ASASU finds new chief for Safety Escort Service

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

The Safety Escort Service's search for a new director has ended with the hiring of a new director — one with no previous experience within the organization.

Graduate student Lisa Mertz, a graduate medical anthropology student, will succeed Eddie Genna, who resigned earlier this month, said Andrea Van Bommel, Associated Students of ASU vice president of campus affairs.

Van Bommel added that she had "no hesitation" in hiring Mertz. However, she said she would be more concerned about hiring a director with no experience if the former director, Eddie Genna, wasn't training the new director.

Genna agreed that Mertz's lack of experience is not a major concern.

"Having experience is not a necessity as long as you have returning escorts that have experience," Genna said. "Ideally, the new director would have experience with the service, but that didn't happen."

Despite her lack of SES experience, Mertz said her qualifications stem from experience as a teaching assistant and a history of community service.

"SES will challenge my management skills. It will be a very positive challenge," Mertz said. "I don't think that it is anything that is out of my capability."

"We have a bunch of dedicated people (SES volunteers) that are willing to hang in there to make sure that the transition is smooth."

SES Assistant Director of Operations Trail Potter, who also has no previous experience with the service, said Mertz is "very open to a free exchange of ideas."

"We have four base managers with extensive experience. We will be relying heavily these first few weeks on those base managers," he said.

Potter said he is working on a plan to establish sponsorship nights where one campus organization

ASU DPS tosses ticket book, tries informing bike violators

BY GREG ZEMEIDA
STATE PRESS

Stressing education over enforcement, ASU and Tempe police are spending the first week of school informing law-breaking bicyclists about the rules and possible dangers of riding around campus.

Although tickets will still be given out to some bicyclists, ASU Department of Public Safety officer Al Phillips said police will mainly give offenders pamphlets detailing bicycle safety.

"We feel that we need to be a little bit reasonable," he said. "We feel that education is a very, very good way to go, especially in the first week of school."

ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge agreed, saying many students may not be aware of all the bike rules on campus.

"Our place is not just to arrest," he said. "We are here to help. One of the best ways we can help is to educate." The pamphlets, put together by Tempe police, describe local traffic laws and give safety tips, such as obeying traffic signals and riding with the flow of traffic.

They also cite statistics, such as the fact that 96 percent of all car-bicycle accidents result in serious injury or death to the cyclist, and that 44 percent of all car-bicycle accidents are caused by bicyclists who ride on the wrong side of the street.

Phillips said most bicycle accidents occur for four main reasons:

- Riding on the wrong side of the road;
- Failure to stop for a sign or light;
- Not yielding to a pedestrian;
- Failure to yield from the edge of a road.

Contrary to popular belief, ASU police can write tickets for violating campus and Tempe laws. If bicyclists violate an ASU rule, such as riding in a walk-only area, they may be fined $18. If an ASU

Super Bowl XXX to push 3,500 students from Lot 59

Three-week relocation has some students fuming

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

University officials plan to relocate 3,500 students in stadium-side parking during the Super Bowl, but some commuters feel they've gotten a raw deal.

Tentative plans have parking refugees emigrating from Lot 59 and Lot 58 to a parking area at the Rio Salado Parkway and Hardy Drive, said Linda Riegel, assistant director of purchasing in charge of parking and transit.

Lot 59 decal holders will be displaced for two to three weeks, she said.

The decision left some Lot 59 patrons fuming. "Basically, I think (relocating) really stinks," said Steve Gordon, civil engineering major. "I usually don't care where I park, but this year I do."

Gordon added that he had tried to get a different lot because of the Super Bowl, but was unsuccessful.

Tentative solutions for the parking problems are being worked out. Riegel said parking and transit's main goal throughout the planning has been protecting ASU.

serves as escorts. Groups would be responsible for one night a week or every other week. Potter is initially targeting the Greek system and will eventually branch out to other groups.

Genna said the escorts from the campus groups will have to go through the same background checks as other escorts.

Jennifer White, a sophomore in justice studies, was hired last week as the assistant director of administration for SES.

White hopes to "get the service going again" by enlisting more volunteers to reduce wait times.

She said 30 volunteer escorts are needed for SES to provide adequate service.

White, who put in 220 hours as an escort last year, said that burnout is not a problem in SES. "The more I worked, the more I enjoyed helping," she said.

However, she admitted that some volunteers have left the service because they had to work every night.

"We want to avoid a situation where escorts believe that they have to work," Genna said. He said he believes that 60 volunteers, working two hours per week, would be optimum.

Mary Irving, an escort with SES, said she feels that Mertz will have no problems if she remains open to suggestions.

"She has to start somewhere," she said. "She (Mertz) will be innocent until proven guilty. We need a new leader, or we'll fall."

Parking

"Alternate parking will be provided at no additional cost," Riegel said. "They will also have a dedicated transit system (a shuttle) provided."

In addition to the temporary lot and the shuttle service, Riegel outlined other preliminary plans to accommodate ASU commuters.

"After 3 p.m. Lot 59 can cross-park on main campus," Riegel said. "We also have a proposal for lot monitors for both our residence hall lots and decal lots."

She said the monitors would be in place during the two-week-long NFL Experience, from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Hung-Cheng Chiou, biochemistry major, said he had alternate commuting plans during the Super Bowl.

"I'm not concerned, I can bike here," Chiou said, "but it's going to be inconvenient."

He said he was charged the same rate, even though he would not have access to the lot for part of the year.

"I'm paying the same rate," he said. "You buy the decal for one year — there's no difference."

Suspect in slaying fights extradition from California

PHOENIX (AP) — A man accused of killing an Arizona highway patrolman during a routine traffic stop refused to be sent to Arizona Monday where he faces murder charges.

Ernesto Martinez, 19, is charged with first-degree murder in the Aug. 15 shooting death of Officer Bob Martin of the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

An extradition hearing was held Monday at Riverside County Superior Court in California, where Martinez is also a suspect in the slaying of a convenience store clerk in Blythe, Calif.

Martinez refused to waive his right to extradition and the judge ordered the hearing to be continued Wednesday, said David Gutknecht, a courthouse spokesman.

Authorities are trying to get Martinez sent back to Arizona where Maricopa County Attorney Rick Romley has said he wants to seek the death penalty.

Martin was shot to death on the Beeline Highway near the town of Fountain Hills. He has patrolled the highway most of his 27-year career.

Dole downplays straw poll results at Phoenix rally

PHOENIX (AP) — Bob Dole brushed aside the results of a weekend straw poll and assured backers here Monday that he leads the field of contenders for the Republican presidential nomination.

"I see this as a race between Bob Dole and Bill Clinton, not as a race with my primary opponents," Dole told about 150 people at a Phoenix rally.

A straw poll in Iowa Saturday had the Kansas senator tied with Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, with about 24 percent each out of 10,598 votes. Gramm welcomed the results as proof Dole's front-runner status is endangered.

Dole, the senate majority leader, rejected that conclusion, and assured the audience he was still ahead scientifically conducted public opinion polls.

Dole has said the $25-a-head straw poll, in which hundreds of non-Iowans participated, wasn't indicative of Iowa's mood six months before its leadoff presidential caucus.

"There was a lot of straw in that poll," Dole said Monday. "I don't like ties, I'd rather win, but we're not concerned about one straw poll where it depends on how many tickets a person buys."

Candidates are allowed to buy tickets for the straw poll, a fund-raiser for the Iowa Republican Party. The number of tickets each campaign bought for Saturday's event has not been disclosed.

Dole said he saw no evidence his support was faltering, but suggested his campaign may have had a spell of complacency before the Iowa vote.

Six people were killed and more than 100 were injured in Jerusalem from an explosion on a double-bus targeted by a suicide bomber. The Islamic militant group Hamas claimed responsibility for the rush hour blast.

Bus bomb kills 5 in Israel

Peace talks set back—again

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Islamic militant, possibly a woman, set off a suicide bomb Monday that tore through two crowded Israeli commuter buses headed for Hebrew University. The blast shredded one bus into a twisted metal cobweb and killed five people, including an American tourist.

The police investigation focused on two mutilated and unidentified bodies. Police Chief Arieh Amit said the condition of the woman's body suggested she could have been holding the TNT bomb.

"I could see body parts everywhere," said Judy Shulewitz, a Cornell University student who was one of at least three Americans wounded in the explosion. "There was blood all over the place."

The Muslim militant group Hamas claimed responsibility for the blast, which injured more than 100 people during morning rush hour in Jerusalem and forced the suspension of Israel-PLO talks on expanding Palestinian self-rule.

In a leaflet issued in Syria, Hamas said: "The Israeli government will pay for the war declared against Islam and Muslims." Hamas, which opposes the peace talks, has demanded a complete Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, including all settlements, and a bigger role for itself in representing Palestinians.

The dead were identified as Joan Davenny, a Hebrew school teacher from Woodbridge, Conn., Rivka Cohen, a 26-year-old Israeli, and Noam Eizenman, an Israeli policeman. Davenny had been gathering material for her class on the history of Israel.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin suspended peace talks with the PLO and ordered the West Bank and Gaza Strip sealed, barring Palestinians from traveling to Israel.

Rabin said the talks would resume after the Israeli victims' funerals which, according to Jewish tradition, must be held as quickly as possible. Cohen was buried Monday night.

