Vote puts tenure's future in hands of Board of Regents

BY CODY V. AYCOCK
STATE PRESS

The Arizona Board of Regents voted Friday to review faculty tenure at the state's universities — with the possibility of eliminating it altogether. They rejected a plan from the three university presidents to establish a committee of faculty and administrators who would report to the Board in favor of hearing the debate directly.

"I don't want to hear from just one side, and that's what I am afraid I am going to hear," said Regent John Munger. "I want to hear some presentations from some people who aren't in the Arizona university system who do not support tenure just as much as I want to hear the other side of the story."

In the past few years, the issue of tenure has come under fire from regents and universities around the country. Proponents of the system argue that it provides academic freedom for faculty members. Opponents view tenure as an outdated business practice that does not hold tenured faculty accountable for their current work.

Munger said past ABOR presentations on tenure have been narrowly focused. He said the Board needs to discuss all issues of tenure, even its elimination.

"When we did have a presentation made, the presentation was not on the subject I wanted to have discussed," he said. "The discussion was on whether we ought to have tenure modified, and not whether we ought to have tenure at all."

However, University President Lattie Coor said he believes the regents' debate during the coming months will focus on how to modify tenure, not eliminate it.

"The way the conversation was framed, I have believed

Defining date rape remains matter of controversy

BY RAY STERN
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

The four reports of acquaintance rapes on ASU's campus last week are "classic examples" of the crime, said Lanny Standridge, ASU chief of police.

The exact definition of date rape, however, is still a matter of controversy.

In a 1985 Ms. Magazine survey of college campuses, one in 12 male students in the study admitted to acts legally defined as rape.

This includes forcing, or trying to force, a woman to have sex through "coercion."

"'No' means 'no' — but 'maybe' (also) means 'no,' and silence means 'no,'" said Radawna Michelle, crime prevention coordinator for ASU police.

"If she says, 'no' and she's sending mixed signals, it's his responsibility to clarify that," Michelle said. "That's when you have to back up ... you have to say, 'You just said, 'no,' you don't want to have sex with me, but you're being sort of sexually aggressive now. What do you mean? what do you want?'"

Such explicit communication, even if it means spoiling the mood, is "safer for everybody," Michelle said.

However, Katie Roiphe, author of The Morning After: Sex, Fear and Feminism on Campus, wrote that this definition hurts women.

"The idea that women can't withstand verbal or emotional pressure infantilizes them," she wrote.

Roiphe also states that this definition of rape also suggests that "men are not just physically but intellectually and emotionally more powerful than women."

Nevertheless, police do not overlook the fact that some individuals react differently to the stress of date rape than others.

"No one should make assumptions to

RETURN OF THE WHITE FLIES

Annual swarm of pests to bug campus until temperatures drop

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses ... Unless those huddled masses are white flies, that is.

Once again, millions of white flies have invaded campus, much to the dismay of students, faculty and staff who must tolerate the tiny bugs until temperatures cool down enough to kill them, said Scott Cisson, campus landscape architectural coordinator.

"With the colder weather and the first frost, we'll see a tremendous drop in the (white fly) situation," he said.

Zoology professor Stanley Faeth said white flies are attracted to campus during certain seasons because of ASU's rich plant life.

"There is usually an increase of white flies in the fall and the spring," he said. "They're plant feeders, so anywhere that there are plants, they'll be."

Faeth added that although the flies are annoying to many people, in the big scheme of things they are somewhat important to other insects.

"Even though they attack plants, white flies are also probably eaten by other predators," he said. "(White flies) are actually pretty high in protein."

Lucy Hutcherson, a senior wildlife conservation biology major, said the pesky insects are very unpleasant when she commutes to campus.

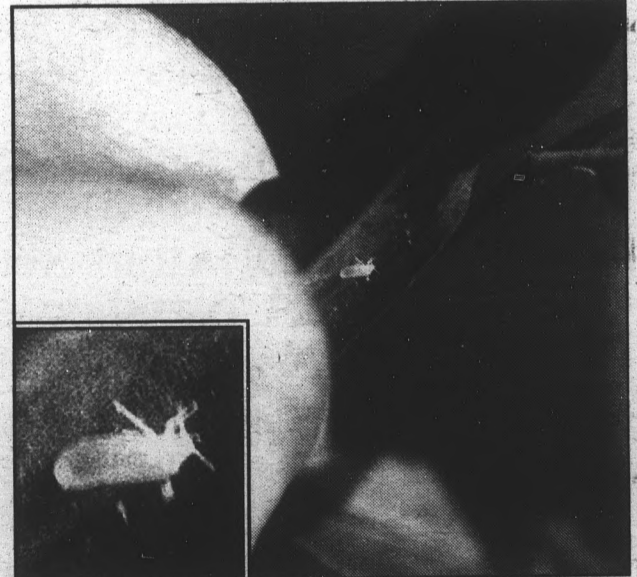

"I notice them most when I ride my bike to and from campus," she said. "They're very annoying."

Cisson said the white flies can cause damage to plants, but the plants will eventually make a full recovery.

"They will suck the life out of them (plants), that's for sure," he said. "They will cause some problems like making the plant look like it's dried out. They don't kill it, but it will make the plant look rather shabby."

Cisson added that spraying plants with a light coating of dishwashing detergent helps alleviate the problem. But ASU encompasses too large an area to cover with soap.

"If you spray the plant, that will help ease the impact on that particular plant," he said. "(But) the campus is so big that there is nothing we can do. We just hope that it doesn't get too infested."

Millions of tiny white flies will continue to bug the university until cooler days arrive, experts say.

all along that (the debate) is to explore the nature and merits of tenure and ways to reform or strengthen it," Coor said. "I continue to believe that is the nature of the debate."

Munger said he was upset about the amount of time it is taking Arizona's university officials to present information to the Board.

"The fact of the matter is, a good deal of the two-year time involved in this process has been used up, frankly, by nobody doing anything," he said.

However, Regent President Eddie Basha interrupted Munger, saying the Board was to blame for the delay in studying tenure, not university faculty or administrators.

"That is the Board's fault," he said. "If you want to criticize the Board, then criticize the Board. We tried to accede to every one of your request(s)."

Coor said he believes tenure is an adequate system for evaluating faculty members.

"(Tenure is a) process by which a university judges its faculty with some of the highest standards of any profession in the world," he said. "If they are granted tenure, then they must perform satisfactorily throughout their lifetime."

Faculty are eligible for tenure after six years of teaching at ASU. Members who do not meet the requirement for tenure at the University are "invited to leave," Coor said.

He said University officials will continue to research tenure and provide the Board with additional information.

Munger said he is not committed to any time frame to make decisions about the tenure system, but reiterated the need to proceed with the study of the system.

"I am willing to give this all the time that is required," he said. "I want to study this issue until we are ready to decide ... but please understand, I will, by that time, have been pushing this issue, just trying to get it studied for two years."

violate a person's body," Standridge said. "Sometimes people are so struck (by shock) they cannot speak, or speak very loudly."

Standridge said the decision to fight back is an individual one and depends on the situation.

"I would hesitate to give any rule to cover all circumstances," he said. "Sometimes slapping will work, sometimes it will only encourage an attacker to continue."

Even screaming, Standridge said, depends on where the person is and whether someone else can intervene.

Some women do not even know they have been legally raped, according to the Ms. Magazine survey.

It also reported that 43 percent of the women who had been legally raped did not define it as such.

Michelle admitted the circumstances surrounding a date rape can be confusing sometimes.

"That's why we educate women, too," she said.

However, both Michelle and Standridge emphasized the need to shift any blame away from the victim.

"If a man or woman wants to walk down the street naked ... an individual is morally entitled to choices that do not subject them to abuse," Standridge said. "The issue here is the criminal is at fault."

Michelle said there is a balance between the need to provide prevention information and the desire to avoid any victim-bashing.

"Being upset that the victims didn't take appropriate precautions is something that I just can't agree with," she said. "I mean, who says it's okay to have sex with someone because she's too drunk to say 'no'?"

Debra Sells, associate director of Residential Life, said students need to be responsible for their personal safety by using good judgment.

"The issue of taking safety precautions is an important one," she said.

She added that men must also be aware of their responsibility in preventing date rape.

"If communication is not totally clear, you need to stop," she said.

In response to the recent incidents, ASU police will be mailing rape-prevention information to all the residence halls, as well as conducting presentations on rape at the following times and places:

- Tuesday, Oct. 3, 7 p.m., Cholla Apartments;

Study: Phoenix No. 2 in nation for burglaries

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix had the second-highest burglary rate among the nation's 10 largest cities, behind only Detroit, a newspaper study shows.

