

Congress takes ax to student aid programs

BY CODY V. AYCOCK
STATE PRESS

Graduate students have become the newest pawns in congressional efforts to cut financial aid.

The U.S. House and Senate agreed on a recent compromise to continue subsidizing interest on undergraduates' loans while they are in school. However, the subsidy for graduate borrowers may be on the chopping block.

"(Eliminating the subsidy) will create a savings for the government of $3 billion over seven years," said Paul Allvin, executive director of Arizona Students' Association. "That, of course, means graduate students will be paying $3 billion more over seven years. It just passes the cost onto students."

Currently, financially needy students are exempt from paying interest on their federal loans while in school.

Eliminating the exemption for graduate students would increase the cost of a loan by as much as 50 percent, said Kevin Boyer, executive director National Association of Graduate/Professional Students.

"All of the (graduate) cuts together will have a very dramatic effect on access in the future," said Bianca Bernstein, dean of the Graduate College. "If ... they eliminate the interest subsidy for graduate students, it will make it even more difficult for people with moderate or low incomes to attend graduate school ... It means basically that students have to come up with more money to attend school."

Congress is scheduled to vote on the issue later this month.

If it passes, student activists are "cautiously hopeful" they can persuade President Clinton to veto any budget that includes aid reductions.

"The question is, will he hold up the entire federal budget for a couple billion dollars in education cuts? We will find out," Allvin said. "He is being strongly encouraged ... to just say 'no' to this budget."

Early this year, Congress began debating the budget for fiscal year '96 by laying down broad spending parameters.

ASU absent from Money's list of 'best college buys'

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

ASU failed to make the grade this year, according to a Money magazine national college ranking.

In a survey released Wednesday, the magazine compared more than 1,000 colleges and universities nationwide to find the "best college buys" — and ASU was nowhere to be found in the top 100.

For the third straight year, New College at the University of Southern Florida took top honors. The primary reason for the school's No. 1 ranking was its overwhelmingly low tuition increase, a meager seven dollars this year for out-of-state students.

Tim Desch, associate director of ASU's Undergraduate Admissions, said he could not evaluate the survey without taking a close look at the judging criteria because it may initially be unfair.

"Even though it sounds like they're looking at some measurable statistics, a lot of it can be subjective as well," he said. "I'm always a little leery talking about rankings because even though you have a lot of criteria there, you never quite know what they're looking at as a whole."

Money used 12 factors to rank the schools, including student-to-faculty ratio, library resources and results from entrance exams like the SAT and the ACT.

Desch said the survey is dependent on an overlying assumption that all colleges and universities are similar in general terms.

"It (the survey) kind of depends on what kind of institu-

Allergy sufferers find no relief during moldy monsoon

Tim Hacker/State Press

Steven Hickox, a Mesa Community College art major, receives a skin endpoint titration test at the Adobe ENT (Ear, Nose and Throat) clinic in Mesa Wednesday afternoon. The test involves injecting a small amount of antigen into the layers of skin which causes the formation of an antibody if the person is allergic to the antigen. Hickox was tested for allergic reactions to Bermuda grass, cottonwood trees and orange trees.

It's everywhere — lurking in your bathroom, hiding in your kitchen and skulking in those dusty corners, waiting to strike.

It's mold, and for almost one out of every four Arizonans who suffer from allergies, monsoon season can be a real drag because of it.

"Any moisture supply can perpetuate the growth of molds," said Dr. Chester Leathers of the Hi-Health Mold and Pollen Project. "The monsoons are especially bad, because it means there is high humidity and scattered showers, all of which are highly conducive to the growth of molds."

Molds grow on anything damp, especially bathroom tiles and the grout between them, he said.

"Bath showers are especially notorious because of one mold known as a bathroom mold. All can be allergens," he said.

Plagued by allergies since she was a child, ASU sophomore Lee Anna Woodward knows about the pain and discomfort brought on by another allergy season.

Allergic to "everything but food," the education major gets "really drained and tired" when pollen or dust is in the air. Dust usually contains mold that can cause an allergic reaction for Woodward.

"My eyes swell and I break out in rashes," she said.

"The monsoon season is really tough on me."

Woodward, like many allergy sufferers, has found relief with allergy shots.

"I have noticed a big difference since I started taking these allergy shots," she said. "I can run now, whereas before I couldn't."

Most allergy sufferers are plagued by airborne allergens, like mold and pollen, that enter the body through the lungs and throat. The immune system views the allergen as a foreign invader and marshals its forces to cleanse the mold or pollen.

After inhaling the allergen, it comes in contact with the mucous membranes in the lungs. The membranes then release an antibody known as Immunoglobulin E — which combines with cells known as mast cells — causing them to rupture and produce histamines.

These histamines produce mucous as a way to cleanse the system, but histamines can also result in watery eyes, a runny nose and difficult breathing.

Although it is virtually impossible to escape the allergy season, Leathers does have a few tips to avoid exposure to the allergens.

"Avoid dusty construction sites, dampen your lawn before you mow it, keep your air-conditioning filter changed and your house free of dust," he said.

Leathers also recommends wearing a surgical-type mask for high-allergen days, or for anyone who is highly allergic to certain molds and pollens.

Cuts

The House took up the issue of discretionary expenditures this summer. On Aug. 4, they passed their version of the discretionary budget, and handed it to the Senate.

Congress will debate entitlement spending before sending the budget President Clinton later this fall.

"Of the three steps of the process, step one is complete, step two is half done and step three has not yet begun," Boyer said.

Currently, funding for Pell Grants, scholarships and fellowships is weaving its way through Congress.

On Aug. 4, the House voted to eliminate more than $4 billion in Pell Grant funding. The reduction could remove 250,000 students from the program, Boyer said.

"That is a real important loss," he added.

Representatives eliminated $28.1 million in funding for the R.C. Byrd Honors Scholarships, $10.1 million for the P.R. Harris Fellowships and $6.8 million for the J.K. Javits Fellowship.

Rep. Matt Salmon, R-Ariz., who represents ASU's district in the House, defended the cuts, but said Congress understands the financial needs of students.

"Congress had a tough job to do in this year's appropriations process," he wrote in a statement. "We are committed to making serious cuts in order to reduce the deficit, but we also realize the value of programs that help students."

tions you're competing against," he said. "There are other institutions, perhaps some private institutions, where naturally their graduation rates may be stronger based on the kinds of programs that they offer and the kinds of students that are coming through."

According to the survey, not one of Arizona's three accredited, four-year institutions broke into the elite 100.

Last year's report ranked ASU's Honors College in the top eight schools in the country.

Desch said that although ASU didn't place within the top 100 schools overall, the institution may be the best in specific categories.

"In a lot of cases, in different rankings, there are many things here at ASU that are ranked very highly," he said. "Overall, to have the expectation that in every area ASU would necessarily fall in to the top 10 percent of all universities in the country is not realistic."

He added that current students, as well as prospective ones, shouldn't give too much weight to any one survey.

