ASASU Senate awaits Weber's day in court

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

The Associated Students of ASU Senate will not take any political action against President Chris Weber in connection with misdemeanor assault charges filed against him last Thursday until his trial is complete, an ASASU committee chairman said.

College of Law Senator Sanjay Vidyadaran, Chairman of the Government Operations Committee for ASASU, said that his committee will look into the incident.

"I would like to see more concrete evidence," Vidyadaran said. "It is embarrassing that he was charged for this crime."

He said the Senate remains cautious and will not make any decisions regarding Weber's political future until the trial is over. Some senate members, Vidyadaran said, have met with Weber informally to "express concerns."

Liberal Arts Senator Alex Shivers said the senate is "sitting back and waiting to see what happens."

ASASU Supreme Court Chief Justice Kevin Meyer said the power of impeaching Weber "rests entirely in the hands of the Senate."

WEBER

"Traditionally, impeachment charges are brought for malfeasance ... or the officer's conduct within the office," he said. However, he added that the Senate could conduct impeachment hearings if they saw fit.

Impeachment would involve a hearing of the full Senate, followed by an official vote. A three-quarters vote is needed for removal, Meyer said.

Weber said that he will not resign for something he didn't do.

"The students elected me to do a job," he said, "and I'll do it. I have the truth on my side."

The woman who accuses Weber of punching her during a barroom fight disputed his version of the events.

"Everything that he said was a lie," said Heidi Young, a junior pre-business major, in reference to Weber's comments in Friday's issue of the State Press.

She added that "he was really, really drunk" at the time of the altercation.

Weber said he had four shots of Jägermeister at the bar, but said he was not impaired. Police did not perform a breathalyzer test on him after his arrest. He also denied being involved in the fight.

Weber was arrested on suspicion of assault early Thursday morning after Young filed a complaint with the ASU Department of Public Safety. She said she can't positively identify Weber as the assailant, but has several witnesses who substantiate her claim.

"I honestly cannot say that I saw Chris hit me, I was not expecting to get hit," Young said. "I know for a fact that it was him that hit me. I honestly can't say that I saw his hand hit my face, but from (what) everyone else that was there said, ... it was probably him."

Weber has denied the charge.

"I didn't hit the girl, but I'll be hearing about it for months," he said Thursday.

He will be arraigned Oct. 10 at Tempe Justice Court and said he intends to plead not guilty.

"This will get thrown out of court," Weber said. "Legally, there are holes in her case."

The fight between a few members of Weber's fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha, and a few members from Sigma Phi Epsilon occurred at about 12:30 a.m. at the Dash Inn, 731 E. Apache Blvd. Weber left the bar after the fight and was arrested outside his fraternity house about a half-hour later. Exactly how the fight began is not clear.

ABOR to consider double-discipline undergrad degree

BY CODY V. AYCOCK
STATE PRESS

Choosing a major can be difficult.

Picking a second one can be even more excruciating.

But with the help of a new degree program and a go-ahead from the Arizona Board of Regents, students hoping to study two disciplines might have more options in their future.

The Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies degree would allow students to study two disparate areas from any colleges within the University and still graduate in four years.

"(The degree) is intended to give flexibility to students," said ASU President Lattie Coor. "To give them a chance to work in more than one field and still do it in a normal, four-year or 120-unit program."

Currently, students seeking two degrees must complete the full requirements of each degree program they pursue. This often requires an extended stay at ASU.

The new program would allow students to earn a degree in interdisciplinary studies in 120 hours by completing an abridged version of each program's curriculum.

However, the measure must be approved by the ABOR. Regents are scheduled to vote on the issue at the Sept. 28-29 meeting at ASU.

"As of right now, I leave my (vote) open until the meeting," said student Regent Mark Davis. "I want to make sure I hear all sides, but in concept (the interdisciplinary program) is good."

If approved, the program will be available to students by fall of '96, said Provost Milton Glick.

'Model minority' still faces barriers, Asian students say

BY DAVID J. KOVACS
STATE PRESS

In the debate swirling around minority programs, one group is conspicuously absent — the so-called "model minority."

Student leaders said Asian-American students are too often seen as the "model minority" and therefore don't need help succeeding in mainstream American society.

President of the Asian Business Leaders Association Christi Hing said Asians are often stereotyped as successful students. Magdalene Huang, a counselor at the Minority Assistance Program, said this perception extends to Asian-Americans in the work force when people think of them working in exclusively technical fields.

"In business, the physical barrier is always there," Huang said. Asian-Americans have succeeded in math- and science-intensive professions, she said, but haven't gotten past the "glass ceiling" in other fields.

Hing said many Asians are unwilling to protest this stereotype because of a general cultural attitude that inhibits drawing attention to themselves.

"Many people exaggerate the success of Asians and put us up on a pedestal," Huang said.

Communicating effectively was at the heart of the creation of the ABLA, said founder David Tung.

Currently an ASU graduate student in business, Tung started the ABLA in 1994 to provide Asian students an opportunity to develop their leadership and public speaking skills and to meet with Asian business leaders.

"Sometimes we need to see people in positions of success before we can see ourselves in those positions," Tung said.

"There is a perception that Asians don't need help because we don't ask for help," Hing said.

Although the stereotype of the successful Asian student has a basis in fact, it doesn't represent the whole story, Huang said.

"Asians are a pragmatic people," she said, adding that many see education as the only way to find success in America.

Asian parents have significant influence in their child's future, Huang said. Many Asian students followed their immigrant parents' technically-oriented career path.

But Huang said the persistent stereotype places unfair expectations on Asian students, many of whom enter the country under unfavorable conditions.

The origins of the Asian student stereotype started after 1965, she said, following an aggressive push in the United States to recruit mathematicians and scientists.

Most Asians entering the country at that time were educated professionals, she said.

Weber

According to Young, the altercation began when Weber spilled a drink on her at the bar at about 12:30 a.m. He grew belligerent when two friends of the woman told him to be careful with his drink, she said.

Weber left and returned shortly with two friends, she said. He and his friends then attacked her and her friends, Young said.