The six-month study by The Arizona Republic and The Phoenix Gazette newspapers shows how unlikely it is that burglaries will ever be solved, what the profile of the average burglar is, what type of homes are robbed more often and how the intruder generally gains entry.

The study, which appeared in the Republic on Sunday, was based on a computer analysis from the approximately 30,000 reports of residential burglaries last year.

With a robbery about once every 18 minutes and approximately one in every 30 homes being robbed last year, the Valley has one of the worst records in the nation for home theft. However, police say, it is one of the safest major urban areas when it comes to violent crimes.

Police theorize that the high number of burglaries is partly due to the Valley's rapid growth. It can take years for families new to the Valley to get to know neighbors and prevent burglaries by watching out for one another.

Phoenix's rate of commercial and residential burglaries was second to Detroit, but well ahead of Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, San Diego, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Phoenix Sgt. Mike McCullough said that while 71 of 250 city detectives are assigned to investigate burglaries and other property crimes, they are difficult to solve because usually the victim and the criminal are not linked. The opposite is true in violent crimes.

On average, Valley police closed less than 10 percent of burglary cases last year. The national average, according to the FBI, is about 13 percent.

Tucson gun group says buy-back plan illegal

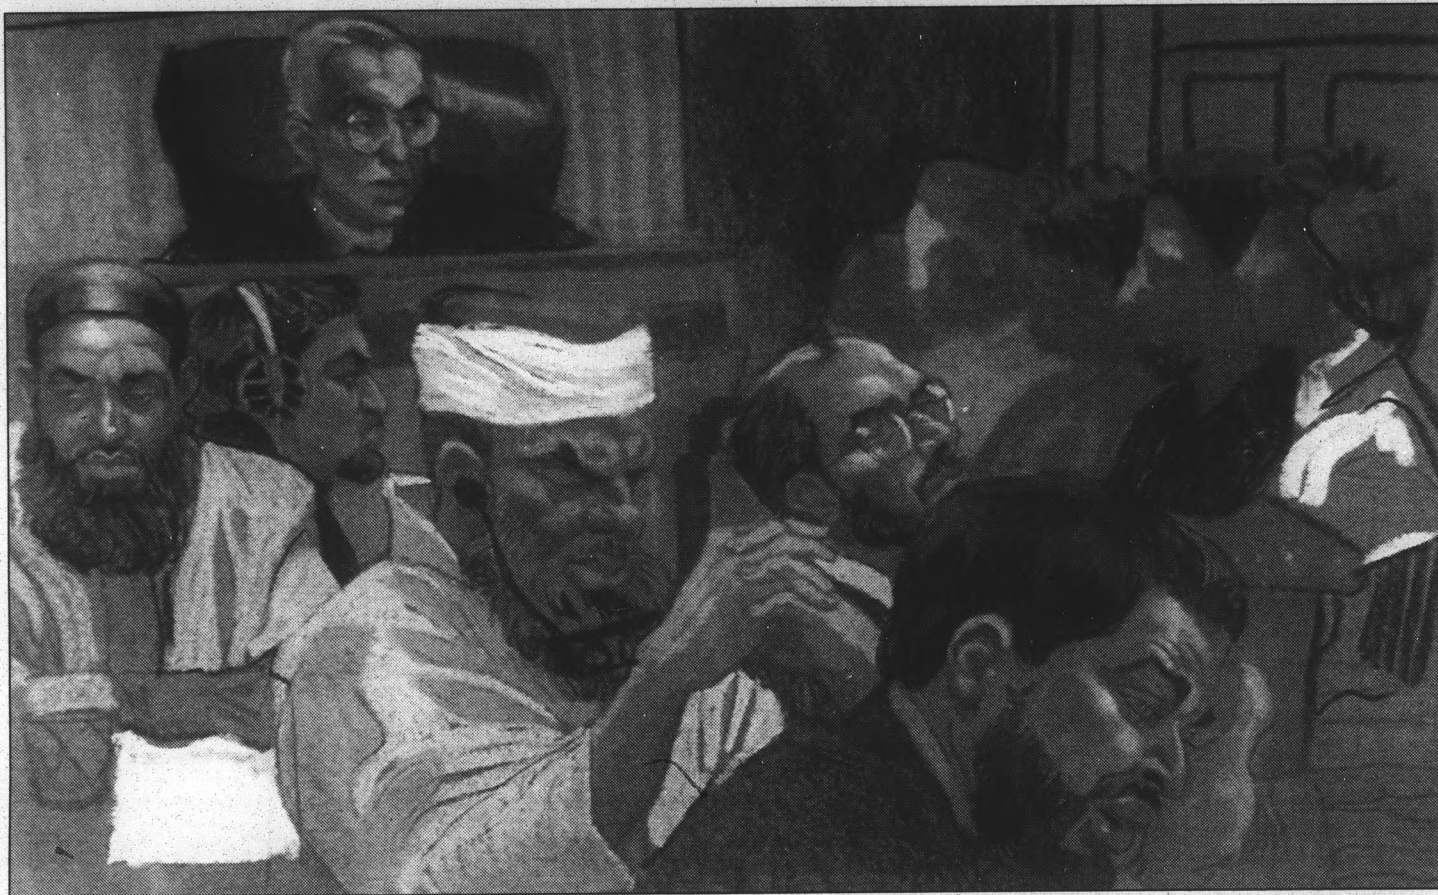

TUCSON (AP) — A pro-gun organization has filed a complaint against Pima County supervisors, charging that a gun buy-back program netting hundreds of firearms should not be funded by public money.

Bernie Oliver, president of Brassroots, Inc., says it is illegal for the county to have donated $15,000 to a minority group running the buy-back program this weekend. The African-American/Hispanic Dialogue brought in more than 600 guns on Saturday alone.

Brassroots, which has 350 members in the Tucson area, filed a complaint Thursday with the Pima County Attorney's Office.

Oliver says state law does not permit the county to spend money on a buy-back program and that the Board of Supervisors who approved the funding are personally liable to return the money.

The City Council gave the program $10,000. Oliver said Brassroots also objects to the city funding, but has not yet filed a complaint against them because "the city derives their power differently," he said.

10 found guilty in terror trial

Militants planned 'war of urban terrorism' against United States

NEW YORK (AP) — Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman and nine other militant Muslims were convicted Sunday of conspiring to wage a holy war against the United States with a string of terrorist bombings and assassinations.

The federal jury also convicted one defendant, El Sayyid Nosair, of killing extremist Rabbi Meir Kahane in 1990 as part of the larger conspiracy, an assassination once described as an isolated attack by a crazed gunman but later as the opening blow in a "war of urban terrorism."

The jurors, who had deliberated for a week, looked tired as their verdict was read.

Most of the defendants looked on sternly, but one smirked and another repeatedly yelled in Arabic, "Allahu Akbar!" or "God is great!" after jurors left the room.

Abdel-Rahman kept his head bowed, as he had throughout the trial while listening to an interpreter through headphones. He tried to comfort his lawyer, Lynne Stewart, as she cried.

Afterward, she told reporters that the blind cleric said he's not the first person to go to prison for his beliefs and he won't be the last.

Lawyers for the defendants said all will appeal.

The verdict concluded a nine-month trial that brought more than 200 witnesses and hundreds of exhibits to a heavily guarded Manhattan courthouse patrolled daily by a bomb-sniffing dog.

Facing a rarely used Civil War-era seditious conspiracy charge, the defendants were accused of plotting to force the United

How O.J. jury could vote with its heart

Jury nullification gives panel chance to ignore evidence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the world of TV viewers-turned-legal-experts in the O.J. Simpson case, the term "jury nullification" is not yet part of the jargon. But it could become familiar if jurors who begin deliberations Monday decide to vote from their hearts instead of their minds.

"Jury nullification means going outside the law, nullifying the law," Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson said of the oldest legal concept in American law, dating to 1670.

"It says, 'We don't care about the evidence; our gut reaction is that this man should go free,'" she said.

If there was one thing that made prosecutor Marcia Clark furious in defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr.'s summation last week, it was what she denounced as an "outrageous" demand for jury nullification.

"Some see this case as screaming out for jury nullification," Levenson said. "Certainly Johnnie Cochran is screaming for it when he asks them to send a message about racism. ... Johnnie is saying, 'Don't follow the instructions. Follow your hearts.'"

Cases that have resulted in jury nullification often involved political causes, civil disobedience or — an issue raised in the Simpson case — racism.