"I would hope that any students seriously looking at ASU, or any institution for that matter, would look beyond rankings in a magazine," he said. "I would hope that the vast majority of students who are exploring colleges and universities would go beyond one magazine article and one ranking."

State's year-end budget exceeds expectations

PHOENIX (AP) — The state reached the end of this year's fiscal budget with a $270 million surplus — about $102.6 million more than expected, Gov. Fife Symington said Wednesday.

The state also found a $223 million windfall in its budget stabilization fund, also known as the "rainy day fund."

Symington said the extra money backs up his pledge to improve the state's fiscal strength.

"Four years of hard work and responsible budgeting have produced significant tax reductions for the citizens of Arizona," he said.

Earlier this year, Symington spearheaded a $400 million GOP tax-cut plan that included a $200 million income-tax cut this year and the promise of $200 million in property tax relief next year.

On Wednesday, the governor made a pledge to slash income taxes further next year by another $200 million.

To do so, no new money will be given over next year's appropriations. Symington said he already has instructed state agency directors to submit "zero growth" budgets for the 1997 fiscal year.

Symington said the zero growth rationale will help cut unnecessary government programs and eliminate bureaucratic duplication.

"The government is still too big and the best way to control it is to sit on it," he said.

The only exceptions will come in budgets for the state Department of Corrections and education for K-12 grades. Those areas will get an increase because of the state's burgeoning population.

Investigation continues into fatal van crash

PHOENIX (AP) — Seven Taiwanese tourists killed in a van crash near Hoover Dam were on an optional excursion offered in a package tour to Las Vegas, a tour agency said Wednesday.

The victims and seven other people injured in Tuesday's accident were returning from an optional trip to the Grand Canyon as part of a three-day tour to Las Vegas, said Lauren Poon, general manager of Pacific Asia Travel, a San Francisco-based agency that booked the Las Vegas trip.

The group's van was on a winding mountain stretch of U.S. 93 at the Arizona-Nevada border when the driver lost control on a curve and overcorrected, said Arizona Department of Public Safety Sgt. Ron DeLong.

All the victims, who weren't wearing seat belts, were hurled from the van as it flipped 2 1/4 times and rolled over three people before coming to rest in a roadside ditch.

Seat belts would have undoubtedly saved some lives, DeLong said.

Driver inattention appears to have caused the accident, DeLong said.

If the Mohave County Attorney's office decides to press charges, the driver may face anything from a traffic citation to charges of vehicular manslaughter, DeLong said.

An unidentified Serb woman inspects debris of her home, destroyed in NATO air strikes in the village of Vidrič, 31 miles northeast of Sarajevo. Dozens of warplanes from NATO countries unleashed bombs on Serb targets around Sarajevo Wednesday in the biggest assault in the alliance's history.

NATO pounds Bosnian Serbs

Effect on war, peace talks uncertain

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — In a fierce new strategy that could end the Bosnian war or escalate it sharply, the West pounded the Bosnian Serbs with artillery and air attacks Wednesday in hopes of bludgeoning them into serious peace talks.

The West's gamble showed early signs of paying off, though one French plane was shot down and the extent of bomb damage wasn't immediately clear. Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and a Serb leader in Bosnia talked about continuing talks on a U.S.-proposed peace plan.

The attacks, NATO's biggest assault in its history, could mark a turning point in the 40-month war that has tested U.N. and NATO credibility and left an estimated 200,000 Bosnians dead or missing.

NATO and U.N. officials warned the Serbs to stop attacking civilians and return to peace talks or brace for more of the same.

"The world has finally done what it should have done a long, long time ago," said Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, who characterized the assault as "the beginning of peace."

But Bosnian Serb Radovan Karadzic leader sounded a defiant note, accusing NATO and the U.N. of declaring war. "This is a precedent which could jeopardize world peace and trigger the Third World War," he warned.

The bombing raids by NATO planes began around 2 a.m. Wednesday and continued through late afternoon, when a French Mirage fighter jet was shot down near the Bosnian Serb stronghold of Pale, east of Sarajevo. Its two crew members were seen parachuting from the burning plane, but their fate was unknown.

Bosnian security sources later claimed the crew members were captured, but France said it couldn't confirm that.

Bombs hit the Bosnian Serb army barracks in Pale, and a thick plume of smoke hung over the town. U.N. officials said Serb ammunition plants and depots in at least three other locations around Sarajevo were apparently destroyed.

NATO and U.N. officials said their attacks were limited to military targets, but Bosnian Serb officials claimed there were unspecified civilian casualties.

The raids also were clear punishment for the Serbs' shelling Monday of a Sarajevo market, in which 37 people were killed.

Japan marks MacArthur's 2nd landing

ATSUGI NAVAL AIR FACILITY, Japan (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur made another grand entrance in Japan Wednesday — this time in the form of a 6-foot bronze statue.

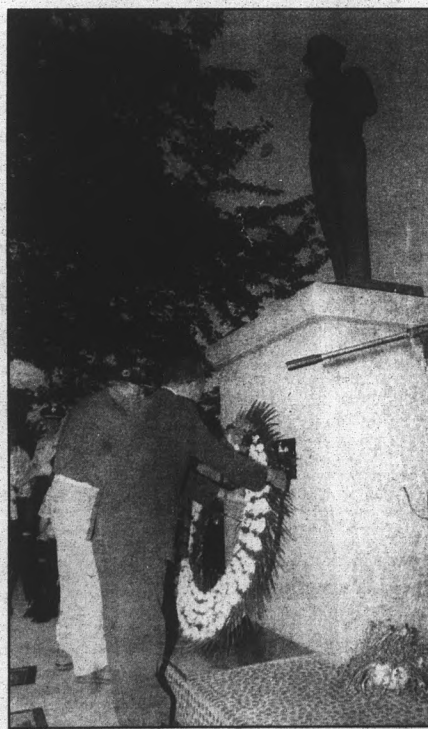

The unveiling of the statue came as dozens of American World War II veterans commemorated MacArthur's arrival 50 years ago as leader of the U.S. occupation in Japan.

"I felt that this was something that I just had to do," said Kenkichi Takahashi, 66, a Japanese cement company president who donated the statue of MacArthur descending from an airplane, holding his trademark pipe.

"Japan owes MacArthur a great debt," Takahashi said, expressing a sentiment shared by many Japanese who remember the occupation.

Most historians agree that the American-led administration from the end of the war in 1945 to 1952 inspired changes in government and society that have been crucial to Japan's tremendous postwar economic success.

MacArthur's relatively evenhanded administration of the occupation, and George Doherty of Anaheim, Calif., a veteran of the 11th Airborne Division, left, and Yoshio Shiga, a former fighter pilot, lay a wreath on the newly-unveiled statue of Gen. Douglas MacArthur at Atsugi Air Base in Japan. The statue was dedicated during a joint U.S.-Japanese ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of the beginning of America's occupation of Japan. MacArthur and 5,000 American paratroopers, including Doherty, landed 50 years ago at the site, where Shiga was stationed.