"They started yelling, and then punches started being thrown," she said. "Chris started the whole thing ... he started throwing punches.

"Chris was the last person that I saw before I got hit. He was right in my face."

Weber, who was at the bar celebrating his twenty-fifth birthday, said the fight began when his younger brother, T.J., who is also a Pi Kappa Alpha member, was "sucker punched" in the nose. Prompted by bouncers at the Dash, the combatants moved the altercation outside into the parking lot of Rothers University Book Store, Weber said.

He said he thought his brother had a broken nose, and all he wanted to do was get him out of the bar. When the fighting continued outside, he said Pi Kappa Alpha members pushed him into a bush to avoid trouble and rushed him from the scene.

Degree

Students enrolled under the degree program would have to complete ASU's required English classes, 29 hours of general studies and 22 to 23 hours of electives. The remainder of the curriculum would revolve around 40 to 51 hours of studies in two areas of emphasis and 12 hours of specially-designed, interdisciplinary core classes.

The core classes are designed to teach students about the 21st century workplace and critical methods of thinking, said Ronald Alvarado, associate dean of extended education.

Officials see the program as an important aspect of future curriculum designs and hope the diverse education that students receive will better prepare them for the changing needs of employers, Coor said.

"Increasingly, we realize that preparing for just a single field is really not adequate in a highly fluctuating environment," he said.

Daniel Landers, the ASU faculty academic assembly president, said students who earn interdisciplinary degrees will be in higher demand when they enter the work force.

"I think interdisciplinary type of work, interdisciplinary type of study and interdisciplinary type of research is the Weber said that he did not hit anyone during the altercation.

"I didn't even know that a girl was hit until I was in handcuffs," he said.

Weber said Sigma Phi Epsilon members pinned the assault on him to get back at his fraternity and because he has such a high profile as the Associated Students of ASU president.

"(The) easy way to get to us (Pi Kappa Alpha) was through me," he said. "I'm high profile and I have the most to lose."

"They set me up real nice."

Young said that she didn't realize Weber's identity until later.

"I didn't even know his name," Young said. "I didn't know he was ASASU president. I didn't even know that he was a Pike (Pi Kappa Alpha member)."

Weber approached Young Thursday night and, according to her, "begged" her to make a statement saying that she could not positively identify him as the assailant.

Weber said that during the meeting, she was unable to look him in the eye and positively say that it was him who hit her.

wave of the future," he said. "(Employers) want people who have multiple skills. People that train themselves that way, my guess is, will be one step ahead of those who don't."

Arizona's three universities currently offer interdisciplinary studies programs, but they only allow students to study in one college. ASU's program would be unique in allowing students to combine disciplines from any college within the University — for example, a degree that includes fine arts and engineering.

Officials hope the degree will attract transfer students and others who are not satisfied with studying in one area, Landers said.

"We are hoping it will appeal to a lot of people who can't find a niche in existing programs," he said. "(Students who) can't make up their minds about this or that (degree), this type of program may be the place where these people can go and still get out of the University in four years."

Despite his enthusiasm, Coor said he realizes the program still needs approval from the ABOR.

"I am hopeful they will be supportive," he said.

Around Arizona

Poll: 25% say Symington should quit as governor

PHOENIX (AP) — While half of Arizonans say their opinion of Gov. Fife Symington as a leader hasn't changed with his filing for personal bankruptcy, one-quarter of them think Symington should resign, a poll shows.

The poll, conducted for The Arizona Republic and The Phoenix Gazette newspapers, also showed that twice as many people said they wouldn't reelect Symington as those who said they would.

The statewide poll, conducted by Innovative Query Inc., was taken Thursday and Friday following Symington's announcement on Wednesday that he would file for Chapter 7 bankruptcy. It is based on telephone conversations with 400 people.

Fifty-two percent of those interviewed said their confidence in Symington's ability to lead the state had not been shaken by the bankruptcy filing, while 42 percent said it had. Six percent said they didn't know.

Fifty-six percent of those polled said they would not vote for Symington, while 27 percent said they would. Seventeen percent were undecided.

Forty percent of respondents said the bankruptcy filing overshadowed Symington's record as a governor, but 46 percent said it did not.

Symington spokesman Doug Cole said the governor's only response to the poll was typical of his feeling toward all public opinion polls: "The only poll that counts is at the ballot box," Cole said.

Cole would not say whether Symington had decided whether to run again, adding that the governor is focusing on policy initiatives he plans to introduce when the legislative session begins in January.

Trial starting for youth charged with murder

GILBERT (AP) — The trial is starting in the case of one of the youngest people in Maricopa County history to face the possibility of the death penalty.

Charles Vincent Wagner, 17, is charged with first-degree murder and armed robbery for allegedly pumping five bullets into Anique "Nickie" Fater in June 1994 in the parking lot of a Smitty's store.

Police say Wagner and Michael Thomas Gibson, who were both 16 at the time of the shooting, came to the parking lot to steal purses. When they approached Fater, she began screaming and Wagner shot her in a panic, police said.

According to a search warrant affidavit, police quote Wagner as saying: "She was screaming too loud and I have a hair-trigger and I tapped it and it went off and hit her in the back of the neck. So I just unloaded it and then we took off."

Fater, a past president of the Gilbert High School marching band's booster club, died at the scene.

The trial is scheduled to start Monday with jury selection.

Ordered to stand trial as adults, both Gibson and Wagner had a history of referrals to the juvenile court system, although neither had a record of violent offenses.

Associated Press

Israeli soldiers detain a young Palestinian suspected of stone throwing during clashes in the occupied West Bank town of Hebron. Clashes erupted after PLO leader Yasser Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres agreed to extend autonomy to Palestinians in the West Bank and end 28 years of Israeli occupation in major Arab cities. Long hours of talks between Peres and Arafat focused on Hebron, where 450 Jewish settlers live amidst 120,000 Palestinians.

West Bank agreement reached

Tense talks bring end to Israeli occupation

TABA, Egypt (AP) — After all-night talks, a shouting match and an angry walk-out by Yasser Arafat, Israel and the PLO agreed Sunday to sign a pact at the White House ending nearly three decades of Israeli occupation of West Bank cities.