Historically, it was a tool used by Southern white juries to avoid convicting other whites who had lynched blacks, Levenson said. They ignored the facts and voted from prejudice — exactly what Judge Lance Ito told the Simpson jurors not to do.

During the Vietnam War, lawyers representing protesters routinely called for jury nullification, suggesting the defendants were answering to a higher law.

One of the earliest cases in which jurors defied the law was the 1670 unlawful assembly trial of William Penn for organizing Quaker meetings. The jury was told by the judge that they could be jailed if they failed to convict. Nevertheless, they acquitted.

Americans betting on booming Las Vegas

WASHINGTON (AP) — More people are betting on Las Vegas for jobs and affordable housing than any other metropolitan area in the country.

The Census Bureau reports that the area around the neon-washed center of America's gambling industry grew fastest in the nation between 1990 and 1994 — jumping 26 percent in population, to more than 1 million.

The Census Bureau, as it does every two years, released population totals Monday for the nation's 271 metropolitan areas and its more than 36,000 cities, towns and places.

Overall metropolitan-area population increased by 9.6 million, or 4.9 percent, and the areas were home to nearly 80 percent of U.S. residents. Population growth outside these areas was 2 million, or 3.9 percent.

The Las Vegas metro area's population climbed from 852,646 to 1,076,267.

The only other metropolitan area with more than 1 million residents among the top 25 growth areas was the Atlanta area, which grew 12.6 percent, to more than 3.3 million residents, the Census Bureau said.

Bully on the Ninth Floor

Why does Fife Symington have an agenda against education?

The governor seems to revel in cutting down education whenever he can. Now, he is attempting to dismantle the Arizona Department of Education — all while singing the praises of “political revolution” and “limited government.”

Symington is making a massive error in trying to decentralize control of the education of Arizona’s children. It is an error that thousands of children could pay dearly for — and something that must never happen.

No monetary savings in the world could justify the damage that the governor’s proposals would wreak.

The proposal to decentralize schools is idiotic. If anything, Arizona schools need to be more centralized, not less.

School funding is currently based on property taxes from within the district. Schools within rich districts reap a windfall of tax money, while schools in poor districts feel the pinch.

The result of that is obvious: rich (and usually white) kids get the best education, and poor (and usually minority) kids get the shaft.

After receiving an inadequate education for 12 years, the children from poor districts find it difficult to make admissions standards. This prevents them from receiving a college education — the very thing that could help them escape their poverty.

This is not only wrong, it is unconstitutional, according to the Arizona Supreme Court.

What Arizona really needs is a single educational pool, drawn from property taxes statewide. Schools would then receive funding based on their student base — not on how wealthy their neighbors are.

Rich kids and poor kids alike would have the same opportunities and the same quality of education.

This is the vision we need to be striving for.

But Symington sees this as a “flawed” dream, no matter what the state high court thinks. And he keeps pushing ahead to further aggravate the problem.

Rich districts would love decentralization, to be sure. But what about the poorer districts?

Cash-poor and smaller districts rely on the Education Department for many services, including help in setting curriculums or financial assistance.

Where would they go for this help?

Symington talks loftily of shutting down schools that are failing.

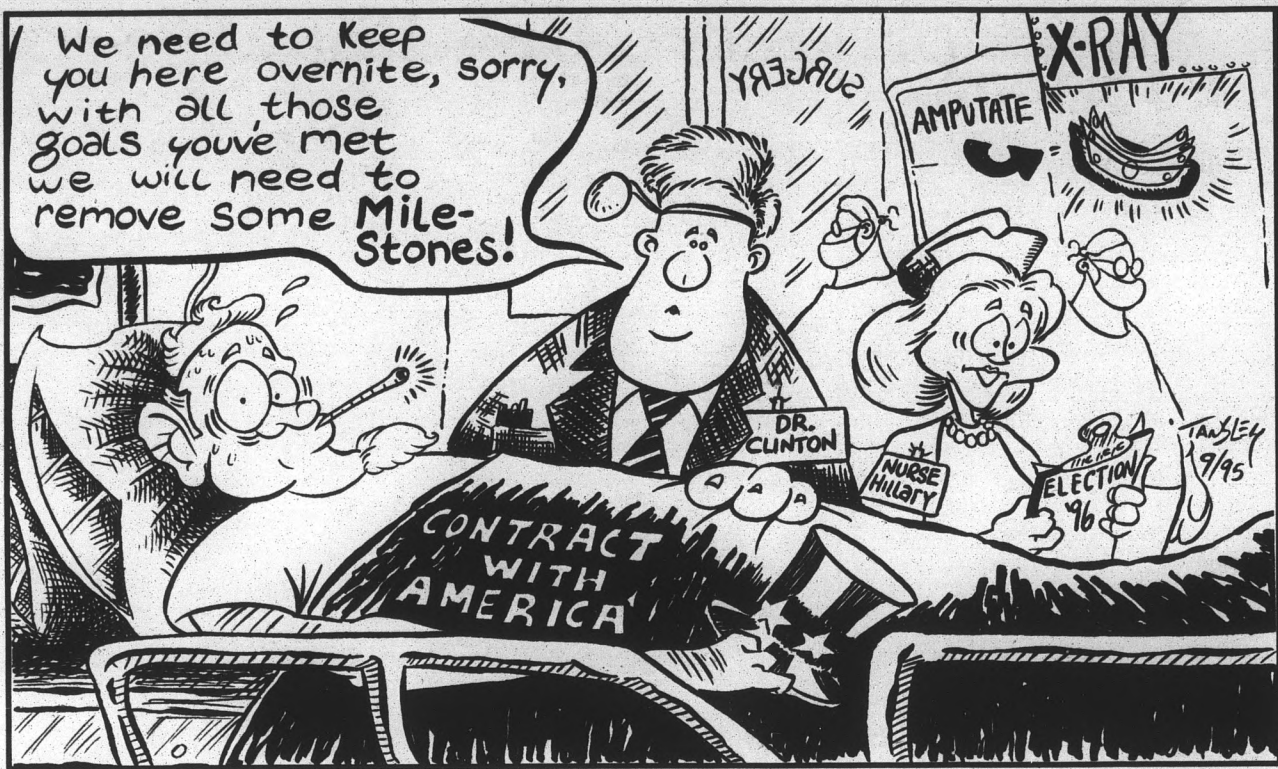

Of course, the schools that will fail under decentralization are the schools in impoverished districts. Will Symington be so proud of his new plan when needy children suddenly have nowhere to go to school?

And what about the elimination of hiring standards for new teachers? Has Symington considered the effects of that?

Teaching isn’t something that just anyone can do. Teachers need to be qualified; they need to meet certain, set standards.

This is not mindless bureaucracy — this is the protection of our educational investment in the children of this state. Unqualified teachers are nothing but a waste of money — and are a disservice to Arizona’s pupils.

Leave the schools alone, Fife. You’re being nothing but a bully.

Innocent or guilty, it doesn't matter anymore

Being interested in law and wanting to become an attorney, I have watched the O.J. Simpson trial as faithfully as possible. I have seen most of the witnesses, the evidence and the arguments between the attorneys — all of it. I must say that it scares me to death.

This trial is no longer about justice or anything remotely close to it. It has become a battle to see who can win the “trial of the century.”

It doesn't matter if the prosecution has the right guy or not. It doesn't matter if an innocent man goes to jail or if a guilty man goes free.

What matters is who wins. Does it matter:

- That the man who found much of the key evidence is a racist and has admitted to planting evidence in other cases?
- That when Mark Fuhrman was asked if he planted evidence in this case, he took the Fifth Amendment for fear he might incriminate himself?
- That the infamous bloody socks were unnoticeable in a video taken at Simpson's home but suddenly appeared less than an hour later?
- That blood taken from a suspect is missing?
- That the suspect's house and grounds were searched without a search warrant?

You get the idea. Whether people believe that Simpson is innocent or not, this should bother them as much as it does me. Why doesn't the jury get to hear all of the evidence?

How can they make a fair decision when one of the key witnesses has taken the Fifth Amendment and they don't even know that? Even if a person believes that the man is guilty, what happened to the Constitution? Can the police now search someone's house whenever they want?

I wonder what happened to “telling the whole truth and nothing but the truth?” I always thought that we had trials so that each side could tell its story and then let the jury or the judge decide who is right. It seems to me that in order to do this the jury would need to hear everything.

I also think that Fred Goldman's attack on Johnny Cochran was completely uncalled for. I understand that this man's son was brutally murdered and I sympathize with that. I also have children and can't imagine that kind of pain. But Cochran is doing his job — nothing more. It seems to me that every time the defense shows how botched this investigation was, someone gets angry.