Women push for larger role at conference

BEIJING (AP) — At a lavish opening ceremony, organizers of the largest women's conference ever vowed Wednesday to fight for empowerment and equality. There was no mention of the fact that the 18,000 women there may have to fight just to get their message across during the 10-day event.

Acrobats did flips accompanied by opera singers, and hundreds of dancers in blue suits and short orange dresses made colorful patterns with fans and pom-poms. Organizers predicted women would have unprecedented power in the 21st century.

But even as a speaker exhorted the women to "celebrate women's power — our strength," participants prepared to move from the Beijing sports complex where the ceremony was held to Huairou, a small town an hour's drive to the north.

China moved the conference there four months ago in a move organizers charge was designed to keep Chinese residents away from delegates to the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women, which begins Monday in Beijing — and from the 11 million residents of the Chinese capital.

Congress' war on students

In its seemingly holy crusade to balance the federal budget, the 104th Congress has declared war on the American college student.

Trying to cut the federal budget makes good fiscal sense. When your national debt starts nearing the $5 trillion mark, it's probably a good idea to stop running annual deficits.

But Congress seems to have gotten a bloodthirsty gleam in its collective eye. Sworn enemies of red ink, they seem determined to cut the budget to the bone — no matter who they hurt in the process.

Their latest proposal: The complete elimination of subsidized loans to graduate students, and the loss of $4 billion over seven years for the Pell Grant.

Once again, Washington is going after the people that can least afford to feel the sting of the budget ax.

Cutting Pell Grants is insane. With the elimination of this $4 billion in funding, a quarter of a million financially needy students will find their college dreams a hell of a lot harder to attain.

The result? College reverts back to what it used to be — the sole domain of those who can afford to pay for it entirely out of their own pockets.

Seems to us that the reason that we created programs like the Pell Grant was to give those who grew up poor and impoverished a chance to escape their poverty — a chance to make something of themselves, a chance to fight their way to a career.

Now Congress is kicking that ladder right out from under them.

Also coming under attack are graduate students, victims of a backroom compromise by the House and Senate.

The House wanted to kill all subsidized loans for all students. The Senate didn't want to touch the program.

So, with typical Washington flair, they hit upon a deal. Leave the undergrads alone — but take away graduate student subsidized loans.

We know plenty of graduate students. While lots of students have some trouble making ends meet, they seem to have it worse than most.

The official dish of graduate students is probably either macaroni and cheese, or Ramen Noodles.

Does Congress really believe that these students will be able to make monthly interest payments on their loans?

If they do believe that — and if they really believe that Pell Grants are expendable — then we are convinced that this Congress, like all others that preceded it, is really out of touch with the American public.

So much for a new kind of Congress.

The message is clear: Congress does not give the slightest damn about college students.

Money is all that matters anymore in our nation's capital.

Cutting out support for graduate students will save this nation less than 1 percent on its national budget. But at what price?

This nation is in dire need of people with graduate and professional degrees. Yet these budget cuts will surely place these degrees out of the reach of a significant proportion of America's students.

It cannot be in America's best interests to sacrifice such a vitally important piece of its future in order to save such a relatively minor amount of money.

Let us hope that President Clinton, never known for his backbone, will find the strength to slap a veto against any budget that viciously cuts student financial aid.

If he doesn't veto this one, God help us — and God help this country.

Second chances hard to come by

All Richie Parker wanted to do was start a new chapter in his life.

For some unknown reason he picked Arizona as his new starting point. Within days of that decision, he watched in probable horror as his past became front page news, unmercifully destroying his hopes for a new start.

You see, Parker is an 18-year-old basketball player from New York with a sexual assault conviction. While he was in high school, he and a buddy lured a freshman girl into the school's basement stairwell, where he forced her to perform oral sex.

He pleaded guilty to sexual assault and was sentenced to five years probation in January 1994.

Let me repeat that.

He pleaded guilty to sexual assault and was sentenced by the judge to five years probation.

It should end there but it doesn't.

Somehow the papers got wind of his plight and plastered his story all over their front pages, leaving MCC to rescind its previous offer of playing time — and a second chance.

"After careful consideration of circumstances as well as public ramification of the case, Mesa Community College decided to bar Richie Parker from participation in MCC intercollegiate athletics for the 1995-96 season," school spokesman Dave Irwin told a reporter in a prepared statement.

However, it said he could still go to school there.

How noble of them.

Funny, how it was OK for Parker to play basketball before the media got wind of his conviction but now he is deemed unfit to represent the college.

I also find it odd that as controversial as having a basketball player with a sexual assault conviction on the team could be, nobody claimed to know of MCC coach Rob Standifer's decision to recruit him until the day before it hit the news. Not Athletic Director Allen Benedict or MCC President Larry K. Christiansen.

Are you kidding me?

As vulture-like as the press can be about things like this, you can't tell me they didn't know?

They knew. They just tried to see if they could get Parker in without causing a media circus. When they realized they couldn't, they decided to leave Parker hanging.

My question is, why continue to punish someone for a sentence he has already served?

When did the public, the school and the media become the jury on whether he should be able to play basketball?

I could guess that there are plenty of people going to that school with criminal records. I didn't know that playing a sport was a privilege that could be taken away because of someone's past faults.

Instead of giving him the opportunity to play basketball and to redeem himself, he is blackballed.

What purpose does that serve?

His attorney and the victims attorney are left wondering the same thing too.

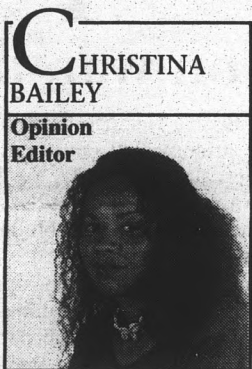

"He's a high school kid who committed a crime, received his sentence, apologized sincerely and is trying to put that chapter of his past behind him," Michael Feldman, the girl's attorney, told a reporter. "My (client) wants to get on with her life and hopes he does the same. She wants him to be a positive force in this world."

I think it wrong for MCC to buckle under public pressure and not let him play basketball. I think it is wrong for the public and the press to castigate him for something he is trying to make amends for.

Some people do stupid things. Period.

I guess the second stupidest thing Parker ever did was think he could come here for a second chance.

Pocahontas preaches tolerance

Tina Holder's editorial on Aug. 28 really caught my attention. Before the movie Pocahontas was released I was fully prepared to agree with her completely... then I actually saw the movie.

Sure Disney plays fast and loose with historical fact, but that didn't really surprise me. They hadn't managed to accurately adapt many fairy tales over the years either, but who REALLY wanted to see Ariel (in The Little Mermaid) turn into sea foam anyway. I can accept that Disney has produced a nice fictional story, loosely based on historical figures.

