she already had a jump on the competition, but Tetteh's early advantage wasn't measured by her times on the track. It was in the classroom.

"I was taught at a very young age that education is everything," said Tetteh, a 19-year-old junior who graduated from Duncanville High School in Dallas at age 16. "My parents really drilled that into me. I could go down with a career-ending injury on any day, but no one can take my education away from me."

Tetteh's 4.0 GPA, coupled with her participation on the eighth-ranked ASU women's track team, recently earned her national acclaim when she received the first annual Arthur Ashe Jr. Award honoring the collegiate female student-athlete of the year.

"It's a great honor for me to be attached with his name," said Tetteh, a broadcasting major who is the first female recipient of the new award. "He embodies great character. He was very strong mentally. He knew what he wanted and how to stay focused."

The magazine Black Issues in Higher Education was given permission to begin using Ashe's name for its annual accolade drawn from over 450 of the finest student-athletes across the country. Coe College wrestler David Simmons was this year's male recipient.

Sun Devil junior sprinter Michaelene Tetteh received the first annual Arthur Ashe Jr. Award as the collegiate female student-athlete of the year. Tetteh owns a 4.0 GPA.

Sun Devil baseball hunts Antelopes during break from Six-Pac play

BY LEE NEWMAN
STATE PRESS

In the heart of the Six-Pac schedule, the ASU baseball team has found itself in the role of a fisherman fighting the large-mouth bass of the division and trying to catch its limit. However, tonight ASU will try to hook a blue gill with a little bite, and that blue gill is Grand Canyon.

The Sun Devils host Grand Canyon at 7 p.m. today at Packard Stadium.

Tonight marks ASU's first non-conference game since an 8-2 win against defending national champion Oklahoma on March 15. The Sun Devils will play just two more games out of the Six-Pac the rest of the season. Coincidentally enough, they're both against the Antelopes April 18 and April 25.

In non-conference games this season, all of which were played at Packard Stadium, ASU owns an impressive 18-4 record.

"Games out of the division are important," ASU Coach Pat Murphy said. "They allow us to work on some things and try and build some momentum."

However, one thing Murphy doesn't think will happen tonight is for ASU just to walk out on the diamond and record its 27th win of the year.

"Grand Canyon has had a great program for a number of years now. Anyone who knows anything about college baseball knows that," he said. "If these guys overlook this game they're nuts."

"They're going to be gunning to beat us because we're Arizona State," junior Darren Troilo said. "We're not going to take them lightly. Coach Murphy doesn't take anyone lightly. We'll be ready to play."

Who could blame ASU if it looked ahead? The Sun Devils have upcoming series with USC and California. The Trojans are going to be looking for revenge after being swept by the Sun Devils two weeks ago at Packard, while ASU has yet to beat California in two opportunities. The Golden Bears rest in second place in the Six-Pac, 1 1/2 games ahead of ASU, while the Trojans are currently in fourth place in the Pac, 1 1/2 games behind the Sun Devils.

"In all my years of coaching, I haven't seen a conference as good top to bottom as the Six-Pac," Murphy said. "We're preparing for those games, but we're not going to overlook Grand Canyon."

"We take each game day by day," Troilo said. "We have to focus on playing (Tuesday) before we think about the USC trip. Any team can beat anybody on any given day. It doesn't matter where they're from or how big their school is. We know we have to be ready to play."

Sophomore Jason Bond will be starting on mound for ASU tonight. Bond is 2-0 on the year with a 5.09 ERA. He's third on the team with 33 strikeouts, but he also ranks second on the squad with 25 walks.

UCLA regains crown with 89-78 win over Arkansas

SEATTLE (AP) — With its starting point guard on the bench and its greatest coach in the stands, UCLA won its first national championship in 20 years and kept Arkansas from joining the select list of repeaters.

The top-ranked Bruins won their record 11th NCAA title Monday night with an 89-78 victory that was even more impressive considering senior Tyus Edney was limited to 2 1/2 minutes because of a sprained right wrist.

Ed O'Bannon stepped up as he was supposed to, but so did freshman Toby Bailey and Cameron Dollar, Edney's replacement, and it all meant the first title for the school since 1975, when John Wooden, who sat quietly in the stands of the Kingdome, won the last of 10 in a 12-year span.

"I'm very proud," Wooden said. "To be honest, I didn't think they could win it without Edney. He makes that team run. But Bailey and Dollar played wonderfully. Dollar didn't score many points, but his defense was superb."

As UCLA received the championship trophy, O'Bannon, who was voted the outstanding player in the tournament, turned to the Bruins' fans in the stands, pointed at Edney and shouted: "This is the real MVP right here. He got us here."

The UCLA fans then started chanting, "Tyus! Tyus! Tyus!"