The agreement, the second phase of the 1993 Israel-PLO peace treaty, was hailed by Palestinian leaders as a major step toward their own state. Other Palestinians said it gave them too little, and militant Jewish settlers vowed to do anything necessary to scuttle it.

The 460-page pact allows for Palestinian self-rule in 30 percent of the West Bank — containing most of its Arab population — after a step-by-step Israeli pullout. Israel has occupied the lands since the 1967 Mideast War.

The plan also allows for Palestinian elections.

The accord was initialed in Taba, an Egyptian resort on the Red Sea, by the chief negotiators, Ahmed Qureia of the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel's Uri Savir, just before the Jewish New Year holiday. The signing in Washington is set for Thursday.

"We will work so that this new year will be a real year of peace," said Arafat, the PLO chairman. "This agreement will open the door for a better future ... to create a new Middle East of security and peace."

The agreement followed nightlong talks that capped more than 80 hours of tense negotiations. Earlier Sunday, a shouting match erupted between Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and the PLO leader stormed out.

Arafat was angry that Israel refused to expand the borders of the self-rule enclave in Jericho. There were also reports he wanted a more specific timetable for the release of about 5,000 Palestinians in Israeli jails.

But Arafat relented after Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin promised to discuss the prisoner issue in Washington before Thursday's signing. Palestinian sources said. Other officials said talks got back on track after intervention by U.S. Mideast coordinator Dennis Ross and Egyptian officials.

Peres called the accord "history in the real meaning of the word."

"It is a tremendous attempt to bring people that were born in the same cradle, who were fighting on the same fronts, to agree on a new future," he said.

President Clinton called the agreement "a big step on the road to a just and lasting peace in the Middle East" and added he would gladly host a signing ceremony at the White House.

Extremists on both sides, however, pledged to wreck the accord.

Militant Jewish settlers warned of bloodshed and vowed violent opposition. And as news of the pact spread in the West Bank, Palestinian youths hurled stones at Israeli soldiers in two cities. In Nablus, a youth was killed in a fourth day of clashes.

GOP stance splitting on endangered species

WASHINGTON (AP) — A handful of Eastern Republicans is mounting opposition to Western GOP leaders' proposal to weaken the Endangered Species Act, and the Clinton administration is tilting toward the defectors' more moderate reforms.

"The Endangered Species Act is a powerful tool for maintaining biodiversity and preserving ecosystems," says Rep. Wayne Gilchrest, R-Md.

Gilchrest and Rep. Connie Morella, R-Md., introduced a bill in the House last week that would maintain most of the fish and wildlife protections in the 22-year-old act.

Unlike the Westerners' proposal, their bill would continue to ban destruction of threatened and endangered species' habitat, even on private lands.

The Westerners' bill, sponsored by Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, chairman of the House Resources Committee, and Rep. Richard Pombo, R-Calif., would exempt most privately owned habitat and move some currently protected species off the list.

Pombo said their bill "represents a dramatic and fundamental reform of the existing law by recognizing that the key to protecting threatened or endangered species is through incentives and rewards, not threats and fines."

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., has introduced a bill with

French village in shock after teen's killing spree

TOULON, France (AP) — Fresh from murdering his parents and brother in their home, a teenager walked to the next village Sunday and calmly opened fire on a quiet town square, killing eight more people before turning the gun on himself.

The murder-suicide in southern France was the country's worst multiple killing since 1989.

"It was like he was hunting birds," said Guy Sintès, the owner of a cafe on the square in Cuers, a sunny village near the Mediterranean port of Toulon.

Television footage from the scene showed sidewalks and a car spattered with blood and a bullet hole through a shop window.

"The people are devastated, totally traumatized. The village is in shock," said Cuers Mayor Guy Gigou.

The boy was identified as Eric Borel, 16, but the impetus for the killings was unclear. Neighbors of his family, interviewed on French television, described him as taciturn and said his room was plastered with posters of Hitler and neo-Nazi themes.

Villagers with eyes red from crying sat on the ground, shaking their heads as they recalled traumatic scenes: An old woman shot as she walked her dog, an elderly man gunned down on his way to the cafe.

Two victims were killed while withdrawing money from a cash machine and another while playing boules, the Provençal bowling game, on the village square.

"He was very calm, very poised. He put the gun to his shoulder, held his gun steady, adjusted his aim and fired," Sintès said.

The tragedy of ignorance

When a young life is snuffed out, it is always a tragedy.

When the young life was so bright and giving — and when the death was so needless — it goes from tragedy to despicable.

Despicable is the only word we can think of to describe the way that Mark Sauer died — and why he died.

Sauer, a prominent gay activist on campus, died of AIDS complications Sept. 17. But don't let the cause of death fool you — Sauer died because someone was ignorant and cruel enough to pump three bullets into his leg for the unforgivable crime of being homosexual.

To aid recovery from the wound, Sauer was forced off treatments that held his HIV infection in check. When those treatments halted, the virus overwhelmed his defenses and took his life.

Many people assume that the gay and lesbian community exaggerates when it talks of persecution. Sauer's death is proof enough that the persecution is very real.

Even more shocking, such persecution is accepted by many people — people that view homosexuality as "unnatural" or an "abomination before God."

Open racism is taboo in society today — but gay bashing is not. In fact, many members of the Congressional majority unabashedly practice it — and enforce it with such actions as fighting to keep gays out of the military.

One member of the House leadership, Rep. Dick Armey (R-Tex.), even thought it was a cute joke to refer to Rep. Barney Frank as "Barney Fag."

Whipped into an anti-gay frenzy, some people even begin interpreting Leviticus 20:13 literally — a commandment ordering that gay men be executed. (Of course, Leviticus also recommended execution for sex outside of marriage — but people don't go running around shooting any college couple holding hands.)

We've grown up a lot since then — and we should know better by now.

Homosexuality is far from a lifestyle choice — it is as much a part of a person and as unchangeable as a person's race. (Yes, studies have proven this, over and over.)

It is both hypocritical and wrong to say that you aren't prejudiced against anyone — and then to treat someone differently because of their sexual orientation.

