Bottoms up!

Jim Poulin/State Press

ASU DPS officer Ron Kelley discusses issues related to drinking and driving with Jim Saul (left) and Anthony Mustatchil. Both are law students and participated in Thursday's demonstration of the effects of alcohol on the human body. The Student Health Center and ASU DPS will continue this demonstration today on Hayden Lawn. See story, page 8.

Recall movement launched against ASASU president

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Although student government President Chris Weber survived impeachment by the Associated Students of ASU Senate, a recall campaign that began Thursday has brought his tenure into question again.

ASU students Rob Gresser and Kevin Bielfelt initiated a recall campaign against Weber, who has been arrested twice in the past three weeks.

"I don't think he's suited for the job," Bielfelt said. "I'm just one man, pissed off."

Weber said he is not surprised that a recall drive has been initiated, but refused to comment on what he believes his chances are of surviving a recall election.

"Recall is a simple process to initiate," Weber said. "It is not that difficult to get signatures."

According to Becca Stout, ASASU coordinator, five individuals had inquired about recall petitions as of Thursday.

On Tuesday, the Senate fell short of the required 18 votes to convict Weber of the Articles of Impeachment.

Bielfelt collected nearly 200 signatures in 45 minutes outside the Memorial Union Thursday, but all of them are invalid because they were not on the proper form. Gresser developed appropriate recall petitions in accordance with ASASU bylaws and planned to re-collect the invalidated signatures.

"What (Weber) did is not what the president of the Association should do," said Adrienne Moyer, an undeclared freshman

President Coor defends ASU affirmative action

BY DAVID KOVACS
AND CHRISTINA BAILEY
STATE PRESS

ASU President Lattie Coor reaffirmed ASU's commitment to continuing race-based financial assistance and developing diversity in response to the Arizona Board of Regents' debate over the validity of affirmative-action scholarships.

"If you listen to the critics of these programs, what they are describing is not what we're doing," Coor said Thursday. "What we're doing is legal and effective; it is not being done in a way that deprives others."

Coor said he does not support Regent John Munger's proposal to eliminate race-based scholarships.

"My belief is that they (the affirmative-action programs) are legal today," he said, "that they are functional today, and while we'll engage in whatever discussion people want, we'll continue to use them until or unless there is some reason we are shown specifically why we can't use them."

Diversity is a key component to the success and growth of the campus community, Coor said. While other universities take steps to eliminate affirmative-action policies, ASU has taken a different outlook, he said, adding they want to further develop the programs already in place.

Mangled truck graphic symbol of cost of driving drunk

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

Joe Middleton doesn't need to say much. The mangled hunk of twisted metal that used to be his only daughter's truck speaks volumes about the carnage created by one drunk driver.

The small, blue Datsun, which was carrying 20-year-old Sherri Middleton and two co-workers home from work in Phoenix on the morning of Dec. 2, 1984, was struck head-on by a drunk driver who swerved across five lanes of traffic at 80 mph. All three people in the truck were killed.

The truck's wreckage, located on Cady Mall next to the Memorial Union, is one of the displays for Alcohol Awareness Week. Today is the last day the truck will be on campus.

Middleton said he knows getting up on a soap box and preaching won't do much good.

"I don't delude myself into thinking that something I say is going to magically work a miracle in your life," Middleton said, "but my hope is that something you have heard or seen today will be instrumental in causing you to formulate a decision that will prolong your life."

While Middleton and his wife, Sula, do hand out surveys to gauge people's reaction to the display, the impact of the mangled vehicle was clear.

"If people aren't getting a message (about drinking and driving) from this truck, they must be pretty oblivious," said sophomore Michelle Massanet. "That is really a truck, and people really did die. It wasn't something that was set up for a lecture or some lesson. It was something that really happened, and it happened in Phoenix."

Last year, Middleton took his message against drinking and driving to more than 98,000 people statewide, and it appears that their efforts, com-who signed the petition. "I don't want him representing me."

Bielfelt and Gresser lead a group called Students for the Creation of Responsible and Accountable Politicians.

According to a statement released by SCRAP, the group is moving forward with the recall because the Senate failed to represent the students.

"It is with great sadness that we announce the formation of a group to lead a recall against President Chris Weber," the statement read. "President Weber has done nothing more than thumb his nose to the wishes of the student body."

According to ASASU bylaws, 2,102 student signatures are needed to hold a recall election. A minimum of 750 votes, or three-fourths of the votes cast in the last ASASU election, need to be cast for the recall election to be valid. A simple majority is needed for Weber to be removed from office.

Weber, however, said he won't be effected by the drive.

"I will continue to do the job that I was elected to do," he said.

According to College of Liberal Arts Sen. Alex Shivers, former ASASU elections coordinator, the advantage in a recall election would lie with the target of the recall because of low voter turnout. However, Shivers believes that Weber is at a disadvantage in this case because of the public attention.

"He should endorse the recall drive and campaign strongly," Shivers said. "It doesn't make sense to block a move by the people."

Government Operations Committee Chairman Sen. Daren Wastchak, from the Graduate College, said the number of votes needed to recall Weber is realistic.

"Considering the numbers ... that is pretty scary for Chris," he said. "He may have fared better against the Senate than the student body."

Bielfelt said he has "no doubt" that he will be able to collect the required signatures.

Gresser agreed that it will not be difficult to collect the signatures, even with Weber's fraternity ties.

"I've seen a lot of fraternity members up in arms," Gresser said. "Chris is perpetuating the 'frat brat' image."

Sen. Sanjay Vidyadaran of the College of Law said he is pleased that students have started a recall drive.

"I'm glad that students are coming forward," he said. "This is the ultimate will of the students. He (Weber) doesn't stand a chance."

Bielfelt, a senior religious studies major, said he is disappointed Weber did not resign after his second arrest for disorderly conduct at Palo Verde Main on Oct. 9.

"Chris Weber let me down by not resigning," he said. "It should have never made it to the Senate."

"The fact that he got arrested the second time for behavior that is unacceptable on campus, with alcohol involved, is just too much," Gresser added.

Christian Lentz, a sophomore aerospace engineering major, said he supports the petition.

"I think what he is doing is not what the president should be doing," Lentz said. "It gives the school a bad image and shows me that he is immature."