What really caught my attention was her partial quoting from the song Savages and her interpretation of its use. Prior to seeing the film I was afraid that, in the name of political correctness, Disney would gloss over the racial tensions of the colonial period in favor of a more modern "love everyone" point of view. I was pleasantly surprised, even impressed, with their handling of a volatile topic. Sadly, the lines Ms. Holder quotes are a very accurate representation of the opinions of most Europeans settling the New World. What she left out is the fact that the next verse is an equally hateful view of whites by the Native Americans, "It is as we had feared, the pale skin is a devil. The only thing they care about is greed."

In these lines, the Native Americans express an equally bloodthirsty desire to rid their shores of the settlers.

Pocahontas and John Smith may have not been romantically involved historically, but their fictional romance provides the real message of this movie ... tolerance. Her desire to stop the killing of Smith, as well as the other settlers, is the dramatic motivation for the film.

I agree I would rather have our children live in a world where they need only leave a film with the happy pictures of The Colors of the Wind, but they do not. They are growing up in a world in which tolerance gets a lot of lip service, but is not practiced as much as we like to think. The violent, and realistic, hatred of two groups of people expressed in the song Savages serves to illustrate where intolerance can lead. It is a necessary foil to Pocahontas' desire for peace. The impact of one would be lost without the other.

While Pocahontas is certainly not the innocuous entertainment of Disney's earlier film, I don't think it should be overlooked. It can be an important method for getting our children's attention and a good jumping off point to teach them the true story of Pocahontas, as well as the tolerance we want them to practice as well as preach.

Pocahontas misunderstood

If one tries hard enough, it seems that anyone looking to be offended can accomplish this task, even if it involves sidestepping truth, logic, or common sense. Tina Holder's article on Monday painted Disney's Pocahontas as a racist manifesto — a vile form of propaganda meant to socialize our young children into a culture of hate. As proof, she pointed to the lyrics, fashions and the historical errors contained within the movie. However, beyond her own mistakes within the article, Holder has seemed to miss the point altogether.

In quoting an example of "racist" lyrics, Holder incorrectly attributed them to Just Around the River Bend, though the lyrics quoted are actually contained in the song Savages.

What is more important is the failure to put the lyrics in context. In the part of the movie where this song occurs, both the European settlers and the Native Americans sing. They both make disparaging comments about each other's race, and they both think that the other should be "wiped from the earth."

Yes, these words are clearly racist, but the point is to show the irrationality of racism. If racist words in a movie cause the movie itself to be racist, such logic would make Schindler's List a racist movie because anti-Semitic words are spoken throughout.

Holder has also been relying on some racial stereotypes, namely, the fact that if a woman is thin, buxom and wears skimpy clothing, she must therefore look "Caucasian." Perhaps she doesn't realize that Native Americans come in all shapes, sizes and tastes. Personally, I know several Native American men that wouldn't be caught dead in the "skimpy" clothing their ancestors wore either. You can't judge 17th century fashions with 20th century standards.

I agree with Holder that there are several historical inaccuracies in Pocahontas. Although I don't see how someone can overlook trees that speak and birds with human-like intelligence and point out the age difference, or the romantic connection with John Smith. However, no matter how glaring the inconsistencies are, it doesn't change the statement that the film was trying to make: Racism is wrong.

Holder claimed that she wished to save her son from a perceived racist movie. However, she has done something worse by instilling narrow-mindedness and misunderstanding — elements which are the foundation of racism.

Too early to nominate Colin Powell for president

This letter is in response to Gregg Pekau's article, "Colin Powell should be President."

This article only manages to make one real point — that the election is still over a year away, and that it is still way too early to be making predictions concerning who is going to be elected.

This point best applies to Colin Powell. While I do not dispute that Powell is a great man who has done the country great service, what do we really know about his political views?

Mr. Pekau is all set to elect a man who doesn't have any political experience and has not offered his opinion on any major issue facing this country. Who knows what he has in store for us, and for that matter, who knows what any of the independent candidates in the news right now, such as Bill Bradley or Ross Perot have planned either?

I wouldn't be so quick to make Powell president until he has a chance to, at the very least, publish his autobiography. Mr. Pekau needs to realize that at this stage, the rush to make Powell president is less like a campaign, and more like lemmings jumping off a bridge.

Pocahontas preaches tolerance

Tina Holder's editorial on Aug. 28 really caught my attention. Before the movie Pocahontas was released I was fully prepared to agree with her completely... then I actually saw the movie.

Sure Disney plays fast and loose with historical fact, but that didn't really surprise me. They hadn't managed to accurately adapt many fairy tales over the years either, but who REALLY wanted to see Ariel (in The Little Mermaid) turn into sea foam anyway. I can accept that Disney has produced a nice fictional story, loosely based on historical figures.

What really caught my attention was her partial quoting from the song Savages and her interpretation of its use. Prior to seeing the film I was afraid that, in the name of political correctness, Disney would gloss over the racial tensions of the colonial period in favor of a more modern "love everyone" point of view. I was pleasantly surprised, even impressed, with their handling of a volatile topic. Sadly, the lines Ms. Holder quotes are a very accurate representation of the opinions of most Europeans settling the New World. What she left out is the fact that the next verse is an equally hateful view of whites by the Native Americans, "It is as we had feared, the pale skin is a devil. The only thing they care about is greed."

In these lines, the Native Americans express an equally bloodthirsty desire to rid their shores of the settlers.

Pocahontas and John Smith may have not been romantically involved historically, but their fictional romance provides the real message of this movie ... tolerance. Her desire to stop the killing of Smith, as well as the other settlers, is the dramatic motivation for the film.

I agree I would rather have our children live in a world where they need only leave a film with the happy pictures of The Colors of the Wind, but they do not. They are growing up in a world in which tolerance gets a lot of lip service, but is not practiced as much as we like to think. The violent, and realistic, hatred of two groups of people expressed in the song Savages serves to illustrate where intolerance can lead. It is a necessary foil to Pocahontas' desire for peace. The impact of one would be lost without the other.

While Pocahontas is certainly not the innocuous entertainment of Disney's earlier film, I don't think it should be overlooked. It can be an important method for getting our children's attention and a good jumping off point to teach them the true story of Pocahontas, as well as the tolerance we want them to practice as well as preach.

Pocahontas misunderstood

If one tries hard enough, it seems that anyone looking to be offended can accomplish this task, even if it involves sidestepping truth, logic, or common sense. New abortion pill mixes 2 FDA-approved drugs

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors can quickly and safely induce abortions at home with a combination of two drugs already on the market for other uses, researchers reported in a study that could pre-empt the political debate over whether to make the French abortion pill available in the United States.

The two-drug combination may be as effective as the French abortion pill, RU-486, which is undergoing testing in this country. The two kinds of drug-induced abortion have not yet been compared directly, and neither is likely to work as well as surgical abortion.

A small study published last October in the Journal of the American Medical Association showed the potential of the new two-drug combination. Now a much larger study in this week's New England Journal of Medicine demonstrates its safety and effectiveness.