By judging someone purely for their sexual orientation — rather than for who they really are — we create an environment of hatred and intolerance. And it is in this environment that people like Mark Sauer die.

Even if sexual orientation was a conscious lifestyle choice, why should anyone care about it?

How can something that someone else does in the privacy of their bedroom affect you personally, if it doesn't involve you at all?

Making fun of someone because they are gay doesn't make you stronger — it only shows that you yourself are insecure about your own sexuality.

Let's stop the hatred and the intolerance. Begin seeing people for who they are, rather than who they date.

And let us hope that Mark Sauer is the last man to pay with his life for being who he was.

Wake up ASU — Time to join the 'real' world

As I sit here at my computer and try to decide which issue I should address next, I realize something ... it doesn't matter what I write about because it will have no effect on anyone on this campus except the Native Americans. The only emotions it might invoke from the rest is annoyance: "God, there she goes again, bitching about how bad they have it."

It seems that people are more interested in getting Pearl Jam tickets or going out and getting drunk. Those are the important issues around here. Who cares about hunger, racism or anything else as long as it doesn't stop the concert or the party?

What is so scary about this is that these people will one day be in positions of power throughout this country.

Maybe this is why I have such a hard time getting my articles printed ... because they aren't as important as bicycles on campus or getting the latest CD.

No one wants to face the "real" world. No one wants to come out of their daydreams long enough to realize that this nation has a lot of problems and they aren't going to go away just because someone gets those all-important Pearl Jam tickets.

People don't want to get involved anymore. They want to stay in their lily-white castles and pretend that everything is perfect. They pretend not to see the corruption or the hatred. They pretend that there is no hunger, no homelessness, no murder, no racism. As long as they can feed their family and keep roofs over their heads, then why be concerned with some nameless, faceless person? As long as they can get rich and live the "American Dream," who cares what is happening around them?

TINA HOLDER
Columnist

People think that the problems facing Native Americans and other minorities are not that serious. These people have never been on a reservation, have never been in a ghetto. They have never seen what it is like to try and live in a country that wants to forget that you exist. They don't know what it is like to watch their culture, religion and people slowly die. What's worse ... they don't care.

I hear people talk about "morals" a lot these days. Is it morally right to let something that you know is wrong go unchallenged? Does your God teach you that if it doesn't effect you, then don't worry about it?

I hear people say how terrible something is and then say that there is nothing they can do to help. I hear people admit that a situation is wrong but that's the way it has been for hundreds of years. Does that make it right? Get off your butts and do something to change it!

Have people become so self-centered that nothing bothers them unless it effects them personally?

Do people really not care that others are being treated as if they were no better than dirt?

Does anyone care that there are people living in third-world conditions, children killing children, genocide, corrupt officials, racism?

Must it affect a person personally before they decide that it is wrong and should be stopped?

Or is it that they don't want to believe that the things I write about can really happen in "the land of milk and honey?"

It isn't my problem, they can handle it themselves, they deserve it, why should I help them ... these are all excuses that people use to keep from getting involved.

What if this country had used those excuses when Hitler was in power?

Tina Holder is a senior justice studies major.

Hit men can't be found in mail-order catalogs

Many years ago, there was an unusual murder case in Chicago. Male body parts began turning up in different locations on the Northwest Side. A foot here, a thigh there and so on.

Finally, a hand was found and the fingerprints were traced to a man who was no longer seen around his neighborhood.

The police questioned his wife, a small, quiet, middle-aged Polish immigrant.

She soon confessed and told the story. Her husband had been a cruel man who drank heavily and regularly beat her.

After years of being punched around by the lout, she couldn't take it anymore. So one day, she defended herself by whacking him on the head with her electric iron. He fell dead.

Fearing that the law would not understand her predicament, she decided to get rid of the body. But her husband was a big, heavy man and she couldn't lift him, much less carry him to a suitable hiding place.

So she sawed him into lighter, more manageable parts, wrapped them in wax paper, put them in her shopping bag and carried them to distant garbage cans and ash bins.

But during her trial, the prosecutor was convinced that she had an accomplice. And he hammered at that point, finally asking her:

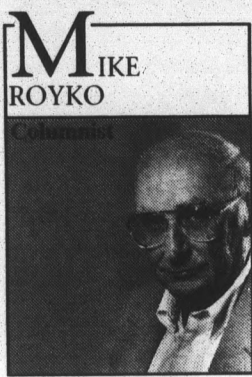

"Didn't you have someone help you do this?"

And with a genuinely puzzled expression, she said: "Where do you find that kind of help?"

That was a good question then, and it is a good question today. That particular kind of help is hard to find.

If you are a regular newspaper reader, you have probably noticed a certain type of crime story that appears with strange regularity.

A woman will decide that for one reason or another she is no longer content with her marriage. Or she and her husband have split up but can't agree on the terms of the divorce.

So she decides that bumping him off is the best way to resolve the problem.

The question is, how to do it? The answer is get help. So she shops around for a hit man.

Then we open the paper and read about how she has been arrested after offering money to some guy who turns out to be an undercover cop.

It is amazing how many suburban undercover cops seem to spend their time waiting for a disgruntled woman to offer them money to do a murder.

Last year, it was a woman doctor who wanted her husband, also a doctor, knocked off.

She finally got a guy to accept the job. He promptly informed her that he was really a Naperville, Ill. cop and that she was under arrest.

Before that, there was the St. Charles, Ill. woman who wanted her businessman husband done away with. Her "hit man" also turned out to be an undercover cop.

The same thing happened to a woman in Wisconsin who decided that her husband was worth more dead — $220,000 in insurance money — than alive. Another undercover cop spoiled her plan.

There was a slightly different twist to the case of an Elgin, Ill. woman. She wanted her married boyfriend murdered because he had dumped her and returned to his wife.

Who did she hire for the hit? An undercover sheriff's deputy.

A woman in Chicago's Lakeview neighborhood got tired of being knocked about by her abusive husband, so she put out the word that she wanted him knocked off.

The "hit man" was an undercover state police investigator.

