ASASU president nearing resignation, officials say

Senator: 'He is making a fool out of himself'

By TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Student government President Chris Weber is considering resignation from office this week after being arrested for the second time in less than a month, according to a member of the Associated Students of ASU Senate.

A high-ranking senate member, who requested anonymity, was told by Weber that he intends to resign from office by the end of this week.

"He has informed several people that he intends to resign," the senator said. "If he doesn't resign, some action will be taken by the Senate."

Sen. Sanjay Vidyadaran, College of Law, said if Weber does not step down from office, the impeachment process will begin.

"If he doesn't resign," he said, "the articles of impeachment will be submitted at the next senate meeting."

Weber refused to comment on whether he will resign from office.

College of Liberal Arts Sen. Alex Shivers said Weber should not have hesitated in resigning.

"I am disappointed that he didn't turn in his resignation today (Wednesday)," Shivers said. "He is making a fool out of himself."

Graduate College Sen. Daran Wastchak said he anticipates a decision from Weber this week.

ASU DPS offers $1,000 reward for culprit in recent hate crime

By GREG ZEMEIDA
STATE PRESS

ASU police put up a $1,000 reward Wednesday in hopes of catching the person who wrote a racial slur on a female employee's car Oct. 4.

Using black spray paint, the person wrote the word "nigger" on the side of a Facilities Management worker's red 1991 Chevrolet Beretta while it was parked on the first level of Parking Structure 4, according to ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge.

Police are still looking into the incident, but no witnesses have come forward so far.

"We felt the reward would be helpful to supplement our investigative efforts," Standridge said.

The reward of up to $1,000 is for information leading to an arrest and conviction of the criminal. Standridge said ASU police felt that this particular case justified the use of a reward.

"We take this very, very seriously," he said. "This kind of act is just a cowardly act ... it's grossly offensive."

The last time Standridge can remember ASU police offering a reward was in the case of ASU student Theresa Hetherington, who was abducted from campus in February 1993 and severely beaten by unknown attackers.

Radawna Michelle, crime prevention officer for ASU police, said the graffiti slur is an isolated incident and not indicative of any racial problems on campus.

"ASU is not a hotbed of racism," she said. "I think our community should be surprised and outraged that something like this can happen in 1995."

Standridge said he doesn't know of any other incidents involving racial graffiti being committed on campus within the past year.

"Whether there is one or more, there's always too many," he said. "This is truly a senseless act."

Anyone with information about the incident can contact police at 965-3456. Those wishing to remain anonymous can call the Crime Zero line at 965-TIPS (8477).

Officials fuming over skating damages

By TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

Skateboarders and in-line skaters are on a collision course with campus officials concerned about destruction of ASU property.

"The damage is considerable," said ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge. "It's obviously from rollerbladers or skateboarders."

ASU grounds manager David Webb said in-line skaters chip the edges of steps, benches and other surfaces by sliding across them.

"The newest thing is waxing down wheelchair ramps and curbing so they can hit them and skid off faster," Webb said.

ASU is forced to pick up the tab for the damages unless the court orders the skater to pay — and that hasn't happened yet, Standridge said.

The chips cannot be repaired, nor can the wax be completely removed because it seeps into the concrete, Webb said. The wax creates a hazard for people in wheelchairs or on crutches.

Although in-line skating and skateboarding have long been banned at ASU, skaters keep coming back.

"For some reason it's being passed around among the 'bladers' that ASU is the place to go," said Department of Public Safety officer Cal Chappel.

Chappel said there were certain areas skaters like to hit. Railings and steps by the Nelson Fine Arts and Life Sciences buildings are the most common skating sites.

"They wax those areas down," Chappel said. "You'll see black areas that don't come out."

Standridge said there was little DPS could do, unless they actually catch the skaters damaging property.

"The first time we advise them that it is not permitted," Standridge said. "If our files reveal they've been cited before, (then) they could be cited for trespassing."

"Criminal damage is a possibility ... if we can attest that they caused the damage," he added.

Weber

"We anticipate that he will inform us of what he intends to do sometime this week," he said.

Executive Vice President Angelo DeSimone said he believes that Weber will make a decision quickly.

"I think something will happen real shortly," he said. "It can't go on like this."

According to Andrea Van Bommel, campus affairs vice president, Weber told the ASASU Executive Committee Tuesday night that he is thinking about stepping down.

"He told us that he was considering resigning," Van Bommel said. "But he didn't say that he was or wasn't."

Van Bommel said that Weber explained the situation surrounding his arrest to the committee, but did not admit guilt. She said that Weber expressed "regret for the situation" and the effect that it will have on the association.

"All that I can say is that he is considering it (resigning)," Activities Vice President Marc Wendell said.

If Weber resigns or is removed from office, DeSimone will assume the presidency.

Weber was arrested in the lobby of Palo Verde Main Monday night for disorderly conduct and trespassing. Along with Weber, Michael Bernoff and Scott Seltzer were also arrested. However, police dropped the disorderly conduct charges against Bernoff and Seltzer due to a lack of supporting evidence, ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge said.

Weber was also arrested Sept. 21 for assault after allegedly hitting a female student in a barroom fight involving two fraternities. He was scheduled to be arraigned for that charge Tuesday.

In Weber's recent arrest, according to Standridge, police were called to Palo Verde Main, an all-female dormitory, by residence hall staff around 10:30 Monday night. The staff member reported that three individuals were in the dormitory lobby acting in a disruptive manner.

An officer on the scene reported that Weber was loud and refused to answer questions, Standridge said. Weber also refused to submit to a breathalyzer test.

According to the police report, however, Weber had a "strong odor of alcohol coming from his breath."

Weber and Bernoff are both members of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

According to the report, Weber entered the lobby of Palo Verde Main with a hood over his head and his hands tied behind his back.

Around Arizona

Newspaper: Governor's finance history probed

PHOENIX (AP) — Criminal investigators say Gov. Fife Symington may have deliberately exaggerated his financial position to secure loans from federally insured banks, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

A federal probe into the bankrupt governor's financial dealings focuses on a $35 million turnaround in Symington's net worth as well as other discrepancies, according to The Arizona Republic.

In a 1989 financial statement used to borrow money for the project that led to Symington's bankruptcy filing, the governor claimed a net worth of $12 million. In a May 1991 statement, however, he said he was $23 million in the red.

The Republic, citing anonymous sources, said at least two of the governor's creditors are considering a challenge to Symington's bankruptcy because they think he submitted false financial statements.

Fortier Kingman home put on real estate market

(AP) For sale: Three-bedroom, two-bath mobile home located in quiet, residential neighborhood in Kingman. Owner indicted for helping to plot the April 19 bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building.

Michael Fortier, the former Army buddy of bombing suspects Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols, has put his home up for sale. The 13-year-old unit lacks a garage but boasts sturdy construction, as proved by numerous raids by FBI agents.

Cathy Masters, a real estate agent for National Jean White Realty, said Fortier's trailer is on the market for $32,000. She said Fortier's notoriety shouldn't be a factor in the sale, since homeowners' names are shielded from potential buyers until a deal has been reached.

"The owner's name does not come into play at all until we're ready to sign the contract," she said.

No offers have been made for the mobile home, which went up for sale last month.

The investigation into the Oklahoma City bombing tied Kingman in knots for nearly four months as federal authorities examined the life of McVeigh and Fortier led in the northwestern Arizona town. In August, Fortier was indicted by a federal grand jury but pleaded guilty and agreed to testify against McVeigh and Nichols.

In June, Paul and Irene Fortier, Michael's parents, put their home up for sale. Their two-bedroom, two-bath residential home comes with a few more amenities than their son's trailer — in particular, a fireplace and a two-car garage.

Asking price is $79,000.

"I heard he (Paul Fortier) is taking himself and his family and moving out of town," said Lawrence Falace, who runs a homeless shelter in Kingman that housed several drifters who knew McVeigh. "You can't live in a town this small when these things happen."

Rumors throughout Kingman suggest the Fortier clan is heading south to find seclusion in Phoenix. Repeated calls to the home of Fortier's parents went unanswered Wednesday. Masters said Michael Fortier's home has been vacant for some time.

U.N.: Cease-fire set after delay

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — What the world hopes will become a permanent cease-fire for Bosnia finally took effect early Thursday despite frantic last-minute battles for territory.

The U.S.-brokered truce went in force Thursday at one minute after midnight (5:01 p.m. Arizona time Wednesday), U.N. officials said.

They said it probably would take hours for orders to reach field commanders, making it likely that fighting would taper off overnight rather than end suddenly.

