ASASU president arrested for assault

Weber denies punching woman in fraternity brawl

BY TIMOTHY TAIT AND GREG ZEMEIDA
STATE PRESS

Chris Weber, ASU's student government president, was arrested for assault early Thursday morning after allegedly punching a woman during a brawl with a rival fraternity.

The fight between a few members of Weber's fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha, and a few members from Sigma Phi Epsilon occurred about 12:30 a.m. at the Dash Inn, 731 E. Apache Blvd., a popular hang-out with fraternity members. Weber left the bar after the fight and was arrested outside his fraternity house about a half-hour later.

"I didn't hit the girl, but I'll be hearing about it for months," Weber said. He will be arraigned Oct. 10 and intends to plead not guilty.

The victim, an ASU student, said that although she could not positively identify Weber, other witnesses can.

"However, he was the last one that I saw and four of my friends can positively identify the man who assaulted me — Chris Weber," she said in a telephone interview, reading from a prepared statement.

She requested that her name be withheld pending the release of the police report.

Weber said he was at the bar celebrating his 25th birthday. The fight began when his younger brother, T.J., who is also a Pi Kappa Alpha member, was "sucker punched" in the nose, according to Chris Weber. Prompted by bouncers at the Dash, the combatants moved the altercation outside into the parking lot of Rothers Bookstore, Weber said.

However, the victim said she was hit when Chris Weber attempted to start a fight with an "undergrad" who was with her.

Weber said he thought his brother had a broken nose and all he wanted to do was get him out of the bar. When the fighting resumed outside the bar, he said Pi Kappa Alpha members pushed him into a bush to avoid trouble and rushed him from the scene.

Weber said the woman was punched after she "jumped into the middle of a bunch of guys fighting and somebody hit her, and she doesn't know who it was," adding that he was at the other end of the parking lot at the time of the assault.

Drew Ronchetti, a fellow member of Weber's fraternity who was at the bar, backed up Weber's story.

"I heard somebody yelling, 'Oh my God, somebody just hit my girlfriend,' and they are trying to blame this thing on Chris, ... (but he) was down on the south end of the parking lot being put into a car," he said. "He wasn't anywhere near her when it happened."

Jeff Adams, president of Sigma Phi Epsilon, said he wouldn't comment on the incident except to say that members of his fraternity "did nothing wrong."

He said he didn't know how many of his fraternity members were involved in the fight because he was not at the bar when the incident broke out. Adams said he wanted to wait until all the facts were in before commenting further.

Weber admitted he had a couple of drinks at the bar, but said he was not impaired. Police did not perform a breathalyzer test on Weber after his arrest.

ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge said Weber was arrested outside of his fraternity house at about 1 a.m. after the woman and three other witnesses identified him. He was cited and later released.

According to the ASU police report on the incident, the woman said Weber spilled a drink on her at the bar at about 12:30 a.m., then became belligerent when the woman's two friends told him to be careful with his drink.

Weber left and returned shortly with two friends, she alleged in the report. Weber and his friends then attacked

Complications from shooting claim life of ASU gay activist

"He spent most of his life giving service to others," said Rebecca Sauer, Mark's mother and a graduate student studying counseling. "That was his main function in life."

Mark, an openly gay freshman, died Sunday of HIV/AIDS complications resulting from a June 3 shooting which the Phoenix Police Department classified as a hate crime. His assailant allegedly said, "We don't want you (gay) people around here."

Mark, a 25-year-old geology major, was shot three times in the leg when a juvenile attempted to carjack him while leaving a Phoenix bar.

Mark Colledge, who is on the board of directors for the Arizona Human Rights Fund, said Mark was HIV-positive and the shooting was an indirect cause of his death.

Supreme Court Justice O'Connor to speak at College of Law dinner

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

Sandra Day O'Connor, the first female Supreme Court justice, will speak tonight at the College of Law's annual Law Society Dinner.

The dinner — to be held at Camelback Inn's Arizona Ballroom — is a reservation-only affair expected to draw about 600 people, including Gov. Fife Symington.

About 200 law students are expected to attend, said Linda Flamer, director of development and alumni relations for the college of law.

She added that O'Connor's remarks would be informal, and she wasn't sure what would be discussed.

"We don't have a topic, which makes it difficult to say what she will talk about," Flamer said.

O'Connor was a Maricopa County Superior Court Judge from 1975 to 1979. After her term ended, she served two years on the Arizona Court of Appeals until President Ronald Reagan appointed her to the Supreme Court in 1981.

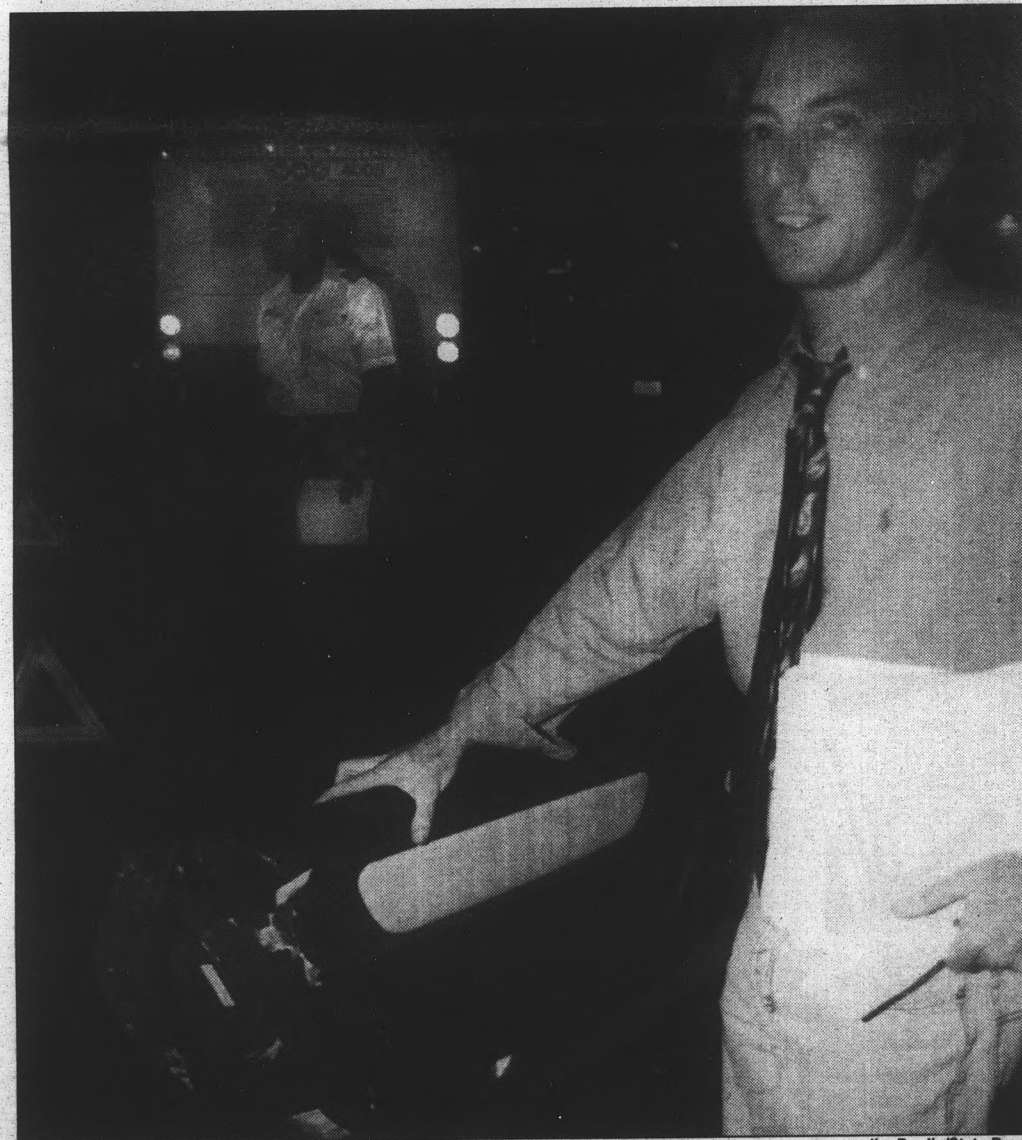

Tomorrow marks the 14th anniversary of O'Connor's appointment to the nation's highest court.