Georgia crash kills 3

CARROLLTON, Ga. (AP) — A commuter plane flying from Georgia to Mississippi Monday crashed in a hay field and cracked open, killing three people and injuring 26, many of whom fled the wreckage with their clothes on fire.

"I thought I was going to die and I was just hoping it was going to end real quick," a passenger, Chuck Pfisterer, told Atlanta television station WSB.

"And the next thing I knew, after sustaining bumps and bruises, I opened my eyes and saw that, hey, I'm alive, and the plane is in pieces and I'm hanging by my seat belt."

The Atlantic Southeast Airlines turboprop went down around midday about five miles from Carrollton, breaking into three large pieces as it plowed across the green field.

The pilot had radioed that he was having engine problems, and may have been trying to land at West Georgia Regional Airport, six to eight miles from the crash site, said Christy Williams, a Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman.

But a passenger, Air Force Maj. Chuck LeMay, told WSB that, after passengers heard a "loud bang," they were told the plane would try to return to Atlanta for an emergency landing.

Polona Jeter, who lives nearby, said she saw the front of the plane "rolling and tumbling and on fire" as the aircraft came apart.

"I could see about 10 people getting out," she said. "Some were burning. They were running. People were trying to get them down and get it out."

Iraqi defector says uprising imminent

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A coup in Iraq is imminent, a former Iraqi army officer said today in his first public comment since defecting to Jordan two weeks ago. And he echoed a claim that Saddam Hussein had planned to invade Kuwait and Saudi Arabia this month.

"A military coup and a popular revolution are coming," Maj. Izzeddine Mohammed Hassan al-Majid said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

"The Iraqis want to get rid of the regime. The whole world knows what is happening in Iraq ... slaughter, executions, starvation."

Asked when he expected the revolt, Izzeddine, who once headed Saddam's personal guard, said: "This is in the hands of Allah."

Izzeddine arrived in Jordan on Aug. 8 with two of Saddam's sons-in-law, Lt. Gen. Hussein Kamel Hassan al-Majid and Col. Saddam Kamel al-Majid, following a reported power struggle in the ruling clan. King Hussein granted them asylum.

Despite their history of close involvement in Saddam's regime, the defectors have sought to portray themselves as the new vanguard of the opposition.

On Sunday, in his first interview since an Aug. 12 news conference, Hussein Kamel told the AP that Iraq was planning to invade Kuwait and Saudi Arabia this month, and called off the attack because of the defections and because of an American military buildup in the region.

STATE PRESS Editorial A Super hassle

Once again, education loses out to football at Arizona State University.

We have been reminded many, many times of the great and high honor we of this University have in hosting Super Bowl XXX. Just think! The world will be watching!

But it seems the world will have a better view of the University than 3,500 students will. After all, the world won't be forced to park more than a mile away from ASU.

Have a decal for Lot 59? Forget it, at least during the grand high orgy of the Super Bowl. You'll be parking instead at a lovely, scenic lot at Hardy Drive and Rio Salado Parkway, while some rich guy in a BMW takes your spot.

Look that one up on a map. It is at least a mile away from campus, maybe more.

The University assures us that shuttle service will be available during the two to three weeks that Lot 59 will be closed to students.

But shuttles from Lot 59 are crowded enough now, when they can reasonably be considered a convenience. At rush times, the FLASH is packed.

Shuttle service from Hardy and Rio Salado is not a convenience. It is a necessity. And come next January, we worry that students may be forced to fight for precious shuttle seats.

Even if we eliminate the shuttle worries, there are still nagging questions about the availability of parking at the new site. Is there enough parking there, enough to handle all of the traffic displaced from Lot 59? On the map, it certainly doesn't look that way.

Nightmares of cars endlessly circling for parking spaces like vultures seem to come to mind at times like this.

What is scary about all this is the message that is being sent out.

What is Arizona State University here for? What is its primary purpose?

Are we here for the sole purpose of hosting a football game? Or are we here for the purpose of education?

Students have been getting one raw deal after another over the Super Bowl. The act is beginning to wear thin.

Sure, we like the Super Bowl as much as everyone else. But when we're forced to shut down classes for at least two days because of it, we have a right to be concerned.

And when we're forced to commute more than a mile from our parking spots for three weeks to accommodate the NFL, we have a right to be angry.

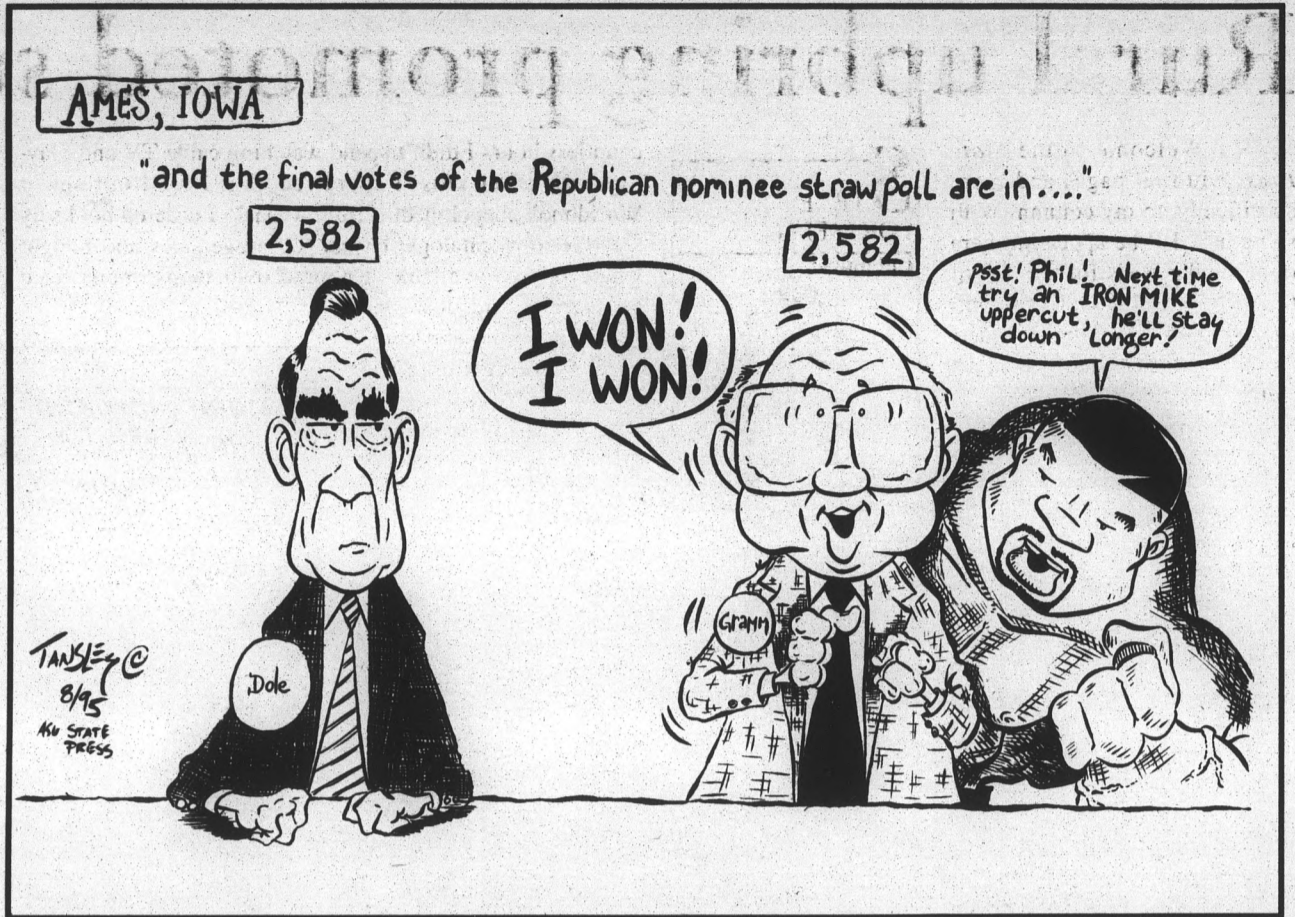

This is our university, not the NFL's. And the last time we looked, the Super Bowl lasted for a single Sunday — not for three weeks.

Sure, the NFL Experience will be taking place during those three weeks. But shouldn't the people visiting it be the ones doing the commuting?

You can afford to wait around a few minutes to get to the NFL Experience. But you don't have that luxury when it's 8:25 and you have an 8:40 class.

It wouldn't be quite so infuriating if we were sacrificing for something worthwhile. But instead, students are being condemned to the commute from hell for three weeks over a glorified football game.

Something is definitely wrong with a society that treats students like refugees for nearly a month so tourists can have their photos taken next to a cardboard cutout of Troy Aikman.

Native American struggles still unheard

Well, I hope everyone had a nice summer. I know that it was way too short but then isn't that the way it always goes?

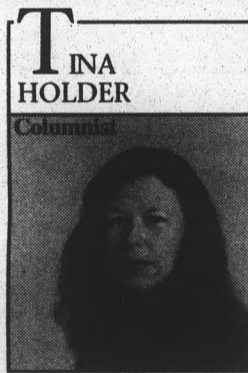

Some of you may remember me from last spring but in case you don't, let me give you a brief background of who I am.