Sarajevans greeted the cease-fire with volleys of gunfire. This time, soldiers and civilians were firing into the air in celebration.

The 60-day truce, part of a U.S.-led effort to bring peace to the Balkans, was delayed for 48 hours while engineers tried to restore utilities to Sarajevo and armies battled for the final bits of territory.

The Muslim-led government and its Croat allies seized two Serb-held towns in northwest Bosnia before setting a firm time for the truce to begin.

Hours before the truce, the government was reportedly still advancing toward a third town, Prijedor, in northwest Bosnia. And Serbs were rushing to expel up to 20,000 non-Serbs remaining in northern Bosnia.

Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey, speaking in Brussels, Belgium, said the truce could be endangered if the expulsions continued.

"The cease-fire and the peace process are in jeopardy if the ethnic cleansing is not confronted," he said. The U.S. State Department said it was "exceedingly concerned" about the reports.

While Sarajevo, still ringed by hostile Serb forces, remained cut off from the outside world, the cease-fire agreement appeared to have secured its limited supplies of gas and electricity. But water was still short because of electrical pumping problems.

Another condition of the cease-fire — stable routes to the government enclave of Gorazde — had not yet been met. It could take days for the United Nations to clear mines.

But, in contrast to dozens of cease-fires that have failed since 1992, all sides appeared serious about making this one work. The truce is to lead to negotiations in the United States at the end of the month and a later peace conference in Paris.

"All conditions have been met, and we have the security that tonight we will have a cease-fire," said Antonio Pedauye, the United Nations' chief civilian official for Bosnia.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said his army "will cease all military activities except defensive ones as of midnight tonight." He said orders had been

FBI scours wreck area for clues

HYDER, Ariz. (AP) — Ninety FBI agents, some on their hands and knees in the dust and creosote bush, searched a desert gulch Wednesday for clues to who ever sent an Amtrak train off the bridge.

Cranes were used to begin lifting the toppled coaches so that agents could look underneath.

Four cars of the Sunset Limited toppled from a 30-foot-high trestle early Monday after hitting a sabotaged stretch of track. A crew member was killed and at least 78 were injured.

Agents assigned to Operation Splitrail also fielded a trickle of calls to a new toll-free hot line, interviewed residents in the area about what they might have seen and checked railroad records for leads to possibly disgruntled employees.

The search covered one square mile 55 miles southwest of Phoenix.

"They're in and out of cars, they're on their hands and knees, they're in the railroad cars, they're up and down hills, we're all around the area," FBI spokesman Jack Callahan said.

FBI Director Louis J. Freeh was asked on his way out of a Washington briefing if he anticipated arresting "the guys" responsible for the derailment soon.

"Guys?" Freeh responded, underlining that the bureau has not reached conclusions about whether one or more people were involved or even the gender of the saboteur or saboteurs. "We're going to do the best we can," Freeh added.

A senior Justice Department official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday that at least three copies had been found of a note interpreted as claiming responsibility in the name of a group called "Sons of Gestapo." The official said more copies may have been found.

The notes mentioned the government sieges at Waco, Texas, and Ruby Ridge, Idaho — both of them rallying cries for right-wing extremists. They also reportedly mention agencies including the FBI, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and an unspecified local sheriff.

The official denied a report in today's Los Angeles Times that investigators are leaning toward the theory the derailment was the work of a disgruntled railroad employee.

"We're still open-minded. We're not leaning in any direction yet. We're looking at railroad employees and radical groups," the official said.

Simpson: NBC was out to retry him

Lawyers advised backing out of TV interview

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson backed out of his live interview with NBC just hours before air time Wednesday night, complaining that the network was out to "retry me." He had agreed, he insisted, only to "a conversation, not a confrontation."

Days earlier, NBC said the former football star had consented to a no-holds-barred format for his first extensive interview since he was acquitted last week.

Tens of millions of viewers had been expected to tune in to the hourlong, commercial-free Dateline NBC interview that would have been conducted by NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw and Katie Couric.

Simpson suggested there were indeed conditions to the interview.

"It was agreed that this would be a conversation, not a confrontation. Because of pending litigation, there would be some questions that I could not obviously address at this time," he said in a statement read by his lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr.

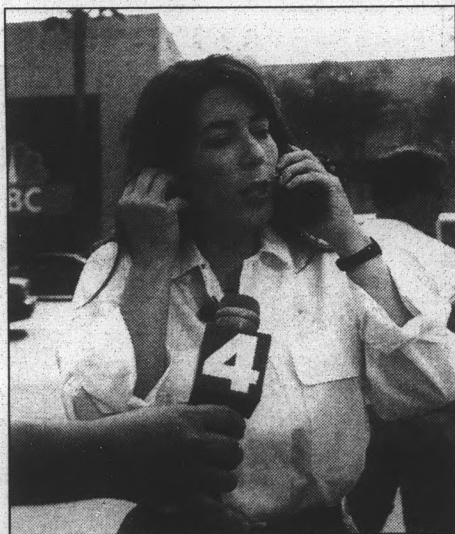

"It has become clear that NBC has, perhaps in an attempt to appease diverse public viewpoints, concluded that this would be a time and an opportunity to retry me."

Anything Simpson said on television could have been used against him in the wrongful-death lawsuits brought by the families of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. Simpson never took the stand at his yearlong murder trial but may have to do so if the lawsuits reach trial.

In another development Wednesday, Simpson lawyer Robert Baker contended in court papers that Simpson shouldn't have to pay damages in the suit brought by Goldman's relatives because Simpson was acquitted of his murder. The documents didn't mention the separate suit brought by Ms. Simpson's family.

Legal analysts have said that Simpson could still have to pay damages in a wrongful death suit even though he was acquitted.

Animals deserve ethical treatment

I just finished reading an article in the Aug. 9 issue of The Economist titled "What humans owe to animals." In talking about the poor treatment of animals such as chickens, cows and pigs in industrial farming, the article stated that most people start with the question, "Do animals have rights?"

C. LAKSHMAN

Guest Columnist

The article dismisses that question's usefulness because having rights also means having responsibilities, and since animals have no responsibility to humans most people don't think of animals as deserving rights. The article argues that to tackle the problem of poor treatment of animals, it may be better to start with the question, "Is the way we treat animals a moral issue at all?"

I simply don't understand why we talk about either giving rights to animals or about the right way to treat them. What right do we have to grant them rights or assign them responsibilities?

The very fact that we talk about treating them assumes that we can do what we want with these animals and it is simply a matter of morality for us to decide what to do. If you believe in the fact that animals, like humans, are creations of God, then they have an inherent right conferred upon them by the creator to wander the planet as freely as they wish just as humans are free to do so.

By taking away their freedom, putting them in cages and mistreating them, we are doing the same things that the Nazis did to the Jews, or the early Americans did to the Black slaves and to the Indians. We, as humans, simply invade these animals, take them out of their system of peaceful living and impose our system of rights and responsibilities on them. It doesn't make any sense to talk about rights of animals because it only applies to those people who have accepted some responsibilities.

A system of rights and responsibilities is a human creation. It is stupid to apply that to animals. Our system of rights and responsibilities depend, among other things, on who we vote into power in our governments. In other words we have a fundamental right to voice our opinion and negotiate the appropriate balance of rights and responsibilities.

Animals are not part of our system. We have to find a way in which we can live and let them live peacefully as they naturally want to do. Read this excerpt from The Economist and decide for yourself if we are letting animals live a natural life:

"There is a 95 percent chance that the hen that laid your breakfast is a battery hen. She is confined to a tiny cage with four or five others for her entire adult life. Instinct leads hens to scratch in the earth, to make nests, to perch and spread their wings; the average egg layer will do none of these. Instead she is squeezed into a space about the space of the picture on your cover (8 1/2 x 11), barely enough to move. She may exercise her pecking instinct by pecking out her neighbors' feathers — unless her beak has been cut off with a red-hot blade, probably causing pain for life."

This account is likely to trouble most people. But people do not stop and think when they are biting into that juicy chicken sandwich. I am not by any means blaming people. I attribute it to one simple reason — out of sight, out of mind.

No normal person would keep a hen in a shoe box for her entire adult life, but almost everyone would eat finely packaged eggs and chicken. Our industrialized society hides a lot of troubling things about industrialized farming.

If the excerpt from The Economist troubled you even by a small amount, you should do something. I suggest that you take one day from your next weekend and visit a poultry farm and see for yourself what kind of life these hens have. Remember not to judge and evaluate their lives as you would human beings. They are not human beings.