O'Connor spoke at the 25th anniversary of the law school in 1992, was a commencement speaker in 1993 and holds an honorary law degree from ASU, Flamer said.

The dinner will also honor P. Robert Fagnin, a local attorney receiving the 1995 Distinguished Achievement Award.

Flamer said reservations are no longer being accepted.

ASU alum Stephen Palermo's driver's side door was impacted by a city metro bus Thursday night in front of the College Street Deli on College Avenue. Palermo, who was not injured, was opening the door of his 1991 Dodge Stealth when it was suddenly struck from behind by the bus. Bus driver Jeffrey Moore would not comment. According to Tempe Police Officer Carlos Araza, Palermo was cited for "opening door not safely and for parking in a red zone."

her and her friends.

She said Weber struck her in the face and she fell to the floor. She suffered a cut under her right eye, a bruise on her right leg and a cut on her upper back.

The report said Weber had two scratches on his middle finger and blood on his pants. The wounds appeared to be fresh, according to the report.

Weber said he received the scratches when he was pushed into a bush. He could not be reached for further comment about the blood on his pants.

Standridge said police were called to Alpha Drive because of a report of a "large fight." When officers arrived, about 40 to 50 people were standing between the two fraternity houses, but no one was seen fighting.

One of the officers then told the crowd to go back to their houses and they did. At that time, the woman approached the officer about the alleged assault.

The woman, along with three other witnesses, identified Weber as her attacker. She told police that she would be willing to press charges against him.

Weber said Sigma Phi Epsilon members pinned the assault on him to get back at his fraternity and because he has such a high profile as the Associated Students of ASU president.

"(The) easy way to get to us (Pi Kappa Alpha) was through me," he said. "I'm high profile and I have the most to lose."

"They set me up real nice."

Weber said his behavior was "perfectly acceptable," but added that he had "a responsibility as a student leader to make sure that things (like this) don't happen."

This is the second arrest of a fraternity member for assault in the past month. On Aug. 21, a Sigma Chi member was charged with aggravated assault after allegedly beating a black man outside his fraternity house. The incident is being investigated as a possible hate crime.

Both incidents do little to improve the image of fraternity members, Standridge said, but people shouldn't draw conclusions about all members based on the alleged actions of a few.

"I would still have to say that ... the vast majority of the Greek community abide by the rules of their house and the philosophy of the fraternity itself," he said. "Naturally, I would hope that whatever is judged in these cases ... we don't paint everyone with the same broad brush."

Standridge said he hopes the incident involving Weber does not lead to any escalation of tensions among the two fraternities involved.

"Revenge is not the right response to this kind of thing," he said.

Members of the two fraternities should get together and solve any problems that they may have without resorting to violence, he said.

"Let's end it now," he said.

Sauer

"The shooting added to his demise and it had accelerated the disease," he said. "Due to the shooting, he had to stop a lot of his therapies."

Mark's death is a loss to both the family and the public he unselfishly served, Rebecca Sauer said.

"To us it signifies a great loss of someone who was very loved in the family and contributed quite a bit to the family," she said. "The community lost a great leader and a great activist. He was a very special guy."

Sauer added that Mark would lend a hand to anyone who needed it.

"He had no prejudices. He had no biases," she said. "If you needed his help, he'd give it to you and he'd give it to you completely."

"He used to hate having to go to sleep because he felt he was wasting time. There were so many things that he wanted to do."

Dawn Bates, an associate professor of English and a friend of Mark's, echoed his mom's words.

"Mark was a great young man," she said. "He was very caring and active in a great many communities. He was active in the lesbian and gay community."

Bates, who is also a faculty advisor for the Rainbow Alliance — a gay and lesbian student organization — said she assists the group because of the same hatred of gays and lesbians to which Mark fell victim.

"The reason that I serve lesbian and gay students on this campus is because they are in danger. Mark's death illustrates that," she said.

"He was killed because he was a gay man," she said. "It should signify the senseless waste of lives caused by ignorance and hate."

Gov. Symington fields questions on talk show

PHOENIX (AP) — One day after declaring personal bankruptcy, Gov. Fife Symington fielded questions on a radio talk show Wednesday, defending his decision to walk away from $25 million in debts and refusing to close the door on a possible third term.

Calls to the Pat McMahon show, simulcast on KTAR radio and KSAZ television, were about evenly divided between Symington critics and supporters.

"You're going to come out of this smelling like a rose," one woman said. "You may have lost a few million, but so have a lot of people because of you."

Others were supportive of the governor. "You're a good man," one man said. Another caller said she could sympathize with Symington because she and her husband recently went through a bankruptcy.

Symington said reaction was about what he expected.

"Some supporters, some detractors — I'm kind of used to that," he said.

Symington filed for bankruptcy on Wednesday, listing nearly $25 million in debts left from the collapse of his real-estate empire and only $61,000 in assets.

Babbitt: locals should control federal lands

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt says it is time for environmentalists, ranchers, timber harvesters and miners to negotiate their own truces over federal land use.

"Otherwise, they wind up with their knives drawn at each other's throats in Washington," Babbitt said Thursday.

Babbitt and Mike Dombeck, the acting Bureau of Land Management director, spoke from Phoenix to the 24 new Resource Advisory Councils around the West via teleconference.

The 15-member councils were appointed by state governors to advise the BLM, which is responsible for managing nearly about 270 million acres of public land, including nearly 13 million in New Mexico.

Babbitt told the representatives on their first day of meetings that his goal is to have locals control the federal land in their area.

"I think every Westerner, everyone who has grown up and lived in land in the West, thinks land management should come closer to home," he said.

But members of the regional advisory councils were skeptical.

"How will our decisions affect grazing decisions the secretary of the interior will eventually make?" asked a representative from Idaho Falls, Idaho, during a call-in portion of the teleconference.

Execution date won't be extended for killer

PHOENIX (AP) — The Arizona Supreme Court refused Thursday to set a new execution date for convicted murderer Ronald Turney Williams, who is fighting extradition from West Virginia, where he is serving a life sentence for two other killings.

Gov. Fife Symington and West Virginia Gov. Gaston Caperton signed an agreement this summer for Williams to be returned to Arizona to face execution for the 1981 shooting death of an elderly Scottsdale man.

He is scheduled to be executed Wednesday.

However, Williams is awaiting an Oct. 5 court hearing in West Virginia on his challenge of the constitutionality of the agreement between the governors to transfer him to Arizona. West Virginia does not have a death penalty.

The Arizona Attorney General's Office asked the Supreme Court to move the execution date to Nov. 29, which the court refused to do.