I am a senior justice studies major and I hope to be entering law school in the near future. I am of Cherokee, Choctaw and white ancestry. I have three children ranging from ages 7 to 17. Two of them currently live with me.

When I was 5 years old, I was taken from my home and placed in an adoptive one.

At 11 years old, I ran away. So for the next 7 years I lived on the streets and learned to take care of myself. I saw quite a few things out there that no one should ever have to witness: shootings, rapes, drugs, and so forth.

Since then I have lived on and off reservations. I have lived where I had more money than I knew what to do with, but I have also lived where I didn't know where my next meal would come from. Many things I write about are drawn from these experiences. I'd like to think through my writing that maybe I can keep just one person from making the same mistakes that I made. My goal is to educate as well as entertain.

TINA HOLDER
Columnist

There is another reason I write and I have to admit that it is the main reason. I want to help give a voice to the problems facing my people. I hope to educate people about what is really happening to the Native Americans in this country. I will address issues like inadequate school systems, sacred land being taken and turned into National Parks, being forced to choose between supporting your family or getting health care, murders and rapes that go uninvestigated, a government that refuses to honor its treaties and so much more.

Through my experiences, I think people don't realize that the natives in this country are still treated much the same as they were hundreds of years ago. When we try to support ourselves with casinos, we are told that we are being treated "special" by the government and shouldn't be allowed to have them.

For years, America has been trying to portray itself as a "kinder, gentler" nation, more accepting of others who are different. I will show this to be wrong, very wrong.

My articles aren't meant to shock or make people angry, although I am sure that they will. They are meant to bring attention to things that are not addressed nearly enough in this society. They are meant to open the eyes of the public to what is really happening — right here in our own back yard. I want others to understand the pain and the anger that we feel and know where it all comes from. I hope that my articles will make others look at things in a different way.

Tina is a senior majoring in justice studies

Rural upbringing promoted self-education

Welcome to the State Press editorial pages and more specifically, to my column. With some luck I'll be appearing here on a regular basis for the rest of the semester. Hopefully you will find my columns either wonderful or enraging, depending on your viewpoints, but always enlightening and never boring.

As is the case with most writers, my perspectives have been shaped by the life I've led. Since I'm a bit older than the average student — I'm 28 years old — and have had a somewhat unusual life, I'll give you a brief background.

I was raised on a farm in rural Nebraska. The nearest village had a population of approximately 700 and it was 30 miles to the nearest movie theater. What really gets people is the size of my high school graduating class — there were only 17 people. To say that it was a life of relative isolation is an understatement. We didn't even have cable TV.

Fortunately I learned to read early and well. The countless hours I didn't spend watching cable TV and playing with other kids, I spent reading. I read our set of Worldbook encyclopedias front to back. I ordered books by the box from catalogs. I went to garage sales and bought whatever was available. I poured over maps, memorized glossaries, and devoured every magazine and newspaper I could get my hands on. Since there was no library and no one to really talk to, reading was the next best thing to do. Although I've learned a lot from my formal education, I like to think that I am primarily self-educated.

STEVE FORSBERG
Columnist

After high school my options were limited. No money meant no school, and I'd had just about enough of manual labor. There is nothing like shoveling hog manure in 100 degree heat to make one appreciate an office job. After a number of false starts, I ended up enlisting in the Navy, where I was soon working in the cryptology racket. Cryptology involves the collection of data from the electromagnetic spectrum and it's analysis. In laymen's terms it means decoding anything that gives off radio waves, like a communication signal. It was fascinating work and gave me the opportunity to travel much of the world, as well as raise money for college.

So now I am here at ASU, where I am pursuing a degree in history with the ultimate aim of becoming a foreign service officer. I like the sound of being a U.S. diplomat, representing the United States overseas or here at the embassy. I have a particular interest in international relations as well as foreign and military policy. I am not interested in day to day events in politics, but I like to follow major trends and research their origins. And finally, I am fond of rooting for the underdog. Nothing helps me get up a head of steam like seeing the average person getting trampled on by some bigwig.

Now hurry up and read the rest of the paper! You've got studying to do!

Some people aren't open to the new Windows 95

Slats was dashing along the busy street, panting and sweating in the Chicago heat.

"Can't talk," he gasped, "no time, gotta go, urgent business."

I fell in beside him and asked where he was going in such great haste.

"Gotta find a store, can't have everybody beat me to it."

What kind of store?

"Ain't sure. The kind that sells the whatsis and the whosis."

I'm not familiar with those products. Could you be more specific?

"You know, that new doohickey. Gotta find a store and give'em my name and reserve my copy so they don't run out."

What new doohickey?

"You know, everybody's talking about it, minnows or widows, sump'n like that."

Widows or minnows?

"Yeah, widows from nine to five, whatever it's called. It's really hot stuff. It ain't even here yet and the supply is running out if you don't reserve your copy. Gotta go, see you around."

Wait a minute. Could you be referring to the long-awaited Windows 95?

"That's it, yeah, Windows 95. Greatest new product since the Veg-A-Matic. Gonna be bigger even than the Popeil Pocket Fisherman."

I'm surprised by your interest.

"What's the surprise? This Windows things is gonna change the way we live, the way we work, the way we play, the way we do everything, which is a lot. It's gonna make my life easier and more complete and make me happier than a mutt chasing his tail."

I'm glad you are so enthusiastic. But I didn't know you were into computers.

His step slowed. "Into what?"

Computers. You never mentioned them.

"Course I haven't. I don't mess with them. What do computers have to do with it?"

Everything. Windows 95 is the new operating system, or OS, for the PC. It replaces 3.1 and makes it no longer necessary for you to become conversant with DOS. Of course, you will need more RAM, about 16 megs, I'm told. And a bigger hard drive. And a 486 chip will be barely adequate, so a Pentium might be better. And . . .

"Listen, you nerdy creep, talk American. Are you saying this Windows 95 is some kind of computer deal?"

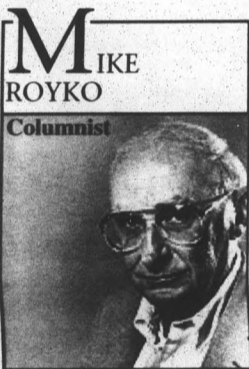

But of course. Didn't you know that?

"Will it work with my pocket calculator?"

I'm afraid not.

"How about my microwave? We got a new one. Terrific for revving up high-speed oatmeal."

No, they aren't compatible.

MIKE ROYKO
Columnist

"What about the TV? Or maybe my sump pump?"

Sorry, only a computer will do.

"That's a bum deal. You're saying that if I ain't got a computer, I can't use this amazing Windows 95 and my life won't be made better or more exciting and happier and more fulfilled?"

Life is not always fair.

So I'm going to miss out on all the excitement."

Yes, it is sad.

"By the way, what is the stuff I'm gonna miss out on?"

Well, one of the most exciting features is that users will be able to drag and drop with much greater ease.

"I don't need any help in draggin' and droppin' — especially after work on payday."

Ah, but users will be able to give longer and more complete names to their various files.

"That's nice, I guess, especially if they're using ethnic names. Uh, what kind of files?"

"So I'm supposed to sit there making new friends with some woman who is really a guy or some guy who is really a woman or something in between that ain't sure what it is?"

The usual files — spreadsheets, databases, word processing and, of course, e-mail.

"That's the stuff that's supposed to make my life better? Wow, how did I ever get through my last fishing vacation without e-mail?" And to think I've been bowling and golfing without my own database."

Don't scoff. With Windows 95, there will be a greater ease in surfing out in cyberspace.

"How do I go surfing out there when I can't swim?"

Through the telephone line to which your computer is connected.

"You mean I just sit there and look at a computer?"

Right.

"I don't know if I can handle those kind of thrills."

But wait. You will be typing messages to other users and they will type messages to you.

"Why?"

Why? So you can make new friends.

"Can I see 'em or hear 'em?"

Possibly. But most of the time, people just use handles to identify themselves.

"You mean like an alias?"

More or less.

"What the hell are they, a bunch of burglars?"

No, but most cybersurfers prefer to remain anonymous.

"So I'm supposed to sit there making new friends with some woman who is really a guy or some guy who is really a woman or something in between that ain't sure what it is?"

Yes, I suppose that in a way it is like a big masquerade party where everyone is invisible.

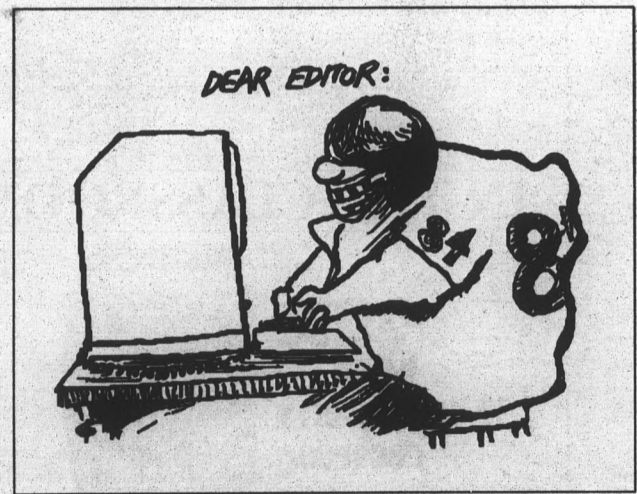

"Oh, that's really thrilling, and you don't even have to put out any crackers and cheese dip. And when you want everybody to go home, you just turn off your machine and you don't have no ashtrays to empty."