The fact that Cochran has hired bodyguards from the Nation of Islam is no reason to attack him. If he had hired bodyguards from some Christian religion or organization, would anyone have even commented on it? He has been threatened. He has the right to protect himself and considering that he is coming down pretty hard on the Los Angeles Police Department, I can't say that I blame him for not expecting those same police officers to protect his life.

Goldman and many others are angry because the “race card” has been played in this case. Well, face it people, race is a very big issue in this case and in many others.

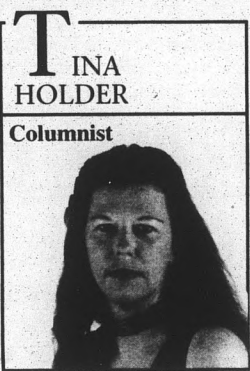

Do you think that if the victims in this case had been black there would still be a trial? Of course not — Fuhrman hated interracial couples and when he saw who the victim was, he could have seen an opportunity to nail Simpson.

What if Simpson were white? Would that have made a difference? Of course it would have. People have to start admitting that racism is a very big problem in this country. It hasn't gone away and it hasn't gotten much better. Instead of the Ku Klux Klan running around in their white sheets, we have Mark Fuhrmans running around in their blue uniforms.

It seems to me that Goldman should want to see the man who killed his son put away for good. If he believes that man is O.J. Simpson, then why not condemn the police for botching the case? Why not condemn Fuhrman for allowing his racism to interfere with his work? Why not blame the prosecution for allowing liars and racists on the stand? Why not blame the police and the investigators for forgetting people's constitutional rights?

Why not blame a system that has gotten so corrupt that we can no longer tell what justice is?

Frog ad produced by King of leers

It's not news that sex is a major theme of modern advertising. It's used in everything from peddling jeans, as in the kiddie porn of Calvin Klein, to gorgeous women flashing long limbs as they get out of sleek cars.

But recently, the Budweiser beer people came up with one of the most peculiar sexually suggestive ads I've ever seen.

As most TV viewers know, the current Budweiser ads feature frogs.

In one commercial, three frogs make croaking sounds. And eventually, the three sounds come together to form "Budweiser."

In another, a frog crouches next to a highway and attaches its tongue to the license plate of a passing Bud beer truck, then lets out a joyous whoop as it soars behind the truck.

Because I've never worked in advertising, I'm puzzled by this strange connection between frogs and beer.

It would be far more realistic if there were three old luses sitting outside a honky-tonk yearningly croaking the beer's name. Or if one of them went staggering and stumbling behind the beer truck.

But from what I know about frogs, they aren't interested in doing much besides eating bugs.

Ah, but there is one other activity that frogs engage in. As a song says, birds do it, bees do it, etc.

And now to sell beer, the Bud ads strongly suggest that frogs do it, which, of course, they do.

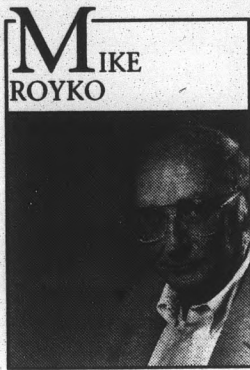

In the most recent ad, a large, obviously masculine frog is burping "Bud." In the distance, a higher pitched voice burps back, "Why."

The large male frog gets a glint in his eyes and burps some more. Again, the softer, gentler response is heard.

Then we see what is obviously a seductive female frog.

The burly male frog leaps forward, and a sly expression appears on his face. One might even say it is a look of lustful anticipation.

The rest of this encounter is left to our imaginations. And I'm grateful for that after getting a frog expert's description of the mating habits of frogs.

MIKE ROYKO

According to Chris Phillips, a biologist at the Illinois Natural History Survey, the Budweiser frog-sex scenario isn't accurate.

For one thing, any involvement is initiated by the female frog.

"The males and females live apart. The females come down to the pond to select from different males. They make a decision based on several factors. They judge the quality of the male by his call, its duration. The female is trying to pick the best father, the strongest and most virile male.

"In the commercial, where the male responds to the female, that's backwards. They want you to believe that the male goes to the female. Not much of that goes on.

"Instead, the males make their calls to the female, and she finds the one she wants. In 90 percent of the species in Illinois, the female is running the show. She decides pretty much who she mates with. That's just the opposite of the way it happens in that commercial."

See. Still another reason ... you can't trust advertising.

Phillips also described the actual mating techniques of frogs, which might explain why Budweiser ended the commercial before the hanky-panky began.

"The male grabs the female from behind, under her arms, and you can't get them off. Once the male does that, you would have to break its arms to get him away from her. And it can last for a couple of days."

Imagine that. A couple of days. Looking at a typical male frog, you just wouldn't think he was that sturdy and determined a fellow.

And when it is all over, that's it. She goes one way, and he goes another. Which is understandable, since they can both use a good night's sleep.

"You might see them at the pond," Phillips said. "But they are spaced out. They don't have much to do with each other. They don't socialize or date."

Love 'em for two days and leave 'em, that's the credo of your male frogs.

So now when you see those two Budweiser frogs on your TV, you know what the real story is.

As Phillips said of the frog ritual: "It's really pretty brutal the way it all happens."

Obviously, he hasn't researched some bars in Chicago.

Athletes should be held accountable for actions

I would like to address my concerns about what is taking place in the world today regarding athletes and how some of them seem to think that the law doesn't apply to them.

Recently I have read several reports coming from all over the United States about athletes, both college and professional, committing crimes. This problem is nothing new to the world but it seems the violations are getting far more severe and seem to be happening more often than ever.

Many athletes such as Charles Barkley refuse the notion that they are role models, but when I see a child wearing a shirt that has a "Sir Charles" likeness on it, I can't help but say that the child has adopted Barkley as his or her role model. It is a total shame that the athletes in their respected sports can't provide a more constructive role in the community they live in.

Mario Bennett seemed to forget the law when he jumped into his car and drove drunk, and then allowed his friend to take the blame for his accident.

What kind of message does this send to our kids?

All too often we see an athlete shooting someone, raping a woman, beating up someone or committing other serious crimes. Even worse is the do-nothing solution that schools and athletic teams seem to propose.

Nebraska seems to allow Lawrence Phillips to run rampant until hell is raised and instead of giving him the boot from school. They permitted him to stay and even raised the notion that he could come back to the football team at some point.

Does this kind of solution tell our kids that rape and murder are OK if you are an athlete? It seems to since the rates of crime aren't going down. I urge each and every athlete and public figure at this school to take serious thought into what they are showing our next generation. I hope that we can see an end to this problem soon.

Quotables ...

It is not true that life is one damn thing after another — it is one damn thing over and over.

— Edna St. Vincent Millay

Editor's note:

After viewing the O.J. Simpson trial, do you think the judicial system needs to be reformed? If so, what needs to happen and where do we begin? Please e-mail or write to the State Press. No phone calls please.

Excuse me for having fun

Yes, ignorance and stereotyping run rampant through our campus and through the nation, and they seem to have found a home in the random accusations of columnist Tina Holder.

Her insistence that students without a personal stake in the affairs of Native Americans and "other minorities" are unwilling to sober up or focus on events other than the Pearl Jam concert, is the type of ignorant categorizing that is responsible for the current state of affairs.

I agree the issues discussed at length (great length) by Holder exist and require the attention of everyone to force a change, but alienating those you would convince through insults is not the way.

Further, I take issue with her constant phrasing of "other minorities" in a dismissive tone, using them only as back up for her arguments. How familiar are you with the problems of "other minorities," Holder?

Pearl Jam has come and gone, and perhaps that is a load off your mind, as you seem to have devoted a good portion of your last column to them; but if you need more fuel, Nine Inch Nails tickets are on sale now, and I took time off from your "real world" to stand in line for R.E.M. tickets. I guess being able to enjoy oneself for a night, while still being aware, makes one a shallow person.

Holder tried to close on a poignant note postulating what would have happened if those excuses were given to keep America from ousting Hitler. They were. Perhaps, before citing history, Holder should review the public sentiment of the times she invokes.

Quit ignoring other causes

Tina Holder, who are you? Do you expect the ASU population to jump because you pick one of the many injustices in this world to write about? You don't look like any Native American I've ever known.

Let me guess, someone informed you that you're 20 percent Native American, you read a book or is it just guilt?

Nonetheless, why don't you join us in the real world? There is injustice everywhere, not just for the Native Americans. The physically challenged, overweight and elderly have stories to tell that are just as disheartening.