Serb refugees find life of misery

BANJA LUKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Tens of thousands of Serb refugees battled filth, flies and hunger Thursday as the offensive that drove them to the northern Serb stronghold of Banja Luka appeared to wane.

Displaced by advancing Croat and Muslim troops, about 2,000 of these refugees were living in a former army building here. Flies swarmed around hundreds of people sprawled on straw beds Thursday, babies cried from hunger and the stench of unwashed people and sweaty horses filled the air.

Local aid officials were overwhelmed. "We don't have enough food for everyone," said Miroslav Vjesic of the local Red Cross, as dozens of refugees jostled for handouts of canned goods. Medicine and other staples were also in short supply.

In a stunning offensive, Croatian and Muslim forces have cut Serb holdings to roughly 50 percent of Bosnia from the nearly two-thirds the rebels once held.

Yasushi Akashi, the top U.N. official in the former Yugoslavia, said Muslim-led government forces were continuing to fight in the north, but not around Banja Luka. The battles shifted instead to Doboj, a Serb-held town 45 miles to the northeast.

Bosnian Serb radio said Serb units, apparently assisted by 1,000 paramilitary troops from neighboring Serbia, had halted the Muslim-Croat attacks on all fronts in northern, western and central Bosnia.

In Banja Luka itself, scenes of despair were multiplied in shelter after shelter.

"He hasn't eaten for 24 hours," said Rosa Strbac, pointing to her wailing 13-month-old son. "I cannot wash my children or feed them."

fled enemy forces advancing Saturday on Bosanska Krupa and arrived in Banja Luka on Wednesday.

Like most of the estimated 100,000 refugees around Banja Luka, her family brought only personal belongings hastily thrown onto a horse-drawn cart.

The refugees left their belongings on the wagons, covering them with plastic sheeting to protect them from the rain. There was no room inside — several refugees complained they were packed so tightly at night that they had trouble breathing. One said an elderly man died overnight.

GOP releases Medicare proposal

Plan blends cost controls with higher premiums

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Democrats vowing a fight to the end, House Republican sketched a future for Medicare on Thursday that blends cost controls on doctors and hospitals with higher premiums for senior citizens and sweeteners to nudge them into cheaper alternatives.

"No one should be forced to choose, but everyone should have the right to choose" an alternative to the 30-year-old fee-for-service coverage, House Speaker Newt Gingrich said, providing partial details of a plan intended to achieve $270 billion in savings over seven years.

Democrats said the changes were designed to finance GOP tax cuts for the rich — not to shore up the solvency of the Medicare system, as Republicans contended. "We may lose, but we're going to go down fighting," vowed House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo.

To underscore their determination to resist, Democrats vowed to hold a hearing Friday on the lawn outside the Capitol to compete with the formal session held indoors by Republicans.

Democrats were also frustrated Thursday as Republicans in the House Commerce Committee rejected a series of proposals to turn health care for the poor over to the states.

The committee was expected to finish work on the Medicaid bill Friday. It would cut the program's growth rate in half and is intended to save $182 billion over seven years.

Despite a nationally televised news conference on Medicare, the GOP stopped well short of providing full details of a plan expected to be voted on in committee in the next few days.

They offered no accounting on how the Student loan debts up

Borrowing increases 50% since 1992

WASHINGTON (AP) — More American students and their parents are taking on debt — and more of it — to pay for college, a study said Thursday.

Borrowing for college has jumped 50 percent since 1992, from $16 billion to an estimated $24 billion in 1995, according to The Education Resources Institute, a Boston-based nonprofit group that provides information about college aid.

The growing loan volume, if it continues, could hurt not only students and their families but the economy as a whole by limiting their buying and saving power, the study said.

"We're trying to build awareness among consumers and in Congress that this could be a problem," said Ted Freeman, the institute's president.

In part, the increase results from good news — more people are going to college, including increasing numbers of minority students. But college costs also have grown, while federal grants have remained mostly static.

In addition, changes in federal laws two years ago allowed students to borrow more, and made more students and parents eligible to borrow under the federal guaranteed-loan program.

College debt still accounts for a small fraction of all debt Americans take on, and thus not necessarily a cause for concern, some economists say.

"For a lot of people, it's the only thing to do, so they do it," said David Wyss, chief financial economist for market analysts DRI/McGraw Hill of Lexington, Mass. "What's the alternative? If you don't go to college, you're stuck in today's world."

But Freeman cautioned that students may take on too much debt because of inexperience, leading to defaults. Surveys by the American Council on Education indicate some students don't understand their loan commitments, said ACE spokesman Dave Merkowitz.

"Some didn't realize they would have to pay the loans back," Merkowitz said. "And even those who did understand felt they had no choice but to take a calculated risk."

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BOO — To Gov. Fife Symington. Yes, we know we've been blasting Fife all week — but the guy is just begging for it.

This is the man who ran for governor on the premise that he would run Arizona like a business, and it turns out that he can't even balance his check-book. And we thought Evan Mecham was bad...

BRAVO — To Intercollegiate Athletics, for sparing ASU students from hikes in student basketball season ticket prices. Students can still catch an entire season of basketball for around $25 — a pretty low price to pay to watch a team that made the "Sweet 16" last season.

At least they didn't follow the lead of Jerry Colangelo, who seems to hike ticket prices astronomically with each Suns' playoff appearance.

BOO — To Philadelphia 76ers GM John Lucas, for being bone-headed enough to sign ex-Sun Richard Dumas to a contract.

Dumas got bounced from the team after violating the NBA's substance abuse rules three times. Lucas is a firm believer in rehabilitating basketball junkies, and he does a good job. But signing up Dumas sends the message that it doesn't matter if you keep using — some team will always be desperate enough to forget about it and give you a lucrative contract.

BRAVO — To the signs from Los Angeles that the O.J. Simpson murder trial is finally nearing its end. The judge may send the jury to deliberations Sept. 26 — the one-year anniversary of the trial.

Something is seriously, seriously wrong when a trial is permitted to go on for an entire year. Do the words "due process" ring a bell?

BOO — To the endless hype surrounding the soon-to-be-released NC-17 rated movie, Showgirls. The fact that it got hit with the movie industry's most restrictive rating will probably blast ticket sales into the stratosphere on a wave of Hollywood hype.

And we're still shaking our heads at the selection of actress Elizabeth Berkeley in the lead role. We still remember her best as Jessie from Saved by the Bell.

What will Screech think?

BRAVO — To ASASU, for heeding our calls for scandal on the front page.