That's one way to look at it.

So I guess I'll just have to yawn through life without the thrills from Windows 95."

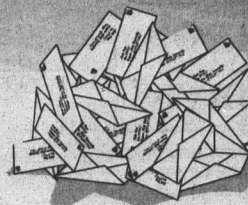

Then you will never experience the satisfaction of a high-speed spreadsheet.

"Maybe, but it'll never replace the bedsheet."

Twenty-six of the injured were hospitalized. At least 10 were in critical condition with burns.

The plane left a scarred path in the field indicating it barely cleared trees before hitting the ground.

The two-engine Brazilian-made Embraer 120 was about 15 minutes and 50 miles into a flight from Atlanta to Gulfport, Miss., 362 miles away. It had 26 passengers and three crew members. The weather was cloudy and rainy.

The cause of the crash was under investigation. In Washington, the National Transportation Safety Board assembled a team to investigate.

It was the third fatal commuter plane crash in 10 months. Another Atlantic Southeast Embraer 120 crashed in 1991, killing former Sen. John Tower and 22 others in Brunswick.

Super Bowl volunteers gain rewards beyond money

BY ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

Jane Johnson won't get any money for the position she was hired to fill, but that doesn't bother her.

Johnson, chosen this summer as a volunteer for the Super Bowl XXX Players Party, said the experience will be a fun way to contribute to the community.

"Typically, any time you do volunteer work where other people benefit, the rewards come back tenfold," said the American Express project analyst.

Johnson is one of 11,000 applicants who contacted the Super Bowl Host Committee to volunteer for events including the NFL Experience and the Players Party.

Super Bowl officials estimated they would need at least 8,000 volunteers, said Geri Cavanagh, volunteer manager.

Although the deadline for volunteers was June 10, Cavanagh said applicants are still being accepted on an emergency and reserve basis. Applicants do not need to meet any specific qualifications as long as they are willing to do the job, she said.

Volunteer applicants vary from business executives to students and retired workers, Cavanagh said, and applications were received as early as 1990 when Tempe was announced as a future Super Bowl site. Cavanagh said she is not shocked at the number of people who applied because so many people volunteer in the community.

"I'm not surprised about the enthusiasm of people that want to help," she said, adding that she is pleased with the quality of applicants.

Approximately 220 of the applicants are captains representing groups including American Express, Motorola or ASU. Once event representatives contact Cavanagh requesting volunteers, she contacts the captains to organize their teams.

Johnson, a captain for American Express, said her company was flexible about what event they would participate in. She added that the Players Party will be a mind-boggling experience.

"It's probably going to be four days of magic as far as everybody's concerned," she said.

The opportunity to help the Super Bowl raise money for charities was the primary reason ASU broadcasting junior Steve Levine volunteered.

"I didn't do it for the recognition," said the volunteer captain. "Not only is it really cool and exciting, but you're also doing a good thing at the same time."

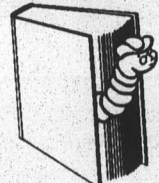

Levine, a member of Theta Chi fraternity, said he wants to involve as many Greek Life students as possible in the volunteer effort.

"We're not always noted for that," he said. "We want to make people aware that we are good people, too."

Crowd watches as woman stripped, forced off bridge

DETROIT (AP) — As dozens of onlookers gathered, and some cheered, three men pulled a woman from her car, ripped off her clothes, then chased her until she either jumped or was forced off a bridge to her death.

None of the 40 or so passersby tried to help Deletha Word during the confrontation that began with two minor traffic accidents early Saturday on Belle Isle, said police Sgt. John Morel.

A man who arrived late tried to rescue her from the Detroit River but couldn't reach her. The 33-year-old woman's body, missing a leg, was found several miles downstream later that morning.

"My baby was down there all by herself. I know she was scared to death," the woman's mother, Dortha Word, said as she cried Monday. "How could they be so cruel?"

Trouble started around 3 a.m., Morel said, when Word was involved in two minor traffic accidents on Belle Island.

One car with three men inside chased her onto the bridge connecting the island to the city and rammed her car, forcing her to stop.

One of the men smashed her car with a crowbar and pulled her from the car, ripping off some of her clothes, Cmdr. Gerald Stewart said. The man pushed her against the car and beat her, he said.

One of the men weighed nearly 300 pounds, according to a police source quoted in The Detroit News. Word, who was 4-foot-11, weighed 115 pounds, her mother said.

When Word tried to run away, police said the man with the crowbar chased her. What happened after that is unclear.

Police are not saying whether Word jumped or was forced off the bridge, but Mrs. Word said she is sure her daughter was forced into the Detroit River.

"They ... made her leap over that bridge and beat her hands. She was holding onto the bridge, and beat her hands away from that banister," she said, citing an account she said police gave her.

Lawrence Walker, 21, was in the bumper-to-bumper traffic that had formed on the bridge when he noticed a crowd running to the edge. He got out of his car and followed, jumping into the river after her.

But Word moved away from him and a friend in the water and he quickly lost sight of her. He worried afterward that perhaps she thought he was one of the people after her.

Walker said about 50 people were gathered when he ran up, many of them laughing about the men beating Word. He said one person had a cellular phone but would not call police.

"It seemed like people didn't care," he said.

By Sunday afternoon, police had arrested three men, two age 20 and one age 19. It was not clear what charges they faced.

Dorm occupancy surges

More freshmen, FYE program attributed to rise

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

Hordes of freshmen stampeding onto ASU's campus have raised the occupancy at ASU's 11 residence halls.

At last count, the total tenancy has jumped to 97 percent of the 4,880 beds, up from 91 percent in the fall of 1994, said Laura Boever, assistant director for operations.

Boever attributes the increase to a higher number of entering freshmen.

"The overall size of the freshman classes are larger," she said. "There are more students graduating right now at the same time as seniors in high school. So we've got a bigger lot to choose from."

The registrar's office will not begin to compile freshmen enrollment data until Sept. 9.

Debra Sells, associate director of Residential Life, accredited the growth to the Freshman Year Experience program initiated last fall.

"I think the number of freshmen who want to live on campus continues to increase," she said. "I think it's predominantly because of the Freshman Experience program. People are figuring out this is a wonderful way to get through the freshman year."

Sells added that many students who lived in the residence halls last year have returned for another semester.

"We had a higher number of returning students last year who indicated they wanted to remain for another year," she said. "That number was up to begin with."

Boever agreed that the FYE program has drawn a number of new students to on-campus housing.

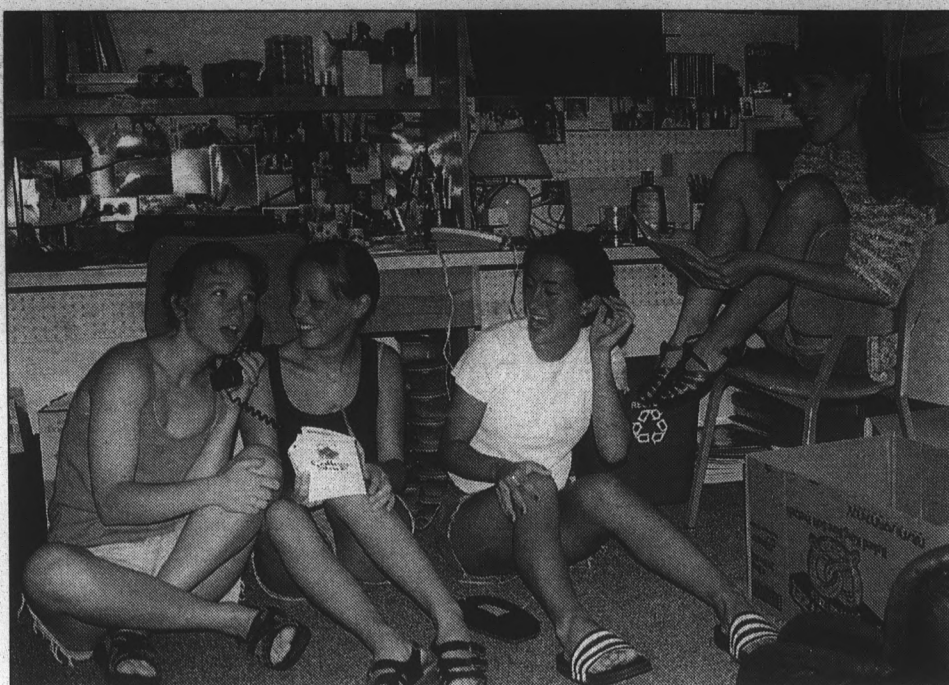

"I think it has definitely attracted more students to want to live on-campus their first year," she said. "I think (the program) has been very beneficial."

The Freshman Year Experience program provides students with an opportunity to adapt more quickly to a college lifestyle through special classes and services available in Palo Verde East, Manzanita, Sonora and Palo Verde West.

Boever said she expects the high occupancy rate to continue for at least the next two years.

"The trend suggests that (the high occupancy rate) will continue," she said. "We anticipate that the numbers will stay pretty much where they are for the next couple of years."