You write some articles, make no helpful suggestions and then criticize. What did you expect — for us to pack-up our cars, forget our academic careers and drive up to Canada? Get real!

I know a lot of people, of all backgrounds, who make a difference everyday. Some feed the homeless, mentor at-risk youth, volunteer at a battered women's shelter, etc.

Who's to say their causes are any less important? I do what I can, as do many, but the bottom line is I'm here to learn, earn a degree and make sure my parents have medical treatment and food.

Holder you're right, I'm not going to let my family suffer by putting anyone else first and especially not because of anything you write.

I suggest you go knock on Gov. Fife Symington's door and ask his wife to financially back your effort or, better yet, go see the casino owners and ask them to use their profits for the only cause you feel is compelling.

New conservation group digs for resourceful individuals

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

ASU's newest club wants to get its feet wet and its hands dirty.

The Soil and Water Conservation Society wants to dig up anyone interested in ecology and the environment, said Kathy Killian, interim club president and graduate student studying environmental resources. The newly-formed ASU chapter has already attracted about 15 members.

"This is a new club, so there's a lot of opportunity for growth and change," Killian said. "This is a good opportunity for someone who is even in another discipline entirely to gain a post in the club."

Dr. Frederick Steiner, director of the School of Planning and Landscape Architecture, said the Society was founded nationally in the 1940s and was dedicated to the wise use of natural resources.

"We're interested in both the art and science of good land use," Steiner said. "This is a good group. They're very active and very energetic."

Killian said the group is not an activist group, but is attempting to provide a learning experience that went beyond the classroom.

"We want to be in the field. We have a field trip planned this fall. Hopefully, we'll have a field trip every semester."

"We're also in the process of getting a multi-year project off the ground," Killian said. "I think a lot of the clubs lack a long-term project to keep people interested."

Doug Green, faculty adviser of the Society, said they are searching for "some sort of riparian-restoration program" for their long-term project.

Riparian areas are stream-side corridors of vegetation. Many of these areas have been degraded by human activities, Green said.

The Society has also set up a scholarship fund for students in environmental fields. Green said it was the first set up for students in those fields.

The scholarship will not pay out until adequate funds have been raised, Green said.

"But if no one started it, nothing would get done," he said.

For more information on the Soil and Water Conservation Society, call Kathy Killian at 858-9386

Oprah makes Forbes magazine's elite rich list

NEW YORK (AP) — Soon it may be Oprah with nine O's. In Forbes magazine's 1995 list of the 400 richest Americans, Oprah Winfrey stands at No. 399. Although she has a considerable way to go, she's en route to becoming America's first black billionaire, the magazine said in its Oct. 16 issue, released Sunday.

Microsoft Corp. Chairman Bill Gates, whose accomplishments this year included finally introducing Windows 95 and turning the Stones into software pitchmen, held the top spot for the second consecutive year. Forbes put Gates' net worth at about $14.8 billion.

Investor Warren Buffett again assumed the No. 2 slot, this year at roughly $11.8 billion. His bottom line was boosted by about $400 million after The Walt Disney Co. offered $19 billion for Capital Cities/ABC Inc., one of Buffett's longtime holdings.

Winfrey, the only entertainer on the annual list, is worth about $340 million, which Forbes said put her just ahead of New York money manager Leon Levy. The 41-year-old Chicagoan owns her top-rated talk show and production company, Harpo (Oprah spelled backward), and holds a big stake in the show's distributor, King World Productions Inc.

Winfrey's coffers will continue to grow as she benefits from five-year deals for The Oprah Winfrey Show signed last year with 210 television stations, plus a six-film commitment from ABC and King World stock options. She also plans to become a Hollywood producer.

Gates, 39, of Bellevue, Wash., called the Forbes list "silly" last year when he edged Buffett for No. 1 at $9.35 billion. This year, his 20-year-old company, which supplies the software for 80 percent of the world's personal computers, dominated news pages and advertising space with the Windows 95 software launched Aug. 24.

Buffett, 65, of Omaha, Neb., renowned for building his Berkshire Hathaway Inc. investment firm with long-term investments in steady successes such as Coca-Cola and Cap Cities, is about $2.6 billion richer than last year.

Gates and Buffett also are the wealthiest commoners in the world, Forbes said. The only foreigners who aren't royalty and approach their riches are Swedish packaging magnate Hans Rausing and Japanese railroad and hotel tycoon Yoshiaki Tsutsumi, both worth about $9 billion.

Rounding out the top five:

• John Kluge, 81, of Charlottesville, Va., chairman of Metromedia Co. Kluge announced in August the sale of his entire $930 million stake in WorldCom Inc., the nation's fourth-largest long distance company. Kluge, worth about $6.7 billion and also No. 3 last year, has interests in restaurants, entertainment, broadcasting and medical technology.

• Paul Allen, 42, of Mercer Island, Wash., co-founder of Microsoft and owner of the Portland Trail Blazers basketball team. The value of Allen's Microsoft shares helped him jump from No. 16 to No. 4 with a worth of about $6.1 billion.

• Sumner Redstone, 72, of Newton Centre, Mass., chairman of Viacom Inc. He jumped 12 spots to No. 5 with a worth of about $4.8 billion, in part by paring the entertainment empire. Viacom put Melrose Place producer Spelling Entertainment Group Inc. up for sale, agreed to sell its local cable television systems to Tele-Communications Inc. for $2.25 billion and sold its Madison Square Garden division to ITT Corp. for $1.01 billion.

PEOPLE

LONDON (AP) — Now you too can score with Hugh Grant.

His escapade with a Hollywood tart will be a question in the 1996 British edition of Trivial Pursuit: "Which film publicity launch was in its gestation stage when Hugh hooked a hooker?"

Grant was promoting Nine Months in July when Los Angeles police arrested him with a prostitute on Sunset Boulevard. He pleaded no contest and was sentenced to a fine and an AIDS education course.

"It is only in the adult version, not the family version of the game," Brian Highley, who compiles queries for the game, told The People newspaper.

He's invited Grant and his girlfriend, model Elizabeth Hurley, to the new edition's launch: "I hope he has sufficient sense of humor to come along."

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Kramer says Seinfeld and the gang aren't going anywhere.

Michael Richards, who plays Jerry Seinfeld's ungainly neighbor Cosmo Kramer on the hit NBC show, dispels rumors that this is the show's last season.

It's "a bunch of pooh-poo," he tells TV Guide in its Oct. 7 issue. "I'm going to be Kramer a long time — at least two more years."

Richards co-stars in the current release Unstrung Heroes, directed by Diane Keaton.

LONDON (AP) — Dudley Moore's fourth marriage is over after 18 months and his wife wants $150,000 for her story, a British newspaper quoted her as saying. Moore says all is well.

Nicole Rothschild is quoted as telling the News of the World that the star of Arthur and 10 had moved out of their house in Newport Beach, Calif., leaving her to care for their three-month-old son, Nicholas.

"I want money to talk about my marriage to Dudley," Sunday's newspaper quoted Rothschild, 31, as saying. "There's a lot the world doesn't know about Dudley, that's for sure."

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Charles Van Doren, whose fall from grace in the game-show scandal of the 1950s was explored in the movie Quiz Show, has been released from the hospital.

Van Doren, 69, collapsed at a gas station on Monday. Hartford Hospital, which released him Friday, would not say what was wrong.

He became a celebrity when he won $129,000 on the TV quiz show 21, then admitted before Congress that he'd been given answers in advance. He's lived in semi-seclusion in Cornwall ever since.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Ted Koppel says he'll quit Nightline if ABC signs David Letterman and plops him into the late-night news show's time slot.

"I would wish them and David and my colleagues at Nightline the very best of luck," Koppel says in the Oct. 7 issue of TV Guide.

When former Letterman agent Michael Ovitiz joined The Walt Disney Co., which is taking over ABC's parent, speculation abounded that the network would lure Letterman away from CBS.

But barring that, Koppel expects to stay with the show: "Can I see anything on the horizon that would cause me to leave? The answer is no."

SNL: Old dog needs to learn some new tricks

NEW YORK (AP) — Nations come and go. The hundred-dollar bill gets a fresh new look. Then there's Saturday Night Live hopelessly stuck in the past.

What about all the grand talk of bringing this 1970s relic into the '90s, of "reinventing" it for the new season?

Sadly, that was Saturday Night jive.

That's the disappointing news from NBC's Studio 8H, where SNL launched its much-awaited, supposedly do-or-die 21st season Saturday night, with Mariel Hemingway as guest host.

