1 hurt in 4-car accident

Paul Besing/State Press

An EMT assists a Tempe Fire Department Paramedic in placing Sarah Biel on a stretcher following a four-car accident at the intersection of University Drive and Forest Ave. at approximately 11 a.m. Thursday. One witness, architecture graduate student Doug Leventhal, said the front three cars were at a stop when Biel's car hit the rear car and started a domino effect. He also said it appeared Biel's head struck the windshield. Biel, a non-student, was transported to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital for treatment and was released. Biel was not cited at the scene of the accident. Tempe Police said the investigation is continuing and enforcement action is pending.

2 colleges prepare for Fall '96 move to ASU East

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

The agribusiness and technology schools will be packing their bags in anticipation of a Fall '96 move to the new ASU East campus, located at the former Williams Air Force Base.

The U.S. Air Force has begun to turn over 1.5 million square feet to ASU "at a cost of absolutely zero," said Chuck Backus, director of academic programs at ASU East. "We think that this is an unusually good tax break for the taxpayer."

The former air base has more than 550 homes and six dormitories that will be utilized by ASU for on-campus housing. The State Legislature allocated $1.5 million to change other buildings into classrooms at the new campus. Backus said the location is "an exciting thing."

"We will be able to offer a big university education in a small-town setting," he said.

Although there is some resistance to the move by faculty members, Dr. Eric Thor, director of the School of Agribusiness, said the move is beneficial to the University.

"We all believe that this is by far the best move for Arizona State University, long term," he said. "You don't very often get a chance to have 600 acres at a brand-new campus practically given to you."

However, some students are less than thrilled with the move.

"I don't like it," said Brian Gray, a junior agribusiness major. "I have classes here on the main campus, and I work here, too. It's (ASU East) close to where I live, but I would like to stay on the main campus."

Backus said ASU hopes to minimize the impact of the move by moving entire schools (agribusiness and technology) and making the necessary classes available to students at ASU East.

"We are hoping we don't have people going back and forth between the east campus and the main campus," he said.

Plans are also in the works for a shuttle service between the main campus and the new east campus.

The ASU East Campus will offer both lower and upper division classes, including graduate programs in agribusiness and technology. A study is also currently underway to evaluate the potential of offering general studies classes at the new campus.

ASU educators blast Dole's push for official English

BY DAVID J. KOVACS
STATE PRESS

Republican presidential candidate Robert Dole's recent attack on bilingual education in his English-only campaign is drawing fire from ASU educators.

According to an excerpt of his speech to the American Legion on Aug. 31, Dole said making English the nation's official language would help immigrant Americans adapt, allowing them equal access to opportunities.

He said he favored school instruction in a foreign language only if it is for the teaching of English.

However, Miriam Muniz, assistant professor of bilingual education at ASU West, said Dole's position fails to recognize that many students, even at the junior high level, are not proficient in their own language. For foreign students to learn in an English speaking class, they must first be literate in their own language, she said.

"Politicians do not understand how children learn," she said, adding that once students are proficient in their own language, their skills are easily transferable to an English-speaking classroom.

Muniz said the success story of the immigrant grandparents coming to America fails to mention the grandparents were already literate in their native language, which differs from the situation of many of today's foreign students.

"The parents of these students were often illiterate themselves," she said. "It all boils down to one thing — if you already know how to read and write in your own language."

Muniz, who prepares student teachers for bilingual classes, said these courses teach students traditional subjects such as math and sciences in their native language while they also learn English.

Frank Reyna, program coordinator for Dole's presidential campaign in Arizona, said Dole does not want to take away immigrant students' opportunities to learn by elimi-

Transit cuts mean higher Tempe bus fares, official says

BY ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

Proposed federal budget cuts for transportation programs could cost Phoenix more money than Tempe, but Tempe citizens could still feel the effects in a bus fare increase, a city official said at a city council meeting Thursday.

Mary O'Connor, city transportation planner, told the city council a higher bus fare for Tempe is likely because if Phoenix loses federal funding, Tempe may have to compensate for bus service serving both cities.

"It depends on what options there are for service cuts and streamlining services," she said.

Congress proposed about a $400 million cut in federal operating subsidies for mass transit. If Congress passes the proposal in September, Phoenix will lose $1.5 million in transit funds for fiscal 1995-96. Tempe would lose about $28,000.

Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano agreed that Tempe would be affected by Phoenix's budget cut.

"The lion's share of the reduction is to Phoenix, but that has a ripple effect on us, so we do need to be concerned," he said.

However, O'Connor said the city has already budgeted for such a loss. In addition, the city is working on a proposal for a transit sales tax. If the council approves it, the current sales tax of 6.95 percent could increase by as much as .05 percent. A .05 percent increase would also increase the Tempe sales tax of 1.2 percent.

Tempe could also compensate for budget cuts by requesting money from the city's general fund, O'Connor said.

In other business, the council discussed plans to paint the Old Mill Avenue Bridge. Although the bridge is scheduled to be cleaned and painted by Nov. 15, council members expressed concern about painting an historic landmark.

"We would like the bridge to retain as much of an historic nature as possible," Giuliano said. "We don't want it to look like a brand new bridge."

Howard Hargis, assistant city engineer, said the city can choose the paint color.

"It's not going to look new," he said. "I guess it's a matter of opinion whether it's going to look bad or not."

"We are planning to be able to offer, from day one, most of the courses out at the east campus," said Thor. "A person can actually live on the east campus and complete their degree on the east campus in agribusiness and the School of Technology."

This increased space allows the agribusiness and technology schools to offer more programs of study. The University is also organizing a new professional golf management program in conjunction with the Professional Golf Association and new options in food and manufacturing programs.