Simply compare their current lives to what they would have naturally had, if we had left them alone. If you come from a different country such as India, like I do, you probably have seen lots of hens running around in rural areas, engaging in their natural instincts such as nesting, scratching and pecking. You will be amazed at how much better that hen will taste in your sandwich or in your curry as opposed to a hen that's been in a shoe box all of her adult life.

Most people let others do the thinking for them. Try seeing for yourself to make up your mind. After all, that is what we as human beings are naturally inclined to do. I promise you that your trip to the poultry farm will be no vacation.

But don't let me tell you what to think. See for yourself and find out what you think. Here's another excerpt from The Economist, this one from the article, "People and animals: Also a part of creation":

"Such images! Calves shoved from lorries, and thrown from lorries' upper decks. More calves, teething the bars of tiny stalls where they are lucky if they can turn around. A bull suspended by one broken leg, then dropped from a height to a hard deck below. A man in an apron kicking a pig, again and again, as the pig shrieks from the blows. ('Sadistic, sick little man!' screams a voice in the crowd.) Pigs and sheep suspended up-side down, fully conscious (they are supposed to have been stunned but have not been) and still blinking and gulping for a few excruciating seconds as blood floods from their throats. In the crowd, faces are covered, a woman is crying and shouting something about 'liars' and 'murderers.'"

This is a film shown in a crowded church in England to people who were concerned about trade in live animals. Again, this would trouble most people. When you don't see this, but do see smartly packaged beef or pork, you are going to buy and eat it. Most people don't realize that it is their demand for products that creates all these cruelties. The common people have a lot more control in their hands than they realize.

If you are troubled at all, plan a trip to a cattle farm and see for yourself and make your own decisions. Choosing not to buy and eat such products is my way. You may be able to come up with a much better idea. We don't have a responsibility to grant rights to animals, but we do have a moral responsibility to ourselves to lead clean, ethical lives.

Live and let live should be a general ethical motto to live by.

C. Lakshman is a graduate student studying management.

A second coming

"On Oct. 16 something phenomenal will take place in America.

NICOLE FARNUM

Guest Columnist

"Black people throughout the country will assert their freedom by declaring this day as their first Holy Day of Atonement and Reconciliation.

"During this Holy Day, Black men will atone to God for abusing their women and failing to be the leaders and builders of their community. To show God that Black people are willing to turn from their evil ways and seek His deliverance, a million Black men will humble themselves by marching in Washington, D.C.

"And throughout the day, all Black people in this country will atone to God for failing to accept His call to come out of the mentality of a slave, and into the vast world of freedom of thought and action on behalf of self, family and nation."

The above-mentioned words are the words of Minister Louis Farrakhan of the Nation of Islam in describing the significance of Oct. 16 for Black people throughout America. According to Jet magazine, the march has been strongly endorsed by many civil rights and religious leaders, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson; the Rev. Al Sharpton; the Rev. Henry Lyons, president of the National Baptist Convention; the Rev. B. W. Smith, head of the Progressive National Baptist Convention; and Bishop Chandler David Owens, presiding bishop of the Church of God in Christ. Also endorsing the march is Rosa Parks, mother of the civil rights movement, as well as 200 organizations, including the Congressional Black Caucus.

As a Black student here at ASU, I would like to comment on what I perceive as the significance of Oct. 16.

Because I grew up during the '70s, I could not participate in the civil rights movement. I have relied on history books and the memories of friends and relatives to learn how Black people in this country united in the name of liberation.

However, this Oct. 16, all Black people in this country may actively take part in the continued effort to liberate ourselves in America. I feel very fortunate to be able to participate in what will be a momentous part of American history.

Once again, Black people throughout this country will look beyond their differences, and instead will strive toward that one common goal we as Black people in America struggle to attain: freedom in the truest sense of the word.

On Oct. 16, the rest of America will realize the strength we have as a unified people. The rest of America will understand that our interests are no longer to be taken lightly, ignored or discarded. On Oct. 16, all Black people in America will be absent from school and work; they will not shop or buy anything that day. Instead, we will teach our children and each other the importance of the day.

And, we will all register to vote as Independents to show the political parties that we will no longer serve as tokens in their political games.

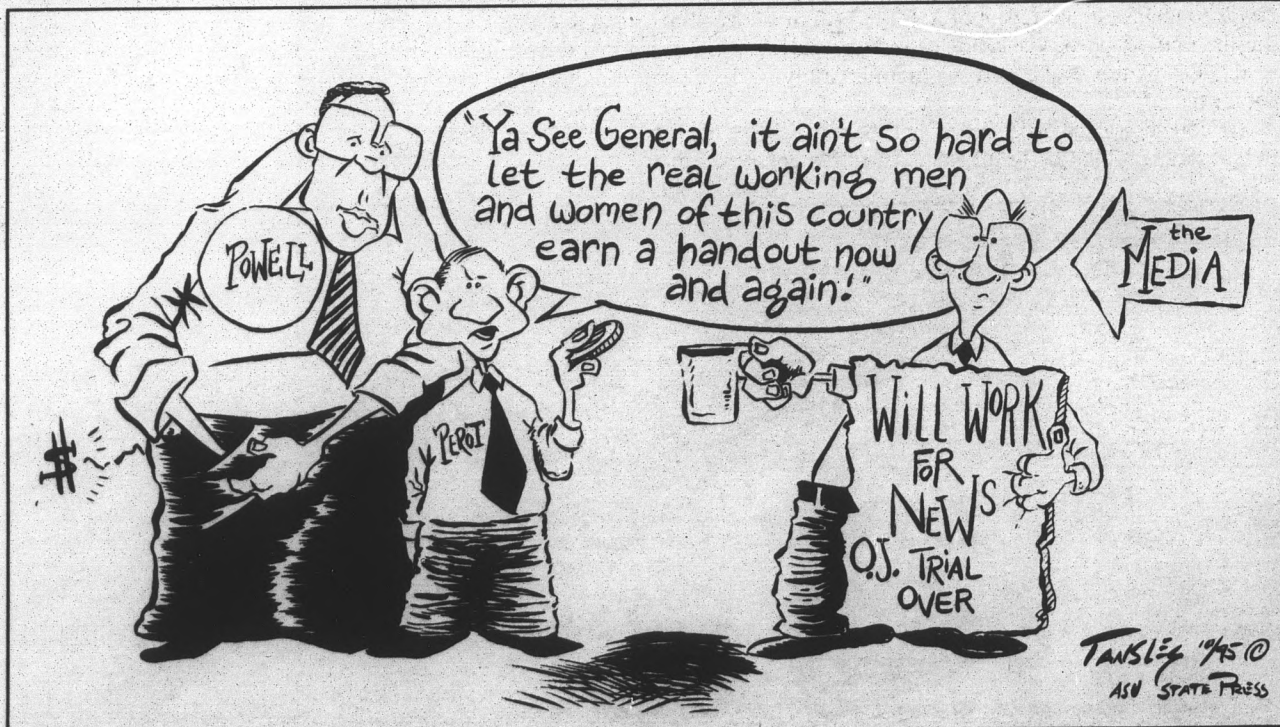

So whether it be through the march, through Black people's absence from mainstream America, or through a combination of both, the rest of America will realize the significance of Black people in this country on Oct. 16.

The whole world will see Black people in America in a new light. No longer will we be seen as a divided group. Instead, we will be recognized as a united whole, ready and able to atone for our mistakes and determine our way toward progress and improvement. Through faith and unity we will succeed.

Nicole Farnum is a third year law student.

Editor's note:

On Oct. 16, The Million Man March on Washington will take place. It has been hailed as a day of atonement for many men of color, a day to reunify, to register to vote and to let Congress know that people of color will not tolerate a roll-back of the Civil Rights movement. The State Press wants to know how ASU students, faculty and staff feel about this issue. If you are a person of color, how have your life experiences shaped your perceptions about the state of this country and what kind of impact do you think this march can have? If you aren't a person of color, what does this march signify to you? How have your life experiences shaped your perceptions about the state of this country? The deadline for letters is 5 p.m. Today, Oct. 12. If you want information on the march you can call 1-800-324-9243.

Astrological professionals to offer celestial insight

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
AND DAVID PROFFITT
STATE PRESS

A group of astrologers and celestial supporters will materialize in the Arizona Room of the Memorial Union, at 7 p.m. today to listen to a lunar lecture and receive astrological readings from local experts.

Peter Gersten, director of Timeless Journeys, the organization sponsoring the "Celestial Celebration," said people who want to learn more about their lives and the way the moon affects their sensitivity should attend the meeting.