The program served as an apt warm-up for the 1996 presidential campaign: empty promises of change. From the O.J. Simpson sketch where "Judge Ito" orders lawyer "Johnnie Cochran" to declare, "Live from New York ...!" to the self-congratulating group huddle as the final credits roll, Saturday's show was SNL business as usual.

After all the hype, was it too much to hope for at least one genuine surprise during the long, long 90 minutes? In retrospect, yes.

Oh, and was SNL even funny in its season opener?

Not so's you'd notice. If anyone from producer Lorne Michaels on down really believes this is a different show from last April — or April 1976 — they're delusional. Sure, there are new people on board, but the show's the same old heap with just another coat of paint, traveling the same road, stuck in the same ruts.

Of course, this is hardly the first time Michaels has promised great things, then failed to deliver. In fact, year after year he's like Lucy in the Peanuts strip, swearing she'll hold the football. The viewer is Charlie Brown, always falling for it.

This time, the only auspicious sign comes from the freshman class of repertory players. Although it's premature to rate the six rookies, one of them, Darrell Hammond, is clearly a welcome addition thanks to his impersonation skills (his was a dead-on Ted Koppel in an otherwise limp Nightline send-up).

As for the new crop of writers, they're clearly saving their good stuff for later in the season.

Veteran player David Spade has been rewarded with a weekly feature that, on its first outing, could just as well have been part of "Weekend Update" (or, better yet, bagged). It was a five-minute monologue addressed to the Unabomber, during which Spade cautioned, "You're coming off gay." Pointing to the much-published sketch of the anonymous terrorist, Spade likened his looks to those of Little Richard, "and that's not helping your 'straight case.'"

Norm MacDonald anchoring a weak "Weekend Update" had the crickets chirping.

So-so was a commercial parody for A.M. Ale ("Because you can't wait 'til afternoon"). Right after came a real, and far stranger, commercial for Budweiser.

The show's brightest elements? Musical guest Blues Traveler, which traveled in at the last minute to sub for the dropout formerly known as Prince, and Hemingway, who displayed an unexpected gift for comedy. Neither, of course, will be back soon enough.

Who's next week's guest host? Chevy Chase. Now there's a fresh idea!

Terror trial

States to stop supporting Israel and Egypt, two enemies of militant Muslims.

"Terrorism is real. It is here. It is in this courtroom," Assistant U.S. Attorney Patrick Fitzgerald told the jury. He also said Abdel-Rahman called the United States "the Number One enemy of Islam."

The plot's centerpiece was a plan to set off five bombs in 10 minutes, blowing up the United Nations, the Lincoln and Holland tunnels, the George Washington Bridge and a federal building housing the FBI, the government charged. Videotapes showed defendants mixing bomb ingredients in a garage just before their arrest in 1993.

They also plotted to assassinate Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and even discussed kidnapping ex-President Nixon, who died last year, and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, the government said.

"If terrorism is theater, the acts of terrorism planned by these defendants was theater of the absurd," James Kallstrom, chief of the FBI's New York office, said after the verdict. "In their own demented way, they were going to send the United States a message. These verdicts return the favor in the strongest possible language."

At the Abu Bakr mosque in Brooklyn, where the sheik once preached, the mood was subdued, sad and angry. "This is absolutely discrimination," said Nasser Ahmed, treasurer and acting spokesman.

Security was tightened at the nation's airports after the verdict, though officials said no specific threat had been received. At the courthouse, uniformed police joined dozens of U.S. marshals on duty. Jurors were taken away in a van under police escort after refusing to talk with reporters.

Stewart said the sheik would be moved to a prison hospital. He is diabetic and has heart trouble.

Simpson

the New York Weekly Journal, was jailed on a charge of seditious libel for satirizing the king's appointed governor for the British colonies. His lawyer, Andrew Hamilton, argued for jury nullification and won.

In a few states, jurors are given legal instructions about nullification, but California is not one of them.

Perhaps the most troubling thing about jury nullification is that it is implied rather than stated. Anyone reviewing the trial record would have no overt evidence that is what the jury did. The verdict would be "not guilty," and the only way that jury nullification would become obvious would be if one or more jurors chose to state publicly that they had disregarded the evidence and voted for reasons outside the law.

"It's contrary to everything you learned in civics class," Levenson said. "And yet it's very American. It says, 'No immoral law controls us. We're Americans.'"

"But in modern times, jury nullification sometimes has been known as payback."

And that's what worries Clark.

In his final argument, Cochran asked jurors to be "the consciences of the community," implying they should look away from Simpson and turn their attention to the racist views and possible misconduct of Detective Mark Fuhrman and others.

Cochran suggested they had the chance to change history.

"Maybe you are the right people at the right time in the right place to say: 'No more!'" Cochran told jurors in his thundering summation.

In a 1992 speech on jury nullification, later published in the Law Review, U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein of the Eastern District of New York, said, "Nullification occurs when a jury — based on its own sense of justice or fairness — refuses to follow the law and convict in a particular case even though the facts seem to allow no other verdict but guilt."

Weinstein noted that nullification can occur when "law enforcement is poor, that is to say police and law enforcement agents are acting lawlessly or with racial bias."

It is rare, however, to see such a jury action in a murder case.

"If it's a vote for nullification, it's fast," she said. "If they get to the evidence and do what they're supposed to do, it should be a fairly long process."

ASU - USC Rewind

Sun Devils' receiving corps under microscope

Snyder says frustrations start with ASU's problem with dropping passes

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

Once considered a practical automatic, the ASU passing game has found itself on the hot seat after the Sun Devils' 31-0 debacle at the hands of No. 5 USC Saturday.

More specifically, the dropped passes. Seven to be exact.

"Offensively, the most glaring problem is the drops," said ASU Head Coach Bruce Snyder, whose team (2-3, 1-2 in the Pac-10) next faces Stanford this Saturday at 7 p.m. at Sun Devil Stadium.

No one was singled out because nearly everyone in the Sun Devil receiving corps was guilty, arousing a major area of concern at this juncture of the season.

"Therein lies most of our frustration offensively," Snyder said. "Whatever it was, it was contagious, because they all got it."

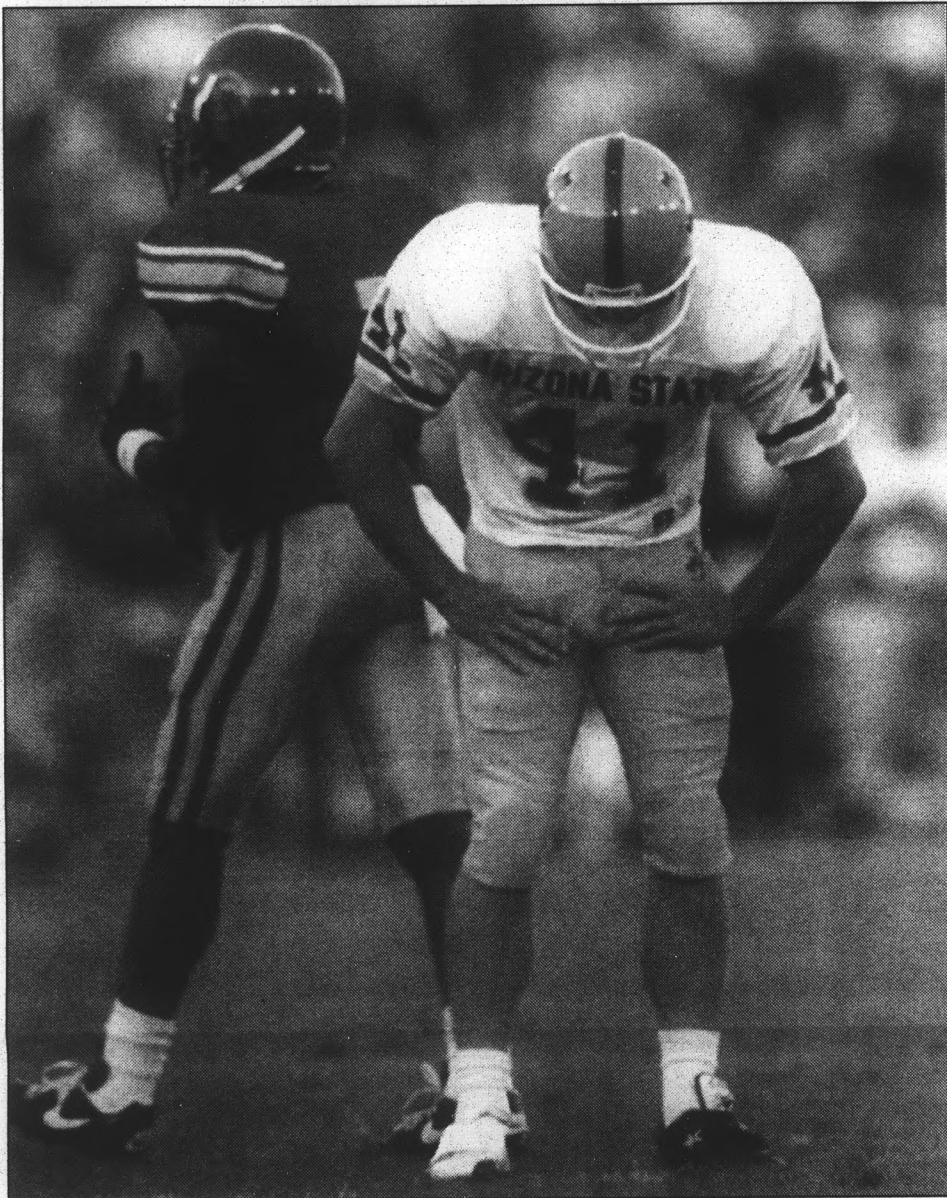

And the explanation for the sudden affliction that is plaguing the ASU offense?