Sells added that she believes the numbers will stay up

Sara Abbott/State Press

barring any unforeseen conditions, such as tuition increases.

"It's hard to predict if something will happen in terms of demographics or tuition increases," she said. "It's looking as though we will be holding at 100 percent as long as conditions remain the same."

Tribal schools decaying due to lack of funds

OGLALA, S.D. (AP) In the cramped, musty basement of the Loneman School, Frank Rapp points at two threats to the hundreds of students who attend classes upstairs.

They are the ancient boilers that strain to keep the school warm during harsh prairie winters. Dan Two Bulls, the school custodian, must trudge down the narrow concrete stairs twice a day, 365 days a year, to turn them on and off, Rapp says.

"What if he breaks his leg, or has a heart attack?" asks Rapp, the school president. "If something happens to him, it might blow."

Rapp's predicament is not unique to his school, which serves Oglala Sioux students on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

America's tribal schools are crumbling because of budget cuts, inefficiency and neglect by the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs and Congress, say Rapp and other tribal school leaders. The nation's 187 BIA-funded schools have an estimated backlog of $650 million to $800 million in needed repairs.

"We're lucky right now. But one day, we're going to kill the kids," Rapp says. "One day one of these damn schools is going to burn down."

John Tippeconic, director of the BIA's Office of Indian Education Programs, calls the crumbling schools "a major, major problem."

"Schools are grossly underfunded," an advisory committee to the BIA's Office of Indian Education Programs concluded in 1991. That year, the bureau spent an average of $2,538 per student. The average spending for the 1994-95 school year fell to $2,515 per student.

In South Dakota, for example, off-reservation public schools spent an average of $4,045 per student for the 1994-95 term. Loneman School got $2,907 per student last year, Rapp says.

The federal government promised to educate American Indian children in treaties with the Sioux and other tribes. The Code of Federal Regulations requires the BIA to fund tribal schools at the per-student average for their state — a rule that is being ignored because Congress is not giving the BIA enough money for schools, Tippeconic says.

Last year, BIA schools got 84 percent of the money they requested. This year, the Senate passed a budget that cut $31 million for BIA schools, including a $10 million cut in school repair funds and a $13.6 million cut in new construction money.

"Indian kids that attend BIA schools, primarily on reservations, really deserve a quality education like any other students," Tippeconic says. "But under the latest budget, they won't be afforded that opportunity. That's what really hurts."

"The time has come to distinguish who are the murderers among the Palestinians and who are those who wish to find a political solution," Rabin said.

"With those who want a political situation, we shall cooperate. ... And with those who murder Israelis in order to murder the peace, we shall fight with all our strength."

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said the suspension of peace talks with the PLO would not delay an agreement, which negotiators have said they hope to reach by early September.

But the break in talks was certain to make it more difficult to resolve differences between the two sides by next month. It was the latest in a series of postponements that have plagued efforts to reach agreement on the second phase of Palestinian autonomy. The delays also limit the extent to which a troop withdrawal can be implemented before Israeli elections, scheduled for November 1996.

Public anger at the bombing will also make it more difficult for Rabin to make concessions to the Palestinians.

Hundreds of people protested near the bombing site immediately after the blast and again Monday night, yelling, "Rabin is a murderer!" and "Rabin is a traitor!"

"I think it's about time the government does something to stop the killing," said Avi Shlomain, 28.

PLO chief Yasser Arafat denounced the bombing and accused Iran of funding Islamic extremists in the West Bank and Gaza. "I will chop off every hand that gets money from outside the Palestinian arena, or orders from Iran or (elsewhere)," he said.

Bombing inquiry turns to books on far-right group

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Investigators believe books about far-right extremist groups — including one from a Kingman, Ariz., library — may have influenced the suspects in the federal building bombing.

An evidence log filed with the indictments of Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols shows that the nonfiction book, Armed and Dangerous: The Rise of the Survivalist Right, was found on Terry Nichols' coffee table, The New York Times reported today. The book describes the history of The Order, a far-right band of criminal terrorists.

According to the Times, McVeigh checked the book out of a library in Kingman, Ariz. The evidence suggests he gave it to Nichols to help re-inspire his faith in the bombing plot.

Federal investigators have long known of McVeigh's fondness for The Turner Diaries, a work of fiction that describes an armed overthrow of the government by white supremacists.

Meanwhile, one of McVeigh's former Army buddies said he is puzzled by a call he received from him two days before the blast.

"I haven't talked to him since 1991," John Kelso told The Associated Press Sunday. "I haven't talked to him since he left the military."

Kelso, a railroad engineer who lives in western Nebraska, said he testified last month before the grand jury that indicted McVeigh and Nichols.

He said the panel knew he had not spoken with McVeigh for several years, but wanted to know about McVeigh during the time the two knew each other.

A call was made from McVeigh's Junction City, Kan., motel room to Kelso on April 17, but Kelso was not home and a message was left on his telephone answering machine. Kelso erased the message, which was only voices in the background saying, "He's not home. He's at work."

Phone records led FBI agents to Kelso.

He described McVeigh as a gun fanatic who kept assault rifles and pistols, and was afraid the government would take them away from him.

"He just didn't like the amount of control they had, over everything," Kelso said. "He didn't scare me. I was no threat to him, I wasn't going to take his guns away."

The April 19 bombing of the federal building killed 168 people and injured more than 500. McVeigh and Nichols both face the death penalty if convicted.

About 300 people turned out in Oklahoma City on Sunday for a ceremony at a highway visitors' center, where a granite marker was erected for 11 Federal Highway Administration workers killed in the bombing.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Tony Danza knows how to show who's the boss.

Danza smashed a car window and grabbed a video camera from two men who had taped the actor and his kids on the beach, authorities said Monday.

Chris Williams, 25, and Alan Zasi, 34, told deputies Danza pursued them Sunday and got them to pull over by bumping their car with his Cadillac.

Danza kicked and broke the window and made off with the camera after a struggle in which Williams received several scratches, the sheriff's report said.

Danza wasn't arrested, but the case will be forwarded to prosecutors for possible robbery and battery charges, Deputy Fidel Gonzales said.

AUBURN, Ind. (AP) — O.J. Simpson's white Bronco isn't available, but devotees of his televised trial can bid for Johnnie Cochran Jr.'s Cadillac.

The defense attorney's 1985 Eldorado Biarritz will be among the celebrity vehicles up for sale at the Auburn Collector Car Show and Auction on Sept. 4.

"We know there has been someone out there watching the trial every day who would be proud to call this car theirs," said Julie Rosoff, a spokeswoman for Kruse International, an auction company.

"The value of the car is estimated at $15,000," Rosoff said. "Considering who owns it, though, it could double or triple in value."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former "Saturday Night Live" comedian Julia Sweeney has learned to laugh in the face of death.

She has made her bout with cervical cancer the subject of a stand-up comedy routine.

"They took out everything — lymph nodes, gall bladder, anything that could be there that could have it, cause it was spreading," Sweeney, 35, said in an interview last week. "Then I went through about nine weeks of radiation, so that's what the year's been like. A nightmare."

The nightmare had absurd moments, though, that provided comic material about doctors, dates and family members.