However, Bielfelt said he is not disappointed with the Senate's vote not to convict Weber of the Articles of Impeachment. Bielfelt said the vote may have had a different outcome if more students expressed opinions with their senator.

"The Senate did the best it could," he said. "The fact that it made it into the Senate is pretty embarrassing."

Bielfelt sent a message to Weber on Wednesday informing him of the recall effort and giving him the option to resign. Weber did not reply to the message.

"He should resign," Bielfelt said. "I couldn't imagine having a recall hanging over my head."

Weber, however, remained confident. "Most students are intelligent (enough) to see through the media hype," he said.

Senators who voted to convict Weber welcomed the news of the recall effort.

"There are a lot of happy faces on the third floor (ASASU office) today," Shivers said.

The ABOR set three goals for Arizona universities in 1988 to increase enrollment and graduation rates of minority students. Through ASU's commitment policy, the University has met the first two goals by increasing the minority enrollment rate by 10 percent. ASU is now focusing on the third goal, which is to reduce the difference between the non-minority and minority graduation rates by 50 percent within 10 years.

"I feel what we have done today has stood the test of time," Coor said. "It has worked and we must not only continue what we are doing now but we have to be energetic in looking towards additional ways to increase the diversity at this University in the next five years."

Coor also said his goal is to not only continue affirmative action at the University but to also expand it.

"I know that I have critics, but I have yet to hear a critic that has shown us anything other than the fact that these programs have worked," Coor said. "I don't think just continuing what we have is good enough, the question is how we take what we have developed and continue to strengthen."

Coor has also implemented the Campus Environment Team, which has received national acclaim. With the help of the CET, ASU has tried to stay abreast of the issues and concerns of the community at large and has tried to keep the lines of communication open to all, he said.

Students should take an active role in helping the CET and the University through open discussion about how to resolve issues the student community faces, Coor added.

Lobbyists dominate pay raise commission

PHOENIX (AP) — Four of the five members of a commission that recommends pay raises for legislators are lobbyists — insiders paid to sway lawmakers and other government officials.

And legislative leaders have a big say in the makeup of the commission that began work this week, since two of the members are appointed by the House speaker and Senate president.

The commission's chairman, Don Isaacson, is a Phoenix attorney who has lobbied on behalf of the medical profession and the tobacco industry.

Isaacson said he sees no conflict for lobbyists to recommend pay raises for the people they spend their lives trying to influence.

The commission has historically been dominated by lobbyists, leading critics to argue there should be more distance between elected officials and the people who could decide their salaries.

State unemployment rate up slightly in September

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona's unemployment rate edged upward by one-tenth of a point in September as the number of unemployed in the state jumped by nearly 7,000, the state Department of Economic Security reported Thursday.

Another 19,000 people entered the state's workforce in September and two-thirds of them found jobs, DES said in its monthly report. But the agency said that while the labor force has continued to expand during the first nine months of the year, the number of unemployed has expanded at an even faster rate.

"With all things settled, September's level of 1,772,700 non-farm jobs notably surpasses the all-time high of 1,759,900 set in April," Anderson said.

But he said of the 41,000 jobs added in September, 98 percent were in service-producing industries, including 32,000 that can be attributed to the start of the school year.

Phoenix eye surgeon faces complaints hearing

PHOENIX (AP) — An attorney for Phoenix eye surgeon Gary Hall said Thursday he wants the state Board of Medical Examiners to disqualify its chairman from participating in a hearing on complaints against the doctor.

The board voted 5-3 Wednesday to conduct a formal hearing within two months that could result in the suspension or revocation of Dr. Gary Hall's license to practice.

"What this means is that we have great concerns," said Dr. Richard Zonis, board chairman, after the panel reviewed eight complaints against Hall, son-in-law of imprisoned financier Charles Keating Jr.

Larry Hammond, Hall's attorney, said he would file a motion with the board asking that Zonis be disqualified from participating in the hearing.

"The basis for it is the demonstration by the chairman of his prejudgment," Hammond said. "The way he handled the hearing, coupled with his statements to the press."

Since 1987, Zonis said the board has received 30 complaints against Hall and five times issued its mildest rebuke — a letter of concern.

House approves Medicare plan

Overhaul would raise premiums, save $270 billion; Clinton promises veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring a veto threat, the House passed a Republican plan Thursday for overhauling Medicare by raising premiums for the elderly and disabled and saving billions from hospital and doctor fees.

The vote was 231-201. Six Republicans voted against their party's proposal to save $270 billion from Medicare over seven years. Four Democrats sided with the GOP.

The vote culminated a long, bitter day of debate about the future of the health plan for America's 33 million elderly and 4 million disabled workers.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich called it "a great, great victory ... for fact over fiction" and "for believing you can tell the truth to the American people." He said Republicans were saving Medicare for today's retirees while sparing America's children from being "crushed with taxes."

Gingrich accused Democrats of "dishonest demagoguery" in charging that the savings were really aimed at freeing up money for the Republicans' $245 billion tax cut.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt charged that the Medicare bill and a separate GOP plan to take $182 billion from Medicaid for the poor were "the beginning steps of dismantling these programs as we have known them."

Even before the votes were cast, President Clinton warned that the Republican plan to save $270 billion from Medicare over seven years "will eviscerate the health care system for our older Americans."

Clinton sent this message to the Republicans: "I will not let you destroy Medicare, and I will veto this bill."

A key Republican, Rep. Thomas J. Bliley Jr. of Virginia, suggested a compromise might be possible before the final bill is sent to the White House. "I'd be willing to consider any reasonable proposal," said the chairman of the House Commerce Committee.

Associated Press

The House first rejected by a lopsided margin, 283-149, a Democratic alternative that would have saved $90 billion from Medicare over seven years — a third of the medicine prescribed by the Republicans.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, boasted that the GOP's "lifesaving legislative surgery" would save Medicare for today's retirees and the next generation. The Ways and Means chairman called it "a great and historic occasion."

But Democratic Rep. Sam Gibbons of Florida called it "another day of infamy" that will result in America's elderly being

"herded into managed care."

Republican leaders made last-minute changes, including concessions to rural hospitals and steps to make health care fraud a criminal offense, to minimize defections from their Medicare Preservation Act, the central plank of their plan to balance the federal budget by 2002.