"We just have to catch the ball better than we're catching it. It really reflected in our third-down conversions," said Snyder, whose Sun Devils were 1 of 7 on third-down conversions at halftime, with three of the misses coming off of dropped passes. "Assuming that everything worked out (on those three plays), that makes us 4 out of 7 and that makes it a hell of a lot different game."

But instead, the passing game, along with the rest of ASU's offense, sputtered from beginning to end. Junior quarterback Jake Plummer, who completed 17 of 35 passes for 148 yards and two interceptions, said dropped balls is something every quarterback deals with periodically.

"I try not to let them affect me," he said. "We're going to have a few drops, hopefully not many. You don't like to have those because it does kind of get me out of my rhythm and make me a little hesitant, because I threw the ball right at him and he dropped it."

"I really can't explain it, we have guys with great hands. It's just something we have to work on in practice."

Associated Press
ASU's sophomore placekicker Robert Nycz (41) is disgusted after missing a 39-yard field goal attempt in the third quarter of the Sun Devils' 31-0 loss to No. 5 USC Saturday. Nycz, who hit from 48 yards last week, but also missed from 53 on Saturday, is five for seven on the year.

For ASU, once again it was a tale of two halves, which created another point of emphasis, Snyder said.

"I don't think we've really played a whole game yet, even in the wins," he said. "As a young team we're going to have to learn how to do that."

Senior tailback Chris Hopkins, who had two 19-yard runs, said he wasn't impressed by USC (4-0, 2-0 in the Pac-10) even in the shutout, ASU's first since they lost to the Trojans by a 50-0 count in 1988.

"It's embarrassing, but I guess that's why we play 11 games," he said.

ASU's secondary has probably what will be its biggest challenge of the season in covering USC's 6-foot-4 hot-shot wideout Keyshawn Johnson behind it. Johnson, a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate, was as advertised, outspoken, but able to back it up.

The senior receiver caught 13 passes for 171 yards and one touchdown, a 60-yard unmolested gallop which all but buried ASU. It was the 12th-consecutive game he has recorded over 100 yards receiving, which set a new NCAA record. Johnson, who doesn't try to hide his vanity, wondered aloud after the game if he was "the next Jerry Rice" and patted his receiving corps on the back.

"We have one of the best receiving corps in the country — add our tight ends in there — and we're probably about the best," Johnson said.

Said free safety Mitchell Freedman: "We dinged him a couple of times and let him know we were there," said the ASU redshirt-freshman, who exchanged pleasantries with Johnson on several occasions during the game. "He had a fear in his heart. He knew he didn't want to come across the middle. They kept sending him

"I don't think we've really played a whole game yet, even in the wins," he said. "As a young team we're going to have to learn how to do that."

on out patterns because we broke him."

NOTES:

• Snyder said junior linebacker Scott Von der Ahe and senior Justin Drago played their best games of the year. Von der Ahe finished tied with Freedman for a game-high 13 tackles.

• Snyder also said senior fullback Ryan Wood, junior offensive tackle Juan Roque, junior tight end Steve Bush, freshman guard Mike Barnes and sophomore cornerback Jason Simmons played well.

ASU cross country teams finish 1st, 2nd at Invitational; Repak top male

BY DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's cross country's low-key approach paid off with impressive results over the weekend.

"We went into the (Grand Canyon) Invitational with a low-key approach," Coach Ken Lehman said. "It served its purpose. Mentally, we didn't try to get fired up. We talked about it earlier as a team and we decided to use it for training and let what happens, happen."

The Sun Devil men finished first and the women finished second in the dual meet against Grand Canyon University in Phoenix last Saturday. Junior Matt Repak ran away with top honors, finishing the men's 8,000-meter course in 26 minutes, 13 seconds. Repak won in spite of running over 100 miles in practice that week.

"My legs weren't that fresh," Repak said.

"I thought we ran pretty well, especially since we had a high mileage week of practice," Lehman said. "I think Matt ran about 115 miles this week."

The Sun Devil men had four of the top five times.

Junior Ari Rodriguez finished a close third (26:35) followed by senior Tom Weber, who grabbed fourth (26:52), and freshman Brandon McGregor, who finished fifth.

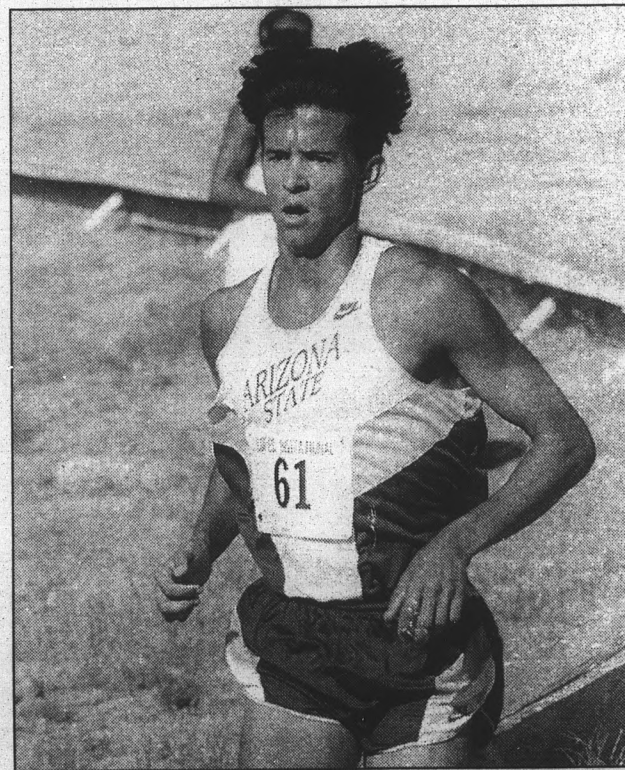

"We were pretty much able to control the race," Repak said. "We started out slow, but we got a little more intense as the race went on."

Lehman said he expects sophomore John Tyrrell and freshman Andy Carusetta to be available at the next meet on Oct. 13 at ASU's Karsten Golf Course. Tyrrell and Carusetta were unable to run last Saturday because of injuries.

"There was a gap between our first four runners and the other runners," Repak said. "We'll continue to improve when they return."

Repak said he is looking forward to erasing last year's disappointing eighth-place finish in the ASU Invitational.

"Last year we had a bad showing," he said. "We'll have more spectators there and we'll be more familiar running at that course after running there last year."

Robert Anderson/State Press
Junior Matt Repak won the Grand Canyon Invitational in Phoenix on Saturday with a time of 26 minutes, 13 seconds in the men's 8,000-meter course.

No. 16 Sun Devil volleyball gains split in Bay area

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The No. 16 ASU volleyball team came away from their trip to the Bay area schools this weekend with a two game split.

After defeating Cal 3-1 on Friday night the Sun Devils went on to Stanford, where they lost to the No. 4 Cardinal 3-0.

ASU now posts a record of 8-3 overall (2-3 Pac-10).

In front of a crowd of 420 at the Harmon Gym, the Sun Devils defeated the Golden Bears 15-12, 14-16, 15-7, 15-4.

The Sun Devils, who led the match in team blocks 16-5, also dominated in individual statistics with a higher number of kills, assists, service aces and solo blocks.

Senior outside hitter Christine Garner led both teams with 17 kills and 13 digs on the night. Outside hitter Jennifer Snyder added four service aces for ASU along with 13 kills and four block assists.