"Our needs (for space) exceed what we have here at the main campus," Thor said. Although architectural plans will not be finalized for another three weeks, Thor said the move to the east campus will "about double" the square footage currently available to the School of Agribusiness at the main campus.

"This is an exciting opportunity for ASU," Thor said. "This will enable ASU to serve all of Maricopa County."

nating what he considers ineffectual programs.

Reyna said current programs deter students from entering the English-speaking culture.

"He's taking a positive approach that Americans and immigrants have an opportunity for assimilation, instead of having programs that are non-transitional," he said.

However, the idea that immigrants do not want to enter the American culture is a commonly held misconception, said D. Leticia Galindo, a sociolinguist and assistant professor in the department of language and literature at ASU. He added that Dole's English-only policy is a form of immigrant bashing.

"I think the politicians and others have a linguistic fear or rejection of anything foreign," Galindo said. "I think the whole thing's been blown out of proportion."

Around Arizona

Symington will make voluntary debt payments

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Fife Symington will voluntarily turn over 25 percent of his paycheck to union pension funds that won an $8.8 million judgment against him last month, an aide said Thursday.

The Republican real estate developer borrowed $10 million from six union pension funds to finance the failed Mercado retail and office project in downtown Phoenix. He and his wife, Ann, personally guaranteed the loan and the pension funds have indicated they might seek to garnishee Symington's $75,000 state salary.

The Arizona Republic reported Thursday that an attorney for the pension funds sent a letter of demand to Symington's lawyers that must, under state law, precede a garnishment action.

Based on the governor's pre-tax pay, it would take more than 469 years to repay the $8.8 million. And that doesn't count the interest on the debt.

The pension funds won the $8.8 million award in late July. Last month, Judge Cheryl K. Hendrix of Maricopa County Superior Court increased the award to $11.4 million, to include interest.

Symington was a general partner for the Mercado project, along with the for-profit arm of Chicanos por la Causa. Both Symingtons signed personal guarantees for the loan, which was made before he took office in 1991.

Proposed tax cut favors business, manufacturing

PHOENIX (AP) — A proposed $200 million property tax cut championed by Gov. Fife Symington and some state Republican legislators may wind up favoring business and commercial property more than homeowners.

"We should reduce the tax liability on the manufacturing sector," said Senate Finance Committee chairman Marc Spitzer, R-Phoenix. "That is a tax cut that would be a hell of a lot more effective from an economic point of view than a tax cut for homeowners."

Spitzer, who will be an integral part of next year's tax-cut deliberations, calls homeowners' property tax cuts "a very imperfect way of doing supply-side economics, but it's popular politically."

Senate Minority Leader Peter Goudinoff, D-Tucson, said homeowners in Pima County have long complained that they are paying disproportionately high property taxes.

Maricopa County Assessor Pete Corpstein suggests homeowners in the Phoenix metropolitan area probably feel the same way since they bear the brunt of primary property taxation in the state's largest urban area.

Homeowners' primary property tax assessments make up nearly 39 percent of county property tax rolls now compared to 30 percent five years ago.

By comparison, the share represented by business and commercial property in Maricopa County is 32 percent, compared to about 34 percent five years ago.

During the last Legislative session, Symington helped push through a plan to cut $200 million in income taxes and roughly $15 million in personal property taxes.

To garner enough votes for that package, Symington and key allies agreed to tackle a like amount in property tax cuts in the coming session.

Packwood finally packs it in

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators sat stone-faced and silent in their seats as Sen. Bob Packwood quietly announced to them, "It is my duty to resign."

Not a facial reaction, barely a physical movement. No awkward coughing. They had turned in their seats to face him, but they showed no emotion at the words they knew were coming.

More than half the senators were present as Packwood recalled his happier times among them. As he spoke, others soon arrived until nearly all had gathered. Packwood's personal and Finance Committee staffs were in a special spot in the gallery.

Noticeably absent was Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., the chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, which had recommended unanimously that Packwood be expelled on sexual and official misconduct charges.

Some senators smiled warmly as Packwood reminded them by anecdote of legislative milestones.

His voice cracked when he said he lived by the words, "duty, honor, country." His chief of staff, Elaine Franklin, seated beside him, wiped tears from her eyes. He squeezed her hand as he sat down.

"I hurt with Sen. Packwood," said Oregon Republican Sen. Mark Hatfield, the first to rise in praise of his colleague.

One by one, others took their turns to wish Packwood well, commend his leadership and relate collegial experiences.

"Some may be pleased today and some may not be pleased, but I believe Sen. Packwood when he said 'duty, honor country,' he meant just that," said Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., was the first to allude to the sexual allegations, saying the moment should not be celebrated as some new revelation by senators about the relationship between men and women. "Let us not celebrate a thing today. This is a day of grieving," he said.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., was more defiant, accusing women's groups who had once supported Packwood's political stands of turning on him.

"He was the man who always fought so hard for women and their rights," Simpson

ATF: Weaver to blame for Ruby Ridge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Directly disputing Randy Weaver's claim that he was set up by law enforcement, federal officials testified Thursday that the white separatist took the initiative to sell illegal shotguns, beginning a chain of events that ended in the Ruby Ridge tragedy.

Regarding the 1992 killings of Weaver's wife and son and a deputy U.S. marshal in northern Idaho, John Magaw, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, told a Senate panel in prepared testimony: "It was Mr. Weaver's actions that set this into play."

Subcommittee Chairman Arlen Specter, R-Pa., responded that the ATF's investigative interest in Weaver "was extraordinary" considering that Weaver's only crime was selling two sawed-off shotguns to an undercover informer.

ATF agent Herb Byerly testified that Weaver offered to go to work for the confidential ATF informant posing as an illegal arms dealer. Weaver has admitted selling the two sawed-off shotguns, but denied he wanted to go to work for him.