Gingrich promised New Jersey Republicans to fight in conference with the Senate to cushion the impact of reductions in Medicaid on their state. The bill to save $182 billion from Medicaid is expected to move to the House floor next week.

A time for peace

World has fewer wars; How long will peace last?

NEWS ANALYSIS
By Charles J. Hanley
AP SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

From Dayton to Damascus, peace is in the air. Those who check the barometers of war say the pressure is easing globally.

But as leaders from 184 lands assemble in New York this weekend for the 50th anniversary of the world's peace partnership, the United Nations, the peace being celebrated is in many cases a perishable one.

"There is a potential for renewed fighting in many situations," notes a leading researcher.

This month the spotlight falls on Dayton, Ohio, where the presidents of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia will settle in Oct. 31 at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base to try to end the four-year, many-sided war in the former Yugoslavia.

By next month or soon after, U.S. officials hope, the focus may shift to Damascus and a renewed effort to break the impasse between Syria and Israel over the Golan Heights, next step on a road where the Israelis and Palestinians continue their effort to turn enmity into neighborliness.

But peace is also getting a chance in places beyond the Balkans and Middle East.

"Contrary to popular belief, the number of armed conflicts has not been rising continuously after the end of the Cold War," peace researchers at Sweden's Uppsala University reported recently.

As the Cold War faded, they said, the number of conflicts first increased, primarily because of the break-up of the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia, peaking at 55 in 1992. But since then the number has dropped, to 42 in 1994 and about the same number currently.

In some war-weary regions, the news has been especially good.

"In southern Africa, where there have been wars since the early 1960s, there's no war today," Peter Wallensteen, of Uppsala's Department of Peace and Conflict Research, said in a telephone interview.

"Also, southeast Asia is moving positively in that direction. Cambodia, the southern Philippines — war's no longer a priority. It seems everybody's political preference is to participate in the region's strong economic growth."

But it also seems, in the mid-1990s, that peace achieved is not necessarily peace assured.

Some look to the United Nations for more help in finding solutions. The Chechen separatists, for instance, want U.N. peacekeepers overseeing their shaky truce.

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BOO — To the 10 Associated Students of ASU Senate members that voted to keep President Chris Weber in office.

You had a chance to restore student faith in your organization — and you turned around and slapped the student body in the face.

ASASU Vice Presidents Andrea Van Bommel and Marc Wendell can argue all they want that their respective offices have been unaffected by Weber's arrests. That's not the issue here.

The issue is credibility. How can you possibly expect students to take you seriously when you let your chief executive remain in office after two arrests?

You screwed up. It is painfully obvious that many on the Third Floor could care less about what students think.

BRAVO — To the 13 ASASU senators who voted for Weber's removal.

Though we are disappointed that the right thing was not done on Tuesday, we are heartened to see that the majority of the Senate stood up against this travesty.

Thank you, senators.

BRAVO — To the initiation of a recall effort against Weber.

It is clear that the Senate isn't going to listen to students on this one. The student body is left with no recourse other than to take matters into its own hands.

Hopefully ASU will be able to shake free of its legendary apathy long enough to rise up and give Weber the boot.

BOO — To the fact that Cleveland and Atlanta are matching up in the World Series.

No, we don't have anything against either team. But the fact that the teams are named the "Indians" and the "Braves" seems kind of out of place in the 1990s.

Teams named after ethnic groups, it is safe to say, have no place today. There are a million alternative names that could be used that would not be insulting or racist in tone. Tradition is no reason to continue to keep names like the "Braves" the "Indians" or, worst of all, the "Redskins."

Remember, slavery was part of the South's tradition for a long time, too. Just because something is tradition doesn't make it right.

BOO — To all of the distraction surrounding the aftermath of the Million Man March.

We've rarely seen racial issues that so many people agreed on. Self-determination, self-respect and an end to violence are issues that everyone — regardless of race — supports.

So why has this been turned into yet another "us against them" tirade?

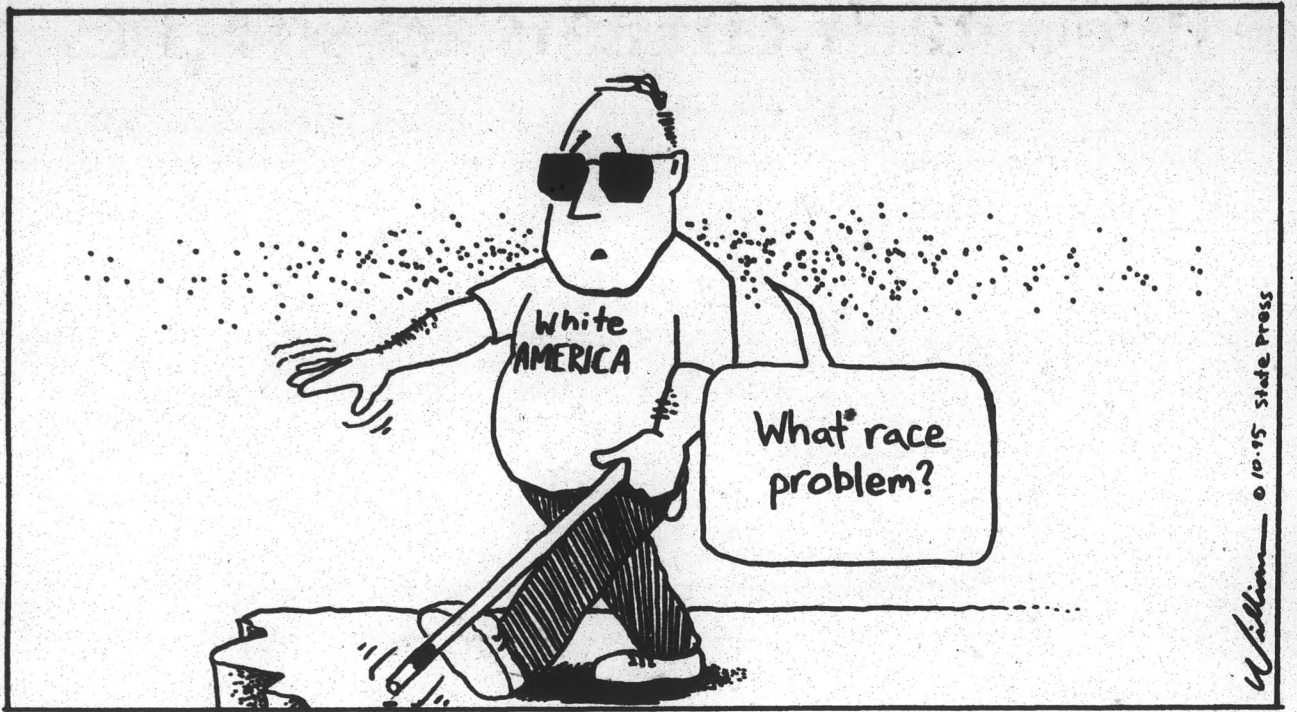

Why does the media play up the "racial divide" in connection with the march, rather than focusing on issues everyone can agree on?