RU-486, which is also called mifepristone, was developed by the French pharmaceutical firm Roussel Uclaf and has been used in Europe for more than a decade. The Population Council is overseeing testing at several hospitals and clinics in the United States as a step toward seeking the Food and Drug Administration's approval.

Abortion opponents fiercely oppose introduction of RU-486 and have threatened a boycott of any pharmaceutical company that manufactures it.

Dr. Richard U. Hausknecht, a gynecologist at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, tested the new approach on women in their first nine weeks of pregnancy. It involves a combination of methotrexate, a widely used cancer drug, and misoprostol, an ulcer medicine. Methotrexate destabilizes the uterine lining, and misoprostol triggers contractions that expel the fetus.

Any doctor can legally prescribe the new combination for abortion, even though the medicines have not been approved by the FDA for this purpose. However, because so few studies about the technique have been published, doctors may be vulnerable to malpractice lawsuits if something goes wrong.

"We would urge women and their doctors to use this regimen as part of a controlled clinical trial and not do it routinely," said FDA Deputy Commissioner Mary Pendergast.

This kind of abortion requires two visits to the doctor. On the first, the patient gets an injection of methotrexate. A week later, she receives four misoprostol tablets that are placed in the vagina and held in place by a tampon.

Then she goes home and usually aborts the fetus within 24 hours. The main side effects are bleeding and mild to moderate pain.

However, the National Right to Life Committee in Washington, which opposes the new approach, questioned its mental effect.

"The use of these drugs places women in the precarious position of aborting away from the doctor's office," said Laura Echevarria, a spokeswoman. "No one knows the psychological ramifications of a woman seeing her unborn child aborted before her eyes."

Record $1.2 million paid in housing bias case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The owner of a Florida apartment complex has agreed to pay a record $1.2 million in damages and penalties to settle allegations of charging some blacks higher rents and refusing to rent to others at all.

This was the largest settlement ever obtained by the Justice Department's civil rights division in a case alleging race bias in rental housing.

Jose Milton, owner of a 694-unit complex in North Miami Beach, reached the agreement with the department, a local fair housing organization and a group of blacks. It was approved late Tuesday by the U.S. District Court in Miami and announced here Wednesday.

The accord settles a lawsuit alleging that Milton charged black tenants of the Beverly Hills Club Rental Apartments higher rents than whites and falsely informed some black apartment-seekers that no units were available.

This is the second time the Justice Department has accused Milton of discriminating against minorities. The department brought a similar case in 1988 involving Beverly Hills and other rental properties Milton owned. That was settled in June 1989.

In this case, two blacks who had been told there were no vacancies filed a complaint in May 1993 with Housing Opportunities Project for Excellence (HOPE), a Miami fair housing group. HOPE sent trained pairs of black and white testers posing as prospective tenants to seek apartments at Beverly Hills.

Alleging that the tests showed blacks were treated differently than whites, HOPE sued Milton, his real estate company and managers of the complex.

After a separate investigation, the U.S. attorney's office in Miami and the Justice Department filed a separate suit in February 1994 accusing Milton of violating the Fair Housing Act. The two lawsuits were later combined.

"To deny a person an apartment because of their race is to deny that person their rightful share of the American dream," said Assistant Attorney General Deval L. Patrick, head of the civil rights division.

Kendall Coffey, U.S. attorney in Miami, said, "No American should be denied housing because of the color of their skin."

Patrick noted that similar testing under a nationwide Justice Department program has produced 28 federal suits resulting in settlements totaling more than $1.5 million. Testing continues in more than a dozen cities.

Coffey said the defendants will:

- Pay $650,000 to HOPE and the individual plaintiffs and $200,000 in civil penalties to the U.S. Treasury.

- Create two funds totaling $375,000 to compensate any individuals later identified as victims of discrimination at Beverly Hills.

- Advertise in local papers to locate possible victims.

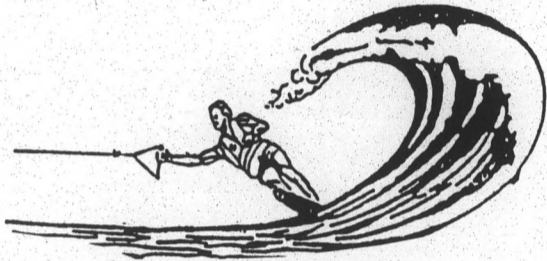

- Fund future testing by HOPE.

Teen rejected by Harvard faces conflict at Tufts

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Gina Grant, whose admission to Harvard was rescinded when the school learned she had killed her mother, arrived Wednesday to enroll at Tufts University and encountered new opposition.

Editors of a conservative student magazine plastered the school with leaflets condemning the administration for admitting Grant, who pleaded no contest to fatally bludgeoning her mother with a candlestick in 1990 when she was 14.

"People have been rejected from Tufts for far lesser things that have certainly had less of a negative impact on the community and the world than the violent death of one's parent," said Colin Delaney, editor of The Primary Source.

Tufts broke its silence about Grant's acceptance Wednesday, saying she was admitted as a fully qualified candidate through the normal admissions process last March — before news of her past led Harvard to reject her.

"Having paid her debts to society, she should not be denied the opportunity of pursuing a college degree," said Tufts spokeswoman Rosemarie Van Camp. She added, "Any other decision would have been antithetical to our fundamental values and beliefs."

Some Tufts students said Grant, now 19, should be given the benefit of the doubt.

"I think it's great she's coming here," said Alex Shalon, 17, a freshman from Montclair, N.J. "College is a clean slate. It's a new beginning. And I think it's great she's getting a chance to start over."

The University refused to say whether she will live on campus and have a roommate.

Friends who would not identify themselves said she will have no comment on the controversy and is just trying to blend in.

University officials said they removed some of the critical leaflets from areas of the campus where posters are not allowed. They said leaflets any left on kiosks or bulletin boards would not be disturbed.

"We respect the right of all students to express their opinion on any subject," Van Camp said.

Harvard rescinded Grant's admission April 3 after learning about the slaying of her mother in Lexington, S.C.

Dorothy Mayfield, 42, had been hit at least 13 times with a lead crystal candlestick. Described in court as an alcoholic, she was drunk when she died. Grant's lawyer said his client had struck out in self-defense.

Grant served a few months in juvenile detention and moved to Cambridge, where she was on probation until age 18. She attended the prestigious public Rindge and Latin School, where she was an honor student and tennis team co-captain and tutored underprivileged children.

Breast implant deal comes to near crash

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A multibillion-dollar settlement of breast implant claims teetered on the brink of collapse Wednesday as women's lawyers and manufacturers missed a judge's deadline for reaching a larger deal.

A lead attorney for the women who sued expressed doubts there would be an agreement to replace the initial $4.25 billion settlement, which an analysis showed was too small to pay women the amounts they were promised.