The government produced a transcript of a tape-recorded conversation in which Weaver allegedly told the informant, "How many you want ... four or five a week? ... I'll try to do my best to do that." Byerly said the tape shows Weaver was offering a continuous supply of sawed-off shotguns.

ATF official Andrew Vita said Weaver fit the profile of an illegal gun dealer, but Specter said there was no supporting evidence for that conclusion.

"That's hardly an affirmation by Mr. Weaver that he could do four or five a week," Specter said of the tape recording.

"Mr. Weaver was not entrapped," Magaw said in the testimony that was released even though he did not appear before the panel Thursday. "He was not persuaded or coaxed by the government to sell illegal weapons. The idea to supply the weapons originated in Mr. Weaver's own mind."

However, Weaver's attorney, Gerry Spence, said in an interview: "What the ATF is now neglecting to point out is that a jury acquitted Randy of the gun charge

Defense plans to rest without calling O.J.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's defense went to the brink of resting Thursday and decided not to call Simpson, saying his testimony would prolong the trial and wasn't necessary to answer a prosecution case "in shambles."

The defense strategy to end with a reminder that Detective Mark Fuhrman had lied to the jury was scuttled at the last minute by a prosecution maneuver that could throw a key decision into an appeals court.

Attorney F. Lee Bailey told The Associated Press that Simpson's lawyers advised him not to take the witness stand in light of Fuhrman's tape-recorded statements about racism and police wrongdoing.

"With the case in shambles, this just wasn't necessary," Bailey said. "I didn't see what was left to be gained, when you have the chief witness, a law enforcement officer, refusing to testify because he might incriminate himself."

Defense attorney Robert Shapiro said later: "O.J. has always wanted to testify in this case. He realizes like all of us that this jury is weary and his testimony would prolong the case two to three weeks, and he's more anxious than any of us to get a verdict in this case."

Bailey said the decision wasn't made until recent disclosures thrust Fuhrman and tapes of his racist comments back into the forefront, climaxing in Fuhrman's dramatic appearance Wednesday.

Outside the jury's presence, Fuhrman invoked his Fifth Amendment protections against self-incrimination when the defense asked him whether he planted evidence against Simpson.

On Thursday, the defense sought to recall Fuhrman as its final witness and force him to again invoke his Fifth Amendment right to remain silent, but this time in front of the jury.

Judge Lance Ito refused but said he would tell jurors that Fuhrman was "unavailable" to testify. Prosecutors strenuously objected that they were being denied a fair trial, and the judge gave them time to file an emergency appeal.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark said she feared the jury would speculate about Fuhrman's absence even though they wouldn't be told he invoked the Fifth Amendment.

After weary jurors spent yet another day on hold while attorneys argued about Fuhrman, the judge told the panelists: "The good news is that the end is in sight. The bad news is I've got a lot of work that I have to do out of your presence."

The jurors, who have been sequestered

BRAVO — To Cal Ripken Jr., for playing in his 2,131st consecutive baseball game Wednesday night, shattering Lou Gehrig's 56-year-old record. We'll never know how Ripken was able to play in every single game for 13 years, but we are awed by his dependability.

BOO — To former LAPD Detective Mark Fuhrman. Pleading the Fifth on the stand was the act of a coward, Mark. Suddenly the concept of the planted glove doesn't seem so far-fetched.

O.J. is probably already planning his welcome home party.

BOORAVO — To Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood, who resigned his Senate seat yesterday. Packwood deserves a big BOO for his slimy track record of sexual harassment over the years. Senator or no, no one has the right to use power to sexually coerce another person.

However, we acknowledge that Packwood deserves a BRAVO as well. At least he finally ended this charade and left the position of authority whose honor he had defiled.

BOO — To the French government, for their plans to resume nuclear testing in the South Pacific. Paris is committing no less than an act of international terrorism with this series of grossly unnecessary tests. By this time next year, much of the islands of the South Pacific will be covered in a fine blanket of fiercely radioactive fallout for no good reason. C'est la vie.

BRAVO — To Hillary Clinton and the attendees of the U.N. Conference on Women's Rights who protested against the oppressive Chinese regime. The fact that Beijing was chosen to host this conference is obscene. This is the country that forces women to get abortions if they have too many children. At least Mrs. Clinton and the other protesters weren't afraid to speak up about it.

BOO — To Arizona State University's recent policy of "stuff-'em-and-ship-'em."

Many students, who registered for majors with the impression that their courses would be on the ASU Main campus, are now being told by the University that they now must pick up and move to ASU East — at the former site of Williams Air Force Base.

Moving classes to ASU East is a necessary step to alleviate class crowding. But make sure that students can get their degree at a single campus. If students want a degree, they should have the right to take all of the classes without shuttling every day between here and far-flung campuses on the edges of the Valley.

BRAVO — To the cancellation of early classes Wednesday morning in the wake of a power outage. Sure, we know we're not setting a great example by bravaing a missed chance at education. But let's face it — we all like having a little unexpected time off, and teachers only lost one day.

BOO — To the oppressive, unrelenting, unyielding blanket of humidity that has been covering the Valley for the past week. Humidity was something many of us moved here to escape. This has been the week of sticky shirts, soggy potato chips and stuck copy machines. You call this a dry heat?

Whatever happened to the real MTV?

Something incredible happened to me last night.

I swear that it is absolutely true. I was flipping through the cable channels and landed on 29, MTV. And there, much to my astonishment, a music video was playing! Not news, not cartoons, not a stupid show about kids sharing a house, or an even more stupid show about kids sharing an RV.

They were showing a music video! You know, where a group performs a song in front of a camera.

Of course within five minutes they were running a dating game show, which was to be followed by a documentary about sex or religion or whatever other nonmusical subject they could dream up.