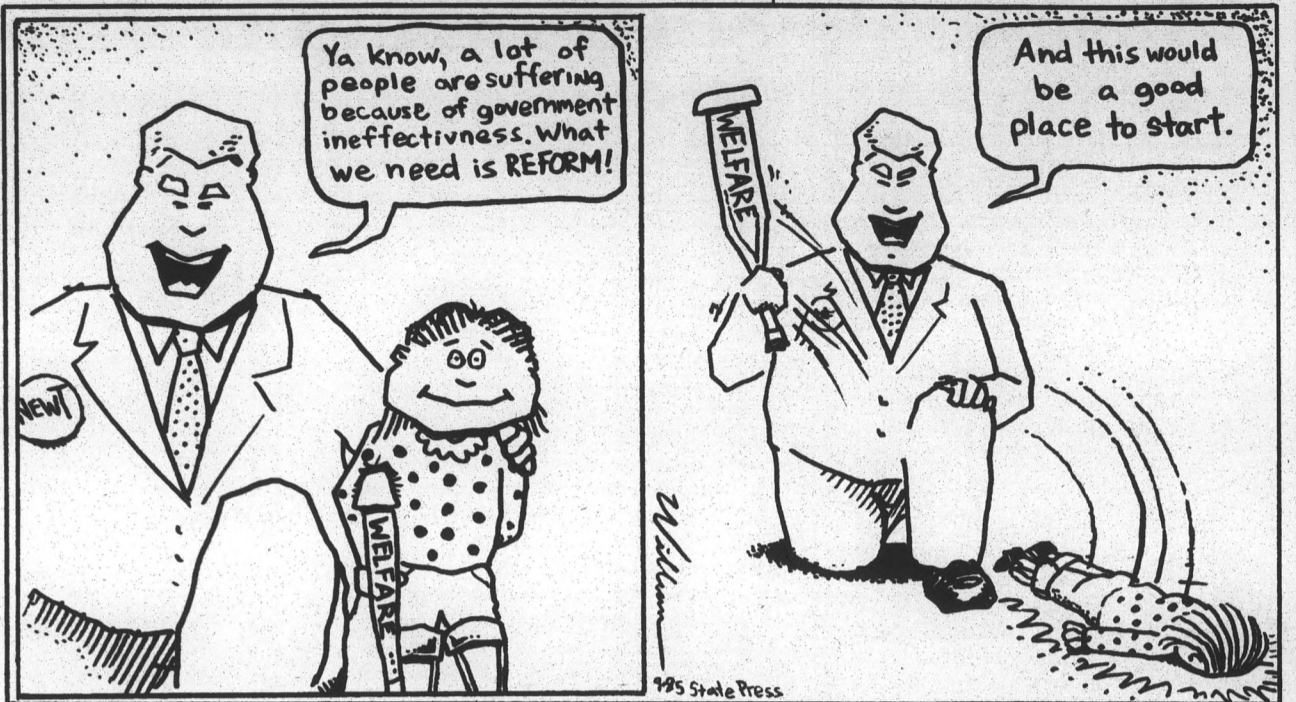

Ask, and thou shalt receive.

BOO — To The New York Times and the Washington Post for caving in to the Unabomber, and agreeing to publish his 35,000-word manifesto.

This was, without a doubt, one of the most difficult decisions that these editors must have ever faced. But the Unabomber has shown no sense of honor in the past, so we can't see any reason to trust his "guarantee" that he won't kill anyone else if the manifesto ran.

The Unabomber still reserved the right to bomb property, and we have no doubt that he will exercise that right. We also have no doubt that someone is bound to get hurt or killed in one of these bombings.

By giving into this despicable terrorist, the Times and the Post are only encouraging future terrorists to engage in similar acts of journalistic arm-twisting.

Fight over sacred land in Canada blacked out

The media always tries to keep the citizens of this country informed on what is happening here and around the world. They told us about Watergate, the siege at Waco and Ruby Ridge. They bring us information everyday about the situation in Bosnia.

While many people don't always agree with what they print or show on TV, most of us do believe that they have the right to do this. Some even consider them the watchdogs of our country.

So why hasn't this country been informed about the siege at Gustafsen Lake in British Columbia or the one at Ipperwash? Why is the media acting as though nothing is going on?

There is a rumor that the United States and Canada agreed to a news blackout. Could this be true?

After all of the yelling and screaming the media in this country has done about freedom of the press and the public's right to know, are they accepting this? Maybe it just isn't important enough? Well, judge for yourself.

At Gustafsen Lake, there are about 30 people of the Shuswap Nation who reclaimed a piece of sacred land that they have used for their Sundance Ceremony for the last seven years.

The land is said to belong to a rancher named Lyle James, although he could not produce a deed or some proof of ownership. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police were called in, along with SWAT teams, other agencies and tanks.

It is reported by sources on the Internet and scattered news reports from Canada that the area is also surrounded by racist groups who are urging the police to "go in and kill them."

The Shuswap Nation has an attorney, Bruce Clark, who has not been allowed into the camp to speak with his clients. It seems that the only demand the nation has is that a Jan. 3, 1995 petition, asking that the issue of jurisdiction be addressed by a third party tribunal, be taken to the Queen.

The Shuswap Nation said the Royal Proclamation of 1763 recognizes the aboriginal peoples' sovereignty over unceded land, and want the Queen to back up their right to keep the sacred land. Reports claim that shots have been fired and there are injured on both sides. Many of the Native Americans inside the encampment are women and children, but no one seems to know the exact count.

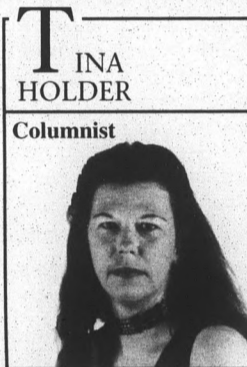

In Ipperwash, located in the province of Ontario, the issue is again over land. The land that Camp Ipperwash sits on was taken by the military during World War II. It was to be used as a reserve base until this year and then given back. A group of Native Americans from Stoney Point and Kettle Point, believing this to be the case, moved onto the base. Reports differ as to when this took place: some say last week, some say a month ago. One report says that police in riot gear moved in and were met by the Native Americans near the entrance to the camp. The report says that two Natives were "swallowed up" by the police and beaten. Others started throwing rocks and sticks and the police opened fire. A 16-year-old boy was killed and two other Indians were wounded.

The police version says that they responded to a call that the Native Americans were attacking a car with baseball bats. When they got there, a car and a bus came through the gates and almost hit the officers. The police say that someone in the bus fired and so they returned fire.

Which account is true? I don't know. If there was media coverage it might be a little easier to figure out what was going on up there. I realize that this isn't Bosnia, but it's closer to home and seems to be something worth mentioning in the news. Not to mention that these incidents are going on at the same time.

Could the rumors of an agreement between the United States and Canada for a news blackout be true? Would our media, who value their freedom so much, agree to this? Why is there even a need for a blackout? What is going on up there that they don't want the public to know about? I don't know about the rest of America, but I plan to find out.

Fuhrman defender not much better than his foes

Is it possible that someone could have a kind word for Mark Fuhrman, the liar and the bigot of N-word fame? The braggart ex-cop whose big mouth is O.J. Simpson's best hope to beat the rap?

Sure. This is a big country with all sorts of opinions. And far worse villains than Fuhrman have had admirers. As I recall, even John Gacy received love letters.

So I wasn't surprised to receive a spirited defense of Fuhrman. And since he's been so thoroughly battered in the media, it seems only fair to pass along a pro-Fuhrman viewpoint.

It comes from Frank Powell, of Florence, Ala., who frequently writes to assure me that I'm an effete, sniveling liberal, which probably surprises many liberals who frequently write to tell me that I'm a flint-hearted right-wing swine.

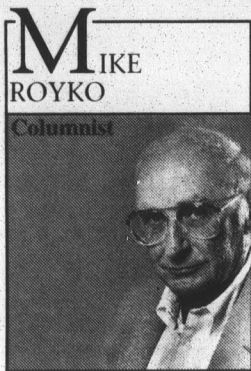

Here's what Mr. Powell has to say:

"During the Trial of the Century (no, not O.J.; Mark Fuhrman's trial) support for Fuhrman has, shall we say, been rather niggardly. I note that you genuflect to the PC police by studiously avoiding a consoling word in his behalf and sprinkling your remarks with adjectives like 'hate' and 'loathsome.'