"It may be that somewhere down the line we would get all the major defendants in a deal ... but that's not where we are now," said attorney Ralph Knowles. "I don't think there's any likelihood that there's going to be a global settlement of the type we had before."

But a spokeswoman for 3M, which committed $325 million toward the settlement, said the agreement was not dead. "We are continuing to negotiate," Mary Auvin said from company headquarters in St. Paul, Minn.

Jane Kramer of Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. said that company also was continuing to talk, but added, "there is no settlement."

Lawyers told U.S. District Judge Sam Pointer during a two-hour telephone conference that two months of almost continuous, often-contentious talks had failed to produce a larger agreement.

Pointer issued no immediate ruling. One of his options is dissolving the original agreement, in which some 440,000 women already have registered to participate.

An implant recipient who would have received $1.4 million under the settlement was shocked that lawyers had missed Pointer's deadline.

"I was so sure this would come to a good conclusion. All the women are going to be very disappointed. We waited so long," said Louise Romans of Winter Springs, Fla., who suffers from lupus she attributes to silicone implants.

Women have blamed breast implants for a wide variety of health problems, ranging from hardening of the breasts to immunological diseases. Manufacturers deny their products hurt anyone.

Pointer approved the $4.25 billion settlement last fall. Implant recipients would have received net payments ranging from $105,000 to $1.4 million, depending on their health and age.

But a court analysis conducted earlier this year showed the settlement contained enough money to pay women only a fraction of what they were originally promised.

As a result, Pointer ordered more negotiations and set Wednesday as the deadline for the parties to give him a written framework for an agreement.

Sources familiar with the renegotiations, speaking on condition of anonymity, said implant manufacturers agreed to pay billions, and some companies even doubled the amount they originally promised.

All the payments under the new deal would have been made within three years, as opposed to the 30-year period companies were allowed under the first agreement, the sources said.

Some lawyers on the six-member plaintiff's negotiating team rejected the deal as inadequate, however, contending billions more were still needed. In the end, those arguments prevented a new deal, the sources said.

Dow Corning Corp., which committed $2 billion to the initial settlement, did not actively participate in the final round of talks. Once the nation's largest manufacturer of silicone implants, Dow Corning filed for bankruptcy protection earlier this year, citing the cost of implant litigation.

ATLANTA (AP) — Ted Turner, who once condemned "Taxi Driver" for its bloody violence, has apparently had a change of heart.

In a first for any Turner cable network, "Taxi Driver" is scheduled to air early Thursday during TNT's weeklong 1970s film festival.

In 1982, Turner broadcast an editorial on his CNN condemning violence in the movies. He singled out "Taxi Driver" for its "blood and gore" and for inspiring John W. Hinckley Jr.'s failed 1981 assassination attempt against then-President Ronald Reagan.

Hinckley said he tried to kill Reagan to impress Jodie Foster, who played a prostitute in the film.

TNT spokesman Jim Weiss said he was unaware of Turner's comments and that programming is generally left to each network.

The network will air an edited version and include a warning about its contents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor's new Black Pearls perfume has turned into a marketing stinker.

Elizabeth Arden canceled a September launch of Black Pearls — and a $12 million ad campaign — after no major department store would carry it. Arden makes and distributes the actress' three other signature fragrances.

The ad campaign included 42 million scent strips and print ads featuring the actress immersed in a lagoon — some of which have already run in some magazines.

In a joint statement Wednesday, Arden and Taylor said the decision to withdraw the fragrance was mutual but wouldn't elaborate on any plans.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The transvestite comedy "To Wong Foo, Thanks for Everything! Julie Newmar" opened here to an enthusiastic crowd.

The film's stars — Patrick Swayze, Wesley Snipes and John Leguizamo — weren't on hand for Tuesday's special Nebraska premiere at Stuart Theatre.

But executive producer Bruce Cohen, director Beeban Kidron and producer Mac Brown were — and praised the state for its hospitality.

Kidron said she had had preconceptions about Nebraska, "just like people have preconceptions about drag queens," but Nebraskans demonstrated openness and warmth.

Parts of the movie — about three California-bound drag queens who get stranded in a tiny town — were shot in Lincoln, Loma and other eastern Nebraska towns.

The movie opens in September in New York and Los Angeles.

MacArthur

his flair for the dramatic, won him widespread respect among Japanese.

The war was over when MacArthur arrived on Aug. 30, 1945, but the signing of a peace treaty was still three days away and arriving U.S. troops did not know what to expect.

A rebellion by Japanese pilots at the Atsugi naval air base against Tokyo's decision to surrender on Aug. 15 had forced a two-day delay in MacArthur's arrival.

"Once we got on the ground and nothing happened, everybody relaxed," said Paul Godzman, 76, of Denver.

He and the other veterans of the landing attended the ceremony in the newly dedicated "MacArthur Garden" at the former training base for Japanese Imperial Navy pilots. About 200 people, half of them Japanese, attended.

MacArthur's widow sent a letter of appreciation for the ceremony.

Atsugi is still used by the Japanese navy. Under a joint use agreement, it has also become one of the United States' most important naval air facilities in the Pacific. About 8,000 U.S. military personnel and their families are stationed there.

Conference

The organizers initially protested the move to Huairou, but had resigned themselves to making the best of it.

This week, China restricted them further, saying any demonstrations would be restricted to a school yard the size of a basketball court — and could not criticize China.

Forum executive director Irene Santiago said Wednesday that Chinese officials never mentioned the restrictions to organizers, and she planned to hold China to its earlier pledge to give the conference jurisdiction over the entire meeting site.

"We're certainly not going to allow that a small area of the big forum site is designated as an area for freedom of expression," she said.

Another sore spot was China's refusal to grant visas to many women whose political views it opposes. Many applicants said they were rejected without explanation even though their paperwork was in order.

Organizers refused to say how many women had checked in, but by Wednesday evening there did not appear to be anywhere near 36,000 — the number who registered — or even 26,000 — the number with confirmed hotel reservations.

Participants will hold workshops to discuss domestic violence, jobs, education and other areas where women seek better treatment. They also will seek to influence the U.N. conference despite their distant quarters.

Security was tight throughout Beijing. Guards stood in hotel hallways and banned visitors in rooms. Police searched luggage for forbidden political and religious materials.

At the ceremony, police used video cameras to film the crowd.

Helvi Sipilä, who led the first U.N. women's meeting in 1975, chided women for not doing enough in the past 20 years.

"What have we women done for peace? To my mind, absolutely nothing. ... I suggest we now here in Beijing start making realistic, serious, really firm plans for the future."

Despite all the tensions, many of the women were moved by the two-hour ceremony.

Bisi Ogunleye, a Nigerian chief, said she was impressed with the cultural display by thousands of performers.

"What it shows to an African is the power of popular participation," she said. "You can see that the development of culture and tradition is the way to peace."

Martha Lewis of the United States said she came to Beijing for just this kind of celebration.

"After 30 years of working in the women's movement, it's a fulfillment," she said. "I do think we're beginning a new century, and things are going to be different."