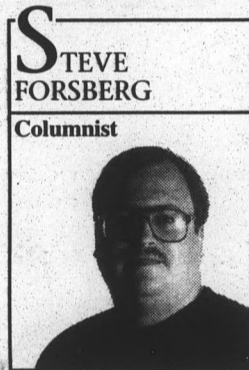

If I sound bitter it is probably because I am old enough to remember when there was still a glimmer of hope — a no-frills, no-nonsense, non-corporate music channel is what we were looking for. And now what we've got, to put it bluntly, is sanctimonious, hypocritical crap.

A few years back, MTV ran an ad campaign bragging about showing 1,000 videos a week. Suppose an average video lasts four minutes, and that you followed it with two 30 second commercials. If MTV did that they could show more than 2,000 videos per week.

One is left with the impression that half their time is spent on something other than music videos, and watching for a while confirms it. Did you miss Beauty and the Beach the first 90 times it was shown? Well, with luck, it will probably be on again tonight.

Even worse is the blatant hypocrisy. For example, MTV states that it is strongly opposed to censorship, yet for some strange reason the lyrics you hear on MTV are not what you hear when you buy a CD.

For instance, Tom Petty's song sounds like "Let's get to the point — Let's role another Jhmhmhm." On the CD those lines actually rhyme. Perhaps MTV is just living up to its own (intermittent) anti-drug policies.

STEVE FORSBERG
Columnist

A more striking example is a love song by a black artist who in the song is worried that his girlfriends father will see him as "just another nigger from the streets." The song was tasteful, and that particular line was the crux of the song, revealing as it did how he feared that the label "nigger" could cost him the love of his life. Don't bother listening for that line while watching MTV. Without it the song ends up sounding like a joke without a punch line.

Then there is a song that says: "I want to f—k you like an animal." Somehow the MTV censors were left the distinct sounds of the first and last consonants for everyone to hear.

Of course, MTV, which denies that the videos shown influence kids, refuses to show violent rap videos because, well, kids might emulate them. Sex, however, is OK, even if the documentaries that MTV airs do say that abstinence is best.

MTV video jockey Kennedy once explained that she was hired after sending in tapes of herself on the radio, but that she had to stop by and see her prospective boss, who had to make certain she wasn't a "fat pig," so, anorexia is apparently OK, but the opposite is not.

The point is that MTV tries to appear as though it is different than network news. It's not.

MTV likes people to notice that on its Singled Out program there is no overt race discrimination — a Caucasian may hook up with an Asian or a Latino with an African-American. Yet there seems to be another rather severe kind of discrimination. People who are overweight, or just damn ugly, never seem to show up.

In all my years of watching The Grind dance show — albeit only 20 seconds at a time while I am flipping stations — I have never seen a downright "fat" or "ugly" woman on the show although there appears to be more leeway given to guys. But isn't that just the kind of thing that MTV, with its goody-goody-two shoes public front, is supposedly fighting against?

I want my, I want my, I want my Music Television. Not the corporate, bland, baloney-spewing stuff we've been hearing, but the real thing.

Kiddie-porn or just sign of the times?

There's been a whole lot of hullabaloo lately about two media events that involve American teenagers: Calvin Klein ads displaying pubescence in sexually provocative poses, and the release of director Larry Clark's controversial movie Kids.

The two have, at their core, an issue in common — an issue that, even in this day and age, many people still have difficulty discussing openly.

It's teenage sexual behavior.

By now, most of us have seen the ads: scantily clad teenage boys and girls in sultry poses advertising Calvin Klein merchandise. The ads are undeniably sexy; the models are probably not old enough to vote.

And even if you haven't seen the movie Kids, you've certainly heard the hype. Larry Clark's cinema verité spares no detail in portraying the sexual promiscuity of teenagers, particularly the habits of a male character named Telly who deflowers virgins — unknowingly and indiscriminately spreading the HIV virus at the same time.

Last week, Calvin Klein announced he would pull the ads that have been denounced by some critics — among them The Catholic League, Morality in Media and Agudah Israel of America — as "kiddie porn."

And since Kids was slapped with an NC-17 rating, it prevents the very audience Clark's movie targets from being permitted to see it. Because of the heated controversy surrounding the flick, only certain theaters around the country will even allow it on their screens.

Much ado about nothing? Well ... not exactly.

In case no one has checked the latest statistics (or walked down the halls of a local high school recently) let me clue you in to a few obvious facts: Teenagers do know about sex, they are having sex, and sometimes, they forget to wear condoms or otherwise protect themselves from unwanted pregnancies or sexually transmitted diseases.

I looked up the most recent statistics I could find concerning teenagers and sexual behavior in the state of Arizona and in Maricopa County. In both instances, occurrences of births to teenage girls, reported cases of sexually transmitted diseases and diagnosed cases of HIV infection and AIDS among teenagers have risen between 1990 and 1993.

Though these statistics are not representative of the entire country, they are indicative of a behavioral trend — one that lands smack in the middle of our backyards.

I wasn't terribly shocked at the results of my research. Then again, I'm only 23 years old, and can easily recall what it was like to attend high school.

For those in the country who are a little older, or more conservative, and who may be in denial about any type of sexual behavior among teenagers, this may come as a bit of a surprise.

Maybe Klein went a bit too far for shock value. Though I don't believe that placing teenage models in provocative poses makes Klein as a pedophile, I do think the ads were in bad taste, and that Klein have chosen a marketing ploy other than sex to sell his merchandise.

And maybe, as some critics have argued, Clark's Kids overemphasizes teenage sexual promiscuity to drive his point home. Certainly all teenagers aren't misinformed or ignorant about the risks of unprotected sex (in one scene, a male character claims that AIDS doesn't even exist because he doesn't know anyone who died from it), and certainly many have pastimes other than those of the kids in the movie.