"My view is that Fuhrman is the product of years of association with elements in our society that ordinary citizens can only read about or watch sanitized TV portrayals.

"You are likely aware that in the tight police community, there are only two classifications of humans: police and (obscenity).

"My education on this subject came from a peripheral law-enforcement job of about nine years. I had the opportunity to watch young California police recruits change in a matter of months from bright-eyed proponents of the 'created equal' myth to tight-lipped suspicious cops who reflexively put everyone in some (obscenity) slot.

"This change was the conditioning of months working the alleys and ghettos of a large city where things happen that only cops know.

"Mind you, these were not slope-heads looking for an opportunity to tote a gun. These were intelligent, carefully screened, mostly college-educated young men.

"You figure it out. I would challenge you and all the other hypocrites who are so quick to condemn Fuhrman to walk in some young cop's shoes for six months. You might find it hard to suppress the 'N-word' from your thoughts.

"Recently there have been a series of public attacks on law enforcement morality and fairness. As a result, those we hire to keep the antisocial elements from overrunning us have had to retreat. Read the resulting crime stats. Who in his right mind would risk his life to collar a crook and risk his freedom, reputation and property by a slip in procedure?

"I am sickened by the media's attack on Fuhrman. If it weren't for the Fuhrmans out there, our society could soon be another Rwanda or Botswana. There are a few of us — maybe more than you think — who realize this."

I agree with a couple of points that Powell makes. Yes, we do need police. And, yes, police work can be frustrating and dangerous.

But I've never heard of anyone being dragged from his home and forced to become a policeman.

And that's the problem I have with Powell's defense of Fuhrman and with those big city cops who complain about how tough the job is.

Sure being a cop can be difficult work. There's nothing new about that. It isn't a secret. Every applicant and every recruit knows about the kind of work he is seeking.

But there isn't one high-crime big city — not Chicago, New York, L.A., Detroit or Philadelphia — that doesn't have more applicants for police jobs than it can hire.

Why are so many young men and women eager to put on that badge?

I'm sure some are idealists. But there is also the allure of power. Few jobs provide that kind of power. Few jobs provide that kind of instant authority.

There's also the instant status and sense of identity. You tell someone you are a cop and you are immediately believed to be in the know, streetwise, capable and privy to the mainstream that keeps society ticking.

Plus the pay is good, the fringe benefits are better than most, the hours aren't too bad, when you develop a big gut you can wangle an easy desk job, and you don't have to take any crap from mopes.

And it isn't boring. Boredom, it should be remembered, is probably the single biggest cause of job burnout.

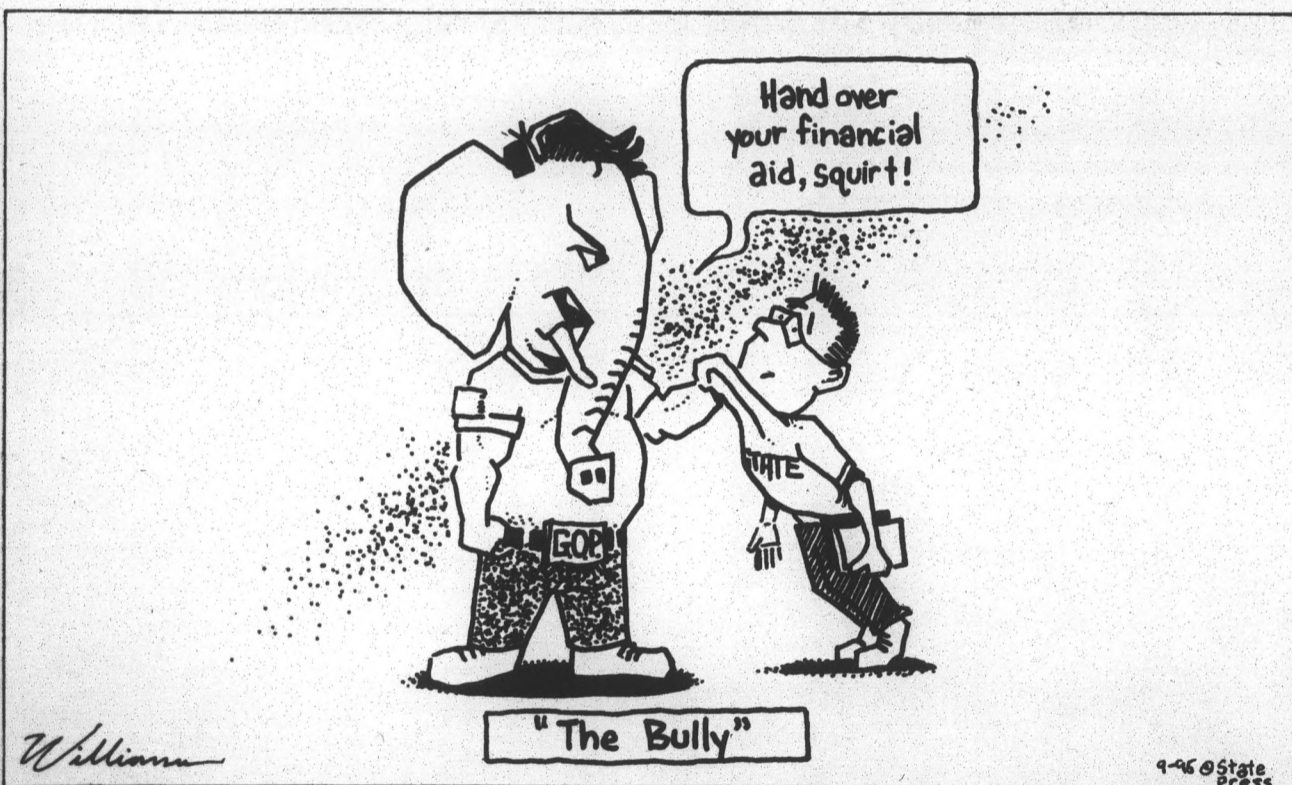

So while we can appreciate the good work that good cops do, let's not exaggerate the frustrations of police work.

Cops become cops because they want to. And they remain cops because they like it.

And I didn't notice any gray hairs in Fuhrman's designer haircut.

Mike Royko is a syndicated columnist with the Chicago Tribune.

So I wasn't surprised to receive a spirited defense of Fuhrman. And since he's been so thoroughly battered in the media, it seems only fair to pass along a pro-Fuhrman viewpoint.

Liberal labeling not so simple

I enjoyed Gregg Pekau's guest column Sept. 18, decrying the "liberals" unfair attack on Newt Gingrich, his book, the accompanying publisher's advance and the contents therein.

I would challenge Pekau to define his terms a bit more carefully. He uses the term "liberal" as though it is an understood concept, namely, that class of evil boogymen (er, persons of boogey) who spend their days undoing all the good that the GOP does for us. It is a gross oversimplification, and his liberal (pun intended) use of the word leads me to believe that Pekau honestly has no idea what the term means. It seems that the spoon feeding of doctrine has succeeded.

This brings me to a larger point, on which I will not ruminate at much length. Say something often enough, regardless of truth, and it will be believed. I'm afraid all groups, political, religious and otherwise, are guilty of this act. The Republican credo "liberals are bad" falls in with the "this is a Christian nation, smoking doesn't promote lung cancer, etc." It just doesn't wash.