"It's (astrology) the oldest form of psychology," he said. "If a person wants to learn more about themselves, ... this will give them that opportunity."

Gersten added that for $10 ($15 for non-students) attendees will receive a birth chart and a mini-analysis of that chart from some of Arizona's best astrologers. Participants will also be able to take part in contests and games and listen to Lauri Randall, the events coordinator for the Arizona Society of Astrologists.

"We're going to discuss where the moon is on a person's birth chart," Gersten said. "Everyone knows where the sun is — you ask someone what their sign is they tell you their sun chart."

Philip Sedgwick, an astrologer working with Timeless Journeys, said the moon gives powerful clues to a person's emotional nature.

"It represents your emotional nature, your reactions and emotional needs," he said. "The focus (of the lecture) is to help people understand their emotional nature. A lot of times, people invalidate their basic needs because they don't realize what they are."

The lecture is part of a year-long series covering a different planet every month. Next month's lecture will be about Venus and last month's discussed the Sun.

The idea is to have fun, Sedgwick said.

"We had a lot of students come to the last lecture and they were wonderful," he said. "It's such a treat to see people with such receptivity."

Gersten, who is originally from New York, said he was told in a 1993 "vision quest" to move to Arizona and reunite people with friends and relatives from past lives.

"It seemed that I was directed to come down here to bring people together who were together in a past life," he said. "When I got down here, people would approach me and say they recognized me and a couple of them said 'it must be a former life.' That's the philosophy of Timeless Journeys."

Student groups to make sandwiches for charity

By TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

Hillel, the Jewish student organization, will be making peanut butter and jelly sandwiches today on Cady Mall from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to donate to Saint Vincent DePaul.

Several fraternities and sororities, including Alpha Phi and Phi Sigma Kappa, will assist in pumping out PB and Js for charity, said Melanie Sasson, Jewish campus service corps representative. Other Greek organizations may also sign up, Sasson added.

"I think Alpha Chi Omega and a few others may help," she said.

Sasson said the event was to celebrate the spirit of giving during Sukkoth, the Jewish harvest festival.

"The reason I'm doing this is to involve the campus in the spirit of the holiday," Sasson said. "My main goal is to encourage as many people as possible to be active."

Sasson said anyone could sign up for a half hour shift, or they could just stop by and help with the sandwich-making.

"Everyone should come by," she said.

Anger-control aide hits client; man brain dead

HONOLULU (AP) — An anger-management counselor lost his temper and allegedly punched a man who arrived at a class drunk. The man lapsed into a coma and was declared brain dead.

Charles Mahuka, who was on parole for attempted murder, was arrested on suspicion of assaulting 32-year-old Miguel Gonzales at a meeting Monday night at a church in Waianae. Mahuka could face murder charges.

Dora Hoopii-Spalding, a witness, said Mahuka, 39, punched Gonzales, knocked him to the ground and hit him three more times while he was down. Gonzales was drunk and ignoring requests to stop being disruptive, she said.

Gonzales had been ordered by Family Court to attend the anger-management class after he was arrested and accused of assaulting his girlfriend.

The program's director, Hyimeen Grilho, said Mahuka has helped many people deal with their abusive impulses.

Mahuka went to prison for stabbing a man with a fishing spear in 1986.

Scientist reports successful results in AIDS research

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A scientist says he has succeeded in causing AIDS in monkeys with a virus more closely resembling the one that infects people — a development that overcomes one obstacle to the development of drugs and vaccines against the disease.

Vaccine research had been slowed because HIV, the human AIDS virus, has not caused monkeys to become sick with AIDS. However, monkeys can develop the disease from the simian immunodeficiency virus, which is similar to HIV.

Bill Narayan, a virologist at the University of Kansas Medical Center, used a virus developed by Harvard researchers that combines parts of HIV with SIV. He then increased the strength of the hybrid virus by passing it from monkey to monkey through bone marrow transplants.

Within six months of being infected with the newly developed virus, about 20 monkeys developed many of the symptoms seen in humans. Three monkeys have died so far of AIDS-related causes, and four others are severely ill.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, called the new virus a significant finding.

"We have been trying for so many years to find an animal model for HIV," he said. "This model will accelerate research."

The National Institutes of Health has given Narayan a four-year, $1.6 million grant to continue studying the virus.

Dr. Norman Letvin, who helped develop the hybrid virus, described Narayan's work as a technical step, not a breakthrough, and said several laboratories are working on making monkeys sick with the virus.

Letvin said it was premature to discuss Narayan's work because it has not undergone review by other scientists.

Comic in crisis: Dagwood and Blondie see counselor

NEW YORK (AP) — For 65 years, Dagwood Bumstead found the answer to his problems in an overstuffed sandwich or a snooze on the couch. Welcome to the '90s, Dagwood: He and Blondie are headed to the marriage counselor.

The comic strip couple, who have enjoyed connubial bliss since 1933, hit a bump in the marital road when Blondie decided last week to move her catering business outside the family home.

In this Sunday's comic, a co-worker will mention the "m-word" — marriage counselor. But fear not: Cartoonist Dean Young said there are no plans to draw up divorce papers.

"Let's not get too profound," Young said Wednesday from his Florida studio. "In the grand scheme of things, this is a comic strip."

On Monday, the couple will decide to visit Dr. Marjorie Squabble. The good doctor will spend a week helping Blondie and Dagwood get their marriage back on track in what Young calls a "racy" episode for the strip.

The idea of the Bumsteads trying to get in touch with their inner children has Young laughing already.

"They are a couple in the realm of Romeo and Juliet, Anthony and Cleopatra, Napoleon and Josephine," said Young, tongue firmly in cheek. "When you think of Dagwood and Blondie heading to a marriage counselor, there's going to be laughs and chuckles."

Dagwood hasn't found much sympathy from other characters in the strip while trying to persuade Blondie to stay home. Cora Dithers, the wife of Dagwood's boss, offered this advice on Wednesday: "Keep your big fat mouth shut!"

Blondie opened her business over Labor Day 1991, making the Bumsteads a two-income family for the first time since Dagwood's parents disinherited him during the Depression. Back then, Young's father, Chic Young, was drawing the strip.

Dean Young, who took over in 1973, said of the Bumsteads: "I think at some point, their identity transferred from two-dimensional to some kind of form that people relate to on a real basis."

The strip is published in more than 2,300 papers worldwide.

Gingrich's homosexual views 'in minority,' sister says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Candace Gingrich, the lesbian sister of the House speaker, marked "National Coming Out Day" by addressing a rally at the Capitol and asserting that her brother's views on anti-gay discrimination laws put him "in the minority."

Also at the Capitol on Wednesday, the Traditional Values Coalition declared it "National Coming Out of Homosexuality Day" and featured several speakers who had "come out of the homosexual lifestyle." The conservative group says it represents more than 31,000 churches nationwide.

"The truth is that people who are struggling with a homosexual identity can get help," said Tony Falzarano, executive director of Transformation Ex-Gay Ministries in Washington. "The gay community is out to recruit young men and women all over the country today."

Falzarano, who has been married to a woman for 12 years and has two children, described himself as having "lived in a gay lifestyle" for seven years and then changing his orientation with the help of his Christian faith.

Both rallies were small on a sunny autumn day. But Ms. Gingrich, 29, who has been on a 51-city tour as a new spokeswoman for the Human Rights Campaign, attracted some media attention. The group, which is the nation's largest gay lobby, launched a coming out campaign last April to urge gay men and lesbians to tell people about their sexual orientation in hopes of ending discrimination.

After Ms. Gingrich's brief speech, reporters asked about her brother's conservative views on discrimination against gays.

"I happen to know that he's in the minority," she replied. "I know that the majority of Americans do not want to see gays and lesbians in our country discriminated against. ... My brother does not feel that gays and lesbians need federal protection in the workplace, and he has repeated myths and stereotypes about gays and lesbians that I happen to know are untrue."

Gingrich, R-Ga., has said that school programs that deal with gays and lesbians may be thinly veiled efforts to recruit new homosexuals, and has rejected the idea of passing a federal law protecting homosexuals from job discrimination.

Employers should not inquire about the sexual orientation of an employee, the speaker has said, but if they do inquire and fire the employee, there should be no recourse to the federal courts.

Gingrich spokesman Tony Blankley, asked about Ms. Gingrich's remarks, said the speaker was "delighted that his sister is out expressing her political beliefs. ... Obviously, they don't agree on everything but they still love each other like a brother and sister."