But sweeping the dirt of teenage sex under the proverbial carpet is not going to make it disappear, and blaming the media and imposing censorship won't alleviate the problem, either.

Klein and Clark are not inspiring teenagers to have sex — instead, they are reflecting behavior indicative of much of today's youth. I, for one, think it's about time parents wake up and smell the spermicide.

It's clear that many parents still have difficulty talking to their children about sex — I know this from personal experience, and almost anyone who was raised in a typically conservative, rural area of the country will probably agree with me.

But if parents won't teach their kids the facts about sex, who will?

Educators may seem a logical answer, but let's not forget that there are still Bible-thumpers who don't want their children to learn sex education in public schools.

Churches are not necessarily the best role models either. Many still preach blind abstinence without convincing results, especially since they fail to instill an appropriate sexual value system within the jaded minds of today's youth.

So teenagers turn to each other for their codes on sexual behavior.

The media reflects that behavior, and preys on teenage desires to give the kids what they want to see.

It's a vicious circle, and I, for one, am not prepared to provide a solution to the problem.

But until parents, educators and legislators can find a way to make sex safer — and more sacred — for their teenagers, they should not be so quick to cast the first stone at the media.

It has been proven time and time again that exposing children to violence increases violent behavior. So doesn't it stand to reason that exposing children to sexy pictures of other children will pique their interest about their sexuality? Yes, obviously it does, and this is exactly what the Calvin Klein bus ads did.

The pictures, which feature half-dressed teens set in what appears to be a cheaply paneled hotel room with shag carpeting and stark lighting, were, according to Klein, meant to enforce positive messages of the spirit, independence and inner worth of today's young people. In reality, they were immoral, seedy, degrading and insulting. Pulling them was the right thing to do, but only because the designer should never have been allowed to run the ads in the first place.

The ads aren't just offensive and rude, they are socially destructive. The fact that Klein has prospered while exploiting sexual deviance is a sign that we as a culture are in serious trouble.

Children today are surrounded by negative imagery. Sex and violence have permeated our society through movies, television and even video games. This may be in answer to the demand for such products, but as adults we have to take some responsibility for the products young people can access.

Klein has, over the years, been allowed to slowly invade our sense of decency without any negative repercussions. Starting with the Brooke Shields' commercials, in which she professes, "Nothing comes between me and my Calvins," and leading to the topless, almost anorexic, Kate Moss spread across the tops of buildings in Times Square. Klein is dictating the increase in tolerance and disguising it as progress.

The most recent pictures of children in sexually alluring positions were plastered on the sides of buses which then passed children in playgrounds and children on their way to school. They didn't even have a choice in the matter. Feeding these sleazy portraits to our young people is not progress, it's coercion.

The ads are a culmination of a campaign aimed to shock and offend. It's time for consumers to show advertisers that they have to take responsibility for the forces they encourage in a culture that is increasingly on the edge.

Some might argue that kiddie porn already exists and is available at any magazine rack. There are 14-year-old super models who pose in bikinis on the covers of major fashion magazines every month — so what's the difference?

To be honest, there isn't any. The reason child welfare advocates don't go after the magazines that exploit these young models is because they can't. The fashion industry is so saturated with teenage girls that to eliminate them would be to wipe out the industry. Regulating them is impossible because regardless of what they advocate, fashion magazines are protected under the law just like any other media outlet.

Calvin Klein doesn't have to worry about the law. He can serve up sexually explicit images disguised as art as long as he wants or until we, as consumers, say, "No, you can't do that — not with our children."

Eventually Klein pulled the so-called "kiddie-porn" ads himself and ran a full-page ad in the New York Times explaining his decision. In doing so, Klein may appear to have egg on his face, but advertising gurus would hardly call this a disaster.

"It's my conjecture that (Klein) accomplished just what he set out to do," said Marian Salzman, director of emerging media and consumer insight for Chiat/Day advertising in New York. "In fact, I think this is one of the great marketing stories of this decade. Am I personally offended by this campaign? Yes. But they have taken this clothing and put it on the market and on the map."

In the world of fashion magazines, teenagers are used to promote sexy clothes, perfume, cars, soap, jewelry, make-up and just about everything else as long as they look like adults. This is a fact of life that is not likely to change any time in the near future. But when the teens look like teens, it's a completely different matter.

The Calvin Klein ads blatantly advocated sexual activity among or with teenagers and for this he should be boycotted.

I understand that some teenagers are going to have sex before they are ready regardless of what is advertised on the sides of buses but, like any social disease, it can't be ignored. We have the power to nurse our society back to health. We can do this by promoting the positive and fighting the negative. We have to do this because if we don't, we will die.

since Jan. 11, were told the defense would rest its case Monday and the prosecution's rebuttal would begin immediately. The judge indicated deliberations could begin in about two weeks.

Jurors never looked worse than they did when the judge broke the bad news. Jurors had dazed expressions. Some clenched their jaws. Some frowned or were grim-faced; one woman in the front row smiled broadly.

Fuhrman's lawyer, meanwhile, publicly apologized for the former detective's racist comments, made during interviews with an aspiring screenwriter from 1985 to 1994.

"All I can tell you is that Mark Fuhrman regrets the inconvenience and harm that he has caused a lot of innocent people to suffer," attorney Darryl Mounger told KCBS-TV. "That's all I can really tell you. ... He's sorry, and I don't know if that's enough."

And across the country, the U.S. Justice Department opened an inquiry into whether Fuhrman and fellow officers manufactured evidence and targeted blacks for arrest, as his taped conversations suggested.

Clark, denied the opportunity to cross-examine Simpson, at one point said that if Ito allowed Fuhrman to retake the stand, the judge should instruct jurors that Simpson as well invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination by evading the witness stand.

"That's outrageous," Bailey fumed outside court. "Marcia Clark wants to throw out the Constitution because she's in a bad mood."