By the way, Newt Gingrich's $4 million advance was attacked because of the source — Rupert Murdoch, the media giant. Seems Murdoch, a non-citizen, would like some exceptions to the existing rules made in his favor to help expand his American operations. Gingrich was facing a conflict-of-interest dilemma, which he rightly avoided by foregoing the advance. It was not, as Pekau stated, a pointless "liberal attack on Gingrich."

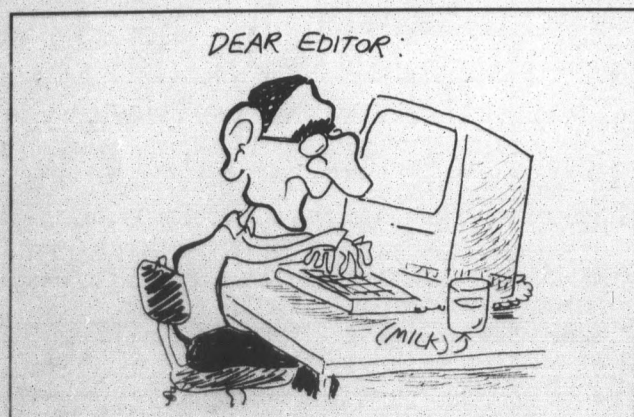

The other comments, regarding his worth and comparing his advance amount to that of Gore and others, are too subjective to be considered. By Pekau's reasoning, then, Stephen King and his $10-million advance means that a King novel is 2.5 times as important to the well-being of this nation as is Gingrich's book. Perhaps this is so.

Fear not, Pekau. Write and think like you do, and you have a long career waiting for you at the Arizona Republic.

Mill Ave. main cash flow from ASU

By ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

Downtown Tempe may welcome all visitors, but the ASU community contributes the largest chunk of money to the area's establishments, according to a report distributed to Tempe city council members Thursday.

According to a report by Donovan Rypkema, an out-of-state advising consultant, the ASU community outspends downtown Tempe workers and residents (not including students) by more than $260 million. The report, presented to the council during its issue review session, said ASU students, staff and faculty spend about $277 million per year on retail, food and beverages, entertainment and recreation in the downtown area. Downtown Tempe workers and residents spend about $13 million.

Because of this, Downtown Tempe Community Inc. must market to the ASU community, said Roger Egan, president of the DTC, a non-profit group that manages downtown businesses.

"That doesn't mean you exclude the rest of the public, but the primary focus is working with the people already here, and then you expand," he said.

In other business, the council discussed changing the alignment of part of the Rio Salado Parkway. Part of the parkway, from Rural Road to College Street, was realigned in August. Another part, about a 3/4-mile stretch from College Street to Farmer Avenue, will be moved south to intersect Mill Avenue at First Street. It currently runs underneath the Mill Avenue bridges.

The realignment was suggested by a task force of city staff and interested community members, said Rod Keeling, executive director of DTC. He said the realignment will extend downtown Tempe's character into the Parkway and give it an urban feel.

"We feel like the alignment as it exists now is a bypass of downtown Tempe," he said. "We wanted to move the street downtown so the development would follow."

The realignment will cost an additional $4 million, but there is no timeline for its completion, said Judy Greenberg, acting deputy public works director. Construction of the alignment will not begin until development dictates it, she said.

$270 billion would be achieved — how much from higher premiums on senior citizens; how much from curbing the rate of increase in payments to doctors and hospitals; and how much from a "look-back" series of controls that would kick in if the other changes failed to produce the desired savings.

Officials said the Congressional Budget Office, the arbiter of these issues, was estimating lower savings than the Republicans from the shift in seniors who would choose lower-cost plans. The result would be to leave Republicans shy of their $270 billion goal, and trigger the so-called "look-back" provisions.

At the same time they looked to doctors and hospitals for much of the savings, Republicans offered provisions long sought by these groups, including limitations on medical malpractice damage awards and relaxation of certain antitrust provisions.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- An unknown man exposed himself to a male student at Hayden Library.
- A man not affiliated with ASU was arrested on an outstanding warrant from the U.S. Marshal's Office for theft of government property. He was turned over to the Marshal's Office and booked.
- Someone damaged a window at Palo Verde Main.
- A man not affiliated with ASU was arrested on an outstanding warrant from Mesa police for shoplifting. He was unable to post bond and was turned over to Mesa police.
- Someone broke into a male student's car parked in Lot 59.
- Someone stole a male student's wallet from the Student Recreation Complex.
- Two male students were contacted in Lot 59 while drag racing. They were warned of reckless driving and told to leave the area.
- Four bicycles were reported stolen.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A man robbed Wendy's, 790 W. Broadway Road. He forced customers and employees into a cooler at gunpoint. He stole $300 from the cash registers and took two customer's purses then fled on foot. He is described as a black male, 16 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall with black hair and brown eyes.
- A 21-year-old woman was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol after an officer saw her hit a traffic sign in the 1700 block of East Rio Salado Parkway. She had a strong odor of alcohol on her breath, bloodshot eyes and slurred speech. She also did poorly on a field sobriety test.
- A 29-year-old woman was arrested for shoplifting at J.C. Penny, 1028 E. Baseline Road. She is an Egyptian citizen on vacation.

Expert: Government cover-up stifles UFO info

By EDDIE DIAZ
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

Like something out of TV's The X-Files, a UFO expert told ASU students that a government conspiracy is keeping news of flying saucers under wraps.

Robert Hastings, an electron microscopist and independent UFO researcher, touched down at the Memorial Union Cinema in a lecture sponsored by Associated Students of ASU. He was paid $1,400 for the lecture, said Marc Wendell, ASASU activities vice president.

Hastings told the crowd of more than 150 students Wednesday that the information he revealed is true and should be taken seriously.

"The only ticket of admission tonight is an open mind," he said at the opening of his speech. "There's more than 10,000 pages of classified information under U.S. security that haven't been looked at. With the help of the Freedom of Information Act, we have retrieved 600 pages of declassified documents (about UFOs)."

The FOIA allows citizens to sue the government, forcing it to release information that is not vital to national security.

Hastings started the presentation with a 30-minute slide show documenting a brief history of UFO sightings. It showed pictures of oval-shaped flying objects and bright lights dating from World War II until the late 70s.

The slide show centered on one fact: Every single photograph was taken above a sensitive nuclear site or U.S. research installation.

Hastings said this may be because UFOs use nuclear power in their travels about the universe.

"There's a definite link between UFOs and nuclear weapons," he said.

After seeing a UFO when he was 17 years old, Hastings' interest in "flying saucers" was launched.

After he graduated from college, he interviewed scores of people who claim to have seen or been abducted by UFOs. He said a lot of people, especially military people, who have sighted UFOs, don't talk because the government forced them into silence.

He has read copies of secret letters from the FBI and CIA to the National Security Council, which he said were recently declassified, that disclose what high-ranking officials saw and how they attempted to intercept UFOs with F-14 fighter planes.

Hastings described a high-speed dog fight in Iran between U.S.-trained F-14 fighter pilots and a UFO mother ship.

He said the mother ship had "little ships coming out the mother's belly." As the fighters approached the ship, their power shut down until they turned away from it. Hastings said the ships then raced by the planes at tremendous speeds, almost colliding with the fighters.

"There's a wealth of evidence out there, and no one has all the answers, but I guarantee that what you saw here tonight is closer to the truth than any government agency's answers," Hastings said. "I leave it to you to decide for yourself."