Johnson & Johnson settle charges over K-Y jelly ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Johnson & Johnson is settling federal charges that advertising for its spermicidal lubricant contained misleading statements about condoms.

The Federal Trade Commission said the company's 1994 campaign for K-Y Plus Nonoxynol-9 Spermicidal Lubricant contained numerous false statements, including that studies show that up to 18.5 percent of condoms will fail.

In announcing the settlement Wednesday, the FTC said the statistic came from a report that estimated that 18.5 percent of couples using condoms will experience an unplanned pregnancy during a one-year period.

"The statistic cited in the ads therefore does not represent a per-condom failure rate," the commission said Wednesday.

Another ad urged use of K-Y Plus and falsely stated that one out of six condoms will develop holes during use that are big enough for sperm and the AIDS and other sexually transmitted viruses to pass through, the agency said.

"Johnson & Johnson Consumer Products Inc. has entered into a consent agreement with the Federal Trade Commission, acknowledging that certain advertisements for its K-Y Plus product in 1994 contained statements that could be misconstrued," Johnson & Johnson said.

Johnson & Johnson said that the ads, which appeared in women's and parenting magazines from April through September 1994, were meant to stress the importance of using condoms and using them correctly, and that there was no intent to mislead.

The proposed agreement would prohibit Johnson & Johnson and its subsidiaries from misrepresenting the results or conclusions of tests or studies of nonprescription products used for human reproduction, reproductive organs or sexually transmitted diseases.

"These statements should have been more carefully worded to clearly reflect the real intent of the advertisements," the health-care products company said. "There was no intent to imply that condoms are defective."

Nation's capital prepares for black men's rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be no marching and no one knows how many men will be here. But the nation's capital is scrambling to get ready for an influx of buses and people for next week's Million Man March.

The Capitol Police urged members of Congress and their staffs to carpool to work on Monday, warning all commuters to expect clogged roads and jammed subways during the all-day event for black men.

"You've really got to plan for the most; if they say a million, that's what you plan for," U.S. Park Service spokeswoman Sandra Alley said Wednesday. "Realistically, what its going to be, we don't know yet."

Sam Jordan, director of the city's office of emergency preparedness, said the city is planning for at least 500,000 people to attend.

The event, also called "a day of atonement," will bring black men together for prayer, reflection and inspirational speakers. Organizers have asked black women to stay home while the men gather to atone for past sins and commit themselves to uplifting their families and communities.

They also will be asked to unite for political strength. But they won't march.

"There's no room for anybody to march anywhere. We named it a march because that's a familiar name," said Abdul Allah Muhammad, a spokesman for march organizers, including Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

Organizers predict more than a million black men will cover the grass of the National Mall, from a stage at the foot of the Capitol to the Lincoln Memorial. Such a turnout would be unprecedented for a demonstration.

According to Park Service estimates, the biggest turnout for a demonstration was 600,000 people for a 1969 Vietnam War protest. The 1963 civil rights march led by Martin Luther King Jr. drew an estimated 250,000 people.

Other events, such as the bicentennial fireworks celebration in 1976, have drawn an estimated 1 million people, but they were spread over more of the city, Park Police said.

Although organizers of the Million Man March have been meeting with local officials for months, the city was still working out details of street closings around the mall just four days before the event.

"It's not unusual for things to get very chaotic," said Maj. Robert Hines, a Park Police spokesman. "You start out planning one of these things months in advance, and things don't get really intense until right beforehand. Then people start changing their minds about what they want to do."

One sign of confusion: Organizers initially asked reporters to pay $5 each for press passes to cover the event, then rescinded the request Wednesday. "That was somebody's brilliant error who hadn't studied the First Amendment," Muhammad said.

Associated Press

The Rev. Wendell Anthony (right), president of the Detroit chapter of the NAACP, and others prepare to drop rose petals from Detroit's Belle Isle Bridge Wednesday. A small group gathered at the site to talk about the upcoming Million Man March and to remember Deletha Word, 33, who fell to her death at about the same spot while fleeing from an attacker after an Aug. 19 fender bender on the bridge.

In addition to the rally, Farrakhan has asked black men who can't attend — as well as women and children — to stay home from work and school Monday to mark a "day of absence."

March organizers are urging black Americans to avoid spending any money that day to demonstrate black spending power.

Some black leaders have declined to endorse the march because it is lead by Farrakhan, who has made comments offensive to whites, Jews, homosexuals and other groups. Some also have complained because women were not invited.

President Clinton "has some deep reservations about the organizers of this march, in particular Reverend Farrakhan," press secretary Mike McCurry said Wednesday.

But, McCurry said, "The president finds it encouraging that people would come together in an effort to promote the concepts of personal responsibility and responsibility to community."

Black men coming to the rally are asked not to stay in hotels, but instead to leave town Monday night or stay in volunteers' homes. Hotels report that few rooms have been booked for the event.

For an April 1993 gay rights march, which drew an estimated crowd of 300,000, hotel rooms were filled from Richmond, Va., to Baltimore, Md.

"There still could be half a million people here, if they are avoiding hotels," said Emily Vetter president of the city's hotel association. "I don't think anybody knows, really."

Benjamin Chavis, another march organizer, has said at least 10,000 buses are expected from every state in the country.

The American Bus Association did an informal check of 15 of its largest members, and found only about 75 buses chartered for the event, mostly from the Northeast and Atlanta. But bus association spokeswoman Ginger Croce said thousands of small companies have one or two buses, and churches nationwide own buses.

Across the Potomac in Arlington, Va., school bus service was canceled for Monday because almost half the drivers are taking the day off to attend the rally.

Simpson

The civil action has a less stringent burden of proof than the criminal case.

The cancellation was seen as a setback for Simpson, eager to counter widespread public outrage over his acquittal.

"Now, it's a public relations disaster," said legal analyst Stan Goldman said, "as if he needed any more public relations disasters."

NBC's announcement Monday that it would broadcast the interview had prompted a storm of protest from groups and individuals inside and outside the network who criticized NBC for giving a forum to Simpson.

NBC had been inundated with thousands of calls, mostly negative, spokeswoman Lynn Gardner said.

Brokaw announced Simpson's pullout in a special live afternoon broadcast.

"NBC News had a clear understanding as of yesterday morning with Mr. Simpson and his lawyers that there would be no conditions attached to this interview," Brokaw said.

"But Mr. Simpson's lawyers overnight prevailed upon him not to participate, they said, because of the civil suit that he faces."

In an interview on CBS radio station WBBM in Chicago, Brokaw was asked if he and Couric would have been barred from asking about the murders.

"It came down to that," Brokaw said with a laugh. "They did say, 'Well, are you going to get into timelines?' And we said, 'That's how we're going to begin.'"

Gloria Allred, the lawyer for Ms. Simpson's family, quoted Ms. Simpson's sister Tanya Brown as saying after Simpson canceled: "It makes my day."

"We both feel that the appropriate place for Mr. Simpson to tell his version of events is under oath, under penalty of perjury."

Tammy Bruce, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the National Organization for Women, said: "Our reaction is I don't know why anyone should be surprised. Mr. Simpson has acted like a coward throughout this trial."

"I think NBC responded naively to the feeling they were going to get anything of substance from Mr. Simpson," Bruce added.

NOW had planned a protest rally outside the network's Burbank studios during the interview.

Civil trial lawyer Thomas Stolpman said Simpson may have lacked proper legal advice when he agreed to appear because his attorneys were unavailable or were at odds with each other on the issue.

Cease-fire

issued to the military commander, Gen. Rasim Delic.

Earlier, Hasan Muratovic, a Bosnian government minister, said: "I hope that this is the last day of this war."

Radovan Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader, issued orders for his troops to hold their fire as of midnight, the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA said. But he said rebels reserved the right to retaliate against "vulnerable enemy targets" for any cease-fire violations — meaning Serbs could respond by shelling cities.

If the cease-fire does take hold, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev said the war could be settled in weeks.

"It's quite realistic to speak of achieving a political settlement in a matter of probably one month," Kozyrev said in Helsinki, Finland.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns predicted the cease-fire would last longer than previous ones, saying the United States had invested "our credibility, our influence, our diplomatic emphasis" in it.

In Brussels, NATO policymakers on Wednesday approved an action plan for a peace force in Bosnia that could include up to 50,000 troops — one-third to one-half of them being American.

The U.S.-brokered truce, signed Oct. 5, originally was scheduled to take force early Tuesday, but natural gas and electricity were not restored in time.