Snyder deals suspension to Rashada

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

Senior strong safety Harlen Rashada has been indefinitely suspended from the ASU football team, Head Coach Bruce Snyder said Wednesday.

Rashada, a three-year letterman who has been a regular since he cracked the lineup as a true freshman, walked off the field before practice ended Tuesday without permission from Snyder.

Snyder had informed Rashada Monday that redshirt-freshman Mitchell Freedman would start at strong safety in Saturday's season-opener at Washington.

"Harlen has been struggling with some things on the field," Snyder said. "He needed some space. He has been indefinitely suspended. We're going to take it one day at a time."

Rashada, a 6-foot-2, 208-pounder out of Skyline High in Oakland, Calif., has started in 16 games in his career, compiling 106 tackles. As a freshman, Rashada was thrust into action against Louisville in the second game of the season where he made eight tackles, four sacks and caused a fumble.

"He and I have a lot of things to work out," Snyder said. "He's knows how serious I am about what I've done."

Sophomore Damien Richardson could see more action in Rashada's absence, Snyder said.

Rashada was not available for comment.

Injury update

Currently, 18 Sun Devils are either sidelined or practicing sparingly with injuries. Snyder said he is most concerned with the status of starting left cornerback Lee Cole (hamstring), starting defensive tackle Shawn Swayda (hamstring) and second-string linebacker Pat Tillman (shoulder). He said three of the four back-up linebackers have not had contact in a week.

"During game week people tend to get healthier because they know the flights coming," joked Snyder.

ASU swimmers ready to hit pool

Jeffrey, Currah among senior leaders; Pac-10 strong again

BY RON MATEJKO
STATE PRESS

The women's swimming team is coming into this season with less depth than usual, but they will be anchored by a strong group of freshman.

Coach Tim Hill said he likes his teams' combination of experienced swimmers and enthusiastic newcomers.

"Based on what we have coming in I think we are going to have a good team," Hill said. "Within the conference I think we will finish where we've been."

Hill put the season's goals in perspective: "We won't be making the Pac-10 Championships our prime meet. It'll be important, but it'll be a step toward our qualifying for the NCAA Tournament," he said.

According to Hill, the quality of swimmers within the conference prepares ASU's swimmers for the nationals even though they may finish fourth or fifth. "The conference is by far and away the strongest conference in the country," he said.

The team will be counting on improvements from the four seniors on this season's roster, but the most weight will be put upon the shoulders of Chris Jeffrey.

"Chris is capable this year of being a scorer at the NCAAs," Hill said. "She can help us in any area; she's definitely our top returner."

Another senior is Joanne Currah who, along with Chris, was invited to participate in this year's Canadian Olympic Trials.

Other seniors are Lisa Urban, who swam in her first NCAAs last season, and Susan Fawcett, who Hill said will be an impact person on the team.

Other swimmers Hill said to watch are Gretchen Verdoorn, who is looking to rebound from a wrist

Robert Anderson/State Press

ASU senior Chris Jeffrey works on her freestyle Wednesday at Mona Plummer Aquatic Center. Jeffrey will be one of the leaders on this year's swim team.

injury last season and repeat her successful freshman campaign; Becky Hartzell, who is returning from knee surgery at the end of last season; and Cynthia Janssen.

"She (Janssen) can be a couple event scorer in the NCAAs, and also we are going to try to get her to qualify at the U.S. Olympic Trials," the coach said.

Hill also spoke with confidence about his group of freshman.

"In the last couple of years, this is the most balanced group we've had in terms of wanting to progress," he said. "They are fit as far as making improvements in their first year."

The confidence in the freshmen carries to the other swimmers as well. "I think they are a group of positive people who are anxious to get started in their college career," Janssen said. "They all seem ready to go."

The team will be led by Tiffany Howser, who was ranked first in the country among public high school swimmers in the butterfly and fourth overall in the country.

"She's probably the most versatile," Hill said. "I think in the 100-meter butterfly, 100m backstroke and 200 individual medley she can make the NCAAs."

Hill summed up the upcoming season with a self-admitted conservative outlook: "Right now I think on paper we're a top 15 to 20 team. If we can improve and we keep everybody on the same page, we can be 10th to 15th."

Reser, Washington gunning for Sun Devils

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

If one man can stop ASU quarterback Jake Plummer, it might be Reggie Reser.

Reser, a senior cornerback for the Washington Huskies football team, finds it a challenge to face the best returning passer in the Pac-10.

"I definitely look forward to playing against good quarterbacks like Jake," Reser said. "I think all the quarterbacks that I've played against in the Pac-10 are great, but of all of those I think that Jake is the best."

Reser will get another shot at Plummer on Saturday when the Huskies face the Sun Devils in Seattle.

Reser got the best of Plummer last year, intercepting him in the October 15th contest. The interception was one in a three game steak of interceptions.

If you haven't heard of Reggie Reser yet, you may not be alone. But Reser says that's a good cornerbacks signature.

"I want to go out there and shut my man down. If you haven't heard my name all game that means that I'm doing my job," Reser said.

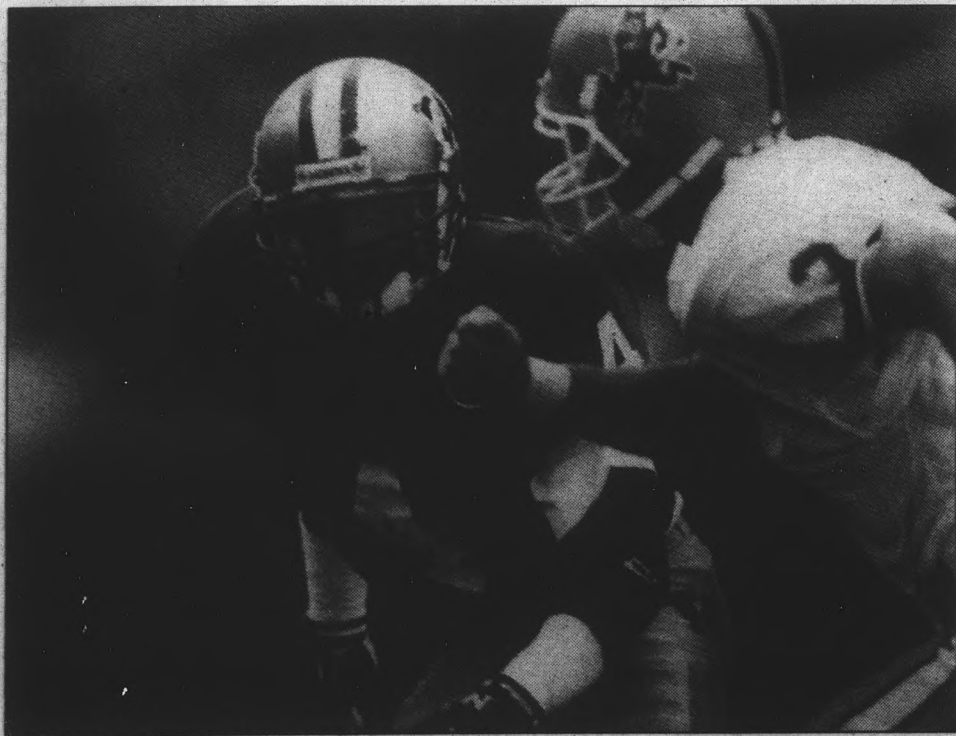

The 22-year-old Reser, who started 11 games for the Huskies last year, knows the importance of starting off the season with a Pac-10 conference game.