Why does Louis Farrakhan spew venom at the "racist" head count, rather than trying to heal racial divisions and promote peace, understanding and unity?

This march had a very positive message, and offered great hope for the future. Unfortunately, too many people are doing their best to screw it up.

BRAVO — To the Walk of Life, taking place this weekend in downtown Phoenix.

AIDS still remains a silent killer in our community, even if we don't think about it all of the time. The Walk will not only serve to help out AIDS charities in the Valley, it will also hopefully remind us of the victims of this horrible disease — and give us the wisdom to prevent ourselves from falling prey to it next.

Students urged to take action against racism

In President Coor's statements reported in Insight and the State Press, he leaves no doubt about the University's stand regarding the diversity that is such an essential part for the soul and character of this campus. In turn, each of us must leave no doubt about our own commitment.

It's time to make a difference. The racial divide in our country seems to have widened over the past year. Racism within the L.A.P.D., anti-Semitic rhetoric, varying reactions to the O.J. Simpson verdict and debates over immigration and affirmative action are testing the cohesiveness of our pluralistic society. In pockets of our society, the strain may be too great, and debate and disagreement may turn to misunderstanding, mistrust and hostility.

But we have an opportunity to set a better example. As members of a diverse academic community dedicated to learning and communication, we are uniquely situated to rise above the mistrust and hostility and to show the community at large the way to greater understanding.

Few can deny that personal characteristics such as race, gender, sexual orientation and disabilities help shape the way that we experience our world. Because of that reality, our perspectives will often clash. Nonetheless, the more we communicate and share those experiences, the more we can hope to bridge our differences and reach cooperative solutions. With that hope, the Campus Environment Team is initiating two projects.

First, the Campus Environment Team will award a grant of up to $5,000 for one or more projects designed to promote such communication, cooperation and collaboration among diverse groups on campus. For information, call Ana Virgillo at 965-4840. Secondly, the CET will host a Town Hall Meeting featuring Lattie Coor and other campus leaders Nov. 13 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. The meeting, in the Memorial Union, Room 207, will provide an opportunity to discuss these issues and perhaps diffuse some tensions.

But such projects can only be the tip of the iceberg, only a stimulus for a broader, grassroots movement on campus toward greater understanding. If each one who reads this letter takes a tiny step toward that goal, we could literally transform the campus overnight.

Make a difference. This week, find some opportunity to bridge the gap. Maybe your student organization can stage some project or event with another organization whose membership reflects different experiences or perspectives. Maybe you will simply find an opportunity to smile or say an encouraging word in circumstances in which you might otherwise have looked away or made a derisive comment. Maybe you're one of the few who is capable of a truly hostile act of vandalism or worse, and you will decide instead to vent your feelings in a more constructive way, such as by talking with a friend, counselor, supervisor or residence advisor. If you find one such opportunity this week, try it again next week; then make it a habit.

When Martin Luther King helped lead the civil rights movement in the early 60s, I was too young to be aware of the magnitude of the problems our society faced or to comprehend the quality of the transformation our society was undergoing. I now regret my lack of awareness, my inability at the time to appreciate the excitement and sacrifice of the moment.

But we needn't express the same regret 20 years from now when we ask ourselves how we responded to the tensions and divisions that have become so sharply defined in 1995. We're in college. We're aware, mature and capable of acting to make a difference.

Just do it. Make a difference.

Charles Calleros is the chair of the Campus Environment Team.

Music hath charms to soothe the savage liberal

The waiting room outside the office of Dr. I.M. Kookie was packed with sad-eyed people.

"Yes, I've never been busier," said Dr. Kookie, the noted expert on lots of stuff. "These are traumatic times for the true-blue dedicated liberal."

"Oh, yes, unyielding in their devotion, unlimited in their compassion. And they have never been through more difficult times and in greater need of my therapy."

What's wrong with them?

"My good man, don't you follow events? There is Newt Gingrich and his congressional followers doing everything but cooking and eating the children of the poor, there is the growing power of religious right, the increasingly conservative national media.

"And now the worst trauma of all — the past week and the O.J. Simpson affair."

Ah, of course. They believed him guilty?

"Some did, but that is only a small part of it, since liberals have never been too keen about tossing people in prisons anyway."

Then what is it?

"It is the emotional pain of the aftershock — the stunningly wide racial divisions. And the pain of looking at the TV and hearing Blacks say: 'Maybe you love me, but I don't love you or need you.'"

Ah, rejection.

"Or as Sigmund Freud so accurately put it: 'Get out of my face — and off.'"

Yes, that would be hard to take.

"And it is another reason why it is so much harder to be a liberal than a conservative."

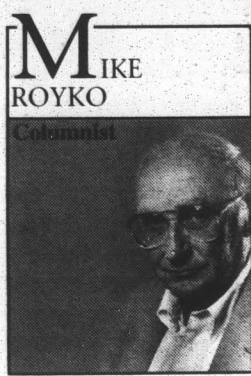

Why?

"Because it is easier to give someone the finger than a helping hand."

How true, how true. Especially when someone bites your hand.

"Of course. Just look at that poor devil over there."

He pointed at a gray-bearded man whose dripping tears formed a pool on the floor.

"He did it all — chased by redneck rustics in Selma and marched with Dr. King to Montgomery. Took a brick to the head in Marquette Park and was tear-gassed in Grant Park. And now you know what he has to show for it?"

What?

"His yuppie son supports Pat Buchanan, his yuppie daughter blames him for her share of the national debt and he was mugged by two guys who offered to clean his windshield. And now the O.J. fallout."

What grief. He must be beyond help.