There was the Bolingbrook, Ill. woman who decided she would be a lot happier with her husband's insurance money than with the husband.

She retained the services of — what else? — an undercover cop.

And you might remember the woman from Chicago's Bridgeview area who said her husband regularly thumped her. To put an end to the abuse, she sought out a hired killer.

But when the agreement was reached, he revealed himself as an undercover Bridgeview cop, and she went to jail.

All of these cases have happened in the last five years. It's becoming so common that I suspect every suburb has at least one cop who does nothing but hang around the local bars posing as a ne'er-do-well and waiting for an unhappy female to offer him a few thou to bump off her spouse.

And it makes one wonder if women really deserve their reputation as smart, careful shoppers, always finding quality at bargain prices.

Or is it simply another sign of the modern need for instant gratification — an unwillingness to take the time needed to feed him high-sodium, cholesterol-rich foods and let Mother Nature do the job.

So it appears that the Polish lady's question is still relevant: "Where do you find that kind of help?"

After years of being punched around by the lout, she couldn't take it anymore. So one day, she defended herself by whacking him on the head with her electric iron. He fell dead.

You just can't. So my advice to women who might be thinking along those lines is to heed the words of a soft-hearted lawyer who once said:

"You got to give divorce a chance."

Abortion issue relevant to men

This is a response to Mimi Carrión, regarding her letter to the editor in which she complained about Bryce Morgan's editorial cartoon of Sept. 13. Carrión was mistaken in some of her remarks, and a few of these need to be pointed out.

First of all, Carrión claims that men are irrelevant to the abortion discussion because they are unable to get pregnant. Of course, this bias goes directly against the principles of democracy and should be discarded as faulty logic.

Moreover, I am disappointed that Carrión is upset with Morgan because he is a man, considering over half of the pro-life movement is female. I wonder how Carrión would have reacted had a woman cartoonist submitted the cartoon.

In the same paragraph, Carrión states that Morgan's "parallel between the Chinese government's use of methods to kill babies and woman's right to choose is way off."

How? Is there truly a fundamental difference between a two-week premature baby and an eight-and-a-half-month-old fetus? Carrión apparently thinks so.

Clearly Bryce Morgan shouldn't be scared by her threat to keep him "out of my uterus."

Unfortunately, an unborn child should. Ironically enough, Carrión mentions women's suffrage in her last paragraph. Ms. Carrión, are you aware of the unanimous hatred of abortion by those very same suffragists?

Elizabeth Cady Stanton once said: "When we consider that women are treated as property, it is degrading to women that we should treat our children as property to be disposed of as we see fit."

Was she trying to "make decisions for women"? It is more likely that she, like me, saw that the single most important gift one can give to the world is the life of a child. Wouldn't you feel the same?

Trading places 40 years later

I found it somewhat ironic that 40 years after the tragic incident described by Les Payne that the pendulum seems to have swung 180 degrees.

A prominent news story at the moment concerns the trial of a black man accused of the grisly murder of two white people. Apparently "most" of the Black community has sided with the defendant and has ignored the fate of the victims. Also as in the 1950 trial, the current defense lawyers are purporting a conspiracy theory to question the incriminating evidence. Of course I'm sure I'll be labeled as a racist for this opinion.

Justice O'Connor relates tangles in judicial system

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor outlined problems facing the law community at the ASU Law Society's dinner Friday to a crowd of 600, including Gov. Fife Symington.

"The big problem facing the courts is how to cope with the increasing case loads," O'Connor said.

She proposed the exploration of possible alternatives to resolve disputes that normally clog the judicial system.

She also pointed to jury reform as a prominent issue facing the legal community.

"Juries usually do a good job," O'Connor said, "but they can disappoint to the point of questioning if we should have jury trials."

She said that the conditions that jury members serve in are unacceptable.

"Juries are treated more like sheep than people," she said.

She also suggested the judicial system make better use of emerging technology.

"Computers can improve the judicial system," she said. "and make services cheaper and more efficient for clients."

She pointed to the Maricopa County Court as an example of a "court of the future."

O'Connor suggested the development of a "Quick Court" system that would allow people to compose basic legal documents. This system should be placed in areas readily accessible to the general public and utilize touch-screens to simplify operation, she said. She also hoped it would provide English and Spanish instructions.

However, her proposed "Quick Court" would not replace lawyers, she said.

O'Connor, who was appointed the Supreme Court in 1981 by then-President Ronald Reagan, is the first woman to be appointed to the high court. She served as an Arizona state senator from 1969 to 1975 and was the first woman to hold the position of Senate Majority leader.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents this weekend:

- A vehicle sustained $350 in damage while it was parked in Lot 42.
- A bicycle was stolen from a bicycle store in the Tempe Center. Loss is estimated at $1,399.
- Police contacted a man who was harassing people as they passed through the area of Cady and Orange malls. The man left the area after being advised of harassing, trespassing and loitering laws.
- Someone shoplifted $44.46 in merchandise from Stabler's Market in the Tempe Center.
- A 1986 Pontiac Firebird was stolen from Parking Structure 5. The car was recovered in Marana, Ariz.

- A male student harassed the front desk staff at Manzanita Hall. The man left the area after being advised of trespass and harassment policies.
- A male student was arrested on an outstanding warrant for failing to appear on trespassing and loitering charges from ASU DPS. The man was unable to post bond of $471 and was booked into the Madison Street Jail.
- A student's car was broken into at 714 Alpha Drive. Two speakers and about 20 CDs were stolen.
- A portable breath test was lost at Rural and Broadway roads.

many of the same concepts in the Senate. He also wants to change the definition of "harm" prohibited in the current law to exclude protection of a species' habitat on private land.

Rep. James Saxton, R-N.J., said during a hearing on the Young-Pombo bill last week that private lands sometimes hold the key to many species' survival. "Habitat protection is necessary for many, in fact most, species," Saxton said.

Other Republicans already co-sponsoring the Gilchrest-Morella bill are Reps. Sherwood Boehlert of New York, Michael Castle of Delaware, Christopher Shays of Connecticut, and Jim Greenwood and Curt Weldon, both of Pennsylvania.