For the Golden Bears, Michelle Wickman had two service aces and 13 kills. Lynn Guevara added 39 assists in three games for Cal.

Despite the win on Friday, the Sun Devils lost to Stanford Saturday night, 13-15, 15-12, 15-7.

Snyder led both teams in kills with 16 while senior middle blocker Holly Sones added 10 kills and three block assists.

Stanford led in almost all areas including blocks, kills, service aces and digs. For the Cardinal, Cary Wendell had 14 kills, 25 assists and 19 digs.

The Sun Devils now come home to face Oregon and Oregon State next weekend at the University Activity Center.

Powers, Steinberg jockey for starting goalie duties

BY RON MATEJKO
STATE PRESS

The starting goaltending position for the ASU Ice Devils' hockey team is still up in the air, and the battle for the spot is between freshman Greg Powers, and senior Ross Steinberg.

"It would be great if I get to start, but we're not competing against each other," Powers said. "What's best for the team is important. I'll sit on the bench and cheer for the team if that is what Coach (Gene) Hammett decides."

Steinberg explained what the experience has been like for him.

"The team is what comes first," Steinberg said. "Don't get me wrong, I want the job, but we have become good friends. There is no animosity between us. We are comfortable with the situation and are helpful to each other."

Even though tryouts have been completed, Hammett said a decision will not be made until a week before the Ice Devils' season-opening trip to Boulder, Colo., on Oct. 20.

The position opened up when a recurring disc injury to starting goalie, senior Adam Mims, flared up during the off season. Hammett said he doesn't expect him to return to game shape until sometime in December at the earliest.

Powers is entering his first season, but Hammett said he doesn't show signs of being a newcomer.

"Usually, when a freshman comes to the team it takes time for him to work his way in, but the team has taken to him already," he said.

Hammett first met Powers in April of 1993 at the Chicago Showcase, a national high school tournament made up of the top 30 teams from around the country.

"He was only a senior in high school but showed natural talent," Hammett said of Powers. "He played against a team that consisted of 18 scholarship players and performed excellent. I was impressed."

Powers said Hammett played a major role in his deciding to come to ASU.

"The main reason I came to ASU was Coach Hammett's strong sell of his program and his persistence in recruiting me," Powers said. "ASU wasn't my first choice in the beginning, but Coach Hammett's continuous contact with me showed he cared a lot about improving his program."

Powers said there were other reasons he chose ASU over stronger hockey programs that were recruiting such as Ohio University, the University of West Virginia and the University of Illinois. He liked Hammett's commitment to recruiting better players to improve the team and his chance for more playing time, even if it doesn't come right away.

Hammett said Powers will play an important part of the Ice Devils' development.

"He will be a key guy for us in rebuilding," he said. "He's the type of guy that might take us over the top."

Steinberg is entering his third season as an Ice Devil. His role has been mostly as a back-up, but he started some games when Mims went down with the back injury.

To prepare for the upcoming season, Steinberg trained in California during the off-season where he played with players from other universities as well as some members of the Los Angeles Kings.

In the past, he has also trained with the University of Colorado and its goaltending coach, and also with members of the Air Force hockey team.

"Ross had a lot to learn," Hammett said. "I think he has improved so much over the past three seasons. Through hard work he has turned himself into a pretty decent goaltender."

Hammett said when Mims returns he won't be handed the starting job automatically.

"He'll have to earn it back," he said. "It will depend on how the guys do while he is out. If they do the job, then it will be hard to make a change."

No. 5 Sun Devil golfers take to links in Missouri

BY LISA ESKEY
STATE PRESS

The fifth-ranked men's golf team will begin competition in St. Louis today at the Missouri Bluffs Invitational.

The field will consist of 15 teams, at least five of which are ranked in the top 20 nationally.

Redshirt freshman Brad Cannon will make his season debut in the tournament. Coach Randy Lein is anticipating big things from Cannon.

Lein said his team is more relaxed than when it entered the first tournament.

"When you're going into your first tournament, expectations are high and nobody really knows how well they are going to do," he said. "Winning breeds winning, and we're all set to play."

"We have higher expectations for this tournament now that we have one win already," junior captain Scott Johnson said.

"PICK IT AND WIN" CONTEST WINNER

Freshman Vikki Smith, who is undeclared on her major, was the Week Five winner of the State Press Sports "PICK IT AND WIN" contest for ASU football games.

Vikki picked USC to defeat ASU 28-7. Since none of the contestants who entered correctly picked the exact score of USC 31, ASU 0, Vikki's prediction was determined to be the closest.

Remember the winner must correctly pick the winner and the final score of the game.

Vikki edged her sister-in-law, senior Sara Smith, by just one point for the victory.

Vikki won an ASU cap courtesy of The Cap Co. on 6th St. and Mill Ave., an autographed Jake Plummer poster schedule courtesy of ASU athletics, a headshot in the State Press sports section, an ASU sports calendar and a bonus prize.

Smith on the game: "It was pretty sad. I think we are better than what the final score was though." Why did you predict 28-7? "My brother helped me a lot with it. He said to make sure I have USC winning by a lot."

Kansas City's Tracy Simien (54) goes airborne to stop Arizona running back Garrison Hearst during a goalline stand Sunday in the Cardinals' 24-3 loss in Sun Devil Stadium.

Chiefs hammer pathetic Cards; Bono not so slow

(AP) — The Arizona Cardinals knew the Kansas City Chiefs would be tough. They didn't expect them to be devious, too.

Steve Bono's two touchdown passes in the Chiefs' 24-3 victory Sunday didn't qualify, although one was to third-string lineman Joe Valerio.

It was his 76-yard touchdown run that qualified as a shocker.

"In four previous games, they hadn't shown a bootleg," outside linebacker Seth Joyner after Bono faked a handoff to Marcus Allen, then took off on the longest scoring run by a quarterback in NFL history.

"My job is to contain the quarterback on that play, keep the ball inside of me, and I was blocked in on the dive play and I went for the play."

The slow-footed Bono circled to his right while Allen was being wrestled down and ran, in apparent disbelief, untouched along the sideline while Valerio waved him on to the score that started the Chiefs on their way to victory.

"I'll be frank with you," coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "We didn't expect the result we got. I told him before the play, 'Don't pull a hamstring running.' But as slow as he runs, there was no danger of that."

"I thought for sure there would be someone out there, and that's why we had him (Valerio) there," said Bono, who started only 11 games over 10 previous seasons while stuck linked with Joe Montana.

"I needed to get into the record books with Joe somehow," Bono quipped.

Detroit's Greg Landry had a 76-yard, non-scoring run Sept. 27, 1970.

Later in the second quarter, it was Valerio's turn to score. Bono hit him with a 1-yard TD pass on a tackle-eligible play to give the Chiefs (4-1) a 14-0 lead at halftime. The 6-foot-5, 295-pound guard-center was uncovered for his fourth career touchdown.

"The first person I saw was the ref, and I was hoping he didn't make the tackle," Valerio said.

Bono hit Lake Dawson with a 14-yard scoring pass in the third quarter, and the Chiefs went ahead 24-0 on Lin Elliott's 28-yard field goal later in the quarter.

Meanwhile, the defense toyed with the Cardinals (1-4), sacking Dave Krieg seven times for 68 yards and stopping Arizona twice on downs. Krieg, who passed for 308 yards, faced a final insult when Brian Washington picked off his throw at the 1-yard line just before the 2-minute warning.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, the seventh sack forced Arizona to settle for a 48-yard field goal by Greg Davis.

Arizona stopped the Chiefs in the first quarter when Terry Hoage intercepted Bono's pass in the end zone. But Kansas City regained the momentum by stopping the Cardinals on three tries from the 1-yard line at the end of a 14-play, 79-yard drive that yielded no points.

"Mentally, it hurts you. Here we finally get a chance to put something on the board and go ahead 7-0, which we haven't done this whole season, and that's frustrating," Krieg said.

The next Arizona embarrassment occurred with 9:31 left in the second quarter, when Marcus Dowdell let a punt bounce between his legs.

Dowdell ran from the ball in an attempt to show he hadn't touched it. But Kansas City's Dale Carter pounced on it, and referees awarded the Chiefs possession on the Arizona 15, leading to Valerio's TD.

Arizona coach Buddy Ryan accepted responsibility for his team's failure. He said Dowdell, a backup wide receiver, was not supposed to be returning punts.

"It's all my fault," Ryan said. "These are my players, my guys. It's all my responsibility. I brought them here or kept them here, so I'm the No. 1 guy that you point the finger at. I'm also going to be responsible when they do good, don't forget that."