"Nonsense. I'll have him cured before lunch time."

Really?

"Absolutely. I have a liberal-pain recovery rate of 100 percent."

Amazing. How do you do it?

"Come here and take a look."

We went to a glass-walled room. Inside were a dozen or so people wearing stereo earphones.

"Look at their faces."

Yes, I see. Some look tranquil. Others are obviously happy, inspired. Is it hypnosis?

"Nah, that's too much bother."

Then what?

"I started them off with some Joan Baez and then move them on to Peter, Paul and Mary doing early Bob Dylan."

Ah, the answer, my friend, that is blowin' in the wind.

"Exactly."

Just then the door to the glass room opened and a woman came out lustily singing: "How many roads must a man walk down before they call him a man?... How many years must some people exist before they're allowed to be free?... The answer is blowin'..."

She smiled, flashed a peace sign and walked out the door with her head held high.

"See," Dr. Kookie said.

That's it? Some Peter, Paul and Mary?

"Oh, no. They don't all respond like that. Some are too far gone. They require much more intense treatment, stronger medicine."

Prozac? Zoloft?

"No, much heavier. 'The Greatest Hits of the Weavers.'"

Pete Seeger and the Weavers?

"Yes, live in concert."

And they follow the drinking gourd and ask Michael to row the boat ashore?

"Yes, hallelujah."

That is very heavy. You mean that if I had a hammer, I'd hammer out danger, I'd hammer out a warning, I'd hammer out love between all of my brothers and my sisters, all over this land?

"Exactly. And remember, it's the hammer of justice and the bell of freedom."

It doesn't get any heavier than that. Unless ... no, you wouldn't.

"Yes, I would. Look at them now."

They were all standing and singing and clapping their hands and looking enraptured.

You're actually giving them Pete Seeger and the Weavers doing "This Land is Your Land?" That is beyond heavy. Aren't you worried about an overdose? They'll be putting up FDR and JFK posters.

The door opened and they marched out, singing "... from California to the New York Island, from the redwood forest to the gulf stream water... this land was made for you and me."

Smiling, Dr. Kookie said: "A complete cure."

Amazing. But do you also offer a form of musical treatment for depressed conservatives?

"No."

Why not?

"They just don't have rhythm."

Barring dorm guests good idea

I, too, can see the "undeniable truth" that you use to open your Oct. 18th editorial — the fact that ASU students are getting the shaft in respect to just about anything having to do with the Super Bowl.

The big game, by taking place on our campus, affects us more directly and more drastically than any other population in the state of Arizona. We are the ones who have to adjust our schedules, deal with remote parking spaces and loss of two days of class that we are paying tuition for, pray that our ASASU president doesn't commit a felony and put up with countless other "inconveniences" just because the world is watching.

For those of us that not only take classes on campus, but live here too, the Super Bowl is an especially volatile situation. ASU's residence halls (the north campus ones in particular) are prime real estate. The best of the best. You could say that for once, people actually want to stay in them. And everyone knows how it is when people want something — that item, person or concept (in this case, close digs to the sporting event of the year) has to be protected. That's why they put gold in Fort Knox. That's why they put the pope behind bullet-proof glass. Society knows that those valuable things are off-limits, yet some members of society still insist on attempting to gain access. It's the law of supply and demand.

Logically, as a resident of a north campus hall, I should be a little bit nervous. We've got the supply, and the demand will be in full-force in the days preceding Jan. 28th. That's been on my mind a lot lately. During the regular part of the year, security in our hall is provided by our over-worked, under-paid resident assistants — and they do a pretty good job. They have the training to take care of most student situations. But RAs are just people. There's no way that an unassisted residence hall staff could handle the potentially dangerous situations that might arise with thousands of people wanting to be where the residents are.

That's why I am relieved to learn that Residential Life has enacted the policy barring guests from the halls for the week preceding the game. There's no need to contest that having overnight guests will put unnecessary strain on the facilities — most halls are bursting at the seams anyway. So I won't even address it. But as a resident, I also agree with their decision to restrict access to the rooms. By making sure that the only people in the buildings are people that are supposed to be there, Residential Life is doing a pro-active job of enhancing security.

This is my home. It's not just a place that I stay when I'm taking classes. I don't want to be outnumbered by strangers in my own home. I don't want to be afraid to walk down the hall because Room 223's alcoholic Uncle Larry decided to stop by for a few hours and start a four-day early tailgate party with the rest of his crew. I don't want to get stuck in a broken elevator because Grandma and Grandpa came over early Sunday morning with their fully-stocked coolers, team pennants, seat cushions, blankets and cameras and overloaded the thing. Likewise, I don't want to slip on the puke of some other student in the stairwell because she got past the front desk with a Biology book in her hand and a fifth of vodka in her backpack. Controlling access to the buildings at a time when so many people are looking for an excuse to raise a little ruckus can only be good for the residents.

Bravo to Residential Life for doing their job — keeping us safe. Kudos also to the RAs, who will undoubtedly be working longer shifts for little or no remuneration. And a special thank you to the Campus Security Agents, DPS officers and volunteers who will be around during the Super Bowl to make sure that my happy home stays that way.

All-male military school no preparation for reality

As an Army officer and college student I have followed with great interest the efforts of the Citadel and Virginia Military Institute to remain all-male institutions. The question I would ask is: what is the benefit of an all-male military education in a country where its graduates will, without exception, be required to lead and follow female soldiers?

The fact that only three of the branches of the Army (infantry, armor and artillery) are not open to female officers suggests that the majority of the graduates of any commissioning program will soon have to function in a sexually integrated atmosphere.

I would suggest that it is to the benefit of the cadets to learn to lead in an environment more closely resembling that in which they will serve as officers. As a Captain of Armor with 14 years of service, I have served with some excellent officers, both male and female.

Without exception, those officers' performance was a product of their inherent determination, integrity, selflessness and intelligence. These traits, the ones that really matter, are recognized and cultivated every day in hundreds of high-quality, demanding and, yes, co-educational officer training programs around the country.

I have served with graduates of both the Citadel and VMI, but I have yet to serve with an officer who has impressed his superiors or subordinates with any qualities unique to an all-male military education.

Tempe considers modern meters to free up parking

By ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

A solution to scarce parking in downtown Tempe may free up spaces but would cost drivers more money.