Environmentalists said they were encouraged by the crack in GOP support for dramatic changes in the act. Gilchrest and Morella have offered "a true alternative" to the Young-Pombo bill, said John Kostyack, a lawyer for the National Wildlife Federation.

"Although this bill by no means captures the National Wildlife Federation's wish list, we believe that it is a very positive contribution to the Endangered Species Act debate," he said.

Assistant Interior Secretary George Frampton Jr. suggested to the House Resources Committee last week that President Clinton would veto the Young-Pombo bill.

The bill ends the requirement that the government do everything in its power to save all species from extinction. It also includes a provision requiring the federal government to pay private land owners anytime wildlife protection causes the value of their property to decline by more than 20 percent.

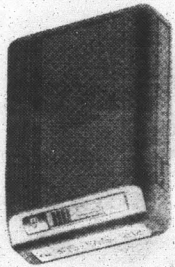

Clinton has pledged to veto any such compensation legislation, Frampton said. He said the administration is interested in proposals like Gilchrest's, or a plan promoted by the Western Governor's Association.

Professor selects pay cut in protest

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An Ohio State University professor has donated $1,000 of his salary each of the past four years to protest other educators' big paychecks.

This year, William Eldridge's donation is going to Gene Goudy, a 61-year-old janitor who makes $14,000 a year.

"I'm redistributing it to a janitor to illustrate how difficult it is for these people to make a living," said Eldridge, a sociology professor who earns $46,392 after his voluntary reduction.

Eldridge was angered this year by a 31 percent pay raise that OSU President Gordon Gee received from university trustees. Gee now makes $220,000.

In previous years, Eldridge's $1,000 has gone to the university's general fund, the lowest-paid staff member at the OSU's College of Social Work, and the college's Black Student Association.

Goudy is all for the professor's protest.

"I think it's great," he said. "I wish there were more people who would do this. It's awful thoughtful of him."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Sydney Omarr

Monday, September 25, 1995

Remember the Alamo: It was 1836, at a Franciscan mission building in San Antonio, Texas under siege by Mexicans, where Davy Crockett became a national hero. Many people know about the adventures and myth of the great Leo bear hunter and outdoorsman who was Davy Crockett. His life immortalized by a long-running television series, Crockett was not only an expert marksman, he also published almanacs making clear his respect for astrology.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Feel free to ask, challenge, engage in clash of ideas. Don't be shy about proclaiming feelings, love — Virgo individual will be receptive. Focus on communication, reading, writing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Go slow. By playing waiting game you ultimately win. Focus on harmony, music, domestic adjustment including where you live, marital status. Employment picture subject to change — for better.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar position highlights vitality, adventure, discovery, physical attraction. Maintain aura of mystery, don't tell all, don't confide. Be approachable only by people who do care for you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check repair work, be positive concerning arithmetic, don't let invoices age. Attention revolves around home, glamour, property value, marriage. Capricorn declares, "You're tops with me!"

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fame spreads! Spotlight on universal appeal, larger audience, vigorous selling campaign for product, talent. Dismiss one who constantly complains "It's impossible!" Aries proves valuable ally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Time for fresh start! Money available. Know where, when to look. Imprint style, be independent, creative, risk-taking. Wear bright colors, speak out, appear before media. Leo involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle high, what eluded you just a short while ago suddenly becomes available. Intuition honed to razor sharpness. Follow instincts, your heart. Cancer native and an Aquarian figure in colorful scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lighten load! Stop worrying about something you can't do anything about — engage in social activity tonight. Secret meeting brings to light shenanigans. Sagittarian in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obtain hint from Scorpio message. Check references, individual who you says you are over-qualified is merely postponing showdown. Ultimately your desires are fulfilled. Taurus plays role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Communicate, distribute information, fight for rights, refuse to compromise principles. Moon position highlights leadership, promotion, receipt of unique honor. Libra assures, "You deserve it!"

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Exciting journey relates to special study, assignment. Blend romance with travel, soul mate discovered in not too distant future. Domestic adjustment includes marital status. Music plays!

PISCES (Feb.-19-March 20): Some comment, "You seem to be here, there, everywhere!" Keep them guessing, utilize elements of surprise, timing. Find out who is for you and who is not. Virgo, another Pisces represented.

IF SEPTEMBER 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are idealistic, your own most severe critic. You also are psychic, sensitive, fascinated by mantic arts, sciences. You are drawn to theater, motion pictures, are capable of creating illusion for entertainment, enlightenment. Pisces, Virgo persons play significant roles in your life. During October, change of scene coincides with flirtation, chance meeting that could influence your fate. Major domestic adjustment in November, including marital status.

Snyder relieved game with Beavers history

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

What's the best way to irritate a football team and give a coaching staff some gray hairs? Play the Oregon State Beavers.

After ASU's 20-11 victory over the Beavers Saturday night at Sun Devil Stadium, Head Coach Bruce Snyder equated what had transpired with going to the dentist.

"You come out and you're teeth are fixed so that's a positive," he said. "But it's not a lot of fun."

Snyder concluded that Oregon State, with its pesky option offense, unorthodox formations and unpredictable defenses, was a game he is glad to have behind him.

"You like this one in your rear-view mirror," said Snyder, whose Sun Devils (2-2, 1-1 in the Pac-10) next face No. 5 USC Saturday in Los Angeles. "It's so awkward to play. It takes you out of all the things you've been coaching for months. I think you saw two teams that really needed that win. That was a hard Oregon State team to play."

Snyder added the Beavers (1-3, 0-1 in the Pac-10) saved their best performance so far this season for ASU.

"Oregon State played hard. That's the best they've played all year," he said. "And we did too I think. That was probably our best 'effort' game. It wasn't our most efficient, but it was our best effort, which was really one of the objectives coming out of the first three games. We needed to pick up the tempo."

With the powerful Trojans up next, ASU, which will be a big underdog, could use any edge it can get. One small victory is the Oregon State game film might as well be on Beta, because it's useless to USC, Snyder said.

"This tape will not help (USC) very much because Oregon State does everything different than everybody else," he said. "That punt formation (Oregon State used) was popular in the 1940's."