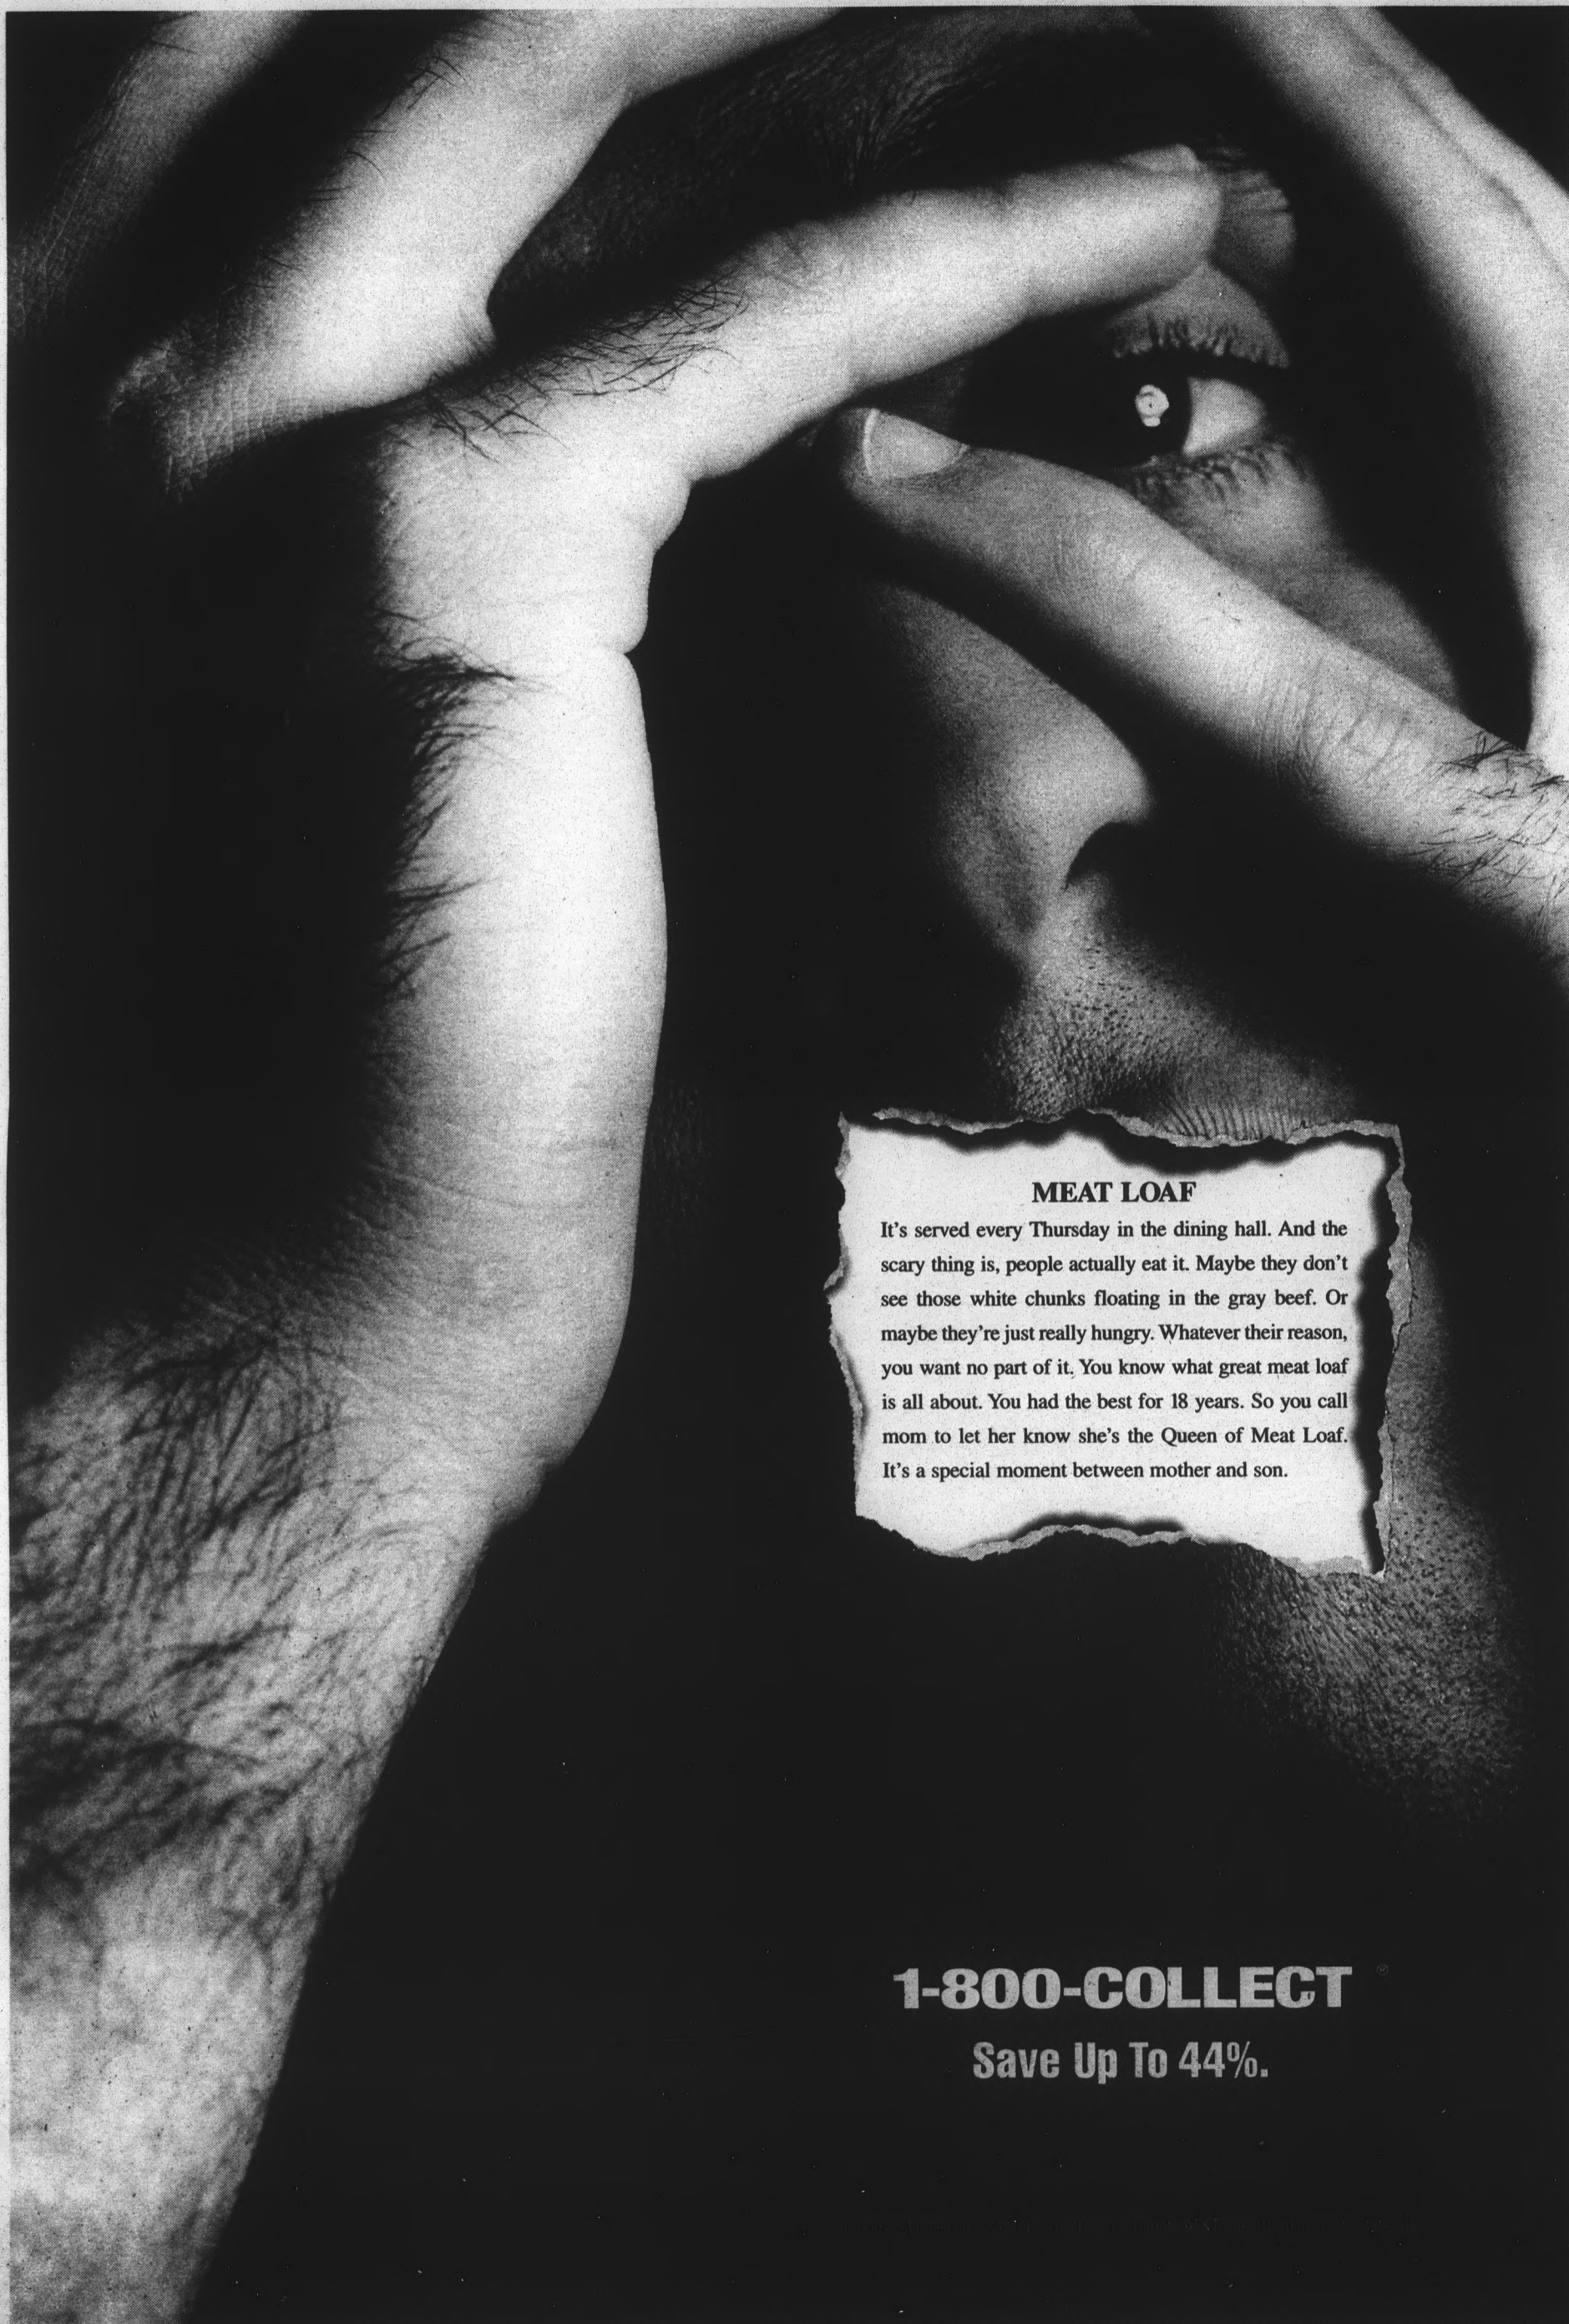

After a performance, the actress best known for her gender-ambiguous character Pat said she was approached by a relative of "Saturday Night Live" comedian Gilda Radner, who died of ovarian cancer in 1989.