Only 114 meters along the streets are currently metered. However, Downtown Tempe Community Inc., a business management group, is proposing to add meters to 855 spaces in parking lots, which would include lots at city buildings, Sixth Street and Myrtle Avenue and Fourth Street and Mill Avenue.

The lot spaces, which are now free for two hours, would be available all day but for an undetermined cost. Tempe currently charges 50 cents-per-hour for on-street spaces.

Rodney Keeling, executive director of DTC, said the additional meters are a solution to poor parking turnover, which causes spaces to remain full for too long. In addition, he said a two-hour lot limit prevents customers from spending a prolonged amount of time in downtown Tempe.

"In certain periods you have to drive around and around and you may not even find a spot to park," he said. "The whole purpose of pay parking is to get people to use it more efficiently."

But freshman telecommunications major Miguel Crisantes said the spaces should be free.

"I'm with the starving student theory," he said. "I try to avoid the ones I have to pay (for) as much as possible."

The proposal will be reviewed by a Tempe City Council subcommittee. If approved by the council, only 40 meters would be used for all of the 969 on-street and lot spaces. Each street block would have one meter with one or two meters in each lot, Keeling said. Each space would have a number to enter into the meter. Lot meters would issue coupons for an hour or more of free parking.

The meters are scheduled to be tested in December and could be installed as early as spring, Keeling said, adding that the plan is flexible.

Keeling said one advantage to the new meters is that drivers can pay with bills and credit cards. Graduate student Nancy Osborne said the additional payment methods would be helpful.

"I never have quarters," she said.

But Crisantes said credit cards would be horrible.

"I can't even imagine what would happen if I started charging parking," he said.

Hammered on Hayden: 9 learn sober facts on alcohol

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

Sure, college life is supposed to be fun. And with all the activities and parties, it is almost a given that college students will be drinking.

And it's all in the name of fun and games.

It's fun, that is, until you blow a .12 on a police breathalyzer when you are fortunate enough to be pulled over before your car slams into something — or someone.

In 1993, more than 17,000 people were not so fortunate.

That fact was hammered home to me and about eight other ASU students Thursday as we took a field sobriety test conducted by the Student Health Center and the ASU Department of Public Services on Hayden Lawn.

The testing, which continues today, demonstrated the effects of alcohol on the human body. Participants drank as much beer as they cared to in a one-hour period, and then took a breathalyzer and field sobriety test.

I am no angel, and when Jim Ruben, a counselor for Student Health Services, invited me to participate in the field sobriety testing, I thought, "Yeah, let's go get wasted on Hayden Lawn."

But as I popped my second beer, the displays, lectures and lessons of the Alcohol Awareness Week came flooding back to my mind.

I thought about all the tragedy that drunk drivers sow when they get behind the wheel of a vehicle.

I thought about all the parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters and other family members effected when a drunk driver turns the ignition key.

ASU DPS Officer Joe Hedburg conducts a breathalyzer test on ASU law student Jim Saul during Thursday's demonstration of the effects of alcohol on the body.

I thought about the hundreds of thousands of people killed by drunk drivers over the years.

And I thought about Sherri Middleton, and how her life was crushed by a drunk driver in 1984.

All of a sudden, getting drunk wasn't as fun, nor will ever be as fun, as it was before.

"We can only pause and wonder and speculate when our young people are taken needlessly," said Joe Middleton, a local anti-drunk-driving activist. "How much is society set in arrears? Have we lost another Einstein? Have we lost another Jonas Salk?"

The 8th Annual AIDS Walk is not a race, but Tempe employee Tad Kern figures he might be passed up — by his three-year-old daughter, Kaleigh.

"(Last year) she mostly slept and I had to carry her and push her in a stroller, but she'll be walking this year," he said. "She might even beat me."

Kern, a court services supervisor with the Tempe

Municipal Court, is participating in the 4.5-mile walk at 9 a.m. Sunday in Patriot's Square in Phoenix. Money collected from pledges will go to 18 AIDS agencies. About 3,500 people are registered for the walk so far, said Tim Dodds, an AIDS Walk staff member. Last year 1,500 participants raised about $200,000, he said.

Leading the city of Tempe's delegation of about 28 employees is Vice Mayor Dennis Cahill.

"I feel very strongly about AIDS," he said of his decision to participate in Tempe's second delegation. "I also feel very strongly about bigotry, and I think the AIDS issue is tied up in the larger issue of bigotry. I don't like to see that."

Tempe employees are showing their support for the AIDS Walk because the city is community-oriented, said John Greco, a court administrator with the Municipal Court.

People interested in participating in the walk can call 596-6786 or register at the walk at 7 a.m.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A male student was contacted at Parking Structure 5 while interfering with the impoundment of his vehicle. He was advised of proper procedures to obtain release of his vehicle and left the area.

- Someone stole a male student's car while it was parked in Lot 59. It is a cream-colored 1985 Buick SENTRY with Arizona license LZX 278.

- One bicycle was reported stolen.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A 30-year-old woman was arrested for prostitution, indecent exposure and possession of drug paraphernalia after propositioning an undercover officer. The officer picked the woman up at Apache Boulevard and McClintock Drive. She exposed her breasts to the officer and told him it would cost $20 for "head" and $40 for sex. Police later searched her and found a crack pipe and scale.

- A 45-year-old woman was arrested for prostitution, indecent exposure and possession of narcotic drugs after propositioning an undercover officer. She exposed her breasts to the officer and told him she would do any sex act he desired for $60. She then took him to a location near Fifth Street and Hardy Drive, where she bought two "rocks" of crack cocaine and gave it to the officer.

combined with other activists, may finally be making an impact.

The National Highway Transportation Safety Board reported a "sharp drop" in alcohol-related deaths during 1994. According to the NHTSB, alcohol was involved in 40.8 percent of the fatalities in 1994, compared with 43.5 percent in 1993.

Although the fatality rate for drunk drivers is at its lowest in 10 years, "motor vehicle death due to drunk drivers is largely a preventable, unnecessary epidemic," said Dr. Ricardo Martinez, a NHTSB administrator.

"There are still too many drivers who behave as if they have a license to kill. They drive too fast, drive drunk and endanger themselves and others," he said.

In 1993, more than 17,000 people died because of alcohol-related accidents — a rate of one death every 30 minutes.