It appeared, however, that the government also had been stalling to buy time for its army. Offensives were reported in at least four locations. Two key Serb-held towns in northwestern Bosnia, Sanski Most and Mrkonjic Grad, were reported to have fallen.

Amtrak

The FBI hot line — (800) 905-1514 — received 130 calls in its first 22 hours, compared with 3,000 that came in during the same period in a far bigger case, the Oklahoma City bombing.

FBI spokesman Susan Lloyd noted there are far fewer potential witnesses, since the train derailed in the middle of the night in a roadless stretch of desert.

Also Wednesday, Randy Weaver, the white separatist at the center of the siege at Ruby Ridge, issued a statement denouncing the sabotage and saying he had never heard of "Sons of Gestapo."

"I am angry that anyone would use the tragedy that occurred to my family as some kind of justification for further senseless killing and more tragedy," said Weaver, whose wife and 14-year-old son were killed along with a federal marshal in the 1992 siege. "I hope that the persons who derailed that train and killed and seriously injured innocent people will be caught and tried and brought to justice."

The FBI refused to clear up much of the mystery surrounding the sabotage.

For the record, Amtrak has said somebody unbolted a bar that holds two sections of rail together. The gap was bridged with a wire to fool an electrical system intended to warn train crews of a break in the rail.

Sources have anonymously told various media of further tampering with the spikes that hold down the rail. One told The Associated Press 29 spikes were removed; other reports have a rail being pried up, moved and then spiked down out of alignment.

More confusion surrounds the note or notes found outside or on the wrecked train.

Some media have reported there were up to six copies of the same note. Gov. Fife Symington said Tuesday there were several different versions with the same theme.

ASU student exposes another view of 'Campus Men'

BY ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

It was a once in a lifetime opportunity for ASU student John Preece — three days and nights in New York, television interviews and limousine rides.

All he had to do was drop his pants.

Preece, a senior aeronautical management technology major, posed nude for Playgirl's November "Campus Men" pull-out magazine.

"You only live once," he said of his decision to pose for the magazine. "You've got to take every opportunity you can while you can so you have no regrets."

The issue is available today, and Preece will autograph copies of the magazine after he performs with the U.S. Male Dance Revue at Club 411 at 7:30 tonight.

Playgirl selected six college students from universities west of Colorado for the issue. About 150 men sent in photos — none of them nude — and the winners were chosen for their physical attributes, said Beth Robins, the magazine's public relations director.

Robins and Preece would not disclose

Preece said some people will disagree with his decision to pose nude but there is nothing wrong with it.

"There's nothing illegal or immoral about it," he said. "People have a right to have opinions (but) if they want to impose them on me, they can just go to hell."

Although posing nude is no big deal, junior criminal law major Mike Schmidt said he would never do it.

"My mom would kick my ass," he said.

But Daniel Clark, a junior religious studies major, said he would pose nude for the right amount of money. "I don't see a problem with it at all," he said.

Although Playgirl is a national magazine, Preece said the exposure will not hurt his chances to be a pilot.

"As long as I keep the two separate, it shouldn't have much of an impact," he said.

I was shy at the start, but after a few minutes it was no big deal.

—John Preece, ASU senior

how much Preece was paid, but Robins said it is less than the thousands of dollars professional models earn.

Preece, who wants to be a pilot, said posing nude did not bother him.

"I was shy at the start, but after a few minutes it was no big deal," he said. "Everyone was cooperative and professional."

ASU senior John Preece, an aeronautical management technology major, is still wearing clothes here, but takes it all off in November's Playgirl, due on stands today.

BYU quarterback Sarkisian living up to hype

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

Last year Brigham Young University, otherwise known as "quarterback U.," found itself in a predicament it had never been in before. It didn't have a quarterback.

So BYU, which prided itself on raising quarterbacks right out of High School found itself in the odd position of looking in the junior college ranks. It found Steve Sarkisian.

Sarkisian, though, was not a man without a resume. At El Camino Junior College in Torrance, Calif., Sarkisian threw for 7,274 yards in his two seasons, including a record shattering 4,297 yards passing in his second year.

But coming to BYU can be very humbling considering the ghosts of quarterbacks past that haunt the campus in Provo.

"I'm very honored to be talked about in the same breath, but I don't feel I'm stepping into that class of player," Sarkisian said. "I appreciate what they did because of the pressures up here."

Sarkisian follows the likes of Marc Wilson, Jim McMahon, Steve Young, national championship-winner Robbie Bosco, Heisman Trophy-winner Ty Detmer and last year's star, John Walsh, who exited early for the NFL.

Besides having 10 very large shoes to fill, the 21-year-old Sarkisian also had the daunting task of learning the BYU offense just over the spring and summer. Sarkisian credits Bosco, now a coach, as well as head coach Lavell Edwards and quarterbacks' coach Norm Chow with easing him into the system.

"I was very fortunate that I have a great set of coaches," Sarkisian said. "How they handed down the plays to me was good because they gave me the right amount of plays as I was ready for them. It really helped having coach Bosco who had run the plays."

Sarkisian will lead the 2-2 Cougars against ASU, this Saturday, a team he thinks is better than its records shows.

"They've got a lot of good athletes," Sarkisian said. "I think a couple of plays the other way and they'd be 4-2 instead of 2-4. They're going to be hungry for a win and we're going to have to play hard to beat them."

Although he wasn't part of the game, Sarkisian said of last year's homecoming loss to the Sun Devils in Provo that the real BYU team did not show itself, something he hopes to change this year.

"Last year we didn't show ASU how BYU can really play," Sarkisian said. "I'd like to see how evenly we match up."

Sarkisian says he hasn't met all his personal goals, but

ASU football in losing trend

With the white flag about to wave to signal the submission of this football season, two questions come to mind: When is this team going to turn the corner fans have been hearing about for the last two seasons? And is a head coaching change necessary to change this losing trend?

Head coach Bruce Snyder must lead his team to victory in at least two of the five remaining games to avoid the worst back to back finishes since 1946-47 when ASU won a combined six games.

This current losing trend is starting to wear thin on ASU football supporters. The attendance has dropped in the last four years, with this season's figures on pace to be the worst since 1969 — and that is anticipating a sellout in the season finale against UofA.

Snyder was brought in to replace the ineffective Larry Marmie after the 1991 season. Marmie was fired with a four-year record of 22-21-1. Snyder's record before this Saturday's game with BYU is 17-22-0. In order for him to equal Marmie's win-total in the same amount of time, ASU would have to go undefeated the rest of the season.

Snyder will tell you that injuries have played a major part of the record being what it has been the last two seasons. There is no denying that fact, but then wouldn't it be more accurate to say that the lack of depth on the team is what is really hurting them? Injuries are expected in football. The key is to overcome them with deep talent.

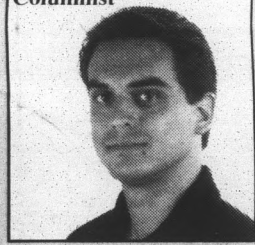

Snyder is entering his fourth year at the helm at ASU. That is the year that his players are finally going to contribute. Well, sorry to tell you that he had better seasons when Marmie's people were here than now. In Snyder's first two seasons, ASU finished 6-5. Last year, with his players, he finished 3-8 — with that same record a strong possibility again this season.

In his defense, though, he has never placed blame on anyone but himself. That's very noble, but it doesn't put W's on the board.

Snyder said that his team doesn't know how to win games yet. If that isn't a direct reflection on the coaching staff, I don't know what is.

Prized ASU recruit Mitchell ready to make contribution

DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

He was ASU's most celebrated high school recruit. He was supposed to be a key ingredient in ASU's offense. Kenny Mitchell was going to be a lot of things, but he's mainly been a spectator on the sidelines so far.

Mitchell, a Parade All-American from Peoria High, has waited patiently for a chance to prove himself on the football field. Through six games, Mitchell has no receptions as a Sun Devil. The 6-foot-4-inch wide receiver caught 41 passes for 800 yards and eight touchdowns in his senior year. He also helped Peoria win the 4A state championship.

"Everything happens for a reason," Mitchell, a freshman, said, referring to his slow start. "Whatever happens, happens, but I'm glad I'm a Sun Devil."

Since his signing with ASU, Mitchell has dealt with high expectations from himself and others.

"At first it was really hard," Mitchell said. "Then I just had to put everything out of my mind and be coachable."

Sun Devil quarterback Jake Plummer said, "Everyone in this valley here who had heard about Kenny Mitchell expected him to come in and catch four or five balls a game. But like Keith Poole, who's a great receiver, he didn't come into his own until last year. His freshman year he maybe caught six or seven balls, but look at him now."