"This game is the first step in us making a run for the Roses," Reser said. "It's going to be very important that we beat Arizona State on Saturday."

"There aren't any other Pac-10 games for a month, so whoever wins the first game is going to be in first place for a month and whoever loses will be in last place for a month."

This will be the first time that Reser and the rest of the Washington football squad is eligible for a bowl, following a two year suspension for NCAA violations. Reser is one of the few Huskies who played in the Rose Bowl before the suspension. He also played during the suspension, a time during which no players transferred away from the program. Now things have come full circle and a bowl game is in his sights again.

"This is a different football team," Reser said.

Capturing the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat...

ATTENTION ASU FOOTBALL FANS:

As a reminder, the State Press sports department is sponsoring the weekly "PICK IT AND WIN" contest for ASU football games.

To win, contestants must correctly predict the winner and final score of the ASU football games on Saturday beginning with this weekend's clash with Washington.

The weekly winner receives: an ASU cap courtesy of The Cap Co., an autographed Jake Plummer poster schedule courtesy of ASU athletics, a personal headshot in Monday's State Press sports section and a bonus prize.

If none of the contestants in a given week predict the exact score, then the winner will be determined by which contestant comes closest.

In the event of a tie, the winner will be drawn out of a hat. However each person in the tie will be recognized.

Entries must be either faxed to 602-965-8484, "Attn: Sports Editor," or dropped off at the State Press offices in the basement Matthews Center. Valid entries should include full name, student number, year in school, major and daytime phone number where you may be reached. Winners will be contacted the Sunday after the game.

The entry deadline each week is Thursday at 5 p.m. Entries received after the deadline will not be considered. Telephoning the State Press is not a valid form of entry.

The first deadline is today at 5. Good Luck...

Ex-ASU star faces Medvedev at U.S. Open

By DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

Most people would agree a $14,500 paycheck isn't bad for two days of work.

But former ASU tennis star Sargsian won't be satisfied with just showing up and getting lumped when he faces 16th-seeded Russian Andrei Medvedev today at 2 p.m. in second round of the U.S. Open men's tennis championships in Flushing Meadow, N.Y.

"I have a great chance," said Sargsian, who is guaranteed $14,500 even if he loses. "I don't just want to throw it away. It's the biggest match of my life so far. If I win, it would be awesome."

Sargsian, who earned an automatic wildcard berth into the tournament when he won the NCAA men's singles championship last May, defeated 75th-ranked American Michael Joyce in a five-set, first-round thriller Monday.

Medvedev, who is currently ranked 18th in the world on the IBM/ATP tour, uses a punishing backhand to fuel his powerful baseline game.

SARGSIAN

"He's got great groundstrokes," said Sargsian, ASU's first ever NCAA tennis champ who was 82-17 at No. 1 singles in his two-year college career. "I've got to serve well and I've got to be more solid all around. I'll just play my game and see how it goes."

Sargsian, who is representing his home country of Armenia, will be on court 17 of the USTA National Tennis Center.

Sun Devil player makes French connection

By Dan Miller
State Press

The annual mother of all bicycle races wasn't the only 'Tour de France' going on this summer.

Sophomore tennis player Tsovak Gevorkian embarked on one of his own in a nine-tournament summer odyssey up and down the French countryside.

Gevorkian, who played mostly No.4 singles as a true freshman for the Sun Devils last season, won two of the nine world class tournaments he entered while playing unattached.

Despite encountering several off-court distractions, Gevorkian said he grew a great deal as a player as a result of the trip.

"I think I'm a better player mentally now," said Gevorkian, a native of Yerevan, Armenia, who compiled an impressive 24-12 singles record in his ASU debut. "My game improved so much and I just feel more confident."

Those were the positives.

Gevorkian said not being able to speak the language, conforming to a hectic schedule and the general lack of hospitality from the French people were parts of the trip he would like to forget.

"People just don't like foreigners there," said Gevorkian, who is already fluent in Russian, Armenian and English. "They just don't care. They're so rude."

Gevorkian, who only took six days off in a two-month span, said when he did communicate it was usually in broken English, because the people he met didn't prefer to speak English even if they were fluent.

"I don't think I would go back there (to compete) unless I spoke French," Gevorkian said. "It would be a lot easier."

Gevorkian's journey began June 16 in Coulommiers, France, a town one hour east of Paris. Playing with the French ranking of a -4/6, Gevorkian lost in the quarterfinals. In France, the top 100 players are ranked, then players are categorized as -30, -15 and -4/6. Gevorkian's rating was equivalent to the third flight of players after the top 100.

After a semifinal loss in St. Remy, Gevorkian headed west where he lost in the round of 16 in the Notre Dame de Granvenchoen tournament in the Normandy area. Pro tour regulars Ronald Agenor, Stephane Simmian, Jean-Phillippe Fleurian and Thierry Champion were the top four seeds in the talent-rich tournament.

Gevorkian's next stop was in Le Neubourg in Normandy on June 24. There he pummeled travel mate Stephan Figley, 6-2, 6-2, to win the title. Figley played No. 2 singles for Texas Christian University last season.

"I crushed him," Gevorkian remembered. "I played unbelievable."

His fifth stop was the US Fontenay tournament in Paris where he lost in the fourth round. Then he visited Bordeaux in the south of France and lost in the semifinals. After a quarterfinal setback at the St. Lo Memorial in Normandy on July 6, he claimed his second title of the trip in the Perrussonnais Tennis Club tourney in central Paris. With the title, he won a trip to London which he gave to the Armenian family he stayed with while in Paris.

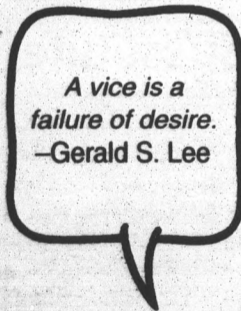

The pilgrimage ended in Ver Sur Mer in the Normandy area on July 15 where Gevorkian lost to Tennessee's Pablo Montana, 6-4, 7-6 in the semifinals.

The summer wasn't over.

Gevorkian played three tournaments when he returned stateside. His three early round losses were highlighted by a match with journeyman clay-court specialist, Jimmy Arias, in the first round of the Player's Edge Championships in Fairfield, Conn. Arias, the No. 1 seed, ousted Gevorkian 6-4, 7-5.