The mangled remains of Sherri's truck, along with the other displays, help put a face to those numbers.

"Most of the time, you see the statistics, and people dismiss them without thinking about the people behind those statistics," said sophomore Angela Brown. "This could happen to anybody."

DEEP 'POOLE'

Junior receiver Keith Poole is pursued by a gang of BYU defenders during ASU's 29-21 win last Saturday. From left in the background, Poole's brother, Marc (white t-shirt, hat backwards), and sister, Kimberly (black vest), cheer him on.

ASU junior receiver Poole has emerged as Pac-10 deep threat

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

For junior wide receiver Keith Poole, gaining 1,000 career yards earlier this season wasn't necessarily a matter of hard work or natural athletic prowess. For Poole, it was just a matter of time.

"I've been here for three years, so I'd better have 1,000 yards," Poole said.

If Poole doesn't watch out, though, he'll probably wind up with 2,000 yards before he's finished. Poole has 34 catches this season for 639 yards, and although he just reached the 1,000-yard mark a month ago, Poole has 1,427 yards in his career.

According to Head Coach Bruce Snyder, it's Poole's touchdowns, not his yards, that makes him such a potent offensive weapon.

"Keith Poole changes the scoreboard for us," Snyder said. "As a direct result of Keith, we score more points."

Opposing teams have learned to double-team Poole, slowing him somewhat in the touchdown category. But three of his five touchdowns this year came against one of the nation's best defenses in No. 1-ranked Nebraska.

Poole, however, was quick to give credit for his individual successes to the rest of the team.

"Jake (Plummer) and the offense, I owe a lot to them," Poole said. "Jake's got to get me the ball and they've got to get Jake time, so they help out a lot."

Plummer, the junior quarterback for the Sun Devils, gave Poole credit for being an asset to the offense.

"He's a big play guy," Plummer said. "He just goes out and makes things happen. He gets the ball in his hands and he just scores TDs, which is what we need on offense."

Men's tennis team hosts annual Sun Devil Challenge

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

The pros play seven matches over two weeks and call it a Grand Slam. The players on the men's tennis team will play six matches in the next three days and call it the Sun Devil Challenge.

The Sun Devils, along with players from UofA, Clemson and New Mexico State, are set to begin play today at 1 p.m. at Whiteman Tennis Center. The Challenge will be a three-flight, round-robin format, with each school's entrant playing two different opponents each day. The weekend sessions start at 10 a.m. and admission each day is free.

"What we're looking to get out of it with this format is the benefit that after every match you can learn from what you did and what you need to improve upon, instead of waiting a week to compete again," ASU Coach Lou Belken said. "It will be very rough physically, but there's no better way to get into shape for tennis other than playing a lot of tennis."

Sun Devil senior Paul Reber, who will join sophomore Tsolak Gevorkian in the "A" flight, said there will be five Wildcats, six Lobos and seven Tigers in attendance. ASU hasn't faced the Tigers since Reber's freshman year when the Sun Devils beat them in Miami. UofA, meanwhile, always brings some intrigue to the court.

"Anytime you have UofA in town it always adds some spice," Belken said. "And the Clemson program is known for its intensity, so I expect to see that intensity in their players this weekend."

Senior Dave Critchley and sophomore Sergio Elias, both off practicing with injuries, will split time in the "B" flight, along with junior Wolf von Lindenau, Belken said.

Sophomore walk-on Jesse Smith and freshmen walk-ons Casey Was and Hiroshi Nagoshima will represent the Sun Devils in the "C" flight.

ASU's prized recruit, junior Oscar Bustos, will not be in action this weekend to preserve his NCAA match-date allotment.

Like it or not, the bad boy of the ASU men's tennis team, sophomore Wolf von Lindenau, is back this year. Von Lindenau and the rest of the team will be in action today through Sunday in the Sun Devil Challenge at Whiteman Tennis Center.

Ninth-ranked volleyball to take on No. 5 Cougars

BY DAWN WAGNER
STATE PRESS

It's payback time.

After losing at home to Washington and Washington State earlier this season, the ASU volleyball team is ready for revenge, according to freshman Jen Lucero.

"They got us at our place and we're going to get them at theirs," she said.

The No. 9 Sun Devils will get their chance at revenge tonight when they play the fifth-ranked Cougars on the road at 7 p.m. They will then attack the No. 23 Huskies Saturday at 7 p.m.

Both games will be broadcast on Prime Sports Northwest on a tape-delayed basis.

Sophomore outside hitter Terri Cox said the two wins the Sun Devils secured on the road last weekend over powerhouses UCLA and USC will also figure into the mix when they step onto the court.

WEEKEND SPORTS PREVIEW

"Coming off of two big wins last weekend we're ready to go and get two sweeps over Washington and Washington State," she said. "It will be to our advantage because Washington lost last week and they'll be down, and Washington State will be underestimating us."

Cox added that the effort outside of competition will push the Sun Devils over the edge.

"We've been practicing really hard lately," she said. "It's why we had such a great weekend last week."

Poole

Several teams that ASU has faced this year created a defensive game plan specifically to stop Poole. Against BYU, Poole was only able to pull in three passes, but one of them, a 47-yard grab off the top of a Cougar defender's helmet, was the clutch play that sustained the winning drive.

While teams are giving Poole the respect he deserves, some are still guilty of underestimating the speed of the 21-year-old.

"I think that they do a little bit," Poole said. "I don't know why. I guess they look at me and I really don't look like a fast football player, but that's fine with me."

Plummer agreed.

"A lot of teams hear that he has deceiving speed," Plummer said. "But I don't think they see it until they're out there. He outruns people that I think normally would catch him. He's just a game player. He just turns it up a notch when he's in a big game and out on the field."

Last year Poole was the only Pac-10 receiver to average over 20 yards per catch. He's not too far off this season, with an average of 18.8 yards per grab so far. With competition of the likes of USC's Keyshawn Johnson and UCLA's Kevin Jordan, you might call Poole an underdog, but that's all right with Poole, who has always been a fan of the underdog.

Poole was recruited by several other universities, but he said ASU had everything he was looking for when it came time to choose a school.

"I took my trip here, they had great facilities, the weather, the girls (and) the coaching staff and their way of playing football," Poole said. "I was recruited by bigger schools and better schools that were ranked, but I've always kind of liked the underdog."