Head Coach Bruce Snyder said Mitchell's role will expand in the upcoming weeks.

"We've been working him in more and more each game," he said. "In fact, he had a few snaps in the Stanford game and they just weren't running plays. I think he's going to continue to get more and more snaps and eventually he'll get a ball thrown to him."

Plummer said it will be difficult to keep Mitchell out of any more games, mostly due to his large frame as a receiver.

"He's a big, physical wide receiver that can hopefully intimidate those corners and safeties," Plummer said. "They don't know whether it's run or pass. They are a little on ease. So when he's taking them out (and) hitting them real good, they're going to be a little more sketchy

Indians tie ALCS at 1 with 5-2 victory

SEATTLE (AP) — Orel Hershiser would have none of it. Not the Kingdome noise, not the fireworks set off after Ken Griffey Jr.'s home run, not the momentum the Seattle Mariners were starting to build. None of it was going to stop him from winning a game the Cleveland Indians absolutely had to have.

Hershiser maintained his perfect career record in the postseason, and Manny Ramirez homered twice and went 4-for-4, leading the Indians past Seattle 5-2 Wednesday night and tying the AL playoffs at 1-all.

"We looked at this as sort of a must-win for us," Hershiser said. Showing the form that once made him baseball's best pitcher, the 37-year-old Hershiser allowed four hits in eight innings and improved to 6-0 with a 1.47 ERA in 10 playoff and World Series games. His only blemish came in the sixth inning when Griffey tied a postseason record with his

Braves beat Reds on 3-run homer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Add Javy Lopez to the Atlanta Braves' roll call of last-inning heroes.

Lopez hit a three-run homer in the 10th inning, capping yet another dramatic rally as the Braves beat the Cincinnati Reds 6-2 Wednesday night and took a 2-0 lead in the NL playoffs.

Atlanta's second consecutive extra-inning win put the Reds in a near-impossible situation. No team has won the NL pennant after losing the first two games of the championship series at home.

"It's a very uncomfortable feeling," Reds manager Davey Johnson said. "We've got to score more runs. Our offense just hasn't produced that many."

sixth home run.

"Of all the people I've been around in baseball, and I've been around this game 20-25 years, he may be able to focus and concentrate more consistently than anyone I've been around," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said of Hershiser, still icing his arm about a half-hour after the game.

"He's come up big for us twice in this postseason," he said. "I don't know if you come to expect it, because we're all human. I think you anticipate it a lot."

While Ramirez showed what made him an All-Star at age 23, Carlos Baerga came through with the big hit Cleveland missed in the opener. His two-out, two-run single with the bases loaded broke a scoreless tie in the fifth and got everyone off the Indians' bench, and the team seemed to relax after that.

The best-of-7 series goes back to Jacobs Field for Game 3 Friday night. Mariners ace Randy Johnson, finally able to get some time off this week, starts on four days' rest, opposed by Charles Nagy.

Seattle is 28-3 this season in games Johnson starts. The Mariners also won the last time he pitched — in relief in Game 5 of the first-round playoffs against New York.

The Indians did not want to go home with two losses, and thanks to Hershiser, they did not. Not even a crowd of 58,144, the second-largest ever to see baseball at the Kingdome, could shake ol' Orel.

"The prospect of going down 0-2 and facing Randy Johnson is not one that causes your appetite to stay with you very long," Hargrove said.

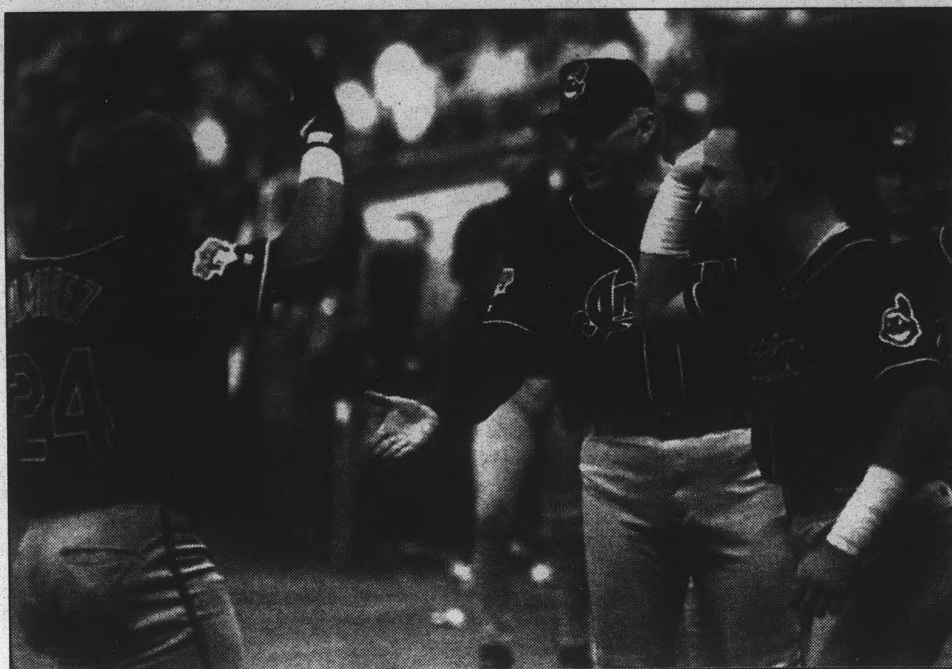

"Tonight, as far as we were concerned, we had to win this game. I can't emphasize that enough. We had to have this game," he said. "If this was a test of our character, we passed."

Hershiser, who blanked Boston for 7 1-3 innings in the first round of the playoffs, struck out seven and his lone walk was intentional. Jose Mesa pitched the ninth, allowing Jay Buhner's second home run of the postseason.

Standing still on the mound, Hershiser merely focused in on catcher Sandy Alomar Jr., who would occasionally pat his chest protector as if to say, "Just you and me."

"The whole key in playoff baseball is to stay with your patterns, stay with your pitches," Hershiser said. "Don't let the crowd take your adrenaline away from you."

Even after giving up a home run, Hershiser already had a new ball back in his mitt and was at the rubber, almost ready to pitch, by the time Griffey touched home plate. None of Hershiser's teammates had to come console, either, because they knew he'd been around big games before.

Associated Press
Cleveland Indians' Manny Ramirez (24) is congratulated by teammates after hitting a solo home run in the sixth inning of their game with the Seattle Mariners Wednesday. Ramirez's 4-for-4, two-home run performance helped the Indians to a 5-2 victory.

"Hershiser has been in a lot of these games," Seattle manager Lou Piniella said. "He's got the confidence to pitch well, and he did."

Griffey became the first AL player to homer six times in the postseason. Lenny Dykstra did it for Philadelphia in 1993 and Bob Robertson did it for Pittsburgh in 1971.

Hershiser was the MVP of the 1988 World Series, pitching Los Angeles to the championship. He went 3-0 in the postseason that year, as did another pitcher in the Dodgers' rotation that October, Tim Lincecum.

Belcher took the loss for the Mariners. Hit hard in two relief appearances in the opening round of the playoffs — he took out his frustration by knocking a television camera out of its operator's hands — he lasted 5 2-3 innings.

his 1,310 yards passing in four games shows that Sarkisian is fulfilling some of the expectations that were thrust on his shoulders when he came to BYU. While putting up those numbers, Sarkisian says he's been learning on the job.

"I'm feeling more comfortable with the plays that are being called and certain situations that the plays are being called in," Sarkisian said. "I'm growing to trust my players and be more comfortable with them."

because he's such a big guy."

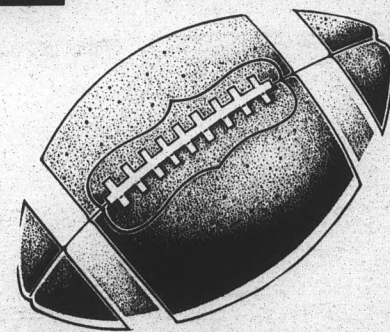

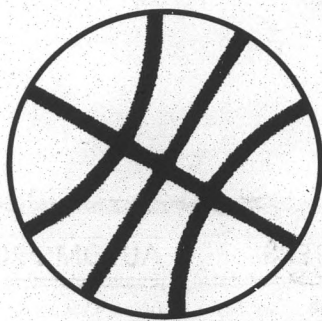

Mitchell said he'll take advantage of any playing time he gets this year.

"If you get the opportunity, you've got to make something happen," he said. "I'll try to give it my best. Whatever (the coaches) ask me to do, I'll do."