Jurors were told at the start of the case that Simpson was under no obligation to testify and didn't even have to present any defense. The burden of proof in criminal cases is on the prosecution.

Clark also argued that the defense had played unfairly when they asked Fuhrman if he had planted evidence, knowing he would be forced to stay silent once he had refused to answer previous questions.

"I don't stand in defense of Mark Fuhrman. But you've got somebody on the ropes," she said. "He's taken every hit he can. And they get up and ask him a question they know he can't answer."

Defense attorney Gerald Uelmen said the jury has a right to all information that would help them assess Fuhrman's credibility, and Fuhrman's refusal to testify was critical. Fuhrman's witness stand appearance came during a hearing on a defense motion to suppress a bloody glove and other evidence collected by Fuhrman and other detectives the day after the bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were found.

Ito rejected the defense bid first thing Thursday, saying Fuhrman's explanation for entering Simpson's estate without a warrant can still be trusted because it was confirmed by other detectives.

"The testimony of Fuhrman ... is corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses," Ito wrote in a two-page ruling.

VP Gore claims 'humane' cuts will balance budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration asserted Thursday its effort to shrink government by more than $100 billion and a quarter-million jobs is ahead of schedule in a "humane" approach to a balanced budget.

Vice President Al Gore told a White House ceremony that his "reinventing government" project had, in its second year, identified 108 specific changes to agency operations and recommended scrapping thousands of pages of federal regulations.

The recommendations amount to nearly $70 billion in savings, the vice president said.

"This blueprint represents ... an alternative to the slash-and-burn extremist kind of approach," Gore said in a thinly veiled reference to the congressional Republicans' proposed regulatory reforms and budget cuts, particularly reductions in education spending.

Gore's National Performance Review had set a goal two years ago of saving $108 billion and cutting 252,000 federal positions by 1999.

In announcing Thursday that 160,000 job cuts and $58 billion in savings had already been "locked in" by executive-branch decisions, President Clinton boasted of "more than half the savings promised in less than half the time."

"These are the kind of cuts that will allow us to balance the budget without cutting the single most important investment we can make in our future — education," Clinton told an audience of

Cabinet secretaries, small business owners and corporate executives.

Among the changes included in Thursday's report was the closing of 200 weather stations, the consolidation of 60 housing programs and the elimination of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's fleet of ships.

Job cuts have so far been accomplished through attrition, buy-outs and early retirements, the administration said.

"I don't believe, frankly, that if some of the Republicans on the Hill have their way, that the government will shrink in as orderly and humane a way," said Elaine Kamarck, senior policy adviser to Gore.

Many of the cuts and operational changes need to be authorized by Congress, Kamarck said.

But the Republican-led Congress has its own plans for scaling back the federal government, including shifting social service programs to the states, a sweeping overhaul of rule-making and the elimination of several Cabinet-level departments.

The administration, diametrically opposed on all three points, frequently holds up its National Performance Review as evidence of substance behind the rhetoric of smaller government.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry jokingly acknowledged as much when he cracked to reporters, "We're going to reinvent government — for about the third time."

"All I can tell you is that Mark Fuhrman regrets the inconvenience and harm that he has caused a lot of innocent people to suffer," attorney Darryl Mounger told KCBS-TV. "That's all I can really tell you. ... He's sorry, and I don't know if that's enough."

And across the country, the U.S. Justice Department opened an inquiry into whether Fuhrman and fellow officers manufactured evidence and targeted blacks for arrest, as his taped conversations suggested.

Clark, denied the opportunity to cross-examine Simpson, at one point said that if Ito allowed Fuhrman to retake the stand, the judge should instruct jurors that Simpson as well invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination by evading the witness stand.

"That's outrageous," Bailey fumed outside court. "Marcia Clark wants to throw out the Constitution because she's in a bad mood."

Jurors were told at the start of the case

that Simpson was under no obligation to testify and didn't even have to present any defense. The burden of proof in criminal cases is on the prosecution.

Clark also argued that the defense had played unfairly when they asked Fuhrman if he had planted evidence, knowing he would be forced to stay silent once he had refused to answer previous questions.

"I don't stand in defense of Mark Fuhrman. But you've got somebody on the ropes," she said. "He's taken every hit he can. And they get up and ask him a question they know he can't answer."

Defense attorney Gerald Uelmen said the jury has a right to all information that would help them assess Fuhrman's credibility, and Fuhrman's refusal to testify was critical. Fuhrman's witness stand appearance came during a hearing on a defense motion to suppress a bloody glove and other evidence collected by Fuhrman and other detectives the day after the bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were found.

Ito rejected the defense bid first thing Thursday, saying Fuhrman's explanation for entering Simpson's estate without a warrant can still be trusted because it was confirmed by other detectives.

"The testimony of Fuhrman ... is corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses," Ito wrote in a two-page ruling.

VP Gore claims 'humane' cuts will balance budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration asserted Thursday its effort to shrink government by more than $100 billion and a quarter-million jobs is ahead of schedule in a "humane" approach to a balanced budget.

Vice President Al Gore told a White House ceremony that his "reinventing government" project had, in its second year, identified 108 specific changes to agency operations and recommended scrapping thousands of pages of federal regulations.

The recommendations amount to nearly $70 billion in savings, the vice president said.

"This blueprint represents ... an alternative to the slash-and-burn extremist kind of approach," Gore said in a thinly veiled reference to the congressional Republicans' proposed regulatory reforms and budget cuts, particularly reductions in education spending.

Gore's National Performance Review had set a goal two years ago of saving $108 billion and cutting 252,000 federal positions by 1999.

In announcing Thursday that 160,000 job cuts and $58 billion in savings had already been "locked in" by executive-branch decisions, President Clinton boasted of "more than half the savings promised in less than half the time."