Keith and his older brother Marc have been the subject of several profiles this year, including a piece on ESPN earlier this season. Marc is confined to a wheelchair because of a car accident in high school.

Poole's father, Will, owns the family construction business, which operates in several western states. Keith said he and Marc will be ready to take over the business as long as the NFL doesn't get in the way.

"I'm preparing right now for life after football," said Poole, who is majoring in family resources and human development. "If football isn't there, then I've prepared for other careers."

Weekend preview

Even though revenge and two recent wins will be fueling the Sun Devils, Coach Patti-Snyder Park said it's not going to be an easy weekend.

"We need to snatch back the wins, but it's going to be a lot tougher to do in Washington," she said. "Washington State is very loud and they get a big crowd. We're going into some pretty hostile conditions."

Snyder-Park added that the difference between the ASU team that lost to the Washington schools a month ago and now is a drop in repeated errors.

"Our serving has improved a ton," Snyder-Park said. "We've minimized our errors in attacking. The problem was they were unforced errors we were committing."

"That's the difference between now and a month ago. We've become a much more consistent team."

Cross country takes off

The ASU women's cross country team will run in one more meet before it competes in the Pac-10 Championships next week.

The women will run in the Canyon West Classic in Tempe at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Sophomore Sabina Verbeck and freshman Debbie Stieber will not run because of leg injuries, cross country coach Ken Lehman said.

The men are not running in the meet because they are saving their legs for the Pac-10 Championships, Lehman said.

Womens golfers head to Stanford

The ASU women's golf team will participate in its third tournament of the season this weekend.

The Sun Devils head to Palo Alto, Calif., for the 32nd annual Stanford Women's Intercollegiate Golf Tournament which begins today and ends Sunday. The golfers will play one round each day in the 54-hole tournament.

ASU enters the tournament ranked third in the country after finishing second and first in its first two tournaments, respectively. The Sun Devils will be one of 17 teams in the tournament, which includes 11 top-25 teams.

Coach Linda Vollstedt will stay with the same fivesome that competed in the first two tournaments. Seniors Linda Ericsson and Vinny Riviello, sophomore Kellee Booth, redshirt-freshman Keri Cornelius and freshman Jody Niemann will represent ASU.

From the clubhouse:

- ASU has four players ranked in Golfworld's Top 50: Booth, Ericsson, Niemann and Riviello.
- ASU won the Stanford Intercollegiate tourney last year by 11 strokes.
- Booth leads ASU with an average score of 73.33 through two tourneys.
- Booth has two top-five finishes this season, while Ericsson has one.
- ASU has placed in the top two in 30 of the last 32 tournaments.

— Ron Matejko

Ice Devils launch season

The ASU ice hockey team will start its season by taking on The University of Colorado in Boulder, Colo. The Ice Devils will play a two-game series, with the match-ups taking place tonight and Saturday night. The Ice Devils were 0-2 against Boulder last season, losing 5-2 and 4-2. Coach Gene Hammett and the Ice Devils open the season with three road games. ASU's home opener is Oct. 28 at Oceanside Arera in Tempe.

Pitching fuels World Series' foes

ATLANTA (AP) — That scowl on Albert Belle's face, that monster mash mug and those lips muttering who-knows-what all started way before he heard how pitching would win this World Series.

True, the Atlanta Braves and Cleveland Indians led their leagues in ERA. And true, both staffs seemed to get even stronger in the playoffs.

"Good pitching has stopped good hitting. That has always been the rule," three-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux said.

One of baseball's oldest truths, however, is about to be put to a test. Because while everyone seems to be pitching this October, Belle and Fred McGriff and friends are bringing big bats.

"Their staff, they say, is the best staff in baseball," Indians hitting coach Charlie Manuel said Thursday. "At the same time, both teams have a lot of power. The Colorado Rockies scored some runs against Atlanta and I'm kind of hoping we will, too."

The Indians led the majors in hitting, scoring and home runs this season. A main reason was Belle, who hit 50 homers and is the only player in the majors to connect for 30 or more in four straight years.

The Braves were next-to-last in batting, but second in the NL in home runs. McGriff homered 27 times, though the shortened season ended his streak of seven straight years with at least 30.

"All season long, we just missed clicking together at one time," McGriff said. "We've got a lot of power hitters, and you ain't going to go up there bunting."

McGriff hit .382 with four doubles and two homers, drove in six runs and scored nine in eight playoff games against Colorado and Cincinnati.

McGriff will make his first World Series appearance in Game 1 Saturday night. He'll see a familiar face on the mound — pitching for Cleveland is AL playoffs MVP Orel Hershiser, against whom McGriff hit just .188 when both played in the NL.

Swiss Scientists Discover New Energy Product

Lugano, Switzerland—After 25 years of research Lightning 828 was developed with the help of Swiss Laboratories. After extensive testing with amazing results, Lightning 828 is now available in the United States. Scientists are amazed at Lightning 828's results on improved memory, attitude and athletic performance.

In a double blind cross-over trial on university students in Italy, Lightning 828 was given twice daily for 12 weeks. The results were astonishing. Students obtained higher scores in math, logic and physical education.

This new discovery has been a windfall for working and active people that seem to run short of energy around mid-afternoon and need a little extra lift. Lightning 828 when taken in the morning gives a sustained, balanced form of energy throughout the day.

During an interview in Chicago, a beautician stated, "I used to go home exhausted after being on my feet all day. Now it's just incredible. I go home with extra energy and really enjoy my family more." Lightning 828 is a necessary boost for students, professionals and senior citizens.

EIGHT GREAT Reasons why you should see Hootie and the Blowfish on campus at the MU Cinema: 1. You can see great entertainment without spending a week's salary! Tickets are only three bucks! 2. The seats are nice and cushy. 3. Not a bad seat in the house. 4. State of the art projection and sound equipment (better than live!) 5. You don't have to drive to Egypt to get there. 6. No one will search you at the door. 7. What a cheap date! 8. Hootie and the Blowfish are awesomely cool. For whatever reason, see Hootie on Tuesday, October 24 at 7p.m. in the MU Cinema on the lower level of the MU. You'll see more than 90 minutes of live performances and behind the scenes footage of your favorite Blowfish! Get your tickets at MUAB on the third floor of the MU or at the door. Seating is limited, so get your tickets today!