ASU vs. OREGON ST.

BEAVER HUNT IN TEMPE**

STATE PRESS

Friday, September 22, 1995

Jim Poulin/State Press

The ASU football team, which is still reeling from a 77-28 loss to No. 2 Nebraska last week, wants to vent its frustrations on the Oregon State Beavers Saturday at 7 p.m. at Sun Devil Stadium.

ASU seeks redemption against Oregon State

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

With the carnage in Lincoln still haunting the minds of the ASU football team, there is a feeling of uneasiness as the Sun Devils ready themselves for their first chance at healing the scars.

"I'm embarrassed and embarrassment makes you angry," said ASU senior tailback Chris Hopkins, who, like the rest of the team, still hasn't digested the Sun Devils' 77-28 demise against No. 2 Nebraska last week.

Hopkins and company are hoping to vent their frustrations at the expense of the Oregon State Beavers Saturday at 7 p.m. at Sun Devil Stadium.

"You never go forward looking in the rear-view mirror," said Hopkins. "...It's time to show Tempe what we can do."

The Sun Devils (1-2, 0-1 in the Pac-10) are facing a group of Beavers which is doing some soul searching of its own after dropping games to perennial losers Pacific and little known North Texas last week. The Beavers' (1-2, 0-0 in the Pac-10) only win came against Idaho in their season-opener.

"They will have renewed vigor for our game," maintained ASU Head Coach Bruce Snyder. "They thought they would be 3-0 and maybe 4-0, that was the plan."

ASU has won four of its five last meetings with the Beavers, most recently a 22-16 triumph in last year's season opener at Sun Devil Stadium. ASU has been victorious in 10 straight at home against OSU.

Still Snyder said the Sun Devils need to step up their play or the Beavers could be another chapter in a long season.

"I think if we play like we did against Nebraska then we'll lose most of our games," he said. "We tightened up. We kind of stumbled around. We slowed down. It wasn't just them making us look bad. We were (bad)."

The Sun Devils' last week helped them obtain the less than dubious distinction of being last in the Pac-10 in total defense. ASU allows an average of 457 yards per game and has already given up 16 touchdowns. The Sun Devils also rank last in the Pac-10 in rushing defense, allowing a whopping 5.4 yards per carry.

"I think provided we do well in this game, we're back and we're OK," said Snyder. "Obviously if we struggle with a win or struggle with a loss, we still have some doubts."

Oregon State Coach Jerry Pettibone doesn't believe ASU's recent woes are a good measuring tool.

"What happened to Arizona State against Nebraska is not indicative of Arizona State's abilities," said Pettibone, who is in his fifth season. "I think a lot of quality football teams are going to be in for the same thing when they play them."

On the upside, the Sun Devils, who are tied with the Oregon Ducks for the most touchdowns in the Pac-10 with 12, are second in total offense, averaging 457 yards each game. USC, which hosts ASU next week, is first with a 498-yard average.

The Beavers' wishbone offense revolves around junior option quarterback Don Shanklin. Shanklin has carried the ball 34 times for 156 yards (3.7 ypc) in the first three games. By contrast he has completed only 10 of 35 passes for 133 yards. Snyder said Shanklin's arm is erratic on film, but in the game, he never seems to run out of surprises.

"He looks like a much better passer on the night that I'm coaching against him, than on tape," Snyder joked. "He's fast. They like him to have the ball."

One Sun Devil whom Shanklin will probably become acquainted with quickly is redshirt-freshman free safety Mitchell "Fright Night" Freedman, who will be making his first career start at Sun Devil Stadium.

Freedman's plan of action was simple and to the point. "Kick tail, hit hard and do some damage," he said.

NOTES:
• Snyder said freshman receiver Lenzie Jackson has earned a regular shift in the ASU receiving rotation. He added Jackson could see action as early as the first play from scrimmage.

"He's going to play early," Snyder said of Jackson, who has three catches for 24 yards. "He's really developing. And (quarterback Jake Plummer) has confidence (in him)."

• Junior center Kirk Robertson, who is coming back from a knee injury that sidelined him for the first three games, will not start, but is expected to play. Redshirt-freshman Grey Ruegamer, who started the first three games at center, will get the call again. When Robertson enters the game, Ruegamer will likely move to right tackle, Snyder said.

• Junior rush end Shawn Swayda, who is suffering from an ankle sprain, will dress, but was listed as doubtful as of Thursday, Snyder said. Sophomore Vince Amey is his back-up.

• Chris Hopkins became a father Tuesday when his girlfriend Asina gave birth to a baby girl named Jalyn. In Jalyn's honor, Hopkins had his white socks pulled up over his calf during practice Thursday.

Senior outside hitter Christine Garner and the rest of the No. 11 ASU volleyball team plays host to a pair of Pac-10 foes this weekend. ASU plays Washington at 7 p.m. tonight and Washington State at 5 p.m. Saturday. Both games will be at the University Activity Center.

No. 11 volleyball team prepares for Washington, Washington State

BY DAWN WAGNER
 STATE PRESS

The No. 11 ASU volleyball team (7-0) will put both ends of its game to the test when it faces two Pac-10 rivals today and Saturday at the University Activity Center.

Washington (5-4 overall, 1-1 Pac-10) and Washington State (9-0, 2-0), both ranked in the top 20 nationally, will hit the Sun Devils from all angles, said ASU coach Patti Snyder-Park.

"One is a big net team (Washington) and the other (Washington State) is a short, scrappy team," Snyder-Park said. "We have to play well in both games."

The Sun Devils will face Washington tonight at 7 p.m. in what has been designated the Pac-10 "Game of the Week" by Prime Sports Network. The game will be televised locally on ASPN.

ASU will play the Cougars Saturday at 5 p.m. at the Activity Center.

The Sun Devils expect the Huskies to come at them with their big lineup, said Snyder-Park.

"They set a very high ball," she said. "They have a lot of time to hit the ball and our blocking will have to adjust to that."

Annette Monsen, who is leading the team in blocks with 1.23 a game, said the Sun Devils game will have to adapt to the taller opponents.

"We need to delay our blocking," Monsen said. "They have a lot of tall girls with long arm swing. They also have higher sets because of the size of their girls. We'll have to adjust."

Snyder-Park added she expects the match-up against the Huskies to be the toughest of the weekend, despite Washington State's perfect record.

"Both of them are top 20 teams," Snyder-Park said. "However Washington is potentially the better team. Washington State had an easy preseason and a hot weekend at home."

"We will probably will have a better match with Washington."

Even so, Snyder-Park isn't sure who will give the Sun Devils their biggest challenge until they get out on the court.

"I don't know who we'll match up better with," Snyder-Park said. "It all comes down to how well we can adjust. If we can get into a rally with Washington we'll win and with Washington State we have to overpower them to win."

That isn't stopping the team from thinking ahead to its match-up against the Cougars Saturday.

"On Friday night, we'll begin to think about Washington State," Monsen said. "But we definitely won't look past Washington. That's when teams will take advantage of you — if you're busy looking ahead."

Sun Devil baseball to play intrasquad scrimmage

BY DUSTIN KRUGEL
 STATE PRESS

The ASU baseball team will wear maroon and gold attire one last time as they conclude fall practice with an intrasquad scrimmage opened to the public at 4 p.m. Saturday at Packard Stadium.