"These are the kind of cuts that will allow us to balance the budget without cutting the single most important investment we can make in our future — education," Clinton told an audience of

Cabinet secretaries, small business owners and corporate executives.

Among the changes included in Thursday's report was the closing of 200 weather stations, the consolidation of 60 housing programs and the elimination of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's fleet of ships.

Job cuts have so far been accomplished through attrition, buy-outs and early retirements, the administration said.

"I don't believe, frankly, that if some of the Republicans on the Hill have their way, that the government will shrink in as orderly and humane a way," said Elaine Kamarck, senior policy adviser to Gore.

Many of the cuts and operational changes need to be authorized by Congress, Kamarck said.

But the Republican-led Congress has its own plans for scaling back the federal government, including shifting social service programs to the states, a sweeping overhaul of rule-making and the elimination of several Cabinet-level departments.

The administration, diametrically opposed on all three points, frequently holds up its National Performance Review as evidence of substance behind the rhetoric of smaller government.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry jokingly acknowledged as much when he cracked to reporters, "We're going to reinvent government — for about the third time."

at his 1993 trial — it was entrapment."

On Wednesday, Weaver told the Senate Judiciary Committee's terrorism subcommittee that the ATF informant pressed him over a three-year period to supply a sawed-off shotgun, and that Weaver acquiesced in a moment of weakness because he needed the $450 from the sale to buy groceries for his family.

Of his tape-recorded comments, Weaver conceded that while he probably said something of that nature, he realized after making them that they were silly, and that in any event, he never supplied the weapons.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- Someone stole a female employee's vehicle from Parking Area 3. It was later recovered in Tucson by the Arizona Department of Public Safety. The vehicle was not drive-able.
- A male student was contacted at his room in Palo Verde East after someone smelled marijuana in the room. He was advised of liquor and marijuana laws.
- Someone damaged a concrete trash can on Tyler Mall, just north of Matthews Center.
- Someone broke into a vending machine in the Engineering Research Center and stole $100.
- Two male students were involved in a non-injury car/bike accident at Sixth Street and Packard Drive.
- A male student was contacted at the Art Building while skateboarding. He was advised of ASU policy and left the area.

- Someone broke into a male student's vehicle at 706 Alpha Drive and stole a CD changer, valued at $400.
- A female student reported receiving harassing phone calls in her Manzanita Hall room.
- A man not affiliated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for misconduct involving weapons at Parking Structure 4.
- Someone stole 125 CDs from a female student's room in the Sonora Center. They are valued at $1,875.
- A man not affiliated with ASU was arrested for trespassing at the Danforth Chapel.
- Two bikes were reported stolen.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A 31-year-old man was found dead in his backyard from an apparent gunshot wound to the head. A handgun was found laying next to the man. Police said it was an apparent suicide, since the man had been suffering from an extended illness and there were no signs of foul play.

- A 32-year-old man was arrested for possession of marijuana and misconduct involving weapons after he was found to have a concealed handgun, two large knives and a small amount of what appeared to be marijuana. He was arrested at Clark Park, 1730 S. Roosevelt St., and was taken to the Tempe City Jail to be booked.
- A 24-year-old man was arrested by Chandler police on an outstanding warrant for failure to appear. He was turned over to Tempe Police and was booked into the Tempe City Jail.

Sun Devils want to bury Miners

Juniors Keith Poole (3) and Traivon Johnson will be in action Saturday when the Sun Devils open their home season with UTEP at 7 p.m. at Sun Devil Stadium. UTEP has not beaten ASU since 1974.

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

They haven't beaten ASU in Tempe since 1974. They have won only 12 games since 1990. They were thumped 45-17 by New Mexico State last week and their quarterback situation is shaky at best.

Needless to say, the UTEP Miners are not bastions of confidence heading into Saturday's game with ASU at 7 p.m. at Sun Devil Stadium.

But the Sun Devils, who are well over a three-touchdown favorite to win and are still perturbed over a bitter defeat in Seattle last week, aren't taking anything for granted, said Head Coach Bruce Snyder.

"They've got to show up. They can't do what they did at Washington," he said of the Sun Devils (0-1, 0-1 in the Pac-10), who swallowed a 23-20 loss to the Huskies in their season opener. "We weren't nearly physical enough and we didn't hustle enough (last week). So for us to be as good as we want to be, we better start now."

With national powerhouses Nebraska and USC still on the September slate, now might be as good a time as any for ASU to step it up. Besides, Snyder said letting down against the Miners is not an option.

"I will not allow them to do that," he said. "...They're going to count this game every bit as (much as) the Nebraska game when it comes to selecting a bowl so this is really important.

"And we have to establish that this is a really hard place to play. We've got to start that now no matter who comes in here."

The Sun Devils will have history on their side. They have won six straight against the Miners and 23 of the last 24 games in the series dating back to 1957.

UTEP, which was 3 of 13 on third-down conversions against the Aggies last week, used two quarterbacks, who combined to throw three interceptions. Redshirt-freshman starter John Rayborn and junior back-up Leonard Lilja, both of whom lack significant game experience, will be the signal-callers.

A preseason excerpt from UTEP's media guide states Coach Charlie Bailey "could be as busy as a one-armed traffic cop at a nudist colony open house going over details for his passing game."

Due to a suspect passing attack, Miners' senior tailback Toraino Singleton may have to assume the bulk of the offensive responsibility.

"He's a load," Snyder said of Singleton, who stands 6-foot-3, 230 pounds. "I think that's where we better start to center our attention. But it's the play-action pass that caused the 14 points in this last game. We're going to get that. They're going to fake it to him three or four times in the game and come back with the ball and try to hit the post (pattern) so we need to get that solved."

Either way, Sun Devil junior quarterback Jake Plummer believes ASU is in control of its own destiny.