"This guy came up," Sweeney recalled, "and said, 'I'm Gilda Radner's cousin, and I was very close to her, and I just want to say that had she lived, she would have done exactly what you're doing. She would have gotten up and she would have talked about it.'"

Summer training course sharpens ASU bike cops' skills

Bob Anderson/State Press

ASU Police Department Bike Control Coordinators Cal Chappel and Randy Hoyum take a "brake" from their bike control duties to enjoy the view from the Palm Walk foot bridge over University Drive.

BY GREG ZEMEIDA
STATE PRESS

ASU's bike patrol officers underwent advanced training this summer to learn how bicycles can be used in the fight against campus crime.

All seven of ASU Department of Public Safety's bike officers, including Chief of Police Lanny Standridge, completed the training in June to earn the International Police Mountain Bike Association's certification.

The IPMBA provides standardized training in bike procedures to more than 600 police agencies across the country. The training was free, but DPS must pay $50 yearly membership dues to the IPMBA.

Officers learned how to mount and dismount quickly, how to maneuver better on their bikes and how to make traffic stops. They trained in riding up and down stairs and how to use their bikes as shields when dealing with dangerous situations.

One of the tests, called the "brake and escape," involved riding at high speeds through cones toward an awaiting instructor. The officer would then have to make a quick right or left, depending on which way the trainer pointed.

The officers also rode through busy streets in Scottsdale to learn how to get around in heavy traffic and even picked up health and nutrition tips to prepare themselves for the rigors of constant bike riding.

Standridge said it was tough training, but well worth it for all of the things the officers learned. He added the bike officers need to be in good shape for the job, since they are outside on campus regardless of the heat or cold.

"This is not a fair weather-only type of transportation," Standridge said. "What we have done is increased the professionalism of a police bicyclist."

ASU's bike patrol program, which operates as a supplement to the normal car and foot patrols, has been around since the late 1980s. Bike officers patrol in pairs during each day's three shifts and have the same responsibilities as other police.

Officer Cal Chappel, who went through the 40-hour program, said the program has some benefits over car patrols. Bike officers are harder to see, making it easier for them to sneak up on criminals. He also said it is easier to get around campus.

"For the majority of (calls), a bike can make it to the scene quicker than a car," Chappel said.

In addition, the bike patrol program is more cost-effective. The average bike costs $1,000, compared to about $20,000 for a patrol car.

Standridge said the program is part of his community-based policing policy which involves getting officers to work in a "partnership" with the ASU community.

He said he believes the program has helped reduce the number of bike thefts on campus. In the past six weeks alone, bike officers have caught eight bike thieves.

Overall, bicycle thefts have decreased during the patrols. For the first six months of 1994, 173 bike thefts were reported. During the same time period this year, when the program was not in use, there were 284 thefts.

If more funds are available in the future, Standridge said he would be interested in expanding the program.

"It's already proven its worth," he said.

officer catches someone riding the wrong way on University Drive, the fine could run from $65 to $95.

Phillips said offenders can attend a 2-hour bicycle safety class on campus instead of paying the fine. He said it teaches "everything you need to know about bicycles but were afraid to ask," such as the causes of bike accidents, types of sanctions and bicycle theft and prevention. Violators may only take the class once each semester to erase their ticket. Phillips added that anyone may take the class, not just those who are required to.

Phillips said ASU police could easily write 500 tickets each day, but that officers realize that is not the best thing to do. He said education is the key to reduce bike violations and that only "selective" enforcement of citations will be used when police feel it is necessary.

"We don't use (citations) much. They just aren't really effective for us," Phillips said.

Standridge said there are no plans to change the amount of the ASU fine, adding that it is enough to get an offender's attention.

"Eighteen dollars may not be a lot for some, but it may be a lot for others," he said. "I hope it would be enough of an attention-getter that (violators) will not want to pay another one in the future."

Those interested in taking the bike class can call 965-6068 for more information.

Recruits choose ASU's baseball program

Phil Lowery (left), Ryan Mills, Bob Welch and Ron Marrietta are a few of the newest additions to the ASU pitching staff. Lowery, Mills and Marrietta decided not to go pro and each committed to the Sun Devils Monday. Welch, a former Major League pitcher, is the new pitching coach.

BY DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

ASU baseball coach Pat Murphy let out a big sigh of relief after three of his top high school recruits turned down professional baseball Monday to come play at ASU.

Topping the list of recruits are left-handed pitchers Ryan Mills of Horizon High in Scottsdale and Phil Lowery of Casa Grande High in Petaluma, Calif., who both attended classes Monday, thereby committing to play baseball at ASU for the next three years. Southpaw pitcher Ron Marrietta out of Brooklyn, N.Y., also committed to the Sun Devils Monday.

Mills and Lowery were considered potential first-round draft picks in the June amateur draft and could demand a lot of money from pro teams. Mills was drafted in the 13th round by the New York Yankees and Lowery was drafted 37th overall in the second round by the Texas Rangers. Pro teams have until the first day of college to sign their draft picks. Once a player attends a college course, he is considered untouchable from major league clubs for the next three years.

"We're going to have the number one recruiting class in the country," Murphy said. "But we're going to try to low-key that number one recruiting class."

Mills and Lowery were both excited to play baseball at ASU and relieved the long summer of negotiations was over.

"It's been hectic," Lowery said of his summer. "Basically, I've been treating it as if I'm going to school."

Mills' fate was still in the air as he awoke Monday morning. Mills had set a $750,000 price tag for signing and was still awaiting word from the Yankees in the morning.

'Men of Troy' plan to dominate conference

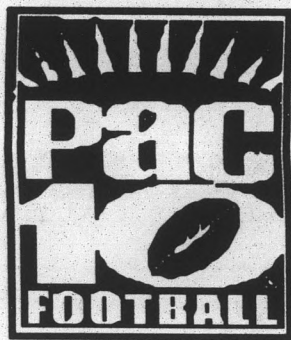

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

This is the second in a series of Pac-10 football previews.

With three or four of the 10 teams in the Pac-10 in contention for the Associated Press top 25, the only problem facing the division is it may be too strong for its own good. USC, UCLA, Washington and Arizona are all scheduled to face at least two of the four top teams in the division as listed by the West Coast media. Here are the top two along with their prospectus:

1. USC

The men of Troy (they no longer want to be called Southern Cal) are the top Pac-10 team in this year's AP poll and it's no accident. John Robinson predicted he would return USC to power when he returned two years ago. With two stellar recruiting seasons he's been able to do just that, as evidenced by the Trojans 55-14 Cotton Bowl victory over Texas Tech.

Among the Trojans' returning starters this year are former ballboy-turned-wide receiver/Heisman candidate Keyshawn Johnson. The senior will be looking to have another season like last year when he caught 66 passes for 1,362 yards and nine touchdowns. Junior Shawn Walters heads a plethora of talented running backs and preseason All-American candidate John Stonehouse will handle the punting duties.

"We're a young team without any stars with the exception of Keyshawn (Johnson)," Robinson said. "If we're at a level that some people think we're at, I really don't know that. I think it's hard to evaluate yourself a lot of times."

Junior Brad Otton appears to have the early nod to start at quarterback, but Robinson hasn't ruled out utilizing both Otton and Kyle Wacholtz.

"One of the things that we're determined to do is give our quarterback position less responsibility for winning this year than we have in last years," Robinson said.

JOHNSON

Analysis: USC has what it takes to reach the top spot in the Pac-10, but it has a tough schedule ahead with Arizona, Notre Dame and Washington on the road. The Trojans also face UCLA in a tough home finale.

2. UCLA

Coach Terry Donahue will also have the luxury of a star wide receiver in senior Kevin Jordan, who picked up right where the injured and since departed J.J. Stokes left off, catching 73 passes for 1,228 yards and seven touchdowns.

Ryan Fien will be replacing the graduated Wayne Cook at quarterback. Fien almost won the job over Cook in training camp last year. Number 33 Karim Abdul-Jabbar makes his return this year to the Bruins, not at the center position for the basketball team, but as running back. Abdul-Jabbar, who changed his name from Sharman Shah for religious reasons,

SMOOTH TALKIN'

Cornerback Soward toys with opponents' minds

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

Marcus Soward enjoys being a nuisance to other teams. In fact, the ASU senior right cornerback has just about turned it into an art form.

"My coaches are always telling me, 'You don't need to talk so much. Calm down a little bit,' but I consider that part of my game," said Soward, who is notorious for his trash-talking on the field. "I talk a lot and I jabber and say things to the other receivers. That's all part of my game and it helps me."

And it doesn't matter what the situation is. Soward expresses himself on a variety of issues.