The Sun Devils looked nothing short of brilliant on their first possession, showcasing an explosive five-wide receiver package, which the Beavers could do nothing to stop. It took ASU only five plays and 1:44 to march 80 yards for the opening score, a 33-yard reverse to freshman Ricky Boyer.

"We were tentative at the beginning of the game," said Oregon State Coach Jerry Pettibone.

"You have to play a team like Arizona State from the very first down. You can't wait until you have a drive behind you. This is the best football team we've played in our four games."

For the remainder of the game, though, ASU chose to keep the ball on the ground, finishing with 173 yards rushing on 42 attempts. Snyder said one reason he returned to the run was to give his defense a breather. After all, they spent the better part of the evening trying to decipher the Beavers' wishbone offense, which usually left them chasing quarterbacks Don Shanklin and Tim Alexander from sideline to sideline.

"Our defense was so tired," Snyder said. "I wanted to have some runs to take the time off the clock and save the defense... We have all 11 running to the ball and they don't. The whole defense gets tired."

With ASU's defense working overtime Saturday, several Sun Devils stepped into the spotlight with inspired playmaking. Snyder said sophomore defensive end Malchi Crawford, redshirt freshmen safeties Mitchell Freedman and Damien Richardson, senior cornerback Lee Cole, junior linebacker Ron McCook, senior defensive end Mike Langridge and kickers Marcus Williams and Robert Nycz made notable contributions.

Richardson, who finished with nine tackles and a fumble recovery, played every defensive snap and about 21 kicking plays, giving him almost 96 snaps on the night, Snyder said.

"That's a long night and he did a nice job," he said.

McCook, meanwhile, caught Snyder's attention on the sideline in the third quarter after making a few tactical observations.

"McCook you could say almost saved our bacon," Snyder said of the second-string linebacker, who recorded six stops. "He understood this defensive adjustment that we needed to make, then boom and he made it. He made some key tackles. He really made some key plays."

Freedman, who thrives on playing with pain, made nine tackles and recovered a fumble in spite of a cast on his hand and two shoulder stingers, the second of which left him lying on the sideline in the fourth quarter. He is expected to play against USC, Snyder said.

"There's a manliness involved in the whole thing," Snyder said, referring to Freedman's high threshold for pain. "He's a tough sucker."

NOTES:

- Sophomore starting defensive tackle Jason Reynolds came out playing like a man possessed, then he suffered a sprained ankle, and the Sun Devils sorely missed him, Snyder said.

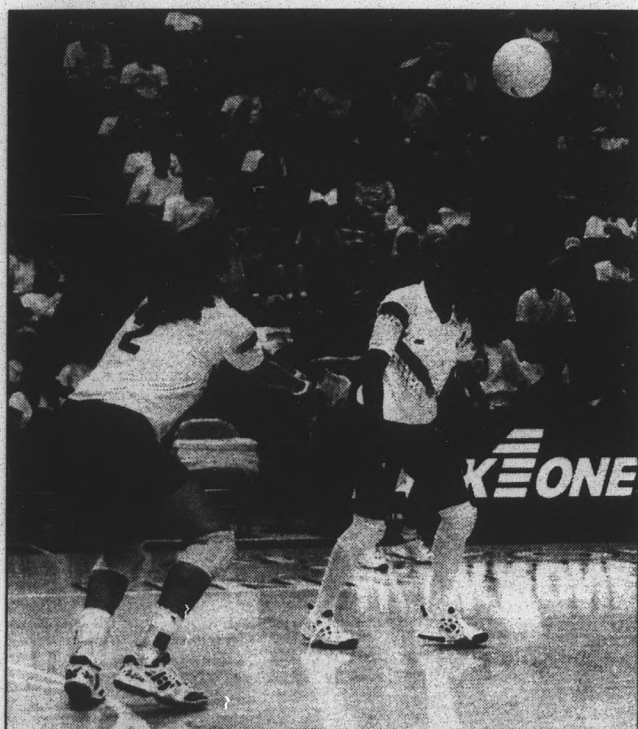

- "When Jason Reynolds was in there early, man he was a wrecking crew," raved Snyder. "He looked like he was on target to have one of those games you really remember then he got hurt. We weren't as effective without him."

- Sophomore left guard Kyle Murphy suffered a sprained knee and may miss three to four games, Snyder said. Freshman Mike Barnes will be his likely replacement. Junior center Kirk Robertson played only a few downs toward the end of the game. Robertson, who is coming off a knee injury which caused him to miss the first three games, is still not full strength. Redshirt freshman Grey Ruegamer has started at center for the first four games. Ruegamer could move to right tackle if Robertson returns, but nothing is final, Snyder said.

- "It all hinges on Kirk," he said, adding that freshman Randy Leaphart could see more playing time.

- Close observers of Saturday's game may have noticed No. 14 for ASU nearing several punt blocks. That job has become sophomore O.J. Flowers' specialty.

Senior co-captain Christine Garner (2) and sophomore Terri Cox and the rest of the volleyball team swallowed their first losses of the season over the weekend to Washington and Washington State at the University Activity Center.

Errors galore weaken ASU volleyball team

BY DAWN WAGNER
STATE PRESS

After suffering two losses at home over the weekend against top-20 teams, the ASU volleyball team is going back to the drawing board.

Sun Devil coach Patti Snyder-Park said the team's inconsistencies were its downfall against both Washington and Washington State.

"We are making way too many errors," she said. "and the bad part is that we're not only making errors but we're making the same errors over and over again."

"(Friday) night it was whoever won was making the least amount of errors but against Washington State, they were the better team because they didn't make errors."

She said the team will be tackling accountability drills all week to prepare for its away trip next weekend.

"We were a very high error team this weekend and volleyball is a game of errors," Snyder-Park said.

ASU lost to Washington 3-2 (11-15, 15-12, 6-15, 15-5, 12-15) Friday night and was defeated by Washington State 3-1 (15-9, 8-15, 7-15, 12-15) Saturday.