"They could play us strong or we could roll over," he said. "It's all up to us."

NOTES:

- Redshirt-freshman safety Mitchell Freedman, who has a thigh contusion and has seen limited practice, is questionable for Saturday. Snyder said Freedman has wanted to play in Sun Devil Stadium all his life and the staff will make a decision during pre-game warm-ups. "We want to be smart because he's got to play all season," he said.

- Senior left cornerback Lee Cole, who has been slowed with a hamstring injury, will start Saturday.

- Senior right cornerback Marcus Soward, who is suffering from a groin injury, will not dress, Snyder said. Sophomore Jason Simmons will get the starting call again.

- Snyder said freshmen receivers Ricky Boyer and Lenzie Jackson could see as many as 15 to 20 plays depending on ASU's formations. Freshman wideout Kenny Mitchell could see action, Snyder said.

- UTEP's 6-foot-3-inch freshman Michael Hicks, the starting left cornerback and anchor of the secondary, is injured and will not play. Rodney Ryan, a 5-8 sophomore, will start in his place.

- ESPN was at the Sun Devils' practice Thursday filming a feature on junior receiver Keith Poole and his brother Marc, who is confined to a wheelchair. The date of airing has not been announced.

- Snyder said over 50 players saw action last week and he will dress close to 70 on Saturday.

Runners get start at NAU

BY DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's and women's cross country teams won't have to travel too far for their first meet as they travel to the Northern Arizona Invitational in Flagstaff Saturday.

The Sun Devils await a stiff test from NAU, which placed first overall in last year's invitational. The Sun Devil men placed second and the women captured fifth.

"Were going to be running against the best," junior Ari Rodriguez said.

One of the biggest challenges on Saturday will be fighting the high altitudes.

"It's a little tough running at 6,000 or 7,000 feet," Coach Ken Lehman said. "I'm sure it's going to effect us."

Sophomore Debbie Stieber said, "I don't want to really set any goals because Flagstaff is a lot different. You hear all the horror stories about Flagstaff."

The runners said they will treat this year's invitational more like a practice run.

"We just use it to warm up," Rodriguez said. "Nobody remembers what we did at the beginning of the year. They only remember what happens at the end of the year (Pac-10 trials)."

Last year, the Sun Devils thought they may have come out too strong, which eventually hurt them in the end.

"We don't want to peak too early," Rodriguez said. "We came out real hungry (last year), but we've learned from our mistakes."

No. 18 ASU volleyball team to invade Texas

Dianne R. Bartsch/State Press

Freshman outside hitter Mindi Larsen and the 18th-ranked volleyball team head to the Sheraton Inn Classic in Lubbock, Texas this weekend.

BY DAWN WAGNER
STATE PRESS

When the ASU volleyball team travels to Lubbock, Texas this weekend for the Sheraton Inn Classic, it will be aiming to add to its 3-0 record.

To do it, ASU coach Patti Snyder-Park said they will focus on improving their current weakness.

"We definitely need to smooth out our offense," Snyder-Park said. "We need to make sure we have definite running plays and setting plays. But throughout the year, the offense is usually the last to gel."

Freshman outside hitter Jen Lucero said the only concern the Sun Devils have in competition is the lack of experience playing together.

However, she still isn't worried.

"We may be young, but we are athletic," Lucero said. "In all areas we'll do good. We got better every game last weekend. I think we have put together an awesome team."

The Classic, hosted by Texas Tech University, will pit the Red Raiders, Eastern Michigan and Arkansas State against the No. 18 Sun Devils.

Texas Tech. is 2-1 after competing in the Doubletree Classic in Tucson last weekend. The Red Raiders are led by Jill Slapper and Brande Brown, who both have 25 kills this season.

Last year, ASU defeated Texas Tech. 3-1 in the Hilton/Sun Devil Challenge.

Sun Devil outside hitter Christine Garner, who has posted 41 kills so far this year, is expected to combat the two threats.

Garner and senior middle blocker Holly Sones have been two key players on the court for ASU this season, freshman Jolynn Faatulu said.

"She's (Garner) a leader. She and Holly both," Faatulu said. "They've both been doing a really good job. They are both a really positive influence on us."

Snyder-Park added that ASU's defensive play is right where she likes it.

"Overall, I am impressed with the team's defense," she said. "We're looking to get a few more blocks and better serves. We're still ironing out some small details."

This weekend will also mark the first time the Sun Devils will play both Eastern Michigan and Arkansas State.

The Eagles have yet to compete this season and the Lady Indians are undefeated at 4-0.

Cross country

For many of the runners, this will be their first competitive run since last spring.

"I'm real anxious," said Rodriguez. "We haven't competed against anyone except ourselves. The whole summer we've been running endlessly. Now we're looking for payback. We want to show ourselves that it was worth it."

Rodriguez edged Matt Repak with a time of 25 minutes, 27 seconds for the men's top finish last year. Rodriguez and Repak will run with Andy Carusetta, John Tyrrell, Tom Weber, Travis Anderson and Christian Alevras this Saturday.

"We have several guys that if they have the race that they're capable of, they should be right up there," said Repak, who placed first among Sun Devils in four out of six invitationals last year.

Kirsten Stocker, Kim Barrett, Phaedra Kohlhaus and Deborah Stieber will make the trip for the women. Stocker finished last year's 5,000 meter race in 22:36.

"I'm looking forward to seeing how the girls do," Stieber said. "We've picked up the pace quite a bit. We kind of came into the season in not too good of shape, but our shape has just gotten a lot better."

For many of the girls this will be their first collegiate meet.

"I'm sure it's going to cause a lot of nervousness but I think that's where the more experienced girls come in," Stieber said. "Not only do you take on your own nervousness, you take on theirs as well to help them out."