For Arkansas, it was the end of a tournament run of close finishes and it ended one game short of becoming the second repeat champion since Wooden's Bruins won seven in a row, ending in 1973.

The Razorbacks had come to rely on its great defense and great player, Corliss Williamson, in the second half, but neither was there against UCLA.

O'Bannon scored 30 points and had 17 rebounds in a game that certified his All-America credentials. Bailey, who had struggled to a 1-for-2, two-point outing in the semifinals, finished with 26 points and nine rebounds. And Dollar, the backup point guard who played in the shadow of the lightning quick Edney, came up with eight assists.

"I owe a lot to Tyus," Dollar said. "The two years we've been together, he taught me a lot, and I was able to apply it tonight."

Tetteh

Tetteh, who came to ASU because of the reputation of its broadcasting program, walked on the ASU track team in the fall of 1992. Sun Devil track coach Leonard Braxton's philosophy is to extend to unrecruited hopefuls the chance to belong on his team provided they are willing to make a serious commitment.

"I encouraged her," Braxton said. "I let them chase themselves away. She's managed to stick it out. She's a solid performer."

Tetteh, whose main events are the 100- and 200-meter dashes, was skeptical at first about the prospect of college track.

"I've heard a lot of stories that athletes really got overwhelmed by their sport; that sometimes they're forced to eat, sleep and drink their sport," Tetteh said. "But I wanted school to be most important thing to me."

"It's been OK so far. It hasn't been a distraction."

Her personal bests are 12.56 in the 100 and 25.39 in the 200.

Tetteh took the fast track through school after beginning kindergarten at age 4 and skipping all but the first three months of the third grade. She started junior high when she was 10.

"I went through a rebellious stage when I got tired of being 'smart,'" Tetteh said. "I didn't study for about three years in junior high, but when I got to high school I decided to bear down."

Tetteh, who has made the Dean's List every semester at ASU and has never received a B, was named the Wings of Gold "Sophomore Student Athlete of the Year" in 1994.

"At first I thought if I lost it (4.0 GPA) at the beginning it wouldn't matter that much," Tetteh said. "But now that I'm this far into it and I'm going to graduate next year I kind of want to keep it."

After gauging her personality interests,

Tetteh realized exactly what she wanted during her freshman year of high school — to be a broadcast journalist, preferably a political reporter.

"I studied a lot of journalists," Tetteh said. "I like to talk a lot. I'm curious and I'm really nosy. So I thought, 'Hey, I could get paid for this.'"

Tetteh, who is taking a minor in political science, noted ABC's Cokie Roberts and Ted Koppel as her favorite broadcasters because of their tact in getting to the heart of subjects.

"Maybe I'll be in the White House someday," she joked.

FREE THE MUPPET CAPER LOCATION: UNION CINEMA Lower Level of the Memorial Union SHOWTIME: TUESDAY THRU THURSDAY APRIL 4 7:00 P.M. APRIL 5 4:00 P.M. APRIL 6 2:40 P.M.

For Tuesday, April 4, 1995 ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be certain that you keep your business life and your home life separate. If you've had an argument at home, leave it there. Avoid insisting on getting your own way. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Someone in your family is causing you worry by spending too much money. However, avoid the temptation to offer a loan. This is one lesson that's going to have to be learned the hard way. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't let that person who's disagreeing with you get on your nerves. Instead, take a different approach and listen to the ideas being offered. You could find a better way of doing things. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The money you were counting on is not forthcoming, so you'd be wise to rethink your budget for the coming months. You're going to have to trim expenses. LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Others have been finding your behavior overbearing of late. Although you may feel that you know better, it's wise to stop exerting so much authority. VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Your mild seems to be wandering at work, and co-workers are resentful. Try to get yourself motivated again to avoid any unpleasant situations with big-wigs. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) This isn't the time for having things go the way you like. As a result, you might be short-tempered, so make an effort to lie low and be diplomatic. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You've been working hard lately, so go ahead and treat yourself to that dreamed-of extravagance. Someone you'd like to get close to won't respond to your romantic overtures. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your penchant for helping others sometimes results in meddling. Try to be sensitive to that. Work is quite hectic. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You feel ignored and taken for granted, but don't brood about it. Others are just too busy gearing up for self-improvements. It's not the time for being overly sensitive. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You are surprised at the lack of support from your family concerning your career-change plan. However, be prepared to stick to your decision. It's not necessarily wise to pick what's "safe." PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You will find yourself unsure of your mate, but don't press the issue. You're likely to get into a fight, so try to ride out this rough period stoically. YOU BORN TODAY are a natural critic of society and its values. A good observer of human nature, you'd make a fine writer, researcher or academician. You do best when motivated by your ideals. Naturally creative, you may have a special talent for expressing yourself in public. You might possess an unconventional side of which few are aware. Birthdate of: Sen. Richard G.