"It would be nice. It would be a change," junior infielder

Javier Fuentes said, referring to having some fans to play in front of. "But it's not so much the crowds and stuff, we try to concentrate on what we are doing on the field."

The scrimmage will mark the debut of two of the three talented freshmen left-handed pitchers that signed with ASU. Ron Marietta, who reminds Coach Pat Murphy of New York Mets hard-throwing closer John Franco, will start along with former Horizon High star Ryan Mills of Scottsdale. ASU's third talented southpaw, Phill Lowery, will sit out the game because of recent elbow surgery.

The debut of the youngsters will draw some extra attention to the game, but that was not Murphy's goal.

"We're not really showcasing it for the fans," Murphy

Junior breaststroker Janssen parlays strong work ethic into consistent results in water

BY RON MATEJKO
STATE PRESS

With the loss of many talented swimmers from last season's women's team, Coach Tim Hill will be looking to Cynthia Janssen to pick up some of the slack.

Janssen, a junior, will be asked to improve on her successful sophomore campaign to help the ASU women reach the NCAA Championships.

Hill has set some lofty goals for Janssen this season.

"I'm looking for her to improve on her best times from last year," he said. "She needs to be consistent from day to day (and) week to week. If she can do that she will become even more valuable to the team."

Janssen brings an intense work ethic to the team, Hill said.

"She's a very good worker, and trains very well in practice," he said. "She's getting stronger and is one of the most fit swimmers on the team."

Her hard work is noticed by her teammates, especially Gretchen Verdoorn, who is not only her teammate, but also her roommate. Verdoorn sees first hand what efforts Janssen puts forth.

"She's a very dedicated person who puts everything into what she does," said Verdoorn. "She's a good role model. She puts in a lot of hours, which is really good for the freshman to see."

Janssen doesn't underestimate the value of hard work and consistency. She said her training is important to her.

"I'm the type of person where if I don't have a good workout, I won't have a good meet," Janssen said. "It goes hand and hand. You have to be completely focused, attend all the workouts; no skipping reps in the weight room and no skipping laps in the pool."

"Consistency is the most important thing."

Janssen has set several goals for herself this season. Besides striving to become one of the top swimmers in the Pac-10, she is working toward being a scorer in the NCAA Championships as well as attempting to qualify for the upcoming U.S. Olympic Trials.

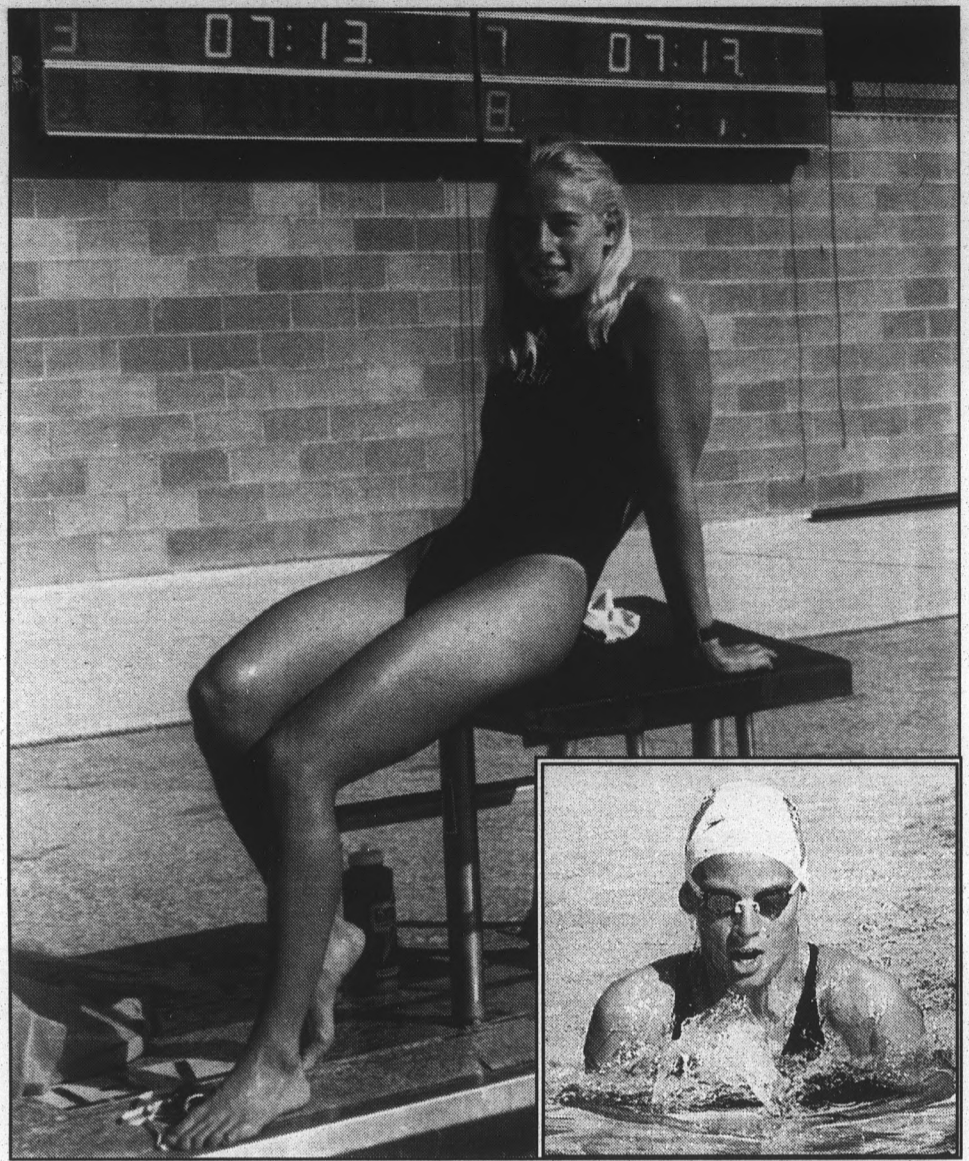

Janssen said she needs to post a pre-determined time to qualify for the Olympic Trials. She said her best event is the 200-meter breaststroke. She is only .5 of a second short of reaching the necessary time.

"I've set my goals above the standards," she said. "If I hit those, it would be icing on the cake."

Janssen participated in the 1992 U.S. Olympic Trials, but didn't post a qualifying time.

Janssen has already set numerous personal bests last season. She posted times that rank her eighth all-time at ASU in the 400 individual medley, and fifth all-time in the 200 breaststroke.

She also qualified for the NCAA Championships last year in the 100 breaststroke and 400 IM. Janssen has qualified for NCAA's two years straight in the 200 breaststroke.

Junior breaststroker Cynthia Janssen, a native of Cincinnati, is hoping to surpass an impressive sophomore campaign this year and may have a shot at competing in the 1996 Summer Olympic Games.

said. "We are opening it up to the fans, so they can come in and see them, but we are still evaluating our team and getting them in game situations."

Murphy said ASU's recruiting class was one of the best in the nation last month.

"It's rated by the magazines as the number one recruiting class in the country, but I don't put a lot of stock into where are recruiting class is rated," Murphy said. "The most important thing is do we have the types of individuals that are ready to make the type of commitment both in the classroom and the field to represent the nation's finest tradition."

Fuentes said fall practice has been a big success because the team is starting to get comfortable with each other and work as a team.

"I just think we're trying to get the team concept and by now, everyone's getting use to each other," Fuentes said. "Now that were more comfortable, we just need to see what we need to do for the future (next spring)."