Mitchell didn't want to forecast when his first reception would come, but Plummer came up with his own prediction.

"I'm going to go out on a limb and say this week," Plummer said. "He'll get a couple of chances this week."

Three-time Cy Young Award winner Greg Maddux will start Game 3 at Atlanta on Friday night, opposed by David Wells.

The Reds pulled out every offensive trick they could think up against starter John Smoltz, who has beaten them three times this season. They finally got him out of the game following the seventh with the score tied at 2.

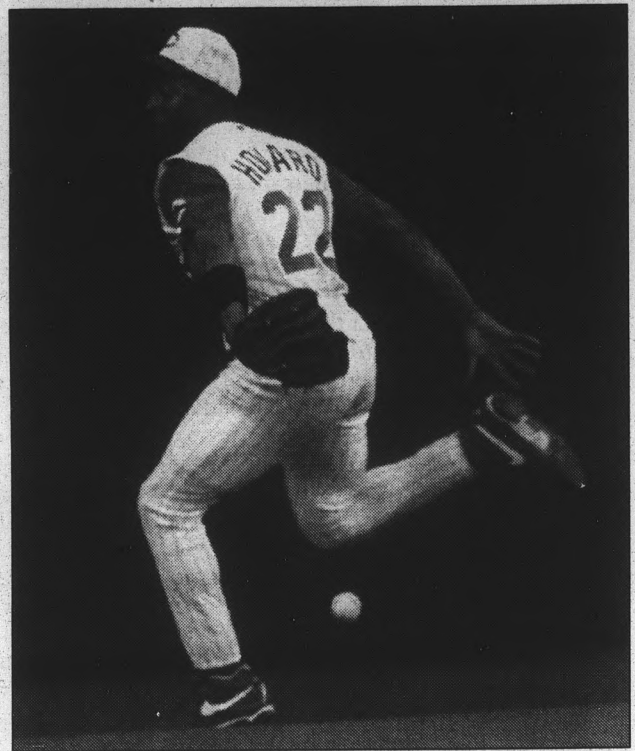

But the NL's top extra-inning club failed for the second consecutive night. Mark Portugal, relegated to the bullpen for the playoffs, started the 10th by giving up a single to Mark Lemke, a walk to Fred McGriff and a single to David Justice, loading the bases.

Portugal then bounced a breaking ball for a wild pitch with Ryan Klesko at bat to let in the go-ahead run, and Lopez followed Klesko with a first-pitch homer high off the left-field foul screen.

The Braves, who had the league's worst extra-inning record in the regular season at 3-9, jumped and hugged in the dugout while Lopez rounded the bases.

Mark Wohlers pitched the ninth to close out the Braves' fourth come-from-behind win in the playoffs.

It was a particularly stunning loss for Cincinnati, which was 10-3 in extra innings, best in the league. The Reds blew scoring chances in the seventh, eighth and ninth, and ultimately wasted perhaps their most impressive rally of the season.

ASU FOOTBALL FANS: IT'S WEEK SEVEN

As a reminder, the State Press sports department is sponsoring the weekly "PICK IT AND WIN" contest for ASU football games. The final deadline to enter this week's contest is today at 5 p.m.

To win, contestants must correctly predict the winner and final score of the ASU football games on Saturday. The Sun Devils' next game is Saturday against the Brigham Young Cougars at 7 p.m. at Sun Devil Stadium.

The weekly winner receives: an ASU cap courtesy of The Cap Co. on 6th and Mill, an autographed Jake Plummer poster schedule of courtesy of ASU athletics, a headshot in Monday's State Press sports section, an ASU sports calendar and a bonus prize!

If none of the contestants in a given week predict the exact score, then the winner will be determined by which contestant comes closest.

In the event of a tie, the winner will be drawn out of a hat.

Entries must be either faxed to 602-965-8484, "Attn: Sports Editor," or dropped off at the State Press offices in the basement of Matthew's Center. Valid entries should include full name, student #, year in school, major and daytime phone # where you may be reached. Winners will be contacted the Sunday after the game.

Entries received after the deadline will not be considered. Telephoning the State Press is not a valid form of entry.

Matejko

One reason not to change head coaches could be that there have been three different coaches in the last 11 seasons. Maybe the problem is the coaches that have been selected, and not the turnover rate.

John Cooper (1985-87), won 25 games in his three seasons, but left to coach at Ohio State. Marmie (1988-91) won 22 games in his four seasons and Snyder, who took over in 1992, will win under 20.

If you need to go through five or six coaches until the right one is found then that is what should be done. Staying with someone inadequate just because of the fear of change is not the aggressive behavior that will turn the program around.

The bottom line is do I think there should be a change made at the head coaching position? Yes! This past season was Snyder's second chance, but he isn't getting the job done. I realize saying to fire him is an easy thing to do, but sometimes to take two steps forward, you need to take one step back.

On the subject of running up the score, I would like to flashback to a game played on Sept. 7, 1991. California 86, Pacific 24. Why do I bring this up? The head coach of this game was Bruce Snyder. He is the same person who initially was angry with Nebraska Head Coach Tom Osborne for scoring 77 points against ASU on Sept. 16. What goes around, comes around baby!

In the Sept. 12, 1991 issue of the Los Angeles Times, columnist Gene Wojciechowski questioned Snyder's reasoning for having his starting quarterback, Mike Pawlawski, throw another TD pass in the third quarter, his sixth of the game. I guess by extending the lead from 34 to 41 made it easier to breathe on the Cal sideline.

It seems like an eternity ago that ASU was contending for the Rose Bowl and playing in front of 60,000-plus fans. The only thing that will bring the support back to where it once was is to put a winner on the field. Until that happens the upper deck at Sun Devil Stadium will continue to be a place where extra seats are kept.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST SYDNEY OMARR ARIZONA'S 1st MICROBREWERY Fresh Beers Brewed here! BANDERSNATCH 5th St. & Forest 966-4438

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST by Sydney Omarr

Thursday, October 12, 1995

J.P. Morgan: Big money people and how to get that way! In an era of the Vanderbilts and Rockefellers, the banker who handled most of their high finance was an Arles, J.P. Morgan. He was a friend of famed astrologer Evangeline Adams, an Aquarian. Reporters got wind of this relationship and pointedly asked Morgan, "is it true you take astrology seriously?" Morgan replied, "Millionaires don't use astrology, billionaires do!" That terse answer was in keeping with his zodiacal sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Puzzle pieces fall into place, marriage figures prominently along with income potential. Banquet could be in your honor. Wear sea green, present talk spotlighting home, parents. Pull it off!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Excellent news regarding money - financial windfall results in change of plans. Cruise ship could be part of celebration. Keep in mind resolutions relating to diet, nutrition. Gemini involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Check Taurus message. Cycle high, suddenly success beckons. Be agreeable, open-minded, not gullible. Sagittarian you respect heaps praise, helps select wardrobe. Scorpio also represented.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Many are startled as you speak up concerning civil rights, unfair treatment of public figure who once spoke in your behalf. Fascinating scenario, read and write, let editor, others know what you feel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What was taken away will be returned - with interest. Gemini helps as you embark on exciting, creative program that will win friends, influence people. Libra also represented.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Answers are found via interpretation of symbols, including dreams. Focus on meditation, defining terms, learning who is behind scenes pulling strings. Individual in position of power likes you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stress independence, accept overtime as signment, become familiar with engineering concept, mechanics. Don't put off automobile repair, check invoices, discuss future of love relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Let go of problem situation - it is time to get up and go! Money of others is left for you to use at your discretion. Individual from foreign land says, "Put your money with me, we'll double it!"

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take advantage of elements of timing, surprise. Don't wait for rules, create your own tradition! Spotlight on love, passion, marriage. You'll be musing, "World is moving too much, too soon!"

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Regain sense of direction, motivation, welcome back family member who disappeared without notice. Money involved, don't make federal case of it. Tolerance!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar position emphasizes creativity, passionate interest in subject relating to forecasting the future. Diversify, show others you can laugh at your own foibles, Gemini in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those who claim you might not stick to project until finished will be embarrassed, proved wrong. Family dispute settled, remain objective, steer clear of money quarrel. Scorpio involved.

IF OCTOBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Current cycle highlights break from past, adventure of fresh start in new direction. Relationship on precipice of revitalization or becoming history. You are versatile, possess excellent sense of humor, have curiosity about the world, politics, current affairs. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You have instinctive knowledge of fashion, people comment, "You really know how to wear clothes!" Gift adds to wardrobe in November.