Frustrating game filled with ugliness

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

When ASU football coach Bruce Snyder plays a Pac-10 home opener, he likes to keep the game close so it can be exciting for the fans. When asked about the penalties that riddled the Sun Devils on Saturday Snyder could only help but joke.

"We wanted to keep it close so everybody would enjoy the game," Snyder said. However he added quickly, "That's a joke. That's not true. I don't take it lightly, (it was) very frustrating."

ASU totaled 124 yards on 14 penalties against Oregon State's 30

the Huskies, said the Sun Devils level of play varied drastically all weekend.

"One minute we were a top-five team. We were an awesome, put-together team, but the next minute we weren't even a ranked team," Garner said. "We were just really inconsistent."

Setter Tracy Heflin said ASU has had a hard time focusing for the two hours it takes to play a game.

"We have the strength and we train enough but I think mentally we need to come together as a team," Heflin said. "We have a tendency to drift apart."

yards on three penalties.

Junior quarterback Jake Plummer, while pleased with the victory, was appalled at the teams lack of discipline.

"That was pretty ugly," Plummer said. "We got the win but it was a lot uglier than we wanted it. We can't be shooting our mouths to the ref.'s. They're out there making the calls that they see and we just have to play through them."

Plummer alluded to the unsportsmanlike penalties the Sun Devils earned for complaining to the referee's for calls or lack thereof. Junior wide receiver Keith Poole found himself in trouble in the second half for arguing what he thought was a hit out of bounds after a punt return.

"I just felt that a flag should have been thrown," Poole

She added the team had an especially difficult time concentrating against the Cougars.

"I don't think we were playing physically fatigued but we were mentally and emotionally drained," Heflin said. "Coming into Washington State we were just completely emotionally drained."

However, this isn't a recent problem for the Sun Devils, Garner added.

"This hasn't been a problem for us just this year," she said. "It has been in past years. That (consistency) is the one thing we need to focus on."

said. "I asked him where the flag was and he threw it on me."

Poole drew an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty for arguing the call. While Poole said he didn't think the referees were biased, he did feel like the Sun Devils were due a favorable call.

"I was mad because they had been calling penalties on us all day and I felt like we deserved a fifteen-yarder, but I guess it backfired," Poole said.

Snyder said that while the Sun Devils were able win the game despite the penalties, they can't always count on it.

"You cannot do that," Snyder said. "(You can't) hurt yourself so many times and expect to win very many games. We just have to be more disciplined."

Football

"I believe O.J.'s going to get some punts," said Snyder. "He likes doing it and he's pretty quick and he almost got a couple (Saturday)."

Snyder was pleased with the Sun Devil Stadium crowd, which reached a fever pitch during several key third-down plays. He encourages more crowd involvement, saying it was vital part of some defensive stands Saturday night.

"Particularly with a young team as we've got, we need that kind of help," he said. "That's significant for a player — when the crowd is that loud. If ever we can get the noise so loud that they (other teams) start jumping offsides and making miscues then I think it feeds on itself."

Baseball ends fall workouts

By DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

ASU baseball's fall practice ended with several interesting position battles up in the air.

The latest player to step up and make a strong case for playing time was pitcher/first baseman Ryan Bradley, who recorded a two-run triple in the Maroon and Gold Intrasquad Scrimmage on Sept. 23 at Packard Stadium, marking the end of fall practice.

Bradley, ASU's closer, excelled in relief last year, posting a 3.18 ERA with 5-3 record and six saves. But Bradley would rather hit triples instead of give them up.

"It was nice to be on the other side," Bradley, a sophomore said. "I finally got the chance to go in there to play some (first base). I'm glad (Coach Pat Murphy) gave me the chance."

Bradley, who struck out in three of his four at-bats last year, has pleaded with ASU baseball Head Coach Pat Murphy to get some playing at first base after playing the position in leagues last summer.

"Everyday I'd come out with my (first base) mitt and he (Murphy) would always say 'put it away, put it in the grave,'" Bradley said. "But he came out and said, 'you're going to get your chance to play first base,' and I was excited."

Murphy said the possibility of Bradley playing first base and closing games in the late innings may not be a bad idea.

"I could see him play first base and I could see him pitching, too," he said. "I think he just needs to keep working hard. He's definitely going to be in the mix."

Freshman southpaw Ryan Mills also gave Murphy something to think about next year. Mills pitched six innings, giving up three hits and no runs. Despite earning the 3-0 win for the Maroon team, Mills thinks he has plenty of room for improvement.

"It felt good, but I could have thrown a lot better," Mills said. "I have a lot of work to do."

Junior right-hander Kaipō Spenser will return as the ace of the pitching staff next season. Junior left-hander Jason Bond, who has started in 29 out of the 35 games he has appeared in, will likely hold a spot in the starting rotation.

The other remaining spots could go to Mills, junior college transfer Gabe Molina or to one of the other two talented freshmen southpaws, Ron Marietta and Phill Lowery. Marietta took the loss in the Saturday's scrimmage. He pitched four innings, giving up five hits and three runs, one of which was unearned. Lowery sat out the game after he had recent arthroscopic surgery on his elbow. He should be able to begin throwing when practice resumes in December, Murphy said.

"PICK IT AND WIN" CONTEST WINNER

Sophomore political science major Leo Altman was the Week Four winner of the State Press Sports "PICK IT AND WIN" contest for ASU football games.

Leo picked ASU to defeat the Oregon State Beavers 17-10. Since none of the contestants who entered correctly picked the exact score of ASU 20, OSU 11, Leo's prediction was determined to be the closest. Remember, the winner must correctly pick the winner and the final score of the game.

Leo won an ASU cap courtesy of The Cap. Co. on 6th St. and Mill Ave., an autographed Jake Plummer poster schedule courtesy of ASU athletics, a headshot in the State Press sports section, an ASU sports calendar and a bonus prize.

Altman on the game: "I knew they would rebound from last week's loss, so I guess it was a lucky guess."

Altman on ASU vs USC Saturday: "I think it will be a good game, but I don't think they will pull it out."

Altman's favorite Sun Devil: Linebacker Scott Von der Ahe.

***Entries for this week's contest (ASU vs. USC) are now being accepted.