"If I make a good play or if I do something that I think is good, I'm going to talk about it and I'm going to talk to them and I'm going to talk to their teammates too," said Soward, who will become a four-year letterman this year. "I consider it a mental edge. I try to get the best of them by talking."

Soward loves to talk so much, he said it makes no difference if his adversary listens.

"Some receivers out there, they're real quiet. You can talk all day to them and they won't say anything," he said. "But I'll still talk. And if I'm getting the best of them, I'll just keep going. And if I'm not getting the best of them, I'll still keep going."

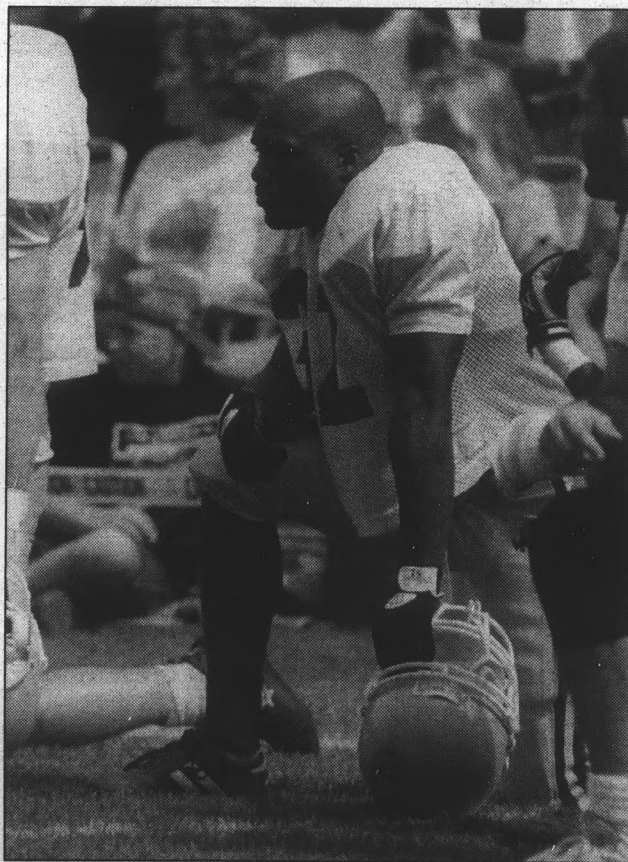

Soward's ongoing pleasantries frequently include predictions, warnings and most often, advice.

"You say things like, 'You're not catching the ball tonight,' or 'Don't run a route my way,' and some other things that probably shouldn't be printed in the paper," he said. "A lot of times it works. Then sometimes it doesn't. Sometimes they get you. That's all part of the game. You win some and you lose some."

During his tenure at ASU, Soward has won more personal battles than he has lost. Now the 5-foot-11, 179-pounder is touted as one of the top returning cornerbacks in the Pac-10 conference.

"What has hurt him more than any other thing has been injury," ASU football coach Bruce Snyder said of Soward, who is currently recovering from a mild groin pull. "But when he's healthy and when he's playing, he's quick, aggressive and smart. I don't know that there's a better corner in the league."

Soward will lead a secondary that could be one of the deepest the Sun Devils have seen in recent years. He will be flanked by seniors Lee Cole, the left corner, and Harlen Rashada, the strong safety, with sophomore Thomas Simmons at free safety. However, redshirt freshmen Mitchell Freedman and Lamont Morgan, sophomore Jason

Dianne R. Bartsch/StatePress

Senior right cornerback Marcus Soward brings a wealth of Pac-10 experience to the deep Sun Devil secondary. Soward, who will be a four-year letterman, thrives on jawing with opposing receivers.

TURN TO SOWARD, PAGE 22.

Soward

Simmons and junior Traivon Johnson will also see significant action.

"I've been here four years and this is by far the best secondary I've played in," said Soward, who has played with former Sun Devils Craig Newsome, Lenny McGill and Kevin Miniefield, who each have turned pro. "We have more talent, more depth and more ability than ever."

ASU secondary coach Donnie Henderson said Soward's understanding of the game is evident in his maturity level.

"The thing that he brings to the secondary will be experience and we do need that back there," he said. "Maturity in the secondary comes with confidence, and he has the confidence that he can play in the Pac-10. A lot of that came through the three years he's been here."

Soward has endured his share of adversity along the way. Aside from an ankle sprain that sidelined him for two games last year and a shoulder injury in 1993, Soward learned the hard way about life in the Pac-10.

"That first year he took a beating. He wasn't very good as a freshman and I think it hurt his confidence and it dipped again as a sophomore," Snyder said. "I'm not so sure he didn't consider giving it up because his confidence was so low. But he's brought himself back up and I think now he realizes that he is one of the premier corners in our league."

Soward is confident his style fits right into ASU's sin-

"You have to have a real short memory. There's 30 to 40 passes thrown per game. They're going to catch some. If you get beat, you have to have your mind set for that next play or you could easily get beat again."

—ASU senior Marcus Soward on playing cornerback gle-coverage scheme.

"I believe I'm a very good cover man. I believe I'm at the top of the Pac-10 in cover-men," he said.

Soward, an elementary education major, played running back at Eisenhower High in Rialto, Calif then switched to corner at ASU.

Soward said the hardest part of playing cornerback is the scapegoat-factor. When a corner gets burned, everyone in the stadium knows it.

"Your mistakes are seen by the fans. If you get beat on a touchdown, everybody sees that, whereas if you're a linebacker or a defensive end, it's really covered up," Soward said. "Out there man on man, everybody sees it. If you see the ball sailing over your head, that's a touchdown."

And on the island, there is no place to hide.

"You have to have a real short memory," Soward said grinning. "There's 30 to 40 passes thrown per game. They're going to catch some. If you get beat, you have to have your mind set for that next play or you could easily get beat again."

But when Soward stares into the eyes of the opposing receiver as he anticipates the whistle, the adrenaline rush is what it's all about.

"That's the reason why you're playing. It's a pressure game," he said. "You have thousands of people looking at you. It's all fun. It's 'Who's the best'? It's just you and him out there. The challenge itself is what makes it so exciting."

rushed for 1,227 yards last year and is an All-America candidate. Junior Skip Hicks will be right on his heels competing for starting time at the tailback position. Senior Jonathan Ogden, considered one of the top two offensive linemen in the nation, anchors the front. Preseason All-American Donnie Edwards will lead a strong defense.

With so much talent returning, one might think Donahue would have high expectations of this year's squad, but the hype-wary coach is not concerned with preseason analysis.

"I've never seen a coach who didn't think he had a great spring practice and has a great bunch of kids returning for him," Donahue said. "Everybody this year thinks they have a great team."

Donahue is reflective of the long road that has led up to his 20th season.

"Twenty years is a long time. That's a lot of coin tosses," Donahue quipped. "It seems almost like yesterday that I was named head coach of UCLA."

Analysis: It appears that once again Robinson and Donahue will be battling for the top spot in the Pac-10 and Los Angeles bragging rights, but UCLA also faces a tough schedule with Miami in its home opener and Arizona, Washington and USC down the road.

"But if these kids are getting offered a lot of money, it basically comes down to their decision, if they feel like their getting what they're worth and what they want to do."

Murphy kept in close contact with all his recruits and acted as a helping hand as the days crept closer to the Aug. 21 deadline.

"You don't try to convince them which way is right or wrong, just try to be there for them and help them understand the process the best you can," Murphy said. "There's no right or wrong answer. I obviously feel strongly about the importance of a college education. I think any kid who doesn't get a college education is making a mistake."

Monday's third recruit to commit, Marrietta, was a ninth-round draft pick of the Detroit Tigers.

Mills, Lowery and Marrietta joined shortstop Mike Collins from Mountain Pointe High in Phoenix and third baseman/outfielder Mike Torti, a transfer from the University of Miami (Fla.) on the list of the Sun Devils' premier recruits.

Two-year starter Cody McKay, who was expected to sign a pro contract after being drafted in the fifth round by the St. Louis Cardinals, opted to return for his junior year. McKay, who was a medical redshirt in 1994, will be moving to his third position in the spring when he will play catcher for ASU after having already started at shortstop and third base.

Five recruits did slip out of ASU's grasp as they signed contracts with their respective teams. They include second-round pick, catcher Ben Petrick by the Colorado Rockies; third-round pick, right-handed pitcher Randy Knoll by the Philadelphia Phillies; eighth-round pick, right handed pitcher Trey Martin by the Montreal Expos; 21st-round pick, outfielder Donzell McDonald by the New York Yankees; and 61st-round pick, outfielder Cash Riley.

Pitchers

"It's the first time I know what I'm doing in three or four months. Actually, it's more than that," Mills said. "It was stressful not knowing where I'm going."

ASU assistant baseball coach Doug Schreiber, who Murphy said was instrumental in helping to bring some of the top recruits to ASU, said he and the ASU coaching staff never pressured their recruits into committing to ASU.

"We were very concerned, but the way the kind of approach we took was, we think college is always a great option whether they're a first-round pick or a 51st-round pick," Schreiber said. "So from that aspect, we kind of always can say college is a great option."

Sun Devil baseball team announces try-out meeting

The walk-on tryout meeting for the ASU baseball team is Saturday, Aug. 25 at 7 p.m. in the University Activity Center's Room 35-41.
